

tion of the fixed stars. See acceleration.—Double star. See multiple star.—Equestrian star. See Hippastrum.—Evening star. See evening.—Falling star. See falling star.—Fixed star, a self-luminous body at so vast a distance from the earth as to appear a point of light, almost motionless except for the diurnal revolution of the heavens. To the naked eye the brighter stars appear to have radiating lines of light; but these are due to imperfections of vision, and are different for different observers. All the fixed stars twinkle (see twinkling). In a good telescope on a fine night a star shows a minute round disk surrounded by concentric rings; but these phenomena are mere effects of diffraction, and no instrument yet constructed can enable the eye to detect a fixed star's real breadth. The stars differ in brilliancy, and in this respect are said to have different magnitudes (see magnitude, 5). These in many cases are changeable (see variable star). The number of stars in the whole heavens brighter than a given magnitude  $m$  may be approximately calculated by the formula  $(3.3)^{m-m_0} + 2$ . The stars are very irregularly distributed in the heavens, being greatly concentrated toward the Milky Way. This is particularly true of first-magnitude stars, and again of faint telescopic stars. There are many clusters of stars, among which the Pleiades, the Hyades, Praesepe, Coma Berenices, and the cluster in the sword-handle of Perseus are visible to the naked eye. Other stars are associated in systems of two, three, or more. (See multiple star.) To most eyes the stars appear yellow, but some are relatively pale, others chromatic yellow, and still others ruddy. There are many ruddy stars in the part of the Galaxy near Lyra. L. M. Rutherford of New York first showed that in reference to their spectral lines the fixed stars fall under several distinct types. Type I, according to the usual nomenclature, embraces spectra showing strong hydrogen-lines, all others being very faint. These belong without exception to pale stars, such as Sirius, Vega, Deneb, Altair, Spica, Fomalhaut, Regulus, Castor. Type II embraces spectra showing many strong metallic lines, like the sun. Almost all such stars are chrome, as Arcturus, Capella, Aldebaran, Pollux; but a few are pale, as Deneb and Elwell, and a few ruddy. Type III consists of banded spectra, the bands shading away toward the red. These stars are all ruddy, and probably all variable. They embrace Betelgeuze, Antares, Mira Ceti, Sheat, Menkar, Pishpai, Rasalgethi. Type IV consists of spectra having three broad bands shaded away toward the blue end. These all belong to very ruddy stars, of which none are bright, and none seem to be variable. Type V consists of spectra showing bright lines. Such stars are few; their magnitudes and colors are variable. Upon careful comparison of the spectra of stars with those of the chemical elements they contain, it is found that the lines are shifted a little along the spectrum toward one end or the other, according as the star is receding from or approaching the earth. The apparent places of the fixed stars are affected in recognized ways by diurnal motion, precession, nutation, aberration, and refraction. In addition, each star has a very slow motion of its own, called its proper motion. There are very few cases in which this is so great as to have carried the star over the breadth of the moon's disk since the beginning of the Christian era. Many stars in one neighborhood of the heavens show, in many cases, like proper motions—a phenomenon first remarked by R. A. Proctor, and termed by him star-drift. But the average proper motion of the stars is away from a radiant under the left hand of Hercules, showing that the solar system has a relative motion toward that point. This is sufficient to carry a sixth-magnitude star 4 in a century. The parallax (that is to say, the amount by which the angle at the earth between the star and the sun falls short of 90° when the angle at the sun between the star and the earth is equal to 90°) has been measured only for a few stars, and these few have been selected with a view of finding the largest parallaxes. That of a Centauri, which is the largest, is nearly a second of arc. It is so difficult to measure parallax otherwise than relatively, and to free its absolute amount from variations of latitude, diurnal nutation, refraction, etc., that very little can be said to be known of the smaller parallaxes. It appears, however, that small stars have nearly as great parallaxes as bright ones where the proper motions are not large. The various methods of ascertaining the distances of the stars depend upon three independent principles. The first method is from the parallax, by means of which the distance of the star is calculated by trigonometry. The second method depends on the ascertaining of the speed at which the star is really moving by the shifting of the spectral lines, and then observing its angular motion. In the case of a double star, its motion in the line of sight at elongation can be measured with the spectroscopic; and from this, its orbit being known, its rate of motion at conjunction can be deduced. The third method supposes the ratio of the amount of light emitted by the star to that emitted by the sun to be known in some way, whereupon the ratio of apparent light will show the relative distances. All these methods show that even the nearest stars are hundreds of thousands of times as remote as the sun. In order to reach more exact results it may be necessary to combine two methods so as to determine and eliminate the constant of space, or the amount by which the sum of the angles of a triangle of unit area differs from two right angles. For the present, no decisive result has been reached. The distances of stars having been ascertained, the weights of double stars may be deduced from their elongations and periods. These weights seem to be of the same order of magnitude as that of the sun, not enormously greater or smaller.—French stars, three asterisks arranged in this form \*,\*,\*, used as a mark of division between different articles in print.—Gloaming, golden, informed, lunar, Medicean star. See the adjectives.—Lone Star State, the State of Texas.—Meridian altitude of a star. See altitude.—Morning star, a planet, as Jupiter or Venus, when it rises after midnight. Compare evening star.—Multiple star, a group of two to six fixed stars within a circle of 15" radius; in a few cases, however, stars distant a minute or more from one another are considered to form a double star. Thus,  $\epsilon$  and  $\delta$  Lyrae, distant from one another upward of 3', and separable by the naked eye, each of these consisting of two components distant about 31" from one another, with some other stars between them, are sometimes called collectively a multiple star. The multiple stars are distinguished as double [tr. of Gr.  $\alpha\sigma\tau\eta\rho\ \delta\iota\mu\alpha\upsilon\varsigma$ ], triple, quadruple, quintuple, and sextuple. Many of the double stars are merely the one in range of the other, without having any physical connection, and these are called optical doubles. The components of other double stars revolve the one round the other, apparently under the influence of gravitation, forming systems known as binary stars. The orbits of about forty of these are known. Thus, the two stars of a Centauri, distant from one another by 17", revolve in about 80 years. In many cases the two components of a double star have complementary colors.—Nebulous star. See nebula.—North star, the north polar star. See pole star.—Order of the Star of India (in the full style The Most Exalted Order of the Star of India), an order for the British Possessions in India, founded in 1831. The motto is, "Heaven's light our guide." The ribbon is light blue with white stripes near the edge.—Periodic star, a variable star of class II, IV, or V.—Polar star. Same as pole star.—Shooting star, a meteor in a state of incandescence seen suddenly darting along some part of the sky. See aurorite, meteor, 2, and meteoric.—Standard stars. See standard.—Star coral, cucumber, cut, route. See coral, cucumber, etc.—Star-jelly, a name for certain gelatinous algae, as Notocommuna; so called originally in the belief that they are the remains of fallen stars.—Star of Bethlehem. (a) A pilgrim's sign having the form of a star, sometimes like a heraldic mullet with six straight rays, sometimes like an estoile with wavy rays. (b) See star of Bethlehem.—Stars and bars, the flag adopted by the Confederate States of America, consisting of two broad bars of red separated by one of white, with a blue union marked with white stars equal in number to the Confederate States.—Stars and stripes, the flag of the United States, consisting of thirteen stripes, equal to the number of the original States, alternately red and white, with a blue union marked with white stars equal to the whole number of States.—Star service. See star route, under route.—Stone mountain star, a name proposed by Mehan for the composite plant Gymnoloma Porteri, found only on Stone Mountain in Georgia.—The seven stars. See seven.—The watery star, the moon, as governing the tides. Shak., W. L., 1. 2. 1.—To bless one's stars. See bless.—To see stars, to have a sensation as of flashes of light, produced by a sudden jarring of the head, as by a direct blow.—Variable star, a fixed star whose brightness goes through changes. These stars are of five classes. Class I comprises the "new" or temporary stars, about a dozen in number, which have suddenly appeared very bright, in several cases far outshining Sirius, and after a few months have faded almost entirely away. All these stars have appeared upon the borders of the following semicircle of the Milky Way. They show bright lines in their spectra, indicating incandescent hydrogen. Such was the star which appeared 133 B. C. in Scorpio, and led Hipparchus to the study of astronomy, thus inaugurating sound physical science; others appeared in 1572, 1604, and 1866. Class II embraces stars which go through a cycle of changes, more or less regular, in from four to eighteen months, most of them being at least a hundred times as bright at their maxima as at their minima. These stars are for the most part ruddy. Class III embraces irregularly variable stars, without any definite periods, and commonly undergoing very moderate changes. Class IV embraces stars which in a few days, or a month at most, go through changes of one or two magnitudes, sometimes with two maxima and two minima. Class V embraces stars which remain of constant brightness for some time, and then almost suddenly, at regular intervals are nearly extinguished, afterward as quickly regaining their former brilliancy.

star¹ (stär, r.; pret. and pp. starred, ppr. star-ring). [*star*¹, n.] I. trans. 1. (a) To set with stars, literally or figuratively.

Budding, blown, or odour-faded blooms,
Which star the winds with points of coloured light.
Shelley, Prometheus Unbound, iii. 3.

Fresh green turf, starred with dandelions.

B. Taylor, Northern Travel, p. 231.

Hence—(b) To set with small bright bodies, as gems, spangles, or the like. (c) To set with figures of stars forming a sowing or sprinkle.

—2. To transform into a star or stars; set in a constellation. [Rare.]

Or that star'd Ethiop queen that strove
To set her beauty's praise above
The Sea-Symphies, and their powers offended.
Milton, Il Penseroso, l. 19.

3. To affix a star or asterisk to (a written or printed word) for a distinctive purpose, especially, in a list, to distinguish the name of a deceased person. [Colloq.]—4. To etch or engrave as to produce a group of radiating lines.—To star a glaze, to cut out a pane of glass. Tufts, Glossary, 1793. [Thieves' jargon.]

II. intrans. 1. To shine as a star; be brilliant or prominent; shine above others; especially (theat.), to appear as a star actor.

Dorset . . . had been playing for a week (1699) at the above [Lincoln's Inn Fields] theatre for the sum of £30. This is the first instance I know of the starring system.
Doran, Annals of the Stage, I. 186.

2. In the game of pool, to buy an additional life or lives. Encyc. Brit., III. 677. [Eng.]—To star it (theat.), to appear as a star, especially in a provincial tour.

star² (stär, n. [Also starr; Heb. (Chal.) shetar, shitar, a writing, deed, or contract. < shitar, cut in, grave, write.] An ancient name for all deeds, releases, or obligations of the Jews, and also for a schedule or inventory. See star-chamber. Also spelled starr.

star-animal (stär'an'i-mäl), n. A radiate, especially a starfish.

star-anise (stär'an'is), n. 1. The aromatic fruit of a Chinese shrub or small tree long supposed to be the Illicium anisatum of Linnæus, but recently determined to be a distinct species, I. verum (named by J. D. Hooker). The fruit is a stellate capsule of commonly eight carpels, each of which contains a single brown shining seed. The seeds contain four per cent. of a volatile oil with the odor and flavor of aniseed, or rather of fennel. Star-anise is used in China as a condiment and spice, and in continental Europe to flavor liquors. Also Chinese anise.

2. The tree which yields star-anise.—Star-anise oil, the aromatic essential oil of star-anise seed. The commercial aniseed oil is chiefly obtained from the star-anise.

star-apple (stär'ap'el), n. The fruit of the West Indian Chrysophyllum Camito, or the tree which produces it. The fruit is edible and pleasant, of the size of an apple, a berry in structure, having ten or eight cells, which, when cut across before maturity, give the figure of a star. Also called camito.

Star-apple (Chrysophyllum Camito).
a, the fruit, transverse section.

starbeam (stär'bēm), n. A ray of light emitted by a star. Watts, Two Happy Rivals. [Rare.]

star-bearer (stär'bär'er), n. Same as Bethlehemite, 3 (a).

star-blasting (stär'bläs'ting), n. The pernicious influence of the stars. Shak., Lear, iii. 4. 60.

starblind (stär'blind), a. [ME. **starblind*, < AS. stærblind (= OFries. starblind, starblind, starblind = MD. D. sterblind = MLG. starblind = OHG. starablint, MHG. starblint, G. starblind = Icel. **starblindr* (in starblind, blindness) = Sw. starrblind = Dan. starblind, stærblind), < star (= MD. ster = MLG. star = OHG. stara, MHG. stara, star, G. starr = Sw. starr = Dan. stær), cataract of the eyes, + blind, blind: see *star*¹ and blind.] Seeing obscurely, as from cataract; purblind; blinking.

starboard (stär'börd or -börd), n. and a. [Early mod. E. also starboard, steeboard; < ME. sterebourde, stereburde, < AS. steorbord (= MD. stierbord, stuyrbord, D. stuurbord = MHG. stüurbort, G. steuerbord = Icel. stjörnborð = Sw. Dan. stýrbord), < steór, a rudder, paddle, + bord, side: see *steer*¹, n., and board, n. Hence (< Teut.) OF. estribord, stribord, F. tribord = Sp. estribord, estribor = Pg. estibordo = It. stribordo, starboard.] I. n. Naut., that side of a vessel which is on the right when one faces the bow: opposed to port (larboard). See *port*⁴.

He took his voyage directly North along the coast, having upon his steeboard always the desert land, and upon the leereboard the maine Ocean. Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 4.

II. a. Naut., pertaining to the right-hand side, or being or lying on the right side, of a vessel. starboard (stär'börd or -börd), v. t. [starboard, n.] To turn or put to the right or starboard side of a vessel: as, to starboard the helm (when it is desired to have the vessel's head go to port).

starboard (stär'börd or -börd), adv. [starboard, a.] Toward the right-hand or starboard side. Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, ii., The Trophies.

starbowliness (stär'bō'linz), n. pl. Naut., the men of the starboard watch.

starbright (stär'brīt), a. Brilliant; bright as a star. Emerson, The Day's Ration.

star-bush (stär'būsh), n. A middle-sized South African evergreen, Grevia occidentalis.

star-buzzard (stär'buz'ärd), n. An American buteonine hawk of the genus Asturina, having a system of coloration similar to that of the goshawks or starhawks, but the form and proportions of the buzzards. The star-buzzards are a small group of handsome hawks peculiar to America. The gray star-buzzard, Asturina plagiata, is found in the United States.

Gray Star-buzzard (Asturina plagiata).

star-capsicum (stär'kap si-kum), n. See Solanum.

star-catalogue (stär'kat'g-log), n. An extended list of fixed stars, as complete as possible within specified limits of magnitude, place, etc., with their places and magnitudes.

starch<sup>1</sup> (stärch), a. [< ME. **starche*, storch, assimilated form of stark, stork, strong, stiff: see stark]. 1. Strong; hard; tough.

His non so strong, no storch, no kene,
That mai ago deathes wither blench.
M.S. Cott. Calig., A. ix. f. 23v. (Hollw. II.)

2. Rigid; hence, precise.

When tall Susanah, maiden starch, stalk'd in Crabbe, Works, IV. 55

starch<sup>2</sup> (stärch), n. [< ME. starche (= M.H.G. stärke, G. stärke), starch; so called from its use in stiffening; < starch, a., stiff: see starch<sup>1</sup>, a.]

1. A proximate principle of plants, having the formula  $C_6H_{10}O_5$ , or a multiple of that formula. It is a white opaque glistening powder, odorless, tasteless, and insoluble in cold water, alcohol, or ether. Aqueous solutions containing free iodine impart to starch an intense and very characteristic blue color. It is not crystalline, but occurs naturally in fine granules, which are always made up of fine concentric layers. Whether the granules contain a small quantity of another chemical body allied to but not identical with starch, called starch cellulose or farrinose, is a disputed question. When heated with water to 60°-70° C., starch swells up and forms a paste or jelly. When heated in the dry state to 150°-200° C., it is converted into dextrine, a soluble gum-like body much used as a cheap substitute for gum arabic. Heated with dilute mineral acids, or digested with saliva, pancreatic juice, diastase, or certain other enzymes, starch dissolves, and is resolved into a number of products, which are chiefly dextrine, maltose, and dextrose—the last two being fermentable sugars. The malting of barley by brewers effects this change in the starch of the grain, and so prepares it for vinous fermentation. Starch is widely distributed, being formed in all vegetable cells containing chlorophyll grains under the action of sunlight, and deposited in all parts of the plant which serve as a reserve store of plant-food. Hence grains and seeds contain an abundance of it, also numerous tubers and rhizomes, as the potato and the arrowroot, and the stem and pith of many plants, as the sage-plat. The chief commercial sources of supply are wheat, corn, and potatoes. From these it is manufactured on an extensive scale, being used in the arts, for laundry purposes, sizing, finishing calicoes, thickening colors and mordants in calico-printing, and for other purposes. Starch forms the greatest part of all farinaceous substances, particularly of wheat-flour.

Cells of Potato, Corn, and Wheat, with starch granules. (a) Potato, (b) Corn, (c) Wheat. (Hollw. II.)

2. A preparation of commercial starch with boiling (or less frequently cold) water, used in the laundry or factory for stiffening linen or cotton fabrics before ironing. In the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries the starch used for ruffs, collars, etc., was frequently colored yellow by an admixture of saffron, and was extremely fashionable. Blue starch was affected by the Puritans.

A certain kind of liquid matter which they call starch, wherein the devil hath willed them to wash and dye their ruffs which, when they be dry, will then stand stiffe and inflexible about their necks. Stubbes, Anat. of Abuses

3. A stiff, formal manner; starchedness. [< Collog.]

This professor is to give the society their stiffening, and infuse into their manners that beautiful political starch which may qualify them for leaves, confessions, visits. Addison, Spectator, No. 305

The free-born Westerner thinks the blamed Yankee puts on a yard too much style—the boy don't approve of style—and snubly proposes to take the starch out of him. Great American Language, Cornhill Mag., Oct. 1888, p. 675.

Animal starch. Same as glycerite, 1.—Glycerite of starch, one part of starch and nine of glycerin, triturated into a smooth mixture. Poland starch, blue starch. Starch bandage, a bandage stiffened, after application with starch.—Starch bath, a hot-water bath containing starch, used in eczema.

starch<sup>2</sup> (stärch), v. t. [< starch<sup>2</sup>, n.] To stiffen with starch.

She made her wash, she made her starch
Queen Eleanor's Fall (Child's Ballads, VII. 260)

star-chamber (stär'chäm'ber), n. [Early mod. E. starche-chamber (poetically chamber of stars (Skelton), late A.E. chambre des estoylls), < late ME. starche-chambre (Rolls of Parliament, 1450-1460, cited by Olliphant, in "New English," I. 293), also starched chamber, i. e. 'starred chamber' (ML. camera stellata); so called because the roof was orig. ornamented with stars, or for some other reason not now definitely known (see the quot. from Minshew); < stark + chamber. The statement, made doubtfully by Blackstone and more confidently by other writers (as by J. R. Green, "Short Hist. of the Eng. People," p. 115), that the chamber was so called because it was made the depository of Jewish bonds called stars or starrs (< Heb. shetar) rests on no ME. evidence, and is inconsistent with the ME. and ML. forms of the name; it is appar. due to the tendency of some writers to reject etymologies that are obvious, on the unacknowledged ground that being obvious they must be "popular" and therefore erroneous.] 1. [< cap.] In Eng. hist., a court of civil and criminal jurisdiction at Westminster, constituted in view of offenses and controversies most frequent at the royal court or affecting the interests of the crown, such as maintenance, fraud, libel, conspiracy, riots resulting from faction or oppression, but freely taking jurisdiction of other crimes and misdemeanors also, and administering justice by arbitrary authority instead of according to the common law. Such a jurisdiction was exercised at least as early as the reign of Henry VI., the tribunal then comprising the Privy Council. A statute of 3 Henry VII. authorized a committee of the council to exercise such a jurisdiction, and this tribunal grew in power (although successive statutes from the time of Edward IV. were enacted to restrain it) until it fell into disuse in the latter part of the reign of Henry VIII. In 31 Henry VIII. c. 5, a statute declared that the king's proclamation should have the force of law, and that offenders might be punished by the ordinary members of the council sitting with certain bishops and judges. "In the Star Chamber at Westminster, or elsewhere." In 1610 the court of Star Chamber was abolished by an act of 16 Charles I. c. 10, reciting that "the reasons and motives inducing the erection and continuance of that court [of Star Chamber] do now cease." As early as the reign of Edward III. a hall in the palace at Westminster, known as the "Chambre des Estoyer" (or "Toillies"), was occupied by the king's council; and about the reign of Henry VI. appear records of "the Lords sitting in the Star Chamber," or "the Council in the Star Chamber," from which time it seems to have been regarded as the court of the Star Chamber. There is a difference of opinion whether the tribunal sitting under the act of 3 Henry VII. should be deemed the same court or not.

Starre chamber, Camera stellata, is a Chamber at the one end of Westminster Hall, so called, as Sir Thomas Smith conjectureth lib. 2 cap. 4, either because it is so full of windows, or because at the first all the roof thereof was decked with Images of gilded starrs. The latter reason is the likelier, because Anno 25. Henr. 8. cap. 1. It is written the starred chamber. Now it hath the signe of a Starre over the doore, as you may see enter therein. Minshew (1617).

2. Any tribunal or committee which proceeds by secret, arbitrary, or unfair methods; also used attributively: as, star-chamber proceedings; star-chamber methods.

starch-cellulose (stärch'sel'j-lōs), n. See cellulose, 2.

starch-corn (stärch'kōrn), n. Spelt. starched (stärch'ched), p. a. [< starch<sup>2</sup> + -ed]. 1. Stiffened with starch.—2. Stiffened, as with fright; stiff.

Some with black terrors has faint conscience balled,
That with black and starched hair did stand.
P. Fletcher, Purple Island, vii.

3. Stiff; precise; formal.

Look with a good starched face, and ruffle your brow like a new boot. B. Jonson, Every Man out of his Humour, I. 1.

starchedly (stärch'ched-lī), adv. Stiffly; as if starched. Minshew.

starchedness (stärch'ched-nēs), n. The state of being starched; stiffness in manners; formality. L. Addison, West Barbury, p. 105.

starcher (stärch'er), n. [< starch<sup>2</sup> + -er]. One who starches, or whose occupation it is to starch; as, a clear-starcher. Heywood, Fair Maid of the Exchange.

starch-gum (stärch'gum), n. Same as dextrine.

starch-hyacinth (stärch'hi a-synth), n. See hyacinth, 2.

starchiness (stärch'ch-nēs), n. The quality of being starchy, or of abounding in starch.

starchly (stärch'li), adv. [< starch<sup>1</sup> + -ly]. In a starchy manner; with stiffness of manner; formally.

I might . . . talk starchily, and affect ignorance of what you would be at. Swift, To Rev. Dr. Tisdall, April 20, 1701.

starchness (stärch'nēs), n. Stiffness of manner; preciseness. Imp. Dict.

starchroot (stärch'rot), n. See starchwort.

starch-star (stärch'star), n. In Characeae, a bulbous tubercle produced by certain species of Chara for propagative purposes; it is an underground node.

starch-sugar (stärch'shug'jūr), n. Same as dextrinose.

starchwomant (stärch'wim'ant), n. A woman who sold starch for the stiffening of the great ruffs worn in the sixteenth century. The starchwomant was a favorite go-between in intrigues. See the quotation.

The honest plain-dealing Jewell her husband sent out a boy to call her (not bowed by her right name, but starchwomant), into the shop she came, making a low counterfeit entree, of whom the mistress demanded if the starch were pure gear, and would be stiff in her ruff. Middleton, Father Hubbard's Tales.

starchwort (stärch'wört), n. The wake-robin, Drum maculatum, whose root yields a starch once used for fine laundry purposes, later prepared as a delicate food under the name of English or Portland arrowroot. This was chiefly produced in the Isle of Portland, where the plant is called starchroot. See cuts under Araceae and Drum.

starchy<sup>1</sup> (stär'chi), a. [< starch<sup>1</sup> + -y]. Stiff; precise; formal in manner.

Nothing like these starchy doctors for vanity! . . . He cared much less for her portrait than his own.

George Eliot, Middlemarch, xxii.

starchy<sup>2</sup> (stär'chi), a. [< starch<sup>2</sup> + -y]. Consisting of starch; resembling starch.

star-clerk (stär'clerk), n. One learned in the stars; an astronomer. [Rare.]

If, at the least, Star-Clarks be credit worth.

Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, I. 3.

star-cluster (stär'klus'tēr), n. A compressed group of six or more fixed stars; but most of the collections so called contain a hundred stars or more.

star-connet (stär'kon'tēr), n. [< star<sup>1</sup> + connet<sup>1</sup>]. A star-gazer. Gascoigne, Fruits of Warre.

starcraft (stär'kraft), n. Astrology. Tennyson, Lover's Tale, i.; O. Cockayne, Leechdoms, Wort-cunning, and Starcraft of Early England [title]. [Rare.]

star-cross (stär'krōs), a. Same as star-crossed. Middleton, Family of Love, iv. 4.

star-crossed (stär'krōst), a. Born under a malignant star; ill-fated. Shak., R. and J., Prol., l. 6.

star-diamond (stär'di'amōnd), n. A diamond that exhibits asterism.

star-drift (stär'drift), n. A common proper motion of a number of fixed stars in the same part of the heavens. See fixed star, under star<sup>1</sup>.

star-dust (stär'dust), n. Same as cosmic dust (which see, under cosmic).

Mud gathers on the floor of these abysses [of the ocean] . . . so slowly that the very star-dust which falls from outer space forms an appreciable part of it.

A. Geikie, Geological Sketches, xlii.

stare<sup>1</sup> (stär), v.; pret. and pp. stared, ppr. staring. [< ME. staren, < AS. starian = OHG. stāren, M.H.G. stāren, G. stāren, stare, = Icel. stara, stare (cf. G. stieren = Icel. stira = Sw. stirra = Dan. stirre, stare); connected with starblind, and perhaps with D. starr = G. starr, fixed, rigid (cf. G. stier, stork, stiff, fixed); cf. Gr. στερεός, fixed, solid, Stk. sthirā, fixed, firm.] I, intrans. 1. To gaze steadily with the eyes wide open; fasten an earnest and continued look on some object; gaze, as in admiration, wonder, surprise, stupidity, horror, fright, impudence, etc.

This monk began upon this wyf to stare.
Chaucer, Shipman's Tale, l. 124.

Look not big, nor stamp, nor stare, nor fret.
Shak., T. of the S., III. 2. 230.

To blink and stare,
Like wild things of the wood about a fire.
Lowell, Agassiz, II. 1.

2. To stand out stiffly, as hair; be prominent; be stiff; stand on end; bristle.

And her false locks up stared stiffe on end.
Spenser, F. Q., III. xii. 36.

The winter has commenced; . . . even the coats of the hard-worked omnibus horses stare, as the jockeys say.

The New Mirror, II. 255 (1813).

3. To shine; glitter; be brilliant.

A [as?] stremande sternez quen strotte men slepo Staren in welkyn in wynter nygt.

Alliterative Poems (ed. Morris), I. 115.

Thel ben y-sewed with whigt silk, . . .
Y-stongen with stiches that starch as siluer.

Piers Plowman's Creed (L. L. T. S.), l. 553.

Her fyrie eyes with furious sparkes did stare.
Spenser, F. Q., III. vii. 39.

4. To be unduly conspicuous or prominent, as by excess of color or by ugliness. Compare staring, 3.

The homeliness of the sentiment stares through the fantastic enunciation of its fine language, like a clown in one of the new uniforms! Sheridan, The Critic, I. 1.

=Syn. 1. Gaze, Gape, Stare, Gloat. Gaze is the only one of these words that may be used in an elevated sense. Gape repeats a fixed and prolonged look, with the mind absorbed in that which is looked at. To gaze is in this connection to look with open mouth, and hence with the humph's idle curiosity, listlessness, or ignorant wonder: one may gaze at a single thing, or only gaze about. Stare expresses the intent look of surprise, of mental weakness, or of insolence; it implies fixity, whether momentary or continued. Gloat has now almost lost the meaning of looking with the natural eye, and has gone over into the meaning of mental attention; in either sense it means looking with ardor or even rapture, often the delight of possession, as when the miser gloats over his wealth.

II. trans. To affect or influence in some specified way by staring; look earnestly or fixedly at; hence, to look at with either a bold or a vacant expression.

I will stare him out of his wits.

Shak., M. W. of W., ii. 2. 291.

To stare one in the face, figuratively, to be before one's eyes, or undeniably evident to one.

They stare you still in the face.

Milton, On Def. of Humb. Remonst.

stare<sup>1</sup> (stär), n. [< stare<sup>1</sup>, v.] The act of one who stares; a fixed look with eyes wide open, usually suggesting amazement, vacancy, or insouciance.

stare<sup>2</sup> (stär), n. [< (a) ME. stare, ster, < AS. star = OHG. stara, MHG. star, G. star, staar, stahr = Icel. starr, stari = Sw. stare = Dan. star; (b) also AS. steorn = G. dial. starn, starn, storn = L. sturnus (> It. storno, storo), dim. sturnellus (> OF. estournel, F. tourneau), sturninus (> Sp. estornino = Pg. estorninho), stalling: cf. Gr. ψάπ, NGr. ψάπρι, ψάπριον, stalling.] A staring.

The stare [var. stalling] that the counsel can bewraye.

Chaucer, Parliament of Fowles, l. 348.

And, as a falcon frays

A flock of stares or caddesses, such fear brought his assays

Amongst the Trojans and their friends.

Chapman, Illad, xvi. 541.

Cape stare, cockscomb-stare, silk stare. See Cape staring, etc., under staring.—Ceylonese stare. See Trachinotus.

stare<sup>3</sup> (stär), a. [< D. staar = G. starr, stiff: see stare<sup>1</sup>.] Stiff; weary. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

stare<sup>4</sup> (stär), n. [Formerly also starr; origin obscure.] The marram or matweed, Ammophila arenaria: same as halim, 3; also applied to species of Carex. [Prov. Eng.]

stareblind, a. See stareblind.

staree (stär-ē'), n. [< stare<sup>1</sup> + -ee<sup>1</sup>.] One who is stared at. [Rare.]

I as starrer, and she as staree.

Miss Edgeworth, Belinda, iii. (Davies.)

starer (stär-er), n. [< stare<sup>1</sup> + -er<sup>1</sup>.] One who stares or gazes. Pope, Essay on Man, iv. 256.

starfi. An obsolete preterit of starve.

star-facet (stär-fas'et), n. One of the small triangular facets, eight in number, surrounding the table on a brilliant-cut stone. See brilliant.

starfinch (stär-finch), n. The redstart, Ruticilla phoenicea. See first cut under redstart.

starfish (stär-fish), n. 1. An echinoderm with five or more arms radiating from a central disk: applied to all the members of the Asterouidea and Ophiuroidea (see these words). These belong to the phylum Echinodermata, which contains also the sea urchins, holothurians, crinoids, etc., though these are not usually called starfishes. In some of the asteroids or starfishes proper the disk is enlarged so as to take in nearly or quite the whole length of the rays, so that the resulting figure is a pentagon, or even a circle; but in such cases the stellate structure is evident on examination. Such are known as cushion-stars. In the ophiurians the reverse extreme occurs, the body being reduced to a small circular central disk, with extremely long slender rays, which in some, as the euryaleans, are branched into several thousand ramifications. (See cut under basket-fish.) The commonest type of starfish has five rays; whence such are popularly known as five-fingered jack or five-fingers. (See cuts under Asterias and Echinaster.) Those with more than five rays are often called sun-starfish or sun-stars. (See Helaster, and cuts under Drisinga and Solaster.) The skin of starfishes is tough and leathery, and usually indurated with calcareous plates, tubercles, spines, etc. It is so brittle that starfishes readily break to pieces, sometimes shivering like glass into many fragments. This fragility is at an extreme in the ophiurians, sometimes, on this account, called brittle-stars. (See cut under Astrophyton.) Lost arms are readily replaced by a new growth. If the body of the starfish is not broken. On the under side of the animal's rays may be observed rows of small holes; these are the ambulacra, through which protrude many small soft, fleshy processes—the pedicels, tube-feet, or ambulacral feet—by means of which the creatures crawl about. The ambulacra converge to a central point on the under side, where is the oral opening or mouth. The animals are extremely voracious, and do great damage to oyster-beds. They abound in all seas at various depths, and some of them are familiar objects on every sea-coast. Some of the free crinoids of stellate figure are included under the name starfishes, though they are usually called lily-stars or feather-stars. Tricrinurites are fossil starfishes of this kind. (See cuts under Cornatulida and enerinida.) Very different as are the appearances superficially presented by a starfish, a sea-urchin, a holothurian, and a crinoid, their fundamental unity of structure may be easily shown. If, for instance, a common five-fingered jack should have its arms bent up over its back till they came to a center opposite the mouth, and then soldered together in that position by plates filling the spaces between the arms, it would make the globular or oblate spheroid figure of a sea-urchin. If a starfish should turn over on its back, and have a stem grow from the center, and then have its arms come together like the petals of a lily, it would represent a crinoid. If, again, the starfish should have its arms reduced to mere rudiments, or to tentacular appendages of an elongated leathery body, it would represent a holothurian, sea-slug, or trepang. These are the principal types of echinoderms—in fact less unlike one another than are the several stages they undergo in development, for which see Asterouidea, Dipinnaria, Brachiolaria, Echinopodium, and Pluteus.

Brittle Starfish (Urofuca clathrata)

2. The butter-fish or dollar-fish.—3. In her., a bearing representing a five-pointed star, the rays surrounded by short waving flames or the like, and having a small circle in the center.—Brittle starfish, a brittle-star; any ophiurian.—Cushion starfish, a cushion-star, as Ctenodiscus crispatus.—Serpent starfish. Same as serpent-star.—Starfish-flower. See Stapelia.

star-flower (stär-flou'ér), n. A plant with bright stellate flowers. (a) Species of Trientalis, especially T. americana, the chickweed-wintergreen. (b) Species of the lilaceous genus Bradburia, formerly classed as Trilecia, of which B. uniflora, a delicately colored free-blooming early flower from Brazil, is the spring star-flower. (c) Species of Sternbergia. (d) Any one of a few other plants.

star-fort (stär-fört), n. Same as star<sup>1</sup>, 8.

star-fruit (stär-früt), n. A smooth tufted water-plant, Damasium stellatum, of southern Europe and eastern Asia: so called from the long-pointed radiating carpels. Another name is thrumwort.

star-gage (stär-gäi), n. See under gage<sup>2</sup>.

star-gaze (stär-gäz), v. i. To gaze at the stars; especially, to make astronomical or astrological observations: used chiefly in the present participle.

Struck dead with ladies' eyes!—I could star gaze

For ever thus.

Shirley, Maid's Revenge, i. 2.

star-gazer (stär-gä'zér), n. 1. One who gazes at the stars; especially, an astrologer, or, humorously, an astronomer.

Let now the astrologers, the stargazers, the monthly prognosticators, stand up, and save thee from these things that shall come upon thee.

Isa. xlvii. 13.

2. A book-name of fishes of the family Uranoscopidae: so called from the vertical eyes. The Naked Star gazer (Uranoscopus guttatus).

name originally designated Uranoscopus europaeus. Uranoscopus guttatus is a common star-gazer of the United States.

star-gazing (stär-gä'zing), a. Given to the observation and study of the stars.

star-gazing (stär-gä'zing), n. Attentive observation and study of the stars; astrology or astronomy. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 63.

star-gooseberry (stär-gös'ber-i), n. The fruit of a moderate-sized tree, Phyllanthus (Cicca) distichus, native in Java and Madagascar, and cultivated throughout India. It is a globose drupe, three- to five-lobed, acid, and eaten raw, cooked, or pickled.

star-grass (stär-gräs), n. A name of various grass-like plants with starry flowers, or other radiate feature. Such are species of Aletris, Hypoxis, and Rhynchospora; also Callitriche, more often water-starwort, so called from its stellate tufts of leaves. See the genus names, and cut under Hypoxis.

star-hawk (stär-häk), n. A goshawk; a hawk of the genus Astur: so called from the stellate markings of the adult birds. See goshawk, and cut under Astur.

star-head (stär-hed), n. A plant of the genus Scabiosa, section Asteroccephalus.

star-hyacinth (stär-hi'n-sinth), n. A species of squill, Scilla amara, a very early garden-flower with indigo-blue petals and a conspicuous yellowish-green ovary.

starier, n. [ME., appar. for **starrier*, irreg. < stare, sterre, a star.] An astronomer.

Without any manner of nicite of starieres imagination.

Testament of Love, iii.

starik (stär-ik), n. [< Russ. starikü, the fulmar, lit. 'an old man': so called from its gray head.] An auklet or murrelet; one of several small birds of the family Alcidae, inhabiting the North Pacific. The name was originally applied to the ancient auk or murrelet, Synthliboramphus antiquus, and thence extended to various related auklets of the genus Simorhynchus and others, as the crested starik, S. cristatellus. See cuts under auklet and Synthliboramphus.

staring (stär'ing), p. a. 1. Standing out prominently and fixedly, or fixed and wide open, as eyes; gazing fixedly or intently; fixed.

He cast on me a staring look, with colour pale as death.

Surrey, Complaint of a Dying Lover.

How gaunt the Creature is—how lean

And sharp his staring bones!

Wordsworth, Peter Bell.

2. Bristling, as hair; standing stiffly or on end; harsh or rough, as pelage.—3. Striking the eye too strongly; conspicuous; glaring; gaudy: as, staring colors.

Starynge or schynyng as gaye thyngys.

Ruttilans.

The staring red was exchanged for a tone of colouring every way pleasing to the eye.

B. Hall, Travels in N. A., i. 282.

staringly (stär-ing-li), adv. In a staring manner; with fixed look. Imp. Diet.

stark<sup>1</sup> (stärk), a. [< ME. stark, starc, sterk, sterc, steare, < AS. stearc, strong, stiff, = OS. stark = OFries. sterc, sterk = D. sterk = MLG. stark, sterk, LG. sterk = OHG. starc, starch, MHG. starc, G. stark = Icel. sterk = Sw. stark = Dan. stark, strong, orig. stiff, rigid; cf. OHG. storchanen, become rigid, Icel. storkna = Dan. storkne, coagulate, Goth. ga-staurknan, dry up; Lith. stregti, become rigid. Hence starch<sup>1</sup>, starch<sup>2</sup>.] 1. Stiff; rigid, as in death.

For fyre doth aryfle and doth drye vp a mannes blode, and doth make sterke the synewes and ioyntes of man.

Babes Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 244.

Many a nobleman lies stark and stiff

Under the hoofs of vaunting enemies.

Shak., i Hen. IV., v. 3. 42.

2. Stubborn; stiff; severe.

She that helmed was in stark stoures.

Chaucer, Monk's Tale, l. 380.

He is only debonair to those

That follow where he leads, but stark as death

To those that cross him.

Tennyson, Harold, ii. 2.

3. Stout; stalwart; strong; powerful.

Me caryinge in his clawes stark

As lightly as I were a larke.

Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 545.

Stark beer, boy, stout and strong beer!

Fletcher, Beggars' Bush, iii. 1.

King James shall mark

If age has tamed these sinews stark.

Scott, L. of the L., v. 20.

4. Great; long.

Kay smote Sonygrenx so that he fell from his horse that he lay a stark while with-oute sterynge of hande or foote.

Martin (E. E. T. S.), ii. 214.

5. Entire; perfect; utter; downright; sheer; pure; mere.

Consider, first, the stark security

The commonwealth is in now.

B. Jonson, Catiline, i. 1.

What e're they may vnto the world professe—

All their best wisdome is stark foolishnesse.

Times' Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 147.

Ha! ha! ha! a silly wise rogue would make one laugh more than a stark fool.

Wycherley, Country Wife, ii. 1.

stark<sup>1</sup> (stärk), adv. [< ME. stark, used appar. first in stark ded, lit. 'stiff dead,' 'dead and stiff'; being stark<sup>1</sup>, a., taken in a quasi-adverbial sense, and extended later to a few other adjectives describing a person's condition (rarely in other uses): as, stark blind, stark drunk, stark mad, etc.] Wholly; entirely; absolutely: used with a few particular adjectives, as stark dead, stark blind, stark drunk, stark mad, stark naked, rarely with other adjectives.

With the same cours he smote a-nother that he fell stark deed, and plunged in depe a-monge hem.

Martin (E. E. T. S.), iii. 514.

In the euening it grew stark calme.

Quoted in Capt. John Smith's True Travels, II. 134.

I drank stark drunk, and, waking, found myself

Cloth'd in this farmer's suit, as in the morning.

Tomkins (?), Albumazar, v. 9.

He was 80 years of age, stark blind, deaf, and memory lost, after having ben a person of admirable parts and learning.

Ecdyn, Diary, May, 1704.

I'll never forgive you if you don't come back stark mad with rapture and impatience—if you don't, egad, I'll marry the girl myself.

Sheridan, The Rivals, iii. 1.

The captain had not a guess of whether we were blown; he was stark ignorant of his trade.

R. L. Stevenson, Master of Ballantrae, ii.

stark<sup>1</sup> (stärk), v. t. [< stark<sup>1</sup>, a.] To make stark, stiff, or rigid, as in death. Sir H. Tynlor, St. Clement's Eve, v. 5.

stark<sup>2</sup> (stärk), a. [Abbr. of stark-naked.] Naked; bare.

There is a court dress to be instituted (to thin the drawing-rooms), stiff-bodied gowns and bare shoulders. What dreadful discoveries will be made both on fat and lean! I recommend to you the idea of Mrs. C. when half-stark.

Walpole, Letters (1762), II. 346. (Davies.)

stark

The apple and pear were still unclothed and stark.
II. W. Preston, Year in Eden, i.

starken (stär'kn), v. t. [< stark<sup>1</sup> + -en<sup>1</sup>.] To make unbending or inflexible; stiffen; make obstinate. Sir H. Taylor, Edwin the Fair, iv. 4.

Starkey's soap. See soap.

starkly (stärk'li), adv. In a stark manner; stiffly; strongly; rigidly. Shak., M. for M., iv. 2. 70.

stark-naked (stärk'nä'ked), a. See stark<sup>1</sup>, adv., and start-naked.

starkness (stärk'nes), n. Stiffness; rigidity; strength; grossness.

How should we have yielded to his heavenly call, had we been taken, as they were, in the starkness of our ignorance?
Milton, On Def. of Humb. Remonst.

starless (stär'les), a. [< star<sup>1</sup> + -less.] Having no stars visible, or no starlight: as, a starless night.

starlet (stär'let), n. [< star<sup>1</sup> + -let.] 1. A small star.

Nebulae may be comparatively near, though the starlets of which they are made up appear extremely minute.
H. Spencer

2. A kind of small starfish.

starlight (stär'lit), n. and a. [< star<sup>1</sup> + light<sup>1</sup>.] I. n. 1. The light proceeding from the stars.

Not walk by moon
Or glittering starlight without thee is sweet.
Milton, P. L., iv. 606.

Hence—2. A faint or feeble light.

Scripture only, and not any starlight of man's reason.
Hooker, Eccles. Polity, iii. 11

II. a. Lighted by the stars, or by the stars only.

A starlight evening, and a morning fair
Dryden, tr. of Virgil's Georgics, i. 348

starlike (stär'lik), a. [< star<sup>1</sup> + like<sup>2</sup>.] 1. Resembling a star: stellated; radiated like a star: as, starlike flowers.—2. Bright; lustrous; shining; luminous: as, starlike eyes.

starling<sup>1</sup> (stär'ling), n. [< ME. starlung, sterling; < star<sup>1</sup> (< AS. star), a stare, starling (see starc<sup>2</sup>), + -lung<sup>1</sup>.] 1. An oscine passerine bird, of the family Sturnidae and genus Sturnus, as S. vulgaris of Europe. The common starling or stare is one of the best-known of British birds. It is 5½ inches long when adult, black, of metallic luster, iridescent dark-green on some parts, and steel-blue purplish, or violet on others, and variegated nearly through out with pale-buff or whitish tips of the feathers. The wings and tail are duller black, the exposed parts of the feathers fringed or silvered with velvety black, and buff edgings. The bill is yellowish, and the feet are reddish. Immature, winter, and female birds are less lustrous, and more variegated with the ochrey or tawny-brown, and have the bill dark-colored. Starlings live much about buildings, and nest in holes of walls, crannies of rock, openings in hollow trees etc. They are sociable and gregarious, sometimes going in large flocks. They are often caged, readily tamed, and may be taught to whistle tunes, and even to articulate words. The name starling is extended to all birds of the family Sturnidae, and some others of the sturnoid series. Also, erroneously, to the American ords of the family Icteridae, sometimes known collectively as American starlings. The last belong to a different series, having only nine primaries, etc. The bird with which the name is specially connected in this sense is Agelaius phoeniceus, the common marsh-bird, often called red-winged starling. The name of meadow-starling is often applied to Sturnella magna. See also cuts under Agelaius and meadow-lark.

Common European Starling (Sturnus vulgaris)

Looking up, I saw . . . a starling hung in a little cove
"I can't get out — I can't get out," said the starling.
Stearns, Sentimental Journey (The Passport)

2. One of a breed of domestic pigeons which in color resemble the starling.—3. Same as rock-trout. 2.—American starlings. See def. 1. Black starling, a melanistic variety of the common starling.—Cape starling or stare (Latham, 1783), the black and white Indian starling of Edwards (1751) the contra from Bengal of Albin (1740), Sturnopastor contra: so called as erroneously described from the Cape of Good Hope (see Péronneau du Cap de Bonne Espérance of Brisson, 1760), but found chiefly in India. It is 9 inches long; the ground-color of the plumage is black, much glossed with greenish and bronze tints and varied with white; the bill and a bare space above the eyes are orange.—Chinese starling (Edwards, 1743), the so-called crested grackle (Latham, 1783), Acridotheres cristatellus of central and southern China, and also the Philippine island Luzon (where it is supposed to have been introduced). It is 10½ inches long; the bill is yellow with rose-colored base; the feet and eyes are orange; the plumage is glossy-black with various sheen, and also varied with white; and the head is crested.—Cockcomb-starling or stare (Latham, 1783), a remarkable African and Arabian starling, Dilophus carunculatus, having in the adult male the head mostly bare, with two erect caruncles or combs on the crown, and a pendent wattle on each side of the face; the plumage is chiefly isabelline gray, with black wings and tail, the former varied with white.—Glossy starlings, various birds, chiefly African, forming a subfamily Lamprolornithinae (or Juidinae) of the family

Glossy Starling (Spreo bicolor).

Sturnidae, as of the genera Lamprolornis, Lamprocolius, Spreo (or Nolans). Of the last-named there are several species, as S. bicolor of South Africa and S. pulchra of West Africa. They are mainly of extremely iridescent plumage.—Meadow-starling. See def. 1.—Red-winged starling. See def. 1.—Rose or rose-colored starling, a bird of the genus Pastor, as P. roseus, which used to be called rose or carnation ouzel, rose-colored thrush, etc. See cut under pastor.—Silk starling (Brown, 1776), or stare (Latham, 1783), the Chinese Polyopsar sericeus, 8 inches long, the bill bright red tipped with white, the feet orange, the eyes black, the plumage ashy gray varied with black, white, green, brown, purplish, etc.—Talking starling, one of several different sturnoid birds of India, etc.: a religious grackle, a mimic. See minna<sup>2</sup>, Acridotheres, and cut under Eulabes.

starling<sup>2</sup> (stär'ling), n. [Also sterling; cf. Sw. Dan. star, a pole, stake, prop; Sw. stora, prop up with sticks or poles; = Dan. stare, put corn on poles to dry.] 1. In hydraul. engin., an inclosure like a coffer-dam, formed of piles driven closely together, before any work or structure as a protection against the wash of the waves. A supplementary structure of the same kind placed before a starling to resist ice is called a fore-starling. See cut under ice-eyron. 2. One of the piles used in forming such a breakwater.

starling<sup>3</sup>, n. An obsolete form of sterling<sup>2</sup>.

starlit (stär'lit), a. [< star<sup>1</sup> + lit.] Lighted by stars: as, a starlit night.

star-lizard (stär'liz-ard), n. A lizard of the genus Stellio: a stellion. See cut under Stellio.

star-map (stär'map), n. A projection of part or all of the fixed stars as they appear from the earth.

star-molding (stär'möl-ding), n. In arch., a Norman molding ornamented with rayed or pointed figures representing stars.

starmonger<sup>1</sup> (stär'mung-ger), n. An astrologer: used contemptuously. B. Jonson, Every Man out of his Humour, iii. 2.

star-mouthed (stär'mouth-t), a. Having a stellate or radiate arrangement of mouth-parts.

Star-mouthed worms, the Strongylidae.

starn<sup>1</sup> (stärn), n. [Early mod. E. also dial. stern, < ME. stern, stern = MD. stern = MLG. stern, stern, LG. stern = OIG. sterno, stern, MHG. stern, G. stern = Goth. stairnō, a star: see star<sup>1</sup>.] A star. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

Thar es na corruption, but cler ayre
And the planettes and sternes shonand.

Hampole, Prick of Conscience, l. 995.

A royall stern . . . rose or day
Before vs on the firmament.

York Plays, p. 127.

star-read

starn<sup>2</sup> (stärn), n. [*< ME. *stern*, < AS. stearn, stearn, a stare, starling: see starc<sup>2</sup>.] The starling. [Prov. Eng.]

starn<sup>3</sup> (stärn), n. A dialectal form of stern<sup>2</sup>.

Starna (stär'nä), n. [NL. (Bonaparte, 1838), < It. starna, a kind of partridge.] Same as Perdix.

starnel (stär'nel), n. [Also starnill; < starn<sup>2</sup> + dim. -el.] The starling. [Prov. Eng.]

star-netting (stär'net'ing), n. A kind of netting used for the filling or background of a design: it produces a pattern of four-pointed stars connected by their points.

Starnonadinæ (stär-nō-nā-dī'nē), n. pl. [NL. (Coates, 1884), < Starnonas (-ad-) + -inæ.] A subfamily of Columbidae, represented by the genus Starnonas, grading toward gallinaceous birds in structure, habits, and general appearance; the quail-doves. The feet are large and stout, with short and not completely insistent hallux; the tarsi are long, entirely naked, and reticulated with hexagonal scales. There are creca, but no oil-gland nor ambiens, the reverse of the case of Zenaidura, the group of ground-doves with which the genus Starnonas has usually been associated.

Starnonas (stär-nō'nas), n. [NL. (Bonaparte, 1838), < Starna + Gr. olivos, a wild pigeon of the color of ripening grapes, < oliv, the vine, olivos, wine.] A genus of West Indian and Floridian quail-doves, typical of the subfamily Starnonadinæ. The bill is short and stout; the frontal feathers project in a point on the culmen; the wings are short, broad, rounded, and vaulted, with reduced first primary; and the tail is short, broad, and nearly even. The only species is S. cyanocephalus, the blue-headed quail-dove, of olivaceous and purplish-red or chocolate shades, the throat black bordered with white, the crown rich-blue, and a white mark along the side of the head, meeting its fellow on the chin. It is about 11 inches long.

starnose (stär'nōz), n. The star-nosed mole, Condylura cristata.

star-nosed (stär'nōzd), a. Having a circlet of fleshy processes radiating from the end of the snout in the form of a star, as some moles: specifically noting Condylura cristata. See cut under Condylura. Also button-nosed.

star-of-Bethlehem (stär'qv-beth'lē-gm), n. 1. A plant of the genus Ornithogalum, particularly O. umbellatum: so called from its starlike flowers, which are pure-white within. This species is native from France and the Netherlands to the Caucasus; it is common in gardens and often runs wild, in some parts of America too freely. In Palestine its bulbs are cooked and eaten, and they are thought by some to have been the "dove's dung" of 2 Kings vi. 25. Some other species are desirable hardy garden-bulbs, as O. nutans and O. Narbonne (O. pyramidalis), the latter 3 feet high with a pyramidal cluster. O. caudatum, with long leaves drying like tails at the end, and with watery-looking bulbs, is a species from the Cape of Good Hope, sometimes called onion-lily, remarkably tenacious of life except in cold. It has a flower-scape 2 or 3 feet high, and continues blooming a long time.

2. One of a few plants of other genera, as Stellaria Holostea and Hypericum calycinum. [Prov. Eng.] See also Hypoxis and Gagea. [In the name of all these plants there is reference to the star of Mat. ii., which guided the wise men to Bethlehem.]

star-of-Jerusalem (stär'qv-jē-rō'sa-lēm), n. The goat's-beard, Tragopogon pratensis. Prior ascribes the name to the salsify, T. porrifolius. See cut under salsify.

star-of-night (stär'qv-nit'), n. A large-flowered tree, Clusia rosea, of tropical America. See Clusia. [West Indies.]

star-of-the-earth (stär'qv-thē-ēth'), n. See Plantago.

starost (stär'ost), n. [< Pol. starosta (= Russ. starosta, a bailiff, steward), lit. elder, senior, < stary, old, = Russ. staro, old.] 1. In Poland, a nobleman possessed of a castle or domain called a starosty.—2. In Russia, the head man of a mir or commune.

starosty (stär'os-ti), n.; pl. starosties (-tiz). [< Pol. starostwo (= Russ. starostvo), < starosta, a starost: see starost.] In Poland, a name given to castles and domains conferred on noblemen for life by the crown.

star-pagoda (stär'pa-gō'dj), n. A variety of the pagoda, an Indian gold coin, so called from its being marked with a star.

star-pepper (stär'pēp'ēr), n. See pepper.

star-pile (stär'pīl), n. A thermophile whose elements are arranged in the form of a star.

star-pine (stär'pīn), n. Same as cluster-pine (which see, under pine).

star-proof (stär'prōf), a. Impervious to the light of the stars. Milton, Arcades, l. 89.

starri, n. An obsolete spelling of starc<sup>4</sup>.

star-read (stär'rēd), n. [Early mod. E. also star-rede; < star<sup>1</sup> + read<sup>1</sup>, n.] Knowledge of the stars; astronomy. [Rare.]

Egyptian wisards old,
Which in Star-read were wont have best insight.
Spenser, F. Q., V., Prol.

starred (stär'd), p. a. [< ME. sterred, stirrede (also sterned = D. gestarnd, gesternd = OHG. gestirnt, MHG. gestirnt), starred; as star + -ed.] 1. Studded, decorated, or adorned with stars.—2. Influenced by the stars: usually in composition: as, ill-starred.

My third comfort,
Starr'd most unluckily, is . . .
Haled out to murder. Shak., W. T., III. 2. 100.

3. Cracked, with many rays proceeding from a central point: as, a starred pane of glass; a starred mirror.—4. Marked or distinguished with a star or asterisk.—Starred corals, the Caryophyllidae.

star-reed (stär'rēd), n. [Tr. Sp. bejuco de la estrella.] A plant, Aristolochia fragrantissima, highly esteemed in Peru as a remedy against dysentery, malignant inflammatory fevers, etc. Lindley.

starrify (stär'i-fi), v. t. [< star + -i-fy.] To mark with a star. Sylvestre, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, II., The Handy-Crafts. [Rare.]

starriness (stär'i-nes), n. The state of being starry.

star-rowel (stär'rou'el), n. See rowel.

star-ruby (stär'rū'bi), n. A ruby exhibiting asterism, like the more common star-sapphire or asteria.

starry (stär'i), a. [< ME. sterri, sterri; < star + -y.] 1. Abounding with stars; adorned with stars.

But see! where Daphne wond'ring mounts on high,
Above the clouds, above the starry sky! Pope, Winter, I. 70.

2. Consisting of or proceeding from stars; stellar; stellary: as, starry light; starry flame.

The starry influences. Scott.

3. Shining like stars; resembling stars: as, starry eyes.—4. Stellate or stelliform; radiate; having parts radiately arranged.—5. Pertaining to or in some way associated with the stars.

The starry Galileo, with his woes.
Byron, Childe Harold, IV. 54.

Were 't not much trouble to your starry employments,
I a poor mortal would entreat your furtherance
In a terrestrial business. Tomkiss (?), Albionazar, I. 5.

Starry campion, a species of catch-fly, Silene stellata, found in the eastern United States. It has a slender stem 3 feet high, leaves partly in whorls (whence the name), and a loose panicle of white flowers with a bell-shaped calyx and fringed petals.—Starry hummer, a hummingbird of the genus Stellula, as S. calliope.—Starry puff-ball. Same as earth-star.—Starry ray. See ray.

star-sapphire (stär'saf'ir), n. Same as asteriated sapphire (see sapphire) and asteria.

star-saxifrage (stär'sak'si-frāj), n. A small saxifrage, Saxifraga stellaris, found northward in both hemispheres, having white starry flowers.

star-scaled (stär'skald), a. Having stellate scales, as a fish: as, the star-scaled dolphins, fishes of the family Astrodermidae.

star-shake (stär'shāk), n. See shake, n., 7.

star-shell (stär'shell'), n. A thin metal case or shell loaded with luminous stars, fired from a gun or a specially constructed apparatus, and designed to burst in the air like a rocket: used in time of war to illuminate the enemy's position.

starshine (stär'shin), n. The shine or light of stars; starlight. Tennyson, Oriana.

star-shoot, star-shot (stär'shüt, stür'shot), n. A gelatinous substance often found in wet meadows, and formerly supposed to be the extinguished residuum of a shooting-star. It is, however, of vegetable origin, being the common nostoc.

I have seen a good quantity of that jelly that is sometimes found on the ground, and by the vulgar called a star-shoot, as if it remained upon the extinction of a falling star. Boyle, Works, I. 244.

star-slough (stär'sluf), n. Same as star-shoot.
star-spangled (stär'spang'gld), a. Spotted or spangled with stars: as, the star-spangled banner, the national flag of the United States.

Thou, friendly Night,
That wide o'er Heaven's star-spangled plain Holdest thy awful reign.
Potter, tr. of Æschylus (ed. 1779), II. 333. (Jodrell.)

The star-spangled banner, O long may it wave O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!
F. S. Key, The Star-Spangled Banner.

star-spotted (stär'spot'ed), a. Spotted or studded with stars.

star-stone (stär'stön), n. 1. Same as asteriated sapphire (see sapphire) and asteria.—2. A cut and polished piece of the trunk of a petrified tree-fern. See Psaronius.

start<sup>1</sup> (stärt), v. [E. dial. also stert, sturt; < ME. starten, sterten, stirten, styrtien (pret. sterte, stirte, sturte, storte, stert, later start, pp. stert, stirt, y-stert), prob. *< AS. *styrtan* (not found) = MD. D. storten = MLG. storten = OHG. sturzan, MHG. G. stürzen, fall, start, = Sw. störta (Sw. dial. stjörta, run wildly about) = Dan. styrte, cast down, ruin, fall dead; root unknown. The explanation given by Skeat, that the word meant orig. 'turn tail,' or 'show the tail,' hence turn over suddenly, < AS. steort, etc., a tail (see start<sup>2</sup>), is untenable. Hence startle.] I. intrans. 1. To move with a sudden involuntary jerk or twitch, as from a shock of surprise, fear, pain, or the like; give sudden involuntary expression to or indication of surprise, pain, fright, or any sudden emotion, by a quick convulsive movement of the body: as, he started at the sight.

The season priketh every gentill herte,
And maketh him out of his slepe to sterte.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, I. 186.

He is now grown wondrous sad, weeps often too,
Talks of his brother to himself, starts strangely.
Fletcher, Mad Lover, v. 2.

With trial fire touch me his finger-end;
... but if he start,
It is the flesh of a corrupted heart.
Shak., M. W. of W., v. 5. 90.

2. To make a sudden or unexpected change of place or position; rise abruptly or quickly; spring; leap, dart, or rush with sudden quickness: as, to start aside, backward, forward, out, or up; to start from one's seat.

Up stirte the pardoner and that anon.
Chaucer, Prologue to Wife of Bath's Tale, I. 163.

Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres.

Shak., Hamlet, I. 5. 17

The Captain started up suddenly, his hair standing at an end. Howell, Letters, I. iv. 28.

3. To set out; begin or enter upon action, course, career, or pursuit, as a journey or a race.

At once they start, advancing in a line.
Dryden, Æneid, v. 183.

All being ready, we started in a caique very early in the morning. R. Curzon, Monast. in the Levant, p. 294.

4†. To run; escape; get away.
As three thynges ther beoth that doth a man to sterte
Out of his owne hous as holy writ sheweth.
Piers Plowman (C), xx. 297.

When I have them,
I'll place those guards upon them, that they start not.
B. Jonson, Catiline, IV. 6.

5. To lose hold; give way; swerve aside; be dislocated or moved from an intended position or direction; spring: as, the ship's timbers started.

The best bow may start,
And the hand vary.
B. Jonson, New Inn, II. 2.

6. To fall off or out; loosen and come away, as the balcan of a dead whale through decomposition, or hair from a soured pelt.—To start after, to set out in pursuit of.—To start against, to become engaged in opposition to; oppose.—To start in, to begin. [Colloq., U. S.]—To start out, (a) To set forth, as on a journey or enterprise. (b) To begin; set out: as, he started out to be a lawyer.—To start up, (a) To rise suddenly, as from a seat or couch; come suddenly into notice or importance.

The mind very often sets itself on work in search of some hidden idea, . . . though sometimes too they start up in our minds of their own accord.

Locke, Human Understanding, II. x. 7.
(b) To begin operation or business: as, the factory will start up to-morrow. [Colloq.]

II. trans. 1. To rouse suddenly into action, motion, or flight, as a beast from its lair, a hare or rabbit from its form, or a bird from its nest; cause to come suddenly into view, action, play, flight, or the like: as, to start game; to start the detectives.

Brutus will start a spirit as soon as Cesar.
Shak., J. C., I. 2. 147.

She had aimed . . . at Philip, but had started quite other game.

2. To originate; begin; set in motion; set going; give the first or a new impulse to: as, to start a fire; to start a newspaper, a school, or a new business; to start a controversy.

One of our society of the Trumpet . . . started last night a notion which I thought had reason in it.

Kindly conversation could not be sustained between us, because whatever topic I started immediately received from her a turn at once coarse and trite, perverse and imbecile.
Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xxvii.

In 1793, Canning and his friends started, as a weekly paper, the "Anti-Jacobin," which had a brilliant career of eight months. H. Morley, English Writers, etc., I. 110.

3. To cause to set out, or to provide the means or take the steps necessary to enable (one) to set out or embark, as on an errand, a journey, enterprise, career, etc.: as, to start one's son in business; to start a party on an expedition.—4. To loosen, or cause to loosen or lose hold; cause to move from its place: as, to start a plank; to start a tooth; to start an anchor.—5. To set flowing, as liquor from a cask; pour out: as, to start wine into another cask.—6. To alarm; disturb suddenly; startle.

You boggle shrewdly, every feather starts you.
Shak., All's Well, v. 3. 232.

The queen, being a little startled hereat, said, "À moi femme et parler ainsi?" "To me a woman and say so?"
Lord Herbert of Cherbury, Life (ed. Howells), p. 162.

To start a butt. See butt.—To start a tack or a sheet, to slack it off a little.—To start a vessel from the stump, to begin to build a vessel; build an entirely new vessel, as distinguished from repairing an old one; hence, to furnish or outfit a vessel completely.

start<sup>1</sup> (stärt), n. [< ME. stert; < start<sup>1</sup>, v.] 1. A sudden involuntary spring, jerk, or twitch, such as may be caused by sudden surprise, fear, pain, or other emotion.

The fright awaken'd Arcite with a start.
Dryden, Pal. and Arc., I. 555.

The exaggerated start it gives us to have an insect unexpectedly pass over our skin or a cat noiselessly come and snuffle about our hand. W. James, Mind, XII. 159.

2. A spring or recoil, as of an elastic body; spring; jerk.

In strings, the more they are wound up and strained, and thereby give a more quick start back, the more treble is the sound. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 179.

3. A sudden burst or gleam; a sally; a flash.

To check the starts and sallies of the soul.
Addison, Cato, I. 4.

A certain gravity . . . much above the little gratification received from starts of humour and fancy.
Steele, Tatler, No. 82.

4. A sudden bound or stroke of action; a brief, impulsive, intermittent, or spasmodic effort or movement; spasm: as, to work by fits and starts.

For she did speak in starts distractedly.
Shak., T. N., II. 2. 22.

All men have wandering impulses, fits and starts of generosity.

5. A sudden voluntary movement; a dash; a rush; a run.

When I commend you, you hug me for that truth; when I speak your faults, you make a start, and fly the hearing.
Beau. and Fl., King and No King, I. 1.

"Shall I go for the police?" inquired Miss Jenny, with a nimble start toward the door.
Dickens, Our Mutual Friend, IV. 8.

6. A starting or setting out in some course, action, enterprise, or the like; beginning; outset; departure.

You stand like greyhounds in the slips, Straining upon the start. Shak., Ilen V., III. 1. 23.

In the progress of social evolution new starts or variations occur.

7. Lead or advantage in starting or setting out, as in a race or contest: advantage in the beginning or first stage of something: as, to have the start in a competition for a prize.—8. Impulse, impetus, or first movement in some direction or course; send-off: as, to get a good start in life.

How much I had to do to calm his rage!
Now fear I this will give it start again.
Shak., Hamlet, IV. 7. 104.

Who can but magnify the endeavours of Aristotle, and the noble start which learning had under him?
Sir T. Browne, Christ. Mor., II. 5.

9. A part that has started; a loosened or broken part; a break or opening.

There [under a ship's keel], instead of a start, as they call an opening in the copper, I found something sticking in the hull.
St. Nicholas, XVII. 586.

10†. Distance.

Being a great start from Athens to England.
Lyly, Euphues and his England, p. 223.

At a start, at a bound; in an instant.

At a start he was betwixt hem two.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, I. 847.

To get or have the start, to be beforehand (with); gain the lead or advantage; get ahead: generally with of.

It doth amaze me
So get the start of the majestic world
And bear the palm alone. Shak., J. C., I. 2. 130.

start<sup>2</sup> (stärt), n. [Early mod. E. also stert; < ME. sturt, stert, stirt, steort, < AS. steort = OFries. stert, stirt = MD. steert, D. staart = MLG. LG. stert, steert, staart, steerd = MHG. G. stertz = Icel. stertir = Sw. Dan. stjert, tail; root unknown; some derive it from the root of startl, in the sense 'project' or 'turn'; others compare Gr. στέλλω, MGr. στέλλω, a point, tine, tag of hair, etc.] 1†. A tail; the tail of an animal: thus, redstart is literally redtail.—2. Something resembling a tail; a handle: as, a plow-start (or plow-tail).—3. The sharp point of a young stag's horn. E. Phillips (under branch).—4. In mining, the beam or lever to which the horse is attached in a horse-whim or gin. [North. Eng.]—5. In an overshot water-wheel, one of the partitions which determine the form of the bucket. E. H. Knight.—6†. A stalk, as of an apple. Palsgrave.

startail (stär'täl), n. A sailors' name for the tropic-bird. See cut under Phaethon.

They also call it by the name of star tail, on account of the long projecting tail feathers. J. G. Wood, Illust. Nat. Hist., II. 756.

starter (stär'tér), n. [startl + -erl.] One who or that which starts. (a) One who shirks from his purpose; one who suddenly brings forward a question or an objection. (b) One who takes to flight or runs away; a runaway.

Nay, nay, you need not bolt and lock so fast; She is no starter. Heywood, If you Know not Me (Works, ed. Pearson, I. 213).

(c) One who sets out on a journey, a pursuit, a race, or the like.

We are early starters in the dawn, even when we have the luck to have good beds to sleep in. Scott, Rob Roy, xxxv.

(d) One who or that which sets persons or things in motion, as a person who gives the signal for a race, or for the starting of a coach, car, boat, or other conveyance, or a lever or rod for setting an engine or a machine in motion.

There is one starter, . . . who, either by word or by pistol-report, starts each race. The Century, XL. 205.

(e) A dog that starts game; a springer; a cocker.—Bung starter. See bung-starter.

startful (start'ful), a. [startl + -ful.] Apt to start; easily startled or frightened; skittish. [Rare.]

Say, virgin, where dost thou delight to dwell? With maids of honour, startful virgin? tell. Wolcot (P. Pindar), Ode to Affectation.

startfulness (stär't'ful-nes), n. The quality or state of being startful, or easily startled. [Rare.]

star-thistle (stär'this'tl), n. A low spreading weed, Centaurea Culetrapa, with small heads of purple flowers, the involucre bracts ending in stiff spines, the leaves also spiny: in one form called mouse-thorn. According to Prior the name (by him applied to C. solstitialis, a more erect plant with yellow flowers, sometimes named yellow star-thistle) arises

The Upper Part of the Stem with the Heads of Star-thistle (C. culetrapa)
a, one of the involucre bracts from the resemblance of the spiny involucre to the weapon called a morning-star. Both of these plants are sparingly naturalized in the United States, the former on the eastern, the latter on the western coast. The name is extended to the genus, of which one species, C. Cyanus, is the blue bottle or corn-flower (the Kornblume of the Germans, with whom it has patriotic associations), another is the blessed thistle (see thistle), and others are called centaurea, knapsweed, and sultan. See these names and Centaurea.

starthroat (stär'thröt), n. A humming-bird of the genus Helminthaster, having the throat spangled with the scales of the gorget, like many other hummers.

starting-bar (stär'ting-bär), n. A hand-lever for moving the valves in starting a steam-engine.

starting-bolt (stär'ting-bölt), n. A rod or bolt used to drive out another; a drift-bolt. E. H. Knight.

starting-engine (stär'ting-en'jin), n. A small low-pressure engine sometimes connected with a large marine engine, and used to start it. Sometimes called starting steam-cylinder.

starting-hole (stär'ting-höl), n. [Early mod. E. sterling-hole; < starting + holel.] A loophole; evasion; subterfuge; dodge; refuge.

Some, which seek for starting-holes to mainteine their vices, will objecte. Sir T. Elyot, The Governour, II. 9.

What trick, what device, what starting-hole, canst thou now find out to hide thee from this open and apparent shame? Shak., 1 Hen. IV., II. 4. 290.

startingly (stär'ting-li), adv. By fits and starts; impetuously; intemperately. Shak., Othello, III. 4. 79.

starting-place (stär'ting-pläs), n. A place at which a start or beginning is made; a place from which one starts or sets out.

A-ham'd, when I have ended well my race, To be led back to my first starting-place. Sir J. Denham, Old Age, I.

starting-point (stär'ting-point), n. The point from which any one or anything starts; point of departure.

starting-post (stär'ting-pöst), n. The point or line, marked out by a post or otherwise, from which competitors start in a race or contest.

starting-valve (stär'ting-valv), n. A small valve sometimes introduced for moving the main valves of a steam-engine in starting it.

starting-wheel (stär'ting-hwöl), n. A wheel which actuates the valves that start an engine.

startish (stär'tish), a. [startl + -ishl.] Apt to start; skittish; shy: said of horses. [Colloq.]

startle (stär'tl), v.; pret. and pp. startled, ppr. startling. [ME. startlen, startlen, stertyllen; freq. of startl.] I. intrans. 1. To start; manifest fear, alarm, surprise, pain, or similar emotion by a sudden involuntary start.

At first she startles, then she stands amazed; At last with terror she from thence doth fly. Sir J. Davies, Immortal, of Soul, Int.

She changed colour and startled at everything she heard. Addison, Spectator, No. 3.

2. To wince; shrink.

Physic, or mathematics, . . . She will endure, and never startle. B. Jonson, Alchemist, IV. 1.

3. To move suddenly, as if surprised or frightened.

Startling from his trance, I will revenge (quoth she). Gascoigne, Complaint of Philomene.

If a dead leaf startle behind me, I think 'tis your garment's hem. Lowell, The Broken Trust.

4. To take to flight, as in panic; stampede, as cattle.

And the herd startled, and ran heddyng into the see. Tyndale, Mark v. 13.

5. To take departure; depart; set out. [Obsolete or provincial.]

A gret startling he mycht haiff seyne Off schippys Barbour, Bruce, III. 170.

Or by Madrid he takes the route, . . . Or down Italian vista startles. Burns, The Two Dogs.

II. trans. 1. To cause to start; excite by sudden surprise, alarm, apprehension, or other emotion; scare; shock.

I confess I have pruned them all, and can discover nothing that may startle a discreet belief. Sir T. Browne, Religio Medici, I. 21.

Like the inhabitants of a city who have been just startled by some strange and alarming news. Scott, Kenilworth, xl.

2. To rouse suddenly; cause to start, as from a place of concealment or from a state of repose or security.

Let me thy vigils keep 'Mongst boughs pavilioned, where the deer's swift leap Startles the wild bee from the foxglove bell. Keats, Sonnets, IV.

The garrison, startled from sleep, found the enemy already masters of the towers. Irrving, Granada, p. 31.

startle (stär'tl), n. [startle, v.] A sudden movement or shock caused by surprise, alarm, or apprehension of danger; a start.

After having recovered from my first startle, I was very well pleased with the accident. Spectator.

startler (stär'tlér), n. [startle + -erl.] 1. One who or that which starts or is startled. [Rare.]

When, dazzled by the eastern glow, Such startler cast his glance below, And saw unmeasured depth around. Scott, L. of the L., II. 31.

2. That which startles: as, that was a startler. [Colloq.]

startling (stär'tling), p. a. [Ppr. of startle, v.] 1. That startles or that excites sudden surprise, apprehension, fear, or like emotion; that rouses or suddenly and forcibly attracts attention: as, startling news; a startling discovery.

It was startling to hear all at once the sound of voices singing a solemn hymn. B. Taylor, Northern Travel, p. 42.

2†. Easily startled or alarmed; skittish; shying.

Ther was also the lorde of the white tour, that was a noble knyght and an hardy, with vij hundred knyghtes vpon startlinge stedes. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), II. 257.

The Tyranny of Prelates under the name of Bishops have made our cares tender and startling. Milton, Reformation in Eng., II.

startlingly (stär'tling-li), adv. In a startling manner; surprisingly.

But who could this be, to whom mere human sympathy was so startlingly sweet? Curtis, Prue and I, p. 155.

startlish (stär'tlish), a. [startle + -ishl.] Apt to start; skittish. [Colloq.]

star-trap (stär'trap), n. A trap-door on the stage of a theater for the disappearance of gymnastic characters. It consists of five or more pointed pieces which part when pressure is applied to the center.

start-up (stär'tup), a. and n. [start up: see startl, v.] I. a. Upstart.

Two junior start-up societies. Swift, Tale of a Tub, I. Whoever weds Isabella, it shall not be Father Falconara's start-up son. Walpole, Castle of Otranto, IV.

II. n. One who comes suddenly into notice; an upstart.

That young start-up hath all the glory of my overthrow. Shak., Much Ado, I. 3. 69.

startup (stär'tup), n. [Usually in pl. start-ups, also sometimes startopes; origin uncertain.] A half-boot or buskin, described in the sixteenth century as laced above the ankle.

Guestree (galters), startups; high shoes, or gamashes for country folks. Cotgrave.

Her neat fit startups of green Velvet bee, Flourisht with silver; and beneath the knee, Moon-like, indented; butt'ned down the side With Orient Pearls as big as Filbert's pride. Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, II. The Decay.

A stupid lout . . . in a grey jerkin, with his head bare, his hose about his heels, and huge startups upon his feet. Scott, Kenilworth, xxiv.

starvation (stär-vä'shon), n. [starve + -ation.] The word is noted as one of the first (flirtation being another) to be formed directly from a native E. verb with the L. term. -ation. It was first used or brought into notice by Henry Dundas, first Viscount Melville (hence called "Starvation Dundas"), in a speech on American affairs, in 1775. The state of starving or being starved; extreme suffering from cold or hunger; hence, deprivation of any element essential to nutrition or the proper discharge of the bodily functions: often used figuratively of mental or spiritual needs.

Starvation Dundas, whose pious policy suggested that the devil of rebellion could be expelled only by fasting.

Walpole, to Rev. W. Mason, April 25, 1781.

Starvation was an epithet applied to Mr. Dundas, the word being, for the first time, introduced into our language by him, in a speech, in 1775, in an American debate, and thenceforward became a nickname: . . . "I shall not wait for the advent of starvation from Edinburgh to settle my judgment." Milford, in Walpole's Letters (ed. Cunningham), VIII. 30, note.

Whether an animal be herbivorous or carnivorous, it begins to starve from the moment its vital food-stuffs consist of pure amyloids, or fats, or any mixture of them. It suffers from what may be called nitrogen starvation.

Huxley and Youmans, Physiol., § 170.

starve (stärv), v.; pret. and pp. starved, ppr. starving. [Early mod. E. also sterve; < ME. sterven, steorven (pret. starf, sterf, pp. starven, storven, i-storve, y-storve), < AS. steorfan (pret. starf, pl. starfon, pp. starfen), die, = OS. sterban = OFries. sterba = D. sterren = MLG. sterren, LG. starven, sterren = OHG. sterban, MIG. G. sterben, die; not found in Goth. or Scand., except as in the derived Icel. starf, trouble, labor, toil, work, starfa, toil, work, starfi, epilepsy (= AS. steorfa, E. dial. starf, a plague), which indicate that the verb orig. meant 'labor, be in trouble'; cf. Gr. οἱ καπνῶρες, the dead, lit. 'those who have labored,' < καπνῶν, labor, toil.] I. intrans. 1†. To die; perish.

She starf for wo neigh when she vented. Chaucer, Troilus, IV. 1419.

He starf in grete age disherited, as the story witnesseth. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), III. 401.

Specifically—2. To perish from lack of food or nourishment; die of hunger; also, to suffer from lack of food; pine with hunger; famish; suffer extreme poverty.

Starves in the midst of nature's bounty curst, And in the loaden vineyard dies for thirst. Addison, Letter from Italy.

3. To perish with cold; die from cold or exposure; suffer from cold. [Now chiefly Eng.]

Starving with cold as well as hunger.

4. To suffer for lack of anything that is needed or much desired; suffer mental or spiritual want; pine.

Though our souls doe starve
For want of knowledge, we doe little care.
Times' Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 15.

I . . . starve for a merry look. Shak., C. of E., ii. 1. 88.

II. trans. 1. To cause to perish with hunger; afflict or distress with hunger; famish; hence, to kill, subdue, or bring to terms by withholding food or by the cutting off of supplies: as, to starve a garrison into surrender.

Whilst I have meat and drink, love cannot starve me.

2. To cause to perish with cold; distress or affect severely with cold; benumb utterly; chill. [Now chiefly Eng.]

All the mete he says at on bare worde,
The potage fyrst with brede y-couyn, Conerys hum agayn lest they ben stormy.

Babes Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 324.

That kiss is comfortless

As frozen water to a starved snake.

Shak., Tit. And., iii. 1. 252.

From beds of raging fire to starve in ice

Their soft ethereal warmth. Milton, P. L., ii. 600.

What a sad fire we have got, and I dare say you are both starved with cold. Jane Austen, Mansfield Park, xxviii.

3. To cause to perish through lack of any kind; deprive of life, vigor, or force through want; exhaust; stunt.

If the words be but becoming and signifying, and the sense gentle, there is juice; but, where that wanteth, the language is thin, flagging, poor, starved.

B. Jonson, Di-coversies.

The powers of their minds are starved by disuse. Locke.

Starved rat, a pika, Lagomys princeps. See cony, 4, and cut under Lagomys. [Local, U. S.]

starve-acre (stär'ä-kër), n. [< starve + obj. acre.] One of the crowfoots, Ranunculus arvensis: so called as impoverishing the soil or indicating a poor one. Britten and Holland, Eng. Plant Names. [Prov. Eng.]

starved (stär'v'd), p. a. In her., stripped of its leaves; without leaves or blossoms: noting a branch of a tree used as a bearing.

starveling (stär'v'ling), n. and a. [Formerly also starling; < starve + -ling.] 1. n. A starving or starved person; an animal or a plant that is made thin or lean and weak through want of nourishment.

Such a meagre troop such thin-chapp'd starvelings,
Their barking stomachs hardly could refrain From swallowing up the foe ere they had slain him.

Randolph, Jealous Lovers, iii. 4

II. a. Starving (from hunger or cold); hungry; lean; pining with want.

Sending herds of souls starling to Hell, while they feast and riot upon the labours of hireling Curats.

Milton, Apology for Smeectymnus starvent. An obsolete past participle of starve. Daniel (Arber's Eng. Garner, I. 587).

starver (stär'ver), n. One who starves or causes starvation. J. S. Mill, On Liberty, iii.

starward (stär'wärd), adv. [< star + -ward.] To or toward the stars. Carlyle, Sartor Resartus, ii. 6.

starward (stär'wärd), a. [< starward, adv.] Pointing or reaching to the stars. Blackie, Lays of Highlands, etc., p. 92. (Encyc. Dict.) [Rare.]

star-wheel (stär'hwél), n. A spur-wheel the teeth of which are V-shaped, with an angle of 60°. Such wheels are now little used, except (a) in the winding-mechanism of the cloth-beams in some kinds of looms, where their teeth are engaged by clicks; (b) for some other special purposes, as in modifications of the Geneva movement, etc.; and (c) in clock-motions, the teeth of the star-wheel engaging with a pin on the hour-wheel, by which the star-wheel is intermittently turned along one tooth for every revolution of the hour-wheel: this movement is used in repeating-clocks, and also in registering-mechanism, adding-machines, etc. —Star-wheel and jumper, in horol., an arrangement of a star-wheel in relation with a pin on the minute-wheel, by which the snail is caused to move in an intermittent manner, or by jumps.

star-worm (stär'wërm), n. A gephyrean worm; any one of the Gephyrea.

starwort (stär'wërt), n. [< star + wort.] 1. Any plant of the genus Stellaria, the species of which have white starry flowers; chickweed.

See cut under Stellaria.—2. Any species of the genus Aster, the name alluding to the stellate rays of the heads. Specifically, in England, A. Tripolium, the sea-starwort, a salt-marsh species. The Italian starwort is A. Amellus, of central and southern Europe.

3. The genus Callitriche, more properly water-starwort. Also star-grass.—Drooping starwort, the blazing-star, Chamaelirium Carolinianum.—Mealy starwort, the colic-root, Aletris farinosa. It is tonic, and in larger doses narcotic, emetic, and cathartic.—Yellow starwort, the elecampane.

stasion (sta-sid'i-on), n.; pl. stasidia (-i). [< MGr. stasion, a stall, dim. of stasis, a standing-place.] In the Gr. Ch., a stall in a church, as of a patriarch, hegumen, or monk. Originally the stasidia seem to have been places for standing only (whence the name).

stasimon (stas'i-mon), n.; pl. stasima (-mā). [< Gr. stasimon (see def.), < stasis, a standing, station.] In anc. Gr. lit., any song of the chorus in a drama after the parados. The parabasis of a comedy is not, however, called a stasimon. Some authorities limit the use of the term to tragedy. The name is derived not, as stated by scholiasts, from the chorus's standing still during a stasimon (which cannot have been the case), but from the fact that it was sung after they had taken their station in the orchestra.

stasimorphy (sta'si-môr-fi), n. [< Gr. stasis, standing, + morphē, form.] Deviation of form arising from arrest of growth. Cooke, Manual.

stasis (stā'sis), n. [NL. < Gr. stasis, a standing, a stoppage, < isthai, mid. and pass. isthai, stand: see stand.] 1. In pathol., a stopping of the blood in some part of the circulation, as in a part of an inflamed area.—2. Pl. stasis or stasies. In the Gr. Ch., one of the sections (regularly three) of a cataphora, or portion of the psalter. At the end of each stasis Gloria Patri and Alléluia are said. The name probably comes from the pause (stasis) in the psalmody so made. A stasis usually contains two or three psalms. See cataphora (a).

stassfurtite (stas'fërt-it), n. [< Stassfurt (see def.) + -ite.] A massive variety of boracite, found at Stassfurt in Prussia. It resembles in appearance a fine-grained white marble.

stat. An abbreviation of statute or statutes: as, Rer. Stat. (Revised Statutes).

statable (stā'tā-bl), a. [< state + -able.] Capable of being stated or expressed.

statall (stā'tāl), a. [< state + -al.] Of, pertaining to, or considered in relation to a particular State; state, as distinguished from national. [Rare, U. S.]

statant (stā'tant), a. [< heraldic F. statant, equiv. to OF. estant, standing, < L. "stare" (-is, ppr. of stare, stand: see stand.] In her., standing still with all four feet on the ground.—Statant affronté. See at gaze (b), under gaze.

statarian (stā'tā-ri-an), a. [< L. staturius, stationary, steady (status, standing, + -an).] Steady; well-disciplined. [Rare.]

A detachment of your statarian soldiers.

J. Tucker, Light of Nature, II. ii. 23.

statarianly (stā'tā-ri-an-lī), adv. [< statarian + -ly.] In a statarian manner. [Rare.]

My statarianly disciplined battalion.

J. Tucker, Light of Nature, II. ii. 23.

statary (stā'tā-ri), a. [< L. staturius, stationary, steady, < stare, stand.] Stated; fixed; settled. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., v. 23.

state (stāt), n. and a. [< ME. stat, staat, state, condition, existence, also estat, < OF. estat, esta, F. état = Sp. Pg. estado = It. stato = MD. staet, D. staat = MLG. stāt = G. staat = Sw. Dan. stat, state, the state, < L. status (statu-), manner of standing, attitude, position, carriage, manner, dress, apparel; also a position, place; situation, condition, circumstances, position in society, rank; condition of society, public order, public affairs, the commonwealth, the state, government, constitution, etc.; in ML. in numerous other uses; < starr (pp. status, used only as pp. of the transitive form sistere), stand: see stand. The noun is in part (def. 15) appar. from the verb. Doublet of estate, status.] 1. n.

1. Mode or form of existence; position; posture; situation; condition: as, the state of one's health; the state of the roads; a state of uncertainty or of excitement; the present unsatisfactory state of affairs.

Nor shall he smile at thee in secret thought,
Nor laugh with his companions at thy state.

Shak., Lucerne, I. 1066.

O see how fleckle is their state
That do on fates depend!

The Legend of King Arthur (Child's Ballads, I. 64).

Keep the state of the question in your eye. Boyle.

Lion passant guardant

The solitude of such a mind is its state of highest enjoyment.

Irving, Sketch-Book, p. 29.

The present conscious state, when I say "I feel tired," is not the direct state of tire; when I say "I feel angry," it is not the direct state of anger.

W. James, Prin. of Psychol., I. 100.

2. Political or social position or status; station; standing in the world or the community; rank; condition; quality.

These Italian bookes are made English, to bryng mischiefe enough openly and boldly to all states, greate and meane, yong and old, every where.

Aecham, The Scholemaster, p. 81.

A train which well becom'd his state,
But all unarm'd, around him wait.

Scott, Marmion, iv. 7.

3. A class or order: same as estate, 9.

We hold that God's clergy are a state which hath been, and will be as long as there is a Church upon earth, necessary by the plain word of God himself.

Hooker, Eccles. Polity, iii. 11.

4. Style of living; mode of life; especially, the dignity and pomp befitting a person of high degree or large wealth.

Do you know, sir,
What state she carries? what great obedience
Waits at her beck continually?

Fletcher, Mad Lover, i. 1.

5. Stateliness; dignity.

The Abbess, seeing strife was vain, Assumed her wonted state again—
For much of state she had.

Scott, Marmion, v. 31.

6t. A person of high rank; a noble; a personage of distinction.

The twelve Peeres or States of the Kingdome of France.
1660. Hexham.

Quoted in Babes Book (E. E. T. S.), Index, p. 120.

First you shall see the men in order set,
States and their Pawns.

Middleton, Game at Chess, Prol.

7t. A seat of dignity; a dais; a chair of state, usually on a raised platform, with or without a canopy; also, this canopy itself.

The state . . . was placed in the upper end of the hall.

B. Jonson, Mask of Blackness.

It is your seat; which, with a general suffrage, [Offering Timoleon the state.]
As to the supreme magistrate, Sicily tenders.

Massey, Bondman, i. 3.

The Queene Consort sat under a state on a black foot-cloth, to entertain the circle.

Evelyn, Diary, March 5, 1655.

8t. The crisis, or culminating point, as of a disease; that point in the growth or course of a thing at which decline begins.

Tumours have their several degrees and times; as beginning, augment, state, and declination.

Wiseman, Surgery.

9. Continuance of existence; stability.

By a man of understanding and knowledge the state thereof [of a land] shall be prolonged.

Prov. xxviii. 2.

10t. Estate; income; possession.

I judge them, first, to have their states confiscate.

B. Jonson, Catiline, v. 8.

11. The whole people of one body politic; the commonwealth: usually with the definite article; in a particular sense, a civil and self-governing community; a commonwealth.

In Aleppo once,
Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk
Beat a Venetian and traduced the state.

Shak., Othello, v. 2. 354.

A State is a community of persons living within certain limits of territory, under a permanent organization, which aims to secure the prevalence of justice by self-imposed law.

Woolsey, Introd. to Inter. Law, § 36.

12. The power wielded by the government of a country; the civil power, often as contrasted with the ecclesiastical: as, the union of church and state.—13. One of the commonwealths or bodies politic which together make up a federal republic, which stand in certain specified relations with the central or national government, and as regards internal affairs are more or less independent. In this sense the word state is used chiefly with reference to the several States (generally cap.) of the American Union, the United States of America. The relations between the individual states and the national or central government of Mexico, Brazil, and various other republics of the American continent are formed more or less closely on the model of the United States. Current designations or epithets of the States of the American Union are the following: Badger State, Wisconsin; Bay State, Massachusetts; Bayou State, Mississippi; Bear State, Arkansas; California, Kentucky; Big-bend State, Tennessee; Blue-bonnet State, Delaware; Blue-law State, Connecticut; Buckeye State, Ohio; Bullion State, Missouri; Centennial State, Colorado; Corn-cracker State, Kentucky; Cracker State, Georgia; Creole State, Louisiana; Dark and Bloody Ground, Kentucky; Diamond State, Delaware; Empire State, New York; Empire State of the South, Georgia; Excelsior State, New York; Freestone State, Connecticut; Garden State, Kansas; Golden State, California; Gopher State, Minnesota; Granite State, New Hampshire; Green Mountain State, Vermont; Gulf State, Florida; Hawkeye a, drop; b, pawl; c, disk; d, star-wheel.

Star-wheel

State, Iowa; Hoosier State, Indiana; Keystone State, Pennsylvania; Lake State, Michigan; Land of Steady Habits, Connecticut; Little Rhody, Rhode Island; Lone Star State, Texas; Lumber State, Maine; Mother of Presidents, Virginia; Mother of States, Virginia; Mudcat State, Mississippi; New England of the West, Minnesota; Old Colony, Massachusetts; Old Dominion, Virginia; Old-line State, Maryland; Old North State, North Carolina; Palmetto State, South Carolina; Panhandle State, West Virginia; Pelican State, Louisiana; Peninsula State, Florida; Pine-tree State, Maine; Prairie State, Illinois; Sage-hen State, Nevada; Silver State, Nevada; Squatter State, Kansas; Sucker State, Illinois; Turpentine State, North Carolina; Web-foot State, Oregon; Wolverine State, Michigan; Wooden Nutmeg State, Connecticut.

14. pl. [cap.] The legislative body in the island of Jersey. It consists of the bailiff, jurats of the royal court, constables, rectors of the parishes, and fourteen deputies. The lieutenant-governor has the veto power. Guernsey has a similar body, the Deliberative States, and a more popular assembly, the Elective States.

15†. A statement; a document containing a statement, or showing the state or condition of something at a given time; an account (or the like) stated.—16. In engraving, an impression taken from an engraved plate in some particular stage of its progress, recognized by certain distinctive marks not seen on previous impressions or on any made subsequently unless coupled with fresh details. There may be seven, eight, or more states from one plate.—17. In bot., a form or phase of a particular plant.

Sticta limba . . . was recognized as occurring in the United States by Dilse. . . . and Dr. Nylander (Syn. p. 353) speaks of a state from Arctic America.

The German, Genera Lichenum, p. 35.

Border State, in U. S. hist., one of those slave States which bordered upon the free States. They were Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky, and Missouri.—Cap of state, in her., a headdress representing the head-dress worn in the middle ages by the lord mayor of London on his installation, like a short cone with a ring as of fur, around the head.—Chair of state. See chair.—Civil state. See civil.—Cloth of state. See cloth.—Commissioner for the State of, etc. See commissioner.—Confederate States of America, construct state, cotton States. See the qualifying words.—Council of State. See council.—Cretiloid state, myxodema.—Department of State. See department.—Doctrine of States' rights, in U. S. hist., the doctrine that to the separate States of the Union belong all rights and privileges not specially delegated by the Constitution to the general government. The doctrine of strict construction of the Constitution. In this form the doctrine has always been and is still held as one of the distinctive principles of the Democratic party. Before the civil war the more radical believers in the doctrine of States' rights held that the separate States possessed all the powers and rights of sovereignty, and that the Union was only a federation from which each of the States had a right to secede.—Ecclesiastical state, free States. See the adjectives.—In a state of nature. See nature.—Intermediate, maritime state. See the adjectives.—Middle States. See middle.—Military state, that branch of the government of a state or nation by which its military power is exercised, including all who by reason of their service therein are under military authority and regulation.—Purse of state, in her. See purse.—Reason of state. See reason.—Slave State. See slave.—Southern States, the States in the southern part of the United States, generally regarded as the same as the former slave States.—Sovereign state. See sovereign.—State of facts, in law, a technical term sometimes used of a written statement of facts in the nature of or a substitute for pleadings, or evidence, or both.—State of progress. See progress.—State's evidence. See king's evidence, under evidence.—States of the Church, or Papal States, the former temporal dominions of the Pope. They were principally in central Italy and extended from about Ravenna and Ancona on the Adriatic to the Mediterranean including Rome. Their origin dates from a grant made by Pepin the Short in the middle of the eighth century. The territory was greatly reduced in 1494 and the remainder was annexed in 1870 to the kingdom of Italy (with a few small exceptions, including the Vatican and its dependencies).—The States. (a) The Netherlands. (b) The United States of America; as he has sailed from Liverpool for the States. [Great Britain and her colonies.]—To keep state, to assume the pomp, dignity, and reserve of a person of high rank or degree; to conduct one's self with pompous dignity; hence, to be diffident of access.

Seated in thy silver chair
State in wonted manner keep
B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, v. 3.

To lie in state, to be placed on view in some public place, surrounded with ceremonious pomp and solemnity: said of a dead person.—Syn. 1 and 2. See situation.

II. a. 1. Of or pertaining to the community or body politic; public: as, state affairs; state policy; a state paper.

To send the state prisoners on board of a man of war which lay off Leith.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng. V. 1.

2. Used on or intended for occasions of great pomp or ceremony: as, a state carriage.—3. Of or pertaining to one of the commonwealths which make up a federal republic; opposed to national: as, state rights; a state prison; state legislatures.—State banks. See bank.—State carriage. See carriage.—State church. See established church, under church.—State criminal, one who commits an offense against the state, as treason; a political offender.—State domain, gallantry, law. See the nouns.—State lands, lands granted to or owned by a state, for internal improvements, educational purposes, etc.—State paper. (a) A paper prepared under the direction of a state, and relating to its political interests or government. (b) A newspaper selected, by or pursuant to law, for the publication of official or legal notices.—State prison. (a) A jail for political offenders only. (b) A prison maintained by a State for the regular confinement of felons under sentence to imprisonment: distinguished from county and city jails, in which are confined misdemeanants, and felons awaiting trial, or awaiting execution of the death penalty, and from reformatories, etc. [U. S.]—State prisoner, sword, etc. See the nouns.

state (stāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. stated, ppr. stating. [< state, n.] 1. To set; fix; settle; establish; stablish: as, to state a day: chiefly used in the past participle.

And you be stated in a double hope.
B. Jonson, Volpone, iii. 6.

2†. To settle as a possession upon; bestow or settle upon.

You boast to me
Of a great revenue, a large substance,
Wherein you would endow and state my daughter.
Middleton and Rowley, Fair Quarell, i. 1.

3. To express the particulars of; set down in detail or in gross; represent fully in words; make known specifically; explain particularly; narrate; recite: as, to state an opinion; to state the particulars of a case.

I pretended not fully to state, much less demonstrate, the truth contained in the text.
Atterbury.

4. In law, to aver or allege. Thus, stating a case to be within the purview of a statute is simply alleging that it is; while showing it to be so consists in a disclosure of the facts which bring it within the statute.—Account stated. See account.—Case stated. See case agreed, under case.—To state it, to keep state. See state, n.

Wolsey began to state it at York as high as ever.
Fuller, Ch. Hist., V. ii. 4. (Davies.)

=Syn. 3. Speak, Tell, etc. (see say), specify, set forth.

state (stāt), a. [Irreg. used for stately.] Stately. Spenser, Shep. Cal., September.

statecraft (stāt'krāft), n. The art of conducting state affairs; state management; statesmanship.

stated (stāt'ed), p. a. Settled; established; regular; occurring at regular intervals; appointed or given regularly.

It was his manner to use stated hours and places for exercises of devotion.
Steele, Englishman, No. 26.

The stated and unquestionable fee of his office.
Addison.

Stated clerk, the principal clerk of Presbyterian church courts in the United States, usually associated in the superior courts with an official called a permanent clerk. The stated clerk of the General Assembly is the custodian of all the books, records, and papers of the court, and has charge of the printing and distribution of the minutes and other documents as ordered by the Assembly.

statedly (stāt'ed-li), adv. At stated or settled times; regularly; at certain intervals; not occasionally. Imp. Dict.

stateful (stāt'ful), a. [< state + -ful.] Full of state; stately.

A stateful silence in his presence
Marston and Webster, Malcontent, I. 5.

statehood (stāt'hud), n. [< state + -hood.] The condition or status of a state.

state-house (stāt'hous), n. The public building in which the legislature of a State holds its sittings; the capitol of a State. [U. S.]

stateless (stāt'les), a. [< state + -less.] Without state or pomp.

statelily (stāt'li-li), adv. In a stately manner.
Sir H. Taylor, Philip van Artevelde, I, v. 9. [Rare.]

stateliness (stāt'li-nes), n. The character or quality of being stately; loftiness of mien or manner; majestic appearance; dignity.

stately (stāt'li), a. [*< ME. statly, estatllich = MD. statlich, D. statlich = MLG. statlich, statlich = Dan. statelig, stately; appar. confused in MLG., etc., with MHG. *statlich, G. statlich, stately, excellent, important, seeming; cf. the adv. OHG. statelicho, properly (< stat, opportunity, etc.; akin to E. stead, place; see stad), MHG. statelich, statlich, properly, moderately, G. statlich, magnificently, excellently, etc.; as state + -ly*.] Grand, lofty, or majestic in proportions, bearing, manner, or the like; dignified; elevated: applied to persons or to things.

These regions have abundance of high cedars, and other statelily trees casting a shade
Balegh, Hist. World.

The veneration and respect it [the picture of the Duchess of Ormond] fills me with . . . will make those who come to visit me think I am grown on the sudden wonderful statelily and reserved.

Swift, To the Duchess of Ormond, Dec. 20, 1712.
=Syn. August, etc. (see majestic), imperial, princely, royal, palatial, pompous, ceremonious, formal.

stately (stāt'li), adv. [< statelily, a.] In a stately manner.

Ye that walk
The earth, and stately tread, or lowly creep.
Milton, P. L., v. 201.

statement (stāt'ment), n. [< state + -ment.]

1. The act of stating, reciting, or presenting verbally or on paper.—2. That which is stated; a formal embodiment in language of facts or opinions; a narrative; a recital; the expression of a fact or of an opinion; account; report: as, a verbal statement; a written statement; a bank statement; a doctrinal statement.—Calculus of equivalent statements. See calculus.—state-monger (stāt'mung'gér), n. One who is versed in politics, or dabbles in state affairs. Imp. Dict.

stater<sup>1</sup> (stā'tér), n. [< state + -er]. One who states.

stater<sup>2</sup> (stā'tér), n. [< L. stater, < Gr. στατήρ, a standard of weight or money, a Persian gold coin, also a silver (or sometimes gold) coin of certain Greek states, < istárai, mid. and pass. istárai, stand.] A general name for the principal or standard coin of various cities and states of ancient Greece. The common signification is a gold coin equal in weight to two drachme of Attic standard, or about 132.6 grains, and in value to twenty drachme. There were also in various states staters of Euboic and Æginetan standards. The oldest staters, those of Lydia, said to have been first coined by Cræsus, were struck in the pale gold called electrum. At the period of Greek decline the silver tetradrachm was called stater. This coin is the "piece of money" (equivalent to a Jewish shekel) of Mat. xvii. 27. As a general term for a standard of weight, the name stater was given to the Attic mina and the Sicilian litra.

state-room (stāt'rüm), n. 1. A room or an apartment of state in a palace or great house.—2. In the United States navy, an officer's sleeping-apartment (called cabin in the British navy).—3. A small private sleeping-apartment, generally with accommodation for two persons, on a passenger-steamer. Compare cabin, 3.—4. A similar apartment in a sleeping-car. [U. S.]

states-general (stāts'jen'e-ral), n. pl. The bodies that constitute the legislature of a country, in contradistinction to the assemblies of provinces; specifically [cap.], the name given to the legislative assemblies of France before the revolution of 1789, and to those of the Netherlands.

statesman (stāts'man), n.; pl. statesmen (-men). [= D. staatsman = G. staatsmann = Sw. statsman = Dan. statsmand; as state's, poss. of state, + man.] 1. A man who is versed in the art of government, and exhibits conspicuous ability and sagacity in the direction and management of public affairs; a politician in the highest sense of the term.

It is a weakness which attends high and low: the statesman who holds the helm, as well as the peasant who holds the plough.
South.

The Eastern politicians never do anything without the opinion of the astrologers on the fortunate moment. . . . Statesmen of a more judicious precedence look for the fortunate moment too; but they seek it, not in the conjunctions and oppositions of planets, but in the conjunctions and oppositions of men and things.
Burke, Letter to a Member of the Nat. Assembly, 1791.

2. One who occupies his own estate; a small landholder. [Prov. Eng.]

The old statesmen or peasant proprietors of the valley had for the most part succumbed to various destructive influences, some social, some economical, added to a certain amount of corrosion from within.
Mrs. Humphrey Ward, Robert Elsmere, I. ii.

=Syn. 1. See politician.

statesmanlike (stāts'man-lik), a. [< statesman + like.] Having the manner or the wisdom of statesmen; worthy of or befitting a statesman: as, a statesmanlike measure.

statesmanly (stāts'man-li), a. Relating to or befitting a statesman; statesmanlike. De Quincey.

statesmanship (stāts'man-ship), n. [< statesman + -ship.] The qualifications or employments of a statesman; political skill, in the higher sense.

The petty craft so often mistaken for statesmanship by minds grown narrow in habits of intrigue, juggling, and official etiquette.
Macaulay, Mill on Government.

state-socialism (stāt'sō'shal-izm), n. A scheme of government which favors the enlargement of the functions of the state as the best way to introduce the reforms urged by socialists for the amelioration of the poorer classes, as the nationalization of land, state banks where credit shall be given to laboring men, etc.

state-socialist (stāt'sō'shal-ist), n. A believer in the principles of state-socialism; one who favors the introduction of socialistic innovations through the agency of the state.

stateswoman (stāts'wim'an), n.; pl. stateswomen (-wim'en). [< state's, poss. of state, + woman.] A woman who is versed in or meddles with public affairs, or who gives evidence of political shrewdness or ability. [Rare.]

stateswoman

How she was in debt, and where she meant
To raise fresh sums: she's a great stateswoman!
B. Jonson.

stathe (stāth), n. [Also staithe, staithe; early mod. E. also stath, steyth; < ME. stathe (AF. stathe), < AS. stæth, later steth, bank, shore, = Icel. stöðh, a harbor, roadstead, port, landing; akin to AS. stede, stead: see stead.] A landing-place; a wharf. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

stathmograph (stat'h-mō-gráf), n. [Gr. σταθμός, measure, + γράφειν, write.] An instrument for indicating and registering the velocity of railroad-trains: a form of velocimeter. E. H. Knight.

static (stat'ik), a. [Gr. στατικός, causing to stand, pertaining to standing, < στατός, verbal adj. of στάω, mid. and pass. στάσθαι, stand: see stasis, stand.] 1. Pertaining to weight and the theory of weight.—2. Same as statical.—Static ataxia, inability to stand without falling or excessive swaying, especially with closed eyes, as in tabes.—Static gangrene, gangrene resulting from mechanical obstruction to the return of blood from a part.—Static refraction. See refraction.

statical (stat'ik-al), a. [Gr. στατικός, causing to stand, pertaining to standing, < στατός, verbal adj. of στάω, mid. and pass. στάσθαι, stand: see stasis, stand.] 1. Pertaining to bodies at rest or to forces in equilibrium.—2. Acting by mere weight without producing motion: as, statical pressure.—Statical electricity. See electricity.—Statical induction. See induction, 6.—Statical manometer. See manometer.

statically (stat'ik-al-ly), adv. In a statical manner; according to statics.

Statice (stat'is-ē), n. [NL. (Tournefort, 1700), < Gr. στατική, an astringent herb, fem. of στατικός, causing to stand: see static.] A genus of gamopetalous plants, of the order Plumbaginæ, type of the tribe Staticeæ. It is characterized by its aculeous or tufted herbaceous or somewhat shrubby habit, flat alternate leaves, inflorescence commonly cymose and composed of one-sided spikes, stamens but slightly united to the petals, and styles distinct to the angles of the ovary, with capitate, oblong, or linear stigmas. Over 120 species have been described, natives of the sea-shore and of desert sands, mostly of the Old World, and of the northern hemisphere, especially of the Mediterranean region. A smaller number occur in America, South Africa, tropical Asia, and Australia. They are usually perennials; a few are diminutive loosely branched shrubs. They are smooth or covered with scurf or dust. The leaves vary from linear to obovate, and from entire to pinnatifid or dissected; they form a rosette at the root, or are crowded or scattered upon the branches. The short-pedicelled corolla consists of five nearly or quite distinct petals with long claws, and is commonly surrounded by a funnel-shaped calyx which is ten-ribbed below, and scarious, plicate, and colored above, but usually of a different color from the corolla, which is often white with a purple or lavender calyx and purplish-brown pedicel. They are known in general as sea-lavender. The common European S. Limonium is also sometimes called marsh-beet from its purplish root; it is the red beken of the old apothecaries. Its American variety, Caroliniana, the marsh-rosemary of the coast from Newfoundland to Texas, is also known as canker-root, from the use as an astringent of its large bitter fleshy root, which also contains tannic acid (whence its name ink-root). The very large roots of S. latifolia are used for tanning in Russia and Spain, and those of S. mucronata as a nervine in Morocco under the name of safrifa. Other species also form valued remedies, as S. Brasiliensis, the guaycura of Brazil and southward. Many species are cultivated for their beauty, as S. latifolia, and S. arborescens, a shrub from the Canaries. In Afghanistan, where several species grow in desert regions, they form a source of fuel.

Staticeæ (stā-tis'ē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Endlicher, 1836), < Statice + -æ.] A tribe of plants, of the order Plumbaginæ, distinguished from the other tribe (Plumbagææ) by flowers with a commonly spreading, scarious, and colored calyx-border, stamens united to the petals at the base or higher, and styles distinct to the middle or the base. It includes 5 genera, of which Statice is the type. They are commonly aculeous plants, very largely maritime, and of the Mediterranean region.

statics (stat'iks), n. [Pl. of static (see -ics). Cf. F. statique, < Gr. στατική, the art of weighing, fem. of στατικός, causing to stand: see static.] That branch of mechanics which treats of the relations of strains and stresses, or of the figures of bodies in equilibrium and of the magnitudes and directions of the pressures.—Chemical, graphical, social statics. See the adjectives.

station (stā'shon), n. [ME. stacion, < OF. station, stacion, estacion, estacion, estaisun, etc., F. station = Sp. estacion = Pg. estação = It. stazione = D. G. Sw. Dan. station, < L. statio(n)-, a standing, place of standing, station, a post, abode, dwelling, position, office, etc., < stare, stand: see state, stand.] 1. A standing still; a state of rest or inactivity. [Obsolete or archaic.] Her motion and her station are as one. Shak., A. and C., iii. 3. 22. Man's life is a progress, and not a station. Emerson, Compensation.

5913

2. Manner of standing; attitude; pose: rare except in the specific uses. An eye like Mars to threaten and command; A station like the herald Mercury, New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill. Shak., Hamlet, iii. 4. 58. Specifically—(a) In med., the steadiness (freedom from swaying) with which one stands. (b) The manner of standing or the attitude of live stock, particularly of exhibition game fowls: as, a duckwing game-cock of standard high station.

3. The spot or place where anything habitually stands or exists; particularly, the place to which a person is appointed and which he occupies for the performance of some duty; assigned post: as, a life-boat station; an observing-station; the station of a sentinel; the several stations of the officers and crew of a ship when the fire-signal is sounded.

If that service ye now do want,
What station will ye be?
Blanchefleur and Jellyflower (Child's Ballads, IV. 297). One of our companions took his station as sentinel upon the tomb of the little mosque. O'Donovan, Merv, xx.

4. The place where the police force of any district is assembled when not on duty; a district or branch police office. See police station, under police.—5. The place where the British officers of a district in India, or the officers of a garrison, reside; also, the aggregate of society in such a place: as, to ask the station to dinner. Yule and Burnell, Anglo-Indian Glossary. The little hills done by the rich bunneahs, the small and great pecuniary relations between the station and the bazaar. W. H. Russell, Diary in India, I. 194.

6. The condition or position of an animal or a plant in its habitat, or its relation to its environment: often used synonymously with habitat (but habitat is simply the place where an animal or plant lives, station the condition under which it lives there). The males and females of the same species of butterfly are known in several cases to inhabit different stations, the former commonly basking in the sunshine, the latter haunting gloomy forests. Darwin, Descent of Man, I. 391.

7. In surr.: (a) The place selected for planting the instrument with which an observation is to be made. (b) A fixed uniform distance (usually the length of a chain of 100 feet, or 66 feet, or half the length of a twenty-meter chain) into which a line of survey is divided. The stations are consecutively numbered.—8. A stock-farm. [Australia.]—9. A regular stopping-place. (a) One of the stages or regular stopping-places at which pilgrims to Rome or other holy place were wont to stop and rest, as a church or the tomb of a martyr. (b) One of the places at which ecclesiastical processions pause for the performance of an act of devotion, as a church, the tomb of a martyr, or some similar sacred spot. Hence—(c) The religious procession to and from or the service of devotion at these places. (d) One of the representations of the successive stages of Christ's passion which are often placed round the naves of churches, and by the sides of the way leading to sacred edifices, and which are visited in rotation. (e) In the early church, the place appointed at church for each class of worshippers, more especially for each grade of penitents; hence, the status, condition, or class so indicated. (f) A place where railway-trains regularly stop for the taking on of passengers or freight; hence, the buildings erected at such a place for railway business; a depot.

10. Eccles.: (a) In the early church, an assembly of the faithful in the church, especially for the celebration of the eucharist. (b) The fast and service on Wednesday and Friday (except between Easter and Pentecost), in memory of the council which condemned Christ, and of his passion. These are still maintained by the Greek Church, but the fast of Wednesday in the Western Church has been abrogated. (c) Among Roman Catholics, a church where indulgences are to be obtained on certain days.—11. Situation; position. The head has the most beautiful appearance, as well as the highest station, in a human figure. Addison, Spectator, No. 98.

12. Status; rank; standing; specifically, rank or standing in life; social state or position; condition of life; hence, high rank or standing. They in France of the best rank and station. Shak., Hamlet, I. 3. 73.

stationer

He never courted men in station.

Swift, Death of Dr. Swift.

Content may dwell in all stations.

Sir T. Browne, Christ. Mor., i. 27.

Given as a tonic, but not worthy an official station.

Dunglison, Med. Dict.

13. In mining, an enlargement made in a shaft, level, or gangway to receive a pump, bob, tank, or machinery of any kind.—False station, in surr. See false.—Life-saving station, a station on a sea-coast furnished with life-boats and other apparatus for saving life from shipwreck.—Military station, a place where troops are regularly kept in garrison.—Naval station, a safe and commodious shelter or harbor for the warlike or commercial ships of a nation, where there is a dockyard and everything requisite for the repair of ships.—Outside station. See outside, = Syn. 9 (f). See depot.

station (stā'shon), v. t. [Gr. στατός, causing to stand, pertaining to standing, < στατός, verbal adj. of στάω, mid. and pass. στάσθαι, stand: see stasis, stand.] To assign a station or position to: as, to station troops on the right or left of an army; to station a sentinel on a rampart; to station one's self at a door.

Not less one glance he caught

Thro' open doors of Ida station'd there

Unshaken, clinging to her purpose.

Tennyson, Princess, v.

stational (stā'shon-al), a. [Gr. στατικός, causing to stand, pertaining to standing, < στατός, verbal adj. of στάω, mid. and pass. στάσθαι, stand: see stasis, stand.] Of or pertaining to a station.

stationariness (stā'shon-ā-ri-nes), n. Stationary character or quality; fixity: as, the stationariness of the barometer; the stationariness of rents. J. S. Mill, On Liberty, iii.

stationary (stā'shon-ā-ri), a. and n. [= F. stationnaire = Sp. estacionario = It. stacionario, < L. stationarius, pertaining to a post or station, < statio(n)-, a post, station: see station.] 1. a. 1. Having a particular station or place; remaining in a certain place; not movable, or not intended to be moved; not moving, or appearing not to move; technically, without velocity, whether this condition is only instantaneous, or whether the body spoken of remains motionless for an interval of time. A planet is said to be stationary at a turning-point of its motion, when its longitude is neither increasing nor diminishing. The sun is said to be stationary when it reaches one of the tropics and begins to turn toward the equinoctial. 2. Remaining in the same condition or state; making no progress; without change; with neither increase nor decrease of symptoms, intensity, etc.: as, a stationary temperature. The ancient philosophy disdained to be useful, and was content to be stationary. Macaulay, Bacon.

Stationary air, the amount of air which remains constantly in the lungs in ordinary respiration.—Stationary contact, diseases, engine. See the nouns.—Stationary motion, such a motion of a system that no particle continually departs further and further from its original position, nor does its velocity continually increase or diminish. Clausius.—Stationary point, on a curve, a point where the point generating the curve is stationary and turns back; a cusp; a binode whose two tangents coincide.—Stationary tangent of a curve, a tangent where the moving tangent generating the curve is stationary and turns back; an inflection.—Stationary tangent plane of a surface, a tangent plane which has stationary contact with the surface.

II. n.; pl. stationaries (-riz). 1. A person or thing which remains or continues in the same place or condition; specifically, one of a force of permanent or stationary troops.

The stationaries are mine already. So are the soldiery all the way up the Nile. Kingsley, Hypatia, xx.

Then they are stationaries in their houses, which lie in the middle points of the latitudes, which they call ecliptics. Holland, tr. of Pliny, ii. 16. 2. One who wishes to stay as or where he is; one who opposes or resists progress; an extreme conservatist. Divided between the party of movement and that of resistance—the progressives and the stationaries. Huc, Travels (trans. 1852), II. 129.

station-bill (stā'shon-bil), n. Naut., a list containing the appointed posts of the ship's company for all evolutions.

station-calendar (stā'shon-kal'en-dār), n. On a railroad, a station-indicator.

stationer (stā'shon-ēr), n. [Early mod. E. stationer; < ME. stacyonere, < ML. stationarius, stationarius, a resident, resident canon, vender of books, < L. statio(n)-, a station, stall: see station.] 1. A bookseller.

Any scurrile pamphlet is welcome to our mercenary stationers in English. Burton, Anat. of Mel., To the Reader, p. 23.

Anterior to the invention of printing, there flourished a craft or trade who were denominated stationers; they were scribes and illuminers, and dealers in manuscript copies, and in parchment and paper, and other literary wares. J. DIsraeli, Amen. of Lit., II. 432.

2. One who sells the materials used in writing, as paper, pens, pencils, ink, etc.—Stationers' Hall, a building in London belonging to the guild called the "Company of Stationers," in which a book is kept for the registration of copyrights.—Stationers' rule. See rule.—Walking, running, or flying stationer, a hawk-er of ballads, chap-books, pamphlets, and other kinds of cheap popular literature. Compare running patterer, under patterer. Tatler, No. 4.

stationery (stā'shōn-ēr-i), n. and a. [< stationer + -y (see -cry).] 1. n. The articles usually sold by stationers; the various materials employed in writing, such as paper, pens, pencils, and ink.—Stationery office, an office in London which is the medium through which all government offices, both at home and abroad, are supplied with writing-materials. It also contracts for the printing of reports, etc. Imp. Dict.

II. a. Relating to writing, or consisting of writing-materials: as, stationery goods.

station-house (stā'shōn-hous), n. 1. A police-station.—2. The building containing the office, waiting-rooms, etc., of a railway-station. The Century, XXXV, 89.

station-indicator (stā'shōn-in'di-kā-tor), n. On a railway: (a) A bulletin-board at a station on which are exhibited the time of departure of trains and the stations at which they will stop. (b) A device in a car for exhibiting in succession the names of the stations where stops are to be made.

station-master (stā'shōn-mās'tēr), n. The official in charge of a station; specifically, the person in charge of a railway-station.

station-meter (stā'shōn-mē'tēr), n. A meter of large size used in gas-works to measure the flow of gas. Such meters are made with various attachments as with-line, pressure, and overflow gauges, register-clock, and tell-tale indicators of the rate of flow. E. H. Knight.

station-pointer (stā'shōn-pōin'ter), n. In surc., an instrument for expeditiously laying down on a chart the position of a place from which the angles subtended by three distant objects, whose positions are known, have been measured; a three-armed protractor.

station-pole, station-staff (stā'shōn-pōl, -stāf), n. In surc., same as levelling-staff, 1.

statism (stā'tiz-m), n. [< state + -ism.] The art of government; hence, in a depreciative sense, policy. [Rare.]

Hence it is that the enemies of God take occasion to blaspheme and call our religion statism. South, Sermons, I, iv.

statist (stā'tist), n. [= G. statist = Sw. statist, a statesman, politician, = Sp. Pg. estadista, a statesman, politician, also a statistician, = It. statista, a statesman; as state (L. status) + -ist.] 1. A statesman; a politician; one skilled in government. [Obsolete or archaic.]

Next is your statist's face, a serious, solemn, and supercilious face, full of formal and square gravity. B. Jonson, Cynthia Revels, II, 1.

2. A statistician.

The keen statist reckons by tens and hundreds—the general man is interested in every slipper that comes into the assembly. Emerson, Speeches.

statistic (stā-tis'tik), a. and n. [I. a. = F. statistique = Sp. estadística = Pg. estatística = It. statistica (cf. G. statistisch = Sw. Dan. statistisk), lit. pertaining to a statist or to matters of the state; as statist + -ic. II. n. = F. statistique = Sp. estadística = Pg. estatística = It. statistica, statistics, = G. statistik, political science, statistics, = Sw. Dan. statistik, statistics; from the adj.] I. a. Statistical.

II. n. 1. Same as statistic.—2. A statistical statement.—3. A statistician.

Hendley said you were the best statist in Europe. Southey, 1801, in Robb's Memoirs of Taylor of Norwich (1840).

statistical (stā-tis'ti-kāl), a. [< statistic + -al.] Of or pertaining to statistics; consisting of facts and calculations or such matters: as, statistical tables; statistical information. Primary statistical number, the number of a class ascertained by direct counting.—Statistical inference. See inference.—Statistical method, a scientific method in which results are deduced from averages as data.—Political economy, the kinetic theory of gases, and Darwinian evolutionism pursue statistical methods, which are also now applied to psychology.—Statistical proposition. See proposition.—Statistical ratio, the number of one class of things which are found associated upon the average with each one of another class of things: thus, the number of children per family is a statistical ratio—so is the average duration of life.

statistically (stā-tis'ti-kāl-i), adv. In a statistical manner; by the use of statistics; from a statistical point of view.

statistician (stat-is'tish-ian), n. [= F. statisticien; as statistic + -ian.] One who is versed in or collects statistics.

statistics (stā-tis'tiks), n. [Pl. of statistic (see -ics).] 1. A systematic collection of numbers relating to the enumeration of great classes, or to ratios of quantities connected with such classes, and ascertained by direct enumeration. Thus, a table of the populations of the different States of the American Union is called a table of statistics; so is a table showing the percentages of farms in different parts of the country that are mortgaged, provided these percentages have been ascertained from direct sampling, and not calculated by dividing the number of mortgaged farms by the total number of farms.

The word statistics, as the name of a peculiar science, was first engrafted into our language by Sir John Sinclair. It comprehends, according to the practice of the German writers, from whom it was adopted, all those topics of inquiry which interest the statesman. Monthly Rev., 1796, App., p. 553 (N. and Q., 6th ser., XI, 404).

2. The study of any subject, especially sociology, by means of extensive enumerations; the science of human society, so far as deduced from enumerations.—Bureau of Statistics. See bureau.

—Vital statistics, a collection of statistical ratios relating to the average course of life, including the death-rates at different ages, liability to different diseases, etc. statistology (stā-tis-tol'ō-jī), n. [Irreg. < statist(ies) + Gr. -logia, < λόγος, speak: see -ology.] A discourse or treatise on statistics.

stativ (stā'tiv), a. [= OF. statif; < L. stativus, standing still, < stare, stand: see state.]

1. Pertaining to a fixed camp or military post or quarters.—2. In Heb. gram., indicating a physical state, or mental, intransitive, or reflexive action: said of certain verbs.

statize (stā'tiz), v. i. [< state + -ize. Cf. statist.] To meddle in state affairs. Darwin.

Secular mysteries are for the knowledge of statizing Jesuits. Rev. T. Adams, Works, II, 168.

statlich, a. A Middle English form of statly. statoblast (stāt'ō-blāst), n. [< Gr. στατός, standing, fixed (see static), + βλαστός, a bud, germ.] One of the peculiar internal asexual buds developed in the body-cavity of the fresh-water or phylactolumatous polyzoans, comparable to the gemmules of the fresh-water sponges, and serving for reproduction. These germs of new individuals to be reproduced anamorphically by lateral gemmation are formed in the funiculus or umbilicus of the polyzoan, on the death of the parent organism, they are ruptured, and give exit to a young animal essentially like the parent. The fact that statoblasts contain no germinal vesicle, and never exhibit the phenomena of segmentation or yolk-plate, is conclusive against their being ova or eggs, and, moreover, an ovary producing ova occurs elsewhere in the same individual that produces statoblasts. Also called winter bud. See cut under Planorbella.

statoblastic (stāt'ō-blāst'ik), a. [< statoblast + -ic.] 1. Having the character or nature of a statoblast; of or pertaining to statoblasts: as, statoblastic capsules; statoblastic reproduction.—2. Giving rise to statoblasts; reproduced by means of statoblasts: as, a statoblastic polyzoan.

statocracy (stā-tok'rā-si), n. [< state + -ocracy, after aristocracy, etc.]. Government or rule by the state alone, uncontrolled by ecclesiastical power.

statoscope (stāt'ō-skōp), n. [< Gr. στατός, standing, fixed (see static), + σκοπεῖν, view.] A form of aneroid barometer for registering minute variations of atmospheric pressure. It consists of a sensitive metallic diaphragm exposed on the outside to the changes of atmospheric pressure, and connecting on the inside with a closed reservoir of air of four or five liters capacity protected from temperature changes by non-conducting walls lined with felt and wool. Registration is effected by a long index on the cylinder of a chronograph. At the beginning of observation the index is brought to zero of the scale by opening a stop-cock connecting the reservoir with the outside air, and the absolute pressure at the moment is observed with a mercurial barometer. The stop-cock is then closed, and the index needle shows variations of pressure as small as .01 millimeter of mercury. The total limit of change that can be registered is about 5 millimeters; for pressures beyond this the instrument must be reset.

statosphere (stāt'ō-sfēr), n. [< Gr. στατός, standing, fixed, + σφαῖρα, a globe.] The globe, enormous, spheruliferous envelop of the protoplasm of the winter or resting stage of the fresh-water sponges. J. J. Rydler.

statospore (stāt'ō-spōr), n. [NL., < Gr. στατός, standing, fixed, + σπορά, seed: see spore.] In bot., a motionless or resting spore; a hypnospor.

statuat (stāt'ū-ā), n. [< L. statua, an image, a statue: see statue.] A statue.

Even at the base of Pompey's statua, Which all the while ran blood, great Caesar fell. Shak., J. C., III, 2, 102.

Behold the Statuas which wise Vulcan plac'd Under the altar of Olympian Jove, And gave to them an artificial life. Beaumont, Masque of Inner Temple and Gray's Inn.

statuary (stat'ū-ā-ri), a. and n. [= F. statuaire = Sp. Pg. estatuario = It. statuaria, < L. statuarius, of or pertaining to statues (statuaria, sc. ars, the statuary art), < statua, a statue: see statue.] I. a. Of or pertaining to a statue or statuary.

What connoisseurs call statuary grace, by which is meant elegance unconnected with motion. Goldsmith, The Bee, No. 2.

Statuary marble, fine-grained white marble, especially sought for monuments, busts, etc.

II. n.; pl. statuaries (-riz). 1. One who makes statues; a sculptor; specifically, one who makes statues in metal, a bronze-caster, or one who makes copies of statues designed by another artist.

Statuaries could

By the foot of Hercules set down punctually His whole dimensions. Massinger, Emperor of the East, II, 1.

Burst the gates, and burn the palaces, break the works of the statuary. Tennyson, Experiments, Boadicea.

2. The art of carving or making statues or figures in the round representing persons, animals, etc.: a main branch of sculpture.

The northern nations . . . were too barbarous to preserve the remains of learning more carefully than they did those of statuary or architecture or civility. Sir W. Temple, Ancient and Modern Learning.

3. Statues collectively.

statue (stat'ū), n. [< ME. statue, < OF. statue, F. statue = Sp. Pg. estatua = It. statua, < L. statua, an image set up, a statue, pillar, < statuere, set up: see statute.] 1. A figure of a person or an animal, made of some solid substance, as marble, bronze, iron, or wood, or of any substance of solid appearance; a sculptured, cast, or molded figure, properly of some size (as distinguished from a statuette or figurine) and in the round (as distinguished from a relief or an intaglio).

This proude king let make a statue of golde Sixty enlytes long. Chaucer, Monk's Tale, I, 160.

Within the area of the foundation walls, and all round them, were lying heads and bodies of many statues, which had once stood within the temple on bases still in position in three parallel rows. C. T. Newton, Art and Archaeol., p. 306.

2. A picture.

The rede statue of Mars with spere and targe So shyneth in his whyte bauer large That alle the feeldes glitener up and down. Chaucer, Knight's Tale, I, 117.

Sir John, Your neeces, ere they put to sea, crave humbly, Though absent in their bodies, they may take leave of their late sultors' statues. Luke, There they hang. Massinger, City Madam, v, 3.

Equestrian statue, a statue in which the figure is represented as seated on horseback.—Plinth of a statue. See plinth.

statue (stat'ū), v. t.; pret. and pp. statued, ppr. statuing. [< statue, n.] To place as a statue; form a statue of.

The whole man becomes as if statued into stone and earth. Fellham, Resolves, I, 36.

statued (stat'ūd), a. [< statue + -ed.] Furnished with statues; having the form of a statue; consisting of a statue or of statues.

Facing in sable robes the statued hall.

Longfellow, Wayside Inn, Falcon of Federico.

Sometimes he encountered an imperial column; sometimes he came to an arcadian square flooded with light, and resonant with the fall of statued fountains. Disraeli, Lothair, ix.

statue-dress (stat'ū-dres), n. Theat., a dress for the body and legs, made in one piece, worn in representations of statuary.

statuesque (stat'ū-esk'), a. [< statue + -esque.] Like a statue; having the formal dignity or beauty of a statue.

The statuesque attitudes exhibited in the ballets at the opera-house. De Quincey, English Opium-Eater.

statuesquely (stat'ū-esk'li), adv. In a statuesque manner; in the manner of a statue; as a statue. Lowell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 97. statuesqueness (stat'ū-esk'nes), n. Statuesque character or appearance. The Academy, No. 904, p. 141.

statuette (stat'ū-et'), n. [F., dim. of statue, a statue: see statue.] A small statue; a statue or image in the round much smaller than nature; a figurine.

Most of the figures do not much exceed life-size, and many were small statuettes. C. T. Newton, Art and Archaeol., p. 307.

statuize (stat'ū-iz), v. t. [< statue + -ize.] To commemorate by a statue. [Rare.]

James II. did also statuize himself in copper. Misson, Travels in Eng., p. 309. (Davies).

statuminate (stā-tū'mi-nāt), v. t. [< L. statuminatus, pp. of statuminare, prop up, support, < statumen (-min-), a prop, stay, < statuere, cause to stand, set up, fix upright: see statue.] To prop; support.

I will statuminate and under-prop thee.

B. Jonson, New Inn, ii. 2.

stature (stat'ūr), n. [< ME. stature, < OF. (and F.) stature = Sp. Pg. estatura = It. statura, < L. statura, height or size of the body, stature, size, growth, < statuere, cause to stand, set up: see statute.] 1. The natural height of an animal body; bodily tallness; sometimes, full height: generally used of the human body.

The Lond of Pigmaus, where that the folk ben of litylle Stature that ben but 3 span long.

Mandeville, Travels, p. 211.

Unto stature this damsel was grown.

Catskin's Garland (Child's Ballads, VIII. 174).

2†. A statue. [An erroneous use, due to confusion with statue.]

And then before her [Diana's] stature straight he told Devoutly all his whole petition there.

Mir. for Mags, I. 29.

In the second house there is the stature of a man of silver.

Hakluyt's Voyages, II. 236.

statured (stat'ūrd), a. [< stature + -ed.] 1†. Of the height or stature of.

Were thy dimension but a stride,

Nay, wert thou statured but a span,

She'll make thee Mimas. Quarles, Emblems, ii. 6.

2. Of or arrived at full stature. The Century, XXXIII. 48. [Rare.]—3†. Conditioned; circumstanced.

They [Tusser and Churchyard] being mark'd alike in their poetical parts, living in the same time, and statured alike in their estates. Fuller, Worthies, Essex, I. 519.

status (stā'tus), n. [< L. status, standing, position, attitude, state: see state.] 1. Standing or position as regards rank or condition.—

2. Position of affairs.—3. In law, the standing of a person before the law in the class of persons indicated by his or her legal qualities; the relation fixed by law in which a person stands toward others or the state. Different writers vary much in the extent of meaning implied, but in the best usage it includes liberty, citizenship, and marriage, infancy and majority and wardship or tutelage, and mental capacity or incapacity according to legal tests. It is rarely if ever used of any of those relations which are terminable by consent, such as partnership.—Status quo, the condition in which (the thing or things were at first or are now). Compare in statu quo.

statutable (stat'ū-tā-bl), a. [< statute + -able.] 1. Made, required, or imposed by statute; statutory: as, a statutable punishment.—2. Allowed by the rules; standard.

I met with one the other day who was at least three inches above five foot, which you know is the statutable measure of that club. Addison, Spectator, No. 103.

statutably (stat'ū-tā-bli), adv. In a manner agreeable to statute; as required or provided by statute.

statute (stat'ūt), n. [< ME. statut, < OF. statut, estatut, statu, F. statut = Pr. statut = Sp. Pg. estatuto = It. statuta, statuto = D. statuut = G. Sw. Dan. statut, < LL. statutum, a statute, prop. neut. of L. statusus, pp. of statuere, set up, establish: see stand.] 1. An ordinance or law; specifically, a law promulgated in writing by a legislative body; an enactment by a legislature; in the United States, an act of Congress or of a State or Territorial legislature passed and promulgated according to constitutional requirements; in Great Britain, an act of Parliament made by the Sovereign by and with the advice of the Lords and Commons. Some early statutes are in the form of charters or ordinances, proceeding from the crown, the consent of the Lords and Commons not being expressed. Statutes are either public or private (in the latter case affecting an individual or a company); but the term is usually restricted to public acts of a general and permanent character. Strictly speaking, an ordinance established by either house of the legislature, or by both, without the assent of the executive, as a resolution, or joint resolution, is not a statute. The word has sometimes, however, been interpreted to include municipal ordinances. See also act, article, bill, by-law, charter, code, decree, edict, law, ordinance, petition, provision.

Ac whiles Hunger was her maister there wolde none of hem chide, Ne stryue ageines his statut so sterneliche he lokod.

Piers Plowman (B), vi. 321.

The statutes of the Lord are right. Ps. xix. 8.

Girded with frumps and curtail gibes, by one who makes sentences by the Statute, as if all above three inches long were confiscated. Milton, Apology for Smectymnus.

What are called in England constitutional statutes, such as Magna Charta, the Bill of Rights, the Act of Settlement, the Acts of Union with Scotland and Ireland, are merely ordinary laws, which could be repealed by Parliament at any moment in exactly the same way as it can repeal a highway act or lower the duty on tobacco.

J. Bryce, American Commonwealth, I. 237.

2. The act of a corporation or of its founder, intended as a permanent rule or law: as, the statutes of a university.—3. In foreign and civil law, any particular municipal law or usage, though not resting for its authority on judicial decisions or the practice of nations. Burrill; Worcester.—4. A statute-fair. [Prov. Eng.]—

Bloody statute, an occasional name of the Act of the Six Articles. See the Six Articles, under article.—Declaratory statute. See declaratory.—Directory statute. See directory.—Enabling statute, a statute which confers a power upon a person or body that did not previously possess it.—Enlarging statute, a statute which increases a power that already existed.—Equity of a statute. See equity.—Estate by statute, more fully estate by statute merchant, or estate by statute staple, in Eng. law, the estate or tenancy which a creditor acquired in the lands of his debtor by their seizure on judgments by confession in forms now obsolete. See statute merchant and statute staple, below.—General statute, a statute which relates directly to the government or the general public interest, or to all the people of the state or of a particular class, condition, or district therein. See legislation, also public statute and local statute.—Local statute. See local legislation, under local.—Mandatory statute. See mandatory.—Penal statutes. See penal.—Private statutes. (a) See private acts, under private. (b) Same as special statute.—Public statutes. See public acts, under public.—Remedial statutes, statutes the main object of which appears directly beneficial, by supplying some defect in the law or removing inconveniences, as distinguished from those the immediate aspect of which is to impose punishment or penalty, which are called penal statutes. Some statutes partake of both characters, for a statute which is penal as against an offender may be remedial as toward those whom it is intended to protect.—Retroactive statute. See retroactive.—Special or private statute, a statute which the courts will not notice unless pleaded and proved like any other fact; also, a particular or peculiar statute: as, there is a special statute regulating chattel mortgages on canal-boats.—Statute against benevolences, an English statute of 1483-4 (1 Rich. III., c. 2) abolishing the peculiar system of raising money by solicitation, called benevolences, and declaring that such exactions should not be taken for precedent.—Statute cap. See cap.—Statute de Donis, more fully Statute de Donis Conditionalibus, an English statute of 1285 (13 Edw. I., being the Statute of Westminster, ii. c. 1) intended to put an end to the common-law doctrine that under a gift to a man and the heirs of his body he acquired absolute title by having issue, even though none should survive. The act prescribed instead that the condition stated by the giver of reversion in failure of issue should be carried into effect. Also sometimes called statute of entail.—Statute labor. See labor.—Statute lace. See lace.—Statute law, a law or rule of action prescribed or enacted by the legislative power, and promulgated and recorded in writing; also, collectively, the enactments of a legislative assembly in contradistinction to common law. See law.—Statute merchant, in law, a bond of record, now obsolete, acknowledged before the chief magistrate of some trading town, on which, if not paid at the day, an execution might be awarded against the body, lands, and goods of the obligor. See pocket-judgment.

A certain blinde retaylor, called the Diuell, vsed to lend money vpon paynes or anie thing, and would let one for a need haue a thousand poundes vpon a statute-merchant of his soule. Nashe, Pierce Penilesse, p. 9.

Statute of bread and ale. See bread.—Statute of charitable uses, an English statute of 1601 (43 Eliz., c. 4), sometimes called the statute of Elizabeth, for the protection of property devoted to charities. It authorized the lord chancellor to appoint commissioners to inquire into the management of such property, with power to correct abuses.—Statute of Circumspecte Agatis, an English statute of 1285 (13 Edw. I.), in the form of a writ addressed to the judges: so named from its first two words. It directed that the king's prohibition should not lie in spiritual matters, and that the jurisdiction of the spiritual courts should be exercised in cases of demands by a person for tithes, mortuaries, pensions, etc., notwithstanding such prohibition.—Statute of false pretences, an English statute of 1757 (30 Geo. II., c. 24) which defines and punishes the crime of false pretences.—Statute of fraudulent conveyances, sometimes called the statute of Elizabeth. (a) An English statute of 1571 (13 Eliz., c. 5), reenacted in nearly all of the United States, which declares all conveyances of property with intent to delay, hinder, or defraud creditors to be void as against such creditors. (b) An English statute of 1585 (27 Eliz., c. 4) making void all conveyances of land made with intent to deceive purchasers.—Statute of Gloucester, an English statute of 1278 (6 Edw. I.), passed at Gloucester, and relating to local franchises and judicature, damages to real property, waste, trespass, etc.—Statute of laborers, an English statute of 1349 (23 Edw. III.) designed to compel workmen and servants to work for the wages commonly paid in the year 1346: enacted because the pestilence had seriously decreased the number of servants, and the survivors demanded exorbitant wages.—Statute of Lincoln, an English statute of 1315-16 (9 Edw. II., st. 2), so called because the Parliament sat at Lincoln. It prescribed the qualifications of sheriffs. Also known as the statute of sheriffs.—Statute of Marlborough (Marleberge, Marlbridge), an English statute of 1267 (52 Hen. III.), so called because made at Marlborough, containing twenty-nine chapters or sections relating principally to distress suits, landlord and tenant, courts, writs, etc. It is one of the earliest written laws, after the Great Charter, and is said to have been intended to defeat attempts to evade feudal dues on succession at death made by gifts inter vivos.—Statute of merchants (also known as the statute of Acton Burnell, from the place of its enactment). (a) An English statute or ordinance of 1283 (11 Edw. I.) for the collection of debts. (b) Another of 1285 (13 Edw. I.) for the same purpose.—Statute of Merton. Same as provisions of Merton (which see, under provision).—Statute of military tenures. See military.—Statute of monopolies. Same as Monopoly Act (which see, under monopoly).—Statute of Northampton, an English statute of 1328 (2 Edw. III.) relating to felonies, sheriffs, etc.—Statute of Quia Emptores, an English statute of 1290 (18 Edw. I.), which, because purchasers of land had evaded their feudal dues to the chief lord by claiming to hold under the seller as their lord, provided that upon all sales or feoffments of land in fee simple the feoffee should hold, not of his immediate feoffor, but of the next lord paramount of whom the feoffor himself held, and by the same services, thus putting an end to subinfeudation for several centuries.—Statute of Rageman, an English statute of 1276 (4 Edw. I.) requiring justices to "go throughout the land" to try suits for trespasses.—Statute of Rutland, Ruddlan, or Rothlan, an English royal ordinance of 1284 (12 Edw. I.), made at Rutland, which, among other things, forbade suits in the Exchequer except such as concerned the king and his officers, and referred to the keeping of the rolls, etc. Also called provisions made in the Exchequer.—Statute of sheriffs. Same as statute of Lincoln.—Statute of Stamford, an English statute of 1309 (3 Edw. II.) which confirmed an act of 28 Edw. I. abolishing the taking of goods, etc., by the king when on a journey except upon payment, and also abolished certain customs duties.—Statute of Winchester or Winton, an English statute of 1285 (13 Edw. I.) containing police regulations such as concern lesser crimes and the hue and cry, and prohibiting fairs and markets in churchyards.—Statute of York, an English statute of 1318 (12 Edw. II.) which relates to the administration of justice.—Statutes of liveries, English statutes the first of which were in 1377 (1 Rich. II., c. 7), 1392-3 (16 Rich. II., c. 4), and 1396-7 (20 Rich. II., cc. 1 and 2), for the better preservation of the peace: so called because directed against the practice of giving distinctive liveries to retainers and partisans, whereby confederacies and hostile parties were engendered.—Statutes of Westminster, early English statutes, so called because made at Westminster. "The first" (1275), comprising fifty-one chapters, relates to freedom of elections, amercements, bail, extortion by officers, aid taken by lords, etc. "The second" (1285), including fifty chapters, relates to gifts, writs, pleas, court-proceedings, etc. Also known as Statute de Donis (which see, above). "The third" was the statute "Quia Emptores" (which see, above).—Statute staple, in law, a bond of record, now obsolete, acknowledged before the mayor of the staple or town constituting a grand mart, by virtue of which the creditor might forthwith have execution against the body, lands, and goods of the debtor on non-payment.

There is not one gentleman amongst twenty but his land be engaged in twenty statute staple.

Middleton, Family of Love, i. 3.

The Great Statute, an English code of customs law of 1660 (12 Car. II., c. 4.) imposing duties which were termed the "old subsidy." (As to noted statutes on particular subjects, such as statute of distributions, statute of enrolment, statute of fines, statute of frauds, statutes of jeoffail, statute of Jewry, statute of limitations, statutes of mortmain, statute of murders, statute of non-claim, statute of praemunire, statute of provisors, statute of staple, statute of tillage, statute of uses, statute of wills, see the word characterizing the statute.) = SYN. 1. Enactment, Ordinance, etc. See law.

statute† (stat'ūt), v. t. [< statute, n.] To ordain; enact; decree or establish.

The king hath ordeined and statuted that all and singular strangers . . . shall apply and come to his Towne of Northberne. Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 186.

statute-book (stat'ūt-būk), n. A register of statutes, laws, or legislative acts: a generic term commonly used to comprehend all the volumes in which the statute law of a state or nation is authoritatively promulgated.

statute-fair (stat'ūt-fär), n. A fair held by regular legal appointment, in contradistinction to one authorized only by use and wont. See mop<sup>3</sup>, 4.

statute-roll (stat'ūt-röl), n. 1. A statute as enrolled or engrossed.—2. A collection of statutes; a statute-book.

His [Edward IV.'s] statute-roll contains no acts for securing or increasing public liberties.

Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 373.

statutory (stat'ū-tō-ri), a. [< statute + -ory.] Enacted, required, or imposed by statute; depending on statute for its authority: as, a statutory provision or remedy; statutory fines.

The first duty of the Muse is to be delightful, and it is an injury done to all of us when we put in the wrong by a kind of statutory affirmation on the part of the critics of something to which our judgment will not consent, and from which our taste revolts.

Lovell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 132.

The reduction of the number of public-houses to a statutory minimum.

Sir C. W. Dilke, Probs. of Greater Britain, vi. 6.

On the first day of July, 1885, . . . the regular statutory duties were imposed. Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 420.

Statutory foreclosure. See foreclosure.—Statutory guardian. See guardian. 2.—Statutory law. Same as statute law (which see, under statute).

statuvolence (stā-tū'vō-lens), n. [< statuolen(t) + -ce.] A peculiar state or condition into which a person may throw himself by the exercise of the will, independent of extraneous conditions; a kind of self-induced clairvoyance. It is brought about by self-merismization, and closely resembles that hypnotic or somnambule condition which may be produced by the will of another in suitable subjects. W. B. Falmestock. [Recent.]

statuvolent (stā-tū'vō-lent), a. [< L. status, a state or condition, + volen(t)-s, ppr. of velle, will.] Inducing statuvolence; affected by statuvolence, or being in that state. [Rare.]

statuvollic (stat-ū-vol'ik), a. [< statuol(ent) + -ic.] Pertaining in any way to statuvolence: as, the statuvollic state; a statuvollic process. [Rare.]

II. intrans. Naut., to change tack; go about; be in stays, as a ship.

stay

stay<sup>2</sup> (stā), n. [*< ME. *staye, < OF. estaye, estaye, f., F. élay, m., a prop, stay, < MD. staeie, later stacy, a prop, stay, also a contracted form of stæde, stæde, a prop, stay, help, aid; cf. D. stede, stede, a place, = AS. stede, E. stead, a place: see stead, and cf. stathic. The word stay<sup>1</sup> has been confused to some extent with stay<sup>2</sup>. The noun is by some derived from the verb. In the later senses it is so derived: see stay<sup>2</sup>, v.] 1. A prop; a support.*

There were stays on either side on the place of the seat [of Solomon's throne], and two lions stood beside the stays. 1 Ki. x. 19.

See we not plainly that obedience of creatures unto the law of nature is the stay of the whole world? Hooker, Eccles. Polity, i. 3.

Specifically—(a) In building, a piece performing the office of a brace, to prevent the swerving or lateral deviation of the piece to which it is applied. (b) In steam-engines: (1) A rod, bar, bolt, or gusset in a boiler, to hold two parts together against the pressure of steam: as, a tube-stay; a water-space stay. (2) One of the sling-rods connecting a locomotive-boiler to its frame. (3) A rod, beneath the boiler, supporting the inside bearings of the crank-axle of a locomotive. (c) In mining, a piece of wood used to secure the pump to an engine-shaft. (d) In some hollow castings, a spindle which forms a support for the core. (e) In anat. and zool., technically, a prop or support: as, the bony stay of the operculum of a mail-cheeked fish, or cottoid. This is an enlarged suborbital bone which crosses the cheek and articulates with the preoperculum in the mail-cheeked fishes. See Cottoiden, Scleropariz.

2. pl. A kind of waistcoat, stiffened with whalebone or other material, now worn chiefly by women and girls to support and give shape to the body, but formerly worn also by men. (Hall, Satires.) Stays were originally, as at present, made in two pieces laced together: hence the plural form. In composition the singular is always used: as, staylace, staymaker. See corset, 3.

They could not ken her middle sae jimp, . . . The stays o' gowd were so well laced. The Bonny Bows o' London (Child's Ballads, II. 361).

3*f.* A fastening for a garment; hence, a hook; a clasp; anything to hang another thing on. Cotgrave.

To my dear daughter Philippa, queen of Portugal, my second best stay of gold, and a gold cup and cover. Test. Vetust., p. 142, quoted in Halliwell.

4. That which holds or restrains; obstacle; check; hindrance; restraint.

The presence of the Governour is (as you say) a great stay and bridle unto them that are ill disposed. Spenser, State of Ireland.

5. A stop; a halt; a break or cessation of action, motion, or progression: as, the court granted a stay.

They make many stays by the way. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 427.

They were able to read good authors without any stay, if the book were not false. Sir T. More, Utopia (tr. by Robinson), ii. 7.

Works adjourn'd have many stays. Long demurs breed new delays. Southwell, Loss in Delay.

6*f.* A standstill; a state of rest; entire cessation of motion or progress: used chiefly in the phrase at a stay.

In bashfulness the spirits do a little go and come—but with bold men upon a like occasion they stand at a stay. Bacon, Boldness (ed. 1857).

7. A fixed state; fixedness; stability; permanence.

Alas! what stay is there in human state? Dryden.

8. Continuance in a place; abode for an indefinite time; sojourn: as, you make a short stay in the city.

Your stay with him may not be long. Shak., M. for M., iii. 1. 256.

9*f.* A station or fixed anchorage for vessels. Sir P. Sidney. (Imp. Dict.)—10. State; fixed condition. [Obsolete or archaic.]

Among the Utopians, where all things be sett in a good order, and the common wealthe in a good staye, it very seldom chaunceth that they chuse a newe plotte to buyld an house vpon. Sir T. More, Utopia (tr. by Robinson), ii. 4.

Man . . . cometh up and is cut down like a flower; he fleeth as it were a shadow, and never continueth in one stay [in eodem statu (Sarum dirge)]. Book of Common Prayer, Burial of the Dead.

He alone continueth in one stay. Lamb, Decay of Beggars.

11*f.* Restraint of passion; prudence; moderation; caution; steadiness; sobriety.

With prudent stay he long deferr'd The rough contention. Philips, Blenheim, l. 276.

Axle-guard stays, queen-post stay, etc. See the qualifying words.—Stay of proceedings, in law, a suspension of proceedings, as till some direction is complied with or till some appeal is decided: sometimes, in England, an entire discontinuance or dismissal of the action. =Syn. 1. See stay.—5. Pause, etc. See stop.

stay<sup>2</sup> (stā), v.: pret. and pp. stayed, staid, pp. staying. [*< ME. *stayen, steyen* (pp. staid). < OF. estayer, F. élayer, prop, stay, < estaye, a prop, stay: see stay<sup>2</sup>, n. By some derived < OF. esteyr, ester, estre, F. étre, be, remain, continue; but this derivation is on both phonetic and historical grounds untenable. There is a connection felt between stay and stand; it is, however, very remote.] 1. trans. 1. To prop; support; sustain; hold up; steady.

And Aaron and Hur stayed up his hands, the one on the one side, and the other on the other side. Ex. xvii. 12.

A young head, not so well stayed as I would it were, . . . having many, many fancies begotten in it, if it had not been in some way delivered, would have grown a monster. Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, Ded.

Let that stay and comfort thy heart. Winthrop, Hist. New England, I. 442.

2. To stop. (a) To detain; keep back; delay; hinder. Your ships are stay'd at Venice. Shak., T. of the S., iv. 2. 83.

If I could stay this letter an hour, I should send you something of Savoy. Donne, Letters, xlix.

This business staid me in London almost a week. Evelyn, Diary, Nov. 14, 1671.

(b) To restrain; withhold; check; stop.

If I can hereby either provoke the good or stave the ill, I shall thinke my writing herein well employed. Ascham, The Scholemaster, p. 70.

Why do you look so strangely, fearfully, Or stave your deathful hand? Fletcher (and another), Queen of Corinth, iv. 3.

Its trench had stayed full many a rock, Hurled by primeval earthquake shock. Scott, L. of the L., iii. 20.

(c) To put off; defer; postpone; delay; keep back: as, to stay judgment.

The cardinal did entreat his holiness To stay the judgement o' the divorce. Shak., Hen. VIII., iii. 2. 33.

We'll stay The sentence till another day. Northern Lord and Cruel Jew (Child's Ballads, VIII. 252).

(d) To hold the attention of.

For the sound of some sillable stayed the care a great while, and others slid away so quickly, as if they had not bene pronounced. Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 56.

3. To stand; undergo; abide; hold out during.

She will not stay the siege of loving terms, Nor bide the encounter of assailing eyes. Shak., R. and J., i. 1. 218.

Doubts are also entertained concerning her ability to stay the course. Daily Telegraph, Nov. 11, 1885. (Encyc. Dict.)

4. To wait for; await.

Let me stay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin. Shak., As you Like it, iii. 2. 221.

His Lord was gone to Amiens, where they would stay his coming. Capt. John Smith, True Travels, I. 3.

There were a hundred and forty people, and most stayed supper. Walpole, Letters, II. 369.

To stay the stomach, to appease the cravings of hunger; quiet the appetite temporarily; stave off hunger or faintness: also used figuratively.

A piece of gingerbread, to be merry withal, And stay your stomach, lest you faint with fasting. B. Jonson, Alchemist, iii. 2.

II. intrans. 1. To rest; depend; rely.

Because ye despise this word, and trust in oppression and perverseness, and stay thereon. Isa. xxx. 12.

I stay here on my bond. Shak., M. of V., iv. 1. 242.

2. To stop. (a) To come to a stand or stop.

She would command the hasty sun to stay. Spenser, F. Q., I. x. 20.

Stay, you come on too fast; your pace is too impetuous. B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, iii. 3.

(b) To come to an end; cease.

An't please your grace, here my commission stays. Shak., 2 Hen. VI., ii. 4. 76.

(c) To delay; linger; tarry; wait.

Fourscore pound: can you send for bail, sir? or what will you do? we cannot stay. Webster and Dekker, Northward Hoe, i. 2.

(d) To make a stand; stand.

Give them leave to fly that will not stay. Shak., 3 Hen. VI., ii. 3. 50.

3. To hold out, as in a race or contest; last or persevere to the end. [Colloq.]

He won at Lincoln, . . . and would stay better than Pizarro. Daily Telegraph, Sept. 14, 1885. (Encyc. Dict.)

4. To remain; especially, to remain in a place for an indefinite time; abide; sojourn; dwell; reside.

I understand, by some Merchants to-day upon the Exchange, that the King of Denmark is at Gluckstadt, and stays there all this Summer. Howell, Letters, I. v. 41.

They staid in the royal court, And liv'd wth mirth and glee. Young Akin (Child's Ballads, I. 185).

5. To wait; rest in patience or in expectation.

stay-rod

If I receive money for your tobacco before Mr. Randall go, I will send you something else; otherwise you must be content to stay till I can. Winthrop, Hist. New England, I. 424.

For present deliverance, they do not much expect it; for they stay for their glory, and then they shall have it, when their Prince comes in his, and the glory of the angels. Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, p. 127.

6. To wait as an attendant; give ceremonious or submissive attendance: with on or upon.

I have a servant comes with me along, That stays upon me. Shak., M. for M., iv. 1. 47.

To stay put, to remain where placed; remain fixed. [Colloq.] =Syn. 4. To rest, lodge, delay.

stay-at-home (stā'at-hōm'), n. One who is not given to roaming, gadding about, or traveling; one who keeps at home, either through choice or of necessity: also used adjectively: as, a stay-at-home man.

"Cold!" said her father: "what do ye stay-at-homes know about cold, a should like to know." Mrs. Gaskell, Sylvia's Lovers, ix.

stay-bar (stā'bār), n. 1. In arch., a horizontal iron bar extending in one piece from jamb to jamb through the mullions of a tracery window. See saddle-bar.—2. Same as stay-rod, 2.

Its sectional area should be three or four times that of a stay-bar. Rankine, Steam Engine, § 66.

stay-bolt (stā'bōlt), n. In mach., a bolt or rod binding together opposite plates to enable them to sustain each other against internal pressure.

staybusk (stā'busk), n. See busk, 2.

stay-chain (stā'chān), n. In a vehicle, one of the chains by which the ends of the double-tree are attached to the fore axle. They serve to limit the swing of the double-tree.

staycord (stā'kōrd), n. Same as staylace.

stayed, stayedly, stayedness. Old spellings of staid, staidly, staidness.

stay-end (stā'end), n. In a carriage, one of the ends of a backstay, bolted or clipped either to the perch or to the hind axle.—Stay-end tie, in a vehicle, a rod forming a connection between the stay-end on the reach and that on the axle.

stayer (stā'ēr), n. [< stay<sup>2</sup> + -er.] 1. One who supports or upholds; a supporter; a backer.

Thou, Jupiter, whom we do call the Stayer Both of this city and this empire. B. Jonson, Catiline, iv. 2.

2. One who or that which stops or restrains.—3. One who stays or remains: as, a stayer at home.—4. One who has sufficient endurance to hold out to the end; a person or an animal of staying qualities, as in racing or any kind of contest; one who does not readily give in through weakness or lack of perseverance. [Colloq.]

stay-foot (stā'fūt), n. In shoe-manuf., a device attached to the presser-bar of a sewing-machine to guide a seam-stay in some kinds of light work.

stay-gage (stā'gāj), n. In a sewing-machine, an adjustable device screwed to the cloth-plate to guide a strip over the goods in such a way as to cover and conceal a seam.

stay-hole (stā'hōl), n. A hole in a staysail through which it is seized to the hanks of the stay.

stay-hook (stā'hūk), n. A small hook formerly worn on the front of the bodice to hang a watch upon. Fairholt.

staylace (stā'lās), n. [< stay<sup>2</sup> + lace.] A lace used to draw together the parts of a woman's stays in order to give them the form required.

stayless (stā'les), a. [Early mod. E. staillesse; < stay<sup>2</sup> + -less.] 1. Without stop or delay; ceaseless. [Rare.]

They made me muse, to see how fast they strid'd, With staillesse steppes, each one his life to shield. Mir. for Mags., p. 187.

2. Unsupported by stays or corsets.

stay-light (stā'lit), n. Same as riding-light. staymaker (stā'mā'kēr), n. [< stay<sup>2</sup> + maker.] A maker of stays or corsets.

Our ladies choose to be shaped by the staymaker. J. Spence, Crito.

stay-pile (stā'pīl), n. A pile connected or anchored by land-ties with the main piles in the face of piled work. See cut under pilework.

stay-plow (stā'plou), n. A European plant: same as rest-harrow.

stay-rod (stā'rod), n. 1. In steam-engines: (a) One of the rods supporting the boiler-plate which forms the top of the fire-box, to keep the top from being bulged down by the pressure of steam. (b) Any rod in a boiler which supports plates by connecting parts exposed to rupture in contrary directions. (c) A tension-rod in a marine steam-engine.—2. A tie-rod in a building, etc., which prevents the spreading asunder of the parts connected.

stay-rod

staysail (stā'sāl or -sl), n. Any sail which hoists upon a stay. See stay<sup>1</sup>, 1.

stay-tackle (stā'tak'1), n. A tackle hanging amidships for hoisting in or out heavy weights, and formerly secured to the forestay or mainstay, but now generally attached to a pendant from the topmast-head.

stay-wedge (stā'wej), n. In locomotives, a wedge fitted to the inside bearings of the driving-axles to keep them in their proper position.

S. T. D. An abbreviation of the Latin Sacrae Theologiae Doctor, Doctor of Sacred Theology.

stead (sted), n. [Early mod. E. also sted; < ME. sted, stād, stūd, stede, stude, < (a) AS. stede = OS. stād = OFris. stād, stād, stēth, stēth = MD. stede, stad, D. stede, stē = MHG. stede = OIIG. stāt, G. stāt = Icel. staða = Sw. stad = Dan. sted = Goth. stath, place; (b) also, in a restricted sense and now partly differentiated spelling, MD. stede, stad, D. stad = MHG. stat, G. stadt = Sw. Dan. stad (< D. or G. ?), a town.

city (esp. common as the final element in names of towns); (c) cf. MD. stade, stade, fit time, opportunity, = OHG. stata, f., MHG. stāt (esp. in phrase, OIIG. zi statu, MHG. ze staten, G. zu staten), fit place or time; (d) AS. stath = Icel. stōðh, port, harbor, etc. (see stath)—all these forms, which have been more or less confused with one another, being derived from the root of stand, in its more orig. form (OHG. stān, stān, G. stehen, etc.): see stand, stair. Cf. bestead, farmstead, homestead, roadstead, etc., instead. Cf. L. statio(-is), a standing, station (see station), Gr. stasis, a placing (see stasis), from the same ult. root. The phrase in stead, now written as one word, instead, except when a qualifying word intervenes, was in ME. in stede, in stide, on stide, or in the stide, etc. The mod. dial. pron. instad, often aphetically stid, rests on the ME. variant stid, stide.]

1. A place; place in general.

I leue the saying and ryle stede to hym Hampole, Prose Treatises (E. T. S.), p. 10.

Every kyndly thing that is Hath a kynnly sted ther he May best in hit conserved be Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 731.

Fly therefore, fly this fearful stead anon
Spenser, F. Q., II iv 42.

The souldier may not move from watchfull sted
Spenser, F. Q., I iv 11.

2. Place or room which another had or might have; preceded by in: as, David died, and Solomon reigned in his stead. Hence instead.

And everyche of hem bringethe a Braune be of the Bayes or of Olyve, in here Bekes, in stede of Offryng Maulentille Travels, p. 59.

I buried her like my own sweet child,
And put my child in her stead
Tennyson, Lady Clare.

3. Space of time; while; moment.
Rest a little stead.
Spenser, F. Q., VI vii 40.

4. The frame on which a bed is laid; now rarely used except in the compound bedstead.
But in the gloomy count was rais'd a bed
Stuff'd with black plumes, and on an ebony stead.
Dryden, tr. of Ovid's Metamorph., x. 203.

5. A standing.—6. Position or situation of affairs; state; condition; plight.
She was my solas, my joy in evch stede,
My plesance, my comfort, my delite to Row. of Parthenay (E. T. S.), l. 286.

He staggered to and fro in doubtfull sted
Spenser, F. Q., V xii 23.

7. Assistance; service; use; benefit; advantage; avail: usually in the phrases to stand in stead, to do stead (to render service).
Here our dogs pottage stood vs in good stead, for we had nothing els. (Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, l. 40.)

The Duke of Savoy felt that the time had at last arrived when an adroit diplomacy might stand him in stead.
Molloy, Dutch Republic, I 200.

A devil's advocate may indeed urge that his (Tiber's) egoism and almost insensational temperance stood him in stead in the trying circumstances of his negotiations with the powers and with Prince Bismarck—but this is not really to his discredit.
Eneide Brit., XXIII 500.

Stand off, instead of. Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 48.—To do stead, to do service, help. Miln. n., 611. [Rare.]—To stand in stead. See stead.

(Stead occurs as the second element in many topographical names, as Hampstead, Winstead.)

stead (sted), v. [< ME. steden (pp. steded, stedd, sted, stad) = Icel. stedi, place (pp. staddir, placed in a specified position, circumstanced, etc.); from the noun.] I. trans. 1. To place; put; set.

Lorde God! that all goodes has by-gonne,
And all may ende both goodes and euill,
That made for man both mone and soune,
And stedde yone sterne to stande stone stille.
York Plays, p. 127.

2. To place or put in a position of danger, difficulty, hardship, or the like; press; bestead.
The bargayne I made thine,
That rewes me nowe full sare
So am I straytely sted.
York Plays, p. 103.

O father, we are cruelly sted between God's laws and man's laws—What shall we do?—What can we do?
Scott, Heart of Mid-Lothian, xix.

3. With up: to replace; fill.
We shall advise this wronged maid to stead up your appointment, go in your place. Shak., M. for M., III. 1. 260.

4. To avail; assist; benefit; serve; be of service, advantage, or use to.
We are . . . neither in skill nor ability of power greatly to stead you.
Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, I.

In my dealing with my child, my Latin and Greek, my accomplishments and my money, stead me nothing; but as much soul as I have avails. Timerson, The Over-Soul.

II. trans. To stop; stay.
I shalle not sted
Till I have them thider led.
Touceley Mysteries, p. 6.

steadable (sted'ā-1), a. [stead + -able.] Serviceable.

I have succoured and supplied him with men, money, friendship, and counsel, upon any occasion wherein I could be steadable for the improvement of his good.
Urguhart, tr. of Rabekals, l. 28. (Davies.)

steadfast, stedfast (sted'fast), a. [stead + -fast.] Firm; firmly fixed or established in place or position.

Yc flecting streams last long, onthving many a day;
But on more stedfast things Time makes the strongest prey Dryden, Polyolbion, II 118.

2. Firm; unyielding; unwavering; constant; resolute.
Heavenly grace doth him uphold,
And stedfast truth acquite him out of all.
Spenser, F. Q., I. viii. 1.

Stedfast in the faith. 1 Pet. v. 9.
Through all his (Warren Hastings's) disasters and perils, his brethren stood by him with stedfast loyalty.
Macaulay, Warren Hastings.

3. Steady; unwavering; concentrated.
He looked fast on to hym in stede fast wise,
And thought away his some that he should be.
Gower, Confessio (E. T. S.), l. 411.

The homely villan courteth to her low;
And, blushing on her, with a stedfast eye Receives the scroll without or yea or no.
Shak., Lucrece, l. 1330.

= syn. 2. Stanch, stable, unflinching.

steadfastly, stedfastly (sted'fast-1), adv. [steadfast + -ly.] In a steadfast manner. (a) Steadily; firmly; confidently; resolutely.

Hesd in meth him (Olion) the sonne of Neptune and Eurlde, to whom his fair game that vertine, to walkas stedfastly upon the sea as the land.
Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 177.

(b) Steadily; fixedly; intently.
Look on me stedfastly, and whatsoever I say to you, Move not, nor alter in your face.
Pletcher, Wildgoose Chase, iv. 2.

(c) Assuredly; certainly.
Your woful moulder wende stedfastly
That cruel houndes at som foul vermyne Hauke eten you. Chaucer, Clerk's Tale, l. 1033.

steadfastness, stedfastness (sted'fast-nes), n. [steadfast + -ness.] 1. Firmness; strength.

Ryht softe as the maye (marrow) is, that is alwey hidd in the feetel withdum, and that is defendid fro withowt by the stedfastness of woth.
Chaucer, Boethius, III. prose 11.

2. Stability and firmness; fixedness in place or position.
Forward did the mighty waters press,
As though they loved the green earth's steadfastness.
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, I. 173.

3. Stability of mind or purpose; resolution; constancy; faithfulness; endurance.
What coude a study husband more devyse
To preve his wyf and hir stedfastness?
Chaucer, Clerk's Tale, l. 613.

steadier (sted'ī-er), n. One who or that which steadies; as, he uses his cane for a steadier.

steadily (sted'ī-1), adv. In a steady manner; firmly; fixedly; steadfastly; intently; without wavering or flinching; without intermission, deviation, or irregularity; uniformly.

steadiness (sted'ī-nes), n. Steady character, quality, or condition. (a) Firmness in position; stability: as, the steadiness of a rock. (b) Freedom from tottering, swaying, or staggering motion: as, he walked with great steadiness; freedom from jolting, rolling, pitching, or other irregular motion: as, the steadiness of the great ocean steamers. (c) Freedom from irregularity of any kind; uniformity: as, prices increased with great steadiness. (d) Firmness of mind or purpose; constancy; resolution: as, steadiness in the pursuit of an object. (e) Fortitude; endurance; staying power.

steading (sted'ing), n. [stead + -ing.] A farm-house and offices—that is, barns, stables, cattle-sheds, etc.; a farmstead; a homestead. [North. Eng. and Scotch.]

steady (sted'ī), a. and n. [Early mod. E. also stedy, stedy; < ME. stede, stedi, stidig, < AS. stēthlithig (also **stediig*, **stediig*, Lyce) = Icel. stēthligr = Sw. Dan. stadiig, steady, stable, < stath, stead, bank: see stath. Cf. MD. stedigh = OIIG. stati, MHG. stete, stetec(g), G. stättig, stetig, continual, < stati, etc., a place: see stead, to which steady is now referred.] I. a. 1. Firmly fixed in place or position; unmoved.

The knight gan sayrely couch his steady spear.
Spenser, F. Q., I. xi. 16.

And how the dull Earth's prop-less massie Ball Stands stedy still, just in the midst of All.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, i. 7.

2. Firm or unfaltering in action; resolute: as, a steady stroke; a steady purpose.

All the Foot now dis-embark't, and got together in som order on firm ground, with a more stedy charge put the Britans to flight.
Milton, Hist. Eng., II.

With stedy step he held his way
O'er shadowy vale and gleaming height.
Bryant, Two Travellers.

In this sense much used elliptically in command, for 'keep' or 'hold steady': (a) Naut., an order to the helmsman to keep the ship straight on her course. (b) In hunting, an order to a dog to be wary and careful.

3. Free from irregularity or unevenness, or from tendency to irregular motion; regular; constant; undeviating; uniform: as, steady motion; a steady light; a steady course; a steady breeze; a steady gait.—4. Constant in mind, purpose, or pursuit; not fickle, changeable, or wavering; not easily moved or persuaded to relinquish a purpose: as, to be steady in the pursuit of an object; steady conduct.

A clear sight keeps the understanding steady. Locke.

To keep us steady in our conduct, he hath fortified us with natural laws and principles, which are preventive of many aberrations. James, Elem. of Crit., I. x.

Hence—5. Sober; industrious; persevering: as, a steady workman.—Steady motion, a motion of a fluid such that the velocity at each point remains constant in magnitude and direction.—Steady pin. See pin.

II. n. 1. In mach., some device for steady- ing or holding a piece of work. Specifically, in button-manuf., a hand-support for a button-blank, upon which, used in conjunction with another implement called a grip, the blank is held between the aligned rotating spindles carrying cutters for shaping it into the required form.

2. In stone-cutting, a support for blocking up a stone to be dressed, cut, or broken.—3. Same as stadda.

steady (sted'ī), v.; pret. and pp. steadied, ppr. steadying. [stead + -y.] I. trans. 1. To make steady; hold or keep from shaking, staggering, swaying, reeling, or falling; support; make or keep firm: as, to steady the hand.

Thus steadied, it (the house-martin) works and plasters the materials into the face of the brick or stone. Gilbert White, Nat. Hist. Selborne, To D. Barrington, xvi.

Hence—2. To make regular and persevering in character and conduct: as, trouble and disappointment had steadied him.

II. intrans. To become steady; regain or maintain an upright or stable position or condition; move steadily.

Sho steadies with upright keel!
Coleridge, Ancient Mariner, II.

steady (sted'ī), n. A dialectal form of stithy.
Job saith, Steth cor ejus sicut leus: His heart stood as a stethy.
Bp. Jewell, Works, I. 523. (Davies.)

steady-going (sted'ī-gō'ing), a. Of steady habits; consistently uniform and regular in action; that steadily pursues a reasonable and consistent way: as, a steady-going fellow.

Sir George Burns appears to have been too steadygoing through the whole of his long life for it to be marked by any of the exciting incidents that make the charm of biography. Athenaeum, No. 3257, p. 645.

steady-rest (sted'ī-rest), n. Same as back-rest.

steak (stāk), n. [ME. steike, steyke, < Icel. steik, a steak, = Sw. stek = Dan. steg, roast meat, < Icel. steikja (= Sw. steka = Dan. stega), roast on a spit (cf. stikna, to roast) or ## steam

His eyes steeped and rolling in his heede,
That stemed as a forneys of a leede.
Chaucer, Gen. Prolog. to C. T., l. 202.

Sternyn, or lowyn vp. Flammio. Prompt. Parv., p. 473.
Two stemynge eyes. Wyatt, Satires, l. 53.

II. trans. 1. To exhale; evaporate. [Rare.]
In slouthfull sleepe his molten hart to steme.
Spenser, F. Q., II. vi. 27.

2. To treat with steam; expose to steam: apply steam to for any purpose; as, to steam cloth: to steam potatoes instead of boiling them: to steam food for cattle; steamed bread.

steamboat (stēm'bōt), n. A vessel propelled by steam-power.

steamboat-bug (stēm'bōt-bug), n. A water-beetle of large size, or otherwise conspicuous. [Local, U. S.]

steamboat-coal (stēm'bōt-kōl), n. Coal broken small enough to pass between bars set from 6 to 8 inches apart, but too large to pass between bars less than 5 inches apart. This is the variation of size in different collieries in the Pennsylvania anthracite regions, where this size of coal is rarely procured except to fill special orders, and where alone this term is in use.

steamboating (stēm'bōt'ing), n. 1. The business of operating steamboats.—2. Undue hurrying and slighting of work. [Colloq.]—3. A method of cutting many boards for book-covers at one operation, instead of cutting them singly.

steamboat-rolls (stēm'bōt-rolz), n. pl. The largest rolls used in breaking coal for the market. Also called crushers and crusher rolls. See steamboat-coal. [Pennsylvania anthracite regions.]

steam-boiler (stēm'boi'ler), n. A receptacle or vessel in which water is heated and boiled to generate steam; particularly, a receptacle or vessel in which the water is confined, or isolated from the external air, in order to generate steam under a pressure equal to or exceeding that of the atmosphere, for the conversion of its expansive force into work in a steam-motor or engine, or for heating purposes. The kinds of steam boilers in use are very numerous and may be variously classified. In some the parts are rigidly joined together by rivets, bolts, studs, tubes expanded into heads, etc.; in others the parts are easily detachable from the other, as in what are known as portable boilers. Another division may be made, with reference to the treatment of the contained water, which in one class of steam-boilers is heated principally in a single mass of considerable cubic capacity, and in another is distributed in small spaces connected with each other and with the steam pipes, as in what are known as sectional boilers. A third ground of classification is the mode of applying heat. (See horizontal steam-boiler, return-flue boiler, horizontal tubular boiler, fire-tube boiler, etc., below.) Boilers are made of wrought iron or steel plate and tubes, or of cast iron or partly of wrought iron or steel and of cast iron—steel of moderate tensile strength has lately been much used for boilers in which high pressures are maintained, and the present tendency of engineering in portable boilers is toward the use of as high pressures as is compatible with good lubrication or the use of steam at as high a temperature as can be employed without decomposition of lubricants. Sectional boilers are often made partly or wholly of cast iron, the sections being bolted or screwed together; and cast-iron is also very largely employed for low-pressure boilers used for steam heating. Circulating steam-boiler, a compound boiler in which the contained parts are unequally heated, the water rising in the more intensely heated parts, and descending in the cooler parts, to insure a rapid circulation of the water constantly in one direction. Compound steam-boiler, (a) A boiler of two or more single steam-boilers having their steam and water-spaces connected and acting together to supply steam to a heating-apparatus or steam engine. (b) A single boiler or a battery of boilers, combined with other apparatus as a feed-water heater or a superheater for facilitating the production or for the superheating of steam. (c) A section of boiler.—Cornish steam-boiler, the cylindrical fire-boiler invented by Simon. See return-flue steam-boiler.—Corrugated furnace steam-boiler, a boiler in which the plates exposed to the direct radiation from the fire and to the hot gases in the furnace are corrugated to give increased strength and to present a more extended heating surface to the fire. Cylindrical steam-boiler, a boiler with an exterior cylindrical shell, having flanged heads of much thicker metal riveted to the shell by rivets.—Fire-tube steam-boiler, a boiler in which the heat of the furnace is partly or wholly applied to the interior of tubes which pass through the water-space of the boiler.—Flue steam-boiler, a general name for all steam-boilers with an internal flue or flues, whether vertical, horizontal or of other construction. Horizontal flue steam-boiler, a horizontal steam-boiler with one or more flues through its length. (Also called return-flue boiler.) If cylindrical also, it is a horizontal cylindrical flue or return flue boiler.—Horizontal steam-boiler, a steam-boiler in which the flues or tubes are in a horizontal position.—Horizontal tubular steam-boiler, a horizontal boiler with fire-tubes through which the gases of combustion pass in a manner analogous to those passing through flues, for which the tubes are substituted, presenting a greater extent of heating surface than can be obtained in the same space by flues, and the two by joining the heads of the boiler together. A modern form of this boiler is shown in the cuts, which also show the method of setting it in brickwork: a is the shell; b, b', saddles for supporting the boiler in the masonry; c, d, the furnace door; e, ash-pit door; f, clean-out door in the boiler-front; g, by which the tubes are reached for cleaning; g, ash-pit; h, grate; i, steam-dome; j, safety-valve; k, steam-pipe; l, bridge-wall; m, combustion-chamber; n, back connection for passage of Horizontal Cylindrical Tubular Steam Boiler.

A, vertical longitudinal section; B, vertical cross section.

the gases of combustion into the rear ends of the tubes; o, flue in the masonry; u, up-take; p, flange head; q, tubes; r, side-bars which support the masonry; s, dead-air spaces in the masonry in which the air acts as a heat-insulator. The course of the gases of combustion is indicated by arrows.—Locomotive steam-boiler, a tubular boiler which has a contained furnace and ash-pit, and in which the gases of combustion pass from the furnace directly into horizontal tubes (instead of passing first under the boiler, as in the horizontal cylindrical tubular boiler), and after passing through the tubes are conveyed directly into the smoke box at the opposite end of the tubes. The name is derived from the use of such boilers on locomotive engines, but it is typical in its application to all boilers having the construction described, and used for generating steam for stationary or portable engines, as well as for locomotives.—Marine steam-boiler, a boiler specially designed and adapted for supplying steam to marine engines. Compactness, as little weight as is consistent with strength, effective steaming capacity, and economy in consumption of fuel are the prime requisites of marine boilers. They are usually tubular, and short in proportion to their width, and have water-legs at the sides and water-spaces below and at the backs of their furnaces—that is, their furnaces are entirely surrounded by water spaces except at the openings for the doors. Marine boilers are now sometimes used with forced draft—that is, air is forced from the outside into the boiler or fire rooms (which are sometimes made air-tight) or immediately into the flues by powerful blowers.—Return-flue steam-boiler, a horizontal flue-boiler with one or more interior flues through which the gases of combustion are returned to the front end of the boiler rather than passing to the rear from the furnace over the bridge-wall and under the bottom of the shell.—Rotary tubular steam-boiler. See return-flue steam-boiler.—Sectional safety steam-boiler, a sectional boiler in which the water is divided into numerous small masses connected with one another by passages large enough for free circulation from one to the other, but not large enough to permit a sudden release of pressure, in case of rupture of one of the sections, as to cause an explosion.—Tubular steam-boiler, a boiler a prominent feature of which is a series of either fire- or water-tubes.—Vertical steam-boiler, a steam boiler in which the heating surface of the tubes or flues is in a vertical position. When constructed with fire-tubes, it is called a vertical tubular boiler.

steam-box (stēm'boiks), n. A reservoir for steam above a boiler; a steam-chest.

steam-brake (stēm'brak), n. A brake applied by the action of steam admitted to a steam-cylinder the piston of which is connected by rods to the levers which apply the brake-shoes.

steam-car (stēm'kar), n. A car drawn or driven by steam-power; a railway-car. [U. S.]

steam-carriage (stēm'kar'ij), n. A road-carriage driven by steam-power.

steam-case (stēm'kas), n. Same as steam-chest.

steam-chamber (stēm'cham'ber), n. 1. A box or chamber in which articles are placed to be steamed.—2. A steam-chest.—3. A steam-dome.—4. The steam-room or steam-space in a boiler or engine.

steam-chest (stēm'chest), n. 1. The chamber in which the slide-valve of a steam-engine works. See cuts under passenger-engine, rock-drill, and shut-valve.—2. In calico-printing, a metallic vessel or tank in which printed cloths are steamed to fix their colors.

steam-chimney (stēm'chim'ni), n. An annular chamber around the chimney of a boiler-furnace for superheating steam.

steam-cock (stēm'kok), n. A faucet or valve in a steam-pipe.

steam-coil (stēm'kōil), n. A coil of pipe, either made up flat with return bends or in spiral form, used to impart heat to a room or other inclosed space or to a liquid, or, by exposure of its exterior surface to air-currents or contact of cold water, to act as a condenser.

steam-color (stēm'kul'or), n. In dyeing, a color which is developed and fixed by the action of steam after the cloth is printed.

steam-crane (stēm'krān), n. A crane worked by steam, frequently carrying the steam-engine upon the same frame.

steam-cutter (stēm'kut'er), n. A ship's boat, smaller than a launch, propelled by steam.

steam-cylinder (stēm'sil'ind'er), n. The cylinder in which the piston of a steam-engine reciprocates.—Starting steam-cylinder. Same as starting-engine.

steam-engine

steam-dome (stēm'dōm), n. A chamber connected with the steam-space and projecting above the top of a steam-boiler. From it the steam passes to the cylinder of a steam-engine, or to steam-heating apparatus. See cut under steam-boiler.

steam-dredger (stēm'drej'ēr), n. A dredging-machine operated by steam.

steam-engine (stēm'en'jin), n. An engine in which the mechanical force arising from the elasticity and expansive action of steam, or from its property of rapid condensation, or from the combination of the two, is made available as a motive power. The invention of the steam-engine has been ascribed by the English to the Marquis of Worcester, who published an account of it about the middle of the seventeenth century. By the French the invention has been ascribed to Papin, toward the close of the same century. Papin's plan contained the earliest suggestion of a vacuum under a piston by the agency of steam. The first actual working steam-engine of which there is any record was invented and constructed by Captain Savery, an Englishman, to whom a patent was granted for it in 1698. This engine was employed to raise water by the expansion and condensation of steam. The steam-engine received great improvements from the hands of Newcomen, Beighton, and others. Still it was imperfect and rude in its construction, and was chiefly applied to the draining of mines or the raising of water. Up to this time it was properly an atmospheric engine (see atmospheric), for the actual moving power was the pressure of the atmosphere, the steam only producing a vacuum under the piston. The steam-engine was brought to a high state of perfection by James Watt about the year 1782. The numerous and vital improvements introduced by him, both in the combination of its mechanism and in the economy of its management, have rendered the steam-engine at once the most powerful, the most easily applied and regulated, and generally speaking the least expensive of all prime movers for im-

Steam engine (Corliss engine).

(The upper figure is a front view, the under a rear view.) The steam valve A and exhaust valve A' are independent of each other, and have cylindrical lifting surfaces. An oscillatory motion is given to them by the connecting rod B, which is worked by an eccentric C on the side of the steam cylinder, which is worked by an immediate rock lever D, driven by the eccentric E, connected with a centre upon the main shaft. The motions of the exhaust valves are positive, but those of the inlet valve are varied by means of a spring valve, which is adjustable to determine the points of opening and the range of motion of the valves, and are also controlled in their doings by the governor F, rock lever G, connecting rod H, and rock lever I, all connected together in such manner that an extremely small increase or decrease of speed in the rotation of the fly-wheel shaft causes the inlet valves to be released and to close correspondingly earlier or later in the stroke. The closing is performed by external weights suspended from short levers on the valve stems by the rods J, the motion of closing being controlled by the pins at K, only the covers of which are shown. The other parts of the engine, which are common to most reciprocating engines, are: 1, the bed plate; 2, cylinder; 3, piston; 4, piston rod; 5, stuffing box; 6, sliding block or cross-head; 7, connecting rod or pitman; 8, crank pin; 9, crank web; 10, crank shaft; 11, crank pin; 12, the crank shaft; 13, centrifugal governor; 14, steam pipe; 15, lubricator; 16, exhaust pipe.

pulling machinery of every description. The steam-engine is properly a heat-engine, and the total work L is expressed theoretically by the equation in which Q represents the total heat converted into work per unit of weight, Q weight of steam, and A the thermal equivalent of a unit of work, while T<sub>1</sub> and T<sub>2</sub> are respectively the higher and lower limits of temperature between which the steam is worked, T<sub>1</sub> being the absolute temperature at which the steam is introduced to the engine, and T<sub>2</sub> the absolute temperature at which it is exhausted from it. Inspection of the equation shows that the work performed must vary directly as the factor (T<sub>1</sub> - T<sub>2</sub>) varies—that is, the greater the difference which can be maintained between the temperature of induction and that of ejection the greater is the amount of work performed by any given weight of steam. It is in accordance with this law that much higher steam-pressures are now adopted than were formerly employed. The factor (T<sub>1</sub> - T<sub>2</sub>) is commonly called the temperature range or fall. The varieties of steam-engines are extremely numerous. (For names of various types, with explanations of their characteristic features, see below.) The specific differences between steam-engines of the same type of construction consist chiefly in their valve gear. (See valve-gear, governor, regulator, n., slide valve (with cut), and piston-valve.) Of the total steam-power employed in modern industry on land, that supplied by steam-engines of the horizontal type far exceeds that furnished by steam-engines of all other types put together. Vertical direct-acting engines of large size are little used, but small engines of this type are much employed. Steam-engines of the rotary type are scarcely used except for some kinds of steam hoisting-engines. Double, triple, and quadruple expansion steam-engines are now largely used in marine engineering. Many double expansion stationary engines are in use, and the economical value of the compound system has been demonstrated both theoretically and practically. — Agricultural steam-engine, a portable engine with a boiler, often specially adapted to burn light fuel, as chaff or straw, either by itself or in connection with wood or coal. — Annular steam-engine, a steam-engine having an annular piston working in an annular steam-cylinder, and having two diametrically placed piston-rods connected with the cross-head; the latter also being connected by rod to a guide-block, working in the hollow cylinder forming the center of the annular steam-cylinder, this guide-block being connected with the crank by a pitman. — Atmospheric steam-engine. See atmospheric engine, under atmospheric. — Beam steam-engine, an engine in which a working beam connects the connecting-rod with the crank-pitman, and transmits power from one to the other. See beam-engine. — Compound steam-engine, a steam-engine having two steam-cylinders of unequal size, from the smaller of which the steam, after use, passes into the larger cylinder, and completes its work by expanding against the piston in the latter. — Concentric steam-engine. Same as rotary steam-engine. — Condensing steam-engine, a steam-engine in which the exhaust-steam is condensed, for the purpose of removing the back-pressure of the atmosphere from the exhaust, and also to economize fuel by saving heat otherwise wasted. See condenser, and cut under pulsometer. — Cornish steam-engine, a single-acting condensing steam pumping-engine, first used in the mines of Cornwall. It is also used as a pumping-engine for supplying water to cities. Steam-pressure is not used to raise the water, but to lift a long loaded pump-rod, whose weight in its descent is the power employed to force up the water. The motion is regulated by a kind of hydraulic regulator invented by Smeaton, and called a catapult. — Direct-acting steam-engine, a steam-engine in which the power of the piston is transmitted to the crank without the intervention of levers, side-beams, or a working-beam. — Disk steam-engine, a form of rotary engine in which the steam-pistons act successively against a revolving disk set at an angle to the plane of rotation, thus imparting a gyratory motion to a central shaft upon which the disk is mounted, the end of this shaft being connected with a crank turning in the plane of rotation. — Double-acting steam-engine, the ordinary form of steam-engine, in which the steam acts upon both sides of the piston. — Double-cylinder steam-engine, a steam-engine having two steam-cylinders acting in combination with each other. See compound steam-engine. — Double expansion steam-engine. (a) A double-cylinder steam-engine in which steam is used expansively. (b) A compound steam-engine. — Double steam-engine, a steam-engine having two cylinders in which the pistons make either simultaneous or alternate strokes and are connected with the same crank-shaft. — Duplex steam-engine. Same as double steam-engine. — High-pressure steam-engine. See high pressure, under pressure. — High-speed steam-engine, a somewhat indefinite name for a reciprocating engine working at a high speed as compared with the much slower speed of engines with the Corliss and other types of valve-gears. In general it may be said that engines of considerable power, making one hundred turns per minute and upward, are high-speed engines. — Horizontal steam-engine, a steam-engine in which the piston works horizontally. — Inclined-cylinder steam-engine, a form of marine engine having cylinders inclined to the horizontal. — Inverted-cylinder steam-engine, a steam-engine in which the cross-head is placed below the cylinder. This construction is much used for marine engines, and to some extent for stationary engines. — Low-pressure steam-engine. See low pressure, under pressure. — Marine steam-engine, a steam-engine specially designed for marine propulsion. The best modern types are condensing, short-stroke, double, triple, or quadruple expansion-engines of the inverted-cylinder type. Marine engines for steam-tugs are for the most part single and often non-condensing. See cut in next column. — Non-condensing steam-engine, an engine that exhausts its steam without condensation. See non-condensing. — Oscillating steam-engine, a steam-engine whose cylinder oscillates on trunnions and has its piston-rod directly connected with the crank. Double engines of this type have been considerably used for marine propulsion, and some are still employed. — Overhead steam-engine. See overhead. — Quadruple expansion steam-engine, a steam-engine which, taking its steam at high pressure, expands it in four different operations successively, and in four distinct and separate steam-cylinders. The pistons of the cylinders are connected by piston-rods, cross-heads, and connecting-rods with cranks attached to a common shaft, to which rotary motion is imparted by the coacting pistons. — Reciprocating steam-engine, a steam-engine in which the power of steam is applied to a reciprocating piston. — Revolving-cylinder steam-engine, a steam-engine of which the cylinder is so mounted that it is caused to rotate by the reciprocation of the piston. Compare rotary steam-engine. — Rotary steam-engine, a steam-engine in which the piston rotates in the cylinder, or the cylinder upon the

$$L = Q(T_1 - T_2)/AT_1,$$

High-speed Steam-engine.

Double Expansion Marine Steam engine.

a, high-pressure cylinder; b, low-pressure cylinder; c, in luction and eduction valve for a in position of exhaust from lower end and of induction to upper end of cylinder; d, passage for steam from a to b; e, induction and eduction-valve for b; f, f, f, balance-plates for valves of a and b; g, g, g, pistons; h, h, h, piston rods; i, i, i, cross-heads; j, j, j, slipper-guides for cross-heads; k, k, k, connecting-rods; l, l, l, cranks; m, crank-shaft; n, shaft which drives feed-pump o and also bilge-pump (not shown) on the opposite side; p, worm on main shaft gearing into worm-wheel q on the shaft n, and actuating pump-plungers by crank and pitman connection; r, r, r, eccentrics; s, s, s, eccentric rods; t, t, t, links connected by link-blocks with valve-stems u, u, u; v, crank-lever which turns a segmental worm-gear, keyed to the rock-shaft w carrying the rocker-arms x, x, x, for reversing high pressure and low pressure valves respectively; y, bed-plate; z, columns supporting the cylinders; z', tie-rods for stiffening the columns; a', exhaust from low-pressure cylinder to the condenser (not shown); a'', butterfly throttle-valve; b', gear for operating throttle-valve; c, relief-valves.

piston. The name is sometimes given to reciprocating engines which have a fly-wheel and crank-shaft. E. H. Knight. — Rotary steam-engine. Same as rotary steam-engine. — Semi-portable steam-engine, a steam-engine which is movable with its foundation-plate, as distinguished from an engine mounted on wheels, and from one resting on a fixed foundation. — Triple expansion steam-engine, a steam-engine that expands its steam in three successive stages and in three separate and distinct cylinders, one taking its steam from the boiler, and each of the others taking its steam from the exhaust of the cylinder working at the next higher pressure. This type of marine engine is found at the present time on many of the swiftest steamships, but may be in turn superseded by the quadruple expansion-engine. — Vertical steam-engine, a steam-engine whose piston reciprocates vertically.

steamer (stēm'ēr), n. [steam + -er.] One who or that which steams, in any sense. Specifically—(a) A steam-box. (b) A person employed in steaming oysters in shucking them for canning. (c) In calico-printing, one who steams printed cloth for fixing steam-colors. (d) One who steams wood for bending, etc. (e) A steam-generator or boiler: as, the boiler is an excellent steamer. (f) Especially, a vessel propelled by steam; a steamship. (g) A fire-engine the pumps of which are worked by steam. (h) A vessel in which articles are subjected to the action of steam, as in washing or cookery. See steam-chest, 2. (1) In paper-making, a vessel in which old paper, fiber, etc., are treated in order to soften them. (2) An apparatus for steaming grain preparatory to grinding. (i) A locomotive for roads. See road-steamer.

steamer-cap (stēm'ēr-kap), n. Same as fore-and-aft, 2.

steamer-duck (stēm'ēr-duk), n. A South American duck of the genus Micropterus (or Tachyeres); a race-horse. See Micropterus, 2. This duck becomes when adult incapable of flight, but swims very rapidly, with a movement which has suggested the action of a side-wheel steamboat (whence the name).

steam-excavator (stēm'ēks'kă-vă-tōr), n. Same as navvy, 3.

steam-fountain (stēm'foun'tān), n. See fountain.

steam-gage (stēm'gāj), n. An attachment to a boiler to indicate the pressure of steam; a pressure-gage. There are many forms. One of the older is a bent tube partially filled with mercury, one end of which connects with the boiler, so that the steam raises a, hollow bent tube attached to case at a', and receiving condensed water or steam under pressure through the opening at b'; b, link connecting end of tube a with short arm of rock-lever c, which has at its upper end a small rack intermeshing with a pinion on the spindle of the index d'; e, small coiled spring which acts upon the spindle of the index or pointer in a direction opposed to the action of the rack and pinion; f, dial, on which the figures indicate pressures (in pounds) above the atmospheric pressure.

Steam-gage (Ashcroft's).

the mercury according to the amount of pressure. A very common form of gage is that known as Bourdon's, which consists essentially of a flattened metal tube, closed at one end and bent circularly, into which the steam is admitted. As such a tube tends to straighten itself out by the force of the steam, the amount of pressure can easily be ascertained by an attached index-apparatus. — Electric steam-gage, an attachment to a steam-boiler for indicating at a distance the pressure of the steam. One form consists of a bent tube filled with mercury, which, as it rises under the pressure, closes a series of electrical circuits after the manner of a thermostat. Another form employs the expansion or movement of an ordinary steam-gage diaphragm as a circuit-closer. The closing of the circuit in each case serves to sound an alarm.

steam-gas (stēm'gas), n. Same as superheated steam (which see, under steam).

steam-generator (stēm'jen'g-rā-tōr), n. A steam-boiler.

steam-governor (stēm'guv'ēr-nōr), n. See governor, 6.

steam-gun (stēm'gun), n. A gun the projectile force of which is derived from the expansion of steam issuing through the shotted tube.

steam-hammer (stēm'ham'ēr), n. A forging-hammer operated by steam-power. It has assumed several forms, but now consists of a vertical and inverted steam-cylinder with piston and piston-rod (the rod passing through the lower cylinder-head and carrying at the end a mass of metal which forms the hammer), an anvil directly beneath the hammer and cylinder, a supporting framework, and suitable valves for the control of the steam. Steam is used to raise and may also be used to drive down the hammer. By means of the valve-system, steam is admitted below the piston to raise the hammer and to sustain it while the metal to be forged is placed on the anvil. To deliver a blow, the steam is exhausted below the piston, and the hammer is allowed to fall by its own weight. To augment the blow, live steam may be admitted above the piston to assist in driving it downward. To deliver a gentle blow, the exhaust-steam below the piston may be retained to act as a cushion. Blows can be delivered at any point of the stroke, quickly or slowly, lightly or with the full power of the combined weight of the hammer and force of steam-pressure; or the machine may be used as a vise or squeezer. All modern steam-hammers of the type described are modifications of the original Nasmyth steam-hammer illustrated in the cut. Steam-

Steam-hammer (Nasmyth's).

a, anvil; b, frame; c, hammer-head; d, guides; e, piston-rod; f, valve chests containing valves that control induction of steam to and eduction from the cylinder h; h', steam-pipe; g, rock-lever (moved by the rod i) connected with the valve stems and moving the valves; j, tripping-mechanism by which the hammer is caused to descend from any part of the upstroke, the adjusting-gear k being manipulated by a workman standing on the platform l.

hammers of the largest class have been made with hammers weighing eighty tons. Another type of steam-hammer consists of two horizontal steam-cylinders placed in line, the hammers meeting over an anvil on which the forging rests.

steam-heat (stēm'hēt), n. 1. In thermodynamics, the total heat required to produce steam at any tension from water at 0° C. or 32° F. It is the sum of the sensible heat and the latent heat expressed in thermal units. — 2. Heat imparted by the condensation of steam in coils, pipes, or radiators.

steam-hoist (stēm'hoist), n. A lift or elevator operated by a steam-engine.

steam-house (stēm'hous), n. In oyster-canning, a house or room where oysters are steamed.

steaminess (stēm'i-nes), n. Steamy or vaporous character or quality; mistiness.

steam-jacket (stēm'jak'et), n. An inclosure adapted for receiving steam, and applying the heat of the steam to a kettle, tank, steam-cylinder, etc., surrounded by such inclosure.

steam-jet (stēm'jet), n. A blast of steam caused to issue from a nozzle.

steam-joint (stēm'joint), n. A joint that is steam-tight.

steam-kettle (stēm'ket'l), n. A vessel heated by steam, and used for various purposes. The steam for heating is usually applied by induction to a steam-jacket surrounding the sides and inclosing the bottom of the kettle.

steam-kitchen (stēm'kich'en), n. An apparatus for cooking by steam.

steam-launch (stēm'lānch), n. See launch.

steam-motor (stēm'mō'tor), n. A steam-engine.

steam-navigation (stēm'nav-i-gā'shon), n. The art of applying the power of steam to the propulsion of boats and vessels; the art of navigating steam-vessels.

steam-navvy (stēm'nav'i), n. A digging-machine or excavator actuated by steam.

steam-organ (stēm'ōr'gan), n. Same as callopye, 2.

steam-oven (stēm'uv'n), n. An oven heated by steam at high pressure.

steam-packet (stēm'pak'et), n. A packet propelled by steam. Compare packet, n., 2.

steam-pan (stēm'pan), n. A vessel with a double bottom forming a steam-chamber. See vacuum-pan.

steam-pipe (stēm'pip), n. Any pipe in which steam is conveyed. Specifically—(a) A pipe which leads from a boiler to an engine, pan, tank, etc., or from the boiler to a condenser or to the open air. (b) In a steam-heating or drying apparatus or system, a name given to any one of the steam-supply pipes, in contradistinction to the corresponding return-pipe through which water of condensation is returned to the boiler.

steam-plow (stēm'plou), n. A gang-plow designed to be drawn by a wire rope, and operated by steam-power. Such a plow has usually eight shares arranged in a frame, four pointing in one direction and four in the other. The frame is balanced on a pair of wheels in the center, and forms an angle in the middle, so that when one half the plows are in use the others are raised above the ground. Steam plows are used with either one or two engines. If with two engines the plow is drawn forward and backward between them, each engine being advanced the width of the furrows after each passage of the plow. If one engine only is used, the blocks and movable anchors are employed to hold the rope, the anchors being automatically advanced after each passage of the plow. Traction arms also have been used to drag plows. See anchor, path, and plow.

steam-port (stēm'port), n. 1. In a slide-valve steam-engine, the name given to each of two oblong passages from the steam-chest to the inside of the cylinder, which afford passage to the steam to and from the cylinder, and act alternately as an induction-port and an exhaust-port. See cut under slide valve.—2. A passage for steam into or out of any inclosure.

steam-power (stēm'pou-er), n. The power of steam applied to move machinery or produce any other result.

steam-press (stēm'pres), n. A press actuated by steam-power acting directly or indirectly. Specifically, a printing press worked by steam.

steam-printing (stēm'prin-ting), n. Printing done by machinery moved by steam, as opposed to printing by hand-labor on hand-presses.

steam-propeller (stēm'prop-er-er), n. Same as steam-propeller (which see, under steam).

steam-pump (stēm'pump), n. See pump and vacuum-pump.

steam-radiator (stēm'ra-di-ator), n. A nest or collection of iron pipes in tanks or coils, through which steam is passed to heat a room, etc. See cuts under radiator.

steam-ram (stēm'ram), n. See ram, 2.

steam-regulator (stēm'reg-u-lā-tor), n. See regulator, 2.

steam-room (stēm'rom), n. In a steam-engine, etc., the space which is occupied by steam.

steamship (stēm'ship), n. A ship propelled by steam.

steam-space (stēm'spās), n. A space occupied, or designed to be occupied, by steam only, particularly, in a steam-boiler, the space allowed above the water-line for holding a quantity of steam.

steam-table (stēm'tā-b), n. 1. A bench or table fitted with shallow steam-tight tanks, used in restaurants, etc., to keep cooked dishes warm.—2. A tabular arrangement of data relating to steam-pressures, temperatures, and quantities of heat.

steam-tank (stēm'tangk), n. A chamber or inclosed vessel in which materials of any kind are treated either by direct contact with steam, or with steam-heat by means of pipes coiled in the tank or a steam-jacket. Such tanks are used in many industries, and are made in many forms, as for steaming wool, paper-steel, hard, etc. See steam-tight.

steam-tight (stēm'tīt), a. Capable of resisting the passage of steam, as a joint in a steam-pipe.

steam-toe (stēm'tō), n. In a steam-engine, a projection on a lifting-rod, which is raised by it through the action of a cam, tappet, or wiper.

steam-trap (stēm'trap), n. A contrivance for permitting the passage of water of condensation out of pipes, radiators, steam-engine cylinders, etc., while preventing that of steam.

steam-tug (stēm'tug), n. A steamer used for towing ships, boats, rafts, fishing-nets, oyster-dredges, etc. Such vessels are furnished with engines very powerful in proportion to the size of their hulls, and usually carry only sufficient coal for short trips.—Steam-tug heart-murmur, the combination of an aortic regurgitant with an aortic obstructive murmur.

steam-valve (stēm'valv), n. A valve which controls the opening of a steam-pipe or steam-port.

steam-vessel (stēm'ves'el), n. Same as steam-ship.

steam-wagon (stēm'wag'on), n. Same as steam-carriage.

steam-wheel (stēm'hvél), n. A rotary steam-engine. See steam-engine.

steam-whistle (stēm'hvīz), n. A sounding device connected with the boiler of a steam-engine, either stationary, locomotive, or marine, for the purpose of announcing hours of work, signaling, etc.

steam-winch (stēm'wīnch), n. A form of winch or hoisting-apparatus in which rotary motion is imparted to the winding axle from the piston-rod of a steam-engine, directly, or indirectly by means of bevel-gearing, the direct action giving most rapidly, the indirect most power.

steam-worm (stēm'wōrm), n. A spiral steam-coil. Such coils are used in tanks for heating liquids, as turpentine, linseed oil, water in foundries, dye-works, etc. The liquid being placed in the tank enveloping the coil, while steam is passed through the latter. They are also used in some forms of chlorimeter.

steam-yacht (stēm'yot), n. A yacht propelled by steam, or by steam and sails.

steal (stēal), v. [From steal + yl.] Consisting of or abounding in steam; resembling steam; vaporous; misty.

The bubbling and loud hissing urn Throws up a steaming column. Compos. Task, iv, 23.

I found an evening hour in the steam heat of the Ram equal to half a dozen afternoons. R. F. Burton, El-Mednah, p. 272.

steaming, n. See steaming.

steapsin (stēapsin), n. A ferment of the pancreatic secretion which to some extent resolves fats into fatty acids and glycerin.

stearate (stēar'at), n. [From stear + -ate.] A salt of stearic acid. The neutral stearates of the alkalis are soaps.

stearic (stēar'ik), a. [Irreg. for stearic, < Gr. stear + -ic.] Still fat, tallow, suet; see stearic. Of or pertaining to suet or fat; obtained from steatite.

stearic acid,  $C_{18}H_{35}O_2$ , a monobasic acid, forming brilliant white scaly crystals. It is fusible, soluble in water, but soluble in alcohol and ether. It burns freely and is used for making candles. Its compounds with the alkalis, earths, and metallic oxides are called stearates. Stearic acid exists in combination with glycerin as stearin, in beef and mutton-fat, and in several vegetable fats, such as the butter of cacao. It is obtained from stearin by saponification and decomposition by an acid of the soap formed, and also from mutton-suet by a similar process.

stearin (stēar'in), n. [From stear + -in.] 1. An ether or glyceride,  $C_{57}H_{113}O_6$  ( $C_{18}H_{35}O_2$ )<sub>3</sub>, formed by the combination of stearic acid and glycerin. When crystallized it forms white pearly scales, soft to the touch but not greasy, and odorless and tasteless when pure. It is insoluble in water, but soluble in hot alcohol and ether. When treated with superheated steam it is separated into stearic acid and glycerin, and when boiled with alkalis is saponified—that is, the stearic acid combines with the alkali, forming soap, and glycerin is separated. When melted it resembles wax. There are three stearins, which may all be regarded as derivatives of glycerin in which one, two, or three OH groups are replaced by the radical stearyl. Natural stearin is the tristearyl derivative of glycerin. It is the chief ingredient in suet, tallow, and the harder fats, and may be prepared by repeated solution in ether and crystallization. Candle-pitch, chandlers' gum, or residuary gum, used in the manufacture of roofing-cements, is a by-product of this manufacture.

2. A popular name for stearic acid as used in making candles.—Lard-stearin, the residue left after the expression of the oil from lard.

stearin (stēar'in), n. [From stear + -in.] The process of making stearin from animal or vegetable fats; the manufacture of stearin or stearin products.

stearone (stēar'ōn), n. [From stear + -one.] A substance ( $C_{35}H_{70}O$ ) obtained by the partial decomposition of stearic acid. It is a volatile liquid, and seems to be stearic acid deprived of two equivalents of carbonic acid.

stearoptene (stēar'op'tēn), n. [Irreg. < Gr. stear, still fat, tallow, suet, + πτερός, winged (volatile).] The solid crystalline substance separated from any volatile oil on long standing or at low temperatures. See cleoplene.

stearyl (stēar'il), n. [From stear + -yl.] The radical of stearic acid ( $C_{17}H_{33}O$ ).

stearin (stēar'in), n. Same as stearin.

stearinum (stēar'ī-num), n. [NL., < Gr. stear, neut. of stearos, of or pertaining to tallow or suet, < stear (stear), still fat, tallow, suet; see stearic.] A name given to certain pharmaceutical preparations similar to cerates, but containing considerable tallow.—Stearinum iodoforn, stearinum composed of mutton-tallow 18 parts, expressed oil of nutmeg 2 parts, powdered iodoform 1 part.

stearite (stēar'īt), n. [= F. stearite, < L. stear, tallow, < Gr. stear, tallow, used only as equiv. to stearos, stearos, of dough made of flour of spelt, < stear (stear), also stear, also contr. stear (with rare gen. stearos, also stear), still fat, tallow, suet, also dough made of flour of spelt, prob. < stear (stear), cause to stand, fix; see stand.] Soapstone: an impure massive variety of talc. Also called pulston.

stearitic (stēar'īt'ik), a. [From stearite + -ic.] Of or pertaining to stearite or soapstone; made of stearite.

steatogenous (stēar'ō-jen-us), a. [From stear + -ogenous.] Tending to produce steatosis (see steatosis, 2): as, steatogenous processes.

steatoma (stēar'tō-mā), n. pl. steatomata (-mā-tā). [From stear + -oma, a kind of fatty tumor, < stear (stear), fat, tallow, suet.] A lipoma.

steatomatous (stēar'tō-mā-tus), a. [From steatoma + -ous.] Of the nature of a steatoma.

steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. stear (stear), fat, tallow, suet, + πτερος, the rump.] An accumulation of fat on the buttocks of certain Africans, especially Hottentot women.

steatopygous (stēar'tō-pī-gus), a. [From steatopygia + -ous.] Affected with or characterized by steatopygia; having enormously fat buttocks.

R. F. Burton, El-Mednah, p. 60.

steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatornis (stēar'tōr'nīs), n. [NL. (Humboldt, 1817), < Gr. stear (stear), fat, tallow, suet, + ὄρνις, a bird.] The representative genus of Steatornithidae. The only species is S. caripensis, the guacharo or oil-bird of South America, found from Venezuela to Peru, and also in Trinidad, of frugivorous and nocturnal habits. The bird resembles and is usually classed with the goatsuckers. It is so fat that the natives prepare from it a kind of oil used for butter. See cut under guacharo.

steatornithic (stēar'tōr'nīth'ik), a. Having the characters of Steatornis.

Steatornithidae (stēar'tōr'nīth'ī-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Steatornis (-ornith'ī-dē).] A family of picarian birds, represented by the genus Steatornis. It is related to the Caprimulgidae, and is often associated with them, but differs in many important characters, and in some respects approaches the owls. The sternum has a single notch on each side behind. The palate is desmognathous, with united maxillopalatines and peculiarly shaped palatines. There are basipterygoid processes, and the rostrum of the skull is compressed. The second pectoral muscle is small, and the femoro-caudal is wanting. The syrinx is entirely bronchial, and hence paired. The oil-gland is very large. The plumage is not after-shedded, and the rectrices are ten. There is only one genus and one species. See cut under guacharo.

Steatornis (stēar'tōr'nīs), n. [NL. (Humboldt, 1817), < Gr. stear (stear), fat, tallow, suet, + ὄρνις, a bird.] The representative genus of Steatornithidae. The only species is S. caripensis, the guacharo or oil-bird of South America, found from Venezuela to Peru, and also in Trinidad, of frugivorous and nocturnal habits. The bird resembles and is usually classed with the goatsuckers. It is so fat that the natives prepare from it a kind of oil used for butter. See cut under guacharo.

steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

Steatopygia (stēar'tō-pī-gi-ā), n. [From steatopygia + -ia.] The development of steatopygia, or the state of being steatopygous. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XVIII, 17.

steatornithine (stē-ā-tōr-ni-thin), n. [< Steatornis (-ornith-) + -ine.] Steatornithic; of or pertaining to the Steatornithidae.

steatorrhæa, steatorrhœa (stē-ā-tō-rē-ā), n. [N.L., < Gr. steirop (steirop-), fat, suet, tallow, + rhoia, a flow, < rhoiv, flow.] 1. Seborrhæa.—2. The passage of fatty stools.

steatosis (stē-ā-tō-sis), n. [N.L., < Gr. steirop (steirop-), fat, tallow, suet, + -osis.] 1. Fatty degeneration or infiltration.—2. Any disease of the sebaceous glands. Also called steatopathia. Steatozoön (stē-ā-tō-zō-on), n. Same as Demoder.

stedt, n. An obsolete form of stead.

steadfast, stedfast, etc. See steadfast, etc.

stead (stēd), n. [*< ME. stede, < AS. stēda, a stud-horse, stallion, war-horse (cf. gestēd-hor, stud-horse; Icel. stedd for *stadda, a mare; Sw. sto, a mare), < stōd, a stud: see stud.*] Cf. stot, stote, stotl.] A horse: now chiefly poetical.

The kyng alighte of his stede.

King Horn (E. E. T. S.), p. 2.

The fiend . . . like a proud stead rein'd, went haughtily on, Champing his iron curb. Milton, P. L., iv. 555.

steadless (stēd'les), a. [< stead + -less.] Having no steeds or horses. Whittier, The Norsemen.

steedyokest, n. pl. Reins; thongs. [Rare.]

Sorrowful Hector . . .

Harried in steedyokes as of earst.

Stanhurst, Æneid, ii.

steek (stēk), v. [Also steik; obs. or dial. (Sc.) form of stitch.] 1. trans. To pierce with a sharp-pointed instrument; stitch or sew with a needle.—2. To close or shut: as, to steek one's eyes. Burns. [Obsolete or Scotch in both uses.]

But doors were steek'd, and windows bat'd,

And none wad let him in.

Wattie and May Margaret (Child's Ballads, II. 172).

II. *intrans. To close; shut.

It es called cloyster for it cloyes and steekys, and waroly sall be lokked. Religious Pieces (E. E. T. S.), p. 50.

steek (stēk), n. [Also steik; a dial. (Sc.) form of stitch.] The act of stitching with a needle; a stitch. [Scotch.]

steel (stēl), n. and a. [*< ME. steel, stel, stiel, stīl, < AS. stēle, stīle, earliest forms stēh, stēh = MD. stal, D. stal = MLG. stāl, LG. stal = OHG. stahh, stāl, MHG. stahel, stachel, stāl, G. stahl = Icel. stāl = Sw. stål = Dan. stål = Goth. *stahla = OPruss. stakla, steel; root unknown.*]

The words gold and silver also have no L. or Gr. or other cognate terms outside of Teut. and Slavic.] 1. n. 1. A modified form of iron, not occurring in nature, but known and manufactured from very early times, and at the present time of the highest importance in its various applications to the wants of man. For certain purposes, and especially for the manufacture of tools and weapons, there is no metal or metallic alloy which could take the place of steel. The most essential features of steel as compared with iron are elasticity and hardness, and these qualities can be varied in amount to a very extraordinary degree, in the same piece of steel, by slight changes in the manipulation. Steel can be hardened so as to cut glass, by rapid cooling after being strongly heated, and it can be tempered, by reheating after hardening, so as permanently to take the precise degree of hardness best adapted to the use to which it is to be applied. (See temper.) Steel has been known from very early times, but where and how first manufactured is not known. That it has long been in use in India, and that it is still manufactured in that country by methods precisely similar to those in use long ago are well-known facts. (See woot.) It is thought by some to have been known to the pyramid-builders; but this has not yet been demonstrated, and the same is true of the ancient Semites. The words translated 'steel' in the authorized version of the Old Testament signify 'copper' or 'bronze,' and are usually rendered 'brass,' 'brazen.' That steel was clearly recognized as something distinct from iron by the author or authors of the Homeric poems cannot be proved. The earliest known and simplest method of reducing iron from its ore—the so-called "direct process"—is capable also of furnishing steel, although a sufficiently homogeneous product cannot be easily obtained by this method. This would explain how steel became known at an early period, and why it was so long before it became an article of general use, with well-established methods of manufacture. Steel is a form of iron in which the amount of carbon is intermediate between that in wrought-iron and that in cast-iron, and this carbon does not exist in the steel in the form of graphite, but is either combined with or dissolved in it; but the subject of the relation of carbon to iron is one of difficulty, and is now undergoing investigation at the hands of various skilled metallurgical chemists. Other ingredients besides carbon are also present in steel—namely, silicon, manganese, sulphur, and phosphorus. Of these the two first mentioned are probably never entirely wanting, and they are not especially undesirable or injurious, as is the case with the two others, of which only traces can be permitted in the best quality of steel. They are all, however, different from carbon, which latter is regarded as an essential element of steel, while the others may be looked upon as being more or less of the nature of impurities. The quality of steel varies with the amount of carbon present, and the effect of this latter element varies with the amount of impurity (silicon, etc.) present in the steel. The larger the amount of impurity, the larger is the quantity of carbon required to give to the iron the character of steel. In the case of the best bar-iron, a little over 0.3 per cent. of carbon is sufficient to give it a steely character; from 0.5 to 0.65 per cent. of carbon, according to the purity of the iron, gives a steel which can be hardened so as to strike fire with flint. Iron containing from 1 to 1.5 per cent. of carbon gives steel which, after tempering, combines the maximum hardness with the maximum tenacity. One per cent. of carbon gives, on the whole, the most generally useful steel. With more than 1.5 per cent. of carbon the tenacity and weldability of the steel are diminished, although the hardness may be increased. With more than 1.74 per cent. of carbon the steel ceases to be weldable, and is with difficulty drawn out under the hammer; and from 1.8 to 2.0 per cent. is usually considered as the limit between steel and cast-iron, the steel with that amount breaking when hammered after softening by heat. Since steel is intermediate between wrought-iron and cast-iron in the amount of carbon which it contains, it is evident that it might be made either by carburizing the former or decarburizing the latter. The method of carburizing, or cementation as it is generally called, is one of the oldest, perhaps the most ancient, as, although differing greatly in the details, in the essentials it is the same as the process by which the Indian wootz is manufactured. The cementation process was described in detail by Réaumur in a work published in 1723. By this method blister-steel is obtained, and this is further worked up into spring, shear, and double-shear steel by one or more processes of faceting, welding, and hammering or rolling, the object of this being to give the metal greater homogeneity. A great addition to the value of this process was the invention by Huntsman, in 1740, of cast-steel, the product of the fusion in crucibles, under suitable manipulation, of blister steel, which process is still in use as first arranged almost without change. By this method, when iron of a sufficiently high grade is used, the finest quality of steel is produced, and it is only steel manufactured in this way which can be used for the best tools, weapons, and cutting instruments of all kinds. The methods of producing steel by the decarburization of pig-iron are numerous and varied. The Styrian method of decarburization in the open-hearth finery, whereby a material called raw steel is produced, was once of very considerable importance, but is now little used. The method of decarburizing pig-iron by puddling, which is similar in principle to the ordinary puddling process used for converting pig-iron into wrought-iron, is also somewhat extensively employed, especially on the continent of Europe, the product being called puddled steel, this being drawn into bars, which are cut up and reworked, as is done with blister-steel in manufacturing cast-steel. There are various methods for producing steel by fusing pig-iron with iron ores, or with wrought-iron, or with both together. The Uchatius process belongs to this class of processes, but is of comparatively small importance; but the processes known as the "Siemens," the "Martin," and the "Siemens-Martin" are extensively employed. The steel made by any of these processes is generally called open-hearth steel, as the work of decarburizing the pig is done in the open-hearth regenerative furnace. The difference between these processes is simply that in the first-named the pig-iron is treated with certain iron ores without the addition of wrought-iron (scrap-iron); in the second the pig is melted with scrap-iron; and in the third both scrap and ore are used together; hence the names by which the first two of these modifications of what is essentially the same process are known—pig-and-ore, pig-and-scrap—the third, or the "Siemens-Martin," being the most commonly employed. By far the most important of all steel producing processes, if only the amount of the metal produced is considered, is the "pneumatic" or "Bessemer" process, invented by Sir Henry Bessemer about 1856, which consists in blowing air through molten pig-iron in a "converter," or vessel of iron lined with a refractory material—the oxidation of the carbon and silicon which the pig contains, together with a small part of the iron itself, furnishing sufficient heat to keep the material in a fluid state while the operation of decarburization goes on. After complete decarburization of the iron, a certain amount of carbon is restored to the metal by the introduction of spiegeleisen or ferromanganese; this extremely important addition to the Bessemer process, without which it would hardly have been a success, was contributed by R. F. Mushet. The Bessemer process, as conducted in a converter lined with the ordinary silicious or "acid" material, is suited only for working iron which is practically free from phosphorus and sulphur, or such as is made from ore like that of Lake Superior, from which all, or nearly all, the Bessemer steel made in the United States is manufactured. By the so-called "basic" or "Thomas-Gilchrist" process, the converter having a basic (calcined dolomite) lining, iron containing a considerable amount of phosphorus is treated, and a fair quality of steel produced, the phosphorus passing into the slag during the operation, as is the case in puddling. The metal produced by the Bessemer process is generally called Bessemer steel, but some consider it more correct to call it ingot-iron. It can be produced of various grades by varying the amount of carbon which it contains, and is a material of the highest value for structural purposes—as being cheaper, and having more durability, than wrought-iron made by puddling—although of no value for the purposes for which the older higher-class steels are employed. Its principal use is for rails, and during the past few years from seventy to eighty per cent. of the Bessemer steel made in the United States has been used for that purpose.

Gold, ne scolver, ne iren, ne stel. Ancren Rithel, p. 160.

A single span of the Forth Bridge is nearly as long as two Eiffel Towers turned horizontally and tied together in the middle, and the whole forms a complicated steel structure weighing 15,000 tons, erected without the possibility of any intermediate support, the lace-like fabric of the bridge soaring as high as the top of St. Paul's. The steel of which the compression members of the structure are composed contains  $\frac{1}{2}\%$  of carbon and  $\frac{1}{8}\%$  of manganese. The parts subjected to extension do not contain more than  $\frac{1}{10}\%$  of carbon. W. C. Roberts-Austen, Nature, XLII. 36.

2. Something made of steel. Specifically—(a) A cutting or piercing weapon; especially, a sword. Compare cold steel, below.

Shall I Sir Pandarus of Troy become,

And by my side wear steel?

Shak., M. W. of W., i. 3. 83.

(b) A piece of steel for striking sparks from flint to ignite tinder or match. (c) A mirror.

We spake of armour,

She straight replies, Send in your steel combs, with

The steel you see your faces in.

Cartwright's Lady Errant (1651). (Nares.)

(d) A cylindrical or slightly tapering rod of steel, sometimes having fine parallel longitudinal lines, used for sharpening carving-knives, etc. (e) A strip of steel used to stiffen a corset, or to expand a woman's skirt.—Berard steel, steel made by adding hydrogen gas to the air-blast in the Bessemer process, to remove arsenic, sulphur, and phosphorus.—Bessemer steel, steel made by the Bessemer process. See def. 1.—Blistered steel. Same as blister-steel.—Carbon steel, ordinary steel; not "special steel," but steel in which carbon is clearly the element which gives the iron those peculiar properties which justify its designation by the term steel.—Chrome steel, steel alloyed with a small amount of chromium. Various alloys called by the name of chrome or chromium steel have been introduced, but none have come into general use. They are said to be hard and malleable, and to possess great strength, but to oxidize on exposure more readily than ordinary steel.—Cold-rolled steel, steel to which, after it is rolled hot to approximately the required thickness, a very smooth surface and a very accurately gauged thickness are imparted by first chemically cleaning the surface and then rolling it cold between smooth surface rollers.—Cold steel, a cutting and thrusting weapon; a weapon or weapons for close quarters, as distinguished from firearms.—Compressed steel, steel which is made more dense, tenacious, and free from blow-holes by being condensed by pressure while in a fluid state. This pressure is produced in various ways, as by hydraulic machinery, by steam, by centrifugal force, by the use of liquefied carbonic acid, etc.—Crinoline-steels. See crinoline.—Crucible steel. Same as cast-steel.—Damask steel. See damask.—Garb of steel. See garb.—German steel, steel from Germany. The phrase has now no definite meaning other than geographical. It formerly meant steel made in the finery from spathic ore.—Homogeneous steel. Same as cast-steel.—Indian steel. Same as wootz.—Manganese steel, a variety of special steel made by the addition of manganese, which element is present in various manganese steels which have been analyzed in quantity ranging from less than 1 per cent. to over 21 per cent. The qualities vary greatly with its composition.—Mask of steel. See mask.—Mild steel, steel containing a small amount of carbon (Bessemer steel is frequently so designated); a metal which has some of the qualities of steel, but does not admit of being tempered, or only imperfectly so. See def. 1.—Native steel, the name sometimes given to small masses or buttons of steel, steely iron, or iron which has occasionally been formed by the ignition of coal-seams adjacent to deposits of iron ore.—Nickel steel, a variety of special steel recently introduced, and thought by some to surpass the best carbon steel in certain important respects. It has not yet been sufficiently tried to justify a decided statement as to its value. The high price of nickel, and the small likelihood of any considerable reduction in the price of this metal, would seem to bear heavily against the chances of the general introduction of an alloy of which it should form any considerable part.—Run steel, a trademark name (in England) of various small articles, such as bridle-bits and stirrups, made of cast-iron which has been to a certain extent rendered malleable by partial decarburization by cementation. The method is one which has been long known, but which has not come into extensive use till comparatively modern times. Also called malleable cast-iron.—Silicon steel, a variety of special steel which has been experimented with to some extent, but which has not yet become of importance.—Special steel, steel in which the element which gives the iron its peculiar qualities, or what distinguishes it from iron, is not carbon, but some other substance. The principal special steels are chrome, manganese, nickel, silicon, titanium, and tungsten steels, all of which have been much experimented with in recent years. While some authorities appear to maintain that the carbon in special steels is so overpowered by the special element used that its effects are entirely neutralized, others believe that some carbon is absolutely necessary that iron may become converted into what can properly be called steel.—Styrian special steel, steel from Styria; steel made by the Styrian process, which closely resembles the Styrian process of making malleable iron in the finery.—Tungsten steel, a variety of special steel, now largely employed in the manufacture of the harder grades of crucible steel. "Mushet's," "special," "imperial," and "crescent-hardened" are brands of tungsten steel now sold in the American markets. Steel may contain a much larger proportion of tungsten than it can of carbon without losing its power of being forged. In a table of thirteen analyses of tungsten steel given by H. M. Howe in his "Metallurgy of Steel" (1891), the tungsten ranges from 1.94 to 11.03 per cent.; the carbon, from 0.38 to 2.15; the manganese, from a trace to 2.66; the silicon, from .05 to .82. Tungsten steel is exceedingly hard and very brittle; it is used chiefly for the tools of lathes and planers designed for heavy work.

II. *a. 1. Made of steel: as, a steel plate or buckle.

The average strength [of the Bessemer steel used in building the Forth Bridge] is one-half greater than that of the best wrought iron, and the ductility of the steel plates is fully three times that of corresponding iron plates. Sir John Fowler and Benjamin Baker, Nineteenth Century, July, 1859, p. 39.

2. Hard as steel; inflexible; unyielding.

Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's ward.

Shak., Sonnets, cxxxiii.

Smart as a steel trap. See smart.—Steel bonnet, a head-piece made of a Scotch bonnet lined with steel, as with a skeleton cap. Compare secret, b.—Steel bronze.

See bronze, 1.—Steel hat. Same as chapel-de-fer.—Steel rail. See rail.—Steel saddle, the saddle of the man-at-arms in the middle ages, having the bow and sometimes the pommel guarded with steel.—Steel toys, among manufacturers, small articles, such as corkscrews, buckles, button-hooks, and boot-hooks, when made of polished steel.—Steel trap. See trap.

steel (stēl), v. t. [*< ME. stelen, stilen, < AS. *stylan (= D. stalen = MLG. stalen, stelen = G. stählen = Ice. stæla)*, make hard like steel; from the noun.] 1. To fit with steel, as by pointing, edging, overlaying, electroplating, or the like.

Believe her not, her glass diffuses False portraiture; . . .
Her crystal 's falsely steel'd; it scatters Deceitful beams; believe her not, she flatters.
Quarles, Emblems, II. 6.

Give me my steeld coat. I'll fight for France.
Away with these disgraceful wailing robes!
Shak., I Hen. VI., i. 1. 85.

2. To iron (clothes). Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]
—3. To make hard as steel; render strong, rigid, inflexible, determined, etc.; make firm or stubborn.

Thy resolution would steel a coward.
Beau and Fl., Little French Lawyer, I. 2
Ximenes's heart had been steeld by too stern a discipline to be moved by the fascinations of pleasure.
Prescott, I. 101, and Isa, II. 5.

4. To cause to resemble steel in smoothness or polish.

To! these waters steeld
By breezeless air to smoothest polish.
Wordsworth, Sonnets Dedicated to Liberty, II. 5.

steel<sup>2</sup>, n. An obsolete form of stal<sup>2</sup>, stalc<sup>2</sup>.
steel-blue (stēl'blō), a. and n. I. a. Of a lustrous dark-bluish color, resembling steel tempered blue.

II. n. A lustrous dark-bluish color; a darker shade than Berlin blue and less chromatic, but nearly of the same hue. See blue.

steel-bow (stēl'bow), a. [Origin and distinctive sense obscure.] See the phrase: Steel-bow goods, in Scots law, corn, cattle, straw and implements of husbandry, delivered by the landlord to his tenant by means of which the tenant is enabled to stock and labor the farm, and in consideration of which he becomes bound to return articles equal in quantity and quality at the expiration of the lease.

steelboy (stēl'boy), n. [Prob. < steel in the phrase "hearts of steel," used by the insurgents in a remonstrance entitled "Petition of the Hearts of Steel" (Record Office, London).] A member of a band of insurgents in Ulster, Ireland, who committed various agrarian and other outrages about 1772-4. Lecky, Eng. in 18th Cent., xvi.

steel-clad (stēl'klad), a. Clothed in armor of steel.

steellent, a. [*< ML. stelen, < AS. stylan (= D. stalen, stelen), < styla, *stela, steel; see steel and -en.*] Of steel; made of steel.

The stelen brand. Tamam, I. 7634.

steel-engraving (stēl'en-grā'ving), n. 1. The art of engraving on steel plates for the purpose of producing prints or impressions in ink on paper and other substances.—2. The design engraved on the steel plate.—3. An impression or print taken from the engraved steel plate.

steel-finch (stēl'finch), n. A book-name of the small finch-like birds of the genus Hypocharya.

steelhead (stēl'hed), n. 1. The ruddy duck, Ereismatura rubra; so called from the steel-blue of the head, or perhaps for the same reason that it is called hardhead, hackory-head, and toughhead. See cut under Ereismatura. [Maryland.]—2. The rainbow-trout, Salmo irideus. See cut under rainbow-trout. [Local, U. S.] steel-head (stēl'hed), a. Tipped with steel. Spenser, F. Q., III. ix. 16.

steelification (stēl'i-fī-kā'shon), n. The process of converting iron into steel. Jour. Franklin Inst., CXXV. 304.

steelify (stēl'i-fi), v. t.; pret. and pp. steelified, pp. steelifying. [< steel + -ify.] To convert into steel. Jour. Franklin Inst., CXXV. 304.

steeliness (stēl'i-nes), n. The state or character of being steely.

steeling (stēl'ing), n. [Verbal n. of steel 1.] 1. The process of welding a piece of steel on that part of a cutting-instrument which is to receive the edge.—2. The process of depositing a film of iron on engraved copperplates. The plates are placed in a bath of sulphate of iron and ammonium chloride, a plate of iron submerged in the solution being connected to the copper pole of the battery and the engraved copperplate to the zinc pole. From such steeld plates from 5,000 to 15,000 impressions can be taken. The same method has been successfully applied to stereotype plates.

steelmaster (stēl'mās'tēr), n. A manufacturer of steel. The Engineer, LXIX. 343.

steel-mill (stēl'mil), n. A contrivance for giving light, in use previous to the invention of the safety-lamp, in English coal-mines infested with fire-damp. It consisted of a disk of steel which was made to revolve rapidly, a flint being held against it from which a shower of sparks was given off and a feeble light furnished. This method of obtaining light was for a time quite popular.

steel-ore (stēl'ōr), n. A name given to various iron ores, and especially to spathic iron (siderite), because that ore was supposed to be particularly well adapted for making steel. Much of the so-called German steel was in fact formerly made from that ore.

steel-press (stēl'pres), n. A special form of press designed for compressing molten steel to form sound and dense castings.

steel-saw (stēl'sā), n. A disk of soft iron, revolving with great rapidity, used for cutting cold steel.

steelware (stēl'wār), n. Articles, collectively, made of steel. The Engineer, LXVIII. 642.

steelwork (stēl'wērk), n. Steel articles or objects, or such parts of any work as are made of steel. The Engineer, LXIX. 191.

steel-worker (stēl'wēr'kēr), n. One who works in steel.

steel-works (stēl'wēks), n. pl. or sing. A furnace or other establishment where iron is converted into steel. The Engineer, LXV. 38.

steely (stē'li), a. [< steel + -y.] 1. Consisting of steel; made of steel.

Full fill (we know, & every man may see)
A steely helme & Cardinals cap agree.
Times' Whistle (L. E. T. S.), p. 120.

A steely hammer crushes em to pieces.
Ford, Perkin Warbeck, I. 1.

2. Resembling steel in some of its essential properties; hard; firm; stubborn.

When hee can beat it [Truth] off with most steely prowess, he thinks himself the bravest man; when in truth it is nothing but evanguine feeble exility of Spirit.
N. Ward, Simple Coder, p. 71.

That steely heart [of Judas] yet relents not.
Ep. Hall, Contemplations, IV. 27.

3. Resembling steel in color, metallie luster, or general appearance; having more or less imperfectly the qualities or composition of steel; as, steely iron.

The beating of the steely sea.
W. Morris, Earthly Paradise, Apology.

Steely iron, a mixture of iron and steel; imperfect steel. Elston and Huntington, Metals, p. 103.

Steelyard<sup>1</sup> (stēl'yārd, colloq. stil'yārd), n. [Early mod. E. also Stilyard, Stillyard, Stechard, Stehard, Stilyard, and as two words Steel yard, Stel yard (also Steel house, Stel house); explained as orig. "the yard in London where steel was sold by German merchants," as if < steel + yard; but in fact an imperfect translation of the MD. stalhof, later stalhof, = MLG. stalhof, an office or hall where cloth was marked with a leaden seal as being properly dyed, < MD. stal, a specimen, sample, test of dyeing, D. stal, a sample, = MLG. stal, LG. stal, > G. dial. stahl, a sample, pattern (hence MD. stalen = MLG. stalen, mark cloth with a leaden seal as being properly dyed) (connected with MD. stalen, stallen = MLG. stallen (OF. estaler, etaler), expose for sale on a stall, display or show on a stall, < MD. stal, etc., a stall; see stall), + hof, yard, court; see hovel. The notion that the MD. stalhof is a contraction of *stapthof (which, moreover, does not occur; cf. stapelhuys, E. staple-house) is untenable.] A place in London, comprising great warehouses called before the reign of Edward IV. Gildhalla Teutonico-rum, 'Gildhall of the Germans,' where, until expelled in 1597, the merchants of the Hanseatic League had their English headquarters; also the company of merchants themselves. The merchants of the Steelyard were bound by almost monastic gild rules, under a separate jurisdiction from the rest of London, were exempt from many exactions and restrictions, and for centuries controlled most of the foreign trade of England.

This yere corn was yere dere, & had ben dearer if merchants of y<sup>e</sup> steyllard had not ben & Dutche shippes restrained & an abstinence of warre betwene Englande & Flaunders.
Talman, Chron., an. 1528-9.

From him come I to entreat you . . . to meet him this afternoon at the Rheulsh wine-house 't' the Stillyard.
Webster, Westward Ho, II. 1.

steelyard<sup>2</sup> (stēl'yārd or stil'yārd), n. [Early mod. E. stilyard, stillyard, stilliard; appar. lit. "a rod of steel," < steel + yard; but prob. an altered form, due to popular etymology, of the equiv. early mod. E. stelleere, supposed to stand for stiller or **steller* (= G. steller, regulator): see stiller<sup>1</sup>. The word seems to have been confused with Steelyard<sup>1</sup>, and is generally explained, without evidence, as orig. the balance or weight used by the merchants of the Steelyard.] A kind of balance with two unequal arms, consisting of a lever in the form of a slender iron bar with a, rectangular bar, graduated both above and below; b, adjustable counterpoising weight; c, hook for supporting articles to be weighed (this can be turned easily over the end of the bar at c; d and d', hooks for support of the steelyard, according as one or other of the graduations is turned to the upper side for use in weighing.

Steelyard.

one arm very short, the other divided by equidistant notches, having a small crosspiece as fulcrum, to which a bearing for suspension is attached, usually a hook at the short end, and a weight moving upon the long arm. It is very portable, without liability to become separated, and the process of weighing is very expeditious. It is much used for cheap commodities, but owing to its simple construction it is liable to be so made as to give false indications. Often used in the plural. Also called Roman balance or beam. Compare Danish balance (sometimes called Danish steelyard), under balance.

Crochet, a small hook. . . . A Romane beame or stelleere, a beame of yron or wood, full of nicks or notches, along which a certayne peize of lead, &c., playing, and at length settling towards the one end, shewes the just weight of a commodity hanging by a hooke at the other end.

Cotgrave.

A pair of steelyards and a wooden sword.
Halleck, Fanny.

steemt, n. An old form of steam. Prompt. Parv.
steen<sup>1</sup> (stēn), v. t. [Also stean, Se. stein; < ME. stenen, east stones, < AS. stēnan (= OHG. steinōn = Goth. stainjan), stone, < stān, stone; see stone, n. Cf. stone, v., of which steen<sup>1</sup> is a doublet.] 1. To stone; pelt with stones.

Te stones thet me [men] stenede him mldē.
Aneren Rieck, p. 122.

2. To fit with stones; mend, line, pave, etc., with stones. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch in both senses.] steen<sup>2</sup> (stēn), n. [Also stean; a dial. var. of stone, due to the verb steen<sup>1</sup>.] A stone. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.] steen<sup>3</sup> (stēn), n. [Also stean, stein; < ME. steene, stone, a stone jar, < AS. stāna (= OHG. steinna), a stone crock (cf. stānen, of stone; see stonen). < stān, stone; see stone.] 1. A kind of jar or urn of baked clay or of stone, of the general type of the sepulchral urns of the Romans. Jour. Brit. Archaeol. Ass., XXXV. 105.

Neuerthelatre ther weren not maad of the same monce the stene (by drive, Vulgate) of the temple of the Lord.
Wyclif, 4 Ki. [2 Ki.] xli. 13.

Upon an huge great Earth-pot steane he stood.
Spenser, F. Q., VII. vii. 42.

2. A large box of stones used for pressing cheese in making it. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.] steenbok (stān' or stēn'bok), n. [< D. steenbok = G. steinbock, the wild goat, < D. steen, = G. stein = E. stone, + D. bok = G. bock = E. buck; see stone and buck<sup>1</sup>.] One of several small African antelopes of the genus Nanotragus, fond of rocky places (whence the name). The common steenbok is N. tragulus, generally distributed in South Africa, about 3 feet long and 20 inches tall, with straight horns about 4 inches long in the male, none in the female.

Steenbok (Nanotragus tragulus).

steenbok

large ears, and no false hoofs. It is of a general reddish-brown color, white below. The gray steenbok is N. melanois. N. orcotragus is the klip-springer (which see, with cut). Also steenbok, steinbock. Compare steinbock and stonebuck.

steening (stē'ning), n. [Also steaning; verbal n. of steen<sup>1</sup>, v.] 1. Any kind of path or road paved with small round stones. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]-2. In arch., the brick or stone wall or lining of a well or cesspool, the use of which is to prevent the irruption of the surrounding soil. Also steining.

steenkirk (stēn'kōrk), n. [Also, less prop., stein-kirk; so called in allusion to the battle fought in 1692 near Stein-kerke, F. Steinkerque (lit. 'stone church'), a town in Belgium.] A name brought into fashion, after the battle of Steenkirk, for several articles, especially of dress, as wigs, buckles, large neckties, and powder; especially, a cravat of fine lace, loosely and negligently knotted, with long hanging ends, one of which was often passed through a buttonhole.

Mrs. Calico. I hope your Lordship is pleased with your Steenkirk.
Lord F. In love with it, stay my vitals! Bring your Bill; you shall be paid to-morrow. Fairbrough, The Relapse, i. 3.

I had yielded up my cravat (a smart Steenkirk, by the way, and richly laced). Scott, Rob Roy, xxi.

Ladies also wore them [neckcloths], as in "The Cateless Husband" Lady Easy takes her Steenkirk from her Neck and lays it gently over his Head.

Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, i. 148.

steenstrup (stēn'strup-in), n. [Named after K. J. V. Steenstrup, a Danish naturalist.] A rare mineral occurring in massive forms and rhombohedral crystals of a brown color in the sodalite-syenite of Greenland. It is a silicate of the rare metals of the cerium group, also thorium, and other elements.

steep<sup>1</sup> (stēp), a. and n. [ME. stepe, step, stēp, steap, < AS. stāp, steap, steap, stēp, = OFries. stāp, steep; cf. Icel. steypthr, steep, lofty; Norw. stup, a steep cliff; akin to stoop: see stoop<sup>1</sup>, and cf. steep<sup>2</sup>, steep<sup>3</sup>.] I. a. 1. Having an almost perpendicular slope; precipitous; sheer.

Two of these hands are steep and upright as any wall, that it is not possible to climb them.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 748.
Thus far our ascent was easy; but now it began to grow more steep, and difficult.

Maunder, Alcippo to Jerusalem, p. 119.
2t. Elevated; high; lofty.

To a room they came,
Step and of state. Chapman. (Imp. Dict.)

3. Excessive; difficult; forbidding; as, a steep undertaking; a steep price. [Colloq.]

Perhaps if we should meet Shakespeare we should not be conscious of any steep inferiority.

Emerson, Essays, 1st ser., p. 302.
Neither priest nor squire was able to establish any steep difference in outward advantages between himself and the commons among whom he lived. Proude, Sketches, p. 164.

4t. Bright; glittering; fiery.
His eyes steep and rollynge in his heede.
Chaucer, Gen. Prolog. to C. T., l. 201.

His eye [eyes] leuenaund with light as a low fyn,
With strems [gleams] full stithe in his stepe loke.
Destruction of Troy (L. E. T. S.), l. 7724.

II. n. A steep or precipitous place; an abrupt ascent or descent; a precipice.

Suddenly a splendor like the morn Pervaded all the beelling gloomy steeps.

Keats, Hyperion, ii.
Yet up the radiant steeps that I survey Death never climbed. Bryant, To the Apennines.

steep<sup>2</sup> (stēp), v. [ME. stēpen, < Icel. steypa, cast down, overturn, pour out, cast (metals), refl. tumble down, = Sw. stōpa = Dan. stōbe, cast (metals), steep (corn); causal of Icel. stīpa = Sw. stupa, fall, stoop; see stoop<sup>1</sup>, and cf. steep<sup>1</sup>.] I. trans. 1. To tilt (a barrel). Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]-2. To soak in a liquid; macerate: as, to steep barley; to steep herbs.

A day afore her [almonds'] settling, hem to stepe
In meeth is good.

Palladius, Husbandrie (L. E. T. S.), p. 54.
The Gordons good, in English blood
They steep'd their hose and shoon.

Battle of Otterbourne (Child's Ballads, VII. 24).
The prudent Sibyl had before prepared
A sop in honey steeped to charm the guard.

Dryden, Æneid, vi. 567.
3. To bathe with a liquid; wet; moisten.

Then she with liquors strong his eyes did steep,
That nothing should him hastily awake.

Spenser, F. Q., II. vi. 12.
His coursers, steep'd in sweat and stain'd with gore,
The Greeks' preserver, great Machaon, bore.

Pope, Iliad, xl. 723.
4. To imbue or impregnate as with a specified influence; cause to become permeated or pervaded (with): followed by in.

5925

Is this a time to steep
Thy brains in wasteful slumbers?

Charles, Emblems, i. 7.
Thou art so steep'd in misery,
Surely 'twere better not to be.

Tennyson, The Two Voices.
The habitual criminal, steeped in vice and used to ignominy, cares very little for disgrace, and accepts punishment as an incident in his career.

Bibliotheca Sacra, XLVII. 594.
II. intrans. To be bathed in a liquid; soak.

And now the midnight draught of sleep,
Where wine and spices richly steep,
In massive bowl of silver deep,
The page presents on knee.

Scott, Marmion, i. 30.
steep<sup>2</sup> (stēp), n. [ME. steep<sup>2</sup>, v.] 1. The process of steeping; the state of being steeped, soaked, or permeated: used chiefly in the phrase in steep.

Strait to each house she hasted, and sweet steep
Pour'd on each wooer; which so laid in steep
Their drowsie temples that each brow did nod.

Chapman, Odyssey, ii. 578.
Whilst the barley is in steep it is gauged by the excise officers, to prevent fraud.

Encyc. Brit., IV. 267.
2. That in which anything is steeped; specifically, a fertilizing liquid in which seeds are soaked to quicken germination.

When taken from the white bath, the skins, after washing in water, are allowed to ferment in a bran steep for some time in order to extract a considerable portion of the alum and salt.

C. T. Davis, Leather, p. 665.
3. Rennet: so called from being steeped before it is used. [Prov. Eng.]-Rot's steep, in bleaching cotton goods, the process of thoroughly saturating the cloth. The name is due to the former practice of allowing the flour or size with which the goods were impregnated to ferment and putrefy. Also called wetting-out steep.

steep-down (stēp'doun), a. Having a sheer descent; precipitous.

Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!
Shak, Othello, v. 2. 280.

You see him till into the steep-down West
He throws his course. J. Beaumont, Psyche, iii. 14.

steepen (stēp'n), v. i. [ME. steep<sup>1</sup> + -en<sup>1</sup>.] To become steep.

As the way steepened, . . . I could detect in the hollow of the hill some traces of the old path.

Hugh Miller. (Imp. Dict.)
steeper (stēp'pēr), n. [ME. steep<sup>2</sup> + -er<sup>1</sup>.] A vessel, vat, or cistern in which things are steeped; specifically, a vat in which the indigo-plant is steeped to macerate it before it is soaked in the beating-vat.

steepful (stēp'ful), a. [ME. steep<sup>1</sup> + -ful.] Steep; precipitous.

Anon he stalks about a steepful Rock,
Where som, to shun Death's (never shunned) stroak, Had clambred vp.

Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, ii., The Vocation.
steep-grass (stēp'grās), n. The butterwort, Pinguicula vulgaris; so called because used like rennet. Also steepweed, steepwort. Britten and Holland, Eng. Plant Names.

steepiness (stēp'i-nēs), n. The state or quality of being steepy or steep; steepness. [Rare.]

The craginess and steepiness of places up and down . . . makes them inaccessible. Howell, Korndine Travell, p. 132.

steep (stēp'pl), n. [ME. steple, steple, stepyll, stepul, < AS. stēpel, stīpel, a steep, < stēp, steep, high: see steep<sup>1</sup>.] 1. A typically lofty structure attached to a church, town-house, or other public edifice, and generally intended to contain the bells of such edifice. Steep is a general term applied to every secondary structure of this description, whether in the form of a simple tower, or, as is usual, of a tower surmounted by a spire.

Ydeleblisse is the grete wynd that thranth down the grete toures and the hege steples and the grete beches fine wodes thranth to ground.

Ayenbite of Inweyt (L. E. T. S.), p. 23.
Lord. What does he ith middle looke like?
Aslo. Troth, like a spire steep in a 'Country Village ouer-peering so many thatcht houses.

Dekker and Middleton, Honest Whore, ii. 1.
At Paris all steeples are claugouring not for sermon.

Carlyle, French Rev., III. i. 4.
2. A lofty head-dress worn by women in the fourteenth century. See hennin.

Some of the more popular of these strange varieties of head-gear have been distinguished as the "horned," the "mitre," the "steep,"—in France known as the "hennin"—and the "butterfly." Encyc. Brit., VI. 469.

3. A pyramidal pile or stack of fish set to dry. Also called pack. See the quotation under pack<sup>1</sup>, 10 (b).

steepbush (stēp'pl-būsh), n. The hardhack; also, Spiraea salicifolia. See Spiraea.

steepchase (stēp'pl-chās), n. A horse-race across a tract of country in which ditches, ## steeply

hedges, and other obstacles must be jumped as they come in the way. The name is supposed to be originally due to any conspicuous object, such as a church-steeple, having been chosen as a goal, toward which those taking part in the race were allowed to take any course they chose. The limits of the steepchase-course are now marked out by flags.

steepchaser (stēp'pl-chā'sēr), n. 1. One who rides in steepchases.—2. A horse running or trained to run in a steepchase.

"If you do not like hunting, you are to affect to," says Mamma. "You must listen to Captain Breakneck's stories at dinner, laugh in the right places, and ask intelligent questions about his steepchasers."

Nineteenth Century, XXVI. 780.
steepchasing (stēp'pl-chā'sing), n. [ME. steepchase + -ing.] The act or sport of riding in a steepchase.

steep-crown† (stēp'pl-kroun), n. A steep-crowned hat.

And on their heads old steep-crowns.
Ludibras Redivivus (1706). (Nares.)

steep-crowned (stēp'pl-kround), a. Having a high peaked crown resembling a steeple: noting various articles of head-gear.

The women wearing the old country steep-crowned hat and simply made gowns.

Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, II. 138.
steepled (stēp'pld), a. [ME. steep + -ed<sup>2</sup>.] 1. Furnished or adorned with a steeple or steeples.

As we neared the provincial city [Worcester], we saw the steepled mass of the cathedral, long and high, rise far into the cloud-freckled blue. H. James, Jr., Pass. Pilgrim, p. 44.

2. Having the form of a steeple; peaked; towering.

Steepled hattes.
Wright, Passions of the Mind (ed. 1621), p. 330. (Halliwel.)

A steepled turbant on her head she wore. Fairfax.

steep-engine (stēp'pl-en'jin), n. 1. A form of marine steam-engine used on side-wheel boats, in which the working-beam is the highest part, and the connecting-rod is above the crank-shaft.—2. A direct-acting engine in which the crank-shaft is located between the cylinder and the sliding-block or cross-head, the piston-rod is connected with the latter by two branches or limbs which straddle the crank-shaft and crank, and the connecting-rod or pitman plays between the limbs of the piston-rod. It is used for steam-pumps and donkey-engines, being very compact in form.

steep-fair, n. [Supposed to be a corruption, simulating steep (as if 'a church-fair' or 'kermess'), of **staple-fair*, < staple<sup>2</sup>, market, + fair<sup>2</sup>.] A common fair or mart.

These youths, in art, purse, and attire most bare,
Give their attendance at each steep-faire;
Being once hir'd he'll not displease his lord.

Taylor, Works (1630). (Nares.)
steep-hat (stēp'pl-hat), n. A steep-crowned hat.

An old doublet and a steep hat. Crowning, Strafford.

steep-house† (stēp'pl-hous), n. A church edifice: so called by the early members of the Society of Friends, who maintained that the word church applies properly only to the body of believers.

The reason why I would not go into their steep-house was because I was to bear my testimony against it, and to bring all off from such places to the Spirit of God, that they might know their bodies to be the temples of the Holy Ghost.

George Fox, Journal (Phila.), p. 167.
There are steep-houses on every hand,
And pulpits that bless and ban;
And the Lord will not grudge the single church
That is set apart for man.

Whittier, The Old South.
steep-hunting (stēp'pl-hun'ting), n. Same as steepchasing. Carlyle, Sterling, v.

steep-jack (stēp'pl-jak), n. A man who climbs steeples and tall chimneys to make repairs, or to erect scaffolding.

A steep-jack of Sheffield . . . met with a shocking accident. St. James's Gazette, May 11, 1887. (Encyc. Dict.) steep-top (stēp'pl-top), n. The bowhead, or great polar whale (Balaena mysticetus): so called from the spout-holes terminating in a sort of cone; a whalers' name. C. M. Scammon.

steepwise (stēp'pl-wiz), adv. In the manner of a steeple; like a steeple.

Thin his haire,
Besides, disorderd and vnkembd, his crowne Picked, made steep-wise; . . . bald he was beside.

Heywood, Dialogues (Works, ed. Pearson, 1874, VI. 120).

steeply (stēp'li), adv. In a steep manner; with steepness; with precipitous declivity: as, a height rising steeply.

At this point it [the highway] steeply overtops the fields on one side.

Howells, Indian Summer, xx.

steepness

steepness (stēp'nəs), n. The state of being steep, in any sense; precipitousness: as, the steepness of a hill or a roof.

steep-to (stēp'tō), a. Abruptly steep; noting a bold shore having a sizable water close in to land. [Colloq.]

The steep-to of the coast is the low lying parts of the coast, the high and precipitous parts are the steep-to.

steep-tub (stēp'tub), n. A tub in which salt beef and salt pork are soaked before cooking.

steep-up (stēp'up), a. Ascending steeply.

steep-water (stēp'wā'tēr), n. Water used in a steep, or suitable for steeping; specifically, a steep for flax.

The most celebrated steep-water in the world is the river Is, which rises in the north of France, and flows through the west of Belgium.

steepweed, steepwort (stēp'wēd, -wört), n. Same as steep-grass.

steepy (stē'pī), a. [steep + -y.] Steep; precipitous.

Ever to rear his crumbling stone upright
Upon the steep mountain's lofty height.
Marston, Satires, v. 7.

steer<sup>1</sup> (stēr), v. [*ME. sterren, steren, stiran, sturen, storen, < AS. stēran, stūran, stīran = OFries. stura, stura = MD. styren, sturen, stīren, < D. sturen, stieren = MLG. stīren, LG. stīren = OHG. stīran, stīran, MLG. stīren, stīren, stīren, direct, control, support, G. steuern, control, steer, pilot, = Icel. stýra = Dan. styre = Sw. styra, steer; cf. Goth. stīran, establish, confirm; partly from the noun, AS. stēor, etc., a rudder (see steer<sup>2</sup>, n.), but in part, as more particularly appears in the Goth., prob. an orig. verb, 'establish' (hence 'direct', 'steer'), connected with OHG. stīra, strong, large; cf. Goth. ustīruba, unbridled, Skt. sthāvara, fixed, stable, etc. The ME. forms are partly confused with the ME. forms of stir.] I. trans. 1. To guide by the movements of a rudder or helm; direct and govern, as a ship on her course.*

The two brothers were abiding both in a shippe
That was stīd with the storme streight out of warden,
But on a Roke, all to peeces.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 3703.

You yourself shall steer the happy helm
Shak., 2 Hen. VI., l. 3. 103.

No more want wittingly
Has steered his keel into this luckless sea.
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, l. 309.

2. To pursue in a specified direction; direct: as, to steer one's way or course.

Then with expanded wings he steers his flight Aloft, incumbent on the dusky air.
Milton, P. L., l. 225.

3. To guide; manage; control; govern.

Eyr so wood, it might nat be stered,
In al the noble town of Honn.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 635.

I have a soul
Is full of grateful duty, nor will suffer me
Further dispute your precept; you have power
To ster me as you please.
Shirley, Bird in a Cage, l. 1.

4. To plan; contrive.

Trewely, my own one lady deere,
Thou sleighte, yet that I have heid you stere,
Full shapely ben to taylor alle yere
Chaucer, Troilus, l. 1451.

5. To lead; conduct; draw: as, a bunko-man steers his victim to a bunko-joint. See bunko-steerer. — Steering balloon. See balloon. — Steering committee, a small body of men, generally members of a legislative body, engaged in directing the course of legislation. [Slang U. S.] — To steer a trick at the wheel, to take one's turn in steering a vessel.

II. intrans. 1. To direct and govern a vessel in its course.

Jason . . . the hote tok,
Stīd over the streame streight to the lond.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 657.

Some of their men were stīrd, the rest all so weake that onely one could he along upon the Helm and stere.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 745.

2. To direct one's course at sea: sail in a specified direction: as, the ship steers southward; he steered for Liverpool.

The Ottomites
Steering . . . towards the isle of Rhodes, Have their injoined them with an after fleet.
Shak., Othello, l. 3. 34.

3. To answer the helm: as, the vessel steers with ease. — 4. Figuratively, to take or pursue a course or way; hence, to direct one's conduct; conduct one's self.

Well born, and wealthy, wanting no support,
You steer betwixt the country and the court.
Dryden, To his kinsman, John Dryden, l. 125.

He relieved her of her burden, and steered along the street by her side, carrying her lashed mutton and potatoes safely home.
Mrs. Gaskell, Cranford, II.

To steer clear of, to keep away from; avoid.

It requires great skill, and a particular felicity, to steer clear of Seylla and Charybdis.
Fævo, Physical Fables, vi., Expl.

To steer roomer. See roomer, adv. — To steer small, to steer with little movement of the helm, and consequently with but slight deviation of the ship's head from the assigned course. — To steer with a small helm, to keep the course accurately, with but slight shifting of the helm in either direction.

steer<sup>1</sup> (stēr), n. [*ME. sterre, stira, ster, stear, < AS. stēor = MD. stūr, stier, D. stūr = MLG. stūr, stūr, LG. stūr = OHG. stīra, f., MHG. stīra, stīra, G. stīra, n., = Icel. stýri = Sw. Dan. stýr, a rudder, a steering-oar, prob. orig. a pole (applied to a steering-oar); cf. Icel. staurr, a post, stake, = Gr. crapēs, a pole, stake, cross (see staurus); see steer<sup>2</sup>, v., and stēor<sup>2</sup>. Hence ult. stern.] 1. A rudder; a helm.*

With a wave [wave] brosten was his stere.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 2116.

2. A helmsman; a pilot.

He that is lord of fortune be thy stere.
Chaucer, Man of Law's Tale, l. 330.

3. A guide; a director; a governor; a ruler.

My lady dere,
Syn God hath wrought me for I shal you serve,
As thus I mene ye wol yet be my stere
To dome lyve, if that you list, or sterve.
Chaucer, Troilus, III. 1201.

Commodity is the steer of all their actions.
Barton, Anat. of Mel., p. 108.

4. Guidance; direction; government; control.

For whanne I my lady here,
My wyl with that hath loste his stere.
Gower, Conf. Amant., l.

To give one a steer, to give one a useful hint; give one a point or tip. [Slang U. S.]

steer<sup>2</sup> (stēr), n. [*ME. steer, ster, stear, < AS. stēor = D. ster = OHG. stīr, MLG. stīr = OHG. stīr, MHG. G. stīr = Icel. stýrr = Goth. stīur, a bull, steer; also without initial s, Icel. stýrr = Sw. tūr = Dan. tūr, a steer; cf. L. taurus (> It. Sp. toro = Pg. toro = E. dim. taurcau), < Gr. ταύρος = Oulg. turū = Bohem. Pol. tur = Russ. turū = W. turic = Ir. Gael. tarbh, a bull, steer; prob. akin to OHG. stīr, stīur, strong, Skt. sthāra, a pack-horse, sthāra, great, large, powerful, sthāra, a man, sthāra, fixed, stable, Gr. crapēs, a pole, stake, etc. (see staurus). Cf. steer<sup>1</sup>, ult. from the same root; cf. also stirk, and Taurus.] A young male of the ox kind; a bullock, especially one which has been castrated and is raised for beef. In the United States the term is extended to male beef-cattle of any age.*

Juvenus is a yonge oxe when he is no lenger a calf, and he is then call'd a steere when he becometh to be helpful unto the profit of man in cringe the erth.
Dialogues of Creatures Moralysed, p. 228. (Itallirell.)

Lacoon . . .
With solemn pomp then sacrificed a steer.
Dryden, Æneid, II. 263.

steer<sup>2</sup> (stēr), v. t. [steer<sup>2</sup>, n.] To make a steer of; castrate (a young bull or bull-calf). [Rare.]

The male calves are steered and converted to beef.
Daily Telegraph, Oct. 18, 1886. (Encyc. Dict.)

steer<sup>3</sup> (stēr), v. and n. An obsolete or dialectal variant of stīr<sup>1</sup>.

What's a' the steer, kimmer?
What's a' the steer?
Charlie he is landed,
An, haith, he'll soon be here.
Jacobite song.

steerable (stēr'ā-bl), a. [steer<sup>1</sup> + -able.] Capable of being steered: as, a steerable balloon.

steerage (stēr'āj), n. [Early mod. E. also steer-idge, sturage; < steer<sup>1</sup> + -age.] 1. The act, practice, or method of steering; guidance; direction; control; specifically, the direction or control of a ship in her course.

By reason of the evil stirrage of the other ship, we had almost boarded each other.
Hakluyt's Voyages, II. 110.

But he that hath the steerage of my course
Direct my sail!
Shak., R. and J., l. 4. 112.

2. That by which a course is steered or directed. [Rare.]

Inscribed to Phæbus, here he hung on high
The steerage [reins] of his wings.
Dryden, Æneid, vi. 24.

3. Naut., the effect of the helm on a ship; the manner in which the ship is affected by the helm: as, she was going nine knots, with easy steerage. — 4. A course steered: a path or way; a course of conduct, or a way of life.

steersman

He bore his steer, true in every part.

led by the compass of a noble heart.

Webster and Bradley, Cure for a Cuckold, l. 2.

Let our Governors beware in time, lest . . . they shipwreck themselves, as others have done before them, in the course wherein God was directing the Steers to a Free Commonwealth.

Milton, Free Commonwealth.

5. A rudder; a helm; apparatus for steering; hence, a place of government or control.

This day the William was hald a ground, because she was somewhat leake, and to mend her stere.
Hakluyt's Voyages, l. 416.

While they who at the steerage stood
And reap'd the profit sought his blood.
Swift, Death of Dr. Swift.

6. The part of a ship where the tiller traverses; the stern.

I was much surprized, and ran into the steeridge to look on the compass.
Dampier, Voyages, an. 1685.

7. In passenger-ships, the part of the ship allotted to the passengers who travel at the cheapest rate, hence called steerage passengers: generally, except in the newest type of passenger-steamers, not in the stern, as might be supposed, but in the bow; in a man-of-war, the part of the berth-deck just forward of the wardroom: it is generally divided into two apartments, one on each side, called the starboard and port steerages, which are assigned to midshipmen, clerks, and others.

It being necessary for me to observe strict economy, I took my passage in the steerage.
Dickens, Martin Chuzzlewit, xvii.

Steerage country (naut.). See country.

steerageway (stēr'āj-wā), n. Naut., that degree of forward movement or headway of a ship which renders her subject to the helm.

steerer (stēr'ēr), n. [steer<sup>1</sup> + -er.] 1. One who or that which steers; a steersman.

And I will be the steerer o' t,
To row you o'er the sea.
Young Dickie (Child's Ballads, IV. 13).

2. In a trieyele, the rod and small wheel by which the machine is turned about and guided: called front steerer or back steerer according to its place on the machine. — 3. In bunko swindling, one who steers or leads his victim to the rendezvous; a bunko-steerer. [Slang.] — Boat-steerer, in whaling, the second man in rank in a boat's crew, whose duty it is to act as bow-ear-man while going on to the whale, to harpoon or bomb the whale if he is so instructed by the officer, and to steer the boat after the whale has been struck, having shifted ends with the officer. The duties of the boat-steerer, or harpooner or slewer as he is also called, are the most important intrusted to the crew.

steering-compass (stēr'ing-kum'pas), n. See compass.

steering-gear (stēr'ing-gēr), n. Naut., the machinery by which the rudder is managed. In large ships steam-power has come into very general use for this purpose—a wheel, turned by the helmsman in the same manner as when steering by hand, by its action admitting steam to the engines which move the helm.

steering-sail (stēr'ing-sāl), n. Same as studding-sail.

steering-wheel (stēr'ing-hwōl), n. The wheel by which the rudder of a ship is shifted and the ship steered.

steerless<sup>1</sup> (stēr'les), a. [ME. sterles, < AS. stēorlēs, having no rudder, < stēor, a rudder, + -lēs, E. -less; < steer<sup>1</sup>, n., + -less.] Having no rudder.

Al sterless withinne a boot am I.
Chaucer, Troilus, l. 416.

Like to the sterless boat that swerves with every wind.
Surrey, Eccl. III.

steerling (stēr'ling), n. [steer<sup>2</sup> + -ling.] A young steer.

To get thy steerling, once again
I'll play such another strain.
Herrick, A Bencolick, or Discourse of Neatherds.

steerman<sup>1</sup> (stēr'mān), n. [*ME. sterman, steor-man, < AS. stēorman (= D. stuurman = MLG. sturman, stureman = MHG. stürman, G. steuermann, steersman, = Icel. stýrimathr, stýrnarmathr = Sw. styrman = Dan. styrmand, a mate), < stēor, rudder, + man, man: see steer<sup>1</sup> and man.] Same as steersman.*

Their Star the Bible; Steer-man th' Holy-Ghost.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, l. 1.

steersman (stēr'z'mān), n.; pl. steersmen (-men). [ME. steresman, < AS. stēoresman, steersman, < stēor, gen. of stēor, a rudder, + man, man.] One who steers. (a) The steerer of a boat; a helmsman; a pilot.

How the tempest al began,
And how he lost his steersman.
Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 436.

Through it the joyful steersman clears his way,
And comes to anchor in his inmost bay.
Dryden.

(61) A governor; a ruler.

He of the v. steersmen

Under him welden in sterc tgen [ten].

Genesis and Exodus (L. E. T. S.), 1. 3417.

steersmanship (störz'man-ship), n. [< steersman + -ship.] The office or art of a steersman; skill in steering.

They praised my steersmanship.

J. Burroughs, Ppacton, p. 19.

steersmate (störz'māt), n. [< steer's, poss. of steer, + mate.] A mate or assistant in steering. [Rare.]

What pilot so expert but needs must wreck, Turbid with such a steersmate at the helm?

Milton, S. A., 1. 1045.

steer-staff, n. [ML. steerstaf; < steer + staff.]

Same as steersman. Wyclif, Prov. xxiii. 34.

steer-tree (stör'trē), n. [Early mod. E. also sterc-tree, sterc-tree; < ME. steretre; < steer + tree.] 1. A ruler.

Wife, tent the sterc-tree, and I shall assay

The dupes of the sea that we here, if I may.

Twineley Mysteries, p. 31. (Halliwell.)

2. The handle of a plow. Cath. Ang., p. 361, note.

steery (stör'i), n. [< steer + -y.] A stir; a bustle; a tumult. [Scotch.]

"Where's the younger woman-kind?" said the Antiquary.
"Indeed, brother, among a' the steers, Maria wadna be gruded by me—she set away to the Halket-craig-head."

Scott, Antiquary, ix.

steeve (stēv), a. [See, also stere, stire, a var. of stiff, prob. due to Dan. stir, stiff; see stiff.] Stiff; firm; unbending or unyielding.

A filly buirdly, steeve, an' swank,

An set weel down a shapely shank

As e'er tread yird.

Burns, Auld Farmer's Salutation to his Auld Mare.

steeve (stēv), r. t.; pret. and pp. steered, ppr. steering. [Also stere; a var. of stere, r. Cf. stere, a.] To stiffen; as, to be steered with cold. Grose, [Prov. Eng.]

steeve (stēv), r. t.; pret. and pp. steered, ppr. steering. [Appar. orig. 'be stiff' (a steaving bowsprit "being fixed stiff or firmly and immovably in the vessel, a horizontal one being movable"); see stere. Cf. Dan. stær, a prop, stay, stærhjælle, a beam to prop with.] 1. intrans. Naut., to project from the bows at an angle instead of horizontally: said of a bowsprit.

The bowsprit is said to steeve more or less, as the outer end is raised or drooped. Totten, Naval Dict., p. 117.

II. trans. Naut., to give a certain angle of elevation to: as, to steeve a bowsprit.

steeve (stēv), n. [< steer, v.] Naut., the angle of elevation which the bowsprit makes with the horizon.

steeve (stēv), r. t.; pret. and pp. steered, ppr. steering. [Also stere; a var. of stere, < OF. esturer, stuff, cram (OF. estier, the loading of a ship); see stere.] 1. To stuff; cram; pack firmly and tightly. Jamieson. [Scotch.]—2. Naut., to stow, as cargo in a vessel's hold, by means of a steeve or a jack-screw. R. H. Dana, Jr., Before the Mast, p. 306.

steeve (stēv), n. [< steer, v.] A long derrick or spar, with a block at one end, used in stowing cargo. Hammersly, Naval Encey., p. 777.

steevely (stēv'li), adv. [< steer + -ly.] Firmly; stoutly. Jamieson. Also sterily. [Scotch.]

steering (stēv'ing), n. [Verbal n. of steer, v.] Naut., the angle of elevation which a ship's bowsprit makes with the horizon; a steeve.

steering (stēv'ing), n. [Verbal n. of steer, v.] The operation of stowing certain kinds of cargo, as cotton, wool, or hides, in a vessel's hold with a steeve or a jack-screw. See steer, v. t., 2.

steg (steg), n. Same as stay (in various senses). [Prov. Eng.]

steganographist (steg-a-nog'ra-fist), n. [< steganograph-y + -ist.] One who practises the art of writing in cipher. Bailey, 1727.

steganography (steg-a-nog'ra-fi), n. [= F. steganographie, < Gr. stēgaros, covered (< stēgen, cover), + γράφω, write, mark.] The art of writing in cipher, or in characters which are not intelligible except to the persons who correspond with each other; cryptography. Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 498.

The Art of Stenographie, . . . whereunto is annexed a very easie Direction for Stenographie, or Secret Writing, printed at London in 1602 for Gualther Burle.

Title, quoted in Encyc. Brit., XXI. 836, note.

Steganophthalmata (steg'a-nof-thal'mā-tā), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of steganophthalmatus;

see steganophthalmatus.] The covered-eyed anelephs, a division containing those jellyfishes whose sensory tentaculicysts are covered with flaps or lappets proceeding from the margin of the disk: contrasted with Gymnophthalmata. This division contains some of the commonest jellyfishes, as Aurelia aurita; it corresponds to Discophora in a usual sense, more exactly to Discophora phanerocarpa, or Scephyro-medusa. Also called Steganophthalmia. See also cut under Aurelia.

steganophthalmate (steg'a-nof-thal'māt), a. and n. [*< NL. *steganophthalmatus*, < Gr. stēgaros, covered, + ὄφθαλμος, eye.] 1. a. Covered-eyed or hidden-eyed, as a hydromedusian; not gymnophthalmate. Also steganophthalmatus, steganophthalmic, steganophthalmous.

II. n. A member of the Steganophthalmata.

steganophthalmatus (steg'a-nof-thal'mātus), a. [*< NL. *steganophthalmatus*; see steganophthalmate.] Same as steganophthalmate.

Steganophthalmia (steg'a-nof-thal'mi-ā), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. stēgaros, covered, + ὄφθαλμος, eye.] Same as Steganophthalmata.

steganophthalmic (steg'a-nof-thal'mik), a. [< steganophthalmate + -ic.] Same as steganophthalmate.

steganophthalmous (steg'a-nof-thal'mus), a. [< Gr. stēgaros, covered, + ὄφθαλμος, eye.] Same as steganophthalmate.

steganopod (steg'a-nō-pod), a. and n. [< NL. steganopus (-pod-), < Gr. stēgaros (-pod-), web-footed, < Gr. stēgaros, covered, + πῶς (pōs) = E. foot.] 1. a. In ornith., having all four toes webbed; totipalmate.

II. n. A member of the Steganopodes.

Steganopoda (steg-a-nōp'ō-dā), n. pl. [NL.; see steganopod.] An Aristotelian group of birds, approximately equivalent to the Linnean Anseres, or web-footed birds collectively.

steganopodan (steg-a-nōp'ō-dan), a. [< steganopod + -an.] In ornith., totipalmate; steganopod.

Steganopodes (steg-a-nōp'ō-dēz), n. pl. [NL.; see steganopod.] An order of natatorial birds, consisting of those which have all four toes webbed and a more or less developed gular pouch; the Totipalmata. It is now usually divided into six families, Scolidae, Prionidae, Phalaropodidae, Platidae, Tachypodidae and Phaethonidae respectively represented by the gannets, pelicans, cormorants, darters, frigate, and tropic birds. Disparanorpha, Pinnipedes, and Piscivores are synonyms. See cuts under anhinga, cormorant, frigate bird, gannet, pelican, Phaethon, rough-billed, and totipalmate.

steganopodous (steg-a-nōp'ō-dus), a. [< steganopod + -ous.] Same as steganopod.

Steganopus (steg-a-nōp'ō-pus), n. [NL. (Vieillot, 1818); see steganopod.] A genus of phalaropes, having the toes margined with an even membrane, and the bill very long and slender.

Wilson's Phalarope (Steganopus tricolor).

It includes Wilson's phalarope, S. wilsoni, a North American species, the largest and handsomest of the family. This genus has nothing to do with the order of birds that appears from the term Steganopoda, to be named from it.

Stegocarpus (steg-ō-kār'pī), n. pl. [NL.; see stegocarpous.] A division of bryaceous mosses in which the capsule opens in the upper part by a deciduous lid or operculum. It embraces the larger part of the true mosses.

stegocarpous (steg-ō-kār'pus), a. [*< NL. *stegocarpus*, < Gr. stēgen, cover, + καρπός, fruit.] In bot., of or belonging to the Stegocarpi; having an operculate capsule.

Stegocephala (steg-ō-sef'a-lī), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of **stegocephalus*; see stegocephalous.] Same as Labyrinthodontia. See Stegocephali.

stegocephalian (steg'ō-se-fā'li-an), a. and n. [< Stegocephala + -ian.] 1. a. Stegocephalous.

II. n. A member of the Stegocephala.

stegocephalous (steg-ō-sef'a-lus), a. [*< NL. *stegocephalus*, < Gr. stēgen, cover, + κεφαλή, the head.] Having the head mailed, loricate, or cataphract, as a labyrinthodont; having the characters of, or pertaining to, the Stegocephala.

Stegodon (steg'ō-don), n. [NL. (Falconer, 1857), < Gr. stēgen, cover, + ὄδων (ōdōn) = E. tooth.] 1. A genus of fossil elephants of the Tertiaries of India, intermediate in their dental characters between the existing elephants and the mastodons. They are, however, most nearly related to the former, belonging to the same subfamily, Elephantinae. S. insignis is an example.

2. [l. c.] An elephant of this genus.

stegognathous (ste-gog'nā-thus), a. [< Gr. stēgen, cover, + γνάθος, jaw.] In conch., having a jaw composed of imbricated plates: noting the Bulimulidae.

Stegoptera (ste-gop'tē-rā), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of **stegopterus*; see stegopterous.] An order of neuropterous insects; the roof-winged insects. It included the Panorpidæ or scorpion-flies, the Raphidiidæ or snake flies, the Montigidae or mantisflies, the Myrmeleontidæ or dragonflies, the Hemerobiidæ or lacewings, the Sialidæ or May-flies, and the Phryganeidæ or caddis-flies. The order is now broken up.

stegopterous (ste-gop'tē-rus), a. [*< NL. *stegopterus*, < Gr. stēgen, cover, + πτερόν, wing, = E. feather.] In entom., roof-winged; holding the wings deflexed when at rest; of or pertaining to the Stegoptera.

Stegosauria (steg-ō-sā'ri-ā), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. stēgen, cover, + σαῖρος, a lizard.] An order or suborder of dinosaurs, represented by the families Stegosauridæ and Scelidosauridæ.

stegosaurian (steg-ō-sā'ri-an), a. and n. [< Stegosauria + -ian.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to the Stegosauria, or having their characters.

II. n. A dinosaur of the order Stegosauria.

Stegosauridæ (steg-ō-sā'ri-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Stegosaurus + -idæ.] A family of herbivorous dinosaurs, typified by the genus Stegosaurus, with biconcave vertebrae, ischia retrorse and meeting in mid-line, the astragalus coalesced with the tibia, and the metatarsals short. They were Jurassic reptiles of great size.

Stegosaurus (steg-ō-sā'rus), n. [NL. (Marsh, 1877), < Gr. stēgen, cover, + σαῖρος, a lizard.] 1. The typical genus of Stegosauridæ. It contained species some 30 feet long, mailed with enormous bucklers and spines.—2. [l. c.] A dinosaur of this genus.

steik, r. t. See steck.

steilli, n. An obsolete Scotch spelling of stale.

stein, r. and n. An obsolete Scotch spelling of stern.

stein (stīn), n. [G. stein, stone.] An earthenware mug, especially one designed to hold beer.

Steinberger (stīn'bér-gér), n. A white wine grown on the Rhine, near Wiesbaden in Prussia. The vineyard belongs to the Prussian national domain. Steinberg ranks in estimation second only to the Johannisberger, and in some years is considered better by connoisseurs.

steinbock (stīn'bok), n. [G.: see steenbok.] 1. The ibex.—2. Same as stenbok.

Steinerian (stī-nē'ri-an), a. and n. [Named by Cremona from Steiner (see def.).] 1. a. Pertaining to the discoveries of the German geometer Jacob Steiner (1796–1863).—Steinerian polygon. See polygon.

II. n. In math., the locus of points whose first polars with respect to a given curve have double points.

Steiner's surface. See surface.

steing, n. Same as sting.

steinheilite (stīn'hī-lit), n. A variety of iolite.

steining (stī'ning), n. Same as steening, 2.

Steinitz gambit. See gambit.

steinkirk (stīn'kérk), n. See steenkirk.

steinmannite (stīn'man-it), n. [Named after Steinmann, a German mineralogist.] A variety of galena containing some arsenic and antimony. It commonly occurs in octahedral crystals.

steirk, n. See stirk.

steive, r. A variant of stire.

steket, r. An obsolete form of stick.

stelt, An obsolete form of steel, steal, stale, etc.

stela (stē'li), n. Same as stale.

stele, An old spelling of steal, steal.

stele, n. An obsolete form of stale.

stela (stē'lā, sometimes stēl), n.: pl. stelae or stelai. [= F. stèle, < L. stela, < Gr. στῆλη, an upright slab or pillar, < στάναι, stand, set; see stand and stood.] In archaeol.: (a) An upright slab or pillar, often crowned with a rich anthemion, and sometimes bearing more or less Sculptured Stela.—Monument of the Knight Dexileos (who fell before Corinth 334 B. C.), on the Sacred Way, Athens elaborate sculpture or a painted scene, commonly used among the ancient Greeks as a gravestone. (b) A similar slab or pillar serving as a milestone, to bear an inscription in some public place, or for a like purpose.

stelechite (stē'lē-kīt), n. [= F. stéléchite, < Gr. στῆλὴ λίθος, the crown of the root of a tree, stump, block, log, the trunk, + -ite.] A fine kind of stonax, in larger pieces than the calamite. Also, erroneously, stelocheite.

Stelgidopteryx (stēl-jī-dop'te-riks), n. [NL. (S. F. Baird, 1858), < Gr. στῆλγίς (stēl-gis), a scaper, + πτερίς, a wing.] A genus of Hirundinidae, having the outer web of the first primary serrate by conversion of the barbs into a series of recurved hooks; the rough-winged swallows. S. serripennis is the common rough-winged swallow of the United States, of plain brownish coloration, greatly resembling the bank-swallow. Several others inhabit Central and South America. See cut under rough-winged.

stell (stel), v. t. [< ME. stellen, < AS. stellan (= MD. D. MLG. LG. OHG. MHG. G. stellen), set up, place, fix, < steall (= MD. D. stal = MLG. stal, LG. stall = OHG. MHG. stal, G. stall), a place, stall; see stall.] To set; place; fix. [Obsolete or dialectal.]

Mine eye hath play'd the painter, and hath stell'd Thy beauty's form in table of my heart.
Shak., Sonnets, xxiv

stell (stel), n. [A var. of stall, after stell, v.] 1. A place; a station.
The said stell of Plessis.
Dante's Comines, sig. V 5. (Nares.)

2. A stall; a fold for cattle. Hallwell: Jamieson. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

stella (stē'lā), n.: pl. stellae (-ē). [NL., < L. stella, a star; see star.] A stellate sponge-spicule; an aster; a stellate.

stellar (stē'lār), a. [= F. stellaire = Sp. estrelar = It. stellare, < LL. stellaris, pertaining to a star, starry, < L. stella, a star; see stella.] Of or pertaining to stars; astral: as, stellar worlds; stellar space; stellar regions.

These soft fires
Not only enlighten, but . . . shed down
Their stellar virtue on all kinds that grow.
Milton, P. L., iv. 671

Stellaria (stē-lā'ri-jī), n. [NL. (Linnaeus, 1753), name transferred, on account of the star-like blossoms, from a Corispermum so named by Dillenius (1719); < L. stella, a star.] A genus of polypetalous plants, of the order Caryophyllales and tribe Alsnæceae. It is characterized by the absence of stipules, by flowers usually with five deeply two-lobed petals and three styles, and by a one-celled globose or oblong capsule which commonly splits into three two-lobed or completely parted valves. There are about 85 species, scattered throughout the world; in the tropics they occur only on mountains. Seven species occur in England and about 20 in North America, of which 7 are natives of the northeastern United States. They are commonly diffuse herbs, with weak, smooth, or hairy stems, loosely ascending or growing in matted tufts. Their flowers are usually white, and form terminal panicle cymes, sometimes mixed with leaves. Several species are known as chickweed, and several others as starwort or stitchwort, especially S. holostea (see stitchwort), a common English species, bearing such local names as allbone, break-bones, shirt-buttons, snapp-jack. S. longifolia, the long-leaved stitchwort, frequent in the Northern Atlantic States, forms delicate tangled masses of light green overtopped by numerous small white flowers. S. pubera, the great chickweed or starwort, the most showy Atlantic species, forms conspicuous dark-green tufts along shaded banks in earliest spring, from Pennsylvania southward. See also cut under ovary.

Great Chickweed (Stellaria pubera).

stellary (stē'lār-i), a. Same as stellar.

stellate (stē'lāt), a. and n. [< L. stellatus, pp. of stellare, set or cover with stars, < stella, star; see stella.] 1. a. Star-like in form; star-shaped; arranged in the form of a conventional star; radiating from a common center like the rays or points of a star: as, stellate leaves; the stellate groups of natrolite crystals.—Stellate bristle or hair, a bristle or hair which branches at the end in a star-shaped manner. See cut under hair, 4.—Stellate fracture, a fracture, occurring usually in a flat bone, in which several fissures radiate from the central point of injury.—Stellate leaves, leaves, more than two in number, surrounding the stem in a whorl, or radiating like the spokes of a wheel or the points of a star. Also called verticillate leaves. See cut under pipissesea.—Stellate ligament, a costovertebral ligament; the anterior costocentral ligament uniting the head of a rib with the body of a vertebra: so called from the radiated figure in man.—Stellate spicule, an aster; a stellate.—Stellate veins, very minute venous radicles situated just under the capsule of the kidney, arranged in a radiating or stellate manner.

II. n. A stellate microscle, or flesh-spicule in the form of a star. Encyc. Brit., XXII. 417.
stellated (stē'lāt-ed), a. [< stellate + -ed.] Same as stellate.—Stellated polygon, polyhedron, etc. See the nouns.

stellately (stē'lāt-i), adv. Radiately; like a star; in a stellate manner.

stellate-pilose (stē'lāt-pī'los), a. In bot., pilose with stellate hairs.

stellation (stē-lā'shən), n. [< ML. stellatio(n)- (?), < L. stella, a star; see stellate.] 1. The act or process of becoming a star or a constellation.

The scaly Scorpion's fixt amongst the rest, . . .
The cause of it's stellation to enquire,
And why so beautify'd with heavenly fire,
Comes next in course.

Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 138.

2. Same as constellation.

Stars, and stellations of the heavens.
Rev. T. Adams, Works, II. 4.

stellature (stē'lā-tūr), n. [< ML. **stellatura*, irreg. taken as equiv. to stellionatus; see stellionate.] Same as stellionate.

Extortion and cozenage is proverbially called crimen stellionatus, the sin of stellature.

Rev. T. Adams, Works, I. 79.

stelled (stēld), p. a. [Pp. of stell: see stell, and cf. stalled, pp. of stall.] Fixed.

The sea, with such a storm as his bare head
In hell-black night endured, would have buoy'd up,
And quench'd the stelled fires. Shak., Lear, iii. 7. 61.
[Some commentators define the word as 'stelled', 'starry'.]

stelleert, stelleeret, n. [See steeleyard.] Same as steeleyard. Cotgrave.

Stelleria (stē-lā'ri-jī), n. [NL., named after G. W. Steller; see stellerine.] In ornith., a genus of sea-ducks, the type of which is Steller's eider, S. dispar, usually called Polysticta stelleri. Bonaparte, 1838.

Stellerida (stē-lēr'i-dī), n. pl. [NL., prop. Stellurida, < stellaris, starry, + -ida.] A class or other large group of echinoderms of obviously radiate figure; the starfishes and brittle-stars; synonymous with Asterioidea, 2.

Stelmatopoda

stelleridan (stē-lēr'i-dan), a. and n. [< Stellerida + -an.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to the Stellerida.

II. n. A member of the Stellerida, as a starfish or brittle-star.

stelleridean (stē-lēr'idē-ān), n. Same as stelleridan.

stellerine (stē-lēr-in), n. [Named after G. W. Steller, the traveler (1709-45).] The arctic or Steller's sea-cow, Rhytina stelleri. See sea-cow, 2, and cut under Rhytina.

Steller's eider. See Polysticta, 1, and Stelleria.

Steller's jay. A jay of northwestern North America, Cyanocitta stelleri, crested like the common blue jay, but chiefly of a blackish color, shading into dull blue on some parts.

Steller's sea-cow. See sea-cow, 2, and cut under Rhytina.

Steller's sea-lion. The northern sea-lion. See Eumetopias (with cut).

stellēt, n. An obsolete form of stylet, 1. Dalyell, Frag. of Scottish History.

stelliferous (stē-lif'ē-rus), a. [< L. stellifer, starry, < stella, a star, + ferre = E. bear.] Having or abounding with stars.

stelliform (stē'lī-fōrm), a. [< L. stella, a star, + forma, form.] Star-like in shape; stellate in form; asteroid; radiated.

stellify (stē'lī-fī), v. t. [< ME. stellifyen, < OF. stellifier, < ML. stellificare, place among the stars, convert into a constellation, < L. stella, a star, + facere, make, do (see -fy).] To turn into or cause to resemble a star; convert into a constellation; make glorious; glorify.

No wonder is though Jove her stellifye.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 525.

Some think this fload to be Nilus, which is also Gyon; and therefore stellified, because it directeth his course from the Meridian. It consisteth of many stars, and lieth just beneath the star called Canopus, or Ptolomea.

Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 176.

Stellio (stē'lī-ō), n. [NL., < L. stellio(n)-, a lizard; see stellion.] 1. A genus of agamoid lizards, giving name to the Stellionidae. They have acrodont dentition, naked tympanum, no pores, and Common Stellion (Stellio vulgaris).

the scales of the tail disposed in whorls or verticils. There are several species, ranging from countries bordering the Mediterranean to India. The common stellion or star-lizard, the hardim of the Arabs, S. vulgaris, is abundant in ruins. S. tuberculatus is an Indian species.

2. [l. c.] A lizard of this genus.

stellion (stē'lī-yn), n. [< L. stellio, a newt, a lizard marked with star-like spots, also a crafty, knavish person (cf. stellionate), < stella, a star; see stella.] An agamoid lizard of the genus Stellio or family Stellionidae; a star-lizard.

When the stellion hath cast his skin, he greedily devours it again.
Rev. T. Adams, Works, I. 79.

stellionate (stē'lī-yn-āt), n. [< LL. stellionatus, cozenage, trickery, < L. stellio(n)-, a crafty, knavish person, lit. a newt, lizard; see stellion.] In Scots and civil law, a word used to denote all such crimes in which fraud is an ingredient as have no special names to distinguish them, and are not defined by any written law.

Stellionidae (stē-lī-on'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Stellio(n)- + -idae.] A family of Old World acrodont agamoid lizards, named from the genus Stellio, properly merged in Agamidae; the stellions or star-lizards. See cut under Stellio.

stellular (stē'lū-lār), a. [< L. stellula, a little star, dim. of stella, a star; see stella.] Finely or numerously stellated, as if spangled with little stars; stelliferous, as the surface of a coral; shaped like a little star; resembling little stars; small and stelliform in figure or appearance. Encyc. Brit., XVI. 370.

stellulate (stē'lū-lāt), a. [< L. stellula, a little star (see stellular), + -ate.] Resembling little stars or a little star; stellular.

Stellwag's symptom. See symptom.

Stelmatopoda (stē-mā-top'ō-dī), n. pl. A division of Polyzoa or Bryozoa, corresponding to the Gymnolemata: contrasted with Lophopoda.

stelochite

stelochite (stél'ô-kî), n. See steechite.
stelography (stê-log'gr-â), n. [LGr. στειλογραφία, an inscription on a stele or upright slab, < Gr. στειν, a stele (see stel), + -γραφία, < γράφειν, write.] The practice of writing or inscribing on steles or pillars.

Jacob's pillar . . . thus engraved . . . gave probably the origin to the invention of stelography.

Stackhouse, Hist. Bible, p. 323.

stem<sup>1</sup> (stem), n. [ME. stem, stam, < AS. stemn, stefn, stefn, also stofn (> E. dial. stovin), stem, trunk (of a tree), = D. stam, stem, trunk, stock (of a tree or family), = MLG. stam, stamme, stem, stock, = OHG. stam (stamm), G. stamm, stem (of a tree), trunk, tree, stock, race, = Icel. stofn, stomn, stem, trunk of a tree, = Sw. stam = Dan. stamme (in comp. stam-), stem, trunk, stock (of a tree), stock, race, family (also with some variation of form in a particular sense, 'the prow of a vessel': see stem<sup>2</sup>); = Oldr. tamon, Ir. tamhán (for **stamon*), stem, trunk; cf. Gr. κράτος, an earthen jar; with formative -mn-, < √ sta, stand: see stand. Not related to stuff, except remotely.] 1. The body of a tree, shrub, or plant; the firm part which supports the branches; the stock; the stalk; technically, the ascending axis, which ordinarily grows in an opposite direction to the root or descending axis. The stem is composed of fibrous, spiral, and cellular tissues, arranged in various ways. It typically assumes a cylindrical form and a perpendicular position, and bears upon it the remaining aerial parts of the plant. Its form and direction, however, are subject to much variation in particular cases. In regard to internal structure, there are three principal modifications of stems characteristic of three of the great natural classes into which the vegetable kingdom is divided—namely, xogens, endogens, and acrogens. Stems are herbaceous or woody, solid or hollow, jointed or unjointed, branched or simple. Sometimes they are so weak as to be procumbent, although more generally firm and erect; sometimes weak stems are upheld by twining or by other methods of climbing. In some plants the stem is so short as to seem to be wanting, the leaves and flower-stalks appearing to spring from the top of the root. There are also stems, such as the rhizome and tuber, which, being subterranean, have been mistaken for roots. See cuts under basal, esparto, internode, papyrus, snakeroot, rhizome, and tuber. 2. The stalk which supports the flower or the fruit of a plant; the peduncle of the fructification, or the pedicel of a flower; the petiole or leaf-stem. See cuts under pedicel, peduncle, and petiole.

Two lovely berries moulded on one stem.

Shak., M. N. D., III. 2. 211

For I must crush among the stoures Thy slender stem.

Burns, To a Mountain Daisy.

3. The stock of a family; a race; ancestry.
 Ye may all, that are of noble stem,
Approach, and kiss her sacred vesture's hem.
Milton, Arcades, l. 82.

4. A branch of a family; an offshoot.
 Richard Plantagenet, . . .
Sweet stem from York's great stock.
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., II. 5. 41.

5. Anything resembling the stem of a plant. Specifically—(a) The handle of a tool. Hallucell. [Prov. Eng.] (b) That part of a vase, cup, or goblet which unites the body to the foot or base, in examples where the body is not immediately set upon the latter.

Wine-glasses or goblets are classified by the nature of their stems, or by the nature of their feet.

H. J. Powell, Glass-Making, p. 61.

(c) In type-founding, the thick stroke or body-mark of a roman or italic letter. See cut under type. (d) In a vehicle, a bar to which the bow of a falling hood is hinged. (e) The projecting rod of a reciprocating valve, serving to guide it in its action. See cut under slide-valve. (f) In zool. and anat., any slender, especially axial, part like the stem of a plant; a stalk, stipe, rachis, footstalk, etc. (g) In ornith., the whole shaft of a feather. (h) In entom., the base of a clavate antenna, including all the joints except the enlarged outer ones: used especially in descriptions of the Lepidoptera.

6. In musical notation, a vertical line added to the head of certain kinds of notes. Of the kinds of note now in use, all but two, the breve and the semibreve, have stems. They may be directed either upward or downward, thus, . When two voice-parts are written on the same staff, the stems of the notes belonging to the upper part are often directed upward, and those of the lower part downward, particularly when the parts cross, or both use the same note (see figure). The latter note is said to have a double stem. See note, l. 13. Also called tail.

7. In philol., a derivative from a root, having itself inflected forms, whether of declension or of conjugation, made from it; the unchanged part in a series of inflectional forms, from which the forms are viewed as made by additions; base; crude form.—Aerial stem, the above-ground axis of a plant, as opposed to the rootstock or other subterranean form of the stem.—Ancipital, compound, erect, herbaceous, pituitary, secondary, etc., stem. See the adjectives.

5929

stem<sup>1</sup> (stem), v. t.; pret. and pp. stemmed, ppr. stemming. [stem<sup>2</sup>, n.] To remove the stem of; separate from the stem: as, to stem tobacco.

stem<sup>2</sup> (stem), n. [*ME. *stem, stam*, < *AS. *stemn*, stefn, **stefn*, also stefna, the prow of a ship (steforstefn, the poop, lit. 'steer-stem'), = OS. stamm = D. steren = MLG. LG. steren, prow of a ship (> G. steren, stem (rorder-steren, 'fore stem,' prow, hinter-steren, 'hind stem,' stern-post)), = Icel. stafn, stamm, also stefni, stennu, stem of a ship (prow or stern), = Dan. stern, stavn = Sw. stäff, prow (fram-stam, 'fore stem,' prow, bakstam, 'back stem,' stem); a particular use, with variations of form, of AS. stemn, stefn, E. stem<sup>1</sup>, etc., stem, trunk, post: see stem<sup>1</sup>. The naut. use in E. is prob. in part of Scand. origin.] 1. A curved piece of timber or metal to which the two sides of a ship are united at the foremost end. The lower end of it is scarfed or riveted to the keel, and the bowsprit when present, rests on its upper end. In wooden ships it is frequently called the main stem, to distinguish it from the false stem, or cutwater. The outside of the stem is usually marked with a scale showing the perpendicular height from the keel, for indicating the draft of water forward. See also cut under forecastle.

Pretious Jewells fecht from far
By Italian marchants that with Russian stemes Plous up huge forrowes in the Terren Maine
The Taming of the Shrew, p. 22. (Halliwell.)

2. The forward part of a vessel; the bow.
 Turnynge therefore the stemmes of his shippes towards the Easte, he affirmed that he had founde the Hande of Ophir. Peter Martyr (tr. in Eden's First Booke on America, ed. Arber, p. 66).

False stem, a stem fitted closely to the forward side of the main stem, generally sharp, and introduced for the purpose of decreasing a vessel's resistance and increasing her speed; a cutwater.—From stem to stern, from one end of the ship to the other, or through the whole length. They skip From stem to stern; the boatswain whistles.
Shak., Pericles, iv. 1. 64.

stem<sup>2</sup> (stem), v.; pret. and pp. stemmed, ppr. stemming. [stem<sup>2</sup>, n.] 1. To dash against with the stem (of a vessel).
 They stood off again, and, returning with a good gale, they stemmed her upon the quarter, and almost overset her. Winthrop, Hist. New England, I. 226.

2. To keep (a vessel) on its course; steer.
 He is the master of true courage that all the time sedately stems the ship.
Cornelius Nepos in English (1723), Ded. (Eneyce, Diet.)

3. To make headway against (as a ship); especially, to make progress in opposition to some obstruction, as a current of water or the wind.
 The breathless Muse awhile her wearied wings shall ease,
To get her strength to stem the rough Sabrinian seas.
Dryden, Polyolbion, III. 431.

II. intrans. 1. To make headway (as a ship); especially, to make progress in opposition to some obstruction, as a current of water or the wind.

They on the trading flood,
Through the wide Athiopian to the Cape,
Ply, stemming nightly toward the pole.
Milton, P. L., II. 612.

2. To head; advance head on.
 At first we could scarce lie S. W., but, being got a degree to the Southward of the Line, the Wind veer'd most Easterly, and then we stemmed S. W. by S.
Dampier, Voyages, I. 70.

stem<sup>3</sup> (stem), v. t.; pret. and pp. stemmed, ppr. stemming. [ME. stemmen; < Icel. stemma = Sw. stamma = Dan. stemme, stem, = OHG. MIG. stemmen, stemem, G. stemmen, stammen, stop, stem, dam; < √ stam in stamm<sup>2</sup>, stammer, etc.: see stammer. Not connected with stem<sup>1</sup> or stem<sup>2</sup>.] 1. To stop; check; dam up, as a stream.

And loke ze stemme no stepe [step], bot strechez on faste, Thi ze reche to arest [stopping-place], rest ze neuer.
Alliterative Poems (ed. Morris), II. 905.

The best way is, ever, not to attempt to stem a torrent, but to divert it.

A. Hamilton, To Washington (Works, I. 345).
 He who stems a stream with sand.

Scott, L. of the L., III. 28.

Stemodia

He sat down to his milk-porridge, which it was his old frugal habit to stem his morning hunger with.
George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, I. 12.

2. To tamp; make tight, as a joint, with a lute or cement.

stem<sup>4</sup>, n. and v. An old spelling of steam.

stemapod (stem'a-pod), n. [Gr. στήμα, filament (see stamen), + ποὺς (pod-) = E. foot.] One of the caudal filaments of the caterpillars of certain moths, as Cerura and Heterocampa, whose last pair of legs are thus modified into deterrent or repugnatorial organs. A. S. Packard.

stem-character (stem'kar'ak-tér), n. In gram., same as characteristic letter (which see, under characteristic).

stem-clasping (stem'klás'ping), a. Embracing the stem with its base; amplexicaul, as a leaf or petiole.

stem-climber (stem'kli'mér), n. In bot., see climber<sup>1</sup>, 2.

stemet, v. t. A Middle English form of steam.

stem-eelworm (stem'el'wér), n. A minute nematoid, Tylenchus devastatrix, which causes stem-sickness in certain plants. See Tylenchus.

stem-end (stem'end), n. That part or point in a fruit which is attached to the stem: opposed to the blossom-end, which frequently bears the remains of the calyx, as in a pear or an apple. The stem-end is usually inferior to the blossom-end in sweetness and flavor.

stem-head (stem'hed), n. In ship-building, the top of the stem, or continuation of the forward extreme of the keel.

stem-knee (stem'nē), n. In ship-building, a knee uniting the stem with the keel.

stem-leaf (stem'léf), n. A leaf growing from the stem; a cauline leaf.

stemless (stem'les), a. [stem<sup>1</sup> + -less.] Having no stem; having the stem so little developed as to appear to be wanting; acaulescent.—Stemless lady's-slipper, thistle, violet. See the nouns.

stemlet (stem'let), n. [stem<sup>1</sup> + -let.] A little stem or stalk; a young stem.

Gives insertion to two multarticulate stemlets.

English Cyc., Nat. Hist. Division (1855), III. 87.

stemma (stem'a), n.; pl. stemmata (-a-ti). [L. stemma, < Gr. στήμα, a wreath, garland, < στέφειν, put around, encircle, wreath, crown.] 1. A family tree, or pedigree; specifically, such a pedigree made more or less decorative with heraldic or other ornaments; also, pedigree in general; order of descent; family: as, a man of the stemma of the Cecils.—2. The simple as distinguished from the compound eye of an invertebrate; an ocellus: always sessile and immovable.—3. One of the facets or corneules of a compound eye.—4. In entom., the tubercle from which an antenna arises.—Spurious stemma, a small flat space, covered with semi-transparent membrane, above the bases of the antennae of certain Orthoptera: it has been supposed to represent a stemma, or simple eye, in a rudimentary form.

Stemmatopteris (stem'a-top'te-ris), n. [NL., < Gr. στήμα (-r), a wreath, + πτερίς, a fern.] A genus of fossil plants, established by Corda, under which various stems or trunks of tree-ferns have been grouped, but little being known in regard to them, except the form of the scars or impressions marking the points of attachment of the petioles. Lesquereux describes remains of this kind under the names of Stemmatopteris, Caulopteris, Megaphyton, and Psaronius; but, as he remarks, they could all have been described without inconvenience under the name of Caulopteris. These fossil remains are common in the coal-measures. See Caulopteris.

stemmatous (stem'a-tus), a. [stemma (-t-) + -ous.] Pertaining to a stemma, or having its character; ocellar.

stemmed (stemd), a. [stem<sup>1</sup> + -ed.] Furnished with or bearing a stem: used chiefly in composition: as, a straight-stemmed plant.

stemmer (stem'ér), n. [stem<sup>3</sup> + -er.] 1. Same as blasting-needle. [Eng.]—2. An implement used in making joints tight by means of cement.

stemmery (stem'er-i), n.; pl. stemmeries (-iz). [stem<sup>3</sup> + -ery.] A factory where tobacco is stripped from the stem. New York Herald, July 17, 1884. [Local, U. S.]

stemming (stem'ing), n. [Verbal n. of stem<sup>3</sup>, v.] 1. The operation of tamping.—2. The material used in tamping. [Eng. in both uses.]

Stemodia (stê-mô'di-i), n. [NL. (Linnaeus, 1763), shortened from Stemodiocera (P. Browne, 1756), so called from the two-forked stamens; < Gr. στήμα, taken for 'stamen' (see stemen), + dis, di-, two-, + ἀκρον, a point, tip.] A genus of gamopetalous plants, of the order Scrophulariaceae and tribe Gratiolaeae, type of a subtribe Stemodieae. It is characterized by flowers with five nearly equal calyx-lobes, and four perfect didynamous stamens included within the corolla-tube, and by a capsule splitting partly or completely into four valves, the two placentae separating or remaining united in a column. There are about 30 species, mostly tropical, occurring in all continents except Europe. They are glandular-hairy or downy herbs, sometimes shrubby and often aromatic. They bear opposite or whorled leaves and solitary or spiked and crowded, usually bluish flowers—sometimes with bracted pedicels. S. maritima is known in Jamaica as bastard or seaside germander, and S. digitata as goatweed; the latter, a low clammy plant with purplish spiked flowers, extends also from southern Arizona to Brazil.

Stemona (stō'mō-nā), n. [NL. (Louriero, 1790), so called from the peculiar stamens; < Gr. στῆμων, taken for 'stamen.'] A genus of monocotyledonous plants, type of the order Stemonaceae. It is distinguished by erect ovules and seeds, and stamens with very short filaments more or less united into a ring, having linear erect anthers with a thickened connective, continued above into an erect appendage. There are 4 or 5 species, natives of India, Malaysia, and tropical Australia. They are smooth lofty-climbing twiners growing from a fusiform tuberous root, and bearing shining alternate leaves which are cordate ovate, or narrower, with three or more nerves and numerous cross-veinlets. The flowers form racemes, or are few or solitary in the axils; the perianth-segments are rather large, distinct, and erect, marked by many nerves. Formerly called Roxburghia.

Stemonaceae (stē-mō-nā'sē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Durand, 1888), < Stemona + -aceae.] A small order of monocotyledonous plants, of the series Coronarieae, by many formerly called Roxburghiaceae. It is characterized by regular bisexual flowers with a four-parted perianth of two rows with four stamens and a one-celled ovary which contains two or more ovules and opens into a two-valved capsule. It includes 8 species, belonging to 3 genera of which Stemonotum and Stemona (the type) are largely in Asia, the other genus, Crotonia, includes one species in Japan, and another, C. pauciflora, in Florida and adjacent States.

Stemonitaceae (stē-mō-nī-tā'sē-ē), n. pl. [NL., < Stemonitis + -aceae.] A family of myxomycetous fungi, belonging, according to the classification of Rostkinski, to the order Amuro-orchetia, which has a single sporangium or aethalium, without the peculiar deposits of lime carbonate that characterize the fructification of other orders, and the spores, capillitium, and columella usually uniformly black, or rarely brownish-violet.

Stemonitis (stē-mō-nī'tis), n. [NL. (Gleditsch), < Gr. στῆμων, taken for 'stamen.'] A genus of myxomycetous fungi, giving name to the family Stemonitaceae.

stem-pessary (stem'pēs-ā-rī), n. A pessary with a rod or stem which is passed into the cervix uteri.

stem-piece (stem'pēs), n. In ship-building, a piece between the stem and the chocks, also called independent piece. See cut under stem.

stemple (stem'pl), n. [Cf. D. stempel = MHG stampfel, G. stempel (< D.), a mark, stamp; see stamp.] In mining, a small timber used to support the ground by being laid across the stulls, or in other ways; in some mining districts of England nearly the same as lacing or lagging.

stem-sickness (stem'sik-ness), n. A disease of clover in England. It is caused by a nematode worm, Tylenchus desfontainii, known as the stem girdler, and brings about first a stunted condition and finally the death of the plant.

stemson (stem'son), n. [Perhaps a var. of stanchion, confused with stem. Cf. Teakson, sternson.] In ship-building, a piece of curved timber fixed on the after part of the apron inside. The lower end is scarfed into the keelson and receives the scarf of the stem, through which it is bolted.

stem-stitch (stem'stich), n. In pollen-lace making, a stitch by which a thick braid-like stripe is produced; used for the stems of flowers and sprigs, tendrils, etc.

stem-winder (stem'wīn-dēr), n. A watch which is wound up or regulated by means of a contrivance connected with the stem, and not by a key.

sten, v. and n. See stend.

stench (stench), n. [ME. stanch, stunch, < AS stenc (= OHG stanc, stanch, MHG stanc, stanc, G. stank = Sw. Dan. stank), a smell, odor (pleasant or unpleasant), < stancan, smell: see stark, v., and cf. stink, n. Cf. Icel. stækja, to stench.] An ill smell; an offensive odor.

In our way to Tivoli I saw the rivulet of Salfordita, formerly called Abula, and smelt the stench that arises from its waters some time before I saw them.

Addison, Remarks on Italy (Bohn), I. 482 = Syn. Stink, etc. See smell.

stench† (stench), v. t. [ < stench†, n.] To cause to emit a stench; cause to stink.

Dead bards stench every coast.

Young, Resignation, i. 24.

stench† (stench), v. t. An obsolete variant of stanch†.

stenchful (stench'fūl), a. [ < stench† + -ful.] Full of bad odors. Rev. T. Adams, Works, II. 56.

stencil (sten'shil), n. A Scotch form of stanchion for stanchion.

stencil-pipe (stencil'pīp), n. In plumbing, an extension of a soil-pipe through and above the roof of a house, to allow foul gases to escape.

stencil-trap (stencil'trap), n. In a drain, a depression or hollow in which water lies, introduced to prevent the reflex passage of foul air or gas.

stenchy (sten'chi), a. [ < stench† + -y.] Having a stench or offensive smell. Dyer, The Fleecce, i.

stencil (sten'sil), v. t.; pret. and pp. stenciled, stencilled, ppr. stenciling, stencilling. [Origin uncertain: (a) According to Skeat, prob. < OF. estenciller (for **escuteller*), cover with stars, powder (used in heraldry), lit. 'sparkle', F. étinceler, sparkle, < L. scintillare, sparkle: see scintillate. Cf. stencil.] (b) In another view, orig. as a noun, identical with stencil†, a dial. var. of stanchion†, var. of stanchion, ult. < OF. estance, a support: see stance and stanchion.] To mark out or paint by means of a stencil.

stencil (sten'sil), n. [See stencil†, v.] 1. A thin plate or sheet of any substance in which a figure, letter, or pattern is formed by cutting through the plate. If the plate thus cut is placed upon a surface and rubbed with color or ink, the pattern or figure will be marked on the underlying substance. For many purposes, the letters, etc., are cut through completely, for transferring a pattern, as in embroidery, the lines of the pattern are often indicated by small holes. In wall decoration, etc., both these plans are employed. Different stencils are often used in the same design, each for a different color.

2. The coloring matter used in marking with a stencil-plate. C. T. Davis, Bricks and Tiles, p. 90.—3. In ceram., a preparation laid upon the biscuit to keep the oil used in transfer-printing or enameling from adhering to the surface; hence, the pattern traced by this preparation, reserving a panel or medallion of the unaltered color of the biscuit.

stencil† (sten'sil), n. [A var. of stanchion†.] A door-post; a stanchion. Halliwell, [Prov. Eng.]

stenciler, stenciller (sten'sil-ēr), n. [ < stencil† + -er.] One who works with a stencil, especially a decorative painter who applies patterns with a stencil.

stencil-pen (sten'sil-pen), n. A pricking-machine for perforating paper to form a stencil. It consists of a hollow stylus carrying a needle having a reciprocating motion. See electric pen, under pen.

stencil-plate (sten'sil-plāt), n. A stencil.

stend (stend), v. i. [ < OF. stendre, F. étendre = It. stendere, < L. extendere, stretch forth, extend: see extend.] 1. To extend. [Prov. Eng.]—2. To walk with long steps.—3. To leap; bound; rear; spring. Also sten. [Scotch and prov. Eng.]

stend (stend), n. [ < stend, v.] A leap; a spring; a long step or stride. Also sten. Burns, Tam O' Shan.

Stenelytra (stē-nel'y-trā), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of **stenelytrus*: see stenelytrous.] In entom., in Latreille's system, the third family of heterocerous Coleoptera, divided into 5 tribes, corresponding to the old genera Holops, Cistela, Dicaea, Ademera, and Mycterus.

stenelytrous (stē-nel'y-trus), a. [ < NL. **stenelytrus*, < Gr. στενός, narrow, strait, + ἐντρον, a cover: see elytrum.] Having narrow elytra; of or pertaining to the Stenelytra.

Stenobothrus (sten-ō-both'rus), n. [NL. (Fischer, 1853), < Gr. στενός, narrow, strait, ing such species as S. maculipennis. This is a common grasshopper in most parts of the United States, and resembles the hateful grasshopper or Rocky Mountain locust (Melanoplus spretus) so closely that it has often been mistaken for the latter.

stenocardia (sten-ō-kār'di-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. στενός, narrow, + καρδία, the heart.] Angina pectoris.

Stenocarpus (sten-ō-kār'pus), n. [NL. (R. Brown, 1810), so called from the usually narrow fruit; < Gr. στενός, narrow, + καρπός, fruit.] A genus of apetalous trees, of the order Proteaceae and tribe Embothriceae. It is characterized by umbellate flowers, and numerous ovules downwardly imbricated and ripening into seeds which are winged below. There are 14 species, 11 of which are natives of New Caledonia and 3 of Australia. They are trees with alternate or scattered leaves, which are entire or deeply divided into a few pinnate segments, and mostly yellow or red flowers with a somewhat irregular perianth-tube and a nearly globular recurved and at length divided border, disposed in terminal or axillary umbels which are solitary or clustered in a short raceme or a compound umbel, and are followed by coriaceous stalked follicles. S. sinuatus is known in Queensland as tidip tree and fire-tree. S. salignus, native of the same regions, is known as beefwood, silky oak, and meleyn.

stenocephalous (sten-ō-sef'ā-lus), a. [ < Gr. στενός, narrow, + κεφαλή, head.] Narrow-headed.

steno-chromy (sten-ō-krō-mī), n. [ < Gr. στενός, narrow, + χρῶμα, color.] The art of printing several colors at one impression. This is accomplished by various methods: (1) by dividing the ink-fountain of a printing-press into compartments, one for each color, and allowing the rollers to blend the inks on the distributing-table; (2) by cutting or trimming the rollers of a printing-press in such a way that only the desired parts may take and distribute ink—a different color for each roller or set of rollers; (3) by lithographic methods.

stencoronine (sten'ō-kō-rō'nin), a. [ < Gr. στενός, narrow, + κορώνη, a crown, also a crown.] Having narrow-crowned molars; noting the hippopotamine type of dentition, as distinguished from the eurycoronine or dinotherian. Falconer.

stenoderm (sten-ō-dēr'm), n. [ < Stenoderma.] A bat of the genus Stenoderma; a stenodermine. — Spectacled stenoderm, Stenoderma serripellatum, a tropical American bat marked about the eyes as if wearing spectacles. Also called spectacled vampire.

Stenoderma (sten-ō-dēr'mā), n. [NL. (Geoffroy), < Gr. στενός, narrow, + δέρμα, skin, hide.] A genus of American phyllostomine bats, of the subfamily Phyllostomatinae, having a short, broad, obtuse muzzle, short but distinct nose-leaf, no tail, and the interfemoral membrane concave behind. S. achradophilum of the West Indies is so called from its fondness for the berries of Achras sapota, the naseberry.

Stenodermata (sten-ō-dēr'mā-tā), n. pl. [NL.: see Stenoderma.] A section of phyllostomine bats, of which the genera Stenoderma, Artibeus, and Centurio are leading forms. It includes about 20 species, of 9 genera, of Neotropical bats. See cut under Centurio.

stenodermatous (sten-ō-dēr'mā-tus), a. Pertaining to the Stenodermata, or having their characters; resembling a stenoderm.

stenodermine (sten-ō-dēr'min), a. and n. [ < Stenoderma + -ine.] 1. a. Having a contracted wing-membrane, as a bat; of or pertaining to the Stenodermata.

II. n. A stenodermine bat; a stenoderm.

Stenodus (sten'ō-dus), n. [NL. (Richardson, 1836), < Gr. στενός, narrow, + ὄδός = E. tooth.] A genus of salmonoid fishes, related both to Salmo and to Coregonus, having an elongate body, projecting lower jaw, and weak teeth. The Inconnu, or Mackenzie river salmon, is S. mackenzii, attaining a weight of 20 pounds or more, esteemed as a food-fish. See cut under Inconnu.

stenograph (sten'ō-grāf), n. [ < Gr. στενός, narrow, + γράφω, write.] 1. A character used in stenography; a writing, especially any note or memorandum, in shorthand.

I saw the reporters' room, in which they redact their hasty stenographs. Emerson, Eng. Traits, p. 265.

2. A stenographic machine; a form of type-writer in which signs and marks of various kinds—dots, dashes, etc.—are used in place of ordinary letters. A number of different machines have been made, essentially type-writers operated by means of a keyboard.

stenograph (sten'ō-grāf), v. i. [ < stenograph, n.] To write or represent by stenography. III. London News, [Rare.]

stenographer (stē-nog'grā-fēr), n. [ < stenograph (y) + -er.] One who writes shorthand.

stenographic (sten-ō-grāf'ik), a. [= F. sténographique; as stenography + -ic.] Of or pertaining to stenography; shorthand.— Stenographic machine. Same as stenograph, 2.

stenographical (sten-ō-grāf'i-kal), a. [ < stenographic + -al.] Same as stenographic.

Stenobothrus maculipennis
a, mature insect; b, pupa; c, larva. (All natural size.)

close, + σθόπος, a hole.] A notable genus of grasshoppers, of the family Aceridiidae, contain-stenographically (sten-ō-graf'i-kal-i), adv. In shorthand: by means of stenography.

stenographer (stē-nōg'rā-fist), n. [< stenograph-y + -ist.] A stenographer; a shorthand-writer.

stenography (stē-nōg'rā-fi), n. [= F. sténographie, < Gr. stēnōs, narrow, close, + -γραφία, < γράφειν, write.] The art of writing by means of brief signs which represent single sounds, groups of sounds, whole words, or groups of words; shorthand: brachygraphy: a generic term embracing all systems of shorthand, or brief writing.

The cradle age
Did throng the Seates, the Boxes, and the Stage
So much that some by Stenography drew
The plot: put it in print.
Heywood, If you Know not Me (Works, ed. Pearson, I. 191)
Sure 'tis Stenographic, everie Character a word, and here and there one for a whole sentence.
Brome, Northern Lass, iii. 2.

Stenonian duct. See Stenson's duct.

stenopaic, stenopæic (sten-ō-pā'ik, -pē'ik), a. [< Gr. stēnōs, narrow, + ōpē, an opening, + -αῖος.] Having a small or narrow opening.—Stenopaic slit, a narrow slit in an opaque lamina, placed before an eye to test the degree of its astigmatism by determining the difference of its refraction in different meridians.—Stenopaic spectacles, spectacles having an oval metal plate with a small central aperture.

Stenopelmatus (sten-ō-pel'mā-tus), n. [NL. (Burmeister, 1838), < Gr. stēnōs, narrow, + πέλας, the sole of the foot.] A curious genus of Locustidae, containing forms known in the western United States as *sand-cricket*s. They are fierce-looking insects with large head and jaws, and live under stones or in burrows in the sand. They are carnivorous, and in New Mexico are commonly but erroneously reputed to be poisonous. Several species are known in the western Sand-cricket (Stenopelmatus fuscatus), about half natural size.

United States, of which S. fuscatus is the commonest. The genus is also represented in Mexico, South America, and Australia.

stenopetalous (sten-ō-pet'a-lus), a. [< Gr. stēnōs, narrow, + πέταλον, a leaf (petal): see petal.] In bot., having narrow petals; narrow-petaled.

stenophyllous (sten-ō-fil'us), a. [< Gr. stēnōs, narrow, + φύλλον, a leaf.] In bot., having narrow leaves.

Stenopsis (stē-nop'sis), n. [NL. (John Cassin, 1851), < Gr. stēnōs, narrow, + ὄψις, look, appearance.] A genus of South American setirostral goatsuckers, of the family Caprimulgidae, containing numerous species, as S. cayennensis.

Stenorhynchinae (sten-ō-ring-kī'nō), n. pl. [NL., < Stenorhynchus + -inae.] A subfamily of Phocidae, or seals, typified by the genus Stenorhynchus (or Ogmorhinus); the sterrinecks. These seals exclusively inhabit southern seas, for Monachus, sometimes considered stenorhynchine, does not belong here. The only genera besides the type are Lobodon, Leptonychotes (or Leptonychus of Gray, not of Swainson), and Ommatophoca. As explained under sea-leopard, the current name is untenable. See cut under sea-leopard.

stenorhynchine (sten-ō-ring'kin), a. [< Stenorhynchus + -ine.] Of or pertaining to the Stenorhynchinae.

stenorhynchous (sten-ō-ring'kus), a. [< Gr. stēnōs, narrow, + ρύγχος, snout.] In ornith., narrow-billed; having a compressed beak.

Stenorhynchus (sten-ō-ring'kus), n. [NL., < Gr. stēnōs, narrow, + ρύγχος, snout.] In zool.: (a) A genus of crabs, containing the British spider-crab, S. phalangium: same as Macropodia. Latreille, 1819. (b) A genus of seals. See Stenorhynchinae. F. Cuvier, 1826. (c) A name of other genera, of birds, reptiles, and insects respectively.

Steno's duct. See Stenson's duct.

stenosed (stē-nōst'), a. [< stenosis + -ed.] Characterized by stenosis; morbidly narrowed.

stenosis (stē-nō'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. stēnōsis, a straitening, < στενός, make narrow, straiten, < στενός, narrow, strait, close.] The pathological narrowing of a passage.

Stenostomata (sten-ō-stō'mā-tā), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. stēnōs, narrow, + στόμα(-), mouth.] A suborder of ctenophorans, containing the saccate, lobate, and tentate comb-jellies, collectively contrasted with the Eurystomata (which see). Most of the comb-bearers belong to this division.

stenostomatous (sten-ō-stom'a-tus), a. [NL., < Gr. stēnōs, narrow, + στόμα(-), mouth.] Having a small, narrow, or contracted mouth; not eurystomatous. Also stenostomous.

Stenotaphrum (sten-ō-taf'rum), n. [NL. (Trinius, 1820), so called in allusion to the alternate notches of the rachis, in which the flowers are embedded; < Gr. stēnōs, narrow, + τάφος, a ditch or trench.] A genus of grasses, of the tribe Panicæe. It is characterized by flowers with only three glumes or with a fourth smaller one, the spikelets acute, borne in small fascicles sessile or half-immersed in excavations along a flattened or angled rachis. There are 3 or 4 species, very widely dispersed along sea-shores of tropical regions, and most frequent on the islands of the Indian and South Pacific Oceans. They are creeping grasses sending up short ascending and often compressed branches with spreading, flat, or convolute leaves, and a terminal spike of flowers. S. Americanum, locally known as buffalo-grass, is valued as a means of covering shifting sands with a firm turf, and has proved useful as a fodder-plant, especially on Ascension Island. See St. Augustine grass (under saint), and cut under petiole.

stenotelegraphy (sten-ō-tē-leg'rā-fi), n. [< Gr. stēnōs, narrow, + E. telegraphy.] A rapid telegraphic transmission of words and sentences by a system of shorthand.

stenoteros (stē-not'e-rus), a. [< Gr. stēnōs, narrow, + τέρος, strait, close.] Becoming more and more contracted from the center to the circumference, relatively to the radii represented.—Stenoteros map-projection. See projection.

stenotic (stē-not'ik), a. [< stenosis (-ot-) + -ic.] Pertaining to or of the nature of stenosis.

Stenotomus (stē-not'ō-mus), n. [NL. (Gill, 1865), < Gr. stēnōs, narrow, + τόμος, a cut, slice.] A genus of sparoid fishes, or a section of Diplodus, having the incisor teeth very narrow and entire. The type is S. argyriops, the common scup, scuppaug, or porgy. See cut under scup.

stereotype (stē-ō-tīp), n. [< Gr. stēnōs, narrow, + τύπος, type.] An ordinary type-letter—capital, lower-case, or italic—used to denote a shorthand character or outline. J. E. Munson, Dict. of Phonography, Int.

stereotypic (stē-ō-tīp'ik), a. [< stereotype + -ic.] Of or pertaining to stereotypy; printed according to the rules of stereotypy.

stereotypy (stē-ō-tī-pi), n. [< stereotype + -y.] A method of representing or describing shorthand characters and outlines by ordinary type-letters. It is used for illustrating phonographic textbooks and literature, and also as a system of shorthand for typewriters. Capital letters are used to represent stems; small or lower-case letters stand for adjuncts; and an inverted period shows where a vowel-sound or sign comes in.

Stenson's duct. 1. The duct of the parotid gland (see parotid): so named from Nil Stenson, or Nicolaus Stenonianus, of Copenhagen (1638-86). Also Stenonian duct, Steno's duct.—2. See ducts or canals of Stenson, under duct.

stent (stent), v. and n. An obsolete or dialectal variant of stint.

stent (stent), v. t. [A var. of stend, ult. of extend, after the noun stent.] 1. To stretch.—2. To straiten.—3. To confine. [Scotch in all senses.]

stent (stent), n. [A var. of stend, in def. 2 of extent: see stend, n., stent, v., and extent.] 1. A stretcher; a stenter (which see).—2. Extent; limit; in some English mining districts, the limits of a pitch or bargain.

stent (stent), n. [See also staint; < ME. stente, extant, taxation, valuation, < ML. extenta, valuation: see extent.] In Scots law, a valuation of property in order to taxation; a taxation; a tax.

stent (stent), v. t. [< stent, n.] In Scots law, to assess; tax at a certain rate.

stent (stent), n. [ME. stent, stopping-place. Cf. Dan. stente, a stile; ult. < stand, v.] A stopping-place.

stent (stent), n. [Origin obscure.] In mining, same as attle. [Rare, Eng.]

stenter (stē'tēr), n. [< stent + -er.] A machine or apparatus for stretching or stentering muslins and other thin fabrics. Also called stenter-hook.

stenter (stē'tēr), v. t. [< stenter, n.] To operate upon (thin cotton fabrics, as book-muslins, etc.) in a manner to impart to them a so-called elastic finish. This work as originally performed by hand was executed by holding the fabric edge-wise by the selvages, and pulling it backward and forward while it was subjected to the action of heated air. The various modern machines and frames now employed are designed to produce the same effect upon the goods by an analogous movement and treatment in a current of heated air.

stenting (stē'ting), n. Same as stenton.

stent-master (stēnt'mās'tēr), n. A person appointed to allocate the stent or tax on the persons liable. [Scotch.]

stenton (stēn'ton), n. A short heading at right angles to a cross-cut. [North of England coal-fields.]

stentor (stēn'tor), n. [< L. Stentor, < Gr. Στένωρ, a Greek herald in the Trojan war, who, according to Homer, had a voice as loud as that of fifty other men together.] 1. A person having a very powerful voice.

Brutish noises
(For gain, lust, honour, in litigious prose),
Are bellow'd out, and cracke the barbarous voices
Of Turkish stentors.
Chapman, Iliad, To the Reader, l. 222.

2. In mammal.: (a) The ursine howler, Myecetes ursinus, a platyrrhine monkey of South America; an alouate; any species of Myecetes. See cut under howler. (b) [cap.] The genus of howlers: same as Myecetes. Geoffroy, 1812.—3. In Protozoa: (a) A trumpet-animalcule, or so-called funnel-like polyp. (b) [cap.] The typical genus of Stentoridae, of elongate, trumpet-like, or infundibuliform figure, with rounded peristome. They are of large size, often brilliant color, social habits, and wide distribution among the longest- and best-known of infusorians. They were formerly mistaken for or classed with polyps. S. polymorphus is a leading species; S. niger is another. See also cut under Infusoria.

Stentor polymorphus, twenty times natural size.

stentorian (stēn-tō'ri-an), a. [< stentor + -ian. Cf. LL. Stentoreus, Stentorian.] 1. Resembling the voice of Stentor (see stentor, etymology); extremely loud or powerful in sound.

They echo forth in stentorian clamours.
Sir T. Herbert, Travels, p. 326.

He had a stentorian voice, and thundered it out.
Aubrey, Lives (Ralph Kettle).

2. Able to utter a very loud sound: as, stentorian lungs.

Stentoridae (stēn-tor'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Stentor + -idae.] The trumpet-animalcules or funnel-like infusorians, a family of heterotrichous Infusoria, typified by the genus Stentor.

stentorin (stēn'tō-rin), n. [< Stentor + -in.] The blue pigment or coloring matter of infusorians of the genus Stentor. E. R. Lankester, 1873.

stentorine (stēn'tō-rin), a. [< Stentor + -ine.] Of or pertaining to the Stentoridae.

stentorionist (stēn-tō'ri-us), a. [< stentor + -ionist. Cf. L. Stentoreus, < Gr. Στένωρ, pertaining to Stentor, < Στένωρ, Stentorian. Fuller, Ch. Hist., X. iv. 61.]

stentorophonic (stēn'tō-rō-fon'ik), a. [< Gr. στενωροφώνος, loud-voiced like Stentor, < Στένωρ, Stentor (see stentor), + φωνή, voice.] Speaking or sounding very loud. S. Butler, Hudibras, III. i. 252.

stent-roll (stēnt'rōl), n. The cress-roll. [Scotch.]

Stenus (stē-nus), n. [NL. (Latreille, 1796), < Gr. stēnōs, narrow, strait.] A large and cosmopolitan genus of coleopterous insects, typical of the old family Stenidae, which is now included in the Staphylinidae. More than 200 species are known, all of small size and active habits, found usually on the banks of streams or ponds.

step (step), v.; pret. and pp. stepped or stept, ppr. stepping. [< (a) ME. steppen, stappan, < AS. steppan, stappan = OFries. steppa = MD. steppen, stuppen, stappan, D. stappen = MLG. stappen = OHG. stephan, stephen, steffen, stepfen, MHG. stepfen, also OHG. staphon, MHG. staphen, staffen, stapfen, go, step; secondary forms (in part from the noun) of (b) ME. stapen, *< AS. *stapan* (not found in the inf., for which appears the form steppan or stappan, above, which has the same pret. stōp, pp. stapen) = OS. stapan = OFries. stapa = MLG. stapen, go, advance; Teut. √ stap, appearing nasalized in stamp, q. v.; cf. Russ. stopa, footstep, sole of the foot; Skt. √ stambh, prop, make firm; ult. < √ sta, stand: see stand.] I. intrans. 1. To move the legs and feet as in walking; advance or recede by a movement of the foot or feet: as, to step forward; to step backward; to step up or down.

Alayn, for Goddes banes,
Stepe on thy feet; com out, man, al at anes.
Chaucer, Reeve's Tale, l. 164.

He pays you as surely as your feet hit the ground they step on.
Shak., T. N., iii. 4. 306.

'Tis done—he steps into the welcome chaise.
Couper, Retirement, l. 391.

2. To go; walk; march; especially, to go a short distance: as, to step to a neighbor's house.

He myghte outhir stappe ne stonde tyl he a staf hadde.
Piers Plowman (C), vii. 403.

step

Pray you, let's step in, and see a friend of mine.
Fletcher, Spanish Curate, iv. 6.
 O, if you please, miss, would you step and speak to Mr. Jarndyce?
Dickens, Bleak House, xiv.

3. To advance as if by chance or suddenly; come (in).
 By whose death he's stepp'd
Shak., T. of A., ii. 2. 232.
 Into a great estate.
 The old poets step in to the assistance of the medallist.
Addison, Ancient Medals, i.

4. To walk slowly, gravely, or with dignity.
 The meteor of a splendid season, she
Step thro' the stately minut of those days
Tennyson, Aylmer's Field.

5. To go in imagination; advance or recede mentally: as, to step back to the England of Elizabeth.
 They are stepping almost three thousand years backward into the remotest antiquity.
Pope, Iliad, Prt. f.
To step aside. (a) To walk to a little distance; retire for the occasion. (b) To deviate from the right path; err.
 To step aside is human.
Burns, To the Unclo Guid.
To step awry. See awry. — To step out, to increase the length of the step and the rapidity of motion.
 Jack or Donald marches away, . . . stepping out briskly to the tune of "The Girl I left behind me"
Thackeray, Vanity Fair, xxx.

II. trans. 1. To set; plant, as in stepping: as, step your foot on this thwart; he has never stepped foot in the city. [Familiar.] — 2. To measure by stepping: as, to step off the distance. — 3. To perform by stepping, as a dance: as, he stepped a stately galliard. — 4. To place or set (two or more cutting-tools) in a tool-post or rest in such manner that they simultaneously make successive cuts each respectively deeper than the preceding one, so that these cuts present the appearance of a series of ledges or steps. — 5. Naut., to fix the foot of (a mast) in its step, as in readiness for setting sail.

step (step), n. [ME. steppe, < AS. stepe, a step, footstep, = MD. stappe, steppe, step, step, D. stap = OHG. stapfo, stapfo, MHG. G. stapfe (> It. staf-fa, a stirrup, > ult. E. staffier), a footstep, footprint; from the verb.] 1. A pace; a completed movement made in raising the foot and setting it down again, as in walking, running, or dancing.

III. . . turn two mincing steps
 Into a manly stride. Shak., M. of V. iii. 4. 67.
 An inadvertent step may crush the snail.
Cowper, Task, vi. 364.

Hence — 2. In the plural, walk; passage; course or direction in which one goes by walking.

Conduct my steps to find the fatal tree
 In this deep forest Dryden, Æneid, vi. 276.
 But not by thee my steps shall be,
 For ever and for ever. Tennyson, A Farewell.

3. A support for the foot in ascending or descending: as, steps cut in a glacier; a structure or an appliance used to facilitate mounting from one level to another, whether alone or as one of a series: as, a stone step (a block of stone having a horizontal surface for the foot); a step of a staircase (one of the gradients composed of the tread and riser taken together); the step of a ladder (one of the rungs or rounds, or one of the treads or foot-pieces in a step-ladder).

The breadth of every single step or stair (should) be never less than one foot. Sir H. Wotton, Reliquie, p. 36.

An hundred winding steps convey That conclave to the upper day.
Scott, Marmion, ii. 33.

On the step of the altar, in front of the railing, were kneeling a band of the Fraternities Penitentie.

C. L. Norton, Travel and Study in Italy, p. 6.
 Specifically — (a) pl. A step-ladder. Also called pair of steps and set of steps. (b) A foot-piece for entering or alighting from a vehicle.

4. The space passed over or measured by one movement of the foot, as in walking: the distance between the feet in walking when both feet are on the ground; a half-pace.

If you move a step
 Beyond this ground you tread on, you are lost.
Fletcher, Spanish Curate, v. 5.

The gradus, a Roman measure, may be translated a step, or the half of a passus or pace. Arbutnot

5. An inconsiderable space; a short distance; a distance easily walked.

'Tis but a step, sir, just at the street's end
Cowper, To Joseph Hall, Esq.
 It is but a step from here to the Wells, and we can walk there.
Thackeray, Book of Snobs, xxxv.

6. Gradation; degree.

The Turks . . . studie their prophane Diuinitie and Law, and haue among them nine seuerall steps or degrees vnto the highest dignitie. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 313.

7. Degree in progress or advance; particularly, a forward move; gain or advantage; promotion; rise; a grade, as of rank.

Every age makes a step unto the end of all things.
Sir T. Browne, To a Friend.

To earn a garter or a step in the peerage.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng., xxii.

"General Tufto . . . and I were both shot in the same leg at Talavera." "Where you got your step," said George (punning).
Thackeray, Vanity Fair, xxviii.

The Silver Bill of 1890 . . . was declared to be a long step toward the goal of free coinage of silver.
New York Times, Jan. 15, 1891.

8. Print or impression of the foot; footprint; footstep; track.

And zit apperen the Steppes of the Asses feet, in 3 places of the Degrees, that ben of fulle harde Ston.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 81.

He seigh the steppes brode of a leoun.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 829.

9. Gait; manner of walking; sound of the step; foot; footfall: as, to hear a step at the door.

A foot more light, a step more true,
 Ne'er from the heath-flower dash'd the dew.
Scott, L. of the L., i. 18.

10. A proceeding, or one of a series of proceedings; measure; action: as, a rash step; to take prompt steps to prevent something.

It is no vicious blot, murder, or foulness,
 No unchaste action, or dishonour'd step,
 That hath deprived me of your grace and favour.
Shak., Lear, i. 1. 231.

Beware of desperate steps. The darkest day,
 Live till to-morrow, will have pass'd away.
Cowper, The Needleless Alarm.

11. Naut., a socket of wood or metal, or, in large ships, a solid platform on the keelson, supporting the heel of a mast. — 12. In carp., any piece of timber having the foot of another fixed upright in it. — 13. In mach.: (a) The lower brass of a journal-box or pillow-block. (b) A socket or bearing for the lower pivot of a spindle or vertical shaft. — 14. In music: (a) Same as degree, whether of the scale or of the staff. (b) The interval between two successive degrees of the scale, degrees of the staff, or keys of the keyboard. In the scale, a whole step is a major second, or tone, and a half-step a minor second, or semitone; and the same nomenclature is transferred to the staff and the keyboard. The successive steps between the normal tones of a scale, whether whole or half, are collectively called diatonic; while intervals involving other tones are called chromatic. — Out of step, not keeping step. — Pair of steps, set of steps, a step-ladder, especially one for indoor use. — Step by step. (a) By gradual and regular process. Locke, Human Understanding, ii. 9. (b) With equal pace; at the same rate of progress. Shak., Tempest, iii. 3. 78. — To break step. See break. — To keep step, to walk or march in unison; put the right and left foot forward alternately at the same moment with the corresponding foot of another person: often followed by with. — To keep step to, to walk, march, or dance in time to: as, to keep step to the music. — To take a step, or to take steps, to make a movement in a certain direction, either actually or as beginning any business; take initiatory measures; institute proceedings.

Steps in Timber work.

step-(step). [ME. step, < AS. steop, as in steop-bearn, stepchild (-bairn), steop-child, stepchild, steop-fader, stepfather, steop-modor, stepmother, etc. = OFries. stiap, step = D. stief = MLG. stief, L.G. stief = OHG. stiuf, stiof, MHG. G. stief = Icel. stjup = Sw. stjuf, stijf = Dan. stif, stiv, sted = prob. lit. 'orphaned,' as in AS. steopchild, steopbeorn, stepchild, steop-sunu, stepson, etc., which are prob. the oldest compounds, the correlative compounds, steop-fader, stepfather, etc., being formed later, when the prefix steop was taken appar. in some such sense as 'subsequent,' 'nominal,' or 'in law'; < **steopan*, found only as in comp., and in the secondary weak form, in comp. **a-stipan*, **astipan*, in pp. pl. astēpte, distēpte, orphaned, = OHG. stiufan, ar-stiufan, bi-stiufan, deprive of parents, orphan.] A prefix used in composition before father, mother, son, daughter, brother, sister, child, etc., to indicate that the person spoken of is a connection only by the marriage of a parent.

step-back (step'bak), a. [Irreg. < step + back.] Noting the relationship a deceased person bears to his widow's child by a second marriage. [Rare.]

Richard is Henry's step-back father.
The Nation, Aug. 23, 1888, p. 153.

stepbairn (step'bārn), n. [ME. steopbern, < AS. steopbeorn (= Icel. stjupbarn = Sw. stufbarn = Dan. stijbarn), < steop, step-, + beorn, child: see step- and *bairn*2, bairn.] A stepchild. [Obsolete or Scotch.]

step-bit (step'bit), n. A notched key-bit.

step-box (step'boks), n. A box or casing to inclose the base of an upright spindle or shaft-step, to retain the shaft in place and furnish a bearing, and to hold the lubricant.

stepbrother (step'brʊθər), n. [ME. stepbrother, stepbroder, < *AS. *steopbrōthor* (= D. stiefbroeder = MLG. stiefbruder, G. stiefbruder = Sw. styfbröder = Dan. stifbröder), < steop, step-, + brōthor, brother: see step- and brother.] One's stepfather's or stepmother's son by a former marriage.

stepchild (step'child), n. [ME. stepchild, < AS. steopchild (= OFries. steifkind = D. stiefkind = OHG. stiofchint, MLG. stiofkind, G. stiefkind), < steop, step-, + child, child: see step- and child.] The child of one's husband or wife by a former marriage.

step-country (step'kun'tri), n. A country that rears or receives and protects one born in another country. The speaker in the following quotation is an Italian brought up in Sweden: Farewell, my father—farewell, my step-country.
Disraeli, Contarini Fleming, ii. 4.

step-cover (step'kuv'ər), n. On a vehicle, a lid or protecting cover over a step. It is usually so fitted that the opening of the door moves the cover to one side and uncovers the step, or causes it, by a hinge or other device, to turn back out of the way.

step-cut (step'kut), n. Same as trap-cut (which see, under cut).

stepdame (step'dām), n. [Formerly also stepdam; < step- + dame.] A stepmother.

Phryxus . . . with his sister Helle fled from their cruel stepdam Ino. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 341.

step-dance (step'dāns), n. A dance marked by originality, variety, or difficulty in the steps; a dance in which the steps are more important than the figure, as a hornpipe or a clog-dance: usually a pas seul.

Orth'ris began rowlin' his eyes an' crackin' his fingers an' dancin' a step dance for to impress the Headman.
Rudyard Kipling, The Taking of Lungtungpen.

stepdaughter (step'dā'tər), n. [ME. stepdoughter, stepdoughter, stepdougter, stepdowter, < AS. steopdohter (= D. stiefdochter = MLG. stiefdochter = MHG. stiufdochter, G. stiefdochter = Icel. stjupdóttir = Sw. stifdotter = Dan. stifdatter), < steop, step-, + dohter, daughter: see step- and daughter.] A daughter of one's husband or wife by a former marriage.

After hir com the stepdaughter of Cleodalis, that hight also Gonnore. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), iii. 453.

stepet, a. A Middle English form of *steep*1.

stepfather (step'fā'fər), n. [ME. stepfader, stepfadyr, corruptly stifadre, < AS. steopfader (= OFries. stiapfader, stepfader = D. stiefvader = MLG. stiefvader = OHG. stiufvater, stioffvater, MHG. G. stiefvater = Icel. stjupfadir = Sw. styf-fader = Dan. stifvader), < steop, step-, + fader, father: see step- and father.] A man who is the husband of one's mother, but is not one's father.

I schel the telle altogadre, Beten Ichaue me stifadre.

Beves of Hamtoun, l. 464.

"He was delighted at his mother's marriage." "Odd, for he knew already what a stepfather was."

Jean Ingelow, Off the Skellings, xvii.

step-fault (step'fālt), n. One of a series of small, nearly parallel faults by which strata have been dislocated so as to occupy a position resembling a series of steps or stairs.

step-gage (step'gāj), n. A gage, arranged in the form of steps, for testing and correcting fixed caliper-gages, etc. See cut under *gage*2.

step-grate (step'grāt), n. See *grate*2.

stephane (stef'a-nē), n. [Gr. στέφανος, the brim of a helmet, a stephane (see def.), crown. Cf. στέφανος, a wreath, garland, crown: see stephanos.] In Gr. archæol., a head-dress or ornament consisting of a band or coronet typically high in the middle, over the brow, and diminishing toward either side of the head. It is characteristic of the goddess Hera, though often represented as worn by other goddesses, as well as by mortals, and is frequently ornamented with an anthemion, as in the example figured on the following page.

stephanial (ste-fā'ni-əl), a. [Gr. στέφανιον + -al.] Of or pertaining to the stephanion: as, a stephanial point.

stephanic (ste-fan'ik), a. [Gr. στέφανος, a wreath, crown: see stephanos.] Same as stephanial.

Stepped Pyramid, Sakkara, Egypt.

are formed in a more or less even series of enormous steps. Some of the oldest of the Egyptian pyramids present this form.

stepper (step'ér). n. [step + *-er*1.] One who or that which steps (with a certain gait or carriage expressed or implied): specifically, a fast horse: often in composition: as, a high-stepper; that horse is a good stepper.

The mare's a stepper, and Phil King knows how to handle the ribbons. The Century, XXXVIII. 377.

stepping (step'ing), n. 1. Collectively, the steps of a joint in which the parts at their junction form a series of reentrant angles, thus resembling a flight of steps, as in the fitting of the doors to the front frames of safes.—2. Collectively, a series of step-like bearings, as the bearings for the spindles of a spinning-frame or spooling-machine, or of a ball-winding machine.

stepping-point (step'ing-point). n. Same as bearding, 1.

stepping-stone (step'ing-stōn), n. 1. A raised stone in a stream or in a swampy place designed to save the feet in walking.—2. A horse-block. Halliw.ell. [Prov. Eng.]—3. An aid or means by which an end may be accomplished or an object gained; an assistance to progress.

stepsister (step'sis'ter). n. [ME. stepsystyr (= D. stiefmutter = MHG. G. stief-chwester = Sw. stiefsyster = Dan. stiefsøster); step- + sister.] One's stepfather's or stepmother's daughter by a former marriage.

stepson (-step'sun), n. [< ME. stepsonc, stepsune.
< AS. stepsumu (= D. stepfzoon = MLG. stiefzoon =
 OHG. stufsum, MHG. stufsum, G. stiefsohn = Icel. stjúpson = Sw. stufson = Dan. stiefsøn), <
step-, step- + sumu, son.] A son of one's husband or wife by a former marriage.

step-stone (step'stōn), n. Same as stepping-stone. [Rare.]

step-vein (step'vān). n. In mining, a vein filling a fissure, consisting alternately of flats, or horizontal, and steeply inclined or vertical parts, resembling in form a flight of steps.

ster. [C ME. -ster, -stre, -estre, -estere, < AS. -estre, used fem. of -ere, as in webbester, a female weaver (E. webster), fithlister, a female fiddler, ritegester, a female prophet, etc.: = D. -ster, as in spunster, a female spinner (= E. spinster), etc., = LL. -ster, as in poctaster (see -aster, poct-aster, criticaster, etc.), also in olaster; < Indo-Eur. -as + -tar.] A termination denoting occupation. as in millster, gamester, spinster, sungster, etc. In the earliest times, and up to about the end of the thirteenth century, it was generally the sign of the feminine gender, corresponding to the masculine -er or -or. In the fourteenth century it began to give way to the feminine termination to the Norman -ess, with which it was later often combined, as in jeantress, tempretes, constress, or, if it survived, was used chiefly as masculine, and took on new meanings of contempt or depreciation, as in trickster, gamester, junster, etc. or, indicated simplicity or existence, as in deemster, doomster, luckster, tapster, teamster, upholder, roadster, youngster, etc. Some of the older nouns with this suffix survive as surnames, as Baxter, Webster, Sangster, Dempster, etc.

ster. An abbreviation of sterling?
steracle, n. [Early mod. E., also sterracle, sterakel; < ME. steracle; origin obscure.] A strange thing, sight, or performance; a prank.

Whan thou art sett upon the pynnaele,
Thou xalt ther pleyne a qweynt stracle,
Or ellys shewe a grett miracle,
Thysself sfrom hurte thou save.

Country Mysteries, p. 208. (Halliwell.)
stercobilin (stér'kō-bil-in). n. [L. stercus (stereor-1. dung. + bilis, bile. + -in<sup>2</sup>.) The brown coloring matter of the feces.

stercoraceous (stēr-kō-rā'shius), a. [L. stercus (-or-i), dung, + -accous.] 1. Pertaining to, composed of, or in any way resembling dung, as a color, or a composition.

orifice, or feces: excrementitious; fecal.—2. In entom., frequenting or feeding on dung, as many beetles, flies, etc.—Stercoraceous vomiting, in part vomiting of fecal matter.
 stercoraria, v. See stercoraria.

were sometimes of natural leaves, as of the olive, laurel, oak, parsley, or pine, and sometimes of leaves of metal, as gold, and their award was a very usual distinction among the Greeks. In this sense very commonly expressed by the translators as 'crown,' as in the famous oration "On the Crown" of Demosthenes. (b) A head-ornament or crown akin to the staphane, from which it differs in that it preserves the same height all round, instead of diminishing toward the sides. See cut in preceding column.

Stephanotis (stef-a-nō'tis), n. [NL. (Thouars, 1803), so called in allusion to the corona of five flattened petaloid bodies or auricles: <Gr. stēpanōtēs, a crown, + otēs (ōtēs), ear.] 1. A genus of acaulescent plants of the tribe Marsdenia, distinguished from Marsdenia by its large white salver-shaped or funnel-form corolla. There are about 15 species, of which 5 are natives of Madagascar, 5 of the Malay archipelago and southern China, 3 of Cuba, and 1 of Peru. They are some shrubby twiners, often high climbing, bearing opposite deep-green fleshy or leathery leaves, and beautiful fragrant waxy flowers in axillary cymes between the petioles. The cylindrical corolla is divided into 5 lobes and often again at the throat, spreads into a large deeply lobed calyx. The fruit consists of two thick horizontal follicles with numerous seeds. S. floribunda is a favorite climber on growth in climber commonly known by its generic name Steph, it is also roz-zorrer, and sometimes in its native country, as Mogana-raz-jamine or step-ladder (step-lad fr. n. A ladder having flat steps, or treads, in place of rungs, and usually provided with an adjustable supporting frame.

2. [l. c.] A plant of the genus.

stepmother (step'mʌθər n. [ME. step-moder, stepmāder, AS. stepmoder = OFries. stepmōder = D. stepmōder = MLG. steimoder = OHG. steimmoder, MHG. steimmoder, G. steifmutter = Icel. stýpmóðir = Sw. stýfmoder = Dan. stiefmoder], step-, step-, moder, mother.] 1. A woman who is the wife of one's father, but is not one's mother.

No, be assure I you shall not find me, daughter,
After the slander of most stepmothers.
Evil-eyed unto you. Stalk, Cymbeline, i. 1. 71.

2. A long filament shooting up by the side of the nail. Halluc. 7. [Prov. Eng.]—3. The pansy. Britten and Holland, Eng. Plant Names. [Prov. Eng.]—Stepmother's blessing, a haemtail. Halluc. 8. [Prov. Eng.]

stepmotherly (step'muth'ér-li). a. [< step-mother ÷ -li]. Pertaining to or befitting a stepmother: hence, figuratively, harsh or neglectful: in allusion to the behavior popularly attributed to stepmothers.

step-parent (step'pär'ent), n. A stepfather or stepmother.

steppe (step). n. [= F. D. G. Dan. steppe = Sw. stopp < Russ. step' a waste, heath, steppe.]

A more or less level tract devoid of trees; a name given to certain parts of European and Asiatic Russia, of which the most characteristic feature is the absence of forests. The word steppe was introduced into the scientific literature of western Europe by Humboldt, in whose "Ansichten der Natur" a work widely circulated, and translated into all the most important European languages—there is a chapter entitled "Steppen und Wüsten" (Steppes and Deserts). The steppe region in Europe begins on the borders of Holland, and extends through northern Germany—where such lands are called Heiden (heaths)—into Russia in Europe, and beyond the Ural Mountains almost to the Pacific Ocean, for a distance of about 4,500 miles. Although the steppes are in general characterized by the lack of an arboreal and the presence of a grassy vegetation, and by their uniformly level surface, there are many breaks in this botanical and geographical monotony; thus, the form of the steppes varies from the broad, level, open, and treeless forests extending along the streams, lakes, and rivers, and sometimes tall shrubby, large oaks (both fresh and saline), rolling hills, ridges, barren sands, and patches covered with saline effluence. The general character of the region is prairie, and the population (especially of the Asiatic steppes) nomadic; but all this has been to a considerable extent interfered with by the spread of Russian civilization and the domination of Russian authority. The Russian and Siberian steppes pass southward into the deserts of central Asia, and northward into the tundra region of the extreme north. Humboldt, in the work named above, occasionally uses the term steppe in describing the prairies and llanos of South America, and the plains, prairies, and steppes of the northern division of the New World, and his application is followed to a certain extent by other physical geographers who write of North America; but the word steppe is written in popular use except as to places where Russian is the dominating language.

Some of the Asiatic Steppe are grassy plains, others are covered with succulent, evergreen, articulate Chenopods: many exist from a distance with flakes of exuded salt which cover the clayey soil, not unlike in appearance to fresh fallen snow.

Humboldt, Aspects of Nature (trans.).
Steppe mountain, rindernest.

stepped (stept), a. [step + -ed<sup>2</sup>.] 1. Formed in or forming a step, or a series of steps.—2. Supported, as a vertical shaft, by a step, step-like bearing, or shoe.—Stepped cone. Same as con-

The arch of the nose of the cranium is markedly flattened in the frontal view and is somewhat wider in appearance.

stephanion, -sē-fā'nī-on, n. [ph. stē-plō-in (ing), DSL. (Gr. στέφανος, dim. of στέφανος, a wreath; see stēplō n.)] In cratium, the point where the central suture crosses the temporal ridge. An upper stephanion and a lower are distinguished, corresponding to the upper and lower temporal ridges. See cuticular suture.

staphanite (staf-an-it; n. [Named after Staphan, Archduke of Austria.] A native sulphid of silver and antimony, a mineral of iron-black color and metallic luster. It crystallizes in the orthorhombic system, and is often found associated with native silver. Also called black silver or black silver.

stephanome -s'tē-fā-nō-mē, n. [Gr. stephane = crown (corona) + ma = take; ma = to take.] An instrument for measuring the angular dimensions of galaxies—for example, the stars in mountain observatories. See the definition.

This instrument, known as Stylus, consists of a graduated 11" scale on which the eye is placed, and in which the stylus rests carrying certain projections. With its aid it is possible to draw a horizontal line which would be useless, maybe measured, by a vulcan 5 minutes.

Phil Mag., 5th ser., XXIX, 1971.

Stephanophorus (stef-a-nof'ô-rus), n. [NL. (Strickland, 1841), < Gr. στεφανος, stefanos, crown, + φορος = E. phoros.] 1. In ornith., a monotypic Neotropical genus of tanagers, having a short, turned, almost pyriform bill. S. leucophaea, L. Bush-bird, with the lesser wing-coverts blue, the vertical crest crimson, the hindhead silky-white, the forehead, lores, and chin black. The length is seven inches. The bird is confined to southern Brazil, Paraguay, Uruguay, and northern parts of the Argentine Republic.

•••••

2. In entom., a genus of coleopterous insects.

Chetralut. 1873.
stephanos (stef'a-nos), n.;
pl. stephanoi (-noi). [Gr.

græcor., a wreath, crown. [coron., put around, encircle, wreath, crown. Cf.
stemma.] In Gr. architect.:
(A) A wreath awarded as a prize to the victor in a public conte-t, or as a token of honor, especially in recognition of some public service. Such wreaths Stemmas (?).

Head of Hera on a liver
Sister of Elpis 5th century

Head of Hera on a lion Statue of Elis; 5th century B.C.

stercoral (stér'kô-rál), a. and n. [L. stercus (-or-), dung, + -al.] I. a. Of or pertaining to feces; stercoraceous.

II. † n. Dung; excrement.

Stercoranism (stér'kô-ran-izm), n. [L. Stercoran-ist + -ism.] In eccl. hist., the doctrine or belief of the Stercoranists. Also Stercorianism, Stercorarianism.

Stercoranist (stér'kô-ran-ist), n. [= F. stercoraniste, ML. Stercoranista, L. stercus (-or-), dung.] A name applied by opponents to various persons in the church who were said to hold a grossly materialistic conception of the Lord's Supper. They were alleged to believe that the Lord's body was like other food consumed, digested and evacuated. The word was first used by Cardinal Humbert in 1054. Also Stercorianist, Stercorarian.

stercoraceous (stér'kô-râ-ré-us), a. Same as stercoraceous.

Stercorarian (stér'kô-râ-ri-an), n. [L. stercorarius, pertaining to dung (L. stercus (-or-), dung), + -an.] Same as Stercoranist.

Stercorarianism (stér'kô-râ-ri-an-izm), n. [L. Stercorarian + -ism.] Same as Stercoranism.

Stercorariinae (stér'kô-râ-ri-i-né), n. pl. [NL., L. Stercorarius + -inae.] The dung-hunters, a subfamily of Laridae, typified by the genus Stercorarius; same as Lestridinae. See cuts under skua and Stercorarius.

Stercorarius (stér'kô-râ-ri-us), n. [NL. (Brisson, 1760), L. stercorarius, pertaining to dung; see stercorary.] The dung-hunters, skuas, or jagers, a genus of Laridae, typical of the subfamily Stercorariinae. Also called Lestris. The name is used (a) for all the species of the subfamily; (b) for the larger species, as S. skua, the smaller being called Lestris (see cut under skua). (c) for the smaller species S.

named. L. stercus (stercor-), excrement.] 1. A genus of plants, type of the order Sterculiaceae and of the tribe Sterculieae. It is characterized by a stamen-column usually with fifteen anthers crowded without regular order, a five-celled ovary with two or more Flowering Branch of Sterculia platyneura.

a, a male flower; b, the same before anthesis; c, the stamens;
d, the fruit

ovules in each cell, and a fruit of distinct spreading dehiscent carpels. There are about 85 species, natives of warm climates, especially of tropical Asia. They are most commonly large trees, with simple feather-veined leaves, and unisexual flowers in drooping panicles, with a colored bell-shaped calyx, and a fruit of five radiating woody follicles opening on the upper edge, but none of these characters is universal. Their inner bark is composed of a tough fiber which is not affected by moisture, and is in many species a valuable material for cordage, mats, bags, paper, or for upholstery. Their seeds are filled with an oil which may be used for lamps, and are slightly acid but often edible. They are mucilaginous, and often exude an abundance of gum resembling gum tragacanth, swelling into a jelly in cold water without dissolving. S. urens, and perhaps other species, furnish a share of the Indian tragacanth, or kutira gum. S. Traucantha of western Africa yields the African or Senegal tragacanth. S. acerifolia of New South Wales, a large tree, sometimes 50 feet high and 8 feet in girth, with large lobed leaves and racemes of showy red flowers, is known as flame tree, and also as laccarba from its beautiful lac-like inner bark, which becomes 2 inches thick and is valued for many uses. S. diversifolia, the Victorian bottle-tree or urrigoiz, is a stout tree with coarse fiber for the smaller S. rhipidoloba seed oil-tree, and for S. villosa, see oaklet. S. litoralis the sycamore of New South Wales also yields a fiber, there made into fancy articles. S. quadrata, the cabol of eastern and northern Australia, produces clusters of brilliant scarlet fruits, each with ten or eleven black seeds resembling bilberts in taste and eaten as a substitute for them. S. Carthagenensis (S. Chachay), the chicha or puna, yields seeds eaten as nuts in Brazil and northern India. It is a handsome tree with yellowish purple-spotted flowers. S. titcha (see darceiro) is the source of some native remedies in Java. S. alata has been called Indica coccoloba. S. platyneura of Japan and China, called parrot, see malva and caranaba.

2. In entom., a genus of coleopterous insects. Laporte, 1845.

Sterculiaceae (ster'ku-li-â-sé-â), n. pl. [NL. (Ventenat, 1799), L. Sterculia + -aceae.] An order of polypetalous plants, of the cohort Malvales, intermediate between the two orders Malvaceae and Tiliaceae, resembling the former in its variety of habit and foliage and its frequently monadelphous stamens, and the latter in its two-celled anthers. It includes about 750 species, belonging to 49 genera, classed in 8 tribes, natives mostly of the tropics, or occurring further to the south in Africa and Australia.

sterculiaceous (ster'ku-li-â-shi-us), a. Of or pertaining to the plant-order Sterculiaceae.

sterculiad (ster'ku-li-ad), n. A plant of the order Sterculiaceae. Lindley.

Sterculieae (ster'ku-li-â-é-â), n. pl. [NL. (A. P. de Candolle, 1824), L. Sterculia + -eae.] A tribe of plants, of the order Sterculiaceae. It is characterized by unisexual or polygamous flowers without petals, commonly with a colored calyx, and five to fifteen anthers adnate at the summit of a long or short column of united filaments, and either crowded or arranged in a definite series or ring. It includes 5 genera, of which Sterculia is the type. They are natives mostly of tropical Asia and Africa, extending into Australia and Java. See Sterculia.

stere<sup>1</sup>, a. Middle English form of steer<sup>1</sup>, ster<sup>2</sup>, st<sup>1</sup>, st<sup>2</sup>.

stere<sup>2</sup> (stär), n. [= F. stère, Gr. στερεός, solid, cubic; prob. L. st<sup>2</sup> as in st<sup>2</sup>at, stand.] A cubic meter; the French unit for solid measure, equal to 35.31 cubic feet. The word stère is but little used, except with reference to cordwood, cubic meter being the expression in universal use for the solid unit.

Sterelmintha (ster-el-min'thā), n. pl. [NL., irreg. Gr. στερεός, stiff, hard, solid, + ἔμυς (ē- myō), a worm.] The parenchymatous endoparasitic worms, having no intestinal canal. They formed one of two main divisions, the other being Cœlmintha, into which the Entozoa were divided by Owen in 1843, corresponding to the parenchymatous intestinal worms or cœlminthozoa of Cuvier. They are such as the cestoid and trematoid worms, or tapes and flukes.

sterelminthic (ster-el-min'thik), a. [L. Sterelmintha + -ic.] Of or pertaining to the Sterelmintha.

sterelminthous (ster-el-min'thus), a. Same as sterelminthic.

stereo- (stér'ē-ō, also, especially in trade use, stē'rē-ō), a. An element of Greek origin, meaning 'solid.'

stereo (stér'ē-ō), n. and a. [Short for stereotype.] Same as stereotype: as, a stereo plate; stereo apparatus.

stereobate (stér'ē-ō-bāt), n. [= F. stéréobate, Gr. στερεός, solid, firm, + βάσις, verbal adj. of βαίνω, go, step: see base<sup>2</sup>.] In arch., the substructure, foundation, or solid platform upon which a building is erected. In columnar buildings it includes the stydobate, which is the uppermost step or platform of the foundation upon which the columns stand.

Stereobate of the Parthenon, east front (illustrating the convex curvature of the base of the Greek Doric temple-foundation).

stereobatic (stér'ē-ō-bat'ik), a. [L. stereobate + -ic.] Of, pertaining to, or resembling a stereobate; of the character of a stereobate. Encyc. Brit., II. 408.

stereoblastula (stér'ē-ō-blas'tū-lā), n. pl. stereoblastulae (-lā). [NL., Gr. στερεός, solid, + βλαστός, a germ.] A solid blastula; a blastula in which there is no cavity. J. A. Ryder.

stereochrome (stér'ē-ō-krōm), n. [Gr. στερεός, solid, + χρῶμα, color.] A stereochromic picture. See stereochromy.

stereochromic (stér'ē-ō-kro'mik), a. [L. stereochromy + -ic.] Of or pertaining to stereochromy; produced by stereochromy.—Stereochromic process, the method of painting by stereochromy.

stereochromy (stér'ē-ō-kro'mi), n. [Gr. στερεός, solid, + χρῶμα, color.] A method of painting in which water-glass serves as the connecting medium between the color and its substratum.

stereo-clumps (stér'ē-ō-klumps), n. pl. [L. stercus + clump.] Sectional blocks of type-metal or wood, usually three fourths of an inch high, made of different sizes so that they can be combined to fit and uphold any size of stereotype plate. When clumps are added, they keep the plate secure in the process of printing. [Eng.]

stereo-electric (stér'ē-ō-ék'trik), a. [Gr. στερεός, solid, + L. electric.] Noting the electric current which ensues when two solids, especially two metals, as bismuth and antimony, are brought together at different temperatures.

stereogastrula (stér'ē-ō-gas'trū-lā), n. pl. stereogastrulae (-lā). [NL., Gr. στερεός, solid, + NL. gastrula, q. v.] A solid gastrula; a form of gastrula in which no cleavage-cavity is developed. J. A. Ryder.

Stereognathus (stér'ē-ō-gnā-thus), n. [NL. (Charlesworth, 1854), Gr. στερεός, solid, + γνάθος, jaw.] A genus of fossil mammals of problematical character from the Lower Oolite of Oxfordshire, England, later identified with Microllestes. The original fossil was named S. ooliticus.

stereogram (stér'ē-ō-gram), n. [Gr. στερεός, solid, + γραμμή, a writing, Gr. γραφω, write: see gram<sup>2</sup>.] A diagram or picture which represents objects in such a way as to give the impression of relief or solidity; specifically, a double photographic picture or a pair of pictures mounted together for the stereoscope; a stereoscopic picture.

stereograph (stér'ē-ō-gráf), n. [Gr. στερεός, solid, + γραφω, write.] Same as stereogram.
stereographic (stér'ē-ō-gráf'ik), a. [= F. stéréographique; as stereography + -ic.] Showing the whole of a sphere on the whole of an pointed out by S. parasiticus, and others, the larger being called Euphonia or Melospiza.

Figure 1. A skua, a bird of prey.

stercorary (stér'kô-râ-ri), a. and n. [L. stercorarius, pertaining to dung (ML. neut. Stercorarium, a place for dung), L. stercus (-or-), dung.] I. a. Pertaining or relating to dung or manure; consisting of dung. D. G. Mitchell, Wet Days, p. 17.

II. n. pl. stercorarius (-ri). A place, properly so called, from the weather, for containing dung.

stercorate (stér'kô-rât), v. t.; pret. and pp. stercorated, ppr. stercorating. [L. stercoratus, pp. of stercorare, dung, manure, L. stercus (-or-), dung.] To manure or dung. Scott, Pirate, iv.

stercorate (stér'kô-rât), n. [L. stercoratus, v.] Dung; excrement. Imp. Dict.

stercoration (stér'kô-râ-shon), n. [L. stercoratus, a dunging or manuring, L. stercorare, pp. stercoratus, dung, manure, L. stercus (-or-), dung.] The act of manuring with dung. Encyc. Brit., To Mr. Wotton.

stercoremia, stercoræmia (stér'kô-ré-mi-â), n. [NL. stercoræmia, L. stercus (-or-), dung, + Gr. αἷμα, blood.] Contamination of the blood from retained feces.

Stercorianism, Stercorianist (stér'kô-ri-an-izm, -ist). Same as Stercoranism, Stercoranist.

stercoricolous (stér'kô-rik'ō-lus), a. [L. stercus (-or-), dung, + κόλος, inhabit.] Inhabiting excrement; dwelling in dung. Encyc. Brit., XIX. 842.

Stercorist (stér'kô-rist), n. [L. stercus (-or-), dung, + -ist.] A Stercoranist.

stercorite (stér'kô-rīt), n. [L. stercus (-or-), dung, + -ite.] A hydrous phosphate of ammonium and sodium, found in guano on the island Ichaboe, off the west coast of Africa.

stercoryt (stér'kô-ri), n. [L. stercus (-or-), dung.] Excrement, dung. Mor. for Mags., III. 246.

Sterculia (stér'ku-li-â), n. [NL. (Linnæus, 1753), so called from the fetid flowers or fruit of certain species; L. Sterculus, a deity so

stereographic

infinite plane, while preserving the angles.—Stereographic map-projection. See projection.
stereographical (ster'ē-ō-graf'i-kal), a. [< stereographic + -al.] Same as stereographic.
stereographically (ster'ē-ō-graf'i-kal-i), adv. In a stereographic manner; by delineation on a plane.

stereography (ster'ē-ō-graf'i), n. [= F. stéréographie, < Gr. στερεός, solid, + -γραφία, < γράφειν, write.] The art of delineating the forms of solid bodies on a plane; a branch of solid geometry which demonstrates the properties and shows the construction of all solids which are regularly defined.

Stereolepis (ster'ē-ō-l'e-pis), n. [NL. (Ayres, 1859), < Gr. στερεός, solid, + λεπίς, a scale.] 1. A genus of serranoid fishes of enormous size in comparison with related forms. S. gigas, the jew-fish or black sea-bass of the Californian coast, reaches a length of 5 feet. It is brownish- or greenish-black with large black blotches, most evident in the young.

Jew-fish (Stereolepis gigas).

2. [i. e.] A fish of this genus.

stereome (ster'ē-ōm), n. [< Gr. στερεώμα, a solid body, < στερεός, solid.] In bot., a name proposed by Schwendener for those elements which impart strength to a fibrovascular bundle. Compare mesome.

stereometer (ster'ē-ō-m'e-tēr), n. [< Gr. στερεός, solid, + μέτρον, a measure.] 1. An instrument for measuring the solid capacity of a vessel.—2. An instrument for determining the specific gravity of liquids, porous bodies, etc.

stereometric (ster'ē-ō-m'e-trik), a. [< stereometry + -ic.] Pertaining to or performed by stereometry.—Stereometric function. See function.

stereometrical (ster'ē-ō-m'e-tri-kal), a. [< stereometric + -al.] Same as stereometric.

stereometrically (ster'ē-ō-m'e-tri-kal-i), adv. By or with reference to stereometry.

stereometry (ster'ē-ō-m'e-tri), n. [= F. stéréométrie, < Gr. στερεός, solid, εμπείρ, + μέτρον, measure.] 1. The art of measuring volumes.—2. The metrical geometry of solids.—3. The art or process of determining the specific gravity of liquids, porous bodies, powders, etc.

stereo-mold (ster'ē-ō-möld), n. [< stereo + mold.] A mold used in stereotyping.

stereomonscope (ster'ē-ō-mon'ō-sköp), n. [< Gr. στερεός, solid, + μόνος, single, alone, + σκοπεῖν, view.] An instrument with two lenses for exhibiting on a screen of ground glass a single picture so as to give it all the effect of solidity.

stereoneural (ster'ē-ō-nū'al), a. [< Gr. στερεός, solid, + νεῦρον, a nerve.] Having the nervous center, if any, solid.

stereoplasma (ster'ē-ō-plazm), n. [< NL. stereoplasma, < Gr. στερεός, solid, + πλάσμα, anything molded or formed: see plasm.] 1. In corals, a delicate endotheal structure occupying different positions in the corallite, often forming vertical processes in the interseptal loculi or encircling septa, or acting as true endothea. This substance, which connects septa (envirning their free edges in some paleozoic corals), stretches across interseptal loculi irregularly, and sometimes fills up the lower part of the inside of the corallum, constituting a solid mass there. It is to be distinguished from the true endothea.
2. In bot., same as stereoplasma.

stereoplasma (ster'ē-ō-plas'mā), n. [NL.: see stereoplasma.] 1. Same as stereoplasma, 1. Lindström.—2. In bot., a term proposed by Naegeli for the solid part of protoplasm. Compare hygroplasma.

stereoplastic (ster'ē-ō-plaz'mik), a. [< stereoplasma + -ic.] Of the nature of or formed by stereoplasma; consisting of that substance.

stereopticon (ster'ē-ōp'ti-kon), n. [< Gr. στερεός, solid, + οπτικός, pertaining to seeing or sight: see optic.] An improved form of magic lantern, consisting essentially of two complete lanterns matched and connected. The object of the reduplication is to permit the pictures shown to pass from one to the next by a sort of dissolving effect which is secured by alternate use of the two lenses, and at the same time to avoid the delay or the unpleasant sliding of the pictures across the field in view of the audience, but imperfectly avoidable when the simple magic lantern is used. The two lanterns may be either superposed or Double-tier Stereopticon.

A, A, tubes containing objectives; B, B', covers for condensers; C, C', collapsible bellows fronts of the lanterns, which are mounted one above the other and hinged together at the rear standards (as shown at D) to provide for the elevation or depression necessary to bring the views on the screen into exact superposition. E, E', lime light boxes, one of the lime cylinders F and oxyhydrogen jets G being shown in the upper box, a part of which is removed; H, oxygen holder; I, hydrogen holder; J, J', flexible tubes for separately conveying these gases to the burners and mixing them only as they are needed to supply light. L, set screw for elevation or depression; M, milled heads of shift operating screw for extending or shortening the lens tubes A. A' in adjustment of the focus. N, openings for insertion of slides, with in-lined buttons for insuring exact position.

placed side by side. Some forms of stereopticon are made with three lanterns.

stereoscope (ster'ē-ō-sköp), n. [= F. stéréoscope, < Gr. στερεός, solid, + σκοπεῖν, view.] An optical instrument illustrating the phenomena of binocular vision, and serving to produce from two nearly similar pictures of an object the effect of a single picture with the appearance of relief and solidity belonging to ordinary vision. It depends upon the fact that in ordinary vision, while the respective images of an object formed upon the retinas of the two eyes differ slightly because of the divergence of the rays from each point of the object, yet the effect upon the brain is that of a single object seen in perspective relief which the monocular image lacks. The slide of the stereoscope shows two pictures side by side taken under a small difference of angular view, each eye looking upon one picture only; thus, as in ordinary vision, two images are conveyed to the brain which unite into one, exhibiting the objects represented under a high degree of relief. A reflecting form of stereoscope was invented by Sir Charles Wheatstone in 1838. Subsequently Sir David Brewster invented the lenticular or refracting stereoscope, based on the refractive properties of semi-double convex lenses. This is the one now in general use. There are many forms of it, one of which is shown in the figure. The action is illustrated by the diagram beneath. The light-rays from corresponding points of the two pictures P and P' are refracted in passing through the lenses L, L', and their directions changed so that they now seem to the eyes E, E' to diverge from a common point A beyond the plane of the card. By special effort a skilled observer can combine stereoscopic pictures into one without the use of the instrument, each eye being directed to one picture only and (to produce the normal stereoscopic effect) the one on its own side; the process may be facilitated by interposing a card screen between the pictures so that, for example, the left picture is entirely cut off from the right eye, etc. If the eyes are crossed so that the right eye sees the left picture and the left eye the right only, and the images combined by special effort, the usual stereoscopic effect is reversed—a convex surface becomes concave, etc. A similar pseudoscopic result is obtained with the ordinary stereoscope if the positions of the two pictures are exchanged.

Stereoscope.

stereoscopic (ster'ē-ō-sköp'ik), a. [= F. stéréoscopique; as stereoscope + -ic.] Of, pertaining to, or resembling the stereoscope; adapted to the stereoscope; having the form in relief, or proper perspective, as of an object seen in the stereoscope: as, stereoscopic pictures; stereoscopic views.—Stereoscopic camera, diagrams, projection. See the nouns.

stereoscopical (ster'ē-ō-sköp'i-kal), a. [< stereoscopic + -al.] Same as stereoscopic.

stereoscopically (ster'ē-ō-sköp'i-kal-i), adv. By or as by a stereoscope.

stereoscopist (ster'ē-ō-sköp'ist), n. [< stereoscope + -ist.] One versed in the use or manufacture of stereoscopes.

stereoscopy (ster'ē-ō-sköp-i), n. [= F. stéréoscopie, < Gr. στερεός, solid, + -σκοπεῖν, < σκοπεῖν, view.] The use or construction of stereoscopes.

stereotyper

stereotomic (ster'ē-ō-tom'ik), a. [< stereotom-y + -ic.] Pertaining to or performed by stereotomy.

stereotomical (ster'ē-ō-tom'i-kal), a. [< stereotomic + -al.] Same as stereotomic.

stereotomy (ster'ē-ō-tō-mi), n. [= F. stéréotomie, < Gr. στερεός, solid, + -τομία, < τέμνειν, ταμῖν, cut.] The science or art of cutting solids into certain figures or sections.

stereotrope (ster'ē-ō-trōp), n. [< Gr. στερεός, solid, + τροπή, a turning, < τρέπειν, turn.] An instrument by which an object is perceived as if in motion and with an appearance of solidity or relief as in nature. It consists of a series of stereoscopic pictures, generally eight, of an object in the successive positions it assumes in completing any motion, affixed to an octagonal drum revolving under an ordinary lenticular stereoscope, and viewed through a solid cylinder pierced in its entire length by two apertures, which makes four revolutions for one of the picture-drum. The observer thus sees the object constantly in one place, but with its parts apparently in motion and in solid and natural relief.

stereotype (ster'ē-ō-tīp), n. and a. [= F. stéréotype, < Gr. στερεός, fixed, + τύπος, impression, type: see type.] 1. The duplicate, in one piece of type-metal, of the face of a collection of types composed for printing. Three processes are used. (a) The plaster process, in which a mold taken from the composed types in fluid plaster of Paris is baked until dry, and is then submerged in melted type-metal. The cast taken in this mold, when cooled, is shaved to proper thickness, making the stereotype plate. (b) The clay process, in which the mold, taken by a press on a prepared surface of stiff clay, is baked until dry, and filled by pouring into it fluid metal. (c) The papier-mâché process, in which the mold is made by covering the type with a preparation of paper-pulp and clay, which is beaten into the interstices of the type-surface by a stiff brush. This mold when baked by steam-heat is put in a casting-box, which is filled with melted metal. This is the rudest but quickest process. Stereotypes for daily newspapers are usually made in fifteen minutes. For newspaper-work the plates for rotary presses are molded and cast with a curved surface that fits them to the impression-cylinder. The practice of stereotyping is now confined to newspapers and the cheaper forms of printed work. Plates of books, woodcuts, and the finer forms of printing are now made by the electrolyte process. (See electrotype.) Stereotype plates were first made, but imperfectly, by William Ged, at Edinburgh, in 1725. The plaster process, which was the first to become popular, was invented by Wildon and Lord Stanhope in 1810.

A, Stereotype Founding Apparatus. B, Stereotype Plates from the mold. a, furnace by which the water-jacketed mold is uniformly heated. The mold is supported on the frame d and on the rollers f; the parts of the mold are held together by a clamping-screw c; the water is supplied to the water-jacket through the funnel e. In pouring the metal, the mold is placed in position shown in dotted outline.

2. Loosely, an electrolyte.—3. The art of making plates of fixed metallic types; the process of producing printed work by means of such plates.

II. a. Of or pertaining to stereotype, or stereotyping, or stereotype printing: as, stereotype work; stereotype plates.

stereotype (ster'ē-ō-tīp), v. t.; pret. and pp. stereotyped, ppr. stereotyping. [< stereotype, n.] 1. To cast a stereotype plate from: as, to stereotype a page or a form.—2. To prepare for printing by means of stereotype plates: as, to stereotype the New Testament.—3. To fix or establish firmly or unchangeably.

If men cannot yet entirely obey the law, . . . it does not follow that we ought therefore to stereotype their incompetency, by specifying how much is possible to them and how much is not.

II. Spencer, Social Statics, p. 506.

stereotype-block (ster'ē-ō-tīp-blok), n. A block of iron or of hard wood, bound with brass, about three fourths of an inch high, on which a stereotype plate is fixed for use.

stereotyped (ster'ē-ō-tīpt), p. a. 1. Made or printed from stereotype plates.—2. Formed in an unchangeable manner; fixed; set: as, stereotyped opinions.

The entablatures show considerable progress, but the capitals were so stereotyped that it is evident, if any Greek or Roman artists had designed capitals in Gandham during the period just alluded to, we could predicate exactly what they would have been.

J. Ferguson, Hist. Indian Arch., p. 178.

stereotype-metal (ster'ē-ō-tīp-met'al), n. An alloy for stereotype plates; type-metal.

stereotyper (ster'ē-ō-tī-pēr), n. [< stereotype + -er.] One who stereotypes, or who makes stereotype plates.

stereotypery

stereotypery (ster'ē-ō-tī-pēr-i), n. [< stereotype + -ery.] 1. The art or work of making stereotype plates.—2. Pl. stereotyperies (-iz). A place where stereotype plates are made; a stereotype foundry.

stereotypic (ster'ē-ō-tī-p'ik), a. [< stereotype + -ic.] Of or relating to stereotype or stereotype plates.

stereotyping (ster'ē-ō-tī-ping), n. The art, act, or process of making stereotypes.—Paper process of stereotyping. See paper.

stereotypist (ster'ē-ō-tī-pist), n. [< stereotype + -ist.] One who makes stereotype plates; a stereotyper.

stereotypographer (ster'ē-ō-tī-pog'rā-fēr), n. [< stereotypograph + -er.] A stereotypewriter.

stereotypography (ster'ē-ō-tī-pog'rā-fi), n. [< Gr. στερεός, fixed, + E. typography.] The art or practice of printing from stereotype. Imp. Dict.

stereotypy (ster'ē-ō-tī-pi), n. [= F. stéréotypie; as stereotype + -y.] The art or business of making stereotype plates.

sterhydraulic (stēr-hī-drā'lik), a. [Irreg. < Gr. στερεός, solid, + E. hydraulic.] Pertaining to or having an action resembling that of a sterhydraulic press. See the phrase.—Sterhydraulic press, a peculiar form of hydraulic press in which pressure is generated in a hydraulic cylinder by the displacement of a part of the contained liquid through the entrance into its mass of a rod working through a stuffing-box, a screw working in a packed nut, or in some cases a rope wound upon a barrel in the inclosure and pulled into it through a packed hole, the shaft of the winding-barrel or drum also extending through a stuffing-box in the side of the cylinder and fitted on the exterior with a winch or a driving-wheel. Of these forms that using a screw is the simplest and best.

sterigma (stēr-ig'mā), n.; pl. sterigmata (-mā-tā). [N.L. < Gr. στέριγμα, a prop, support, < στερεός, prop.] In bot., a stalk or support of some kind: a term of varying application. (a) Same as basidium. (b) The stalk-like branch of a basidium which bears a spore. (c) The footstalk of a spore especially of a spore of minute size. (d) The cell from which a spermatium is cut off. (e) A ridge or foliaceous appendage proceeding down the stem below the attachment of a decurrent leaf.

sterigmatic (ster-ig-mat'ik), a. [< sterigma(-) + -ic.] In bot., resembling, belonging to, or of the nature of a sterigma.

sterile, a. An obsolete spelling of sterile.
sterile (ster'il), a. [Formerly also steril; < F. stérile = Sp. Pg. esteril = It. sterile, < L. sterilis, unfruitful, barren; cf. Gr. στερεός, stiff, hard, solid, στερεός, hard, unfruitful, barren.] 1. Unfruitful; unproductive; not fertile.

Indeed it goes so heavily with my disposition that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory. Shak., Hamlet, ii. 2. 310.

It is certain that in sterile years corne sown will grow to an other kinde. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 525.

2. Barren; not reproducing its kind.

She is grown sterile and barren, and her births of animals are now very inconsiderable. Dr. H. More, Antidote against Atheism.

3. In bot., of a flower, producing only stamens—that is, staminate or male (compare neutrat); of a stamen, having no anther, or a functionless one; of an anther, without pollen; of an ovary, without perfect seeds; of a seed, without an embryo; of a frond, without sori. See cuts under Oncoclea, Ophoglossum, sassafras, and smoke-tree.—4. Free from living germs.

I at first suspected that the biologically sterile tube might not be chemically clean. Medical News, XLIX. 403.

5. Leading to no results; fruitless; profitless; useless.

I will endeavour that the favour conferred on me rest not sterile. Abb. Mann, in Ellis's Lit. Letters, p. 431.

6. Lacking richness of thought or expression; bald; bare: as, a sterile style; sterile verse.—

Sterile wood a shrub or small tree, Coprosma fatidifolia, of the Rubiaceae, found in New Zealand. It is extremely fetid when drying, though inodorous when alive and growing.

sterilisation, sterilise, etc. See sterilization, etc.

sterility (ste-ril'i-ti), n. [< F. stérilité = Sp. esterilidad = Pg. esterilidad = It. sterilità, < L. sterilitas, unfruitfulness, barrenness, < sterilis, barren, sterile: see sterile.] The state or character of being sterile. (a) Lack of fertility; unproductiveness; unfruitfulness, as of land, labor, etc.

For the Soil of Spain, the Fruitfulness of their Vallies recompenses the Sterility of their Hills. Houell, Letters, I in 32.

(b) Lack of fecundity; barrenness said of animals or plants

Suspend thy purpose, if thou didst intend
To make this creature fruitful!
Into her womb convey sterility!
Shak., Lear, i. 4. 300.

5936

(c) Fruitlessness; profitlessness.

The truency of this formula is only equalled by its sterility for psychological purposes.

W. James, Prin. of Psychol., I. 551.

(d) Deficiency in ideas, sentiments, or expression; lack of richness or luxuriance, as in literary style; poverty; baldness; meagerness.

He had more frequent occasion for repetition than any poet; yet one cannot ascribe this to any sterility of expression, but to the genius of his times, which delighted in these reiterated verses. Pope, Essay on Homer.

sterilization (ster'il-i-zā'shon), n. [< sterilize + -ation.] The act or operation of making sterile; specifically, the process of freeing from living germs. Also spelled sterilisation.

Sterilization of cow's milk must and will be a most valuable preventive of summer diarrhoea. Medical News, LIII. 12.

sterilize (ster'il-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. sterilized, ppr. sterilizing. [= F. stériliser = Sp. Pg. esterilizar; as sterile + -ize.] To render sterile or unproductive in any way; specifically, in bacteriology, to render free from living germs, as by heating or otherwise. Also spelled sterilise.

No, no—such wars do thou, Ambition, wage!
Go sterilize the fertile with thy rage!
Whole nations to depopulate is thine. Savage, Public Spirit.

Prof. Tyndall found that he could not sterilize an infusion of old hay . . . without boiling it continuously for several hours. W. B. Carpenter, Micros., § 309.

sterilizer (ster'il-i-zēr), n. [< sterilize + -er.] One who or that which sterilizes; especially, any apparatus for rendering substances free from living germs, as by means of heat. Also spelled steriliser.

sterkt. An old spelling of stark, stirk.

sterlet (stēr'let), n. [< F. sterlet = Dan. sterlet = Sw. sterlett, < G. sterlet, < Russ. sterlyadi, a sterlet.] A species of sturgeon, Acipenser ruthenus. It is of small size and slender form, with a long sharp snout and fringed barbels, and from sixty to seventy lateral shields. It rarely reaches a length of two feet, and is generally not more than a foot long. It inhabits the Black Sea, Sea of Azof, Caspian Sea, and the rivers of Asiatic Russia, as well as certain rivers of Siberia. It is highly esteemed for its flavor, and its roe makes a superior caviar. Compare also cuts under Acipenser.

Sterlet (Acipenser ruthenus).

Sterletus (stēr'le-tus), n. [N.L. (Rafinesque, 1820), < F. sterlet, < Russ. sterlyadi, sterlet: see sterlet.] A genus of sturgeons, the type of which is the sterlet, having the spines of the dorsal shield posterior, no stellate plates, and the lip emarginate.

sterling, n. An obsolete form of *starling*¹.

sterling² (stēr'ling), n. and a. [< ME. sterling, steringe, sterlynge, starling, the coin so called; cf. D. sterling = Sw. Dan. sterling, sterling (as in mod. E. use), = feel. sterlingr, a sterling (the English coin so called), = MHG. sterlinc, steringe (-ling), a coin so called, G. sterling (as in mod. E. use); = OF. esterlin, a sterling (the English coin so called), sterlin, esterlin, estellin, estelin, a weight of twenty-eight grains (of gold), the twentieth part of an ounce, = Sp. Pg. esterlino, in libra esterlina, a pound sterling, = It. sterlino, in libra sterlina, a pound sterling, also as a noun, sterlino, sterling coin, standard rate (of coin); ML. sterlingus, sterlingum, sterlinus, stellinus, stelligus, sterlingus, sterlingus, esterlingus, esterlingus, a sterling (the English coin so called), also a weight of twenty-eight grains, the twentieth part of an ounce; all < E., unless, as Kluge asserts, the E. itself (and so in part the OF. and ML.) is < MHG. sterline, steringe (-ling), which is then < sterl- or ster-, origin unknown, + -ing³ or -ling¹ as in shilling, farthing (AS. feorthing, feorhtling), penny (AS. pening, etc.). In this view the word must have been introduced into ME. use by the Hanse merchants in London, who, according to the story, first stamped the coin in England. The accepted statement is that these merchants were called Easterlings as coming from "the east parts of Germany" (Camden), and that the coin received its name from them; but the similarity appears to be accidental, and the statement, besides other deficiencies, fails to explain the MHG. name, which could not have meant 'Easterling.' It seems more probable that the MHG. word is, like the rest, derived from the ME. word, which must then be due, in spite of unexplained difficulties, to Easter-

stern

ling, or else is derived, as asserted in a statement quoted by Minshew from Linwood, from the figure of a starling (ME. sterling) at one time engraved on one quarter of the coin so called: see *starling*¹. Historical evidence of the truth of this assertion is as yet lacking.] I. n. 1†. A silver coin struck by English (and Scottish) kings from the time of Richard I. (1190).

Faste comen out of halle
And shoken nobles and sterlings.
Chaucer, House of Fame, I. 1315.

The oldest pieces [of the coinage of Scotland] are silver pennies or sterlings, resembling the contemporary English money, of the beginning of the 12th century. Encyc. Brit., XVII. 656.

2. English money. [Rare.] And Roman wealth in English sterling view. Arbutnot.

II. a. 1. Of fixed or standard national value; conforming to the national standard of value: said of English money, and, by extension, of the precious metals: as, a pound sterling; a shilling sterling. Abbreviated ster., stg.

In the Canon Law mention is made of 5 shillings sterling, and a merke sterling, cap. 3. de Arbitris, & c. constitut. 12. de procurator. Minshew, 1617.

When a given weight of gold or silver is of a given fineness, it is then of the true standard, and called sterling or sterling metal. Blackstone, Com., I. vii.

I lost between seven and eight thousand pounds sterling of your English money. J. S. Le Fanu, Dragon Volant, v.

2. Of acknowledged worth or influence; authoritative.

If my word be sterling yet in England,
Let it command a mirror hither straight,
That it may show me what a face I have.
Shak., Rich. II., iv. 1. 264.

3. Genuine; true; pure; hence, of great value or excellence.

His sterling worth, which words cannot express,
Lives with his friends, their pride and their distress.
Crabbe, Works, II. 27.

I might recall other evidence of the sterling and unusual qualities of his public virtue. R. Choate, Addresses, p. 321.

sterling³ (stēr'ling), n. See *starling*².

Sterling's formula. See formula.

stern¹ (stēr'n), a. [< ME. stern, sterin, sterne, sturne, < AS. styrne, severe, austere, stern (also in comp. stýrn-mōd, stern-minded); akin to OHG. stornen, be astonished, sturni, stupor; perhaps related to OHG. stornen, MHG. stornen, stand out, project, = Goth. **staurran*, in comp. and-staurran, murmur against, also to D. stuursch, stern, = Sw. stursk, refractory, and to Icel. stúra, gloom, despair, stúra, mope, fret.] 1. Severe in disposition or conduct; austere; harsh; rigorous; hard.

No Man was more gentle where there was Submission; where Opposition, no Man more stern.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 132.

And sterner hearts alone may feel
The wound that time can never heal.
Byron, The Giaour.

2. Characterized by severity or rigor; especially, resulting from or expressive of harshness: as, a stern reply; a stern glance; a stern rebuke.

He herd their strakes, that war ful sterin.
Ivaine and Gavain, l. 3219. (Mallicell.)

If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that stern time, Thou shouldst have said, "Good porter, turn the key."
Shak., Lear, iii. 7. 63.

Gods and men

Fear'd her stern frown. Milton, Comus, l. 446.

3. Grim or forbidding in aspect; gloomy; repelling.

In passing through these stern and lofty mountains, their path was often along the bottom of a baranco, or deep rocky valley. Irving, Granada, p. 88.

4. Rough; violent; tumultuous; fierce.

The werre wox in that wond wonderly stern.
Alisaunder of Macedoine (E. L. T. S.), l. 337.

Those stern waves, which like huge mountains roll.
Drayton, Polyolbion, l. 435.

5. Rigid; stringent; strict.

Subjected to stern discipline by the rigid enforcement of uniform motives. Maudsley, Body and Will, p. 8.

6†. Stout; strong; heavy.

The hamur bothe sterne and gret
That drof the nayles thorow bond and fete.
Holy Rood (E. L. T. S.), p. 184.

Of bak & of brest al were his bodi sturne.
Sir Gawayne and the Green Knight (E. L. T. S.), l. 143.

7. Firm; unyielding; inflexible; hard.

When that the poor have cried, Cesar hath wept:
Ambition should be made of sterner stuff.
Shak., J. C., iii. 2. 97.

The sterner sex. See *sex*¹. = Syn. 1. Severe, Harsh, Strict, etc. See austere.—1 and 2. Unrelenting, uncompromising, inflexible.

stern<sup>2</sup> stérn, n. [ME. sterne, steerne, steorne (not found in AS., where only stéor, a rudder, appears: see stern<sup>1</sup>, n.) = OFries. storne, stiarne, a rudder, = Ice. stjörn, a steering, steerage, rudder; with formative -n, from the root of AS. stéor, E. steer, etc., a rudder: see stern<sup>1</sup>, n. and v.] 1†. The rudder or helm of a vessel.

3†. He ne rise the rather and raulte to the steorne,
The wynt wolde with the water the bot ouer-throwe.
Piers Plowman (A), ix. 30.

But to preserve the people and the land,
Which now remain us shippe without a sterne.
Norton and Sackville, Ferrex and Porrex, v. 2.

2†. Hence, figuratively, any instrument of management or direction; a guiding agent or agency; also, a post of direction or control.

The father held the sterne of his whole obedience.
Ischam, The Scholemaster, p. 48.

Not a few of them (the eunuchs) have come to sit at the stern of state.

3. The hinder part of a ship or boat, where the rudder is placed; the part furthest removed Lower part of Ship's Stern.

S, stern-post; K, keel; D, dovetail plates; I, inner stern-post; P, deck-laid; DK, dovetail-keel; SS, stermson; T, deck transom; F, false-keel. (The dotted lines show bolts.)

from the stem or prow. See also cut under poop.

So, when the first bold vessel dated the seas,
High on the stern the Thracian raised his strain.
Pope, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, l. 23.

4. The hinder parts, backside, buttocks, or rump; the tail of an animal.

He [the dragon] . . . ran his sturdy sterne about to weld,
And him so strongly stroke that to the ground him feld.
Spenser, F. Q., l. xi. 23.

We don't want to deceive ourselves about them, or fancy them cherubs without sterns.
Book of Pseudeuice (E. E. T. S., extra ser.), Forewords, (p. xxiii).

By the stern. See bul.—False stern, an addition made to the stern of a vessel for strength or protection.—From stem to stern. See stem.—Square stern, a stern less rounded or elliptical than is usual.—Stern foremost, backside foremost; with the stern advanced.—Stern on, the position of a vessel when her stern is presented toward the observer.—To make a stern board. See moor<sup>2</sup>.—To moor head and stern. See moor<sup>2</sup>.

stern<sup>2</sup> (stérn), v. [stern<sup>2</sup>, n.] I. trans. 1†. To steer; guide.

Hulk-tower . . . is a notable marke for pilots, in directing them which waie to sterne their ships, and to eschew the danger of the craggy rocks.
Stanhurst, Descrip. of Ireland, iii. (Holinshead.)

2. To back (a boat) with the oars; back water; row backward.—Stern all stern hard! orders to back water given by the officer of a boat to the crew. Also simply stern.

II. intrans. To draw back; back water: said of a boat or its crew.

Meantime Mr. Norton, the mate, having struck the fast whale, he and the second mate sterned off to wait for the whale to get quiet.
Fisheries of U. S., v. ii. 273.

stern<sup>3</sup> (stérn), n. Same as stern<sup>1</sup>.

stern<sup>4</sup> (stérn), n. [A var. of tern: see tern, and cf. Sterna.] A tern.

Sterna (stér'nj), n. [NL. (Linnaeus, 1758), appar. based on E. tern.] A Linnaean genus of Laridae, typical of the subfamily Sterninae, and containing all the terns or sea-swallows, or variously restricted. It is now commonly confined to species of moderate and large size, white with usually a pearly-blue mantle and black cap, and having a long deeply-forked tail, whose outer feathers are more or less narrowly linear for much of their length. The species are numerous, and are found all over the world, as S. hirundo, the common tern of Europe and America; S. arctica, the arctic tern of the northern hemisphere; S. paradisica or dougalii, the roseate tern (see cut under roseate), very widely distributed; and S. forsteri and S. tridactyla of America. Among the large species, representing a subgenus Thalasseus, are S. ischegrayi or caspia, the Caspian tern of Asia, Europe, and America; S. mazatlanensis, the royal tern (smaller than the last, in spite of its name) of America; S. elegans, the dual tern of America. (See cut under Thalasseus.) A group of small species, such as S. minuta of Europe and S. antillarum of America, are called least terns, and all have a white frontal crescent in the black cap: these represent a subgenus

Common Tern (Sterna hirundo).

Sternula. (See cut under Sternula.) Some middle-sized terns with dark upper parts, widely distributed in tropical and warm temperate regions, are the subgenus Haloptilus, as the common sooty and bridled terns, S. fuscata and S. anthracina. (See cut under sooty.) Gull-billed terns form a section Gelochelidon (see cut there). The wholly white terns, the black terns, and the noddies belong to other genera. See Sterninae and tern.

sternadiform (stér'ná-dí-fórm), a. [NL. sternum, the breast-bone, + L. ad, to, + forma, form.] In ichth., characterized by a tendency to expansion or extension of the thoracic or sternal region, as exemplified in the John-dory and the Serranidae. Gill.

sternage (stér'nj), n. [stern<sup>2</sup> + -age.] Steerage; direction; course, as of a ship or fleet.

Follow, follow:
Grapple your minds to sternage of this navy,
And leave your England, as dead midnight still.
Shak., Hen. V., iii. Prol., l. 18.

sternal (stér'nál), a. [= F. sternal, < NL. sternalis, < sternum, the breast-bone: see sternum.]

1. Of or pertaining to the sternum, especially the breast-bone of vertebrates: as, the sternal end of the clavicle; the sternal keel of a bird's breast-bone; sternal articulation; a sternal segment.—2. In Invertebrata, of or pertaining to a sternite; sternitic.—3. Ventral; hemal; on the ventral surface or aspect, where the sternum is situated; on the same side with the sternum; in man, anterior; in other animals, inferior: opposed to dorsal, tergal, or neural.—Sternal band, in embryol., of insects, a longitudinal thickening of the ovum, which gives rise to the sternal region of the body.—Sternal canal, in Crustacea, a median passage between each pair of endosternites, arched over by the meeting of the mesophragmal apophyses of the apodemes of opposite sides. The sternal canal conveys the chain of nervous ganglia and the sternal artery. See cut under Arctidae.—Sternal glands, a chain of six to ten small lymphatic glands, situated along the course of the internal mammary blood-vessels.—Sternal line, the vertical line on the front of the chest lying over the edge of the sternum.—Sternal region, the region of the front of the chest lying between the sternal lines. It is divided into a superior and an inferior sternal region by a line passing through the uppermost points of the junctions of the third costal cartilages with the sternum.—Sternal rib, (a) A true or fixed rib; one that joins the sternum by its hemapophysis, or costal cartilage, as distinguished from a false rib. See cut under endoskeleton. (b) The hemapophysis of a rib, as distinguished from the pleurapophysis; that part of a bony jointed rib answering to the costal cartilage of a mammalian rib, reaching from the end of the pleurapophysis to the sternum or toward it, as distinguished from a vertebral rib, which is the pleurapophysis alone. See cuts under epileura and interclavicle.

sternalgia (stér-nál'jī-jī), n. [NL., < Gr. stēron, the breast-bone, + algos, pain.] 1. Pain about the sternum or breast-bone.—2. Specifically, angina pectoris. See angina.

sternalgic (stér-nál'jīk), a. [sternalgia + -ic.] Pertaining to or affected with sternalgia; especially, affected with angina pectoris.

sternalis (stér-nál'is), n.; pl. sternales (-léz). [NL., se. musculus, muscle: see sternal.] A sternal or presternal muscle; specifically, the rectus sternalis of various animals, more expressly called sternalis brutorum and rectus thoracicus superficialis. It is not infrequently present in man.

Sternaspida (stér-nás'pī-dī), n. pl. [NL., irreg. < Sternaspis (-aspīd-) + -ida.] An order of gephyreans, represented by the genus Sternaspis: distinguished from an order Echinurina, both being referred to a subclass Echinomorpha of the class Gephyrea. Compare Echinurida.

Sternbergia (stér-bér'jī-jī), n. [NL. (Waldstein and Kitabel, 1805), named after Count Kaspar Maria von Sternberg, 1761–1838, author of various botanical and paleontological works.] A genus of monocotyledonous plants, of the order Amoryllidaceae and tribe Amoryllideae. It is characterized by a commonly solitary funnel-shaped perianth without a corona and with somewhat spreading lobes, and by a fleshy nearly indehiscent fruit with roundish and often strophiolate seeds. About 12 species have been described, now by some reduced to 5, all native of Europe and the Mediterranean region. They produce a short flower-stalk from a coated bulb, with leaves at the same time or earlier. S. lutea and several other dwarf species with handsome yellow flowers are cultivated under the name of star-flowers. S. lutea is also known as winter daffodil, and S. Etnensis as Mount Etna lily; these are often sold under the name of amaryllis.

sternbergite (stér'n'bér'it), n. [Named after Count K. M. von Sternberg: see Sternbergia.] An ore of silver, a sulphid of silver and iron, having a pinchbeck-brown color and metallic luster. It occurs foliated, the laminae being soft and flexible. It leaves a mark on paper like that of graphite.

stern-board (stér'n'bórd), n. Naut., a backward motion of a vessel. See to make a stern board, under board.

stern-cap (stér'n'káp), n. An iron cap to protect the stern of a boat.

stern-chase (stér'n'chās), n. A chase in which two vessels sail on one and the same course, one following in the wake of the other: as, a stern-chase is a long chase.

stern-chaser (stér'n'chā'sér), n. A cannon placed in a ship's stern, pointing backward, and intended to annoy a ship that is in pursuit.

Sternæ (stér'nē-ē), n. pl. [NL., < Sterna + -æ.] A subdivision of Sterninae, containing all the sea-swallows with forked tails and emarginate webs, as distinguished from the Anoæ or noddies; the typical terns. Cowes, 1862.

sterneber (stér'nē-bér), n. [NL. sternebra, < sternum + (vert) ebra.] One of the pieces of which the breast-bone of a vertebrate usually consists; a bony segment of the sternum; a sternite, or sternobral element. The sternum is a scrially segmented bone, made up of pieces, primitively separate bones, corresponding to pairs of ribs, every one of which is a sterneber. Thus, in man the manubrium sterni and the xiphoid or ensiform cartilage are each a sterneber; and the gladiolus, the middle part of the breast-bone, is composed of four other sternobers.

sternebral (stér'nē-brál), a. [sterneber + -al.] Entering into the composition of the breast-bone; of or pertaining to a sterneber.

sterned<sup>1</sup> (stérnd), a. [stern<sup>2</sup> + -ed<sup>2</sup>.] Having a stern (of a specified character). Chapman, Iliad, xi.

sterned<sup>2</sup> (stérnd), a. [ME., < stern<sup>3</sup> + -ed<sup>2</sup>.] Starred; starry. Hampole, Prick of Conscience.

sternert (stér'nér), n. [stern<sup>2</sup> + -er<sup>1</sup>.] A steersman; a guide or director. [Rare.]

Ho that is "regens sidera," the sterner of the stars.
Dr. Clarke, Sermons (1637), p. 15. (Latham.)

stern-fast (stér'n'fást), n. A rope or chain used to confine the stern of a ship or other vessel to a wharf or quay.

stern-frame (stér'n'frám), n. The several pieces of timber or iron which form the stern of a ship—the stern-post, transoms, and fashion-pieces.

sternfully (stér'n'fúl-i), adv. [**sternful* (irreg. < stern + -ful) + -ly<sup>2</sup>.] Sternly. Stanhurst, Conceites. [Rare.]

stern-gallery (stér'n'gal'gē-ri), n. Naut. See gallery, 9.

stern-hook (stér'n'húk), n. In ship-building, a curved timber built into the stern of a ship to support the stern-frame.

Sternidae (stér'ni-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Sterna + -idae.] The Sterninae rated as a family apart from Laridae.

Sternidius (stér-nid'jī-us), n. [NL. (Le Conte, 1873).] A genus of longicorn beetles, of the family Cerambycidae, equivalent to Liopus (Leiopus of Serville, 1835). S. acutiferus is a common North American species now placed in Leptostylus. Its larva burrows under the bark of various trees.

Sternidius acutiferus.

sterniform (stér'ni-fórm), a. [NL. sternum, the breast-bone, + L. forma, form.] In entom., having the form or appearance of a thoracic sternum.—Sterniform process or horn, an anterior projection of the first ventral segment of the abdomen, between the bases of the posterior legs: it is more commonly called the intercoxal process.

Sterninae (stér-ní-nē), n. pl. [NL., < Sterna + -inae.] A subfamily of Laridae, typified by the genus Sterna, containing all the terns or sea-swallows. It differs from Larinae in the average smaller size, slenderer form, relatively longer wings and tail, the forking of the tail, the small feet, and the slender sharp bill. The bill is paragnathous (not epignathous as is usual in Larinae), with continuous horny covering, usually long and slender, very sharp, with straight commissure or nearly so, gently curved culmen, long gonyes, and slight symphyseal emicune. The wings are extremely long, narrow, and pointed, with the first primary much the longest, and the secondaries all short. The tail is usually long, and forked or forking, with attenuated outer feathers. The feet are small, and scarcely ambulatorial. There are 60 or more species, of all parts of the world. They are divided into two groups, the Sternæ or terns proper, including nearly all of the Sterninae, and the noddies or Anoæ. Most of the species fall into the single genus Sterna. Other genera are Hydrochelidon, Phaethusa, Procelsterna, Gygis, Inca, and Anous. See Sterna, and cuts there noted.

sternine (stér'nin), a. [< NL. sterninus, < Sterna, tern.] Resembling or related to a tern; or of or pertaining to the Sterninae.

sternite (stér'nit), n. [< NL. sternum, the breast-bone, + -ite<sup>2</sup>.] 1. In Arthropoda, as an insect or a crustacean, one of the median ventral sclerites of the crust or body-wall; the median ventral piece of any segment, somite, or metamere, whether a distinct piece or only that undistinguished ventral part or region which lies between the insertions of any pair of legs or other appendages. The sternites are primitively and typically all alike, but may be variously modified in different regions of the body, or coalesced with one another or with other pieces of the exoskeleton, or suppressed. See cut under cephalothorax.

2. In entom., specifically, the under or ventral sclerite of an abdominal segment. [Rare.]

3. One of the pieces of the sternum or breast-bone of a vertebrate; a sternite. [Rare.]—Antennary sternite. Same as epistoma (b).

sternitic (stér-nit'ik), a. [< sternite + -ic.] Of or pertaining to a sternite; sternal, as a sclerite of an arthropod.

stern-knee (stér'nō), n. The continuation of a vessel's keelson, to which the stern-post is secured by bolts. Also called sternson and sternson-knee.

stern-light, n. [< stern<sup>3</sup> + light<sup>1</sup>.] Starlight. It was mirk mirk night, and there was nae stern light. Thomas the Rhymer (Child's Ballads, I. 112).

sternly (stér'nli), adv. [< ME. sternalich, sterneliche, sturneliche, < AS. styrrlice, < styrrne, stern: see stern<sup>1</sup> and -ly<sup>2</sup>.] In a stern manner; with severity, harshness, austerity, or rigor.

sternmost (stér'nmost), a. superl. [< stern<sup>2</sup> + -most.] Furthest in the rear; furthest stern: as, the sternmost ship in a convoy.

sterness (stér'nes), n. [< ME. sternesse, sternnesse; < stern + -ness.] The quality or character of being stern.

With sternesse ge comaundide to hem, and with power. Wyclif, Ezek. xxxiv. 4.

= Syn. See stern<sup>1</sup>, a.

sternochondroscapularis (stér-nō-kon-drō-skap-ū-lā'ris), n.; pl. sternochondroscapulares (-rēz). [< NL. (se. musculus, muscle), < Gr. στέρνον, the breast-bone, + χονδρος, cartilage, + NL. scapularis, q. v.] A muscle of some mammals, not infrequent in man, arising from the first costal cartilage and the sternum, and inserted into the superior border of the scapula. Also called chondroscapularis, scapulocostalis minor, costoscapularis, subclavius posticus.

sternoclavicular (stér'nō-kla-vik'ū-lār), a. [< NL. sternoclavicularis, < Gr. στέρνον, the breast-bone, + NL. clavicula: see clavicula.] Pertaining to the sternum and the clavicle. Also sternoclidal, and sometimes clidosternal.—Sternoclavicular fibrocartilage. See fibrocartilage.—Sternoclavicular ligament, a band of ligamentous fibers uniting the sternum and the clavicle: an anterior and a posterior are distinguished in man.

sternoclavicularis (stér'nō-kla-vik'ū-lār), n.; pl. sternoclaviculares (-rēz). [< NL. see sternoclavicular.] One of two anomalous muscles in man, anterior and posterior, extending over the sternoclavicular articulation.

sternoclidal (stér-nō-kli'dal), a. [< Gr. στέρνον, the breast-bone, + κλέϊς (κλειδ-), key (clavicle), + -al.] Same as sternoclavicular.

sternoclidomastoid (stér'nō-kli-dō-mas'toid), a. and n. [< NL. sternoclidomastoideus, < sternum, q. v., + clidomastoideus, q. v.] 1. a. In anat., of or belonging to the sternum, the clavicle, and the mastoid process. The sternoclidomastoid muscle arises from the summit of the sternum and the inner section of the clavicle, and is inserted into the mastoid process of the temporal bone. It is also called sternomastoid, mastoides colli, and nutator capitis. See cut under muscle<sup>1</sup>.

II. n. The sternoclidomastoid muscle.

sternoclidomastoideus (stér'nō-kli-dō-mas'toi-dē-us), n.; pl. sternoclidomastoidei (-ī). [< NL. see sternoclidomastoid.] The sternoclidomastoid muscle.

sternocoracoid (stér-nō-kor'ā-koid), a. and n. [< NL. sternocoracoides, < sternum, q. v., + coracoides, q. v.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to the sternum and the coracoid: as, the sternocoracoid articulation of birds and reptiles; a sternocoracoid muscle.

II. n. The sternocoracoides.

sternocoracoides (stér-nō-kor'ā-koi-dē-us), n.; pl. sternocoracoides (-ī). [< NL. see sternocoracoid.] The sternocoracoid muscle of various animals, arising from the sternum and inserted in the coracoid. It is represented in man by the pectoralis minor.

sternocostal (stér-nō-kos'tal), a. [< NL. sternocostalis, < sternum, q. v., + L. costa, rib: see costal.] Of or pertaining to the sternum and the ribs or costal cartilages; costosternal.

sternocostalis (stér'nō-kos-tā'lis), n.; pl. sternocostales (-lēz). [< NL. see sternocostal.] A thin median fan-shaped muscle within the thorax, behind the costal cartilages and breast-bone, arising from the lower part of the sternum. Also called transversus thoracis, and usually triangularis sterni.

sternocoxal (stér-nō-kok'sal), a. [< NL. sternocoxalis, < sternum, q. v., + L. coxa, the hip: see coxal.] Of or pertaining to the sternites and coxae of an arthropod.

sternofacial (stér-nō-fā'shal), a. and n. [< NL. sternofacialis, < sternum, q. v., + L. facies, face: see facial.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to the sternum and the face: as, a sternofacial muscle.

II. n. The sternofacialis.

sternofacialis (stér-nō-fā-shi'lis), n.; pl. sternofaciales (-lēz). [< NL. see sternofacial.] A muscle of the hedgehog, arising over the fore part of the sternum and passing to the side of the lower jaw and integument of the face: it assists the action of the orbicularis pan-niculi.

sternoglossal (stér-nō-glos'al), a. and n. [< NL. sternoglossalis, < Gr. στέρνον, breast-bone, + γλῶσσα, tongue.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to the sternum and the tongue: as, a sternoglossal muscle.

II. n. The sternoglossus.

sternoglossus (stér-nō-glos'us), n.; pl. sternoglossi (-ī). [< NL. < Gr. στέρνον, the breast-bone, + γλῶσσα, the tongue.] 1. A long retractor muscle of the tongue, as of the great ant-eater, Myrmecophaga jubata, attached behind to the sternum, and antagonizing the action of the protractor muscles, the genioglossus and stylohyoideus.—2. [cap.] In entom., a genus of coleopterous insects.

sternohyoid (stér-nō-hi'oid), a. and n. [< NL. sternohyoideus, < sternum, q. v., + hyoides: see hyoid.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to the sternum and the hyoid bone.—Sternohyoid muscle, a ribbon-like muscle arising from the manubrium sterni and inner extremity of the clavicle, and inserted into the body of the hyoid bone. It is innervated from the ansa hypoglossi, and its action draws down or back the hyoid bone and larynx. See cut under muscle<sup>1</sup>.

II. n. The sternohyoid muscle.

sternohyoidean (stér'nō-hi-oi-dē'an), a. [< sternohyoid + -e-an.] Same as sternohyoid.

sternohyoideus (stér'nō-hi-oi-dē-us), n.; pl. sternohyoidei (-ī). [< NL. see sternohyoid.] The sternohyoid.

sternomastoid (stér-nō-mas'toid), a. and n. [< NL. sternomastoideus, < sternum, q. v., + mastoideus, q. v.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to the sternum and the mastoid process of the temporal bone.—Sternomastoid artery. (a) A superficial descending branch of the superior thyroid artery, which is distributed to the sternomastoid, platysma, and the muscles attached to the thyroid cartilage. (b) A small muscular branch of the occipital artery which supplies the sternocleidomastoid.—Sternomastoid muscle. (a) That portion of the sternocleidomastoid which arises from the sternum. (b) The entire sternocleidomastoid, without distinction.

II. n. The sternomastoid muscle.

sternomastoideus (stér'nō-mas-toi-dē-us), n.; pl. sternomastoidei (-ī). [< NL. see sternomastoid.] The sternomastoid muscle.

sternomaxillaris (stér-nō-mak-si-lā'ris), n.; pl. sternomaxillares (-rēz). [< NL. see sternomaxillary.] The sternomaxillary muscle.

sternomaxillary (stér-nō-mak'si-lā-ri), a. [< NL. sternomaxillaris, < sternum, q. v., + L. maxilla, jaw: see maxillary.] Pertaining to the sternum and the mandible: applied to the sternomastoid muscle when, as in the horse, its anterior end is fixed to the mandible.

sternon (stér'non), n. [< NL. see sternum.] Same as sternum. Wiseman, Surgery. [Rare.]

sternopagus (stér-nop'ā-gus), n.; pl. sternopagi (-jī). [< NL. < Gr. στέρνον, breast, chest, + πάγος, that which is firmly set.] In teratol., a double monster with union at the sternum.

Sternoptychidæ (stér-nop-tik'i-dē), n. pl. [< NL. < Sternoptyx (-ptych-) + -idæ.] A family of inious fishes, typified by the genus Ster- noptyx. (a) In Günther's system it includes the typical Sternoptychidæ and other families. (b) In Gill's system, a family of inious fishes with a compressed ventradiform body, carinated contour, deeply and obliquely cleft or subvertical mouth whose upper margin is constituted by the supramaxillaries as well as intermaxillaries, branchiostegal arch near and parallel with lower jaw, scapular arch with an inferior projection, and one or more of the neural spines abnormally developed and projecting above the back in advance of the dorsal fin. There are 3 genera and about 7 species, small deep-sea fishes of remarkable appearance and organization, representing 2 subfamilies, Sternoptychinæ and Argyropelecinae. Also Sternoptygæ, Sternottidi, and Sternoptygoidæ.

sternoptychoid (stér-nop'ti-koid), a. and n. [< Sternoptyx (-ptych-) + -oid.] 1. a. Of, or having characteristics of, the Sternoptychidæ.

II. n. A fish of the family Sternoptychidæ.

Sternoptyx (stér-nop'tiks), n. [< NL. (Hermann, 1781), < Gr. στέρνον, breast, chest, + πτύξ, a fold.] A genus of fishes, so named from the transverse folds on the pectoral or sternal region, typical of the Sternoptychidæ.

sternorhabdite (stér-nō-rab'dit), n. In entom., one of the lowermost or sternal pair of rhabdites.

sternoscapular (stér-nō-skap'ū-lār), a. and n. [< NL. sternoscapularis, < sternum, q. v., + L. scapulæ, shoulder-blades: see scapular.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to the sternum and the scapula: as, a sternoscapular muscle.

II. n. The sternoscapularis.

sternoscapularis (stér-nō-skap'ū-lār), n.; pl. sternoscapulares (-rēz). [< NL. see sternoscapular.] A muscle of many animals, connecting the sternum and the scapula, and forming with the serratus magnus and the levator anguli scapulæ a sling in which the fore part of the body is supported upon the anterior extremities.

Sternotheridæ (stér-nō-thē'ri-dē), n. pl. [< NL. < Sternotherus + -idæ.] A family of pleurodirous tortoises, typified by the genus Sternotherus, to which different limits have been assigned. As generally understood, they have eleven plastral bones, mesoplastrals being distinct, and the skull has no bony temporal roof. The species are confined to Africa and Madagascar.

Sternotherus (stér-nō-thē'rus), n. [< NL. (Bell, 1825), < Gr. στέρνον, breast, chest, + θάρος, the hinge of a door or gate.] A genus of tortoises, having a hinged plastron (whence the name).

sternothere (stér'nō-thēr), n. [< NL. Sternotherus, q. v.] An African turtle of the genus Sternotherus. P. L. Slater.

sternothyroid (stér-nō-thi'roid), a. and n. [< NL. sternothyroideus, < sternum, q. v., + thyroideus.] 1. a. In anat., of or pertaining to the sternum and the thyroid cartilage.—Sternothyroid muscle, a small muscle beneath the sternohyoid on either side, arising from the manubrium sterni, and inserted into the oblique line on the outer side of the thyroid cartilage: it is innervated from the ansa hypoglossi.

II. n. The sternothyroid muscle.

sternothyroideus (stér'nō-thi-roi-dē-us), n.; pl. sternothyroidei (-ī). [< NL. see sternothyroid.] The sternothyroid muscle.

sternotracheal (stér-nō-trā-kē'al), a. and n. [< NL. sternotrachealis, < sternum, q. v., + trachea: see tracheal.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to the sternum and the trachea; connecting the breast-bone and the windpipe, as a muscle.

II. n. The sternotrachealis.

sternotrachealis (stér-nō-trā-kē-ā'lis), n.; pl. sternotracheales (-lēz). [< NL. see sternotracheal.] A muscle which in birds passes from the sternum to the trachea or windpipe; one of a pair, or one pair of two pairs, of long slender muscular slips attaching the trachea to the sternum or the clavicle, or both.

sternotribe (stér'nō-trib), a. [< Gr. στέρνον, the breast, + τριβειν, rub.] In bot., touching the breast, as of an insect: noting those zygomorphous flowers, especially adapted for cross-fertilization by external aid, in which the stamens and styles are so arranged as to strike the visiting insect on the breast. Compare nototribe, pleurotribe.

Sternoxi (stér-nok'si), n. pl. [< NL. irreg. < Gr. στέρνον, breast, + ὄξις, sharp.] In entom., in Latreille's system, a section of Serricornes, containing two tribes, the buprestids and elaterids, having the prosternum produced in front and pointed behind: distinguished among the serricorn beetles from Malacodermi and Xylo-trogi. It corresponds to the modern families Buprestidæ and Elateridæ in a broad sense. See cuts under Agritus, Buprestis, click-beetle, Pyrophorus, and wireworm. Also Sternoxia.

sternoxian (stér-nok'si-an), a. and n. [< Sternoxi + -an.] Same as sternoxine.

sternoxine (stér-nok'sin), a. and n. [< Sternoxi + -ine.] I. a. Pertaining to the Sternoxi, or having their characters.

II. n. A member of the Sternoxi.

stern-port (stérn'pört), n. A port or opening in the stern of a ship.

stern-post (stérn'pöst), n. The principal piece of timber or iron in a vessel's stern-frame. Its lower end is tenoned into or riveted to the keel, and the rudder is hung and the transoms are bolted. See cut under rudder and stern. — Stern-post knee, a large knee which unites the stern-post and the keel. See cut under stern.

stern-sheets (stérn'shêts), n. pl. The space in a boat abaft the thwarts on which the rowers sit.

sternsman (stérnz'man), n. [< stern's, poss. of stern, + man.] A steersman; a pilot.

Off from the stern the sternsman diving fell,
And from his sinews flew his soule to hell.

Chapman, Odyssey, xii. 582.

sternson (stérn'son), n. [Appar. < stern + -son as in bedson.] Same as stern-knee.

Sterna (stér-nū-lī), n. [NL. (Boie, 1822), < Sterna + dim. -ula.] The least terns, a genus of Sterna containing species of the smallest size, with moderately forked tail, a white frontal crescent in the black cap, and the bill yellow tipped with black; of cosmopolitan distribution. S. minuta inhabits Europe, Asia, etc.; S. bergii is South African; S. bergii, S. bergii, and S. bergii are Asiatic, East Indian, Australian, and Polynesian; S. bergii is South American. The common bird of the United States and middle America is S. bergii.

Ameg. or Least Tern, (Sterna bergii).

larium, which is very abundant along the Atlantic coast. It is 9 inches long and 20 in extent of wings, white with pearly-blue mantle over all the upper parts, a black cap, and the usual white lunule.

sternule (stér-nūl), n. A sea-swallow of the genus Sterna.

sternum (stér-num), n.; pl. sterna (-nā) or sternums (-numz). [NL., also sternon, < Gr. στέρνον, the breast-bone.] 1. The breast-bone of man and many other vertebrates; a bone or longitudinal series of bones in the middle line of the ventral aspect of the body, chiefly in its thoracic section, completing the thoracic wall by articulation with more or fewer ribs, or elements of the scapular arch, or both: theoretically, in Owen's system, the hemal spines of a series of vertebrae. (a) In man and most mammals the sternum consists of an anterior piece, the "handle," manubrium, or prosteron; of several (in man four) segments or sternbraes constituting the body of the sternum, gladioli, or mesosterna; and of a terminal piece, the xiphoid or costiform cartilage, or xiphisternum. It articulates in man with the clavicles and with seven costal cartilages. The sternbraes of a mammalian sternum may remain perfectly distinct, or be ankylosed in one. (See cut under mesosternum.) In cetaceans and struthions the sternum is much reduced, and may be a single bone or quite rudimentary. In the monotrematous mammals a small median bone called prosteron is developed in front of the prosteron. The parts called episternum, omosternum, interclavicle, in the mammals just mentioned, or in various reptiles, or in batrachians, belong rather to the shoulder-girdle. There is no sternum in some reptiles, as serpents. See cut under Catarrhina, Elaphantia, interclavicle, omosternum, and skeleton. (b) In birds the sternum is a large single bone without trace of its original composition of several parts, highly specialized in form and function, in relation to the muscular apparatus of the wings, articulating with several ribs, with the coracoids, and sometimes ankylosed with the clavicle; it appears under two principal modifications, known as the carinate and ratite. (See these words.) The carinate sternum normally develops from five ossific centers, having consequently as many separate pieces in early life. The single median ossification, which includes the keel, is the lophosteon; the anterior lateral pieces, a pair, are the pleurostern, which become the costal or costiferous processes; the posterior pair are the metostern. In some birds are additional pieces, a pair of coracostea and a urostern. The ratite sternum has no median ossification, or lophosteon. The passerine sternum normally develops a prominent forked manubrium. In a few birds, as cranes and swans, the sternum is hollowed out to receive convolutions of the windpipe. See cut under carinate, Dinornis, and epipternum. (c) In Chelonia, the plastron of a turtle, consisting of several bones, normally nine, one median, and four lateral in pairs. These bones have no homology with the sternum of other vertebrates. See cut under carapace, plastron, and Chelonia. 2. In arthropods, as insects and crustaceans, a median sternal or ventral sclerite of any somite of the cephalothorax, thorax, or abdomen; a sternite: the opposite of a tergite or notum. In such cases, sternum and sternite are used interchangeably, sternum being seldom used of the series of sternites as a whole. (See cut under cephalothorax.) In insects the three thoracic sterna are specified as prosteron, mesosternum, and metasternum. In Diptera, sternum generally means the mesosternum, as the other thoracic rings do not show a sternal piece. In Coloptera, sternum is sometimes extended to include the episterna and epimera, or whole lower surface of a thoracic segment. See episternum, 3. — Antennary sternum. See antennary. — Cephalic sternum, in arachnology, the lower part of the head or gula; the central plate on the lower part of the cephalothorax of a spider, between the bases of the legs. — Sternum collare, in entom., the sternal prominence of the prothorax. — Sternum pectorale, in entom., the sternal prominence of the metathorax.

Shoulder-girdle, or Pectoral Arch, and Sternum of a Lizard (Iguana tuberculata): upper figure, under view; lower figure, side view. sc, scapula; ssc, suprascapula; mc, mesoscapula; pcr, procoracoid; mcrc, mesocoracoid; ccr, epicoracoid; cl, clavicle; icl, interclavicle; gl, glenoid; st, sternum; xst, xiphisternum.

sternutation (stér-nū-tā'shon), n. [< LL. sternutatio (-n), a sneezing, < L. sternutare, freq. of sternuere, sneeze.] The act of sneezing. De Quincey, Opium Eater, p. 135.

sternutative (stér-nū-tā-tiv), a. [< L. sternutare, sneeze, + -ive.] Same as sternutatory. Bailey, 1731.

sternutativity (stér-nū-tā-tiv-nes), n. The character of being sternutative. Bailey, 1727.

sternutatory (stér-nū-tā-tō-ri), a. and n. [= F. sternutatoire, < L. sternutare, sneeze: see sternutation.] I. a. Causing or tending to cause sneezing. Rev. T. Adams, Works, i. 476.

II. n.; pl. sternutatories (-riz). Anything which causes sneezing, as snuff; an erhine. sternutory (stér-nū-tō-ri), n. An erroneous form of sternutatory. Dunglison.

sternward, sternwards (stérn'wārd, -wārdz), a. and adv. [< stern + -ward, -wards.] Toward the stern.

sternway (stérn'wā), n. The movement of a ship backward, or with her stern foremost. — To fetch sternway. See fetch.

stern-wheeler (stérn'hwē-lér), n. A steam-vessel propelled by one wheel, similar to a side-wheel, mounted astern: used for navigating shallow or narrow waters.

Steropus (stér'ō-pus), n. [NL. (Megerle, 1821), appar. < Gr. στερεός, solid, + πούς = E. foot.] A genus of beetles of the family Carabidae, containing about 100 species, widely distributed throughout Europe, northern Africa, Asia, Australia, and both Americas.

sterquilinost (stér-kwi-lī'nus), a. [< L. sterquilinum, sterculinum, sterculinum, sterquilinum, a dunghill or dung-pit, < sterco, dung.] Pertaining to a dunghill; hence, mean; dirty; paltry. Howell, Letters, ii. 48.

sterraster (stér-ras'tér), n. [< Gr. στερεός, var. of στερεός, solid, + ἀστέρας, star.] A form of sponge-spicule characteristic of the family Geodiniidae. It is of the polyaxon type, having many rays coalesced for the greater part of their lengths, but ending in separate hooklets.

Sterrastrosa (stér-as-trō'strā), n. pl. [NL.: see sterraster.] In Sollas's classification, a group of choristidan tetractinellid sponges, in which sterrasters are present, usually in addition to simple asters, as in the families Geodiniidae and Placospongiidae: distinguished from Spirastrosa and Eustrosa.

sterrastrose (stér-ras'trōs), a. [< NL. sterrastrosus, < sterraster, q. v.] Provided with sterrasters, as a sponge; of or pertaining to the Sterrastrosa: distinguished from Spirastrosa.

sterritel, n. A Middle English form of stert.

sterrinck (stér'ingrk), n. A seal of the genus Stenorhynchus (Ogmorhinus) or of the subfamily

Stenorhynchinae: as, the saw-toothed or crab-eating sterrinck, Lobodon carcinophagus.

sterro-metal (stér'ō-met'al), n. An alloy of about three parts of copper with two of zinc, to which a small amount of iron and tin is added. This alloy is not in general use, but is said to be superior to gun-metal in tenacity, while at the same time less expensive. It has been used in Austria for the pumps of hydraulic presses.

stert (stért), v. A dialectal spelling of stert.

stert, n. A Middle English form of stert.

stertel. [Inf. sterte (-n), pret. sterte, pp. stert.] An obsolete proterit of stert.

stertor (stér'tor), n. [< NL. stertor, < L. stertere, snore.] A heavy snoring sound which accompanies inspiration in certain diseases. Compare stertorous.

stertorous (stér-tō-ri-us), a. [< stertor + -i-ous.] Same as stertorous. Poe, Prose Tales, i. 125.

stertorousness (stér-tō-ri-us-nes), n. Same as stertorousness. Poe, Prose Tales, i. 125.

stertorous (stér'tō-rus), a. [< stertor + -ous.]

Characterized by a deep snoring sound, such as characterizes the laborious breathing which frequently accompanies certain diseases, as apoplexy.

stertorously (stér'tō-rus-li), adv. In a stertorous manner.

stertorousness (stér'tō-rus-nes), n. The quality or state of being stertorous.

sterve, v. A Middle English form of starve.

Stesichorean (ste-sik-ō-rō'an), a. [< LL. Stesichoreus, Stesichorius, < Gr. Στεσιχόρεος, Stesichoreus, < Στεσιχορος, Stesichorus (see def.).] Of or pertaining to the Greek lyric poet Stesichorus (Tisias) of Himera (about 632–550 B. C.), inventor of epodic composition; specifically, in anc. pros., noting (a) a trochaic trimeter of the form — — — — — | — — — — — | — — — — —; (b) an eneomilogic verse; (c) a line consisting of two dactylic tetrapodies, the last foot a spondee.

stet (stet), [L., 3d pers. sing. pres. subj. act. of stare, stand: see stand.] Let it (that is, the original) stand: a proof-reader's order to cancel an alteration previously made by him. It is indicated by putting a line of dots under what is crossed out, and writing "stet" in the margin. Abbreviated st.

stet (stet), r. t.; pret. and pp. stetted, ppr. stetting. To mark with the word "stet"; direct or cause to remain, after deletion, as printed; forbear to delete. [Colloq.]

stetch (stetch), n. A ridge between two furrows, as in plowed land. [Prov. Eng.]

stetch (stetch), v. t. [< stetch, n.] To form into ridges with a plow: followed by up. Hal-liwell, [Prov. Eng.]

stethiaum (steth-i-ō'um), n.; pl. stethiaea (-iā). [NL., < Gr. στῆθος, of the breast, < στῆθος, the breast.] In ornith., the entire anterior half of a bird: opposed to uræum. [Rare.]

stethidium (stē-thid'i-um), n.; pl. stethidia (-iā). [NL., dim. of Gr. στῆθος, the breast.] In entom., the thorax. Illiger.

stethograph (steth'ō-grāf), n. [< Gr. στῆθος, the breast, + γράφω, write.] An instrument for recording the respiratory movements of the thorax. Also called pneumograph.

stethographic (steth'ō-grāf'ik), a. [< stethograph + -ic.] Of or pertaining to, or obtained by means of, the stethograph. Nature, XLII. 581.

stethometer (stē-thom'e-tér), n. [< Gr. στῆθος, the breast, + μέτρον, a measure.] An instrument for measuring the respiratory movements of the walls of the chest. In one form a cord or band is extended round the chest, and its extension, as the thorax is expanded, is shown by an index on a dial-plate.

stethoscope (steth'ō-skōp), n. [= F. stéthoscope, < Gr. στῆθος, the breast, + σκοπεῖν, view.]

An instrument used in auscultation to convey the sounds from the chest or other part of the patient to the ear of the observer. — Binaural stethoscope, a stethoscope in which the sound is conducted to both ears. — Differential stethoscope, a double stethoscope having elastic tubular branches and bells which can be applied to different parts of the thorax so as to compare the indications at various points.

stethoscope (steth'ō-skōp), v. t.; pret. and pp. stethoscoped, ppr. stethoscoping. [< stethoscope, n.] To examine by means of a stethoscope. Lancet, 1890, II. 1267.

Stethoscopes.
a, binaural stethoscope.

stethoscopic (steth-ō-skop'ik), a. [< stethoscope + -ic.] Of or pertaining to stethoscopy or the stethoscope; obtained by means of the stethoscope.

stethoscopical (steth-ō-skop'i-kəl), a. [< stethoscopic + -al.] Same as stethoscopic.

stethoscopically (steth-ō-skop'i-kəl-i), adv. In a stethoscopic manner; by means of the stethoscope.

stethoscopist (steth'ō-skō-pist), n. [< stethoscopy + -ist.] One who is versed in the use of the stethoscope.

stethoscopy (steth'ō-skō-pi), n. [< Gr. στήθος, the breast, + -σκοπία, < σκοπεῖν, view.] 1. The examination of the chest.—2. Auscultation with a stethoscope.

stet processus (stet prō-ses'us). [Law L.: L. stet, 3d pers. sing. pres. subj. act. of stare, stand; processus, process.] In old Eng. law: (a) The termination of a suit at law, upon consent of the parties, by an order of court having the effect of staying permanently all further proceedings. (b) The phrase entered on the record as expressing that order.

stever, v. t. See stever<sup>3</sup>.

stevador (stē've-dōr), n. [< Sp. estivador, a wool-packer, hence a stower of wool for exportation, and gen. one who stows a cargo (cf. Sp. estiva = It. stiva = OF. estive, stowage, ballast), < estivar = Pg. estivar = It. stivare, press close, stow (a cargo), < L. stipare, press together: see stive<sup>2</sup>.] One whose occupation is the stowage of goods, packages, etc., in a ship's hold; one who loads or unloads vessels.

stevan (stev'en), n. [Early mod. E. also stevan; < ME. sterven, sterve, steyn, steyne, stefne, stemne, < AS. stefn, stemn = OS. stemna, stemnia = OFries. stemma = MD. stemme, D. stem = MLG. stempne, stemme, LG. stemme = OHG. stimna, stimma, MHG. G. stumme, voice, = Icel. stefna, stemma, direction, summons, = Sw. stämma = Dan. stemme = Goth. stibna, voice; root and connections unknown. Cf. Gr. στέφα, mouth.] 1†. Voice; the voice.

When Little John heard his master speake,
Well knew he it was his steven.
Robin Hood and Guy of Gisborne. (Halliwell.)

2†. Speech; speaking; crying out.

Manne, stynte of thy steuen and be stille.
York Plays, p. 365.

3†. That which is uttered; a speech or cry; prayer.

To thee, lady, y make my moone; I prae thee here my steven.
Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 6.

4†. Word; bidding; command; direction.

Thre semly sonnes and a worthy wiffe
I haue euer at my steven to stande.
York Plays, p. 45.

5. One's word or promise; an agreement; an appointment; hence, anything fixed by appointment.

Stephen kept his steven, and to the time he gave Came to demand what penance he should have.
Ellis, Spec. of Anc. Poetry, III. 121. (Nares.)

At unset stevent, at a time or place not previously specified; without definite appointment.

It is ful fair a man to bere hym evene,
For al day meeteth men at unset steven.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 666.

To set a steven, to make an agreement; fix an appointed time. [Prov. Eng.]

Hit fil, on a tyde,
That by her bothe assent was set a steven.
Chaucer, Complaint of Mars, l. 52.

stevan (stev'en), v. [< ME. stevenen, < AS. stefnian, call, summon (= Icel. stefna, stemna, cite, summon). < stefn, stemn, voice; see steven, n.] 1. trans. 1†. To speak; utter; tell of; name.

In Rome Y shalle you steuene
And [an] honyred kyrls fourty and seuen.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 113.

2†. To call; summon; command; appoint.

Lord God! I loue the lastandly,
And hughly, both with harte and hande,
That me, thy poure prophett Hely,
Haue steuened me in this stede to stande.
York Plays, p. 187.

3. To bespeak. Halliwell. [Prov. Eng.]

II.† intrans. To talk; call out; shout; make a noise.

Ye rebaldis that regnyis in this rowte, ge stynte of youre steuennyng so stowte.
York Plays, p. 307.

stevened, a. [< late ME. sterynyd, sterynd, sterynd, also appar. orig. steyned, steynyd, stened, lit. 'stained,' pp. of steynen, steinen, stain; see stain.] Party-colored. Cath. Ang., p. 363.

Item, a sterynyd clothe, a crucifix, . . . xxd.
Paston Letters, III. 403.

Stevia (stē'vi-i), n. [NL. (Cavanilles, 1797), named after Estevé, a Spanish scientist.] 1. A genus of composite plants, of the tribe Eupatoriaceæ and subtribe Agerateæ. It is characterized by crowded corymbose or loosely panicle heads with five or six nearly equal involucre bracts, five flowers, appendaged anthers, and a variable pappus of several scales or awns or of both mingled in the same head. Over one hundred species have been described, natives of the warmer parts of America from Buenos Ayres to Mexico, and especially numerous westward; absent in tropical Brazil and nearly so in Guiana. They are herbs or shrubs, often somewhat rigid, or rarely diffuse. Their leaves are usually opposite, three-nerved, and serrate, sometimes entire or three-parted. The flowers are white or purplish, forming slender heads. Several species are cultivated as border-plants in Europe. In the United States S. compacta and S. serrata, bearing a profusion of small white fragrant flowers, the latter flowering later, are grown under glass in great quantities for cutting and for winter use in houses. S. serrata and five other species extend within the United States into Arizona or Texas.

2. [I. c.] A plant of this genus.
stew<sup>1</sup> (stū), n. [< ME. steue, stue, stuw, stic, etc., pl. steues, stues, stuues, styues, stives, stuyres, < OF. estuve, estouue, a heated room, hothouse, bath-room, F. étuve, a vapor-bath, stove, = Sp. Pg. estufa = It. stufa, stove, hothouse, < OHG. stubā, stupā, MHG. stubē, a heated room, a bath-room, G. stubē, a room or chamber in general, = MLG. stove = MD. stove = AS. stofa, a hot-house, bath-room: see stove<sup>1</sup>, the same word in a more orig. form. In defs. 8 and 9 the noun is from the verb.] 1. A heated room, especially such a room for bathing purposes; a hothouse; a stove.

It fresethe more strongly in the Contrees than on this half; and therefore hathe every man Stewes in his Hous, and in the Stewes thei eten and don here Occupatiouns, alle that thei may.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 121.

When he came out of his stewe or bayne, he axyd drynke, by the force whereof he was poisoned.
Fabian, Chron., cxxv.

It [a small artificially warmed room] is used for drying various substances, as plants, extracts, conserves, &c., or for taking vapor baths. In this case the stew or stove is said to be wet or humid; in the opposite case it is said to be dry.
Dunghison, Med. Dict., p. 957.

2. Specifically, a hatters' drying-room. Halliwell.—3†. A room; a chamber; a closet.

Troylus, that stood and myghte it se
Thoroughout a litel wyndowe in a stewe,
Ther he bishet, sen mydnyght, was on mewe.
Chaucer, Troilus, iii. 601.

4. A brothel; a bagnio: often used in the plural, sometimes with the force of a singular noun.

Sloute . . . wedded on Vanhope, a wenche of the Piers Plowman (C), xxiii. 159.
Wommen of the styces. Chaucer, Friar's Tale, l. 34.

Shall we every decency confound?
Through taverns, steues, and bagnios take our round?
Pope, Imit. of Horace, I. vi. 120.

5†. A lock hospital. See hospital.

In the borough of Southwark, prior to the time sometimes fixed upon for the origin of syphilis, there were places called steues, where prostitutes were confined and received the benefits of surgical assistance.
S. Cooper, Practice of Surgery (6th ed.), p. 332. (Encyc. Dict.)

6†. A prostitute: sometimes in the plural form with a singular meaning.
And shall Cassandra now be termed, in common speeche, a stewe?
G. Whetstone, Promos and Cass., I. iv. 3.

It was so plotted betwixt her husband and Bristol that instead of that beauty he had a notorious stew sent to him.
Sir A. Weldon, Court of K. James, p. 146.

7†. A close vessel in which something is cooked or stewed; a stew-pot or stew-pan.

I have seen corruption boil and bubble
Till it o'er-run the stew.
Shak., M. for M., v. 1. 321.

8. Food cooked by stewing; especially, meat or fish prepared by slow cooking in a liquid.

The contents of the kettle—a stew of meat and potatoes— . . . had been taken off the fire and turned out into a yellow platter.
George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, i. 11.

9. A state of agitation or ferment; mental disturbance; worry; fuss. [Colloq.]

And he, though naturally bold and stout,
In short, was in a most tremendous stew.
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 104.

Box-stew, an oyster-stew made of box-oysters—that is, of large select oysters.—Irish stew, a dish made of mutton, onions, and potatoes, and sometimes other vegetables, stewed in water mixed with flour, and seasoned with salt and pepper.

stew<sup>1</sup> (stū), v. [*< ME. *stewen, stuen, stuwen, < OF. esturer (*estuer), bathe, stew, F. étuver, stew, = Sp. estufar, estofar, estobar = Pg. estufar = It. stufare, stew (cf. D. MLG. LG. stoven (> G. stoven) = Sw. stufa = Dan. sture, stew); from the noun: see stew<sup>1</sup>, n. Cf. stive<sup>3</sup>, a doublet of stew<sup>1</sup>.] I. trans. 1†. To bathe, as in a liquid or a vapor-bath.*

Stueyn or batlyn, or stuy in a stw. Balneo. Prompt. Parv.

2†. Figuratively, to steep.

The Stockes were fitter for him; the most corrupted fellow about the Suburbs, his conscience is stewed in Bribes.
Brome, Sparagus Garden, v. 13.

3. To cook (food) by simmering or slowly boiling; prepare by cooking in a liquid kept at the simmering-point: as, to stew meat or fruit; to stew oysters.

Stueyn or stuy mete. Stupho. Prompt. Parv.

Stew'd shrimps and Afric cockles shall excite
A jaded drinker's languid appetite.

Francis, tr. of Horace's Satires, ii. 4.

Stewed Quaker. See Quaker.

II. intrans. To be cooked by slowly simmering.—To stew in one's own grease. See grease.

stew<sup>2</sup> (stū), n. [< ME. steue, stue, stic, sticre = MLG. stouwe, stouwe, stou, stow, a dam, weir, fish-pond; connected with stouwen, dam, hem in, = G. stauen, dam, = MD. stouwen, heap up, collect. Cf. stow<sup>1</sup>.] 1. A pond, usually artificial, used for domestic purposes; especially, a pool or tank in which fish are kept until needed for the table; a vivarium; a stew-pond.

Many a breem and many a luce in stunce.

Chaucer, Gen. Prolog. to C. T., l. 350.

At the Priory, a low and moist situation, there were ponds and steues for their fish.

Gilbert White, Antiq. of Selborne, Letter xxvi.

We find vivarium sometimes rendered as "vivary" and at other times as "stew." Athenæum, No. 3231, p. 521.

2. A breeding-place for tame pheasants. Encyc. Dict.—3. An artificial bed of oysters: used of the old Roman and also of the modern methods of fattening.

stew<sup>3</sup> (stū), n. [< ME. stew (Sc. pl. stovys), mist; cf. Dan. stöv, dust, D. stof, dust (stofregen, drizzling rain), G. staub, dust.] Dust; a cloud of dust, smoke, or vapor. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

stew<sup>4</sup>, v. A Middle English variant of stow<sup>1</sup>.

steward (stū'ird), n. [< ME. steward, steward, steward, steward, stuard (also steward, stuart, as in the surname Stewart, Stuart; AF. estuard), earlier sticard, styward, < AS. stigweard, later sticard (> Icel. stivardhr), a steward, < stigu, stigo, a sty, pen for cattle, + weard, a ward: see sty<sup>2</sup> and ward. Cf. AS. stigwita, stiwita, a steward, < stigu, stigo, a sty, + wita, an officer, adviser.] 1. One who has charge of the household or estate of another; a majordomo; especially, a person employed in a court, household, or important domestic establishment of any kind to superintend financial affairs, as by keeping accounts, collecting rents or other revenue, or disbursing money for household expenses.

This lessoun loke thou nogt for-ge-te:
The steward, controllour, and tresurer,
Sittand at de deshe, thou haylse in fere.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 299

The first of them, that eldest was and best,
Of all the house had charge and governement,
As Guardian and Steward of the rest.

Spenser, F. Q., I. x. 37.

Protector, steward, substitute
Or lowly factor for another's gain.
Shak., Rich. III., iii. 7. 133.

The hedge broke in, the banner blew,
The butler drank, the steward scrawl'd.
Tennyson, Day-Dream.

2. An officer or retainer appointed to perform duties similar to those mentioned above; especially, a person appointed to provide and distribute food and all the requisites of the table; a purveyor. (a) In some British colleges, one who has charge of the commons. (b) One of a ship's company whose duty it is to distribute provisions to the officers and crew. In passenger-ships he has charge of the table, servants, staterooms, etc., and is called distinctively chief steward, the title steward being also extended to his male helpers—those who wait at table and attend to the staterooms. In a man-of-war the paymaster's steward is now styled paymaster's yeoman (see yeoman); the cabin-steward, ward-room steward, steerage-steward, and varrant-officers' steward are petty officers charged with providing for their several messes and keeping the apartments in order.

3. Figuratively, a manager; especially, one who controls expenditure; a disburser.

A man is but a steward of his owne goods; wherof God one day will demand an account.

Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 251.

And what not rare? Luxury being the steward, and the treasure unexhaustible.
Sandys, Travels, p. 25.

4. Formerly, in the English gilds, one of the officers in charge of the finances of the society; also, a corresponding functionary in municipal affairs. The title is still given in English towns to magistrates varying in functions, authority, rank, etc. In this latter case it is usually qualified by some limiting word: as, the city steward of York; the land steward of Norwich: the town steward of Northampton; the lord high steward of Gloucester.

That the stewards of every craft that ben contributory shullen be called to the accompte to knowe the charge.
English Gilds (L. E. T. S.), p. 383.

5. In the early church, same as econom or oeconomus.—6. A fiscal agent of certain bodies; specifically, in the Methodist Church, an officer having charge of the finances and certain other material interests of the church.—Hospital steward. See hospital.—Lord high steward of England, one of the former great officers of state; his chief functions were at an early date assumed by the justice. His office was the inheritance of the Earls of Leicester, till forfeited by Simon de Montfort to Henry III., at the close of which reign it was abolished as a permanent dignity. A lord high steward is now created only for particular occasions—namely, a coronation or the trial of a peer—the officer to receive when the business requiring it is ended. In the former case the lord high steward is commissioned to settle matters of precedence, etc.; in the latter, to preside in the House of Lords.—Lord steward of the household, in England, one of the chief officers of the royal household. He is the head of the court called the Board of Green Cloth, which has the supervision of the household expenses and accounts and their payment, the purveyance of provisions, etc.; but his duties are practically performed by a permanent official called the master of the household. The lord steward is a peer and a member of the ministry.—Steward, or high steward of Scotland, an ancient officer of the crown of the highest dignity and trust. He had not only the administration of the crown revenues, but the chief oversight of all the affairs of the household, and the privilege of the first place in the army, next to the king, in battle.—Steward of the Children Hundreds. See Children Hundreds, under hundred.

steward (stū'ard), v. t. [< steward, n.] To manage as a steward.

Did he thus requite his mother's care in stewarding the estate?
Fuller, Holy War, p. 85.

stewardess (stū'är-des), n. [< steward + -ess.] A female steward; specifically, a woman who waits upon women in passenger-vessels, etc.

My new attendant . . . told me she had formerly been the stewardess of a passenger vessel at the same time that her husband was steward.
John Ingbar, Off the Skellies, vi.

stewardly (stū'ärd-li), adv. With or as with the care of a steward; prudently; providently. [Rare.]

It is with a provident deliberation, not a rash and prodigal hand, to be dealt; and to be stewardly dispensed, not wastefully spent.
Tooker, Fabric of the Church (1691), p. 48. (Latham.)

stewardly (stū'ärd-li), a. Managing; careful; provident. Halliwel.

stewardry (stū'ärd-ri), n. [Also stewartry, q. v.; < steward + -ry.] Stewardship.

stewardship (stū'ärd-ship), n. [< ME. stward-shepe; < steward + -ship.] The office or functions of a steward.

He lay in me, with none a little space,
 Of all his lands the steward (shepe) to holde,
 And full power to revele it as he wold.
Gower (L. E. T. S.), l. 1076.

Give an account of thy stewardship, for thou mayest be no longer steward.
Luke xvi. 2.

stewart, n. An obsolete spelling of steward.
stewartry (stū'ärt-ri), n. [Sc. var. of stewardry.] 1. Same as stewardry.

As an human stewartry, or trust,
 Of which account is to be given, and just.
Byron, Poetical Version of a Letter.

2. In Scotland, a jurisdiction over a certain extent of territory, very similar to that of a regality; also, the territory over which this jurisdiction extends. Most stewartries consisted of several parcels of land which were only parts of a county; but the stewartry of Kirkcubright (often called distinctively "The Stewartry"), and that of Orkney and Shetland, make counties by themselves.

stewed (stūd), a. [< stew + -ed.] Lodged in or belonging to the stews.

O Aristippus, thou art a greave medler with this woman, being a stewed strumpette.
Udall, tr. of Apophthegms of Erasmus. (Davies.)

stewer, n. An old spelling of steward.

stewish (stū'ish), c. [< stew + -ish.] Pertaining to or befitting the stews.

Rhymed in rules of stewish ribaldry.
Bp. Hall, Satires, l. ix. 9.

stew-pan (stū'pan), n. A utensil in which anything is stewed.

stew-pond (stū'pond), n. Same as stew.

There is a dove-cote, some delightful stew-ponds, and a very pretty canal.
Jane Austen, Sense and Sensibility, xxx.

stew-pot (stū'pot), n. 1. A pot with a cover for making stews, soups, etc.—2. A covered pan used for heating rooms with charcoal. [Prov. Eng.]

steyt, steyet, v. and n. Same as steyt.

steyeret, n. A Middle English form of stair.

stg. An abbreviation of sterling.

sthenia (sthe-nī'ä), n. [NL., < Gr. sthenos, strength.] In pathol., strength; excessive force; opposed to asthenia or debility.

sthenic (sthen'ik), a. [< Gr. sthenos, strength, might, + -ic.] 1. Strong; robust; characterized by power of organization or energy of function, as a part or organ of an animal. See megasthenic, microsthenic.—2. In pathol., attended with a morbid increase of vital (especially cardiac) action. Sthenic diseases are opposed to diseases of debility, or asthenic diseases.—3. Exciting; inspiring; said of feeling. [A use introduced by Kant.]

sthenochire (sthen'ō-kir), n. [< Gr. sthenos, strength, + chir, hand.] An apparatus for exercising and strengthening the hands for piano-forte or organ-playing.

stiacciato (sti-ä-chi'ä), a. [It., crushed, flattened (cf. stacciato, n., a cake), pp. of stiaciare, crush, press.] In decorative art, in very low relief, as if a bas-relief had been pressed flatter.

stiant, n. A variant of styan for styp.
stib (stib), n. [Origin obscure.] The American dunlin, purr, or ox-bird: a gunners' name. See cut under dunlin. F. C. Brown, 1876. [Massachusetts.]

stibble (stib'bl), n. A dialectal (Scotch) form of stibble.

stibbler (stib'ler), n. [< stibble + -er.] 1. One who goes from ridge to ridge on the harvest-field, and cuts and gathers the handfuls left by the reapers. Jamieson. Hence—2. One who has no settled charge, but goes from place to place; often applied humorously to a clerical probationer. Scott, Guy Mannering, xlv. [Scotch in both senses.]

stibbornet, a. A Middle English spelling of stibborn.

stibial (stib'i-äl), a. [< NL. stibium + -al.] Like or having the qualities of antimony; antimonial.

stibialism (stib'i-äl-izm), n. [< stibial + -ism.] Antimonial intoxication or poisoning. Dungham.

stibiated (stib'i-ä-ted), a. [< NL. stibium + -at + -ed.] Impregnated with antimony.

stibic (stib'ik), a. [< NL. stibium + -ic.] Same as antimonie.

stibiconite (stib'i-kon-it), n. A hydrous oxide of antimony, of a pale-yellow color, sometimes massive and compact, and also in powder as an incrustation. Also stibite.

stibious (stib'i-us), a. [< NL. stibium + -ous.] Same as antimonious.

stibium (stib'i-um), n. [NL., < L. stibium, also stibi, stibum, < Gr. stibi, stibum, a sulphuret of antimony. Cf. antimony.] Antimony.

stiblite (stib'lit), n. Same as stibiconite.

stibnite (stib'ni), n. [< NL. stibium + -ni (?) + -ite.] Native antimony trisulphid (Sb<sub>2</sub>S<sub>3</sub>), a mineral usually occurring in orthorhombic crystals, sometimes of great size, often acicular, and also massive. See cut under acicular. The color is lead-gray. Stibnite is sometimes blackish and dull externally, and with an iridescent tarnish, but when fresh it has a very brilliant metallic luster, especially on the surface of perfect cleavage. It is very soft, yielding to the pressure of the nail. This ore is the source of most of the antimony of commerce. Also called antimonite and antimony-glance.

stibogram (stib'ō-gram), n. [< Gr. stibos, a footstep, + gramma, a writing.] A graphic record of footprints.

stibornit, stibournit, a. Middle English forms of stibborn.

stich (stik), n. [< Gr. stichos, a row, order, line, < stichon, go in line or order; see styl.] The word occurs in acrostich (for acrostich), distich, etc.] 1. A verse, of whatever measure or number of feet.—2. A line in the Scriptures.—3. A row or rank, as of trees.

sticharion (sti-kä'ri-on), n.; pl. sticharia (-ä). [< Gr. sticharon.] In the Gr. Ch., a vestment corresponding to the alb of the Western Church. Like the alb, it is a long robe with close sleeves, and formerly was of white linen. At the present day, however, it is often of silk or other rich material, and may be purple in color. It is worn by subdeacons, deacons, priests, and bishops.

stichel (stich'el), n. [Also stichall, stetchel; origin obscure.] A term of reproach, applied especially by parents to children. Halliwel. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

Barren, stichell that shall not serve thy turn.
Lady Alimony, l. 4 b.

sticher (stich'er), v. i. [Assimilated freq. of stick.] To catch eels in a particular way. See quotation under sticherer.

"Stichering," a Hampshire method [of catching eels], is perhaps one of the most amusing.
Pop. Sci. Mo., XXIX. 259.

sticherer (stich'er-er), n. [< sticher + -er.] One who stichers.

In the wide, deep drains used for irrigation eels abound, and the object of the sticherer is to thrust the sickle under the eel's body, and, with a sudden hoist, to land him on the bank, from which he is transferred to the bag.
Pop. Sci. Mo., XXIX. 259.

sticheron (sti-kē'ron), n.; pl. stichera (-ä). [< MGr. sticharon (sc. trōparion), neut. of sticharōs, pertaining to a versicle, < Gr. stichos, a verse, versicle.] In the Gr. Ch., a troparion, or one of several troparia, following the psalms and intermingled with stichoi. See stichos.

stichic (stik'ik), a. [< Gr. stichos, of lines or verses, < stichos, a row, line; see stich.] Pertaining to a verse or line; consisting of verses or lines; linear; specifically, in anc. pros., composed of lines of the same metrical form throughout: opposed to systematic.

The stichic portions of the cantica of Terence are divided into strophes.
Amer. Jour. Philol., VII. 390.

stichid (stik'id), n. [< stichidium, q. v.] In bot., same as stichidium.

stichidium (sti-kid'i-um), n.; pl. stichidia (-ä). [NL., < Gr. stichos, a row, line, + dim. -idium.] In bot., a peculiarly modified branch of the thallus in some algae, which serves as a receptacle for the tetraspores. See cut under algae. Farrow, Marine Algæ, p. 165.

stichomancy (stik'ō-man-si), n. [< Gr. stichos, a row, line, + manēia, divination.] Divination by lines or passages in books taken at hazard; bibliomancy.

stichometric (stik'ō-met'rik), a. [< stichometry + -ic.] Same as stichometrical. J. R. Harris, Jour. of Philol., No. 15, p. 310.

stichometrical (stik'ō-met'ri-kal), a. [< stichometric + -al.] Of or pertaining to stichometry; characterized by measurement by stichs or lines; stating the number of lines.

Quite lately Mommsen has published . . . a previously unknown stichometrical catalogue of the books of the Bible, and also of the writings of Cyprian.

Salmon, Int. to the New Testament, p. 559, note.

stichometry (sti-kom'e-tri), n. [< Gr. stichos, a row, line, verse, + metria, < μέτρον, a measure.] In paleog., measurement of manuscripts by lines of fixed or average length; also, an edition or a list containing or stating such measurement.

It ["The Assumption of Moses"] is included in the stichometry of Nicephorus, who assigns it the same length . . . as the Apocalypse of St. John.
Salmon, Int. to the New Testament, p. 526.

stichomythia (stik'ō-mith'i-ä), n. [< Gr. stichomythia, dialogue in alternate lines, < stichomythia, answer one another line by line; see stich and myth.] In anc. Gr. drama and bucolic poetry, dialogue in alternate lines, or pairs or groups of lines; also, arrangement of lines in this manner. Usually in such dialogue one speaker opposes or corrects the other, often with partial repetition or imitation of his words. Also stichomythy.

The speeches of this play are of inordinate length, though stichomythia in the Greek antithetical manner is also introduced.
A. W. Ward, Eng. Dram. Lit., l. 118.

stichos (stik'os), n.; pl. stichoi (-oi). [< Gr. stichos, a row, line, verse.] 1. In paleog., a line of average length assumed in measuring the length of a manuscript. See epos, 3, and stichometry.—2. In the Gr. Ch., a verse or versicle, as in the psalter or the odes; especially, a verse or part of a verse from a psalm, used as a versicle.

stichwort, n. See stitchwort.

stick (stik), v.; pret. and pp. stuck, ppr. sticking. [A verb confused in form and meanings with stick, stick being more prop. steck (as in dial. uses) or steak (after the analogy of break, speck, etc.); E. dial. steck, Sc. steik, etc.; < ME. stiken, prop. steken (pret. stak, pp. steken, i-steken, y-steke, stiken, stoken; also, by conformity with stick, pret. stiked, stikede, pp. stiked), *< AS. *stecan* (pret. **stæc*, pp. **stecan*), pierce, stab, = O.S. stekan (pret. stak) = O.Fries. steka = MD. D. steken = MLG. LG. steken = OHG. stechan, stechan, MHG. G. stechen (pret. stech, pp. gestochen), pierce; not found in Scand. or Goth. (the Goth. form would be **stikan*; cf. Goth. staks, a mark, stigma, stiks, a point, a moment of time); Tent. ✓ stik = L. ✓ stig (in instigare, prick, instigate, **stinguere* (in comp. distinguere, distinguish, extinguere, extinguish), stimulus, a prick, goad, stilus, a point, style, etc.) = Gr. ✓ sty (in stychn, prick, stychna, a prick, mark, spot) = Skt. ✓ tij for **stij*, be sharp. From this root are ult. E. stiel, stiel, stitch, steak, sting, etc., and, through OF., ticket, etiquette (from a collateral Teut. root, stake<sup>1</sup>, stock<sup>1</sup>, stang<sup>1</sup>, stoke<sup>2</sup>, stoker, etc.); from the L. root are ult. E. style<sup>1</sup>, distinguish, extinguish, distinct, extinct, instinct, stimulate, stimulus, instigate, prestige, etc. The verb stick<sup>1</sup>, pierce, has been confused, partly in ME. and completely in mod. E., with its derivative stick<sup>2</sup>. The reg. mod. pret. of stick<sup>1</sup> would be **stack* or **stake* (as in ME.), but the pret. has yielded to the influence of the pp., and, becoming **stoke*, appears in mod. E. with shortened vowel stuck, as also in the pp. (cf. break, pret. brake, now broke, pp. broken; speak, pret. spake, now spoke, pp. spoken—verbs phonetically parallel to stick<sup>1</sup>.) I. trans. 1. To pierce or puncture with a pointed instrument, as a dagger, sword, or pin; pierce; stab.

The swordman and the Cristen everichone
Ben al tohewe (hewed) and stiked at the bord.
Chaucer, Man of Law's Tale, l. 332.

He drew his shining blade,
Thinking to stick her where she stood.
Clerk Colvill; or, The Mermaid (Child's Ballads, I. 194).

A villain flitter to stick swine
Than ride abroad redressing women's wrong.
Tennyson, Gareth and Lynette.

2. To push, thrust, or drive the point or end of, as into something which one seeks to pierce, or into a socket or other receptacle; place and fix by thrusting into something.

A broche golde and asure,
In whiche a ruby set was lik an herte,
Cryseyde hym gaf, and stak it on his sherte.
Chaucer, Troilus, iii. 1372.

The Israelites . . . neither prayed to him, neither kissed his bones, nor offered, nor staked up candles before him.
Tyndale, Ans. to St. T. More, etc. (Parker Soc., 1850), p. 123.

I would not see . . . thy fierce sister
In his anointed flesh stick boarish fangs.
Shak., Lear, iii. 7. 58.

3. To thrust; cause to penetrate or enter in any way; loosely, to thrust or put (something) where it will remain, without any idea of penetration.

Byndez by hynde, at his bak, bothe two his handez, . . .
Stik hym stilly in stokez Alliterative Poems (ed. Morris), ii. 157.

A lean old gentleman . . . stuck his head out of the window.
J. S. Le Fanu, Dragon Volant, l.

Behind the said ear was stuck a fresh rose.
Kingsley, Westward Ho, ii.

4. To insert in something punctured; as, to stick card-teeth; hence, to set with something pointed or with what is stuck in; as, to stick a cushion full of pins.

Tho chambur dore stekes tho vssher thenne
With preket (candles) and tortes (torches) that comne brenne.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 315.

Buron. A lemon
Long. Stuck with cloves. Shak., I. L. L., v. 2. 654.

5. To thrust or fix upon something pointed; as, to stick a potato on a fork.

Their heads were stuck upon spears.
Burke, Rev. in France.

6. In carp., to run or strike (a molding) with a molding-plane.—7t. To close; shut; shut up. See stick.

When the kyng had consaynt Cassandra noyse,
He commaundet hir be caght, & cloist full hard:
In a stuthe house of ston stoke hir vp fast.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 7101.

Stick a pin there, make a note of that; take heed of that. [Colloq.]—To stick off, to set off; adorn. Compare the phrase and quotation under II.

The humble variety whereof (of the Torch-bearers' habits) stuck off the more ampie the maskers high beauties, shining in the habits of themselves.

Chapman, Masque of the Middle Temple.
To stick out, to cause to project, protrude.—To stick pigs, to hunt wild hogs with the spear, the hunter being mounted, especially in British India. [Colloq.]

II. intrans. 1. To be fastened or fixed by or as by piercing or by insertion; remain where thrust in; as, the arrow sticks in the target.

Therein stiked a lily flour. Chaucer, Sir Thopas, l. 106.
Lucretia's glove, wherein her needle sticks
Shak., Lucrece, l. 317.

2. To be thrust; extend or protrude in any direction.

She espied his cloven foot
From his gay robes sticking thro'.
The Dawn Lover (Child's Ballads, I. 303).

To stick off, to appear to advantage, show off; make a display.

I'll be your foil, Laertes, in mine ignorance
Your skill shall, like a star in the darkest night, Stick fiery off indeed. Shak., Hamlet, v. 2. 263

To stick out, to project; be prominent.

One hair a little here sticks out, forsooth
B. Jonson, Volpone, iii. 2.

To stick up, to stand up; be erect. [Colloq.]—To stick up for, to espouse or maintain the cause of; speak or act in defense of; defend: as, to stick up for an absent friend; to stick up for the truth or one's rights. [Colloq.]

Heard him abuse you to Ringwood. Ringwood stuck up for you and for your poor governor—spoke up like a man—like a man who sticks up for a fellow who is down.
Thackeray, Philip, xl.

To stick up to. Same as to stand up to (which see, under stand). [Colloq.]

No matter how excellent may be the original disposition of the head boy, if there is no one who dare stick up to him, he soon becomes intolerable.

Contemporary Rev., LV. 173.

stick<sup>1</sup> (stik), n. [< stick<sup>1</sup>, v.] A thrust with a pointed instrument which pierces, or is intended to pierce.

stick<sup>2</sup> (stik), v.; pret. and pp. stuck (formerly sticked), ppr. sticking. [< ME. sticken, stikken, stykken, stiken, styken, steken, stikien, stykien, stekien (pret. stikede, etc.); also, by conformity with stick<sup>1</sup>, pret. stak, pp. steken, stoken], be fastened, adhere, also fasten, < AS. stician (pret. sticode) (= MLG. steken), pierce, stab, intr.

cleave, adhere, stick; a weak form, parallel with an unrecorded form to be assumed as the cognate of the LG., etc., weak verb, namely AS. **steccan* = MD. stecken = MLG. LG. stecken = OHG. stecchen, MHG. G. stecken (pret. steckte; also, by conformity with stechen, pret. stach), stick, set, stick fast, remain, = Sw. sticka = Dan. stikke, stab, sting (these appar. due in part to the LG. forms cognate with stick<sup>1</sup>); not found in Goth., where the form would be **stakjan*, standing for **stakjan* = AS. as if **sticcan*, etc., a secondary form from the root **stik*, or else directly from the root **stak*, a collateral form of the root **stik*: see stick<sup>1</sup>, and cf. stick<sup>3</sup>.

The forms and senses of the primitive and derivative verbs become confused, and cannot now be wholly separated; in most dictionaries the two verbs are completely merged. Under stick<sup>2</sup> are put all uses of the verb so spelled not clearly belonging originally to stick<sup>1</sup> or stick<sup>3</sup>. The proper pret. of stick<sup>2</sup> is sticked; this has been superseded by stuck, or dial. stach (ME. stak), which prop. belongs only to stick<sup>1</sup>.] I. trans. 1. To pierce; stab. See stick<sup>1</sup>.—2. To fasten or attach by causing to adhere; as, to stick a postage-stamp on a letter.

Twenty ballads stuck about the wall.
I. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 65.

You should be on the look-out when Debarry's side have stuck up fresh bills, and go and paste yours over them.
George Eliot, Felix Holt, xxviii.

3. To cause to come to a stand; puzzle; pose. [Slang.]—4. To impose upon; cheat; chouse. [Slang.]

The pawnbrokers have been so often stuck . . . with inferior instruments that it is difficult to pledge even a really good violin.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, II. 18.

The second purchaser found a customer willing to give ten francs for it, but the latter's family so ridiculed him for having been stuck on the canvas that he put it away out of sight in his garret.
The American, XIII. 14.

5. To beat, as at a game of cards; with for before the penalty or stake; as, to stick one for the drinks at poker. [Slang.]—To be stuck on, to be greatly taken with; be enamored of. [Slang, U. S.]—To be stuck up, to be proud or conceited. [Colloq.]—To stick one's self up, to exalt or display one's self; assert one's self. [Colloq.]—To stick up, to plunder; waylay and rob; as, to stick up a mail-coach; to stick up a bank (Bush-rangers' slang, Australia.)

Having attacked, or, in Australian phrase, stuck up the station, and made prisoners of all the inmates.
Leisure Hour, March, 1885, p. 192. (Encyc. Diet.)

II. intrans. 1. To cleave as by attraction or adhesion; adhere closely or tenaciously.

She nadde on but a strelt olde sak,
And many a cloute on it ther stak.
Rom. of the Rose, l. 458.

The gray hairs yet stak to the heft.
Burns, Tam o' Shanter.

And on thy ribs the limpet sticks.
Tennyson, The Sailor-Boy.

2. To remain where placed; hold fast; adhere; cling; abide.

A born devil, on whose nature Nurture can never stick. Shak., Tempest, iv. 1. 189.

Now began an ill name to stick upon the Bishops of Rome and Alexandria. Milton, Reformation in Eng., ii.

But finding that they (doubts) still stuck with his followers, he took the last and best way of satisfying them.
Ep. Atterbury, Sermons, II. ii.

"We may teach you to ride by-and-by, I see; I thought not to see you stick on so long—" "I should have stuck on much longer, sir, if her sides had not been wet."
R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, xi.

3. To hold or cling in friendship and affection.

There is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.
Prov. xviii. 24.

Like true, inseparable, faithful loves,
Sticking together in calamity.
Shak., K. John, iii. 4. 67.

4. To be hindered from proceeding or advancing; be restrained from moving onward or from acting; be arrested in a course, career, or progress; be checked or arrested; stop.

And git in my synne y stonde and sticke,
Yuel custum ys ful hard to blynnne.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 197.

I had most need of blessing, and "Amen"
Stuck in my throat. Shak., Macbeth, ii. 2. 33.

We stuck upon a sand bank so fast that it was after sunset before we could get off.
Bruce, Source of the Nile, I. 93.

5. To be embarrassed or puzzled; be brought to a standstill, as by being unable to interpret or remember the words one is attempting to read or recite.

They will stick a long time at a part of a demonstration, not for want of will and application, but really for want of perceiving the connection of two ideas.
Locke, Conduct of the Understanding, § 6.

Some of the young chaps stick in their parts. They get the stage-fever and knocking in the knees.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, III. 142.

6. To scruple; hesitate: with at.

I . . . desired his opinion of it, and in particular touching the paucity of Auditors, whereat I formerly sticked, as you may remember.
Thomas Adams, in Ellis's Lit. Letters, p. 148.

To serve him I should, I think, stick at nothing.
Pepys, Diary, IV. 141.

To stick at it, to persevere. [Colloq.]—To stick by. (a) To adhere closely to; be constant or faithful to.

For, of so many thousands that were under mine empire, you only have followed and sticked by me.
J. Brende, tr. of Quintus Curtius, v.

(b) To remain with; abide in the memory or possession of: as, ill-gotten gains never stick by a man.

Nothing sticks faster by vs, as appears,
Then that which we learne in our tender yeares.
Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 197.

To stick in one's gizzard. See gizzard.—To stick in or to one's fingers, to remain unlawfully in one's hands.

He was—if half Leicester's accusations are to be believed—a most infamous peculator. One-third of the money sent by the Queen for the soldiers stuck in his fingers.
Motley, Hist. United Netherlands, II. 87.

To stick out, to refuse to comply or come to terms; hold out or hold back; as, to stick out for a better price.—To stick to, to abide firmly and faithfully by; hold fast to: as, to stick to a resolution.

stick<sup>2</sup> (stik), n. [< stick<sup>2</sup>, v.] 1. An adhesion, as by attraction or viscosity.

A magnetic stick between the wheels and the rails, which largely augments the amount of traction.
Elect. Rev. (Amer.), XVII. 194.

2. Hesitation; demur; a stop; a standstill.

When he came to the Hill Difficulty, he made no stick at that, nor did he much fear the lions.
Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, Sixth Stage.

3. A strike among workmen. Halliwell, [Prov. Eng.]

stick<sup>3</sup> (stik), n. [< ME. sticke, stikke, < AS. sticca, a stick, peg, nail, = MD. stick, steck, MLG. sticke, LG. stikke = OHG. sticcho, steccho, stecho (> It. stecco, thorn, stecca, staff, F. étiquette, ticket, etc.), MHG. stecke, steche, G. stecken, a stick; cf. Icel. stika, stick (for fuel), a stick (yard-measure): so called as having orig. a sharp point; from the root of stick<sup>1</sup> (AS. **steccan*, etc.): see stick<sup>1</sup>, stick<sup>2</sup>, and cf. stake, stak, stich, stickle<sup>1</sup>, étiquette, ticket, etc.; also stock<sup>1</sup>, etc.] 1. A piece of wood, generally rather long and slender; a branch of a tree or shrub cut or broken off; also, a piece of wood chopped or cut for burning or other use: often used figuratively.

Of all townes, castles, fortes, bridges, and habitations, they left not any stick standing.
Spenser, State of Ireland.

Wither'd sticks to gather, which might serve Against a winter's day. Milton, P. R., i. 316.

Come, hostess, lay a few more sticks on the fire. And now, sing when you will.
I. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 174.

2. A cudgel; a rod; a wand; especially, a walking-stick or cane.

Al-though thou stryke me with thi staffe, with stikke or with zerde.
Piers Plowman (B), xii. 14.

Your old friend Mr. Burchell, walking . . . with the great stick for which we used so much to ridicule him!
Goldsmith, Vicar, xxx.

Stick is a large genus, running up from switch to cudgel, from rod to bludgeon.
De Quincy, Homer, ii.

3. Anything in the form of a stick, or somewhat long and slender: as, a stick of candy; a stick of sealing-wax; one of the sticks of a fan, whether of wood, metal, or other material.

A painted Landskip Fann, cutt, gilded Sticks.
Quoted in Ashton's Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, [I. 176.

4. Specifically—(a) The wand or baton with which a musical conductor directs a chorus or orchestra. (b) The wooden rod or back of a bow for playing on a musical instrument of the viol class. (c) The wooden rod or wand, with a rounded or padded head, with which a drum or similar musical instrument is beaten and sounded; a drumstick.—5. In printing: (a) A composing-stick. (b) A piece of furniture used to lock up a form in a chase or galley. It is called, according to the place it occupies, head-stick, foot-stick, side-stick, or gutter-stick.—6. The rod which is carried by the head of a rocket, and serves to direct its flight.

And the final ever to himself (Mr. Burke) has been that, as he rose like a rocket, he fell like the stick.

T. Paine, Letter to the Addressers.

7. A timber-tree. Hallucell. [Prov. Eng.]—8. Naut., a mast: as, the gale was enough to blow the sticks out of her. [Humorous.]—9. That which is strung on a stick: a string: as, a stick of herring.—10. The number of twenty-five eels, or the tenth part of a hind, according to the old statute de ponderibus. Also called stick.—11. A stick-insect. See stick-bug and walking-stick.—12. A person who is stiff and awkward in bearing; hence, a stupid, incapable, or incompetent person. [Colloq.]

I was surprised to see Sir Henry such a stick. Luckily the strength of the piece did not depend upon him.

Jane Austen, Mansfield Park, xiii.

About the poorest stick for a leg-lator ever elected.

New York Tribune Sept. 1, 1875.

As cross as two sticks. See cross.—Devil on two sticks. See devil.—In a cleft stick. See cleft.—Long stick. In measuring British rail-line, long stick is the yard-measure of 45 inches and a thumb, equivalent to 37 inches. It is used to measure goods for the home market. Goods for the foreign market are measured by short stick, in which the yard consists of 35 inches and a thumb, or about 36 inches.—Middle stick, a measure containing 354 inches and a thumb to the yard, or about 363 inches.—Stick and stone, the whole; everything; as, to leave neither stick nor stone standing. Compare stick and block, under stick.

And this it was she swore, never to marry
But such a one whose mighty arm could carry
Her bodily away through stick and stone.

Keats and Keats, Knights of Burning Pestle, ii. 1.

To beat all to sticks, to outdo completely. [Colloq., Eng.]

Many ladies in Strasburg were beautiful, still They were beat off to sticks by the lovely Odille.

Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 231.

To cut one's stick. See cut.—To go to sticks and staves, to go to pieces, fall into ruin: in allusion to a tub with broken hoops.

She married a Highland drover or tacksman, I can't tell Which, and the way went all to sticks and staves.

Mrs. Ferrier, Inheritance, I. 95. (Jamieson.)

=Syn. 2. See staf.

stick<sup>3</sup> (stik'), v. t. [< stick<sup>3</sup>, n.] 1. To furnish or set with sticks, as for climbing upon: said of peas.

But I . . . must . . . go stick some rows of peas which are already flourishing in my new garden.

Carlyle, in Froude, First Forty Years, xxiv.

I was sticking peas in my own garden.

Jean Ingelour, Fated to be Free, vi.

2. In printing, to arrange in a composing-stick; compose: as, to stick type.

stickadore, stickadover (stik'a-dör, -dör), n. [Also stickadour, stickadour, stickado, stickado, stickado; < F. stichados (Cotgrave), for corrupt form of NL stichados, flos stichados, flower of Stachys: stachados, gen. of Stachys, q. v.] A species of lavender, Lavandula Stachys, used officinally. See lavender.

stick-bait (stik'bät), n. Insects or worms found sticking to the under surface of stones, and used as bait. [North Carolina.]

stick-bug (stik'bug), n. 1. Any orthopterous insect of the family Phasmidae: particularly applied to Diapheromera femorata, the commonest insect of this kind in the United States, where it is also called wood-horse, stick-insect, twig-bug, twig-insect, walking-trig, walking-stick, prairie-alligator, specter, and devil's horse. See cut under Phasma. [Local, U.S.]—2. A predaceous reduvioid bug of the United States, Emesa longipes, with a long slender brown body and long spider-like legs, the front pair of which are raptorial; the spider-bug. When lodged on a Stick-bug (Emesa longipes).

twig, it swings its body back and forth like some of the daddy-long-legs. This insect resembles some of the Phasmidae, which receive the same name, but belongs to a different order.

stick-culture (stik'kul'tür), n. A bacterial culture made by thrusting a platinum needle (sterilized and then dipped into a growth of the microbe or other material to be examined) into the culture-medium, as a tube of gelatin.

sticked<sup>1</sup>. An obsolete past participle of stick<sup>2</sup>.
stick<sup>1</sup> (stik'er), n. [< stick<sup>1</sup> + -er<sup>1</sup>] 1. One who or that which sticks or stabs; especially, one who kills swine or other animals by sticking or stabbing.

Master Bardell the pig-butcher, and his foreman, or, as he was more commonly called, Sam the Sticker.

Dickens, Sketches on the Road, The Sudden Death.

2. An anglers' gaff. [Slang.]—3. A sharp remark or an embarrassing question, intended or adapted to silence or pose a person. Thackeray.
stick<sup>2</sup> (stik'er), n. [< stick<sup>2</sup> + -er<sup>1</sup>] 1. One who adheres, clings, or sticks to anything.

Although culture makes us fondstickers to no machinery, not even our own. M. Arnold, Culture and Anarchy, Pref.

2. One who sticks, or causes to adhere, as by pasting.

The bill-sticker, whose large flat basket, stuffed with placards, leaned near him against the settle.

George Eliot, Poetry, xlviii.

3. Same as pastor, 2.—4. An article of merchandise which sticks by the dealer and does not meet with a ready sale. [U.S.]—5. In organ-building, a wooden rod serving to transmit motion between the ends of two reciprocating levers. Stickers are usually held in place by pins in their ends, which work freely in holes or slots in the lever-ends. See cut under organ.

6. pl. The arms of a crank-axis employed to change the plane and direction of a reciprocating motion. For distinction the arms are thus named when they act by compression, and are called trackers when they act by tension. The axis is termed a roller.

stickful (stik'ful), n. [< stick<sup>3</sup> + -ful] In printing, as much composed type as can be contained in a composing-stick.

stick-handle (stik'hän'dl), n. The handle of a walking-stick. See can.

stick-helmet (stik'hel'met), n. A mask with additional guards for the forehead and head, used in cudgel-play.

stickiness (stik'i-ness), n. The property of being sticky, adhesive, or tenacious; viscousness; glutinousness.

stick<sup>1</sup> (stik'ing), n. [Verbal n. of stick<sup>1</sup>, v.] The act of stabbing or piercing. (a) The act of thrusting a knife or spear into the neck or body of a beast. Hence—(b) pl. The part of a beast's neck where it is stabbed by the butcher; a coarse and cheap cut of beef or pork.

The meat is bought in "pieces" of the same part as the sausage-makers purchase—the stickings—at about 3d. the pound.

Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 196.

(c) Sticking; needlework. [Scotch, in the form steeking.]

The cloth of it was satin fine.

And the steeking silken work.

The Jolly Goshawk (Child's Ballads, III. 259).

stick<sup>2</sup> (stik'ing), n. [Verbal n. of stick<sup>2</sup>, v.] 1. The act of coming to a stop. Compare stick-ing-place.

All stickings and hesitations seem stupid and stony.

Donne, Letters, iv.

Specifically—2. pl. The last of a cow's milk; strippings. [Prov. Eng.]

sticking-place (stik'ing-pläs), n. The point where anything sticks, stays, or stops; a place of stay.

Which flower out of my hand shall never passe,
But in my heart shall have a sticking-place.

Gorgeous Gallery of Gallant Inventions (1578), quoted in [Furness's Variorum Shakespeare, Macbeth.]

But screw your courage to the sticking-place,
And we'll not fail.

Shak., Macbeth, I. 7. 60.

sticking-plaster (stik'ing-pläs'tér), n. 1. Same as resin plaster (which see, under plaster).—2. Court-plaster.

In the reign of Charles I., . . . suns, moons, stars, and even coaches and four were cut of sticking plaster, and stuck on the face.

J. Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, I. 169.

sticking-point (stik'ing-point), n. Same as sticking-place.

One sight of thee would nerve me to the sticking-point.

Disraeli, Alroy, I. 2.

stick-insect (stik'in'sekt), n. Same as stick-bug, 1. See walking-stick.

stick-in-the-mud (stik'in-thē-mud'), n. An old fogey; a slow or insignificant person. [Colloq.]

This rusty-colored one (a pl.) is that respectable old stick-in-the-mud, Nicolas.

T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Oxford, I. x.

stickit (stik'it), p. a. [Sc. form of sticked, pp. of stick<sup>2</sup> (and stick<sup>1</sup>).] Stuck. [Scotch.]—Stickit minister, in Scotland, a student of theology who fails to obtain license, or a licentiate who fails to obtain a pastoral charge.

He became totally incapable of proceeding in his intended discourse— . . . shut the Bible—stumbled down the pulpit-stairs, trampling upon the old women who generally take their station there—and was ever after designated as a stickit minister.

Scott, Guy Mannering, ii.

stick-lac (stik'lak), n. See lac<sup>2</sup>, 1.

stickle<sup>1</sup> (stik'l), n. [*< ME. *stikel, *stykyt* (in comp.), < AS. sticel (also, with diff. formative, sticels), a prickle, sting, = MD. stekel, later sticel, D. stekel = LG. stikkel (in comp.), also stikke = OHG. stichil, MHG. stichel, G. dial. stichel, a prickle, sting, = Icel. stikill, the pointed end of a horn, = Norw. stikel, a prickle (cf. MD. stachel, OHG. stachulla, stachulla, stachilla, stachila, MHG. G. stachel, a thorn, prickle, sting); akin to sticca, etc., a (pointed) stick (see stick<sup>2</sup>), *< *stecan*, pierce, prick, stick: see stick<sup>1</sup>.] A sharp point; a prickle; a spine. [Obsolete, except in stickleback, stickle-haired, stickly, and the local name Pike o' Stickle, one of the two Pikes of Langdale in England.]

stickle<sup>2</sup> (stik'l), a. and n. [Early mod. E. also stikle; < ME. stikel, < AS. sticel, sticel, steep, high, inaccessible, *< *stecan*, pierce, prick, stick: see stick<sup>1</sup>.] 1. a. l. Steep; high; inaccessible.—2. High, as the water of a river; swollen; sweeping; rapid.

When they came thither, the river of the Shenin, which in fronteth and runneth round about the cliffe, they found the same to be so deepe and stikle that they could not passe over the same. Giraldus Cambrensis, Conq. of Ireland, [p. 37 (Holmshed's Chron., I.).]

II. n. 1. A shallow in a river where the water, being confined, runs with violence.

Patient anglers standing all the day
Near to some shallow stikle or deepe bay.

W. Browne, Britannia's Pastoral, ii. 4.

2. A current below a waterfall.

The water runs down with a strong, sharp stikle, and then has a sudden elbow in it, where the small brook trickles in.

R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, vii.

[Prov. Eng. in all uses.]

stickle<sup>3</sup> (stik'l), v. pret. and pp. stickled, ppr. stickling. [A mod. var. of stightle, which also appears (with a reg. change of the orig. guttural gh to f) as stifle: see stightle. In defs. II., 2, 3, the sense has been influenced by association with stick<sup>2</sup>.] 1. trans. To interpose in and put a stop to; mediate between; pacify.

They ran unto him, and pulling him back, then too feeble for them, by force stickled that unnatural fray.

Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, i.

II. intrans. 1. To interpose between combatants and separate them; mediate; arbitrate.

There had been blood shed if I had not stickled.

W. Cartwright, The Ordinary (Hazlitt's Dodsley, XII. 275).

2. To take part with one side or the other; uphold one party to a dispute.

Fortune (as she's wont) turn'd fickle,
And for the foe began to stickle.

S. Butler, Hudibras, I. iii. 516.

You, Bellmour, are bound in Gratitude to stickle for him; you with Pleasure reap that Fruit which he takes pains to sow.

Congreve, Old Batchelor, I. 4.

3. To contest or contend pertinaciously on insufficient grounds; insist upon some trifle.

I hear no news about your bishop's, farther than that the lord lieutenant stickles to have them of Ireland.

Swift, Letter, May 13, 1727.

4. To hesitate.

Some . . . stickle not to aver that you are enter-cousin with Beelzebub himself.

Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 122.

5. To play fast and loose; waver from one side to the other; trim.

stickleback (stik'l-bak), n. [Also corruptly sticklebag, and metamorphosed tittlebat; *< ME. *stikelbak*, stykyt; < stickle<sup>1</sup> + back<sup>1</sup>. Cf. thornback, and see sticking.] Any fish of the family Gasterosteidae: so called from the sharp

Two spined Stickleback (Gasterosteus aculeatus).
(From Report of U. S. Fish Commission.)

spines of the back. They are small fishes, a few inches long, of 5 genera, Gasterosteus, Pygosteus, Eucalia, Apeltes, and Spinachia, but very pugnacious and rapacious, being especially destructive to the spawn and fry of many larger fishes. They inhabit fresh waters and sea-arms of northern Europe, Asia, and North America.

stickleback

to the number of nearly 20 species. The common two- or three-spined stickleback, banstickle, burnstickle, or tit-lebat, is G. aculeatus, 4 inches long. Another is the nine- or ten-spined, Pygosteus pungitius. The fifteen-spined stickleback, or sea-stickleback, is Synnachia vulgaris, of the northern coasts of Europe, a marine species, from 5 to 7 inches long, of very slender elongate form, with a tubular snout. They are among the most characteristic fishes of the northern hemisphere in the colder regions. Except in the breeding-season, they live in shoals, and are sometimes numerous enough to become of commercial value for their oil or for manure. They are noted for the construction of elaborate nests which the male builds for the eggs, in which several females often or generally deposit their burden. The eggs are comparatively few, and while being hatched are assiduously guarded by the male. The local or popular synonyms of the sticklebacks are numerous, among them prickleback, uprickleback, stickling, and sharpeling.

Nest of Stickleback.

sticklebag (stik'l-bag), n. A corruption of stickleback. I. Walton, Complete Angler, i. 5.

stickle-haired (stik'l-härd), a. Having a rough or shaggy coat; rough-haired.

Those [dogs] that serve for that purpose are stickle haired, and not unlike the Irish grayhounds.

Sandys, Travails, p. 60.

stickler (stik'lër), n. [An altered form of sticler, **stichtler*, after stickle for stightle: see stickle, stightle.] 1. An attendant on or a judge of a contest, as a duel: a second; hence, an arbitrator; a peacemaker.

The dragon wing of night o'erspreads the earth, And, stickler-like, the armies separates.

Shak., T. and C., v. 8. 18.

Buriasco, a stickler or iudge of any combatants, such a one as brings into the listes such as shall fight a combat, or run at tilt.

Florio, 1593.

Hee is a great stickler in the tumults of double Iugges, and venter his head by his Place, which is broke many times to keep whole the peace.

Bp. Earle, Micro-cosmographie, A Constable.

2. An obstinate contender about anything, often about a thing of little consequence: as, a stickler for ceremony; an advocate; a partizan.

He was one of the delegates (together with Dr. Dale, &c.) for the Tryall of Mary Queen of Scots, and was a great stickler for the saving of her life.

Aubrey, Lives (William Aubrey).

stickling (stik'ling), n. [Early mod. E. also stykelyng; < ME. stikeling, stykelyng, stykelyng; < stickle + -ing. Cf. stickleback.] A fish: same as stickleback.

stickly (stik'li), a. [Cf. stickle + -y.] Prickly; rough. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

stick-play (stik'plä), n. Same as cudgel-play or single-stick.

stick-pot (stik'pot), n. A lath-pot for taking lobsters: the common form of lobster-trap, semicylindrical or rectangular in shape, and constructed of laths or of any narrow strips of wood.

Other names by which they are known to the fishermen are "box-traps," "house-pots," "stick-pots," and "lath-coops."

Fisheries of U. S., v. ii. 666.

stickseed (stik'söd), n. A plant of the genus Echinopspermum, of the borage family. The genus consists of rather slender rough weeds whose seeds bear on the margin from one to three rows of barbed prickles, by which they adhere to clothing, etc. E. Virginicum, the beggar's-lice, is a leading American species.

sticktail (stik'täl), n. The ruddy duck, Erimatur rubida. See cut under Erimatur. J. P. Girard, 1844. [Long Island.]

sticktight (stik'tit), n. A composite weed, Bidens frondosa, whose flat achenia bear two barbed awns; also, one of the seeds. The name is doubtless applied to other plants with adhesive seeds. Compare beggar's-ticks, beggar's-lice.

sticky (stik'i), a. [Cf. stick + -y.] 1. Having the property of adhering to a surface; inclining to stick; adhesive; viscous; viscid; glutinous; tenacious.—2. Humid; producing stickiness; muggy: as, a disagreeable, sticky day. [Colloq.]

sticky (stik'i), a. [Cf. stick + -y.] Like a stick; stiff.

But herbs draw a weak juyce, and have a soft stalk; and therefore those amongst them which last longest are herbs of strong smell, and with a sticky stalk.

Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 583.

Sticta (stik'tü), n. [NL. (Schreber, 1774), < Gr. στικτός, spotted, dappled, punctuated, verbal adj. < στικ, mark with a pointed instrument, prick: see stigma.] A large, mostly tropical, genus of parmeliaceous lichens, of the family Peltigerci. The thallus is frondose-foliaceous, variously lobed, but for the most part wide-lobed, and coriaceous or cartilaginous in texture. The apothecia are scutelliform, submarginal, elevated, and blackened; the spores are fusiform and acicular, two- to four-celled, usually colorless. There are about 20 North American species. Some of the exotic species, as S. argyrea, are rich in coloring matter. See crotches, hazel-crotches, lungwort, 3, oak-lungs, rag, 3, and cut under apothecium.

stictaine (stik'tē-in), a. [Irreg. < Sticta + -inc.] In bot., relating or belonging to the genus Sticta. E. Tuckerman, N. A. Lichens, I. 83.

stictiform (stik'ti-form), a. [Cf. NL. Sticta + L. forma, form.] In bot., having the form or characters of the genus Sticta.

stiddy, n. A Middle English form of stead.

stiddy (stid'i), n. A dialectal form of stithy.

James Yorke, a blacksmith of Lincoln, . . . is a servant as well of Apollo as Vulcan, turning his stiddy into a study.

Fuller, Worthies, Lincoln, II. 295.

stiddy, a. A dialectal form of steady.

stiet. See sty, sty, sty.

Stiebel's canal. See canal.

stieve, stieve. See stevel, stevely.

stife (stif), a. A dialectal variant of stiff.

stife (stif), n. [Cf. stife, stive.] Suffocating vapor. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

A large open-mouthed chimney or stack, about 45 feet high (one for each set), which serves to carry off the smoke from the fires, the fumes from the metal, and the stife from the greases.

W. H. Wahl, Galvanoplastic Manipulations, lxxv. 517.

stiff (stif), a. and n. [Also dial. stife, stive (with diphthong after orig. long vowel); < ME. stif, styf, steef, stef, < AS. stif or stif = OFries. stef, North Fries. stif, stif, stif (Siebs) = MD. stief, stijf, D. stijf = MLG. stif or stif, LG. stief = MHG. stif (appar. < MLG.), G. stief = Dan. stiv = Sw. stuf = Norw. stiv (Icel. **stifr* (Webster), not found, stifr (Haldorsen), prob., like the other Scand. forms, of LG. origin); Teut. stif, stif; akin to Lith. stiprus, strong, stipti, be stiff, L. stipes, a stem (see stipe). Cf. stife.] 1. a. 1. Rigid; not easily bent; not flexible or pliant; not flaccid: as, stiff paper; a cravat stiff with starch.

A stif spere.

King Alisaunder, l. 2745.

Oh God, my heart! she is cold, cold, and stiff too, Stif as a stake; she's dead!

Fletcher, Double Marriage, v. 2.

Hark! that rustle of a dress, Stif with lavish costliness!

Lowell, The Ghost-Seer.

2. Not fluid; thick and tenacious; neither soft nor hard: as, a stiff batter; stiff clay.

I grow stif, as cooling metals do.

Dryden, Indian Emperor, v. 2.

3. Drawn tight; tense: as, a stiff cord.

Then the two men which did hold the end of the line, still standing there, began to draw, & drew til they had drawn the ends of the line stiffe, & together.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 433.

Keep a stiff rein, and move but gently on; The coursers of themselves will run too fast.

Addison, tr. of Ovid's Metamorph., ii.

4. Not easily bent; not to be moved without great friction or exertion; not working smoothly or easily.

As he (Rip Van Winkle) rose to walk, he found himself stif in the joints.

Iring, Sketch-Book, p. 56.

The plugs were stif, and water could not be got.

Mrs. Gaskell, Mary Barton, v.

5. Not natural and easy in movement; not flowing or graceful; cramped; constrained: as, a stiff style of writing or speaking.

And his address, if not quite French in ease, Not English stif, but frank, and form'd to please.

Cowper, Tirocinium, l. 671.

Our hard, stif lines of life with her Are flowing curves of beauty.

Whittier, Among the Hills.

6. Rigidly ceremonious; formal in manner; constrained; affected; unbending; starched: as, a stiff deportment.

This kind of good manners was perhaps carried to an excess, so as to make conversation too stif, formal, and precise.

Addison, Spectator, No. 119.

7. Strong and steady in motion: as, a stiff breeze.

And, like a field of standing corn that's mov'd With a stif gale, their heads bow all one way.

Beau. and Fl., Philaster, iii. 1.

8. Strong; lusty; stanch, both physically and mentally. [Now provincial only.]

stiffen

Yet oft they quit

The dank, and, rising on stiff pennons, tower The mild aerial sky.

Milton, P. L., vii. 441.

Sometime I was an archere good, A stiffe and eke a stronge, I was commytted the best archere That was in mery Englonde.

Lytell Geste of Robyn Hode (Child's Ballads, V. 120).

9. Strong: said of an alcoholic drink, or mixed drink of which spirit forms a part.

But, tho' the port surpasses praise, My nerves have dealt with stiffer.

Tennyson, Will Waterproof.

10. Firm in resistance or persistence; obstinate; stubborn; pertinacious.

A grene hors gret & thikke,

A stede ful stif to strayne [guide].

Sir Gauwayne and the Green Knight (L. E. T. S.), l. 173.

Ther the batayle was stiffest and of more strengthe.

Joseph of Arimathe (L. E. T. S.), p. 18.

The boy remained stiff in his denial, and seemed not affected with the apprehension of death.

Winthrop, Hist. New England, II. 58.

11. Hard to receive or accept; hard to bear.

Labienus—

This is stiff news—hath with his Parthian force Extended Asia from Euphrates.

Shak., A. and C., i. 2. 104.

12. Hard to master or overcome; very difficult: as, a stiff examination in mathematics.

We now left the carriages, and began a stiff climb to the top of the hill.

Harper's Mag., LXXXVI. 447.

13. Naut., bearing a press of canvas or of wind without careening much; tending to keep upright: as, a stiff vessel; a stiff keel: opposed to crank.

It continued a growing storm all the day, and towards night so much wind as we bore no more sail but so much as should keep the ship stiff.

Winthrop, Hist. New England, I. 17.

14. High; steep: as, a stiff price. [Slang.]—

15. Unyielding; firm: said of prices, markets, etc.: as, the wheat-market is stiff. [Commercial slang.]—16. Rigid as in death; dead. [Slang.]—A stiff neck. See neck.—To keep a stiff upper lip. See lip.—Syn. 1. Unbending, unyielding.—6. Firm, punctilious.—10. Inflexible, uncompromising.

II. n. 1. A dead body; a corpse. [Slang.]

They piled the stiffe outside the door—

They made, I reckon, a cord or more.

John Hay, Mystery of Gilgal.

2. In hatting, a stiffener.—3. Negotiable paper. [Commercial slang.]—4. Forged paper. [Thieves' slang.]—To do a bit of stiff, to accept or discount a bill. [Slang.]

How are the Three per Cents, you little beggar? I wish you'd do me a bit of stiff; and just tell your father, if I may overdraw my account, I'll vote with him.

Thackeray, Newcomes, vi.

stiff (stif), v. i. [Cf. ME. stiffen, stiffen, a later form of stiven, early ME. **stifien*, < AS. stifian or stifian, be stiff, < stif, stif, stif: see stif, a., and cf. stivel, the older form of the verb.] To become or grow stiff. (a) To become upright or strong. As sone as they [chicks] stiffe and that they steppe kunne, Than cometh and crieth her owen kynde dame.

Richard the Redeless, iii. 54.

(b) To become obstinate or stubborn.

But Dido affrighted stift also in her obstinat onset.

Stanbury, Æneid, iv.

stiff-borne (stif'börn), a. Carried on with unyielding constancy or perseverance.

The stiff-borne action.

Shak., 2 Hen. IV., i. 1. 177.

stiffen (stif'n), v. [= Sw. stifna = Dan. stivne; as stif + -en.] 1. intr. To become stiff. (a) To become less flexible or pliant; become rigid.

With chattering teeth he stands, and stiffening hair, And looks a bloodless image of despair!

Pope, Iliad, xiii. 364.

In this neighbourhood I have frequently heard it said that if a corpse does not stiffen within a reasonable time it is a sign of another death in the family.

N. and Q., 7th ser., X. 114.

(b) To become less soft or fluid; grow thicker or harder; become inspissated: as, jellies stiffen as they cool.

The tender soil then stiffening by degrees.

Dryden.

(c) To become steady and strong: as, a stiffening breeze.

(d) To become unyielding; grow rigid, obstinate, or formal.

Sir Aylmer Aylmer slowly stiffening spoke:

"The girl and boy, Sir, know their differences!"

Tennyson, Aylmer's Field.

(e) To become higher in price; become firmer or more unyielding: as, the market stiffens. [Commercial slang.]

II. trans. To make stiff. (a) To make less pliant or flexible.

From his saddle heavily down-leapt,

Stiffened, as one who not for long has slept.

William Morris, Earthly Paradise, III. 259.

(b) To make rigid, constrained, formal, or habitual. I pity kings, whom Worship waits upon, . . . Whom Education stiffens into state.

Cowper, Table-Talk, l. 125.

(c) To make more thick or viscous; inspissate: as, to stiffen paste. (d) To make stubborn or obstinate.

The man . . . who is settled and stiffened in vice.
Barrow, Sermons, III. xvi. (Encyc. Diet.)

stiffener (stif'nér), n. [< stiffen + -er.] One who or that which stiffens. (a) Formerly used specifically for a piece of stiff material worn inside a stock or corset, and also for a similar device worn in leg-of-mutton de vés. (b) In bookbinding, a thick paper or thin mill-board, used by bookbinders as an inner lining to book-covers to give them the needed stiffness.

stiffening (stif'nínz), n. [Verbal n. of stiffen, v.] 1. Something that is used to make a substance stiff or less soft, as starch. — 2. Something intended to make: garment, or part of a garment, stiff and capable of keeping its shape. See lace-ram, crinoline.

stiffening-machine (stif'nínz-má-shén), v. In hat-making, an apparatus for applying the heated composition used to harden and stiffen the felt of hats. It consists of a vat filled with melted shellac, and a pair of rollers for removing the superfluous stiffening material after the hat has been dipped in the vat.

stiffening-order (stif'nínz-ór-dér), n. A custom-house warrant by which ballast or heavy goods may be taken on board before the whole inward cargo is discharged, to prevent the vessel from getting too light. Imp. Dict.

stiff-hearted (-stif'háir'ted), a. Obstinate; stubborn; contumacious.

They are impudent children and stiff-hearted.

Ezek. II. 4.

stiffle (stif'l), n. A dialectal form of stightle, stickler.

stiffle (stif'l), n. An obsolete form of stifle.

stiffler (-stif'lér), n. [Also stifler; < late ME. styffeler, a var. of **stightler*, whence also stickler; see stickler, stickle, stifle, stightle.] 14. Same as stickler.

The king intendeth, in chawing all inconveniencies, to be as late as thy both, and to be a stiffler between them.
Patriarch Letter, III. 8, quoted in J. Gairdner's Richard III. I.

The drift was as I judged, for Dethick to continue such stiffers in the college of his pupils, to win him in time by hook or crook the master's room.
Abp. Parker, p. 252. (Davies)

2. A lumbago. Hallivell (spelled stifler). [Prov. Eng.]

stiffly (-stif'li), adv. [< ME. styffliche, styffly, styff (= MD. styffel); < stift + -ly.] In a stiff manner, in any sense of the word stiff.

And you, my rhymes, grow not instant old,
But bear me stiffly up. Shak., Hamlet, I. 5. 97.

Pis-chorus and others stiffly maintain the use of charms, words, characters, &c. Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 271.

stiff-neck (-stif'nek), n. Cervical myalgia; sometimes, true torticollis.

stiff-necked (-stif'nek-ed), a. Stubborn; inflexibly obstinate; contumacious: as, a stiff-necked people.

stiff-neckedness (-stif'nek-nes or -nek'ed-nes), n. The property or character of being stiff-necked; stubbornness.

stiffness (-stif'nes), n. [< ME. styffnesse, styffnes; < stift + -ness.] The state or character of being stiff, in any sense.

stiff-tail (-stif'tál), n. The ruddy duck, Eristura rubula. See cut under Eristura. [Local, U. S.]

stiff-tailed (-stif'táld), a. Having rigid rectrices or tail-feathers denuded to the base; erismaturine: specifically noting ducks of the genus Eristura.

stifle (stif'l), v.: pret. and pp. stifled, ppr. stifling. [Early mod. E. also stift; < leel. stifta = Norw. stifta, dam up, choke, stop, perhaps (like Norw. stifta, stiffen) freq. of Norw. stifta = Sw. stifta = Dan. stift = ME. stiven, stiffen: see stive, stiff, v. The word was prob. confused with stive, < OF. estiver, pack tight, stive: see stive.] I. trans. 14. To choke up; dam up; close.

Make fast the chamber door, stifle the keyhole and the crannies.
Shirley, Tractor, III. 1.

2. To kill by impeding respiration, as by covering the mouth and nose, by introducing an irrespirable substance into the lungs, or by other means; suffocate or greatly oppress by foul air or otherwise; smother.

Sure, if I had not pinch'd you 'till you wak'd, you had stifled me with kisses.
Congreve, Old Bachelor, II. 3.

I took my leave, being half stifled with the closeness of the room.
Swift, Account of Farinelli's Death.

3. To stop the passage of; arrest the free action of; extinguish; deaden; quench: as, to stifle flame; to stifle sound.

They [colored bodies] stop and stifle in themselves the rays, which they do not reflect or transmit.
Newton, Opticks, I. II. x.

She whisper'd, with a stifled moan.

Tennyson, Mariana in the South.

4. To suppress; keep from active manifestation; keep from public notice; conceal; repress; destroy: as, to stifle inquiry; to stifle a report; to stifle passion; to stifle convictions.

A record surreptitiously or erroneously made up, to stifle or pervert the truth. Blackstone, Com., III. xxv. = Syn. 2. Suffocate, strangle, etc. See smother. — 4. To hush, muffle, muzzle, gag.

II. intrans. To suffocate; perish by asphyxia.

You shall stifle in your own report.

And smell of calumny. Shak., M. for M., II. 4. 155.

stifle (stif'l), n. [Formerly also stifle; appar. < stift, dial. stife: see stift.] 1. The stifle-joint.

If the horse be but hurt in the stifle with some stripe or strain.

Topell, Four-Footed Beasts (1607), p. 403. (Hallivell)

2. Disease or other affection of the stifle-bone or stifle-joint, as dislocation or fracture of the patella.

stifle-bone (stif'l-bön), n. The patella of the horse; the kneecap, kneecap, or bone of the stifle-joint.

stifled (stif'ld), a. [Formerly also stifled; < stifle + -d.] Affected with stifle. See stifle, 2.

The horse is said to be stifled when the stifling bone is removed from the place.

Topell, Four-Footed Beasts (1607), p. 105. (Hallivell)

stifle-joint (stif'l-jóint), n. The stifle or kneecap-joint of the horse; the joint of the hind leg between the hip and the hock, whose convexity points forward, which is close to the belly, and which corresponds to the human knee. See cut under Equidae.

stifler (stif'lér), n. [< stifle, v., + -er.] Milit. See camouflet.

stifle-shoe (stif'l-shü), n. A form of horseshoe exposing a curved surface to the ground: used in treating a stifled horse. It is fixed on the sound foot, with the effect of forcing the animal to throw its weight on the weak joint, and thus strengthen it by exercise.

stifling (stif'ling), p. a. Close; oppressive; suffocating: as, a stifling atmosphere.

Even in the stifling bosom of the town.
Cowper, Task, IV. 753.

stifling-bone, n. Same as stifle-bone.

stight, v. [ME. stigten, < AS. stihtan, stihtian (for **stiftan*), order, rule, govern, = MD. D. stichten, found, build, impose a law, = OHG. MFG. G. stiften = leel. stipta, stifta, stifta = Sw. stifta, stifta = Dan. stift, found, institute; cf. leel. stelt, foundation, pavement, stepping-stone, foot-piece. Hence stightle.] To found; establish; set.

The ston that the tron was stigt was of so stiff vertu
That neuer man vpon mold might it him on laue.
William of Palerne (12. E. T. S.), I. 4425.

stightlet, v. [< ME. stightlen, stightlen, stightlen, stightlen, order, arrange, direct, freq. of stighten, AS. stihtan, order, rule, govern: see stight. Hence mod. E. stickle, stifle, q. v.] I. trans. 1. To order; arrange; dispose of; take order concerning; govern; direct.

That other was his stward that stight'd at his meyne.
William of Palerne (12. E. T. S.), I. 1109.

II. intrans. To make arrangements; treat; direct; mediate; stickle.

When they com to the courtte keppte wern thay sayre, Stight'd with the steyrde, stad in the hallo.
Alliterative Poems (ed. Morris), II. 60.

stigma (stig'mij), n.; E. pl. stigmas (stig'mijz), used chiefly in senses 1, 2, and 6; L. pl. stigmata (stig'ma-tij), used more or less in all the senses. [= F. stigmate = Sp. Pg. estigma = It. stimate, stigma = G. stigma, < NL. stigma, < L. stigma, < Gr. στίγμα, pl. στίγματα, a mark, esp. of a pointed instrument, a spot, brand, < στίξω, mark (with a point), prick, brand: see stick.]

1. A mark made with a red-hot iron, formerly in many countries upon criminals as a badge of infamy; a brand impressed on slaves and others.

The Devil, however, does not imprint any stigma upon his new vassal, as in the later stories of witch-compact.
Lowell, Among my Books, 1st ser., p. 65.

2. Any mark of infamy, slur, or disgrace which attaches to a person on account of evil conduct.

Happy is it for him that the blackest stigma that can be fastened upon him is that his robes were whiter than his brethren's.
By. Hall, Remains, Pref.

3. In anat. and zool., a mark; a marked point or place; variously applied to marks of color, as a spot, and to many different pores or small holes. Specifically—(a) A birth-mark; a nevus. (b) The point or place on the surface of an ovary where a mature Graafian follicle ruptures. (c) In ornith., the place where the calyx or ovisac of the ovary ruptures to discharge an ovum into the oviduct. See calyx, 3 (b). (d) In entom.: (1) The exterior orifice of a trachea; a spiracle. See cuts under pulmonary, flesh-fly, sheep-bot, and Acarida. (2) A chitinous spot or mark on the anterior margin of the forewings of many insects, formed by a special enlargement of a vein; a pterostigma. (e) In Prolozoa, a spot of pigment; the so-called eye of an infusorian. (f) In Annelida, one of the pores or openings of the segmental organs. (g) In Hydrozoa, the pore by which a pneumatocyst opens to the exterior. See cut under Hydrozoa. (h) In Pharyngopneusta, as an ascidian, one of the ciliated openings by which the cavity of the pharynx is placed in communication with that of the atrial canal. See cuts under Appendicularia and Tunicata.

4. A place or point on the skin which bleeds periodically or at irregular intervals during some mental states. The spontaneous appearance of stigmata was formerly regarded superstitiously.—5. pl. In the Rom. Cath. Ch., marks said to have been supernaturally impressed upon the bodies of certain persons in imitation of the wounds on the crucified body of Christ.

In the life of St. Francis of Assisi we have the first example of the alleged miraculous infliction of stigmata.

Encyc. Brit., XXII. 510.

6. In bot., a modified part of the style or, when that is wanting, of the surface of the ovary, which in impregnation receives the pollen. In the latter case the stigma is said to be sessile, as in the poppy and the tulip. When the style is present, the stigma may be terminal, occupying its summit, as in the plum and cherry, or lateral, running down its face in one or two lines, as in Ranunculus. Its form and appearance are very various. In many plants there is only one stigma, while in others there are two, three, five, or many, according to the number of styles or style-branches. The stigma is composed of delicate cellular tissue; its surface is destitute of true epidermis, and is usually moist. See stigma (with cut) and pollen-tube.

1. Of Cynodon Dactylon. 2. Of Vitis Labrusca. 3. Of Populus Argyrea. 4. Of Gordonia pubescens. 5. Of Ficus Americana. 6. Of Silene Pennsylvanica. 7. Of Tribulus terrestris. 8. Of Dioscorea Nuttalliana. 9. Of Linum Virginianum. 10. Of Furcraea officinalis. 11. Of Rumex obtusifolius.

stigma (stig'mij), n. [Gr. στίγμα, the ligature σ, an altered form, to bring in σ, of σίμα or σίμα, the letter σ, σ, sigma: see sigma.] The ligature was also called στί. In Gr. gram. and paleog., a ligature (σ) still sometimes used for σ (st), and also used as a numeral (6).

stigma-disk (stig'mij-disk), n. In bot., a disk forming the seat of a stigma, sometimes produced by the fusion of two or more style-apices, as in Asclepias.

stigmatal (stig'mij), a. [< stigma + -al.] Of or pertaining to a stigma; stigmatic. Specifically applied in entomology to a vein of the wings of some insects, whose modification makes a stigma (pterostigma).

Stigmara (stig-mā'ri-j), n. [NL. < L. stigma, a mark (see stigma), + -aria.] A former genus of fossil plants, very abundant in many regions in the coal-measures, and especially in the under-clay, or clayey material (often mixed with more or less sand) by which most seams of coal are underlain; also [L. c.], a plant of this genus. These plants are cylindrical root-like bodies, usually starting from a center in four main branches, and afterward bifurcating irregularly, and extending sometimes to great distances. The bodies are covered with small round depressions or scars arranged in lozenge-shaped patterns, and each the point of attachment of a ribbon-shaped filament or rootlet. In some cases the stigmata have been found attached to trunks of Sinularia, in such a position as would naturally be occupied by the roots with reference to the stem of the plant or tree: hence they have been admitted by most paleontologists to be in fact the roots of the widely distributed coal-plant called Stigmaria. Some who maintain this, however, admit that the relation of the stigmata to the plant itself was peculiar; while others believe that they were floating stems, able under favorable conditions to play the part of roots. This opinion has for its support the fact that thick beds of under-clay are frequently found almost entirely made up of remains of stigmata, while not even a fragment of Stigmaria can be found in the vicinity.

Stigmarian (stig-mā'ri-an), a. [< Stigmara + -an.] Relating to, containing, or consisting of Stigmara. Geol. Mag., No. 267, p. 407.

stigmarioid (stig-mā'ri-oid), a. [< Stigmara + -oid.] In bot., resembling Stigmara.

stigmata, n. Latin plural of stigma.

stigmatal (stig-mā-tal), a. [< stigmata + -al.] In entom., pertaining to, near, or containing the stigmata or breathing-pores; stigmatic: as, the stigmatal line of a caterpillar.

stigmatic (stig-mat'ik, formerly also stig-mat'ik), a. and n. [< ML. stigmaticus, < L. stigma, < Gr. στίγμα, a mark, brand: see stigma<sup>1</sup>.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to a stigma, in any sense of that word. Specifically—(a) Having the character of a brand; ignominious.

Print in my face
The most stigmatic title of a villain.
Heywood, Woman Killed with Kindness (Works, II. 110).
(b) Marked with or as with a stigma or brand; repulsive; abhorrent.

So the world is become ill favoured and shrewd pated, as politic in brain as it is stigmatic in limbs.

Rev. T. Adams, Works, I. 19.
(c) In nat. hist. belonging to or having the character of a stigma. Hzsry, Anat. Invert., p. 374. (d) In bot., receptive of pollen: said of parts of the style which have the function without the form of a stigma, as the "silk" of maize. (e) Bearing the stigmata, stigmatized. See stigma<sup>1</sup>, 5.—Stigmatic cells, in bot., same as tid-cells.

II. n. 1. A person who is marked with stigmata, in the ecclesiastical or the pathological sense; a stigmatist.—2. A criminal who has been branded; one who bears upon his person the marks of infamy or punishment; a notorious profligate.

Convalde him to a Justice, where one swore
He had been branded stigmatic before.
Phalontine (1616). (Nares.)

3. One on whom nature has set a mark of deformity.

But like a foul, mis shapen stigmatic,
Mark'd by the destinies to be avoided
Shak., 3 Hen. VI., II. 2. 136.

stigmatical (stig-mat'ik-al), a. [< stigmatic + -al.] Same as stigmatic. Shak., C. of E., iv. 2. 22.

stigmatically (-stig-mat'ik-al-i), adv. With stigmata: with a mark of infamy or deformity.

If you spy e any man that has a looke,
Stigmatically drawne, like to a furies, (Able to fright) to such I'll give large pay.
Dekker, Wonder of a Kingdom, III. i.

stigmatiferous (stig-ma-tif'ē-rus), a. [< NL. stigma(-t-), a stigma, + L. ferre = E. bear<sup>1</sup>.] In bot., stigma-bearing.

stigmatiform (-stig-ma-ti-fōrm), a. [< NL. stigma(-t-), stigma, + L. forma, form.] In entom., having the structure or appearance of a stigma, spiracle, or breathing-pore; spiraculiform.

stigmatisation, stigmatise, etc. See stigmatisation, etc.

stigmatist (stig-ma-tist), n. [< Gr. στίγμα(-τ-), a mark, a brand (see stigma<sup>1</sup>), + -ist.] One on whom the stigmata, or marks of Christ's wounds, are said to be supernaturally impressed.

stigmatization (stig-ma-ti-zā'shon), n. [< stigmatize + -ation.] 1. The act of stigmatizing, or the condition of being stigmatized; specifically, the supposed miraculous impression of the marks of Christ's wounds on the bodies of certain persons.—2. The act, process, or result of producing, as by hypnotic suggestion, on the surface of the body points or lines which bleed. [Recent.]

Also spelled stigmatisation.
stigmatize (stig-mā-tiz), v. t.: pret. and pp. stigmatized, ppr. stigmatizing. [< F. stigmatiser = Sp. estigmatizar = Pg. estigmatizar = It. stigmatizzare, < ML. stigmatizari, < Gr. στίγμα(-τ-), a mark, brand, < στίγμα(-τ-), a mark, brand: see stigma<sup>1</sup>.] 1. To mark with a stigma or brand. They had more need some of them . . . to have their cheeks stigmatized with a hot iron
Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 474.

2. To set a mark of disgrace on; disgrace with some mark or term of reproach or infamy.

It was thought proper to restrain it [comedy] within bounds by a law enacting that no person should be stigmatized under his real name.
Goldsmith, Essay, Origin of Poetry.

3. To produce red points, sometimes bleeding, in or on: as, a person or the skin stigmatized by hypnotic suggestion. [Recent.]

Also spelled stigmatise.
stigmatized (stig-mā-tizd), p. a. 1. Marked with a stigma; branded; specifically, marked with the stigmata of the passion.—2. Resembling stigmata: as, the stigmatized dots on the skin in measles.

Also spelled stigmatised.
stigmatose (stig-mā-tōs), a. [*< NL. *stigmatosus, < stigma<sup>1</sup>, a stigma: see stigma<sup>1</sup>.*] 1. In bot., same as stigmatic.—2. Affected with stigmata; stigmatized.

stigma (stig'mō), n. [< Gr. στίγμα, a prick, point.] 1. In Gr. paleog., a dot used as a punctuation-mark; especially, a dot placed at the top of the line, like the later Greek colon, and having the value of a period.—2. In Gr. pros., a dot placed over a time or syllable to mark the ictus.

Stigmonema (stig-mō-nē'mi), n. [< NL., < Gr. στίγμα, a mark, + νημα, a thread.] A genus of cyanophyceous alga, giving name to the family Stigmonemaceae.

Stigmonemæ (stig-mō-nē'mō-ē), n. pl. [< NL., < Stigmonema + -æ.] A family of cyanophyceous alga, embraced, according to late systematists, in the order Seytonemaceae.

Stigmus (stig'mus), n. [< (Jurine, 1807), < Gr. στίγμα, a mark: see stigma<sup>1</sup>.] In entom., a genus of fossorial wasps, of the family Pemphredonidae, having a large stigma to the fore wing and a petiolate abdomen. S. troglodytes of Europe makes its cells in the hollow straws of thatched roofs, and provisions them with masses of immature Thripes.

stilar, a. See stylar.
Stilbeæ (stil'bē-ē), n. pl. [< NL., < Gr. στίλβειν, glitter, shine, + -æ.] A division of hyphomycetous fungi, characterized by the cohering of the spore-bearing hyphae into a dense and slender stipe.

stilbite (stil'bit), n. [< Gr. στίλβειν, glitter, shine, + -ite<sup>2</sup>.] 1. A common zeolitic mineral, usually occurring in radiated or sheaf-like tufts of crystals having a pearly luster on the surface of cleavage. It varies in color from white to brown or red. It is essentially a hydrous silicate of aluminum and calcium. Also called desmine. See cut under tufted.

2. The mineral heulandite.
stile<sup>1</sup> (stil), n. [Early mod. E. also style; < ME. stile, style, stigele, < AS. stigel = OHG. stigila, stīgīl, MHG. stiegel, stigele, a step, G. dial. stegel, a step, a stile, < stigan (pp. stigen), climb, ascend. Cf. styl<sup>1</sup>, n., and stair.] 1. A series of steps, or a frame of bars and steps, for ascending and descending in getting over a fence or wall.

Jog on, jog on, the foot-path way,
And merrily hent the stile a.
Shak., W. T., iv. 3. 133.

2. In carp., a vertical part of a piece of framing, into which the ends of the rails are fixed by mortises and tenons. See cut of panel-door, under door.

stile<sup>2</sup>, n. A former and more correct spelling of style<sup>1</sup>.

stile<sup>3</sup>, n. A former spelling of style<sup>2</sup>.
stilet<sup>1</sup> (sti-let'), n. A former and more correct form of stiletto. Scott, Monastery.

stilet<sup>2</sup> (sti-let'), n. In zool., a small style; a stylet.

stiletet (sti-let'), n. Same as stylet.

stiletto (sti-let'ō), n. [< It. stiletto, a dagger, dim. of stilo, a dagger, < L. stilus, a stake, a pointed instrument: see stile<sup>2</sup>, style<sup>2</sup>, and cf. stylet.] 1. A dagger having a blade slender and narrow, and thick in proportion to its width—that is, triangular, square, etc., in section, instead of flat.—2. A small sharp-pointed implement used for making eyelet-holes and for similar purposes. Stilettoes are of ivory, bone, metal, and other materials.—3. A beard trimmed into a sharp-pointed form.

The stiletto beard,
O, it makes me afraid,
It is so sharp beneath.
Acad. of Compl. (Nares.)

The very quack of fashion, the very he that Wears a stiletto on his chin? Ford, Fancies, III. 1.

stiletto (sti-let'ō), v. t. [< stiletto, n.] To strike or wound with a stiletto; hence, in general, to stab.

Henry IV. . . . [was] likewise stilettoed by a rascal votary.
Bacon, Charge against W. Talbot, p. 202.

still<sup>1</sup> (stil), a. and n. [Early mod. E. also stil, stille, styl, styll, styll; < ME. stille, styll, < AS. stille, < OS. stillo = D. stil = OHG. stillo, MHG. stille, G. still = Sw. stilla = Dan. stille, quietly; from the adj.]

1. Quietly; silently; softly; peacefully.

stille = OS. stilli = OFries. stille = MD. stille, stil, D. stil = MLG. stille, LG. still = OHG. stilli, MHG. stille, G. still = Icel. stilltr = Dan. stille = Sw. stilla, quiet, still; with adj. formative, from the root (stel) of AS. steall, etc., a place, stall: see stall, stell.] 1. a. 1. Remaining in place; remaining at rest; motionless; quiet: as, to stand, sit, or lie still.

Foot & hond thou kepe fulle styll
Fro claywng or tryppng, hit ys skylle.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 13.

2. Calm; tranquil; peaceful; undisturbed or unruffled: as, still waters run deep; a still night.

In the calmest and most stillest night.
Shak., 2 Hen. IV., III. 1. 28.

A Poet in still musings bound.
Wordsworth, Sonnets, III. 11.

3. Silent; quiet; calm; noiseless; hushed.

A man that sayth little shall perceyve by the speche of another;
Be thou still and see, the more shalt thou perceyve in another.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 85.

The trumpet's silver sound is still,
The warder silent on the hill!
Scott, Marmion, I., Int.

4. Soft; low; subdued: as, a still small voice.

The gentle blasts of western winds shall move
The trembling leaves, and through their close boughs breathe Still musick, whilst we rest ourselves beneath Their dancing shade. Carew, Poems, p. 70. (Latham.)

5. Not sparkling or effervescent; said of wine, mineral water, and other beverages: contrasted with sparkling; by extension, having but little effervescence. Thus, still champagne is not the non-effervescent natural wine, but champagne which is only moderately sparkling.

6. Continual; constant.
But I of these will wrest an alphabet,
And by still practice learn to know thy meanings.
Shak., Tit. And., III. 2. 45.

Still alarm, an alarm of fire given by a person calling at a station, and not by the regular system of fire-signals.—Still days. See day<sup>1</sup>.—Still hunt. See hunt.—Still life, inanimate objects, such as furniture, fruits, or dead animals, represented by the painter's art.

The same dull sights in the same landscape mixt, Scenes of still life, and points for ever fixed,
A tedious pleasure on the mind bestow.
Addison, Epit. to British Enchanters.

II. n. 1. Calm; silence; freedom from noise.

He [Henry VIII.] had never any . . . jealousy with the King his father which might give any occasion of altering court or counsel upon the change; but all things passed in a still.
Bacon, Hist. Hen. VIII.

2. A still alarm. [Collon.]

Many alarms were what the firemen called stille, where a single engine went out to fight the fire.
Elect. Rev. (Amer.), II. xxv. 6.

still<sup>1</sup> (stil), v. [Early mod. E. also stille, styll; < ME. stillen, < AS. stillan = OS. stillian, stillōn = MD. D. stillen = MLG. LG. stillen = OHG. stillan, MHG. G. stillen = Icel. Sw. stilla = Dan. stille, make or become still; from the adj.] 1. trans. 1. To make still; cause to be at rest; render calm, quiet, unruffled, or undisturbed; check or restrain; make peaceful or tranquil; quiet.

Lord, still the seas, and shield my ship from harm.
Quarles, Emblems, III. 11.

2. To calm; appease; quiet or allay, as commotion, tumult, agitation, or excitement.

A turn or two I'll walk,
To still my beating mind.
Shak., Tempest, iv. 1. 163.

3. To silence; quiet.

With his name the mothers still their babes.
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., II. 3. 17.

O still my bairn, nourice;
O still him wi' the pap!
Lamkin (Child's Ballads, III. 97).

=Syn. 1 and 2. To lull, pacify, tranquilize, smooth.—3. To hush.

II. intrans. To become calm or tranquil; grow quiet; be still. [Rare.]

Heruppon the people peacyd, and stilled unto the tyme the shire was doon.
Paston Letters, I. 180.

still<sup>1</sup> (stil), adv. [Early mod. E. also stil, stille, styll, styll; < ME. stille, < AS. stille = OS. stillo = D. stil = OHG. stillo, MHG. stille, G. still = Sw. stilla = Dan. stille, quietly; from the adj.]

1. Quietly; silently; softly; peacefully.

Thei criede mercy with good wille,
Somme lowde & somme stille.
King Horn (E. E. T. S.), p. 96.

2. Constantly; continually; habitually; always; ever.

Thou still hast been the father of good news.
Shak., Hamlet, II. 2. 42.

What a set face the gentlewoman has, as she were still going to a sacrifice!
B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, IV. 1.

O first of friends! (Pelides thus reply'd)
Still at my heart, and ever at my side!

Pope, Iliad, xl. 743.

3. Now as in the past; till now; to this time; now as then or as before; yet: as, he is still here.

At the noone, with an easy wynde, and salyd styl in a to p l e z, leuyage Greece on ye lette hande and Barbary on the right hande. Sir R. Gylford, Pylgrymage, p. 12.

Poor Wat, far off upon a hill,

And on his hinder legs with listening ear,

To hearken if his foes pursue him still.

Shak., Venus and Adonis, l. 699.

At the she lived, and still she lies alone.

Crabbe, Works, I. 113.

4. Even in the increasing degree; beyond this (or that); even yet; in excess: used with comparatives or to form a comparative: as, still greater things were expected; still more numerous.

What rich service!

What mines of treasure! richer still!

Pletcher (and another), Palse One, III. 4.

The matter of his treatise is extraordinary; the manner more extraordinary still.

Macaulay, Sadler's Law of Population.

5. For all that; all the same; nevertheless; notwithstanding this (or that).

Though thou repent, yet I have still the loss

Shak., Sonnets, xxiv.

The Lay, with all his good sense and understanding, was only a Mumpkin and had the principles of a slave.

Bruce, Source of the Nile, I. 20.

Loud and (or or) still. See loud — Still and anon, at intervals and repeatedly; continually.

And like the watchful minutes of the hour,

Still and anon cheer'd up the heavy time.

Shak., R. John, iv. 1. 47.

still<sup>2</sup> (stil), v. [ME. stillen, styllen, in part an abbr. of distil, in part < L. stillare, drop, fall in drops, also let or cause to fall in drops, < stilla, a drop; cf. stria, a frozen drop, an icicle. Cf. distil, instil.] 1. intrans. To drop; fall in drops. See distil.

From her silre eyes wiping the dewy wet

Which softly still. Spenser, F. Q., IV. vii. 33.

II. trans. 1. To drop, or cause to fall in drops.

Her father Myrrha sought,

And bore it, but he had not as a daughter ought.

Now from a tree she stills her odorous tears,

Which by the name of her who sheds them bears.

Dryden, tr. of Ovid's Art of Love, l.

2. To expel, as spirit from liquor, by heat and condensation in a refrigerator; distil. See distil.

In Burgess, Anno 21, Doctor Sutto cured me of a certayne wandering fever, made me eat so much Apulum, take so much Pulvis water, & drink so much still'd Lardine.

Guicciardi, Letters (tr. by Helwiese, 1577), p. 275.

still<sup>2</sup> (stil), n. [< still<sup>2</sup>, v. The older noun was stillatory.] 1. An apparatus for separating, by means of heat, volatile matters from substances containing them, and recondensing them into the liquid form. It assumes many forms, according to the purposes for which it is used; but it consists essentially of two parts, a vessel in which the substance to be distilled is heated, and one in which the vapor is cooled and condensed. The most important use of stills is for the distillation of spirituous liquors. See distillation, and under petroleum-still.

Still.

2. A house or works in which liquors are distilled; a distillery. S. Judd, Margaret, l. 15.—

3. In bleaching, a rectangular vessel made of slabs of freestone or flagstone with rabbeted purposes for which it is used; but it consists essentially of two parts, a vessel in which the substance to be distilled is heated, and one in which the vapor is cooled and condensed. The most important use of stills is for the distillation of spirituous liquors. See distillation, and under petroleum-still.

2. A house or works in which liquors are distilled; a distillery. S. Judd, Margaret, l. 15.—

3. In bleaching, a rectangular vessel made of slabs of freestone or flagstone with rabbeted stillages are made so that they can be tilted, and allow articles placed on them to slide off into packing-boxes, etc.

stillatitious (stil-a-tish'us), a. [< L. stillatus, dropping, dripping, < stillare, pp. stillatus, drop, trickle: see still<sup>2</sup>, v.] Falling in drops; drawn by a still. [Rare.] Imp. Dict.

stillatory (stil'a-tō-ri), n.; pl. stillatories (-riz). [< ME. stillatorie, a distilling-vessel (cf. OF. F. stillatoire, n.), < ML. stillatorium, neut. of **stillatorius*, adj., < L. stillare, pp. stillatus, fall in drops: see still<sup>2</sup>, v.] 1. A still; a vessel for distillation; an alembic.

His forehead dropped as a stillatory

Were full of plantayne and of parlorie.

Chaucer, Prolog. to Canon's Yeoman's Tale, l. 27.

In stillatories where the vapour is turned back upon itself by the encounter of the sides of the stillatory.

Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 27.

2. A laboratory; a place or room in which distillation is performed; a still-room.

Marins, Armanus, as you are noble friends,

Go to the privy garden, and in the walk

Next to the stillatory stay for me.

Bacon, and Pl. (2), Faithful Friends, iv. 3.

still-birth (stil'bēth), n. The birth of a lifeless thing; also, a still-born child.

still-born (stil'bōrn), a. Dead at birth; born lifeless: as, a still-born child.

still-burn (stil'bōrn), v. t. To burn in the process of distillation: as, to still-burn brandy.

still<sup>1</sup> (stil'ēr), n. [< still<sup>1</sup> + -ēr.] 1. One who or that which stills or quiets.—2. A wooden disk laid on the liquid in a full pail to prevent splashing. [Prov. Eng.] still<sup>2</sup> (stil'ēr), n. A distiller. Pop. Sci. Mo., XXX. 830.

still-fish (stil'fish), v. i. [< still<sup>1</sup> + fish, after still-hunt.] To fish from a boat at anchor.

still-fisher (stil'fish'ēr), n. An angler engaged in still-fishing.

still-fishing (stil'fish'ing), n. Fishing from a boat at anchor, or from the bank of a stream.

still-house (stil'hous), n. A distillery, or that part of it which contains the still.

still-hunt (stil'hunt), v. [< still-hunt: see under hunt.] 1. trans. To hunt stealthily; stalk; lie in ambush for.

The only way to get one [a grizzly] is to put on moccasins and still-hunt it in its own haunts.

T. Roosevelt, Hunting Trips, p. 327.

The best time to still-hunt deer is just before sunset, when they come down from the hills to drink.

Sportman's Gazetteer, p. 51.

II. intrans. To hunt without making a noise; pursue game stealthily or under cover.

The best way to kill white-tail is to still-hunt carefully through their haunts at dusk.

T. Roosevelt, Hunting Trips, p. 118.

An inferior sort of still-hunting, as practised, for instance, on Norwegian Islands for the large red-deer.

Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XLI. 304.

still-hunter (stil'hun'tēr), n. One who pursues game stealthily and without noise; one who hunts from ambush or under cover; a stalker.

W. T. Hornaday, Smithsonian Report, 1887, ii. 430.

Stilliard<sup>1</sup>, n. See Steelyard<sup>1</sup>.

stillard<sup>2</sup>, n. An old spelling of steelyard<sup>2</sup>.

stillicide (stil'i-sid), n. [< F. stillicide, < L. stillicidium, stillicidium, a falling of drops, dripping, falling rain, < stilla, a drop (see still<sup>2</sup>), + cadere, fall.] 1. A continual falling or succession of drops.

The stillicides of water, . . . if there be water enough to follow, will draw themselves into a small thread, because they will not discontinue; but if there be no remedy, then they cast themselves into round drops.

Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 24.

2. In Rom. law: (a) The right to have the rain from one's roof drop on another's land or roof.

(b) The right to refuse to allow the rain from another's roof to drop on one's own land or roof.

stillicidious (stil-i-sid'i-us), a. [< stillicido + -i-us.] 1. Falling in drops. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., ii. 1.

2. In Rom. law: (a) The right to have the rain from one's roof drop on another's land or roof.

(b) The right to refuse to allow the rain from another's roof to drop on one's own land or roof.

stilliciduous (stil-i-sid'i-us), a. [< stillicido + -i-us.] 1. Falling in drops. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., ii. 1.

flowing yeast.—3. A stand on which pottery is placed in the drying-kiln preparatory to firing.

Stillingia (sti-lin'ji-i), n. [NL. (Linnæus, 1767), named after Benjamin Stillingfleet, an English botanist who published botanical papers in 1759.] 1. A genus of apetalous plants, of the order Euphorbiaceae, tribe Crotonaceae, and subtribe Hippomaneae.

It is characterized by monœcious flowers in terminal bracted spikes, each bract bearing two glands—the male flowers having a small calyx with two or three broad shallow lobes, and two or rarely three free exerted stamens, and the female flowers bearing an ovary of two or three cells, which terminate in undivided styles united at the base, and ripen into two-valved carpels which on falling leave the receptacle armed with three hard spreading horns. There are about 13 species, natives of North and South America, the Mascarene Islands, and the islands of the Pacific. They are mostly smooth shrubs, usually with alternate short-petioled leaves and a few small female flowers solitary under the lower bracts of the dense sterile spike, which bears usually three male flowers under each of the short and broad upper bracts. One species, S. sylvatica, occurs from Virginia southward, for which see queen's-delight and silver-leaf.

2. [f. c.] A plant of the above genus, especially the official S. sylvatica.

stillion (stil'yōn), n. Same as stilling. G. Scamell, Breweries and Maltings, p. 92.

stillitory, n. An erroneous spelling of stillatory.

still-life, n. See still life, under still<sup>1</sup>.

still-liquor (stil'lik'or), n. Bleaching-liquor prepared by the reaction of hydrochloric acid upon manganese binoxide in large stone chambers called stills (whence the name). It is a solution of manganese chloride.

stillness (stil'nes), n. [< ME. stilnesse, < AS. stiles, stiles (= OFries. stilnesse, stilisne = MLG. stilnis = OHG. stilnissi, stilesne, MEG. stilnisso, stilesne), < stille, still: see still<sup>1</sup> and -ness.] The state or character of being still.

(a) Rest; motionlessness; calmness: as, the stillness of the air or of the sea. (b) Noiselessness; quiet; silence: as, the stillness of the night. (c) Freedom from agitation or excitement: as, the stillness of the passions. (d) Habitual silence; taciturnity.

still-peering (stil'pēr'ing), a. Appearing still.

O you leaden messengers,
That ride upon the violent speed of fire,
Fly with false aim; move the still-peering air,
That sings with piercing.

Shak., All's Well, III. 2. 113.

[A doubtful word, by some read still-piercing.]

still-room (stil'rōm), n. 1. An apartment for distilling; a domestic laboratory.—2. A room connected with the kitchen, where coffee, tea, and the like are made, and the finer articles supplied to the table are made, stored, and prepared for use. [Eng.] still-stand (stil'stand), n. A standstill; a halt; a stop. [Rare.]

The tide swell'd up unto his height,
That makes a still-stand, running neither way.

Shak., 2 Hen. IV., II. 3. 64.

still-watcher (stil'woch'ēr), n. In distilling, a reservoir in which the density of the liquid given over is tested by a hydrometer in order to follow the progress of the distillation.

stilly (stil'i), a. [< ME. stillich, < AS. stillic (= MLG. stillich, stilik); as still<sup>1</sup> + -ly<sup>1</sup>.] Still; quiet.

Of in the stilly night,
Fire slumber's chain has bound me,
Fond Memory brings the light
Of other days around me.

Moore, Irish Melodies.

stilly (stil'i), adv. [< ME. stilliche, < AS. stillice (= MD. stillick, also stillekens = MLG. stiliken, stilkēn); as still<sup>1</sup> + -ly<sup>2</sup>.] 1. Silently; without uproar.

And he a-roos as stilleche as he myght.

Mertin (E. E. T. S.), II. 180.

The hum of either army stilly sounds.

Shak., Hen. V., IV. Prolog., l. 5.

2. Calmly; quietly; without agitation.

He takes his own, and stilly goes his way.

Dr. H. More, Cupid's Conflict, st. 47.

stilogonidium (stī'lō-gō-nid'i-um), n.; pl. stilogonidia (-i). [NL., < L. stilus, a pointed instrument, + NL. gonidium, q. v.] In bot., a

The hum of either army stilly sounds.

Shak., Hen. V., IV. Prolog., l. 5.

2. Calmly; quietly; without agitation.

He takes his own, and stilly goes his way.

Dr. H. More, Cupid's Conflict, st. 47.

stilogonidium (stī'lō-gō-nid'i-um), n.; pl. stilogonidia (-i). [NL., < L. stilus, a pointed instrument, + NL. gonidium, q. v.] In bot., a forming a velvety coating (the variety chalcodite), also in fibrous forms. It is essentially a hydrous silicate of iron.

stilpnosiderite (stilp-nō-sid'e-rit), n. [< Gr. στίλπνός, glittering, + E. siderite.] Same as limonite.

stilt (stilt), n. [Early mod. E. also stylte; < ME. stiltte, stylte, < Sw. stylta, a prop. stilt, = Dan. stylte (cf. Norw. styltra), a stilt, = D. stelt, a stilt, wooden leg, = MLG. LG. stelte = OHG. stelza, MHG. G. stelze, a prop. crutch; perhaps akin to stale<sup>2</sup>, stalk<sup>2</sup>.] 1*f.* A prop used in walking; a crutch.

Verely she was heled, and left her stytes there,
And on her fete went home reasonably well.
Joseph of Arimathea (L. E. T. S.), p. 47.

I have laughed a-good to see the cripples Go limping home to Christendom on stilts.
Marlowe, Jew of Malta, ii. 3. 215.

2. One of two props or poles, each having a step or stirrup at some distance from the lower end, by means of which one may walk with the feet raised from the ground, and with a longer stride: used for crossing sandy or marshy places, streams, etc., and by children for amusement. Stilts were sometimes merely props fastened under the feet, as if very high-heeled shoes. Those used by children are slender poles about 6 feet long, with steps or stirrups 12 inches or more from one end; the longer end of the pole can be held by the hand or passed behind the arm. In a modified form the upper end of the pole is much shorter, and is fitted with a cross-handle which can be grasped by the hand, or is strapped to the leg below the knee. Stilts are used by the shepherds of the marshy Landes in southwestern France.

The doubtful fords and passages to try
With stilts and lope-staves.
Drayton, Barons' Wars, l. 43.

3. In hydraul. engin., one of a set of piles forming the back for the sheet-piling of a starling. E. H. Knight.—4. The handle of a plow. Scott, Kenilworth, xv.—5. In ceram., a support, generally of iron, used to hold a piece of pottery in the kiln, to allow the fire free access to the bottom of the piece. Also called cockspur and spur (which see).—6. [Abb. of stilt-bird.] In ornith., any bird of the genus Himantopus: so called from the extremely long, slender legs. The bill is likewise very slender, straight, and sharp. The body is slender, the neck long, the wings are long and pointed, and the tail is short. The stilts are wading-birds living in marshes. They are a white below, with most of the upper parts glossy-black, the bill is black, and the legs are of some bright tint. They are very generally distributed over the world, nest on the ground, and lay four dark-colored, heavily spotted eggs. Their food consists of small soft animals found in the mud and water, which they explore with their probe-like bills. The common stilt of the Old World is H. candidus or melanopterus; that of the United States is H. mexicanus, a rare bird in the eastern regions of the country, but abundant in some parts of the west. It is about 15 inches long, and 30 in extent of wings, the bill 23 inches; the legs, from the feathers to the toes, 7½ inches. There are only three toes, which are semipalmated. This species is locally called longshanks and taucier. The South American stilt is H. nigricollis; the Australian, H. leucoccephalus. A related bird of Australia to which the name extends is Cladorhynchus pectoralis, having the toes webbed like those of the avocet.—Stilt prolegs, in entom., the prolegs of a caterpillar when they are unusually long, so that the body over them is much raised above the surface on which the insect walks.

Black-necked Stilt (Himantopus mexicanus)

stilt (stilt), v. t. [< stilt, n.] To raise above the ordinary or normal position or surface, as if by the use of stilts.

The fluted columns [of San Moisé] are stilted upon pedestals, and their lines are broken by the bands which encircle them like broad barrel hoops.

Hovells, Venetian Life, xviii.

stilt-bird (stilt'bērd), n. 1. The stilt or stilt-plover.—2*f. pl.* Wading birds collectively; the grallatorial birds, constituting the old order Grallæ or Grallatores. Also called stilt-walkers. stilted (stilt'ed), p. a. Elevated, as if on stilts; hence, pompous; inflated; formal; stiff and bombastic: said especially of language: as, a stilted mode of expression; a stilted style.

His earliest verses have a stilted, academic flavor.

Stedman, Vict. Poets, p. 39.

Stilted arch, an arch which does not spring immediately from the apparent or feigned impost, as from the capitals of the supporting pillars, but from horizontal courses of masonry resting on these false impost, as if the arch were raised on stilts. Such arches occur frequently in all medieval styles, especially as a means of maintaining a uniform height when spans of different widths are used in the same range. Compare arch.

Stilted Arch.—Mihrab in the Mosque of Sultan Hassan, Cairo.

stiltedness (stilt'ed-nes), n. Stilted character; pompous stiffness. Athenæum, No. 3195, p. 94. stiltify (stilt'i-fi), v. t.; pret. and pp. stiltified, ppr. stiltifying. [< stilt + -fy.] To raise as on stilts; elevate or prop up, as with stilts. [Rare.]

Skinny dwarfs ye are, cushioned and stilted into great fat giants.
C. Reade, Cloister and Hearth, lxx.

Stilton cheese. See cheese.

stilt-petrel (stilt'pet'rel), n. A stormy petrel of the genus Fregatta: so called from the length of the legs. F. grallaria is an example.

stilt-plover (stilt'pluv'ēr), n. The stilt or stilt-bird: so called because it has only three toes on each foot, like a plover.

stilt-sandpiper (stilt'sand'pī-pēr), n. A long-legged sandpiper of America, Micropalama himantopus. The adult in summer is blackish above, with each feather edged and tipped with white, or tawny and bay; the under parts are mixed reddish, whitish, and black in streaks on the throat, elsewhere in bars; the ear-coverts are chestnut, the upper tail-coverts white with dusky bars, and the bill and feet greenish black. The length is 28 inches, the extent 161. The young and the adults in winter are quite different, being ashy-gray above, with little or no trace of the reddish and black; a line over the eye and the whole under parts are white; and the jugulum and sides are suffused with ashy, and streaked with dusky. The bird inhabits North America, breeding in high latitudes, and migrating in the fall to Central and South America. See cut under Micropalama.

stilt-walker (stilt'wā'kēr), n. 1. One who walks on stilts. Amer. Nat., Nov. 1889, p. 913.

—2. A grallatorial bird; a stilt-bird.

stilty (stilt'i), a. [< stilt + -y.] Inflated; pompous; stilted. Quarterly Rev.

stilus, n. See stylus.

Stilwell act. See act.

stime (stim), n. [Also styme; < ME. stime; a var. of stem, stem, a ray of light (see steam). It is otherwise explained as perhaps a var., due to some interference, of shim, < AS. scima, a light, brightness, a gleam of light (see shim<sup>1</sup>, shime).] A ray of light; a glimmer; a glimpse: not now used except in negative expressions. [Now only Scotch.]

Ne he twa's might se a stime.
Cursor Mundi, l. 19652. (Stratmann.)

Wherewith he blinded them so close
A stime they could not see.

Robin Hood and the Beggar (Child's Ballads, V. 201).

stimulant (stim'ū-lant), a. and n. [= F. stimulant = Sp. Pg. estimulante = It. stimolante, < L. stimulant(-s), ppr. of stimulare, prick, urge, stimulate: see stimulate.] 1. a. Stimulating; serving to stimulate, incite, or provoke; specifically, in physiol., temporarily quickening some functional or trophic process.—Stimulant balsam, a mixture of oil of turpentine 8 parts and flour mustard 1 part.

II. n. 1. That which stimulates, provokes, or incites; a stimulus; a spur.

The stimulant used to attract at first must be not only continued, but heightened to keep up the attraction.

Mrs. H. More, Cælebs, xxv.

2. In physiol., an agent which temporarily quickens some functional or trophic process. It may act directly on the tissue concerned, or may excite the nerves which effect the process or paralyze the nerves which inhibit it. Stimulants comprise certain medicinal substances, as ammonia, alcohol, ethylic ether, as well as physical conditions, such as warmth, cold, light, or electricity, esthetic effects, as music and other products of art, and emotions of various kinds, as joy, hope, etc. Stimulants have been divided into general and topical, according as they affect directly or indirectly the whole system or only a particular part.—Diffusible stimulants, those stimulants, as ether or ammonia, which have a speedy and quickly transient effect.

stimulate (stim'ū-lāt), v.; pret. and pp. stimulated, ppr. stimulating. [< L. stimulatus, pp. of stimulare (> It. stimolare = Sp. Pg. estimular = F. stimuler), prick, urge, stimulate, < stimulus, a goad: see stimulus.] 1. trans. 1. To prick; goad; excite, rouse, or animate to action or more vigorous exertion by some effective motive or by persuasion; spur on; incite.

The general must stimulate the mind of his soldiers to the perception that they are men, and the enemy is no more.
Emerson, Courage.

Mystery in nature stimulates inquiry: why should it not do so in religion? J. F. Clarke, Self-Culture, p. 149.

2. In physiol., to quicken temporarily some functional or trophic process in.—3. Specifically, to affect by the use of intoxicating drinks.

We were all slightly stimulated [with arrack] before a move was made toward the dinner table.

O'Donovan, Merv, xi.

Stimulating bath, a bath containing aromatic astringent or tonic ingredients.—Syn. 1. To encourage, impel, urge, instigate, provoke, whet, foment, kindle, stir up.

II. intrans. To act as a stimulus.

Urg'd by the stimulating goad,

I drag the cumbrous waggon's load.

Gay, To a Poor Man, l. 87.

stimulation (stim'ū-lā'shon), n. [= F. stimulation = Sp. estimulación = Pg. estimulação = It. stimolazione, < L. stimulatō(n-), a pricking, incitement, < stimulare, prick, goad, stimulate: see stimulate.] 1. The act of stimulating, or the state of being stimulated; urging; encouragement; incitement; increased or quickened action or activity.

The providential stimulations and excitations of the conscience. Ep. Ward, Sermon, Jan. 30, 1674. (Latham.)

A certain length of stimulation seems demanded by the inertia of the nerve-substance.

W. James, Prin. of Psychol., l. 648.

2. In med., the act or method of stimulating; the condition of being stimulated; the effect of the use of stimulants.

The latent morbid predisposition [to delirium tremens] engendered in the nervous system by prolonged and abnormal stimulation is evoked or brought into activity by the depressing influence of the shock [of a corporal injury].
J. M. Carnochan, Operative Surgery, p. 153.

= Syn. 1. See stimulate.

stimulative (stim'ū-lā-tiv), a. and n. [= It. stimolativo; as stimulate + -ive.] 1. a. Having the quality of stimulating; tending to stimulate.

II. n. That which stimulates; that which rouses into more vigorous action; a stimulant or incentive.

Then there are so many stimulatives to such a spirit as mine in this affair, besides love!

Richardson, Clarissa Harlowe, l. 225. (Davies.)

stimulator (stim'ū-lā-tor), n. [= F. stimulateur = It. stimolatore, < LL. stimulator, an instigator, < L. stimulare, prick, goad: see stimulate.] One who or that which stimulates.

stimulatress (stim'ū-lā-tres), n. [= F. stimulatrice = It. stimolatrice, < L. stimulatrix, fem. of (LL.) stimulator: see stimulator.] A woman who stimulates or animates.

stimulose (stim'ū-lōs), a. [< F. stimulateur = It. stimoloso, < L. stimulosus, abounding with prickles, < stimulus, a prick, goad, prickle: see stimulus.] In bot., covered with stings or stimuli.

stimulus (stim'ū-lus), n.; pl. stimuli (-lī). [= F. stimulus, stimule = Sp. estímulo = Pg. estímulo = It. stimolo, stimulo, < L. stimulus, a goad, a pointed stake, fig. a sting, pang, an incitement, spur, stimulus, < √ stig, also in instigare, set on, incite, urge, = Gr. στίκεν, pierce, prick, = *AS. *stecan*, pierce: see stick<sup>1</sup>.] 1. Literally, a goad.—2. In bot., a sting; as, the nettle is furnished with stimuli.—3. The point at the end of a crozier, pastoral staff, precentor's staff, or the like. In the staves of ecclesiastical authority the stimulus or point is regarded as the emblem of judgment or punishment.

4. Something that excites or rouses the mind or spirits; something that incites to action or exertion; an incitement or incentive.

We went to dine last Thursday with Mr. —, a neighboring clergyman, a haunch of venison being the stimulus to the invitation. Sydney Smith, in Lady Holland, vi.

The infinitely complex organizations of commerce have grown up under the stimulus of certain desires existing in each of us. H. Spencer, Social Statics, p. 28.

5. In physiol., something which evokes some functional or trophic reaction in the tissues on which it acts.

Light does not act as a stimulus to the nervous substance, either fibres or cells, unless it have an intensity which is nearly deadly to that substance.

G. T. Ladd, Physiol. Psychology, p. 170.

Absolute stimulus difference, in psychophysics, the actual difference in strength between two stimuli.—Relative stimulus difference, in psychophysics, the ratio of the difference between two stimuli to their mean.—Stimulus receptivity, in psychophysics, the power of appreciating stimuli, measured by the least intensity of stimulus giving the greatest conscious effect.—Stimulus scope, in psychophysics, the difference between the measure of stimulus receptivity and the stimulus threshold.—Stimulus susceptibility, in psychophysics, the power of perceiving a stimulus, so that the greater the stimulus susceptibility the lower the stimulus threshold.—Stimulus threshold, in psychophysics, the minimum amount of stimulus required to produce a conscious effect.

stimy (sti'mi), n. In golf, the position of a ball when it is directly between the hole for which an adversary is playing and his ball.

stimy (sti'mi), v. t. In golf, to hinder by a stimy.

stincht, v. t. [A var. of stanch.] To stanch.

First, the blood must be stinched, and how was that done? Bretton, Miseries of Mauilla, p. 30. (Davies.)

stine (stin), n. A dialectal form of styan.

sting<sup>1</sup> (sting), v. i.; pret. and pp. stung (pret. formerly stang), pp. stinging. [ME. stingen (pret. stung, stong, stonge, pp. stungen, stongen, y-stongen, y-stonge), < AS. stingan (pret. stang, pp. stungen) = Ice. stinga = Sw. stinga = Dan. stinge; cf. Goth. us-stiggan, push, push out, = L. **stingere*, quench: see stick, v.] I. trans.

14. To pierce; prick; puncture.

Thi ben y-sewed with whigt silk, . . .

Y-stungen with stiches.

Piers Plowman's Crede (E. E. T. S.), l. 553.

24. To impale.

He stingeth him upon his speres orde.

Chaucer, Good Women, l. 645.

3. To prick severely; give acute pain to by piercing with a sharp point; especially, to pierce and wound with any sharp-pointed weapon supplied with acrid or poisonous fluid, as a fang or sting, with which certain animals and plants are furnished; bite; urticate: as, to be stung by a bee, a scorpion, or a nettle, or by a serpent or a sea-nettle.

I often have been stung too with curst bees.

B. Jonson, Sad Shepherd, ii. 2.

4. To pain acutely, as if with a sting; goad: as, a conscience stung with remorse.

Unhappy Psyche, stung by these reproaches,

Profoundly feels the wound deive in her heart.

J. Beaumont, Psyche, v. 14.

5. To stimulate; goad.

She was trying to task herself up to her duty. At last she stung herself into its performance by a suspicion.

Mrs. Gaskell, North and South, xxxviii.

II. intrans. 1. To have a sting; be capable of wounding with a sting; use the sting; literally or figuratively: as, horns sting; epigrams often sting; a stinging blow.

At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder.

Prov. xxi. 32.

2. To give pain or smart; be sharply painful; smart: as, the wound stung for an hour.

Under the dust, beneath the grass,

Deep in dim death, where no thought stings.

A. C. Swinburne, Félice.

sting<sup>1</sup> (sting), n. [= Ice. stingi, a pin, a stitch in the side, = Sw. sting, a sting (in sense 4), = Dan. sting, stitch; from the verb.] 1. A sharp-pointed organ of certain insects and other animals, capable of inflicting by puncture a painful wound.

I bring no tales nor flatteries: in my tongue, sir, I carry no fork'd stings. Fletcher, Loyal Subject, ii. 1.

In zoöl., specifically—(a) The modified ovipositor of the females of certain insects, as bees, wasps, hornets, and many other Hymenoptera; an aculeus; a terebra. This weapon is generally so constructed as to inflict a poisoned as well as a punctured wound, which may become inflamed and very painful or even dangerous; an irritating fluid is injected through the tubular sting when the thrust is given. See cut under Hymenoptera. (b) The mouth-parts of various insects which are formed for piercing and sucking, as in the mosquito and other gnats or midges, gadflies, fleas, bedbugs, etc. In these cases the wound is often painful. See cuts under gnat and mosquito. (c) A stinging hair or spine of the larvæ of various moths, or such organs collectively. See cuts under hag-moth, saddleback, and stinging. (d) The fangs of spiders, with which these creatures bite—in some cases, as of the katipo or malmignatte, inflicting a very serious or even fatal wound. See cuts under chelicera and fang. (e) The curved or claw-like telson of the tail of a scorpion, inflicting a serious poisoned wound. See cuts under scorpion and Scorpionida. (f) One of the feet or claws of centipedes, which, in the case of some of the larger kinds, of tropical countries, inflict painful and dangerous wounds. (g) The poison-fang or venom-tooth of a noxious serpent; also, in popular misapprehension, the harmless forked tongue of any serpent. See cuts under Crotalus and snake. (h) A fin-spine of some fishes, capable of wounding. In a few cases such spines are connected with a venom-gland whence poison is injected; in others, as the tail-spines of sting-rays, the large bony sting, several inches long and sometimes jagged, is smeared with a substance which may cause a wound to fester. See cuts under stone-eel, sting-ray. (i) An urticating organ, or such organs collectively, of the jellyfishes, sea-nettles, or other coelenterates. See cut under nematocyst.

2. In bot., a sort of sharp-pointed hollow hair, seated upon or connected with a gland which secretes an acrid or poisonous fluid, which, when introduced under the skin, produces a stinging pain. For plants armed with such stings, see couchage, nettle<sup>1</sup> (with cut), nettle-tree, 2, and tread-softly.—3. The fine taper of a dog's tail. Sportsman's Gazetteer.—4. The operation or effect of a sting; the act of stinging; the usually poisoned punctured wound made by a sting; also, the pain or smart of such a wound.

Their softest touch as smart as lizards' stings!

Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iii. 2. 325.

5. Anything, or that in anything, which gives acute pain, or constitutes the principal pain; also, anything which goads to action: as, the sting of hunger; the stings of remorse; the stings of reproach.

The sting of death is sin.

1 Cor. xv. 56.

Whose sting is sharper than the sword's.

Shak., W. T., ii. 3. 86.

A bitter jest leaves a sting behind it.

Barton, Anat. of Mel., To the Reader, p. 77.

6. Mental pain inflicted, as by a biting or cutting remark or sarcasm; hence, the point of an epigram.

There is nothing harder to forgive than the sting of an epigram.

O. W. Holmes, The Atlantic, LXVI. 667.

7. A stimulus, irritation, or incitement; a netting or goading; an impulse.

The wanton stings and motions of the sense.

Shak., M. for M., i. 4. 59.

Exserted sting. See exserted.

sting<sup>2</sup> (sting), n. [Also stong; a var. of stang.] 1. A pole.—2. A pike; a spear.—3. An instrument for thatching.—4. The mast of a vessel. [Prov. Eng. or Scotch in all uses.]

sting-and-ling (sting'and-ling), adv. [Lit. pole and line; < sting<sup>2</sup> + and + ling, Sc. var. of line.] Entirely; completely; with everything; hence, by force. [Scotch.]

Unless he had been brought there sting and ling.

Scott, Antiquary, xlv.

stingaree (sting'ga-rē), n. [A corrupt form of sting-ray.] See sting-ray.

sting-bull (sting'būl), n. The greater weever, or sting-fish, Trachinus draco. See Trachinus and weever. Also called otter-fish.

stinger (sting'er), n. [< sting<sup>1</sup> + -er.] One who or that which stings, vexes, or gives acute pain.

That malice

Wears no dead flesh about it, 'tis a stinger.

Middleton, More Dissemblers Besides Women, iii. 2.

(a) An animal or a plant that stings.

The Mutilla being a well-armed insect, and a severe stinger.

E. D. Cope, Origin of the Fittest, p. 212.

(b) The sting of an insect. (c) A biting or cutting remark. [Colloq.] (d) A smart, telling blow. [Colloq.]

Rooke, . . . rushing at him incautiously, received a stinger that staggered him and nearly closed his right eye.

C. Reade, Hard Cash, xliii.

sting-fish (sting'fish), n. 1. Same as sting-bull. See cut under Trachinus.—2. The sea-scorpion, Cottus scorpius, a fish of the family Cottidae.

stingily (stin'ji-li), adv. In a stingy manner; with mean niggardliness; in a niggardly manner.

stinginess (stin'ji-nos), n. The state or quality of being stingy; extreme avarice; niggardliness; miserliness.

stinging (sting'ing), p. a. 1. That uses a sting; furnished with a sting or stinging organs of any sort; urticating: as, a stinging insect or sea-nettle.—2. In bot., noting a plant furnished with stinging hairs. See sting<sup>1</sup>, 2.—3. That pierces or wounds as with a sting; that causes acute pain, irritation, or the like; keen; sharp; pungent; telling: as, a stinging tongue; a stinging rebuke or remark.

He wrapped her warm in his seaman's coat,

Against the stinging blast.

Longfellow, Wreck of the Hesperus.

The stinging lash of wit.

O. W. Holmes, Opening of Fifth Ave. Theatre, N. Y., 1873.

Stinging ant, an ant of the family Myrmecidae.—Stinging bug, the blood-sucking cone-nose, Conorhinus sanguisuga, a common bug of the family Reduviidae, which sucks the blood of man and domestic animals, and inflicts a painful wound. See cut under Conorhinus.—Stinging caterpillar, the larva of any one of certain bombycid moths in the United States, as Saturnia maia, Hyperchiria io, Empretia stimulea, Phobetron pithecium, Stinging Caterpillar, or Slug-caterpillar, and Moth of Lago opercularis, both natural size.

Limacodes scayha, and Lago opercularis, which are provided with stinging spines.—Stinging hair. See hair<sup>1</sup> and stinging spine.—Stinging nettle. See nettle<sup>1</sup>, 1.—Stinging spine, in entom., one of the modified bristles of any stinging caterpillar, which are sharp and have an urticating effect. See cuts under hag-moth and saddleback.—Stinging tree. Same as nettle-tree, 2.

stinging-bush (sting'ing-bush), n. Same as tread-softly.

stinging-cell (sting'ing-sol), n. The thread-cell or lasso-cell with which any coelenterate, as a sea-nettle, urticates. See nematophore, and cuts under cnida and nematocyst.

stingingly (sting'ing-li), adv. With stinging effect.

stingless (sting'les), a. [< sting<sup>1</sup> + -less.] Having no sting, as an insect. Shak., J. C., v. 1. 35.—Stingless nettle, the richweed or clearweed, Pilea pumila. See clearweed.

sting-moth (sting'moth), n. The Australian Doratifera vulnerans, whose larva is capable of inflicting a stinging wound.

stingo (sting'go), n. [With a simulated It. or Sp. or L. termination, < sting<sup>1</sup>: in allusion to its sharp taste.] Strong malt liquor. [Colloq.]

Come, let's in and drink a cup of stingo.

Randolph, Hey for Honesty, ii. 6.

sting-ray (sting'rā), n. [Also, corruptly, stingaree, stingoree; < sting<sup>1</sup> + ray<sup>2</sup>.] A batoid fish of the family Trygonidae, as Trygon (or Dasybatis) pastinaca, having a long, smooth, flexible, lash-like tail armed near the base with a bony spine several inches long, sharp at the point, and serrated along the sides. It is capable of inflicting a severe and very painful wound, which appears to be poisoned by the slime with which the sting is covered. There are many species of sting-rays, in some of which there are two or three spines bundled together. The British species above named is locally known as fire-flare or fiery-flare. The commonest sting-ray of the North Atlantic coast of the United States is T. centroura, locally known as clam cracker, and corruptly called stingaree. T. sabina is a similar southern species. The name extends to any ray with a tail-spine. See Myliobatis (a).

T. sabina is a similar southern species. The name extends to any ray with a tail-spine. See Myliobatis (a).

stingtail (sting'tāl), n. A sting-ray.

sting-winkle (sting'wing'kl), n. The hedgehog-murex, Murex erinaceus or europæus: so called by fishermen because it bores holes in other shell-fish, as if stinging them.

stingy<sup>1</sup> (sting'i), a. [< sting<sup>1</sup> + -y.] Stinging; piercing, as the wind; sharp, as a criticism. [Colloq. or prov. Eng.] stingy<sup>2</sup> (stin'ji), a. [A dialectal (assibilated) form and deflected use of stingy<sup>1</sup>.] 1. Ill-tempered. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.].—2. Meanly avaricious; extremely close-fisted and covetous; niggardly: as, a stingy fellow.

Southern Sting-ray (Trygon sabina). (From Report of U. S. Fish Commission.)

The gripping and stingy humour of the covetous.

Stillingfleet, Sermons, II. vii.

3. Scanty; not full or plentiful.

When your teams

Drag home the stingy harvest.

Longfellow, Wayside Inn, Birds of Killingworth.

=Syn. 2. Parsimonious, Miserly, etc. (see penurious), illiberal, ungenerous, saving, chary.

stink (sting), v.; pret. and pp. stunk (pret. formerly stank), ppr. stinking. [< ME. stinken, stynken (pret. stank, stonk, pp. stonken), < AS. stincan (pret. stanc, pp. stuncon), smell, have an odor, rise as vapor, = MD. D. stinken = MLG. LG. stinken = OHG. stincan, smell, have an odor, MHG. G. stinken = Sw. stinka = Dan. stinke, have a bad smell, stink; cf. Gr. ráyos, rancid. Perhaps connected with Icel. stökkva, spring, leap, sprinkle, but not with Goth. stiggwan, smite, thrust, strike; cf. L. tangere, touch (see tact, tangent). Hence ult. stench.] I. intrans. To emit a strong offensive smell; send out a disgusting odor; hence, to be in bad odor; have a bad reputation; be regarded with disfavor.

And therewithal he stank so horribel.

Chaucer, Monk's Tale, l. 627.

Fall Fate upon us.

Our memories shall never stink behind us.

Fletcher, Humorous Lieutenant, III. 7.

Stinking badger, the stinkard or teledu.—Stinking bunt, Same as stinking smut.—Stinking camomile, Same as mayweed.—Stinking cedar, a coniferous tree of the genus Torreya: so named from the strong peculiar odor of the wood and foliage, especially when bruised or burnt. Most properly so called is T. taxifolia, an extremely local tree of western Florida, an evergreen of moderate size, with bright yellow (or in old trees reddish) wood susceptible of a fine polish, very durable in contact with the soil, and, where found, largely used for fence posts. Also called sarin. See cut under Torreya. The similar T. californica is the California nutmeg (see nutmeg). T. grandis of China, called kaya, affords a good timber. T. nucifera, a smaller Japanese species, yields a wood valued by coopers and turners, and a food-off is expressed from its nuts. Also stinking yew.—Stinking crane's-bill, Same as herb-robert.—Stinking goose-foot, Same as notchweed.—Stinking hellebore, hoarhound. See the nouns.—Stinking mayweed, the common mayweed.—Stinking nightshade, Same as henbane.—Stinking nutmeg, the California nutmeg, one of the stinking cedars. See nutmeg.—Stinking smut, See smut, 3.—Stinking vervain, the guinea-hen weed. See Petiveria.—Stinking yew, Same as stinking cedar.

II. trans. To annoy with an offensive smell; affect in any way by an offensive odor. Imp. Dict.

stink (sting), n. [< ME. stinke, stynk, stynke; from the verb. Cf. stench.] 1. A strong offensive smell; a disgusting odor; a stench.

And fro him cometh out smoke and stynk and fuyr, and so moche Abhomynacioun that unthe no man may there endure

Mandeville, Travels, p. 252.

In Köln, a town of monks and bones,

And pavements fanged with murderous stones,

And rays, and hags, and hideous wenches—

I counted two and seventy stenches,

All well-defined and several stinks!

Coleridge, Cologne.

2†. Hell, regarded as a region of sulphurous smells (or of infamy?).

So have I doon in erthe, allas the while!

That certes, but if thou my socour be,

To stynk eterne he wol my gost exile.

Chaucer, A. B. C., l. 50.

3. A disagreeable exposure.

The newspapers of the district where he was then located had raised before the eye and mind of the public what the "patterers" of his class [printed beggars] proverbially call a stink—that is, had opened the eyes of the unwary to the movements of 'Chadsea George.

Mayheir, London Labour and London Poor, l. 250.

Fire stink, in coal-mining, a smell indicating the spontaneous combustion of the coal or goaf somewhere in the mine. =Syn. 1. Stench, etc. See smell.

stink-alive (sting'á-liv'), n. The bib or pout, Gadus luscus: so called because it speedily putrefies after death. J. G. Wood.

stinkard (sting'kárd), n. [< stink + -ard.] 1†. One who stinks: hence, a mean, paltry fellow.

Your stinkard has the self-same liberty to be there in his tobacco-fumes which your sweet courtier hath.

Dekker, Gull's Hornbook, p. 143.

That foolish knave, that hose and doublet stinkard.

Chapman, Gentleman's Shift, v. 1.

2. The stinking badger of Java, Mydrius meliceps; the teledu. See cut under teledu.—3. In ichth., a shark of the genus Mustelus.

stinkardly (sting'kárd-li), a. [< stinkard + -ly.] Stinking; mean.

You notorious stinkardly bearward!

B. Jonson, Epiciene, iv. 1.

stink-ball (sting'bál), n. A preparation of pitch, resin, niter, gunpowder, colophony, asa-fetida, and other offensive and suffocating ingredients, placed in earthen jars, formerly used for throwing upon an enemy's decks at close quarters, and still in use among Eastern pirates.

stink-bird (stingk'bérđ), n. The hoactzin, Opisthocomus cristatus.

stink-bug (stingk'bug), n. Any one of several malodorous bugs, particularly the common squash-bug, Anasa tristis, of the Coreidae. See cut under squash-bug.

stinker (sting'kér), n. [< stink + -er.] 1. One who or that which stinks; a stinkard; a stink-pot.

The air may be purified . . . by burning of stink-pots or stinkers in contagious lanes. Harvey, Consumptions.

2. One of several large potrels, as the giant fulmar, Ossifraga gigantea, which acquire an offensive odor from feeding on blubber or carrion.

stinkhorn (stingk'hörn), n. [< stink + horn.] In bot., a common name for certain ill-smelling fungi of the genus Phallus. The most common species is P. impudicus. See Phallus, 3.

stinkingly (sting'king-li), adv. In a stinking manner; disgustingly; with an offensive smell.

stinking-weed (sting'king-wéd), n. 1. A species of Cassia, C. occidentalis, found distributed throughout the tropics: so called from its fetid leaves. Also stinking-wood.—2. The ragwort, Senecio Jacobaea. [Local, Scotland.]

stinking-wood (sting'king-wúd), n. 1. Same as stinking-weed, 1.—2. A leguminous shrub, Anagyris fetida, of southern Europe.

stinkpot (stingk'pót), n. 1. A pot or jar of stinking materials; a chamber-pot. Smollett.

—2†. A receptacle containing a disinfectant. See the quotation under stinker.—3. A stink-ball.—4. The musk-turtle, Cinosternum odoratum or Aromochelys odorata, a stinking kind of turtle common in some parts of the United States. It is a common inhabitant of the eastern and central streams of the country, and is very troublesome to fishermen by swallowing their bait. It is useful as a scavenger.

Stinkpot (Cinosternum odoratum or Aromochelys odorata).

stink-rat (stingk'rát), n. The musk-turtle. See stinkpot, 4. [Local, U. S.]

stink-shad (stingk'shád), n. Same as mud-shad.

stinkstone (stingk'stón), n. A variety of limestone which gives off a fetid odor when quarried or struck by a hammer. This odor comes from the escape of sulphuretted hydrogen, and in most cases it seems to be caused by the decomposition of embedded organic matter. In some quarries in the Carboniferous limestone of Ireland the smell has been found so overpowering that the men were sickened by it, and had to leave off work for a time. (Jukes.) Also called fetid limestone, and swine-stone.

stink-trap (stingk'tráp), n. A contrivance to prevent the escape of effluvia from the openings of drains; a stench-trap.

stink-turtle (stingk'tér'tl), n. The musk-turtle. See stinkpot, 4.

stinkweed (stingk'wéd), n. 1. An ill-smelling cruciferous plant, Diplotaxis muralis, of southern Europe. [Prov. Eng.]—2. The jimson-weed.

stinkwood (stingk'wúd), n. One of several trees with fetid wood. (a) In South Africa, Ocotea bullata (see Ocotea) and Celtis Kraussiana, the latter a tree 20 feet high and 2 feet in diameter, with a tough yellowish-white wood used for planks, cooperage, etc. (b) In Tasmania, a shrub or tree, Zieria Smithii, also found in Australia, and sometimes called sand-fly bush. (c) In the Mascarene Islands, Fortida Mauritanica of the Myrtaceæ, a tree from 20 to 40 feet high, whose wood is used for foundations, not being attacked by white ants.

stint (stint), v. [Also obs. or dial. stent; < ME. stenten, stynuten, stenten, < AS. stytan, make dull, blunt, orig. make short (also in comp. forstytan, ge-stentan, warn, restrain) (= Icel. stytta (for **stytta*), shorten, = Sw. dial. stytta, shorten, = Norw. stytta, stutta, shorten, tuck up the clothes), < stunt, dull, obtuse, stupid, = Icel. stuttur = OSw. stunt = Norw. stutt, short: see stunt.] I. trans. 1. To cause to cease; put an end to; stay; stop. [Obsolete or archaic.]

Sey, "al forgoeven," and stynt is al this fare [disturbance]. Chaucer, Troilus, III. 1107.

Make war breed peace, make peace stint war.

Shak., T. of A., v. 4. 83.

Stint thy babbling tongue!

B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, l. 1.

The thin jackals waiting for the feast

Stinted their hungry howls as he passed by.

William Morris, Earthly Paradise, I. 172.

2†. To bring to a stand; stay; put a stop to.

The kynges were stynted at the entre of the forest by a river, and ther assembled alle her peple that thei myght have.

Mertin (E. E. T. S.), II. 154.

3. To forbear; cease.

Art thou a serving man? then serve againe,

And stint to steale as common souldiours do.

Gascoigne, Steele Glas (ed. Arber), p. 67.

Spare not to spur, nor stint to ride,

Until thou come to fair Tweedside.

Scott, L. of L. M., l. 22.

4. To limit; restrain; restrict; hence, to limit or confine to a scanty allowance: as, to stint one's self in food; to stint service or help.

[He] travels halfe a day without any refreshment then water, whereof wisely and temperately he stinted himselfe.

Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, II. 135.

Was the infinite One to be confined to this narrow space? Could His love be stinted to the few to whom He had especially revealed His Will? Channing, Perfect Life, p. 61.

5. To assign a definite task to; prescribe a specified amount of labor for: as, to stint a pupil or a servant. See stint, n., 2.—6. To cover or serve (a mare) successfully; get with foal. See the quotation under stinted, 2.

II. intrans. 1. To cease; desist; stay; stop; hold.

Of this cry they wolde nevere stenten.

Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 45.

He styntid not, nor neuer wold he sese,

And with his sword wher that his stroke glynt,

Owt of ther sadlii full redely they went.

Geoffrey Chaucer (E. E. T. S.), l. 2420.

And swears she'll never stint. Shak., Pericles, IV. 4. 42.

2. To be saving or careful in expenditure.

It's in things for show they cut short; while for such as me, it's in things for life we've to stint.

Mrs. Gaskell, Mary Barton, xxxvii.

stint (stint), n. [Also obs. or dial. stent; < stint, r.] 1. Limit; bound; limitation; restriction; restraint: as, common without stint (that is, without limitation or restriction as to the extent of the pasturage, the number of cattle to be pastured, or the period of the year).

If the summe which the debter oweth be above the stint, he shall not be released. Coryat, Crudities, l. 167.

I know not how, Divine Providence seemeth to have set those Scythian stints to the Persian proceedings.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 352.

By rallying round the throne the whole strength of the Royalists and High-Churchmen, and by using without stint all the resources of corruption, he [Danby] flattered himself that he could manage the Parliament.

Macaulay, Sir W. Temple.

2. Fixed amount or quantity; allowance; prescribed or allotted task or performance: as, a certain stint of work.

Put me to a certain stint, sir; allow me but a red hering a-day.

Fletcher (and another), Love's Cure, II. 1.

In the divided or social state, these functions are parcelled out to individuals, each of whom aims to do his stint of the joint work.

Emerson, Misc., p. 72.

Margaret had a new stint at quilling.

S. Judd, Margaret, l. 2.

If you are sick or weak, and can't finish your stent, you are given twenty blows with the cat.

The Century, XXXVII. 36.

3. One of several small species of sandpiper, especially of the genus Actodromas; a sandpeep. The common stint is the dunlin, purr, or ox-bird, Pelidna alpina. (See dunlin.) This is an early, if not the first, application of the name, as by Ray, who called this bird also American Least Stint (Actodromas minutilla).

ozone and least snipe. The little stint is Actodromas minutia; the least stint is A. minutilla, which abounds in North America, and is also known as Wilson's sandpiper. Temminck's stint is A. temminckii; the red-necked, A. ruficollis. There are several others of the same genus. The broad-billed sandpiper, Limicola platyrhynchos, is a kind of stint, and the spoon-billed, Eurynorhynchus pygmaeus, is another. Extension of the name to the sanderling and to phalaropes is unusual.

stintance (stin'tans), n. [< stint + -ance.] Stint; limit; restriction; restraint. London Prodigal, p. 7. (Hallivell.) [Rare.]

stinted (stin'ted), p. a. 1. Limited; scanty; serimped.

Oh! trifle not with wants you cannot feel,
Nor mock the misery of a stinted meal.

Crabbe, Works, I. 9.

2. In foal. See stint, v. t., 6. Hallivell. [Prov. Eng.]

Stinted, 'in foal'. The word was printed, in this sense, in a catalogue of live-stock for sale at Nashville a year or two ago [1896]. Hallivell and Wright give it as an adjective, meaning in foal, used in the West of England.

Trans. Amer. Philol. Ass., XVII. 44.

stintedness (stin'ted-nes), n. The character or condition of being stinted.

stinter (stin'ter), n. [< stint + -er.] One who or that which stints, checks, or puts a stop to: as, a stinter of strife.

Let us now see whether a set form, or this extemporary way, be the greater hinderer and stinter of it.

South, Sermons, II. iii.

stintingly (stin'ting-li), adv. Restrainedly; restrainedly; grudgingly. George Eliot, Janet's Repentance, viii.

stintless (stin'tles), a. [< stint + -less.] 1. Ceaseless.

His life was nothing else but stintless passion.

Rosland, Betraying of Christ (1598). (Hallivell.)

2. Without stint; unstinted; generous.

He gets glimpses of the same stintless hospitality.

The Century, XXVII. 201.

stinty (stin'ti), a. [< stint + -y.] Restricted; grudging; illiberal. [Rare.]

Those endowments which our Anglo-Saxon forefathers made to win for themselves and kindred such ghostly aids in another world were neither few nor stinty.

Lock, Church of our Fathers, ii. 327.

stiony, n. See stanny.

Stipa (sti'pā), n. [NL. (Linnaeus, 1753), named from the flaxen appearance of the feathery awns of S. pennata; < L. stipa, stipa, stipula, the coarse part of flax, tow; see stupa.] A genus of grasses, of the tribe Agrostideæ, type of the sub-tribe Stipeæ. It is characterized by one-flowered panicle spikelets, with their pedicels not continued beyond the flower, which contains three or perhaps sometimes only two lodicules and a narrow acuminate flowering glume indurated closely around the grain and prolonged, usually by a joint, into a long and commonly conspicuously twisted or bent awn. There are nearly 100 species, widely dispersed through both tropical and temperate regions. They are tufted grasses, usually tall, with convolute leaves and a slender, sparingly branched panicle of rather long scattered spikelets, with awns sometimes extremely attenuated. A general name of the species is feather-grass, applying particularly to the highly ornamental S. pennata of Europe. The only common species of the eastern United States is S. avenacea, the black oat-grass; westward the species are numerous—several, known as bunch-grass, or feather-grass, being somewhat valuable wild forage-plants of the mountains and great plains. Among these are S. comata (willow-grass) and S. spartea (spare-grass); the latter remarkable for its hygrometric awns, which are coiled when dry, but uncoil under moisture and, when resisted, tend to push the seed into the ground. S. viridula, var. robusta, of Mexico, New Mexico, etc., is reported to have a narcotic effect upon horses, and is called sleepy-grass. S. aristiglumis of Australia is a valuable fodder-plant, of remarkably rapid growth; S. micrantha of Queensland borrows the name of bamboo. S. tenacissima and S. arenaria, on account of their large membranous spikelets and two-clift flowering glume, are sometimes separated as a genus, Macrochloa (Kunth, 1835). See esparto, alfa, and atocha-grass.

stipate (sti'pāt), a. [< L. stipatus, pp. of stipare, crowd, press together. Cf. constipate.] In bot., crowded.

stipe<sup>1</sup> (stip), n. [A dial. var. of steep<sup>1</sup>. Cf. Stiper Stone group.] A steep ascent. Hallivell. [Prov. Eng.]

stipe<sup>2</sup> (stip), n. [< F. stipe, a stipe, = Sp. estipite, a door-post, = It. stipite, a stock, trunk, post, door-post, < L. stipes (stipit-), a stock, trunk, post, poet. a tree, a branch of a tree; perhaps cognate with E. stiff.] 1. In bot., a stalk or support of some sort, the word being variously employed. (a) In flowering plants, the stalk formed by the receptacle or some part of it, or by a carpel. To distinguish further this kind of stipe, various other terms are employed, as theophore, gynophore, gonophore, anthophore, gynobase, and carpopore. See cut under Arachis. (b) The stalk or petiole of a frond, especially of a fern or seaweed. See cut under seaweed. (c) In fungi, especially of the genus Agaricus, the stalk or stem which supports the pileus or cap. (d) The caudex of a tree-fern. Also stipes. See cut in next column.

a, Longitudinal section of the flower of Gynandropsis pentaphylla, showing the calyx, two of the petals, two of the stamens, and the stipitate ovary. b, Frond of Asplenium Trichomanes. c, Agaricus campestris. (s, Stipe in a, b, and c.)

2. In anat., a stem: applied to two branches, anterior and posterior, of the zygol or paroccipital fissure of the brain. B. G. Wilder.—3. In zool., a stipes.

stipel (sti'pel), n. [*< NL. *stipella*, for **stipitella*, dim. of L. stipes, a post: see stipe<sup>2</sup>.] In bot., a secondary stipule situated at the base of the leaflets of a compound leaf. Unlike stipules, there is only a single one to each leaflet, with the exception of the terminal leaflet, which has a pair.

stipellate (sti'pel-āt), a. [*< NL. *stipellatus*, *< *stipella*, a stipel: see stipel.] In bot., bearing or having stipels.

stipend (sti'pend), n. [= Sp. Pg. estipendio = It. stipendio, < L. stipendium, a tax, impost, tribute; in military use, pay, salary; contr. for **stipendium*, < stips, a gift, donation, alms (given in small coin), + pendere, weigh out: see pendent.] A fixed periodical allowance or payment; settled or fixed pay; salary; pay; specifically, in Scotland, the salary paid to a clergyman; the income of an ecclesiastical living.

Americus Vesputius . . . under the stipende of the Portuguese, hadde sayled toward the south pole many degrees beyond the Equinoctiall.

Peter Martyr (tr. in Eden's First Books on America, (ed. Arber, p. 134).

'Twas a wonder with how small a stipend from his father Tom Tusher contrived to make a good figure.

Thackeray, Henry Esmond, x.

= Syn. Pay, etc. See salary<sup>1</sup>.

stipend (sti'pend), v. t. [< F. stipendier = Sp. Pg. estipendiar = It. stipendiare, pay, hire, < L. stipendiarius, receive pay, serve for pay, < stipendium, pay: see stipend, n.] To pay by settled stipend or wages; put upon or provide with a stipend. Shelton, tr. of Don Quixote, xlvii. (Latham). [Rare.]

stipendiarian (sti-pen-di-ā-ri-an), a. [< stipendiarius + -an.] Acting from mercenary considerations; hired; stipendiary. Imp. Dict.

stipendiary (sti-pen-di-ā-ri), a. and n. [< F. stipendiaire = Sp. Pg. estipendario = It. stipendiario, < L. stipendiarius, pertaining to tribute, contribution, or pay, < stipendium, tribute, pay: see stipend.] 1. a. Receiving wages or salary; performing services for a stated price or compensation; paid.—Stipendiary curate. See curate.—Stipendiary estate, in law, a feud or estate granted in return for services, generally of a military kind.—Stipendiary magistrate, in Great Britain, a police justice sitting in large cities and towns, under appointment by the Home Secretary on behalf of the crown.

II. n.; pl. stipendiaries (-riz). 1. One who performs services for a settled payment, salary, or stipend.—2. A stipendiary magistrate. See under I.—3. In law, a feudatory owing services to his lord.

stipendiator (sti-pen-di-āt), v. t. [< L. stipendiatius, pp. of stipendiarius, receive pay, serve for pay, < stipendium, tribute, salary: see stipend, v.] To endow with a stipend or salary.

Besides y<sup>e</sup> exercise of the horse, armes, dauncing, &c., all the sciences are taught in the vulgar French by professors stipendiated by the great Cardinal.

Evelyn, Diary, Sept. 14, 1644.

Stiper Stone group. [< Stiper Stones (see def.).] In geol., a subgroup, the equivalent of the Arenig series in Carnarvonshire: so called from the name Stiper Stones given to a prominent ridge of quartzose rocks rising above the moorland in Shropshire, and extending for about ten miles in length. The Arenig or Stiper Stone group, according to Murchison's original classification (1833-4), formed the base of the Silurian system. It is now considered to be the base of Lapworth's Ordovician, of the Cambro-Silurian of Jukes, and of the Middle Cambrian of other English geologists.

stipes (sti'pez), n. [NL., < L. stipes, stips (stipit-), a stock, trunk: see stipe<sup>2</sup>.] 1. In bot., same as stipe<sup>2</sup>.—2. In zool., a stalk or stem, as an eye-stalk or a footstalk; a stipe. Specifically—(a) In entom., the footstalk of the maxilla of an insect, the outer or main division of that organ; the second joint of the maxilla, borne upon the cardo, and through the palpifer and subgalea bearing the palpus, galea, and lacinia, when these organs exist. Also called shaft. See cuts under galea and Insecta. (b) In Myriapoda: (1) The proximal or median one of two pieces of which the protomala, or so-called mandible, consists, the other being the cardo. See protomala, and figure under epitabrum. (2) One of two sets, an inner and an outer, of broad plates into which the deutomala, or second pair of mouth-appendages, of a myriapod is divided. See deutomala. A. S. Packard, Proc. Amer. Philos. Soc., June, 1883, pp. 193, 200.

stipiform (sti'pi-fōrm), a. [< L. stipes, stips (stipit-), a stock, trunk, + forma, form.] In bot. and zool., having the form or appearance of a stipe or stipes. See stipe<sup>2</sup>, stipes.

stipitate (sti'p-i-tāt), a. [*< NL. *stipitatus*, < L. stipes (stipit-), a stock, trunk: see stipe<sup>2</sup>.] In bot. and zool., having or supported by a stipe or stipes; elevated on a stipe.

stipitiform (sti'p-i-ti-fōrm), a. [< L. stipes (stipit-), a stock, trunk (see stipe<sup>2</sup>), + forma, form.] In bot. and zool., having the form or character of a stipe or stipes; stipiform; stalk-like.

stipiture (sti'p-i-tūr), n. A bird of the genus Stipiturus; an emu-wren.

Stipiturus (stip-i-tū'rus), n. [NL. (Lesson, 1831), < L. stipes (stipit-), a stock, trunk, + Gr. oipá, tail.] An Australian genus of warbler-like birds, assigned to the Malurinæ or placed elsewhere, having the tail curiously formed of ten feathers with stiffened shafts and loose decomposed barbs (whence the name); the emu-wrens.

Emu-wren (Stipiturus malacurus).

the true position of all these forms seems to be among or near the reed- or grass-warblers, especially such as have but ten tail-feathers. See warbler.

stipple (stip'l), v. t.; pret. and pp. stippled, ppr. stippling. [< D. stipplen, speckle, dot over (cf. stippel, a speckle, dim. of stip, a point), freq. of stippen (> G. stippen), prick, dot, speckle, < stip, MD. stip, stup, a point, dot.] To produce gradation in color or shade in (any material) by means of dots or small spots. See stippling.

The interlaying of small pieces can not altogether avoid a broken, stippled, spotty effect.

Milman, Latin Christianity, xiv. 10.

stipple (stip'l), n. [< stipple, v.] 1. In the fine arts, same as stippling.—2. In decorative art, an intermediate tone or color, or combination of tones, used to make gradual the passage from one color to another in a design.—Stipple-engraving process, the process of making an engraved plate by stippling. The first step is to lay an etching-ground on a copperplate; the next, after the subject has been transferred as in etching, is to dot in the outline; after which the darker parts are marked with dots, which are laid in larger and more closely in the deeper shades. The plate is then bitten in, the ground is removed, and the lighter parts are laid in with dry-point or the stipple-graver.

stippled (stip'ld), p. a. Spotted; shaded or modeled by means of minute dots applied with the point of the brush or in a similar way.

stipple-graver (stip'l-grā'vēr), n. An engravers' tool of which the point is bent downward so as to facilitate the making of small dots or indentations in the surface of a copperplate.

stippler (stip'lēr), n. [< stipple + -er.] 1. One who stipples.—2. A brush or tool used for stippling: as, a stippler made of hog's hair.

stippling (stip'ling), n. [Verbal n. of stipple, v.] In the fine arts, dotted work of any kind, whether executed with the brush-point, the pencil, or the stipple-graver.

stiptict, a. and n. See stiptic.

stipula (stip'ū-lī), n.; pl. stipulæ (-lō). [NL., < L. stipula, a stalk: see stipule.] In ornith., same as stipule.

stipulaceous (stip-ū-lā'shius), a. [< stipula + -aceous.] In bot., same as stipular.

stipular (stip'ū-lār), a. [< NL. stipula + -ar.] In bot., of, belonging to, or standing in the place of stipules; growing on stipules, or close to them: as, stipular glands.—Stipular buds, buds which are enveloped by the stipules, as in the tulip-tree. stipulāry (stip'ū-lā-ri), a. [< NL. stipula + -ary.] In bot., relating to stipules; stipular. stipulate<sup>1</sup> (stip'ū-lāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. stipulated, ppr. stipulating. [< L. stipulatus, pp. of stipulare (> It. stipulare = Sp. Pg. estipular = F. stipuler), exact, bargain for; origin doubtful: by some referred to OL. **stipulus*, firm; by others to L. stipula, a straw.] To arrange or settle definitely, or by special mention and agreement, or as a special condition: as, it is stipulated that A shall pay 5 per cent.

Henry the Fourth and the king my master had stipulated with each other that, whensoever any one of them died, the survivor should take care of the other's child.

Lord Herbert of Chesham, Life (ed. Howells), p. 129.

Those Articles which were stipulated in their Favour.

It is stipulated also that every man shall be bound to obey his own lord "conveniently," or so far as is fitting and right.

Stipulated damages. (a) In a general sense, a sum named in a contract or obligation as the damages to be paid in case of non-performance. (b) As commonly used in law, damages liquidated by a stipulation—that is, a sum fixed by a contract or obligation in such manner as to be the sum payable in case of breach, without any further question as to the amount of the actual damages.

stipulate<sup>2</sup> (stip'ū-lāt), a. [*< NL. *stipulatus*, < L. stipula, a stalk, stipule: see stipule.] In bot., having stipules: as, a stipulate stalk or leaf.

Stipulatea (stip'ū-lā-tē-ē), n. pl. [*NL. (J. von Sachs), < *stipulatus*, stalked (see stipulate<sup>2</sup>), + -æ.] Sachs's name for the eusporangiate ferns, a division which embraces the Ophioglossaceæ and Marattiaceæ. The name is now abandoned, as it is known that there are no stipules in the Ophioglossaceæ, and that they are sometimes wanting in the Marattiaceæ.

stipulation<sup>1</sup> (stip'ū-lā-shon), n. [< F. stipulation = Sp. estipulacion = Pg. estipulação = It. stipulacion, < L. stipulatio], a promise, bargain, covenant. < stipulari, demand a formal promise, bargain, covenant, stipulate: see stipulate.]

1. The act of stipulating, agreeing, or covenanting; a contracting or bargaining. —2. That which is stipulated or agreed upon; a contract or bargain, or a particular article or item in a contract: as, the stipulations of the allied powers to furnish each his contingent of troops; a contract containing so many stipulations. —3. In law, specifically—(a) An agreement between counsel or attorneys in a cause, affecting its conduct. (b) An undertaking in the nature of bail taken in the admiralty courts. (c) In Roman law, a contract in which the form consisted in a question and answer, formalities which in course of time came to be recognized as making a valid contract which might dispense with the ceremonials required by the earlier law.

stipulation<sup>2</sup> (stip'ū-lā-shon), n. [< L. stipula, a stalk: see stipule.] In bot., the situation and structure of the stipules.

stipulator (stip'ū-lā-tor), n. [< L. stipulator, one who stipulates, < stipulari, demand a formal promise, bargain, stipulate: see stipulate.] One who stipulates, contracts, or covenants; in Rom. law, one to whom a stipulation or promise was given in the form of contract known as stipulation. See stipulation<sup>1</sup>, 3 (c).

stipule (stip'ūl), n. [= F. stipule = It. stipula, < L. stipula, a stalk, stem, blade, dim. of stipes, stock, trunk: see stipe.] 1. In bot.: (a) One of a pair of lateral appendages found at the base of the petiole of many leaves. Stipules are normally flat organs, leaf-like in appearance and use, or colorless and scale-like, and without function—sometimes, however, as in the magnolia, fig, and beech, serving as bud-scales and falling when the leaves expand. Stipules may be free from the petiole, or adnate by one edge, then passing by grades into mere wing-like expansions of its base; they may be free from one another, or variously united, sometimes so as to clasp the stem, sometimes between it and the leafstalk (then intrapetiolar), sometimes sheathing the stem, as in Polygonum, then forming ocreæ (see ocrea). The adjacent members of two opposite pairs may become connate around the stem, as in many Rubiaceæ. Stipules are sometimes reduced to mere bristles, or take the form of spines, as in the common locust; in Smilax they appear to be converted into tendrils. They are often wholly wanting, but where present they generally characterize whole families, as they do the Malvaceæ, Leguminosæ, and Rosaceæ. (b) In the Characeæ, one of certain unicellular tubes, of greater or less length, on the inner and outer sides of the so-called leaf. (c) Same as paraphyllum (b). —2. In ornith., a newly sprouted feather; a pin-feather. Also stipula.

stipuled (stip'ūld), a. [< stipule + -ed.] In bot., furnished with stipules, or lateral leafy appendages.

stipuliform (stip'ū-lī-fōrm), a. [< L. stipula, a stalk, + forma, form.] In bot., having the form of a stipule.

stir<sup>1</sup> (stēr), v.; pret. and pp. stirred, ppr. stirring. [Also dial. stee (and stoor); early mod. E. also stirr, sturre, stire, stere; < ME. stiren, steren, sturen, styren, < AS. styrian, move, stir, = North Fries. stieren = MD. stoeren, D. stören, disturb, vex, = MLG. stören, disturb, hinder, = OHG. stören, stören, scatter, destroy, disturb, MHG. stören, G. stören, disturb, interrupt, hinder, = Sw. störa, disturb; cf. Icel. stýrr, a stir, Dan. for-styrre, disturb; not connected with L. sternere, scatter, or E. strew: see strew. Cf. stoor<sup>2</sup>. Hence ult. storm and sturgeon. The ME. forms are in some uses confused with similar forms of steer<sup>1</sup>, 'direct,' 'guide.'] I. trans.

1. To move; change the position or situation of: as, to stir hand or foot.

Stende he neure so styliche thorgh sternunge of the bote He bendeth and boweth the body is vntiable.

Piers Plowman (C), xi. 36.

He pulls you not a hair, nor pares a nail, Nor stirs a foot, without due figuring

The horoscope. T. Tomkis (J), Albumazar, l. 3.

2. To set in motion; agitate; disturb. There is evermore gret Wynd In that fosse, that stere the evermore the Gravelle, and makethe it trouble.

Manderly, Travels, p. 32.

My mind is troubled, like a fountain stirr'd.

Shak., T. and C., iii. 3. 311.

Alas that gently stir

The vernal leaves. Wordsworth, Ruth.

3. To move briskly; bestir. Now stureth hym self Arthour, Thankyng on his labour, And gaderyth to hym strength aboute, His knyghtes & Erles on a rowte.

Arthur (ed. Furnivall), l. 295.

Come, you must stir your Stumps, you must Dance.

Steele, Tender Husband, v. 1.

4. To cause the particles or parts of to change place in relation to each other by agitating with the hand or an implement: as, to stir the fire with a poker; to stir one's coffee with a spoon.

He stireth the coles.

Chaucer, Canon's Yeoman's Tale, l. 267.

Mr. —, one of the fellows (In Mr. Fr. Potter's time), was wont to say that Dr. Kettle's braine was like a hasty-pudding, where there was memorie, judgement, and phancy all stirred together.

Aurep, Lives (Ralph Kettle).

5. To brandish; flourish. Now hatz Arthure his axe, & the balme gryper, & sturnly stureth hit aboute, that stryke wyth hit thoght.

Sir Gauwayne and the Green Knight (E. E. T. S.), l. 331.

6. To bring into notice or discussion; agitate; debate; moot. Stir not questions of Jurisdiction. Bacon, Great Place.

7. To rouse, as from sleep or inaction; awaken. Nay, then, 'tis time to stir him from his trance.

Shak., T. of the S., l. 1. 182.

Thy dear heart is stirred

From out its wonted quiet.

William Morris, Earthly Paradise, II. 314.

8. To move; excite; rouse. His steed was bloody red, and fomed yre, When with the maisting spur he did him roughly stire.

Spenser, F. Q., II. v. 2.

The music must be shrill and all confus'd

That stirs my blood.

Beau. and Fl., Maid's Tragedy, l. 1.

9. To incite; instigate; set on. Feendis threten faste to take me, And stere helle houndis to bite me.

Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 70.

With him along is come the mother-queen,

An Ate, stirring him to blood and strife.

Shak., K. John, II. 1. 63.

To stir coals! See coal.—To stir up. (a) To instigate; incite: as, to stir up a nation to rebellion.

To these undertakings these great Lords of the World have been stirred up rather by the desire of Fame . . . than by the affection of bearing rule.

Raleigh (Arber's Eng. Garner, I. 654).

There's that Will Maskery, sir, as is the rampageousest Methodis' as can be, an' I make no doubt it was him as stirred up th' young woman to preach last night.

George Eliot, Adam Bede, v.

(b) To excite; provoke; foment; bring about: as, to stir up a mutiny; to stir up contention.

They gan with fowle reproch

To stirre up strife, and troublous contecke broch.

Spenser, F. Q., III. i. 64.

To be more just, religious, wise, or magnanimous than the common sort stirs up in a Tyrant both feare and envy.

Milton, Liconoklastes, xv.

(c) To rouse to action; stimulate; quicken: as, to stir up the mind.

[They] are also perpetually stirred up to fresh industry and new discoveries.

Bacon, Physical Fables, ii, Expl.

The man who stirs up a reposing community . . . can scarcely be destitute of some moral qualities which extort even from enemies a reluctant admiration.

Macaulay, Sir William Temple.

II. intrans. 1. To pass from rest or inaction to motion or action; move; budge: as, they dare not stir; to stir abroad.

"Master," said he, "he rul'd by me,

From the Green-wood we'll not stir."

Robin Hood and the Golden Arrow (Child's Ballads, V. 384).

No disaffected or rebellious person can stir without being presently known; and this renders the King very safe in his Government.

Dampier, Voyages, II. i. 74.

During the time I remained in the convent, the superior thought it proper I should not stir out.

Pococke, Description of the East, II. i. 4.

2. To be in motion; be in a state of activity; be on the move or go; be active: as, to be continually stirring.

If ye will nedys know at short and longe,

It is evyn a womans tounge,

For that is ever stirryng.

Interlude of the Four Elements. (Halliwell, under short.)

If the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife be stirring, tell her there's one Cassio entreats of her a little favour of speech.

Shak., Othello, III. 1. 27.

She will brook

No tarrying; where she comes the winds must stir.

Wordsworth, Sonnets, i. 32.

3. To be in circulation; be current; be on foot. No ill luck stirring but what lights on my shoulders.

Shak., M. of V., III. i. 99.

Ther dyed such multitudes weekly of ye plague, as all trade was dead, and little money stirring.

Bradford, Plymouth Plantation, p. 204.

There is no News at all stirring here now.

Howell, Letters, II. 18.

4. To use an instrument or the hand for making a disturbing or agitating motion, as in a liquid.

The more you stir in it the more it stinks.

Indicer.

5. To be roused; be excited; disturb or agitate one's self.

You show too much of that

For which the people stir.

Shak., Cor., III. i. 53.

stir<sup>1</sup> (stēr), n. [Early mod. E. also stirre; < stir<sup>1</sup>, v.] 1. Movement; action.

The sounding of our wordes [is] not alwayes egall; for some aske longer, some shorter time to be vttered in, & so, by the Philosophers definition, stirre is the true measure of time.

Pettenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 56.

2. A state of motion, activity, briskness, bustle, or the like; the confusion and tumult of many persons in action.

Why all these words, this clamour, and this stir?

Sir J. Denham, Trudence, l. 112.

The house had that pleasant aspect of life which is like the cheery expression of comfortable activity in the human countenance. You could see at once that there was the stir of a large family within it.

Haithorne, Seven Gables, xiii.

It is well to turn aside from the fretful stir of the present.

Huxley, Animal Automatism.

3. Commotion; excitement; tumult: as, his appearance on the scene created quite a stir.

Men may thinke it strange there should be such a stirre for a little corne; but had it beene gold, with more ease wee might have got it; and had it wanted, the whole Colony had starved.

Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, I. 210.

When Portsey, weighing well the ill to her might grow,

In that their mighty stirs might be her overthrow.

Drayton, Polyolbion, l. 448.

An Impost was leuied of the subjects, to satisfie the pay due to the souldiours for the Persian warre, which raised these stirres.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 257.

4. Motion; impulse; emotion; feeling.

He did keep

The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief,

Still waving, as the fits and stirs of 's mind

Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on.

Shak., Cymbeline, i. 3. 12.

5. A poke; a jog.

"Ch, Arthur?" said Tom, giving him a stir with his foot.

T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Rugby, II. 8.

Stipules (SP).

1. Of Robinia pseudoacacia. 2. Of Rosa canina. 3. Of Pinus arvensis. 4. Of Lathyrus albus. 5. Of Smilax tona nox.

6. A house of correction; a lockup; a prison. [Thieves' slang.]

I was in Brummacem, and was seven days in the new stir, and nearly broke my neck. Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 469.

stir<sup>2</sup> (stir), n. [A corruption of stir.] Sir. [Scottish vulgarism.]

I'm seeking for service, stir. Scott, Old Mortality, viii.

stirabout (stér'a-bout'), n. [stir<sup>1</sup> + about.] 1. Oatmeal or other porridge.

The fifth book is of pease-porridge, under which are included frumetary, water-gruel, milk-porridge, rice-milk, dumary, stir-about, and the like. W. King, Art of Cookery, Letter ix.

2. Oatmeal and dripping or bacon-fat mixed together and stirred about in a frying-pan. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

Stiretrus (stir'é-tru-), n. [NL. (Laporte, 1833), < Gr. στειρος, barren, + ἄρρον, the abdomen.]

A notable genus of true bugs, of the family Pentatomidae, comprising about 25 species peculiar to America, most of them tropical. One species, S. anchorago, is found in the southern United States, and is a common enemy of the chinch-bug, Colorado potato-beetle, and cotton-worm.

Stiretrus anchorago (Hair line shows natural size.)

stiriated (stir'i-ated), a. [stiriate (< L. stiria, a frozen drop, an icicle; cf. still) + -ate.] Adorned with pendants like icicles.

stirriest (stir'i-us), a. [L. stiria, a frozen drop, an icicle, + -ous.] Consisting of or resembling icicles.

Crystal is found sometimes in rocks, and in some places not much unlike the stirriest or stillicidous dependencies of ice. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., II. 1.

stirk (stèrk), n. [Also sterk, stirk; < ME. stirk, stirk, sterk, stirke, < AS. stire, a young cow, heifer, styre, styre, a young steer, = MD. stirick = MLG. sterke, > G. stärke, stärke, a young cow, heifer, G. dial. sterk, a young steer; usually explained as derived, with dim. suffix -ic, < AS. stear, etc., a steer; but prob. connected, as orig. 'a young cow that has not yet calved,' with OHG. stera, MHG. ster, a ram, Goth. staira, barren, L. sterilis, barren, Gr. στειρος, στειρος, barren, Skt. stari, barren, sterile: see sterile.] An animal of the ox or cow kind from one to two years old. [Prov. Eng. or Scotch.]

stirless (stir'les), a. [stir<sup>1</sup> + -less.] Still; motionless; inactive; very quiet. [Rare.]

She kept her hollow, stirless eyes on his. There was an absence of movement about her almost oppressive. She seemed not even to breathe. Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 228.

stirn (stèrn), v. Same as stern<sup>5</sup>.

stirrop, n. An old spelling of stirrup.

stirp (stèrp), n. [stir<sup>1</sup> + -p.] Stock; race; family.

So is she sprong of noble stirp and high. Court of Love, I. 16.

Democracies . . . are commonly more quiet, and less subject to sedition, than where there are stirps of nobles. Bacon, Nobility (ed. 1887).

stirpicultural (stèr-pi-kul'tür-äl), a. Pertaining to stirpiculture. The Sanitarian, XXIV. 514.

stirpiculture (stèr-pi-kul'tür), n. [stirps, a stock, race, + cultura, culture.] The breeding of special stocks or strains.

Sentimental objections in the way of the higher stirpiculture. The Nation, Aug. 10, 1876, p. 92.

stirps (stèrps), n.; pl. stirpes (stèr'pèz). [L.: see stirp.] 1. Race; lineage; family; in law, the person from whom a family is descended. See per stirpes, under per.—2. In zool., a classificatory group of uncertain rank and no fixed position, by MacLeay made intermediate between a family and a tribe; a superfamily. Compare group<sup>1</sup>, section, cohort, and phalanx.—3. In bot., a race or permanent variety.

stirrage<sup>1</sup> (stèr'äj), n. [stir<sup>1</sup> + -age.] The act of stirring; agitation; commotion; stir.

Every small stirrage waketh them. Granger, On Eccles. (1621), p. 320.

stirrage<sup>2</sup>, n. Same as stearage.

stirrer (stèr'ér), n. [stir<sup>1</sup> + -er<sup>1</sup>.] 1. One who stirs; especially, one who is active or bustling.

Come on, . . . give me your hand, sir; an early stirrer. Shak., 2 Hen. IV., iii. 2. 3.

Br. Good day to you.

Cam. You are an early stirrer.

Fletcher, Double Marriage, I. 1.

2. One who stirs or agitates anything, as a liquid, with the hand or an implement for stirring.—3. An implement or a machine used for stirring a liquid or the like.

The liquid being taken out on a pointed glass rod or stirrer. W. B. Carpenter, Micros., § 207.

4. One who incites or instigates; an instigator: often with up: as, a stirrer up of contention.

We must give, I say, Unto the motives, and the stirrers up Of humours in the blood. B. Jonson, Alchemist, iii. 1.

Stirrers of sedition, without any zeal for freedom. Macaulay, Sir W. Temple.

stirring (stèr'ing), n. [stir<sup>1</sup> + -ing.] 1. Movement; motion; activity; effort; the act of moving or setting in motion.

Eche abouten other goynge, Causeth of othres stering. Chaucer, House of Fame, I. 800.

The emotions voiced in his song are stirrings of the spirit rather than thrills of the senses. The Atlantic, LXV., p. 4 of adv'ts.

2. Temptation.

gif any steringe on me stede, Out of the clos of thi clenness Wyse me, lord, in wo & wele, And kepe me fram vnkynndness. Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 251.

3. In agri., the second tith or fallow. Florio, p. 273. (Halliwel).—4. Riot; commotion.

I'll lie about Charing-cross, for, if there be any stirrings, there we shall have 'em. Webster and Dekker, Northward Ho, I. 2.

stirring (stèr'ing), p. a. [stir<sup>1</sup>, v.] 1. Being in active motion; characterized by stir or activity; active; bustling; lively; vivacious; brisk: as, a stirring life; stirring times.

Such a merry, nimble, stirring spirit. Shak., I. L. L., v. 2. 16.

Those who appear the most stirring in the scene may possibly not be the real movers. Burke, Rev. in France.

2. Animating; rousing; awakening; stimulating; exciting; inspiring: as, a stirring oration; a stirring march.

Often the ring of his verse is sonorous, and overcomes the jagged consonantal diction with stirring lyrical effect. Stedman, Vict. Poets, p. 302.

3. Fickle.

A stythe man of his stature, stirnd of wille, Meny't hym to myny thinges, & of mynde gode. Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), I. 3333.

stirrup (stir' or stèr'up), n. [Early mod. E. also stirrop, stirrop, sterope; < ME. stirrop, stirrop, styrope, sterope, < AS. stirap, stigrap, stigerap (= MD. stegerep, steeghrecp, also stegelreep = OHG. stegarepf, MHG. G. stegreif = Icel. stigræip), lit. 'mounting-rope,' < stigan, mount, + rāp, rope: see styl<sup>1</sup> and ropel. Cf. D. stijg-beugel = G. stiege-bügel = Sw. stig-byggel = Dan. stig-bøjle, a stirrup, lit. a ring or loop for mounting (see baill).] 1. A support for the foot of a person mounted on a horse, usually a metal loop with the bottom part flat and corrugated or finished with points to give a hold to the sole of the boot and to aid in mounting.

1, Stirrup for poulaine; 2, modern stirrup; 3, Mexican wooden stirrup; 4, Mexican wooden stirrup with taps.

The metal loop is suspended from the saddle by a strap or thong, which in modern saddles is adjustable in length. The stirrup of Arab or other Eastern horsemen has a very broad rest for the foot; this projects sometimes beyond the heel, and the sharp edge of it serves instead of a spur. The stirrups of some modern military saddles have a strong front piece of leather or other material which prevents the foot from passing too far into the loop and protects the front of the leg. See also cut under saddle.

Our hosts upon his stirrups stood anon. Chaucer, Prolog. to Shipman's Tale, I. 1.

I'll hold your stirrup when you do alight, And without grudging wait till you return. Beau. and Fl., Honest Man's Fortune, IV. 1.

2. Naut., a rope with an eye at its end, through which a foot-rope is rove, and by which it is supported. The ends of stirrups are securely fastened to the yard, and they steady the men when reefing or furling sails.

3. In mach., any piece resembling in shape and functions the stirrup of a saddle, as the iron loop by which a mill-saw hangs from the muley-head or in the sash.—4. In carp., etc., an iron loop-strap or other device for securing a rafter-post or -strut to a tie, or for supporting a beam, etc.—5. A hold for the foot at the end of the stock of a large crossbow, to keep it firm while the bow is bent and the string drawn to the notch. See cut under arbalister.—6. In anat., the stapes or stirrup-bone.

stirrup-bar (stir'up-bär), n. The spring-bar or other device on a riding-saddle to which the upper end of the stirrup-strap is fastened.

stirrup-bone (stir'up-bön), n. The stapes of a mammal: so called from its shape.

stirrup-cup (stir'up-kup), n. A cup of wine or other liquor presented to a rider when mounted and about to take his departure; a parting-cup.

stirrup-hose (stir'up-höz), n. pl. Heavy stockings worn over the other garments for the legs by men traveling on horseback in the seventeenth century, and probably earlier. They are described as made very large at the top, and secured by points to the girdle or the bag-breeches.

stirrup-iron (stir'up-i'èrn), n. The stirrup proper—that is, the metal loop in which the foot is placed, as distinguished from the leather strap which suspends it.

stirrup-lantern (stir'up-lan'tèrn), n. A small lantern with an iron frame fastened below the stirrup to light the road at night and also to warm the rider's feet; a contrivance used in the fifteenth century and later.

stirrup-leather (stir'up-leth'èr), n. The leather strap by which a stirrup hangs from the saddle.

stirrup-muscle (stir'up-mus'ül), n. The stapedius.

stirrup-oil (stir'up-oil), n. A sound beating; a drubbing. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

stirrup-piece (stir'up-pès), n. In carp., mach., etc., anything which performs the office of a stirrup, in hanging from a fixed point of support and supporting anything else which lies in its loop or hollow.

stirte, stirt. Obsolete forms of the preterit and past participle of start<sup>1</sup>.

stitch (stich), n. [ME. stiche, stych, < AS. stice, a pricking sensation (also in comp. in-stice, an inward stitch, fær-stice, a sudden stitch or twinge, stic-ād, stic-wære, stitch in the side), not found in lit. sense 'pricking,' 'piercing,' = OFries. steke, stek = OHG. stih, MHG. G. stich, a pricking, prick, sting, stab, stitch, = Goth. stiks, a point of time; from the verb, AS. **stecan*, etc., prick, sting, stick: see stick<sup>1</sup>, stick<sup>2</sup>.] 1. An acute sudden pain like that produced by the thrust of a needle; a sharp spasmodic pain, especially in the intercostal muscles: as, a stitch in the side. Such pains in the side may be myalgic, neuralgic, pleuritic, or due to muscular cramp.

'Twas but a stitch into my side, And sair it troubles me. The Queen's Marie (Child's Ballads, III. 117).

Corporal sickness is a perpetual monitor to the conscience, every pang a reproof, and every stitch reads a lesson of mortality. Rev. T. Adams, Works, I. 441.

2. A contortion; a grimace; a twist of the face.

If you talk, Or pull your face into a stitch again, As I love truth, I shall be very angry. Beau. and Fl., Captain, II. 2.

3. In sewing: (a) One movement of a threaded needle, passing in and out of the fabric, and uniting two parts by the thread, which is drawn tight after each insertion. (b) The part of the thread left in the fabric by this movement.—4. In knitting, netting, crochet, embroidery, lace-making, etc.: (a) One whole movement of the implement or implements used, as knitting-needles, bobbins, hook, etc. (b) The result of this movement, shown in the work itself.—5. The kind or style of work produced by stitching: as, buttonhole-stitch; cross-stitch; pillow-lace stitch; by extension, a kind or style of work with the loom. For stitches in lace, see point<sup>1</sup>. See also whip-stitch.—6. Distance passed over at one time; stretch; distance; way.

How far have ye come to-day? So they said, From the house of Gaius our friend. I promise you, said he, you have gone a good stitch; you may well be weary; sit down. Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, p. 314.

7. In agri., a space between two double furrows in plowed ground; a furrow or ridge.

And many men at plough he made, that drave earth here and there, And turn'd up stitches orderly. Chapman, Iliad, xviii. 405.

8. A bit of clothing; a rag; as, he had not a dry stitch on. [Colloq.].—9. In bookbind- ing, a connection of leaves or pieces of paper, through perforations an inch or so apart, with thread or wire. A single stitch is made with two perforations only, the thread being tied near the entering place of the stitching-needle. A double stitch has three and sometimes four perforations, the thread being reversed in and out on the upper and under side at each perforation. A saddle-back stitch has its perforations in the center of the creased folded double leaves. A side-stitch has perforations through the sides of the leaves, about one eighth of an inch from the back fold. A French stitch has two perforations only in each section of the pamphlet, the second perforation of the first section ending where the first perforation of the second section begins, in which diagonal line the stitching-needle is put through each succeeding section, and is then reversed and locked at the end. A machine-stitch is a succession of ordinary locked stitches made by the sewing-machine. A wire stitch has short staples of turned wire, which are forced through the leaves and clamped by one operation of the wire-stitching machine. See kettle-stitch.—Blind stitch. See blind.—Damask stitch. See damask.—Dotted stitch. Same as dot-stitch.—False stitch, in pillow-lace making, same as false pinhole (which see, under pinhole).—Fancy, Flemish, German, gloves, gobelin, herring-bone, honeycomb, idiot, Irish, overcast stitch. See the qualifying words.—Outline-stitch. See outline.—Plaited stitch. See plaited.—Raised stitch. See raised.—Royal stitch. See royal.—Russian stitch. A kind of ribbed stitch in crochet. Dict. of Needlework.—Short stitch, a kind of needlework used in embroidery of the simplest kind, where the ground is partly covered by single stitches of a thread usually of different color, the ground not so covered generally forming the pattern.—Slanting stitch. See slant.—To go through stitch with, to prosecute to the end; complete.

And in regard of the main point, that they should never be able to go through stitch with that war.

Urquhart, tr. of Rabelais, Gargantua, l. 47.

(See also back-stitch, chain-stitch, crevel-stitch, cross-stitch, feather-stitch, hem-stitch, lock-stitch, rope-stitch, spider-stitch, stein-stitch, streak-stitch, etc.)

stitch (stich), v. [< ME. sticchen (pret. stigte, stizt), prick, stich, = MD. sticken, D. stikken = OHG. sticchan, MHG. G. sticken, embroider, stich; from the noun. Cf. stick, v.] 1. trans. To unite by stitches; sew.—2. To ornament with stitches.—3. In agri., to form into ridges.—To stitch up. (a) To form or put together by sewing.

She has, out of impatience to see herself in her weeds, order'd her Mantua-Woman to stitch up any thing immediately.

Steele, Grief A-la-Mode, v. 1.

(b) To mend or unite with a needle and thread, as, to stitch up a rent; to stitch up an artery.

II. intrans. To sew; make stitches.

Stitch! stitch! stitch!

In poverty, hunger, and dirt.

Hood, Song of the Shirt.

stitchel (stich'el), n. A kind of hairy wool. [Local.] Imp. Dict.

stitcher (stich'er), n. [< stitch + -er.] One who stitches; also, a tool or machine used in stitching.

All alike are rich and richer,
King with crown, and cross-legged stitcher,
When the grave hides all.

R. W. Gilder, Drinking Song

stitchery (stich'er-i), n. [< stitch + -ery.] Needlework; in modern times, the labor or drudgery of sewing.

Come, lay aside your stitchery; I must have you play the idle housewife with me this afternoon.

Shak., Cor., l. 3. 75.

stitchfallen (stich'fä'ln), a. [< stitch + fallen, pp. of fall.] Fallen, as a stitch in knitting. [Rare.]

A stitch-fal'n cheek, that hangs below the jaw.

Dryden, tr. of Juvenal's Satires, x. 309.

stitching (stich'ing), n. [Verbal n. of stitch, v.] Stitches collectively; especially, ornamental stitches designed to show on the surface of the work.—Middle stitching (naut.). Same as monk's seam, 1.

stitching-horse (stich'ing-hôrs), n. A harness-makers' clamp or work-holder mounted on a wooden frame or horse. The jaw of the clamp is kept in position by means of a foot-lever. See cut under sewing-clamp.

stitch-wheel (stich'hwél), n. In harness-making, a small notched wheel mounted in a handle, used to mark the places for the stitches in hand-sewed work; a pricking-wheel.

stitch-work (stich'wérk), n. Embroidery. B. Taylor, Northern Travel, p. 415.

stitchwort (stich'wért), n. [*Early mod. E. also stichwort; < ME. stichwort, < AS. sticwyr, < stice, stich, + wyr, plant; see stich and wort.]*] One of several plants of the chickweed or starwort genus, Stellaria. The proper stitchwort is S. Holostea, the greater stitchwort, locally called allbone, break-bones, shirt-buttons, snap-jack, etc., a pretty Old World species with an erect slender stem and starry white flowers. The name alludes to its reputed virtue for the cure of stitch in the side, or, according to one old work, to its use for curing the sting of venomous reptiles (Prior). S. graminea is in England the lesser stitchwort. In the United States S. longifolia, a plant of similar habit, is named long-leaved stitchwort. The name is sometimes extended, in books, to the whole genus.

stith<sup>1</sup> (stith), a. [*Also stithe; < ME. stith, stithe, < AS. stith = OFries. stith, strong, hard, harsh; cf. Icel. stirðr, stiff, rigid, harsh, severe.*] Strong; hard.

Telamocus he toke, his tru sone,
Stake hym in a stith house, & stuerne men to kepe,
Wallit full wele, with water aboute.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 13844.

stith<sup>2</sup> (stith), n. [*< ME. stith, stithe, < Icel. stithi = Sw. stiid, an anvil: so called from its firmness; cf. Icel. stathr, a fixed place, AS. stede, a place, stead; see stead. Doublet of stithy.]* An anvil; a stithy.

The smyth
That forgoth sharpe swerdes on his stith.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 1108.

stithly (stith'li), adv. [*ME., < AS. stithlice, strongly, < stith, strong; see stith<sup>1</sup> and -ly<sup>2</sup>.*] Strongly; stithly; greatly; sore.

Stithly with stony [they] steynyt hir to deth.
Destruction of Troy (L. E. T. S.), l. 12157.

stithy (stith'i), n.; pl. stithies (-iz). [*Also dial. stiddy, steddy, steady*, an extension of stith<sup>2</sup> (prob. due to confusion with smithy as related to smith): see stith<sup>2</sup>.] 1. An anvil.

"Let me sleep on that hard point," said Varney; "I cannot else perfect the device I have on the stithy."

Scott, Kenilworth.

2. A smithy; a smith's shop; a forge.

And my Imaginations are as foul
As Vulcan's stithy. Shak., Hamlet, III. 2. 89.

stithy (stith'i), v. t.; pret. and pp. stithied, ppr. stithying. [< stithy, n.] To forge on an anvil.

The forge that stithied Mars his helm.

Shak., T. and C., IV. 5. 255.

stithy-man (stith'i-mán), n. A smith.

The subtle stithy-man that lived whilere.

Sp. Hall, Satires, II. l. 41. (Davies.)

stive<sup>1</sup> (stiv), a. Same as steevel for stiff.
stive<sup>1</sup> (stiv), v. t. [*< ME. stiven, < AS. stifan or stifian, also in comp. ástifan or á-stifian (= OFries. stiva, stera = MD. D. stijven = G. steyfen = Sw. stýfa = Dan. stive), grow stiff, < stif or stif, stiff; see stiff.] 1. trans. To become stiff; stiffen.*

II. trans. To stiffen.

The hote sunne hadde so hard the hides stived.
William of Palerne (L. E. T. S.), l. 2033.

stive<sup>2</sup> (stiv), v. t.; pret. and pp. stived, ppr. stiving. [*< OF. estiver = Sp. Pg. estivar = It. stivar, < L. stipare, compress, crowd together. Cf. steev<sup>3</sup>, steev.] To stuff; cram; stow; stow; crowd. [Obsolete or provincial.]*

You would think it strange that so small a shell should contain such a quantity, but admire. If you saw them stive it in their ships.

Sandys, Travels, p. 12.

"Things are a good deal stived up," answered the Deacon. "People's minds are sour, and I don't know, Molly, what we can do."

S. Judd, Margaret, II. 8.

stive<sup>3</sup> (stiv), v. [*< ME. stiven, a var. of sturen, sturen, < OF. estiver, stew, bathe; see stew<sup>1</sup>.] 1. trans. To stew, as meat.*

II. intrans. To stew, as in a close atmosphere; be stifled. [Provincial.]

I shall go out in a boat . . . One can get rid of a few hours every day in that way, instead of stiving in a damnable hotel.

George Eliot, Daniel Deronda, liv.

stive<sup>4</sup>, n. An obsolete form of stew.

stive<sup>1</sup> (stiv), n. [*Also dial. stiv; appar. < MD. stuge, dust, = G. staub = Dan. stov, dust.*] Dust; the dust floating in flour-mills during the operation of grinding. Simmonds.

stiver<sup>1</sup> (stí'vēr), n. [= Sw. styfver = Dan. stiver, < MD. stuyver, D. stuiver = G. stuber, a stiver; origin unknown.] 1. A small coin formerly current in Holland and in the Dutch colonies: in Dutch called stuiver. (a) A small silver coin formerly current in Holland, the twentieth part of the Dutch guilder.

Set him free,
And you shall have your money to a stiver,
And present payment. Fletcher, Beggars' Bush, l. 3.
(b) A copper coin formerly current in the Dutch colonies.

Obverse.

Reverse.

Stiver.—British Museum. (Size of the original.)

Hence—2. Any very small coin, or coin of little value.

Entre nous, mon cher, I care not a stiver for popularity.

Bulwer, My Novel, ix. 3.

"There's fourteen foot and over," says the driver,
"Worth twenty dollars, ef it's worth a stiver."

Lowell, Fitz Adam's Story.

stiver<sup>2</sup> (stí'vēr), n. [< stive<sup>3</sup> + -er.] An inhabitant of the stews; a harlot. Beau. and Fl., Scornful Lady, ii. 1.

steward, n. A Middle English form of steward.
Stizostedion (stí-zō-stē'di-on), n. [NL. (Rafinesque, 1820), also Stizostedion, Stizothidium, and prop. **Stizostethium*, < Gr. stízein, prick, + stethion, dim. of stethos, breast.] In ichth., a genus of pike-perches, including two marked species of Europe and North America. They are of large size, are carnivorous, and inhabit fresh waters. S. vitreum is the wall-eyed, goggle-eyed, glass-eyed, yellow, or blue pike, dory, or jack-salmon, and S. canadense the gray pike, sand-pike, sauger, or hornfish. See cut under pike-perch.

stoa (stō'a), n. [*< Gr. stoa, sometimes στοά, a porch, colonnade.*] In Gr. arch., a portico, usually a detached portico, often of considerable extent, generally near a public place to afford opportunity for walking or conversation under shelter. The Greek stoa was often richly adorned with sculpture and painting. Many examples had two stories.—The Stoa. Same as the Porch. See porch, Stoic.

Diagram of the construction of a Greek Stoa, as excavated and restored by the Archaeological Institute of America, at Assos, 1822.

stoat (stót), n. [*Also stote; a var. of stot<sup>1</sup>.*] The ermine, Putorius erminea, and other members of that genus when not specified by distinctive names. See ermine<sup>1</sup>, weasel, mink, fitcher, polecat, ferret<sup>1</sup>. Stoat more particularly designates the animal in ordinary summer pelage, when it is dull mahogany-brown above, and pale sulphur-yellow below, with the tail black-tipped as in winter.

Stoat or Ermine (Putorius erminea), in summer pelage.

stob (stob), n. [*A var. of stubb.*] 1. A small post.—2. A thorn; spine. Hallivell.—3. A long steel wedge used for bringing down coal after holing. Gresley. [Prov. Eng. in all uses.] stoblet, n. A Middle English form of stubble.

stocah (stō'käh), n. [*Early mod. E. also stokaghe; < Ir. Gael. stocach, an idler in the kitchen.*] An attendant; a hanger-on: an old Irish term.

The strength of all that nation is the Kearne, Galloglashe, Stokaghe, Horsemen, and Horseboyes.

Spenser, State of Ireland.

stoccade (sto-kād'), n. [*Also stockado, stoccado, and stoccata, after Sp. or It.; < OF. estocade, estocade = Sp. Pg. estocada, a thrust, pass, < It. stoccata, a thrust with a weapon, < **stoccare*, < G. stock, a stick, staff, stock, = MD. stock, a stock-rapier, etc.: see stock<sup>1</sup>. Cf. stockade.] 1. A thrust with a sword, one of the movements taught by the early fencing-masters, as in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.*

Your punto, your reverso, your stoccata, your imbrocata your passada, your montanto.

B. Jonson, Every Man in his Humour, iv. 5.

2. See stockade.

stoccadet, v. t. See stockade.

stoccadot, stoccatat, n. Same as stoccade.

stock (stok'ō), n. [It.: see stock<sup>1</sup>, stoccade.] A long straight sword for thrusting, similar to the tuck. See tuck<sup>2</sup> and estoc.

stochastic (stō-kas'tik), a. [Gr. στοχαστικός, able to hit or to guess, conjecturing, < στοχάζεσθαι, aim at, endeavor after, < στόχος, aim, shot, guess.] Conjectural; given to or partaking of conjecture.

Though he [Sir T. Browne] were no prophet . . . yet in that faculty which comes nearest to it he excelled, i. e. the stochastic, wherein he was seldom mistaken as to future events, as well public as private.

Whitford, quoted in Sir T. Browne's Works, I. xlvii.

stock<sup>1</sup> (stok), n. and a. [ME. stocke, stokke, stok, stoke, stoc (pl. stokkes, the stocks), < AS. stoc, stocce (stocce), a post, trunk, stock, = OFries. stok = MD. stock, D. stok = MLG. stok, LG. stock = OHG. stoc, stoch, MHG. stoc (> It. stocco, a rapier). G. stock = Icel. stokkr = Dan. stok = Sw. stock (not recorded in Goth.), a post, stock (hence, from Teut., OF. estoc, a stock, trunk of a tree, race, etc., = It. stocco, a stock, trunk of a tree, rapier, etc.: see stocco, stoccade, stock<sup>2</sup>, tuck<sup>2</sup>, etc.); generally supposed to be connected with the similar words, of similar sense, stick<sup>3</sup>, stake<sup>1</sup>, and so with stack; but the phonetic connection is not clear. Assuming the sense 'stick' or 'club' to be original, a connection may be surmised with Skt. √ tuj (orig. **stug*?), thrust. The senses of this noun are numerous and complicated; the ME. senses are in part due to the OF. estoc.] I. n. 1. A wooden post; a stake; a stump.

The Cros of oure Lord was made of 4 manere of Trees, . . . and the Stock, that stode within the Erthe, . . . was of Cedre. Mandeville, Travels, p. 10.

Lay this round plate upon an evene grond or on an evene ston or on an evene stok fix in the gronde. Chaucer, Astrolabe, ii. 38.

They all went downward, fleetly and gaily downward, and only he, it seemed, remained behind, like a stock upon the wayside. R. L. Stevenson, Will o' the Mill.

2. A wooden block; a block; a log; hence, something lifeless and senseless.

He swore hire yis, by stokkes and by stones, And by the goddes that in hevne dwelle. Chaucer, Troilus, iii. 589.

There was an eye, and a stoke, and oon of the lewdeste of the shippe badde hym ley down his hedde, and he should be fair frid wyth, and dye on a sword. Paston Letters, I. 125.

More than dead stocks would startle at such beauty. Chapman, Blind Beggar of Alexandria.

And those made thee forsake thy God, And worship stocks and stones.

Wanton Wife of Bath (Child's Ballads, VIII. 155).

3. A person who is as dull and senseless as a block or a log.

Let's be nostoicks nor no stocks. Shak., T. of the S., i. 1. 31.

Such a stock of a child, such a statue! Why, he has no kind of feeling either of body or mind.

Brooke, Fool of Quality, iii.

What a phlegmatic sot it is! Why, sirrah, you're an anchorite!—a vile insensible stock. Sheridan, Rivals, iii. 1.

4. A dull object or recipient of action or notice, as of wonder, scorn, or laughter; a butt: generally the second element in a compound: as, a gazing-stock; a laughing-stock.

Howsoever we are all accounted dull, and common jesting stock for your gallants, there are some of us do not deserve it. Beau, and FL., Woman-Hater, iii. 2.

Thou art the stock of men, and I admire thee. Fletcher, Rule a Wife, iii. 5.

I know, and may presume her such,

As, out of humour, will return no love;

And therefore might indifferently be made

The courting-stock for all to practise on.

B. Jonson, New Inn, i. 1.

5. The stalk, stem, or trunk of a tree or other plant; the main body, or fixed and firm part.

Though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof die in the ground. Job xiv. 8.

There, in the stocks of trees, white faies do dwell. B. Jonson, Sad Shepherd, ii. 2.

You know him—old, but full

Of force and cholera, and firm upon his feet,

And like an oaken stock in winter woods.

Tennyson, Golden Year.

6. A stem in which a graft is inserted, and which is its support; also, a stem, tree, or plant that furnishes slips or cuttings.

You see, sweet maid, we marry

A gentler scion to the wildest stock.

Shak., W. T., iv. 4. 93.

The scion ever over-ruleth the stock.

Dacon, Nat. Hist., Int. to § 477.

Hence—7. The original progenitor of a family or race; the person from whom any given line of descent or inheritance is derived. See stock of descent, below.

This firste stok was ful of rightwisnesse,

Trewe of his word, sobre, pitous, and free. Chaucer, Gentilnesse, l. 8.

Brave soldier, yield, thou stock of arms and honour. Fletcher, Bonduca, v. 5.

8. Direct line of descent; race; lineage; family: as, children of the stock of Abraham.

What things are these! I shall marry into a fine stock! Brome, Northern Lass, ii. 2.

In his actions and sentiments he belied not the stock to which he pretended. Lamb, Two Races of Men.

They sprang from different stocks. They spoke different languages. Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vi.

9. The principal supporting or holding part; the part in which other parts are inserted, or to which they are attached in order to furnish a firm support or hold. Specifically—(a) The wooden support to which the barrel and lock of a rifle or like firearm are attached, or upon which the bow of the crossbow is mounted. See cuts under gun and gun-carriage. (b) The handle by which a boring-bit is held and turned; a bit-stock; a brace. See cut under brace. (c) The block of wood which constitutes the body of a plane, and in which the cutting iron is fitted. See cuts under plane, rounding-plane, and router. (d) The support of the block on which an anvil is fitted, or of the anvil itself. (e) The crosspiece of an anchor perpendicular to the shank, formerly of wood, when the shank was passed through a hole cut in the stock, or the latter was made in two parts joined to receive the shank: now usually of iron, in which case the stock slips through a hole made in the shank. See cut under anchor. (f) An adjustable wrench for holding screw-cutting dies. (g) That part of a plow to which the handles, irons, etc., are attached. (h) A beater, as used in a fulling-mill, in the manufacture of chamois-leather, etc. (i) An arm of a bevel-gage or of a square. (j) The wooden frame in which the wheel and post of a spinning-wheel are supported.

10. A stiff band of horsehair, leather, or the like, covered with black satin, cambric, or similar material, and made to imitate and replace the cravat or neckband: formerly worn by men generally, and, in some forms, still in military use. It was sometimes fastened behind with a buckle, which was often an ornamental object.

A shining stock of black leather supporting his chin. Irving, Knickerbocker, p. 321.

He wore a magnificent stock, with a liberal kind of knot in the front; in this he took a great pin. W. Beant, Fifty Years Ago, p. 98.

11. The front part, especially the front side-piece, of a bed. [Scotch.]

I winna lie in your bed,

Either at stock or wa'. Capt. Wedderburn's Courtship (Child's Ballads, VIII. 12).

12. pl. An apparatus for the confinement of vagrants and petty offenders, formerly in use in different parts of Europe, and retained until recently in country villages in England. It consisted of two heavy timbers, one of which could be raised, Military Stock, 18th century.

A shining stock of black leather supporting his chin. Irving, Knickerbocker, p. 321.

He wore a magnificent stock, with a liberal kind of knot in the front; in this he took a great pin. W. Beant, Fifty Years Ago, p. 98.

11. The front part, especially the front side-piece, of a bed. [Scotch.]

I winna lie in your bed,

Either at stock or wa'. Capt. Wedderburn's Courtship (Child's Ballads, VIII. 12).

12. pl. An apparatus for the confinement of vagrants and petty offenders, formerly in use in different parts of Europe, and retained until recently in country villages in England. It consisted of two heavy timbers, one of which could be raised, and when lowered was held in place by a padlock or the like; notches in these timbers, forming round holes when the upper timber was shut down in place, held firmly the legs of those upon whom this punishment was inflicted in some cases a second row of openings could be used to retain the hands, and even the neck, also. Compare pillory.

Stocks

This yere was ordeyned in euery ward (of London) a peyr stockis. Arnold's Chronicle, p. xxxvi.

Mars got drunk in the town, and broke his landlord's head, for which he sat in the stocks the whole evening. Steele, Tatler, No. 4.

13. The frame or timbers on which a ship rests while building; hence, generally, on the stocks, in course of construction or preparation.—

14. That part of the tally which the creditor took away as evidence of the king's debt, the part retained in the Exchequer being called the counterstock. See tally.

It was the custom when money was borrowed for State purposes to record the transaction by means of notches on a stick (commonly hazel), and then to split the stick through the notches. The lender took one half as a proof of his claim against the Exchequer, and it was called his Stock. The Exchequer kept the other half, which was called the counterstock, and which answered the same purpose as was served in after-times by the counterfoil. Bithell, Counting-House Dict., p. 290.

15. In finance: (a) The money represented by this tally; money lent to a government, or a fund consisting of a capital debt due by a government to individual holders who receive a fixed rate of interest. In modern usage, especially in Great Britain, the name is applied to a capital of which payment cannot be claimed, but on which interest is paid in perpetuity at a given rate; hence, to buy stock is simply to buy the right to this interest on a certain amount of this capital debt—a right which may be sold again. The various kinds of stocks are called the public funds. See fund<sup>1</sup>, n., 2.

I have known a Captain rise to a Colonel in two days by the fall of stocks. Steele, quoted in Ashton's Reign of Queen Anne, II. 206.

The term Stock was originally applied to the material sign and proof of money lent. But as the thing signified was of greater importance to both parties than the sign, it was at length transferred to the money itself, or rather to the right to claim it. In this way Stock came to be understood as money lent to the government, and eventually to any public body whatever. Bithell, Counting-House Dict., p. 290.

(b) The share capital of a corporation or commercial company; the fund employed in the carrying on of some business or enterprise, divided into shares of equal amount, and owned by individuals who jointly form a corporation; in the plural, shares: as, bank stock; railway stock; stocks and bonds.—16. The property which a merchant, a tradesman, or a company has invested in any business, including merchandise, money, and credits; more particularly, the goods which a merchant or a commercial house keeps on hand for the supply of customers.

Who trades without a stock has naught to fear. Cibber.

"We must renew our stock, Cousin Hepzibah!" cried the little saleswoman. "The gingerbread figures are all gone, and so are those Dutch wooden milkmaids, and most of our other playthings." Hawthorne, Seven Gables, v.

17. Fund; sum of money.

Mr. John Whitson being Mayor, with his brethren the Aldermen, and most of the Merchants of the City of Bristol, raised a stock of 1000*l.* to furnish out two Barks. Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, I. 108.

It's proverbial He gave them an alms-penny, for which reason Judas carried the bag that had a common stock in it for the poor. Barnard, Heylin, § 104.

The money is raised out of the interest of a stock formerly made up by the nobility and gentry. Butler, quoted in Strutt's Sports and Pastimes, p. 103.

18. Hoard or accumulation; store; supply; fund which may be drawn upon as occasion demands: as, to lay in a stock of provisions; a stock of information.

Though all my stock of tears were spent already Upon Pisano's loss. Shirley, Traitor, v. 1.

He set up as a Surgeon upon his bare natural stock of knowledge, and his experience in Kilbes. But then he had a very great stock of confidence withal, to help out the other. Dampier, Voyages, I. 388.

A great stock of parliamentary knowledge. Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vi.

19. Share; portion.

Whilst we, like younger Brothers, get at best But a small stock, and must work out the rest. Couley, To Lord Falkland.

Therefore nothing would satisfy him [a young prodigal] unless he were intrusted with the Stock which was intended for him, that he might shew the difference between his Father's Conduct and his own. Stillfleet, Sermons, III. i.

20. Ground; reason; evidence; proof.

He pities our infirmities, and strikes off much of the account upon that stock. Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 914.

21. The part of a pack of cards which in certain games is not dealt out, but left on the table, to be drawn from as occasion requires.

Nay, then, I must buy the stock; send me good carding! I hope the prince's hand be not in this sport. Fletcher, Humorous Lieutenant, iv. 1.

22. In agri.: (a) The horses, cattle, sheep, and other useful animals raised or kept on a farm or ranch: distinctively known as live stock: as, a farmer's land and stock. The term is extended to any animals, as fish or oysters, artificially propagated.

Brandy was produced, pipes lighted, and conversation returned to the grand staple Australian subject—stock.

A. C. Grant, Bush Life in Queensland, I. 141.

(b) The implements of husbandry stored for use. Also called dead stock.—23. The raw material from which anything is made; stuff; material: as, paper-stock (rags, fiber, wood-pulp, etc.); soap-stock.

In its natural state, fat of animals is always associated with cellular tissue and other foreign matters, which must be separated before it can be used as candle stock.

Workshop Receipts, 1st ser., p. 350.

24. The liquor or broth prepared by boiling meat, with or without vegetables, etc., so as to extract the nutritious properties, and used as a foundation for different kinds of soup. Also called soup-stock.—25. A good kind of red and gray brick, used for the exterior of walls and the front of buildings.—26. A name of several cruciferous garden-flowers. (a) One of several species of Matthiola, or sometimes the species in general: originally stock-gillyflower. (b) By extension, the somewhat similar Malcolmia maritima, the Mahon stock, a low diffuse annual, in England called Virginia or virgin stock, though from the shores of the Mediterranean. The name has been applied also to the genus Heliophila.

27. A covering for the leg; a stocking. Compare nether-stocks.

A linen stock on one leg, and a kersey boot-hose on the other. Shak, T. of the S., III. 2. 67.

28. In her., the stump of a tree used as a bearing: represented as cut square on top and eradicated—that is, torn up by the roots—with at least the main roots indicated.—29. (a) The pillar or post on which the holy-water vessel was fixed. E. Peacock. Hence—(b) A holy-water vessel, or aspersorium.

Item. oone hollywater stocke of glasse with a bayle. Inventory 34, Henry VIII.

30. The proceeds of the sale of the catch of a fishing-trip; the net value of a cargo of fish. [New Eng.]—31. pl. A frame in which a horse or other animal can be secured or slung for shoeing or for a veterinary operation.—32. In mining, sometimes used as the equivalent of the German stock (plural stöcke), especially in translating from that language. A "stock" is a mass of ore of irregular form, but usually thick in proportion to its other dimensions, and not having the characters of a true vein, but belonging more properly to the class of segregated veins or masses. Some "stockes" resemble very nearly the "carbonas" of the Cornish miner, others are akin to the "flats" of the north of England.

33. In early forms of feudalism, commendation. See to accept stock, below.—34. In zoöl., a compound, colonial, or aggregate organism; an aggregate of persons forming one organic whole, which may grow by budding or cast off parts to start a new set of persons: as, a polyp-stock. A polyplidom, a polyzoary, a chain of salps or doliolids, etc., are examples. Haeckel extends stock in this sense to the broader biological conception which includes those plants that propagate by buds or shoots. See teetology.—Dead stock. See def. 22.—Drop of stock. See drop.—Fancy stocks. See fancy.—Holy-water stock, a vessel for holy water; a holy-water stoup. See water.—Live stock. See def. 22.—Lock, stock, and barrel. See lock.—Long of stock. See long.—Net stock. See net.—On or upon the stocks. See def. 13.—Preference or preferred stock. See preference.—Rolling stock. See rolling-stock.—Stock-and-bill tackle. Same as stock-tackle.—Stock and block, everything; both capital and interest.

Before I came home I lost all stock and block. Bailey, tr. of Colloquies of Erasmus, p. 236.

Stock and die, a screw-cutting die in its holder.—Stock certificate. (a) In the law of corporations, a certificate issued by a corporation or joint-stock company to a shareholder, as evidence of his title to a specified number of shares of the capital stock. (b) In Eng. finance, a certificate issued by or on behalf of the government, pursuant to the National Debt Act, 33 and 34 Viet., c. 71, to a holder of consols or of some other public indebtedness or annuities, as evidence of his title to such stock, with coupons annexed, entitling the bearer of the coupon to the corresponding dividend. A stock certificate is evidence of title to the stock, as distinguished from the stock itself, which is considered as an intangible right.—Stock company. (a) A commercial or other company or corporation whose capital is divided into shares, which are held or owned by individuals, generally with limited liability, as distinguished from a partnership: as, a stock company for the manufacture of window-glass. (b) A company of actors and actresses employed more or less permanently under the same management, and usually connected with a central or home theater.—Stock dividend. See dividend.—Stock indicator. See indicator.—Stock in trade, the goods kept for sale by a shopkeeper; hence, a person's mental equipment or resources considered as qualifying him for a special service or business.—Stock of descent, in the law of inheritances, the person with whose ownership any given succession of inheritance is considered as commencing. At common law, in order to determine who was entitled to succeed as heir, the inquiry was for the heir of the person last actually seized. This rule has been superseded by modern legislation.—To accept stock, in early feudal customs, the act of a lord in receiving another person as his vassal.—To give stock, the act of a person in becoming the vassal of a lord.—To have on the stocks, to have in hand; to be at work upon.—To take stock. (a) Same as to accept stock. (b) In com., to make an inventory of stock or goods on hand; hence, with of, to make an estimate of; set a value upon; investigate for the purpose of forming an opinion; loosely, to notice.

In taking stock of his familiarly worn . . . nautical clothes, piece by piece, she took stock of a formidable knife in a sheath at his waist, . . . and of a whistle hanging round his neck, and of a short jagged knotted club. Dickens, Our Mutual Friend, II. 12.

To take stock in. (a) To take a share or shares in; take or have an interest in. Hence—(b) To repose confidence in; believe in: as, to take little stock in one's stories. [Colloq.]

Captain Polly gives the right hand of fellowship to two boys in whom nobody else is willing to take stock, and her faith in them saves them. Harper's Mag., Oct., 1889, Literary Notes.

To water stocks. See water, v. t.

II. a. Kept in stock; ready for service at all times; habitually produced or used; standing; as, a stock play; a stock anecdote; a stock sermon.

The old stock-omaths, I am confident, do not amount to above forty-five, or fifty at most.

Swift, Polite Conversation, Int.

The master of the house, who was burning to tell one of his seven stock stories. Dickens, Sketches, Tales, x. 2.

stock<sup>1</sup> (stok), v. [< ME. stocken, stokken = MD. MHG. stocken, G. stöcken, put in the stocks; from the noun: see stock<sup>1</sup>, n.] I. trans. 1. To provide with a stock, handle, or the like: as, to stock a gun or an anchor.

They can mend and new stock their pieces, as well, almost, as an Englishman. Goe. Bradford, in App. to New England's Memorial, p. 456.

2. To fasten, bolt, or bar, as a door or window. [Old and prov. Eng.]

Often tynes the dure is stocked, and we parsons & vicars cannot get brede, wyne, nor water.

Fabrie Rolls of York Minster (1519), p. 268. (E. Peacock.)

3. To put in the stocks as a punishment; hence, to confine; imprison.

Rather deye I wolde and determine,
As thynketh me now, stocked in prison,
In wrechednesse, in filthe and in vermyne.

Chaucer, Troilus, III. 380.

They suffered great hardships for this their love and good-will, being often stock, stoned, beaten, whipped, and imprisoned. Penn, Rise and Progress of Quakers, v.

4. To lay up in store; accumulate for future use: as, to stock goods. Scott, Quentin Durward, xviii.—5. To provide or supply with stock. (a) To supply with a stock of goods; store with commodities; store with anything: as, to stock a warehouse.

Our Author, to divert his Friends to Day, Stocks with Variety of Fools his Play.

Steele, Tender Husband, Prol.

The bazaars were crowded with people, and stocked with all manner of eastern delicacies.

R. F. Burton, El-Medina, p. 419.

(b) To supply with cattle, sheep, etc., or, in some uses, to supply with domestic animals, implements, etc.: as, to stock a farm.

He has bought the great farm, . . .
And stock'd it like an emperor.

Fletcher (and another?), Prophetess, v. 2.

(c) To furnish with a permanent growth, especially with grass: as, to stock a pasture.

6. To suffer to retain milk for many hours, as cows before selling.—7. To dig up; root out; extirpate by grubbing: sometimes with up.

This tyme is to be stockd every tree
Away with herbes brode, eke root and bough.

Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 182.

The wild bear not only spoils her branches, but stocks up her roots.

Decay of Christian Piety.

8. Same as stock<sup>1</sup>, 2.

II. intrans. 1. To branch out into shoots immediately above ground; tiller: applied to grasses, grain, or flowers.

About two months ago broad blanks were to be seen on many outfields, and, though they were stockd a little, the crop is yet far too thin. The Scotsman.

2. To send out sprouts, as from a stem which has been cut over: said of a tree or plant.—3. To make a certain profit on stock. See stock<sup>1</sup>, n., 30. [New Eng.]

stock<sup>2</sup> (stok), n. [< OF. estoc = It. stocco, a rapier: see stock<sup>1</sup>, and cf. cstoc, tuck<sup>2</sup>.] 1. Same as estoc; also, a thrusting-sword used in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, superseding the cut-and-thrust sword of earlier times.—2. Same as stocade, 1.

stock<sup>2</sup> (stok), v. t. [< stock<sup>2</sup>, n.] To hit with a rapier or stock.

Oh, the brave age is gone! In my young days
A chevalier would stock a needle's point
Three times together.

Fletcher (and another), Love's Cure, III. 4.

stock-account (stok'ə-kount'), n. In com., an account in a ledger showing on one side the amount of the original stock with accumulations, and on the other the amount of what has been disposed of.

stockade (sto-kād'), n. [Formerly also stockado, stocade; < stock<sup>2</sup> + -adē, in imitation of stocade, < F. estocade, a thrust in fencing (and of palisade?): see stocade.] 1. In fort., a fence or barrier constructed by planting upright in the ground timber, piles, or trunks of trees, so as to inclose an area which is to be defended. In Oriental warfare such stockades are often of formidable strength and great extent, as the stockades of Rangoon.

2. An inclosure or pen made with posts and stakes.—3. In hydraul. engin., a row of piles serving as a breakwater, or to protect an embankment.

stockade (sto-kād'), v. t.; pret. and pp. stockaded, ppr. stockading. [Formerly also stockado, stocade; < stockade, n.] To encompass or fortify with posts or piles fixed in the ground.

On the back of the Hill, the Land being naturally low, there is a very large Moat cut from the Sea to the River, which makes the whole an Island; and that back part is stockaded round with great Trees, set up an end.

Dampier, Voyages, II. i. 160.

stockado (sto-kā'dō), n. 1. Same as stocade.

Robrus, who, addict to nimble fence,
Still greets me with stockado's violence.

Marston, Satires, I. 132.

2. Same as stockade.

Stockadoes, Palizadoes, stop their waters.
Heywood, Four Prentises (Works, ed. 1874, II. 242).

stockado, v. t. See stockade.

stock-beer (stok'bēr), n. Lager-beer. See beer<sup>1</sup>. [Rare.]

stock-blind (stok'blind), a. Blind as a stock or block; stone-blind.

True lovers are blind, stockblind.
Wycherley, Country Wife, II. 1.

stock-board (stok'bōrd), n. 1. In brickmaking, a board over which the mold is passed, and which forms the bottom of the mold in molding.—2. In organ-building, the upper board of a wind-chest.

stock-book (stok'būk), n. In com., a book in which a detailed account is kept of the stock of goods on hand.

stock-bow (stok'bō), n. A crossbow of any kind; a bow mounted on a stock.

stock-breeder (stok'brē'dēr), n. One whose occupation is the breeding of live stock; a stock-farmer; a stock-raiser.

stock-broker (stok'brō'kēr), n. [< stock<sup>1</sup> + broker.] A broker who, for a commission, attends to the purchase and sale of stocks or shares, and of government and other securities, in behalf and for the account of clients. On the London stock-exchange brokers cannot deal directly with brokers, but must treat with a class of operators called jobbers. See jobber<sup>2</sup>, 4.

stock-broking (stok'brō'king), n. The business of a stock-broker.

stock-brush (stok'brush), n. A brush in which the tufts are arranged on a flat wooden stock with a handle. Encyc. Brit., IV. 403.

stock-buckle (stok'buk'1), n. A buckle used to fasten the stock (see stock<sup>1</sup>, n., 10), usually at the back of the neck. These buckles were frequently of gold, and sometimes jeweled.

stock-car (stok'kär), n. On a railroad, a car used to transport live stock, as horses, cattle, pigs, and sheep; a cattle-car. It is usually a long covered car, with sides and ends formed with slats for ventilation, and is sometimes fitted with conveniences for feeding and watering the stock.

stock-dove (stok'duv), n. [< ME. stok-douwe, stokke-douwe = MD. stock-duyre; as stock<sup>1</sup> + dove<sup>1</sup>: so called, according to some writers, because it was at one time believed to be the stock of the many varieties of the domestic pigeon; according to others, from its breeding in the stocks of trees.] The wild pigeon of Europe, Columba anas. It is closely related to the rock-dove, C. livia, with which it has often been confounded, but is smaller and darker-colored, without white on the neck or wings. Also rarely called half-dove. Compare rock-dove, ring dove.

stock-duck (stok'duk), n. The common mallard, Anas boschas.

stock-eikle (stok'ī'kl), n. Same as hickwall. [Worcestershire, Eng.]

stocker (stok'ēr), n. [< stock<sup>1</sup> + -er<sup>1</sup>.] 1. A workman who makes or fits gun-stocks.

The stocker upon receiving the stock first roughs it into shape, or, as it is called, trims it out, with a mallet, chisel, and draw-knife. W. W. Greener, The Gun, p. 249.

2. One who is employed in the felling and grubbing up of trees. [Prov. Eng.]—Stocker's saw, a small saw designed especially for the use of the gun-stocker or armorer.

stock-exchange (stok'eks-chānj'), n. 1. A building, place, or mart where stocks or shares are bought and sold.—2. An association of brokers and dealers or jobbers in stocks, bonds, and other securities, created under state or municipal authority, or by corporations concerned in the business connected with the carrying on of railways, mines, manufactures, banks, or other commercial or industrial pursuits.

stock-farm (stok'fārm), v. A farm devoted to stock-breeding.

stock-farmer (stok'fär'mér), n. A farmer who is chiefly engaged in the breeding and rearing of different kinds of live stock. Also called stor-farmer.

stock-father (stok'fä'thēr), n. A progenitor.

stock-feeder (stok'fē'dér), n. 1. One who is chiefly engaged in the feeding or fattening of live stock; a stock-farmer.—2. An attachment to a manger for the automatic supply of a certain quantity of feed to stock at fixed intervals.

stock-fish<sup>1</sup> (stok'fish), n. [*< ME. stokefysche, stokefysche = D. MLG. stokvisch = MHG. storvisch, G. stockfisch = Sw. stockfisk = Dan. stokfisk; as stock<sup>1</sup>, n., + fish<sup>1</sup>.*] The exact sense in which stock is here used is uncertain; various views are reflected in the quotations.] Certain gadoid fish which are cured by splitting and drying hard without salt, as cod, ling, hake, haddock, torsk, or eusk. Codfish are thus hard-dried in the air without salt most extensively in Norway and Greenland, but the art has not been acquired in the United States.

From hense [Norway] is brought into all Europe a fysshe of the kindes of them w hiche we caule haddockes or hakes, indurate and dried with coule, and beaten with clubbes or stockes, by reason whereof the Germainys caule them stockefyshe.

R. Eden, tr. of Jacobus Zieglerus (First Books on America, 1st ed. Arber, p. 303).

Cogan says of stockfish, "Concerning which fish I will say no more than Erasmus hath written in his Colloquio. There is a kind of fische which is called in English Stockfish: It nourisheth no more than a stock." . . . Stockfish whilst it is unbeaten is called Buckhorn, because it is so tough; when it is beaten upon the stock, it is termed stockfish. Quoted in Dabce Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 155, note.

stock-fish<sup>2</sup> (stok'fish), n. [*< stock<sup>1</sup>, n., 22, + fish<sup>1</sup>.*] In fish-culture, fish adapted or used for stocking rivers, ponds, lakes, etc.

stock-gang (stok'gang), n. In a saw-mill, a group or gang of saws arranged in a frame and used for reducing a log or balk to boards, etc., at one passage through the machine. A saw used in such a stock-gang is called a stock-saw.

stock-gillyflower (stok'jil'i-flou-ér), n. A plant of the genus Matthiola, chiefly M. incana: so called as having a woody stem, to distinguish it from the clove-gillyflower or carnation.

stock-hawk (stok'hák), n. The peregrine falcon, Falco peregrinus. See cut under duck-hawk. [Shetland.]

stock-holder (stok'hól'dér), n. One who is a proprietor of stock in the public funds, or who holds some of the shares of a bank or other company.

stock-horse (stok'hórs), n. A horse used on an Australian station in driving, mustering, cutting out, and similar work.

He was an aged stockhorse, which I had bought very cheap, as being a secure animal to begin with.

H. Kingsley, Hillyars and Burtons, 1.

stockily (stok'i-li), adv. In a stocky manner; short and stout: as, a stockily built person.

stock-indicator (stok'in'di-kā-tór), n. See indicator.

stockinet (stok-i-net'), n. [Adapted from stockinet, < stocking + -et.] An elastic knitted textile fabric, of which undergarments, etc., are made. Also spelled stockinet or stockingette, and also called jersey, jersey cloth, and elastic cloth.

stocking (stok'ing), n. [< stock<sup>1</sup> + dim. -ing.] 1. A close-fitting covering for the foot and lower leg. Stockings were originally made of cloth or milled stuff, sewed together, but they are now usually knitted by the hand or woven in a frame, the material being wool, cotton, or silk.

Their legges were adorn'd with close long white silke stockings, curiously embroidered with golde to the Middle-legge.

Chapman, Masque of Middle Temple and Lincoln's Inn.

2. Something like or suggesting such a covering. (a) The lower part of the leg of a quadruped when of a different color from the rest: as, a horse or cow with white stockings. See cut under payal. (b) A covering of feathers on the shank of some birds; a legging or leg-muff. Compare blue-stocking, 2, and see cuts under Eriocnemis, Spathura, and pouter.—Elastic stocking, a stocking of elastic webbing, used for giving uniform pressure to a limb, as in the treatment of varicose veins.—In one's stockings or stocking-feet, without shoes or slippers: used in statements of stature-measurements: as, he stands six feet in his stockings (that is, with his shoes off).—Lisle-thread stocking. See thread.—Silk stockings. See silk.—To sew up one's stocking. See sew.

stocking (stok'ing), v. t. [*< stocking, *n.] To dress in stockings; cover as with stockings.

stockinger (stok'ing-ér), n. [< stocking + -er<sup>1</sup>.] 1. One who knits or weaves stockings.

The robust rural Saxon degenerates in the mills to the Leicester stockinger, to the imbecile Manchester spinner.

Emerson, English Traits, x.

2. One who deals in stockings and other small articles of apparel.

stockinet (stok-ing-et'), n. Same as stockinet.

stocking-frame (stok'ing-frām), n. A special form of knitting-machine; also, a general term for the knitting-machine.

stocking-loom (stok'ing-lōm), n. A stocking-frame.

stocking-machine (stok'ing-mā-shēn'), n. A stocking-frame or knitting-machine.

stocking-maker (stok'ing-mā'kér), n. A bottle-tit, Acredula caudata, or A. rosca: translating a French name, débassaire, referring to the long woven nest, likened to a stocking.

C. Swainson.

stocking-yarn (stok'ing-yārn), n. Loosely spun thread, made especially for stockings.

stockish (stok'ish), a. [< stock<sup>1</sup> + -ish<sup>1</sup>.] Like a stock or block; stupid; blockish. Shak., M. of V., v. 1. 81. [Rare.]

stockishness (stok'ish-nes), n. The quality or character of being stockish; stupidity; lack of sense or feeling. [Rare.]

Friend,

I've seen you with St. John—O stockishness!

Wear such a ruff, and never call to mind

St. John's head in a charger?

Browning, Strafford, iii. 3.

stock-jobber (stok'job'ér), n. One who speculates in stocks for gain; one whose occupation is the purchase and sale of stocks or shares.

Publick Knaves and Stock-Jobbers pass for Wits at her end of the Town, as common Cheats and Gamblers do at yours.

Steele, Tender Husband, ii. 1.

stock-jobbery (stok'job'ér-i), n. The practice or business of dealing in stocks or shares.

stock-jobbing (stok'job'ing), n. The business of dealing in stocks or shares; the purchase and sale of stocks, bonds, etc., as carried on by jobbers who operate on their own account.

stockless (stok'les), a. Without a stock: as, stockless anchors; stockless guns.

stock-list (stok'list), n. A list, published daily or periodically in connection with a stock-exchange, enumerating the leading stocks dealt in, the prices current, the actual transactions, etc.

stockman (stok'man), n.; pl. stockmen (-men). 1. A man who has charge of the stock in an establishment of any kind.—2. A stock-farmer or rancher.—3. A man employed by a stock-farmer as a herdsman or the like. [U. S. and Australia.]

stock-market (stok'mär'ket), n. 1. A market where stocks are bought and sold; a stock-exchange.—2. The purchase and sale of stocks or shares: as, the stock-market was dull.—3. A cattle-market.

stock-morel (stok'mor'el), n. A fungus, Morchella esculenta. See morel<sup>2</sup>, Morchella.

stock-owl (stok'oul), n. The great eagle-owl of Europe, Bubo ignavus.

stock-pot (stok'pót), n. A pot in which soup-stock is prepared and kept ready for use.

stock-printer (stok'prin'tér), n. An instrument for automatically printing stock quotations transmitted by telegraph; a stock-indicator.

stock-pump (stok'pump), n. A pump which, by means of levers, is operated by the weight of an animal as it walks on the platform of the pump, seeking water.

stock-punished (stok'pun'isht), a. Punished by being confined in the stocks. Shak., Lear, iii. 4. 140.

stock-purse (stok'pérs), n. A fund used for the common purposes of any association or gathering of persons.

stock-raiser (stok'rā'zér), n. One who raises cattle and horses; a stock-farmer.

stock-ranch (stok'rānch), n. A stock-farm. [Western U. S.]

stock-range (stok'rānj), n. A tract or extent of country over which live stock (especially cattle) range. [Western U. S.]

stock-rider (stok'rī'dér), n. A man employed as a herdsman on an unfenced station in Australia.

Now and afterwards I found out that he was a native of the colony, a very great stock-rider, and was principal overseer to Mr. Charles Morton.

H. Kingsley, Hillyars and Burtons, xlviii.

stock-room (stok'rōm), n. A room in which is kept a reserved stock of materials or goods ready for use or sale.

stocks (stoks), n. pl. See stock<sup>1</sup>, 12.

stock-saddle (stok'sad'l), n. A saddle used in the western United States, an improvement of the old Spanish and Mexican saddle. Its peculiarity is its heavy tree and iron horn, made to withstand a strong strain from a rope or reata.

For a long spell of such work a stock-saddle is far less tiring than the ordinary Eastern or English one, and in every way superior to it.

T. Roosevelt, The Century, XXXV. 863.

stock-station (stok'stā'shōn), n. A ranch or stock-farm. [Australia.]

stock-still (stok'stīl'), a. Still as a stock or fixed post; perfectly still.

If he begins a digression, from that moment, I observe, his whole work stands stock-still.

Sterne, Tristram Shandy, i. 22.

stock-stone (stok'stōn), n. A scouring-stone used in the stretching and smoothing of leather before currying.

stock-tackle (stok'tak'l), n. A tackle used in handling an anchor and rousing it up to secure it for sea: usually called a stock-and-bill tackle.

stock-taking (stok'tā'king), n. See to take stock, under stock<sup>1</sup>.

stock-train (stok'trān), n. A train of cars carrying cattle; a cattle-train. [U. S.]

stock-whaup (stok'hwāp), n. The curlew, Numenius arquata: the whaup.

stockwork (stok'wérk), n. [< stock<sup>1</sup> + work; tr. G. stockwerk.] In mining, that kind of ore-deposit in which the ore is pretty generally or uniformly distributed through a large mass of rock, so that the excavations are not limited to a certain narrow zone, as they are in the case of an ordinary fissure-vein. This mode of occurrence is almost exclusively limited to, and very characteristic of, stanniferous deposits, and the word is used especially in describing those of the Erzgebirge. Also called stockwerk (the German name).

The name of interlaced masses, or stockworks, is given to masses of igneous rock penetrated by a great number of little veins of metallic ores which cross in various ways.

Callon, Mining (tr. by Le Neve Foster and Galloway), i. 47.

The stockwerk consists of a series of small veins, interlacing with each other and ramifying through a certain portion of the rock.

J. D. Whitney, Met. Wealth of the U. S., p. 39.

stocky (stok'i), a. [< stock<sup>1</sup> + -y<sup>1</sup>. Cf. stogy.] 1. Short and stout; stumpy; stock-like.

They had no titles of honour among them but such as denoted some bodily strength or perfection: as, such a one "the tall," such a one "the stocky," such a one "the gruff."

Addison, Spectator, No. 433.

2. In zoöl., of stout or thick-set form; stout-bodied.—3. In bot., having a strong, stout stem, not spindling.

Stocky plants, vigorous, and growing rapidly, are better than simply early plants.

Science, XIV. 364.

4. Headstrong; stubborn. [Prov. Eng.]

stock-yard (stok'yārd), n. An inclosure connected with a railroad, or a slaughter-house, or a market, etc., for the distribution, sorting, sale, or temporary keeping of cattle, swine, sheep, and horses. Such yards are often of great size, and are arranged with pens, sheds, stables, conveniences for feeding, etc.

stodgy (stoj'i), a. [Assimilated form of stogy, ult. of stocky.] 1. Heavy; lumpy; distended. [Colloq., Eng.]

"Maggie," said Tom, . . . "you don't know what I've got in my pockets." . . . "No," said Maggie. "How stodgy they look, Tom! Is it marls or cobnuts?"

George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, i. 5.

2. Crammed together roughly; lumpy; crude and indigestible. [Colloq., Eng.]

The book has too much the character of a stodgy summary of facts.

Saturday Rev.

3. Wet; miry. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

stœchiology, stœchiometrical, etc. Same as stoicheiology, etc.

stog (stog), v.; pret. and pp. stogged, ppr. stogging. [*< stog, n.; ult. a var. of stock<sup>1</sup>, v. Cf. stodge, *v.] 1. To plunge a stick down through (the soil), in order to ascertain its depth; probe (a pool or marsh) with a pole. [Scotch.]-2. To plunge and fix in mire; stall in mud; mire. [Colloq., Eng.]

It was among the ways of good Queen Bess, Who ruled as well as mortal ever can, sir, When she was stoggd, and the country in a mess, She was wont to send for a Devon man, sir, West Country song, quoted in Kingsley's Westward Ho, x.

II. intrans. To plant the feet slowly and cautiously in walking. Jamieson. [Scotch.] stogy (stō'gi), a. and n. [< stog + -y. Cf. stodgy, stocky.] I. a. Rough; coarse; heavy: as, stogy shoes; a stogy cigar.

One of his legs, ending in a stogy boot, was braced out in front of him. The Century, XXXVI. 88.

II. n.; pl. stogies (-giz). 1. A rough, heavy shoe.—2. A long, coarse cigar.

stoic (stō'ik), a. and n. [Formerly also stoick; = F. stoïque = Sp. estóico = Pg. estoico = It. stoico, < L. stoicus, < Gr. στωικός, pertaining to a porch or portico, specifically pertaining to that called Στωά Ποικίλη, 'the Painted Porch' in the Agora at Athens, and to the school of philosophy founded by Zeno, who frequented this porch.] I. a. [cap.] Pertaining to the Stoics, or to their teaching: as, a Stoic philosopher; the Stoic doctrine; hence, manifesting indifference to pleasure or pain (compare stoical).

II. n. 1. [cap.] A disciple of the philosopher Zeno, who founded a sect about 308 B. C. He taught that men should be free from passion, unmoved by joy or grief, and submit without complaint to the unavoidable necessity by which all things are governed. The Stoics are proverbially known for the sternness and austerity of their ethical doctrines, and for the influence which their tenets exercised over some of the noblest spirits of antiquity, especially among the Romans. Their system appears to have been an attempt to reconcile a theological pantheism and a materialist psychology with a logic which seeks the foundations of knowledge in the representations or perceptions of the senses, and a morality which claims as its first principle the absolute freedom of the human will. The Stoics teach that whatever is real is material; matter and force are the two ultimate principles; matter is of itself motionless and unformed, though capable of receiving all motions and all forms. Force is the active, moving, and molding principle, and is inseparably joined with matter; the working force in the universe is God, whose existence as a wise thinking being is proved by the beauty and adaptation of the world. The supreme end of life, or the highest good, is virtue—that is, a life conformed to nature, the agreement of human conduct with the all-controlling law of nature, or of the human will with the divine will, not contemplation, but action, is the supreme problem for man; virtue is sufficient for happiness, but happiness or pleasure should never be made the end of human endeavor. The wise man alone attains to the complete performance of his duty, he is without passion, although not without feeling, he is not indulgent, but just toward himself and others, he alone is free, he is king and lord, and is inferior in nothing worth to no other rational being, not even to Zeus himself.

Certain philosophers of the Epicureans and of the Stoics encountered him. Acts xvii. 18.

Hence.—2. A person not easily excited; one who appears or professes to be indifferent to pleasure or pain; one who exhibits calm fortitude.

Hint-hearted Stoics, you, whose marble eyes Contain a wrinkle, and whose souls despise
To follow nature's too affected fashion.

Quarles, Emblems, II. 1.

School of the Stoics, the Porch—See porch. stoical (stō'ik-al), a. [< stoic + -al.] Of, pertaining to, or characteristic of the Stoics; hence, manifesting or maintaining indifference to pleasure or pain; exhibiting or proceeding from calm fortitude: as, stoical indifference.

It is a common imputation to Seneca that, though he declaimed with so much strength of reason, and a stoical contempt of riches and power, he was at the same time one of the richest and most powerful men in Rome.

Steele, Tatler, No. 170.

Stoical ethics. See Stoic, n. 1. stoically (stō'ik-al-i), adv. In the manner of the Stoics, or of a stoic; without apparent feeling or sensibility; with indifference to pleasure or pain; with calm fortitude.

stoicalness (stō'ik-al-nes), n. The state of being stoical; indifference to pleasure or pain; calm fortitude.

stoicheiology (stōi-kī-ol'ō-jī), n. [Also stoichiology, and more prop. stachiology; < Gr. στοιχειον, a small post, also a first principle (dim. of στοιχος, a row, rank, < στέλλω, go in line or order: see stich), + -λογία, < λόγος, speak: see -ology.] A division of a science which treats of the nature of the different kinds of objects that science deals with, but not of the manner in which they are associated with one another; the doctrine of elements.

The conditions of mere thinking are given in certain elementary requisites; and that part of logic which analyzes and considers these may be called its stoicheiology, or doctrine of elements. . . . Logical stoicheiology, or the doctrine conversant about the elementary requisites of mere thought. . . . In its stoicheiology, or doctrine of elements, logic considers the conditions of possible thought.

Sir W. Hamilton, Logic, IV., xxiv.

stoicheiometrical (stōi'kī-ō-met'ri-kal), a. [Also starchiometrical; < stoicheiometry + -ic-al.] Pertaining to stoicheiometry.

stoicheiometry (stōi-kī-om'ē-trī), n. [Also starchiometry; < Gr. στοιχειον, a first principle, +

μέτρον, a measure: see meter.] The science of calculating the quantities of chemical elements involved in chemical reactions or processes.

Stoicant, n. [ME. stoicien; as Stoic + -ian.] A Stoic. Chaucer, Boethius, v. meter 4.

stoicism (stō'i-sizm), n. [= F. stoïcisme; as stoic + -ism.] 1. [cap.] The opinions and maxims of the Stoics; also, the conduct recommended by the Stoics.—2. A real or pretended indifference to pleasure or pain; the bearing of pain without betraying feeling; calm fortitude.

He [Nuncomar] had just parted from those who were most nearly connected with him. Their cries and contortions had appalled the European ministers of justice, but had not produced the smallest effect on the iron stoicism of the prisoner. Macaulay, Warren Hastings.

= Syn. 2. Insensibility, Impassibility, etc. See apathy. stoicity (stō-is'i-ti), n. [< stoic + -ity.] Stoicalness; stoical indifference. B. Jonson, Epicoene, I. 1.

stoit (stoit), v. i. [A dial. var. of stof.] 1. To walk in a staggering way; totter; stumble on any object. [Scotch.].—2. To leap from the water, as certain fish. Day. [Prov. Eng.]

stoiter (stōi'tēr), v. i. [A dial. var. of stotter.] Same as stoit.

stoke<sup>1</sup>, v. t. and i. [< ME. stoken, < OF. cstoquer (= It. stoccare), stab, thrust, < estoc, a rapier, stock: see stock<sup>2</sup>, stoccade.] To pierce; stick; thrust.

Ne short sward for to stoke with point bytynge. Chaucer, Knight's Tale, I. 1688.

stoke<sup>2</sup> (stōk), v., pret. and pp. stoked, ppr. stoking. [< stoker, taken as an E. noun, < stoke + -er], but appar. < D. stoker, < stoken, kindle a fire, incite, instigate, < MD. stock, D. stok, a stick, stock, rapier: see stock<sup>1</sup>. Cf. stoke<sup>1</sup>.] I. trans. To poke, stir up, and maintain the fire in (a furnace, especially one used with a boiler for the generation of steam for an engine); supply with fuel; trim and maintain combustion in.

Much skill is needed to stoke the furnace of a steam-boiler successfully, and one stoker will often be able to keep the steam up all when another of equal strength and diligence will fail altogether.

Brande and Cox, Diet. Sci., Lit., and Art.

Cold stoking, in glass-making, the process of lowering the temperature of the oven until the glass attains the tough fluid consistency necessary for blowing.

II. intrans. To attend to and supply a furnace with fuel; act as a stoker or fireman.

stoke-hole (stōk'hōl), n. The compartment of a steamer in which the furnace-fires are worked: in the United States called fire-room.

stoker (stō'ker), n. [< D. stoker, one who kindles or sets on fire, < stoken, kindle a fire, stir a fire, < stok, a stock, stick (hence a poker for a fire): see stock<sup>1</sup>, and cf. stok<sup>2</sup>.] 1. One who attends to and maintains suitable combustion in a furnace, especially a furnace used in generating steam, as on a locomotive or steamship; a fireman.—2. A poker. [Rare.]—Mechanical stoker, an automatic device for feeding fuel to a furnace, and for keeping the grate free from ashes and clinkers. Many such machines have been invented. Endless aprons or chains, or revolving toothed rollers, are common feeders, distributing the coal to the grate in definite quantity as needed, while shaking grates, revolving grate-bars, and special bars called picker bars, with teeth working in the air-spaces of the grate, are employed for the discharge of ashes and clinkers.

Stokesia (stō-kō'si-i), n. [NL. (L'Héritier, 1788), named after Dr. Jonathan Stokes (1755-1831), a British botanist.] A genus of composite plants, of the tribe Fernoneae, subtribe Eueroneae, and series Stalpinopappae.

It is characterized by large stalked heads of blue flowers, with smooth three- or four-angled achenes and a pappus of four or five long bristles. The corollas, unlike the tubular type otherwise prevalent in the tribe, are flattened above the middle and somewhat ligulate, and toward the outside of the head, by their increased size and deeply five-part border, they suggest the tribe Cichoriaceae. The only species, S. cyanus, is a native of the southern United States near the Gulf of Mexico, a rare plant of wet pine-barrens. It is an erect shrub, clad above with loose wool and alternate clasping leaves, and bearing petioled leaves below, which are entire or spiny-fringed. The handsome blue flowers form large terminal heads which are purplish in the Roman Woman Clad in the Stola (over which is draped the palla).

bud, resemble those of the China aster, and are grown in large quantities for the London market, under the name of Stokes's aster.

stola (stō'lā), n.; pl. stolæ (-lē). [L. : see stolec.] An ample outer tunic or dress worn by Roman women over the under-tunic or chemise: it fell as low as the ankles or feet, and was gathered in around the waist by a girdle. It was a characteristic garment of the Roman matrons, as the toga was of the men, and divorced women and courtesans were not permitted to wear it. See cut in preceding column.

stole<sup>1</sup> (stōl). Preterit and obsolete past participle of steal<sup>1</sup>.

stole<sup>2</sup> (stōl), n. [< ME. stole, stool, < OF. cstole, F. stole = Sp. Pg. cstola = It. stola, < L. stola, a stola, robe, stole, < Gr. στήλη, a long robe; orig., in a gen. sense, dress, equipment, sacerdotal vestment or vestments; < στέλλω, set, array, despatch: see stell.] 1. A stola, or any garment of similar nature.

Forsoth the fadir scyde to his seruautis, Soone brynge ge forth the first stole, and clothe ge him.

Wyclif, Luke xv. 22.

Behind, four priests, in sable stole,

Sung requiem for the warrior's soul.

Scott, I. of L. M., v. 30.

2. In the Roman Catholic, Oriental, and Anglican churches, an ecclesiastical vestment, consisting of a narrow strip of silk or other material, worn over the shoulders (by deacons over one shoulder) and hanging down in front to the knees or below them. It is widened and fringed at the ends, and usually has a cross embroidered on it at the middle and at each extremity. Stoles are worn of different colors, according to the ecclesiastical season. When celebrating the eucharist a priest wears his stole crossed upon the breast and secured by the girdle, at other times simply pendent from the shoulders. A bishop, on account of his pectoral cross, wears it pendent even when celebrating. A deacon wears it over the left shoulder and tied on the right side. In the Greek Church the stole has been worn since early times in two different forms, the deacon's (orarion) and the priest's (epitrachelion). Originally the stole was of linen, and probably was a napkin or cloth indicative of ministering at the altar and at agape. The pall or omophorion is of entirely distinct origin. See orarium.

Forth comth the preest with stole aboute his nekke,

And had hire be lyke to Sarra and Rebecke

In wysdom and in trouthe of marlage.

Chaucer, Merchant's Tale, I. 450.

3. A chorister's surplice or cotta: an occasional erroneous use.

Six little Singing-boys—dear little souls—

In nice clean faces, and nice white stoles,

Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 210.

4. In her., usually, a bearing representing a scarf with straight and parallel sides, fringed at each end.—Groom of the stole, the first lord of the bed-chamber in the household of an English king.—Order of the Golden Stole, a Venetian order, the badge of which was a stole of cloth of gold worn over the robes. It disappeared with the independence of the republic of Venice.—Stole-fee, a fee paid to a priest for religious or ecclesiastical service, as for marriages, christenings, and funerals.

stole<sup>3</sup> (stōl), n. Same as stolon.

stole<sup>4</sup>, n. An obsolete form of stool.

stoled (stōld), a. [< stole<sup>2</sup> + -ed.] Wearing a stole. G. Fletcher, Christ's Triumph After Death.

stolen (stō'ln), p. a. [Pp. of steal<sup>1</sup>.] Obtained or acquired by stealth or theft: as, stolen goods.

Stolen waters are sweet.

Prov. ix. 17.

Stolephoridae (stol-e-for'i-dē), n. pl. [NL. < Stolephorus + -idae.] A family of malacoptyergian fishes, typified by the genus Stolephorus; the anchovies. The body is oblong or elongate; the snout is produced forward; the mouth is very large and inferior; the maxillaries are very narrow, and project backward; the dorsal fin is submedian and short; the anal fin is rather long; the pectorals are normal; and the ventrals are abdominal, but further advanced than usual, and of moderate size. There is no lateral line, but along the sides is generally developed a broad silvery band, to which the typical genus owes its name. The species are mostly of small size, rarely exceeding 6 inches, and often less. About 70 are known, some inhabiting almost all tropical and temperate seas. Engraulididae is a synonym.

stolephoroid (stō-lef'ō-roid), n. and a. [< Stolephorus + -oid.] 1. n. A fish of the family Stolephoridae.

II. a. Of, or having characters of, the Stolephoridae.

Stolephorus (stō-lef'ō-rus), n. [NL. (Lacépède, 1803), < Gr. στήλη, a stole, + φέρω = E. bear.] A genus of fishes, related to the herrings, but with a produced snout, and a broad silvery band which has been compared to the white stole or band worn by priests, typical of the family Stolephoridae (or Engraulididae). The common anchovy is S. enersicholus. There are several others, as S. bionini, from Cape Cod to Brazil, abounding southward; S. ringens, from Vancouver Island to Peru, a large anchovy; S. delicatissimus and S. compressus, of the Californian and Mexican coasts, the latter locally known as sprat (see sprat<sup>2</sup>,

Stolephorus

5959

stomach

2 (c). This genus has been oftener called Engraulis. See cut under anchovy.
stolid (stol'id), a. [= Sp. estolido = Pg. estolido = It. stolido, < L. stolidus, unmovable, slow, dull, stupid; prob. akin to Gr. στερεός.] Heavy; dull; stupid; not easily moved; lacking in or destitute of susceptibility; denoting dullness or impassiveness: as, a stolid person; a stolid appearance.

Int the stolid calm of the Indian alone Remains where the trace of emotion has been.
 Whittier, Moss Megon, l.

=Syn. Doltish, wooden.
stolidity (stol'id-i-ti), n. [= It. stolidità, < L. stoliditas (f.), dullness, stupidity, < L. stolidus, dull, stupid: see stolid.] The state or character of being stolid; dullness; stupidity.

These certainly are the fools in the text, indocile, intractable fools, whose stolidity can baffle all arguments, and be proof against demonstration itself.

=Syn. See stolid.
stolidly (stol'id-li), adv. In a stolid manner: as, to gaze stolidly at one. Bailey.

stolidness (stol'id-nes), n. Stolidity.
stolo (stō'lō), n.; pl. stolones (stō-lō'nēz). [L.: see stolon.] In zoöl., a stolon.—Stolo prolifer, the proliferating stolon of some animals, as certain ascidians; a germ-stock. See stolon, 2 (c).

stolon (stō'lon), n. [NL., < L. stolo (n-), a shoot, branch, sucker.] 1. In bot.: (a) In phanerogams, a reclined or prostrate branch which strikes root at the tip, developing a new plant.

Carex vulpary, var. stolonifera, showing the stolon.

A very slender naked stolon with a bud at the end constitutes a runner, as of the strawberry. See also cut under Solidago. (b) In mosses, a shoot running along or under the ground, and eventually rising into the air and producing fully leafed shoots. Goebel.—2. In zoöl., some proliferated part or structure, likened to the stolon of a plant, connecting different parts or persons of a compound or complex organism, and usually giving rise to new zooids by the process of budding. See cuts under Campanularia and Willsia. (a) A process of protoplasm between the different compartments of a multicellular foraminifer. (b) The procumbent, adherent, or creeping basal section of the stock of some social infusorians. (c) One of the prolongations of the ctenophore of some actinozoans. (d) The second stage of the embryo of some hydrozoans. (e) The germ-stock or prolongation of the tunica of some compound ascidians, as a salp; a stolo prolifer. See cuts under Salpa and Cyathozoid.

Also stole.
stolonate (stō'lon-āt), a. [ < stolon + -ate.] In zoöl., giving rise to or provided with a stolon or stolons; originating in a stolon; stoloniferous.

stoloniferous (stō-lō-nif'e-rus), a. [ < L. stolo (n-), a shoot, sucker, + ferre, bear, carry: see -ferous.] Producing or bearing stolons; proliferating, as an ascidian or a hydroid; stolonate.

stolzite (stol'zit), n. [Named after Dr. Stolz of Teplitz in Bohemia.] Native lead tungstate, a mineral occurring in tetragonal crystals of a green, brown, or red color, and resinous or subadamantine luster. Sometimes called scheelite.

stoma (stō'mā), n.; pl. stomata (-mā-tā). [NL., < Gr. στόμα (stōma), pl. στόματα, the mouth, a mouth, opening, entrance or outlet, a chasm, cleft, etc., the face, front, fore part, etc.; = Zend staman, mouth. Cf. stomach, from the same source.] 1. In zoöl., a mouth or ingestive opening; an oral orifice; an ostium or ostiole: chiefly used of small or simple apertures, as a cytostome; hence, also, a small opening of any kind through which something may pass in or out; a pore. Specifically—(a) An opening of a lymphatic vessel; a lymphatic pore or orifice, as an interstice between the cells of a serous membrane. (b) The outer opening of a trachea or air-tube of an insect; a spiracle or breathing-hole. (c) A branchial pore of an ascidian or acranial vertebrate.

2. In bot., a minute orifice or slit in the epidermis of leaves, etc., which opens directly into air-cavities or intercellular spaces that pervade the interior, and through which free ingress and egress of air take place; a breathing-pore. The apparatus of the stoma consists usually of a pair of cells (there are several in the Equisetaceae, Hepaticaceae, etc.), called guard-cells or guardian-cells, between the opposed concave sides of which lies the slit or opening, which extends through the whole height of the epidermis and permits free communication between the intercellular spaces and the external air. According to Van Tieghem, the stomata are always open in sunlight and closed in darkness.

1. Strobilanthes Safraniensis. 2. Codium variegatum. 3. Limncharis Plumieri. a, Stomata. (Magnified.)

the difference in thickness of the parts of the walls. When the turgescence of the guard cells increases, they curve more strongly, and consequently the cleft widens; but with decrease, turgescence the cleft becomes narrower. See also cut under iris.

3. In Swedenborg's philosophy, a cubical figure with hollowed surfaces, being the figure of the interstices of spheres arranged in what Swedenborg calls the fixed quadrilateral pyramidal position, supposed to be that natural to the spherical particles of water.

stomacace (stō-mak'ā-sē), n. [NL., < L. stomacace, < Gr. στομακή, a disease of the mouth, scurvy of the gums, < στόμα, mouth, + κάκη, badness, < καός, bad.] Ulcerous stomatitis. See stomatitis.
stomach (stum'ak), n. [Now conformed terminally to the L. spelling, but pron. according to its ME. origin; early mod. E. stomack, stomacke, stomak, stomake; < ME. stomak, stomake, stomok, < OF. estomac, estomach, F. estomac = Pr. estomach = Sp. estómago = Pg. estômago = It. stomaco, the stomach, < L. stomachus, the throat, gullet, also the stomach, fig. taste, liking, also distaste, dislike, irritation, chagrin, < Gr. στόμαχος, the throat, gullet, the orifice of the stomach, hence also the stomach, lit. (as shown also in other uses, the neck of the bladder or of the uterus, etc.) a mouth or opening, < στόμα, mouth, opening: see stoma.] 14. The throat; the gullet; the mouth.

Spitful tongues in cankered stomachs placed.
Raleigh. (Imp. Dict.)

2. A more or less sac-like part of the body where food is digested. In the lowest animals any part of the sarcode or protoplasmic substance of the body is capable of digesting food, and forms during the process a temporary stomach, as in an amoeba. In many infusorial animals special vacuoles containing food are formed. These are inconstant both in number and in position, whence Ehrenberg's name, Polygastrica, for these organisms. In the highest protozoans, which have a definite oral or ingestive area, there is likewise a more or less fixed digestive tract, constituting a stomach. A few of the metazoans have no true digestion, and consequently no stomach; such are the parenchymatous or anenterous worms, which imbibe or soak in nutriment already elaborated in the tissues of the host of which they are parasites. But the vast majority of animals above the protozoans have an intestinal digestive tract the whole or a part of which may properly be called a stomach. In most of these, again, a definite stomach exists as a specialized, usually dilated, part of the alimentary canal, in which food is subjected to a certain degree of digestion subsequent to mastication and insalivation and prior to further digestive changes which go on in the intestine. Among vertebrates more than one section of the alimentary canal is called a stomach, and many vertebrates have more than one. Thus, in birds there are a true glandular stomach, the proventriculus, in which the esophagus ends, and a muscular or grinding stomach, the gizzard or gizzardum. In mammals the stomach always extends from the end of the gullet to the beginning of the gut. It is of extremely variable size and shape. Kinds of mammalian stomachs sometimes distinguished are the simple, as in man, the carnivores, etc.; the complex or plurilocular stomach, as in various marsupials, rodents, some monkeys, etc.; and the compound or pliaripartite. The last is confined to the ruminants. (See Ruminantia.) In man the stomach is the most dilated and most distensible part of the alimentary canal. It occupies parts of the left hypochondriac and epigastric regions of the abdomen, immediately within the abdominal walls, below the diaphragm and partly under the liver, to the right of the spleen, and above the transverse colon. In form it is irregularly conoidal, and curved upon itself. When moderately distended, it is about 12 inches long and 4 wide; it weighs 3 or 4 ounces. But the size, shape, and hence the anatomical relations, vary greatly in different individuals and in different states of distention. It begins where the gullet ends, at the esophageal or cardiac orifice, and ends at the pyloric orifice, where the duodenum begins. From the cardiac orifice the stomach bulges to the left in a great cul-de-sac, the fundus cardiacus, or cardiac end, in contact with the spleen, and from this greatest caliber the organ lessens in diameter with a sweep to the right.

Human Stomach and Beginning of Intestine, laid open to show rugae.

The lesser curvature or short border of the stomach, between the cardiac and pyloric orifices, is uppermost, and is connected with the liver by the lesser or gastrohepatic omentum. The greater curvature or long border of the stomach is opposite the other, between the same two points, and gives attachment to the great or gastrocolic omentum. These two curvatures separate the anterior and posterior surfaces. The stomach is held in place by folds of peritoneum, the gastrocolic, gastrohepatic, gastrosplenic, and gastrophrenic omenta, the last of which gives it most fixity. The arteries of the stomach are the gastric (a branch from the celiac axis), the pyloric and right gastro-epiploic branches of the hepatic, the left gastro-epiploic, and short branches from the splenic artery. The veins end in the splenic, superior mesenteric, and portal veins. The numerous lymphatics consist of a deep set and a superficial set. The nerves are the terminal branches of both pneumogastrics and many branches from the sympathetic system. The coats of the stomach are four—serous, muscular, submucous, and mucous. The serous layer is the peritoneum, which covers the whole organ on both its surfaces, and is reflected away from it along each of its curvatures. The muscular coat includes three sets of fibers—longitudinal, circular, and oblique, the last chiefly limited to the cardia. The submucous coat is simply the connective tissue between the muscular layer and the mucous membrane lining the stomach. This mucous membrane is the so-called "coat" of the stomach. It is thick, pinkish, reddish, or brownish, with a soft velvety surface, thrown into longitudinal folds or rugae when the organ is contracted. Studding the surface of the mucous membrane are numberless depressions or alveoli of polygonal tendency to hexagonal form,  $\frac{1}{16}$  to  $\frac{1}{8}$  of an inch in diameter; these are the enlarged mouths of the tubular gastric glands, which secrete the gastric juice by the action of which gastric digestion is effected. Two kinds of these follicles are distinguished by their microscopic structure—the pyloric and the cardiac. The former are found chiefly at and near the pyloric end, the latter most typical at the cardiac, and there are intermediate forms in intermediate regions. The epithelium lining the mucous membrane and its alveoli is of the kind called columnar. Besides the four coats above described, a fifth, a layer of involuntary muscular fibers between the mucous membrane and the submucous layer, is distinguished as the mucularis mucosae. The digestive activity of the stomach is intermittent, and depends upon the stimulus which the presence of food occasions. The muscular arrangement is such that food is continually rolled about, so that every part of the mass is submitted to the action of the gastric juice. In the stomach the proteids are converted into albumins and peptones by the pepsin, milk is curdled by the rennet-ferment, the gelatiniferous tissues are dissolved, and other less important changes are effected. See also cuts under Alimentary, Asteroides, Appendicularia, Dibranchata, Doliolidae, intestine, peritoneum, Plumatella, pluteus, Protos, Pulmonata, Pycnogonida, Ruminantia, Salpa, Tragulus, and Tunicata.

3. The digestive person or alimentary zooid of a compound polyp. See Gasterozooid.—4. In most insects of the orders Lepidoptera, Diptera, and some Hymenoptera, a bladder-like expansion of the esophagus, which can be dilated at the will of the insect; the sucking-stomach, by means of which the nectar of flowers or other liquid is sucked up, as water is drawn into a syringe. In mandibulate insects the ingulvis or crop takes the place of the sucking-stomach, and nearly all insects have two true stomachs, called proventriculus and ventriculus.

5. Appetite; desire or relish for food: as, to have a good stomach for one's meals.

The body is as so rely and penible
 To wake, that my stomak is destroyed.
Chaucer, Summoner's Tale, l. 139.

Pray, sent you, lords; we'll bear you company,
 But with small stomach to taste my food.
Beau. and Fl. O, Faithful Friends, iii. 2.

I'll make as bold with your meat; for the trot has got me a good stomach.
Cotton, in Walton's Angler, ii. 234.

In some countries, where men and women have good travelling stomachs, they begin with porridge, then they fall to capon, or so forth, but if capon come short of filling their bellies, to their porridge again, 'tis their only course.
Webster and Dekker, Northward Hoe, i. 1.

Hence—6. Relish; taste; inclination; liking: as, to have no stomach for controversy.

He also hath told me moche oof liss stomake and tendre faver that he owyth to yow.
Paston Letters, III. 160.

Finding that the citizens had apparently no stomach for the fight, he removed his trophies, and took his departure.
Motley, Dutch Republic, II. 66.

7. Disposition. (a) Spirit; temper; heart.

Though I be not worthy to receive any favor at the hands of your maistership, yet is your excellent herte and noble stomake worthy to shewe favour.

Udall, in Ellis's Lit. Letters, p. 4.

This was no small Magnanimity in the King, that he was able to pull down the high Stomachs of the Prelates in that time.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 50.

(b) Compassion; pity.

Nere myn extorcious I myghte nat lyven,
Nor of swiche japes wol I nat be shryven,
Stomak ne conscience ne knowe I noon.

Chaucer, Friar's Tale, l. 143.

(c) Courage; spirit.

For in them, as men of stowter stomaches, bolder spirits, and manlyer courages then handycraftes men and plowmen be, doth consiste the whole powre, strength, and puissance of oure army, when we muste fight in battayle.

Sir T. More, Utopia, tr. by Robinson, p. 39.

(d) Pride; haughtiness; conceit.

He was a man
Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking Himself with princes.

Shak., Ilen. VIII., iv. 2. 34.

(e) Spleen; anger; cholery; resentment; sullenness.

From that time King Richard, moov'd in stomacke against King Philip, neuer shewed any gentle countenance of peace & amitie.

Hakluyt's Voyages, II. 23.

Many learned men have writen, with moch diuersitie for the matter, and therfore with great contrarietie and some stomacke amongst them selues

Ascham, The Scholemaster, p. 123.

Which might teach these times not suddenly to condemn all things that are sharply spoken, or vehemently writen, as proceeding out of stomach, virulence, and ill nature.

Milton, Church-Government, II., Int.

Circulating stomach, one of the temporary food-vacuoles of an infusorian or other protozoan, which moves about with a kind of cyclosis. See Polygastrica. — Frigidity of the stomach, a state of gastric debility formerly considered to depend on sexual excesses. — Fullness of the stomach, a feeling of weight or distention in the epigastric region. — Glandular stomach. See proventriculus. — Hypogenesis of the stomach, unnatural smallness of the stomach, seen in some children. — Masticatory stomach. See masticatory. — Muscular stomach. See muscular and gizzard. — Pit of the stomach, the depression just below the sternum: same as epigastrium, 1. Also called infrasternal fossa, cerabedulus cordis, and anticardium. — Proud stomach, a haughty disposition. Compare def. 7.

Truths whilk are as unwelcome to a proud stomach as wet clover to a cow's

Scott, Pirate, xviii.

Rugæ of the stomach, folds of the mucous membrane, present when the organ is contracted, and extending for the most part in a longitudinal direction. See cut in def. 2. — Sour stomach, that condition of the stomach which causes acid eructations. — Sucking-stomach. See def. 4.

To stay the stomach. See stay.
Stomach (stum'ak), v. [= OF. estomaquer = Sp. Pg. estomagar = It. stomacare, disgust, refl. feel disgust, < L. stomachari, feel disgust, be angry, < stomachus, distaste, dislike, stomach: see stomach, n.] I. trans. 1†. To encourage; hearten.

When he had stomached them by the Holy Ghost to shoot forth his word without fear, he went forward with them by his grace, conquering in them the prince of this world.

Ep. Bale, Select Works (Parker Soc.), p. 313.

2†. To hate; resent; remember or regard with anger or resentment.

If that any stomach this my deed,
Alphonius can revenge thy wrong with speed.

Greene, Alphonius, III.

A plague on them all for me! . . . O, I do stomach them hugely.

R. Jonson, Every Man in his Humour, III. 2.

3. To put up with; bear without open resentment or opposition: as, to stomach an affront.

"The priests talk," said he, "of absolution in such terms that laymen can not stomach it."

Motley, Dutch Republic, I. 76.

4. To turn the stomach of; disgust. [Rare.]

It is not because the restaurants are very dirty — if you wipe your plate and glass carefully before using them, they need not stomach you.

Hawells, Venetian Life, vi.

II.† intrans. To be or become angry.

What one among them commonly doth not stomach at such contradiction?

Hooker.

Stomachal (stum'ak-al), a. and n. [= F. stomacal = Sp. Pg. estomacal = It. stomacale, < NL. stomachalis, < L. stomachus, stomach: see stomach.] I. a. 1. Of or pertaining to the stomach; gastric: as, stomachal tubes.

The body-wall, which encloses the stomachal cavity.

Gegenbaur, Comp. Anat. (trans.), p. 92.

2. Relating to the stomach, or to a region of the body which contains the stomach; gastric; epigastric; abdominal; ventral: as, the stomachal part of a crab's carapace. — 3. Remedial of a disordered stomach; peptic or digestive; cordial; stomachic. — Stomachal teeth, sharp, horny processes of the lining of the proventriculus, and sometimes of other parts of the alimentary canal, found in many insects and crustaceans, and serving for the comminution of food.

II. trans. 1. Of or pertaining to a region of the body which contains the stomach; gastric; epigastric; abdominal; ventral: as, the stomachal part of a crab's carapace. — 3. Remedial of a disordered stomach; peptic or digestive; cordial; stomachic. — Stomachal teeth, sharp, horny processes of the lining of the proventriculus, and sometimes of other parts of the alimentary canal, found in many insects and crustaceans, and serving for the comminution of food.

stomach-animalst (stum'ak-an'i-malz), n. pl. The Infusoria. See Polygastrica. Oken.

stomach-brush (stum'ak-brush), n. A brush designed to be introduced into the stomach, by way of the esophagus, to stimulate secretion.

stomach-cough (stum'ak-kôf), n. A form of reflex cough excited by irritation of the stomach or small intestine.

stomacher (stum'ak-ër), n. [< stomach, v., + -er<sup>1</sup>.] 1. One who stomachs, in any sense of the word. — 2†. A stomachic; an appetizer.

In Sir Kenelm Digby's "Choice and Experimental Receipts in Physick and Chirurgery" (London, 1676) I find a preparation of herbs for external application with this heading: "To strengthen the stomach use the following stomacher."

N. and Q., 7th ser., IV. 173.

3. A part of the dress covering the front of the body, generally forming the lower part of the bodice in front and usually projecting down into the skirt or lapping over it — the name being given to the whole front piece covering the pit of the stomach and the breast. In some fashions the stomacher was richly embroidered, and ornamented with jewels, as in Europe in the sixteenth century.

Less fashionable ladles, between 1615 and 1625, discarded the tight and pointed stomacher and farthingale, and wore, over an easy jerkin and ample petticoat, a loose gown open in front, made high to meet the ruff.

Encyc. Brit., VI. 473.

4. A plaque or brooch, usually large, the name being derived from that part of the dress upon which the brooch was worn. J. B. Atkinson, Art Jour. (1867), p. 203.

stomachful (stum'ak-fûl), a. [Early mod. E. also stomackfull; < stomach + -ful.] Full of stomach or wilfulness; proud; spirited; wilful; perverse; stubborn; sturdy.

From all those Tartars he hath had an Army of an hundred and twenty thousand excellent, swift, stomackfull Tartarian horse.

Capt. John Smith, True Travels, I. 39.

Nay, if I had but any body to stand by me, I am as stomachful as another.

Wickertley, Plain Dealer, III. 1.

stomachfully (stum'ak-fûl-i), adv. In a stomachful, or perverse or wilful, manner; stubbornly; perversely. Bp. Hall, The Golden Calf.
stomachfulness (stum'ak-fûl-nês), n. Stubbornness; perverseness; wilfulness.

Pride, stomachfulness, headliness — avail but little.

Granger, On Eccles. (1621), p. 218.

stomach-grief (stum'ak-grêf), n. Anger.

Stomacke grief is when we will take the matter as hot as a toste. We neede no examples for this matter, hot men have to many.

Sir T. Wilson, Art of Rhetoric.

stomachic (stô-mak'ik), a. and n. [= F. stomachique = Sp. estomático = Pg. estomachico = It. stomachico, < L. stomachicus, < Gr. στωμαχικός, pertaining to the stomach, < στώμαχος, the stomach: see stomach.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the stomach. (a) Stomachic; gastric: as, stomachic vessels or nerves. (b) Specifically, sharpening the appetite, and stimulating gastric digestion. See stomachal, 3.

He [Boswell] was . . . gluttonously fond of whatever would yield him a little solacement, were it only of a stomachic character.

Carlyle, Boswell's Johnson.

Stomachic balsam, a mixture of balsam of Peru with oil of nutmeg and other volatile oils, as those of wormwood, cloves, mace, peppermint, orange-peel, and amber, made up in different proportions. — Stomachic calculus, a concretion, usually containing hair, found in the stomach, particularly of low or animals. See bezoar. — Stomachic fever, gastric fever. See fever.

II. n. A medicine which sharpens the appetite, and is supposed to stimulate digestion, as the bitter tonics; a stomachal.

stomachical (stô-mak'ik-al), a. [< stomachic + -al.] Same as stomachic. Wiseman, Surgery, I. 18.

stomaching (stum'ak-ing), n. [Verbal n. of stomach, v.] Resentment. Shak., A. and C., II. 2. 9.

stomachless (stum'ak-less), a. [Early mod. E. stomackless; < stomach + -less.] Lacking stomach; having no appetite. Bp. Hall, Bahn of Gilead, II. § 6.

stomachous (stum'ak-us), a. [< L. stomachosus, angry, choleric, < stomachus, distaste, dislike: see stomach.] Resentful; sullen; obstinate.

Young blood is hot; youth hasty; Ingenuity open; abuse impatient; cholier stomachous.

G. Harvey, Four Letters.

stomach-piece (stum'ak-pês), n. In ship-carp., same as apron, 3.

stomach-plaster (stum'ak-plâs'têr), n. See plaster.

stomach-pump (stum'ak-pump), n. A small pump or syringe used in medical practice for the purpose of emptying the stomach or of introducing liquids into it. It resembles the common syringe, except that it has two apertures near the end, in-

stomach-piece (stum'ak-pês), n. In ship-carp., same as apron, 3.

stomach-plaster (stum'ak-plâs'têr), n. See plaster.

stomach-pump (stum'ak-pump), n. A small pump or syringe used in medical practice for to constitute a sucking and a forcing passage. When the object is to empty the stomach, the pump is worked while its sucking orifice is in connection with a flexible tube passed into the stomach; and the extracted matter escapes by the forcing orifice. When, on the contrary, the object is to force a liquid into the stomach, the tube is connected with the forcing orifice, by which the action of the pump is reversed. It is now not much used, the stomach being emptied, when necessary, by the stomach-tube working as a siphon.

stomach-qualmed (stum'ak-kwâmd), a. Same as stomach-sick. Shak., Cymbeline, III. 4. 193.
stomach-sick (stum'ak-sik), a. Nauseated; qualmish; hence, having an aversion.

Receivung some hurt in his stomach by drinking those cold waters, he proued stomach-sick to his expedition also.

Purchase, Pilgrimage, p. 289.

stomach-staggers (stum'ak-stag'êrz), n. A disease in horses, depending on a paralytic affection of the stomach. The animal so affected dozes in the stable, resting his head in the manger; on awaking, or being aroused, he falls to eating, and continues to eat voraciously, death from apoplexy or repletion often resulting.

stomach-sweetbread (stum'ak-svêt'bred), n. The pancreas of the calf, as used for food: distinguished from the throat-sweetbread, or thymus gland of the same animal.

stomach-timber (stum'ak-tim'bêr), n. Same as belly-timber. [Slang.]

As Prior tells, a clever poet, . . .

The main strength of ev'ry member Depends upon the stomach timber.

Combe, Dr. Syntax's Tours, xxxiii.

stomach-tooth (stum'ak-tôth), n. A lower canine milk-tooth of infants: so called because there is often gastric disturbance at the time of its appearance.

stomach-tube (stum'ak-tûb), n. A long flexible tube to be introduced into the stomach, through the gullet, as for washing out the stomach.

stomach-worm (stum'ak-wêrm), n. A common intestinal roundworm, Ascaris lumbricoides, sometimes found in the human stomach.

stomachy (stum'ak-i), a. [< stomach + -y<sup>1</sup>.] Proud; haughty; irascible; easily offended. Hallivell. [Prov. Eng.]

stomack, stomakt, stomaket, n. Obsolete spellings of stomach.

stomapod (stô-mâ-pôd), a. and n. Same as stomatopod.

Stomatopoda (stô-map'ô-dî), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. στώμα, mouth, + ποδῖς (pod-) = E. foot.] Same as Stomatopoda. Latreille, 1817.

stomatopodiform (stô-mâ-pôd'i-fôrm), a. [< NL. Stomatopoda + L. forma, form.] Resembling or shaped like a stomatopod, especially of the genus Squilla. Applied in entomology to certain elongate, somewhat flattened larvae which have the abdomen wider than the thorax, long antennæ, and six legs, the anterior pair being large and raptorial. In aquatic species the body is furnished with lateral false gills. The larvae of Ephemera are examples of this form.

stomatopodous (stô-map'ô-dus), a. [< stomapod + -ous.] Same as stomatopod.

stomata, n. Plural of stoma.

stomatal (stô-mâ-tâl), a. [< NL. stoma(t-) + -al.] In bot. and zool., relating or belonging to stomata.

stomate (stô'mât), a. and n. [*< NL. *stomatus* for **stomatatus*, < stoma (stomat-), a stoma: see stoma.] I. a. Having a stoma or stomata; stomatous.

II. n. A stoma.

stomatia, n. Plural of stomatum.

stomatic (stô-mat'ik), a. and n. [= It. stomaticeo, < Gr. στωματικός, of or pertaining to the mouth, < στώμα (r-), mouth: see stoma.] I. a. In zool. and bot., of or pertaining to a stoma or stomata; oral.

II. n. A medicine for diseases of the mouth.
stomatiferous (stô-mâ-tif'ê-rus), a. [< NL. stoma(t-) + L. ferre, bear, carry: see -ferous.] Bearing or provided with stomata; stomatophorous.

stomatitis (stô-mâ-ti'tis), n. [NL., < Gr. στώμα (r-), mouth, + -itis.] Inflammation of the interior of the mouth, including the mucous membrane of the lips, gums, tongue, cheeks, and palate. — Aphthous stomatitis, inflammation of the mucous membrane of the mouth-cavity, consisting in the formation of small superficial ulcers. Also called aphthæ, canker sore mouth, follicular or vesicular stomatitis. — Catarrhal stomatitis, a simple local or general inflammation of the mucous membrane of the mouth-cavity. Also called oral catarrh, erythema of the mouth, and erythematous, simple, and superficial stomatitis. — Gangrenous stomatitis. See nomia. — Mercurial stomatitis, an inflammation of the mucous membrane of the mouth, with ulceration, caused by mercurial poisoning. — Parasitic stomatitis, inflammation of the mouth due to or complicated with the growth on the mucous membrane of Odium, the formation of small superficial ulcers. Also called aphthæ, canker sore mouth, follicular or vesicular stomatitis. — Catarrhal stomatitis, a simple local or general inflammation of the mucous membrane of the mouth-cavity. Also called oral catarrh, erythema of the mouth, and erythematous, simple, and superficial stomatitis. — Gangrenous stomatitis. See nomia. — Mercurial stomatitis, an instomatium (stō-mā'shi-um), n.; pl. stomatia (-i). [NL., dim. of stoma: see stoma.] A stoma.

—Ulcerous stomatitis, inflammation of the mucous membrane of the mouth-cavity, usually unilateral, resulting in the formation of multiple ulcers. Also called felid stomatitis, phlegmonous stomatitis, and putrid sore mouth.

Stomatoda (stō-mā-tō'dā), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. στόμα (-), mouth, + είδος, form.] Dujardin's name for the ciliate infusorians, regarded by him as the only animalcules with distinct stomata, or oral apertures: distinguished from Actinata, or the supposed mouthless flagellate infusorians.

stomatodæum (stō'mā-tō-dē'um), n.; pl. stomatodæa (-i). [NL.: see stomodæum.] Same as stomodæum. [Rare.]

The stomatodæum is a sac-like involution of the epidermis abutting against the mesenteron, spacious, and well marked on account of its dense pigmentation.

Huxley and Martin, Elementary Biology, p. 171.

stomatode (stō'mā-tōd), a. and n. [< Gr. στόμα (-), mouth, + είδος, form.] I. a. Having a stoma or cytostome, as an infusorian; stomatoporous; or of pertaining to the Stomatoda.

As regards the classification of the Protozoa, a rough and useful division is into mouth-bearing or "stomatode" Protozoa, in which there is a distinct mouth, and mouthless or "astomatous" Protozoa.

H. A. Nicholson.

II. n. A member of the Stomatoda.

stomatodendron (stō'mā-tō-den'dron), n.; pl. stomatodendra (-drā). [NL., < Gr. στόμα (-), mouth, + δένδρον, a tree.] One of the dendritic branches of the Rhizostomidae, ending in minute polypites. Encyc. Diet.

stomatodynia (stō'mā-tō-din'i-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. στόμα (-), mouth, + δύω, pain.] Pain in the mouth.

stomatogastric (stō'mā-tō-gas'trik), a. [< Gr. στόμα (-), mouth, + γαστήρ, stomach: see gastro-.] Of or pertaining to the mouth and stomach: applied to the set or system of visceral nerves which ramify upon the alimentary canal of many invertebrates. See figure and description.

Stomatogastric and other Visceral Nerves of Crayfish (Astacus fluviatilis).

The Crayfish possesses a remarkably well-developed system of visceral or stomatogastric nerves. Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 250.

stomatological (stō'mā-tō-loj'i-kal), a. [< stomatology + -ical.] Pertaining to stomatology.

stomatologist (stō'mā-tōl'ō-jist), n. [< stomatology + -ist.] One versed in stomatology.

stomatology (stō'mā-tōl'ō-jī), n. [< Gr. στόμα (-), mouth, + λογία, < λόγος, speak: see -ology.] The sum of scientific knowledge concerning the mouth.

stomatomorphous (stō'mā-tō-mōr'fus), a. [< Gr. στόμα (-), mouth, + μορφή, form.] In bot., mouth-shaped.

stomatonecrosis (stō'mā-tō-nek-rō'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. στόμα (-), mouth, + νεκρωσις, deadness: see necrosis.] Gangrenous stomatitis. See stomatitis and noma.

Stomatophora (stō-mā-tof'ō-rī), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of stomatophorus: see stomatophorous.] Protozoa which are provided with a mouth or its equivalent: a higher series of protozoans: same as Infusoria, 2: opposed to Lipostomata.

stomatophorous (stō-mā-tof'ō-rus), a. [< NL. stomatophorus, < Gr. στόμα (-), mouth, + φέρω = E. bear.] Having a mouth or stoma; of or pertaining to the Stomatophora; not lipostomatous.

stomatoplastic (stō'mā-tō-plas'tik), a. [< stomatoplasty + -ic.] Pertaining to stomatoplasty.

stomatoplasty (stō'mā-tō-plas-tī), n. [< Gr. στόμα (-), mouth, + πλάσσω, verbal adj. of πλάσσειν, form, mold.] Plastic surgery of the mouth.

stomatopod (stō'mā-tō-pod), a. and n. [< NL. stomatopodus (-pod-), < Gr. στόμα (-), mouth, + πόδος (pod-) = E. foot.] I. a. Having some of the legs close by the mouth, as a mantis-shrimp; or of pertaining to the Stomatopoda. Also stomatopodous, stomatopodous.

II. n. A member of the Stomatopoda, in any sense.

Also stomatopod.

Stomatopoda (stō-mā-top'ō-dā), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of stomatopodus (-pod-): see stomatopod.]

An order of malacostracous podophthalmic crustaceans, to which various limits have been assigned. (a) As constituted by Latreille in 1817, in the form Stomatopoda, the second order of Crustacea, the so-called sea-mantes, or gasturans, divided into two families, Unipeltata and Bipeltata, of which only the former are properly stomatopodous, the other being the so-called glass-crabs (Phyllosoma), or larval forms of other crustaceans. Hence—(b) An artificial order of the higher crustaceans, under which are included not only the Squillidae or Stomatopoda proper, but also the Mysidae or opossum-shrimps, and related forms, the Luciferidae, etc. (c) Restricted by Huxley to the family Squillidae. See cuts under mantis-shrimp and Squillidae.

Squilla, Gonodactylus, and Coronis appear to me to differ so widely and in such important structural peculiarities, not only from the Podophthalmia proper, but from all other Crustacea, as to require arrangement in a separate group, for which the title of Stomatopoda may well be retained.

Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 317.

stomatopodous (stō-mā-top'ō-dus), a. [< stomatopod + -ous.] Same as stomatopod.

Stomatopora (stō-mā-top'ō-rī), n. [NL. (Brown, 1835), < Gr. στόμα (-), mouth, + πόρος, pore: see por-.] Same as Stomatopoda.

stomatoporous (stō-mā-top'ō-rōid), a. [< Stomatopora + -oid.] Pertaining to or characteristic of a coral of the genus Stomatopora. Geological Jour., XLV, iii, 566.

Stomatopterophora (stō-mā-top-te-rof'ō-rī), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. στόμα (-), mouth, + πτερόν, feather, + φέρω = E. bear.] In J. E. Gray's classification (1821), the fourth class of mollusks, divided into two orders, Pterobranchia and Dactylobranchia; the Pteropoda or pteropods.

stomatorrhagia (stō'mā-tō-rā'jī-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. στόμα (-), mouth, + ραγία, < ρήνναι, break, burst.] Hemorrhage from the mouth.

stomatoscope (stō'mā-tō-skōp), n. [< Gr. στόμα (-), mouth, + σκοπεῖν, view.] Any instrument for keeping the mouth open so as to permit the parts within to be inspected. Dunglison.

stomatotheca (stō'mā-tō-thē'kī), n.; pl. stomatothecæ (-sē). [NL., < Gr. στόμα (-), mouth, + θήκη, box, chest.] In entom., the mouth-case, or that part of the integument of a pupa which covers the mouth.

stomatous (stō'mā-tus), a. [< Gr. στόμα (-), mouth, + -ous.] Provided with stomata; stomatophorous; stomate.

Stomias (stō-mi-ās), n. [NL. (Cuvier, 1817), < Gr. στόμα, mouth.] A genus of deep-sea fishes, typical of the family Stomiidae, having a long compressed body with delicate deciduous scales, a row of phosphorescent or luminous spots along each side, and a rayed dorsal opposite the anal fin: so called from the large and deep mouth, armed with a formidable array of teeth. S. ferax is found from Greenland to Cape Cod. Specimens are taken at various depths from 450 to 1,800 fathoms.

Stomiidae (stō-mi-at'ī-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Stomias (see stomioid) + -idae.] A family of physostomous fishes, typified by the genus Stomias. They are deep-sea Atlantic fishes, of 5 or 6 species and 3 genera, divided into 2 subfamilies, according to the presence or absence of an adipose fin.

stomioid (stō-mi-ā-toid), a. and n. [< Stomias (assumed stem Stomi-).] I. a. Resembling a fish of the genus Stomias; of or pertaining to the Stomiidae.

II. n. Any fish of the family Stomiidae.

stomodæal (stō-mō-dē'al), a. Same as stomodæal.

stomodæum (stō-mō-dē'um), n.; pl. stomodæa (-i). [NL., < Gr. στόμα, mouth, + δαίος, by the way, < δαίω, way.] An anterior part of the alimentary canal or digestive tract, being so much of the whole enteric tube as is formed at the oral end by an ingrowth of the ectoderm: correlated with proctodæum, which is derived from the ectoderm at the aboral end, both being distinguished from enteron proper, which is of endodermal origin.

stomodeal (stō-mō-dē'al), a. [< stomodæum + -al.] Pertaining to or having the character of a stomodæum. Also spelled stomodæal.

Stomoxyidae (stō-mok-sī'ī-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Stomoxy + -idae.] A family of brachycerous dipterous insects, typified by the genus Stomoxy, often merged in the Muscidae. It contains such genera as Stomoxy, Hamatobia, and Glossina, and includes some well-known biting flies, as the horn-fly, stable-fly, and tsetse-fly. Also Stomoxyidae (Meigen, 1824) and Stomoxyidae (Westwood, 1840), and as a subfamily of Muscidae, Stomoxyinae or Stomoxyine.

Stomoxy (stō-mok'sis), n. [NL. (Geoffroy, 1764), < Gr. στόμα, mouth, + ὄξύς, sharp.] A notable genus of biting flies, typical of the family

Stomoxyidae, or merged with the Muscidae. They are gray, of medium size, and resemble the common house-fly in appearance. The mouth-parts are developed into a horny proboscis. S. calcitrans, common to Europe and North America, is a familiar example. See stable-fly.

stomp (stomp), n. A dialectal form of stamp; specifically, in coal-mining, one of the plugs of wood driven into the roof of the level, to which are fastened the "lines" serving to direct the miner in his proper course; they may also be used as bench-marks. Gresley. [Midland coal-field, Eng.]

stomp, n. and v. An obsolete form of stump.

stompers (stom'pérz), n. pl. A dialectal form of stampers. See stamper, 3.

stonager (stō'nāj), n. [< stone + -age.] A collection or heap of stones. Halliwell.

Would not everybody say to him, We know the stonage at Gilgal?

Leslie. (Nares.)

stond (stond), v. and n. An obsolete or dialectal form of stand.

stondent. An obsolete past participle of stand.

stone (stōn), n. and a. [Also E. dial. stean, steen, Sc. stane, stain; < ME. stoon, ston, stan, < AS. stān = OS. stēn = OFries. stēn = D. steen = MLG. stēn, LG. steen = OHG. MHG. G. stein = Icel. steinn = Sw. Dan. sten = Goth. stains, a stone; prob. akin to OEng. stien, a stone. stien, a wall, and to Gr. στία, στῖον, a stone. Hence steen, steen.] I. n. 1. A piece of rock of small or moderate size. The name rock is given to the aggregation of mineral matter of which the earth's crust is made up. A small piece or fragment of this rock is generally called a stone, and to this qualifying term is frequently added: as, cobble-stone or gravel-stone. See rock.

Lo, heere be stonys hard y-wrougte,

Make hereof breed.

Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 43.

Are there no stones in heaven

But what serve for the thunder?

Shak., Othello, v. 2. 234.

He is not a man, but a block, a very stone.

Burton, Anat., of Mel., p. 450.

2. The hard material of which rock consists: in contradistinction to metal, wood, etc.

Al hem to-dryven ase ston doth the glas.

Flemish Insurrection (Child's Ballads, VI. 270).

He made a harp of her breast-bone.

Whose sounds would melt a heart of stone.

The Cruel Sister (Child's Ballads, II. 236).

That we might see our own work out, and watch

The sandy footprint harden into stone.

Tennyson, Princess, iii.

3. A piece of rock of a determined size, shape, or quality, or used for a defined purpose: as, a grindstone; a hearthstone; an altar-stone. Specifically—(a) A gun-flint.

About seaven of the clocke marched forward the light peeces of ordinance, with stone and powder.

Hollinshead, Chron., III. 947.

(b) A gravestone; a monument or memorial tablet.

You shall shine more bright in these contents

Than unswept stone besmeared with sluttish time.

Shak., Sonnets, lv.

(c) A millstone. (d) In printing, an imposing-stone. (e) In glass-manuf., a flattening-stone.

4. A precious stone; a gem. See precious.

Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,

Inestimable stones, unvalued jewels.

Shak., Rich. III., i. 4. 27.

5. A small, hard, rounded object resembling a stone or pebble: as, a hail-stone; a gall-stone; an ear-stone. Specifically—(a) A calculous concretion in the kidney or urinary bladder or gall-bladder, etc.; hence, the disease arising from a calculus. (b) A testicle: generally in the plural. [Vulgar.] (c) The nut of a drupe or stone-fruit, or the hard covering inclosing the kernel, and itself inclosed by the pulpy pericarp, as in the peach, cherry, or plum. See drupe and endocarp (with cuts). (d) A hard, compact mass; a lump or nugget.

Marvellous great stones of yron.

Berners, tr. of Froissart's Chron., I. 498.

6. The glass of a mirror; a mirror of crystal.

Lend me a looking-glass;

If that her breath will mist or stain the stone,

Why, then she lives. Shak., Lear, v. 3. 262.

7. A common measure of weight in use throughout the northwest and central countries of Europe, but varying much in different countries. The English Imperial standard stone is 14 pounds avoirdupois, and is commonly used in England in giving the weight of a man, but other values are in common use, varying with the article weighed: thus, the stone of butchers' meat or fish is 8 pounds, of cheese 16 pounds, of glass 5 pounds, of alum 134 pounds, of hemp usually 32 pounds, though a statute of George II. made it 16 pounds, and one of Henry VIII. 20 pounds; of lead 12 pounds, though the statute de ponderibus makes it 15 pounds of 25 "shillings" each, equal to 144 pounds avoirdupois. There were in the early part of the nineteenth century many local stones in use in England, but in the United States this unit is unknown. The stone of 14 pounds is not recognized in the statute de ponderibus, and first appears as a weight for wool. The old arithmetics call 14 pounds half a quarter, and either do not mention the stone, or define it as 3 pounds. The only legal stone in Great Britain now is that of 14 pounds.

And sende ye me word how meche more yn value yn a stoon shall I syle my wolles. Paston Letters, I, 155.
He was not a ghost, my visitor, but solid flesh and bone; He wore a Palo Alto hat, his weight was twenty stone.
O. W. Holmes, Nux Postconatica.

Alençon stone, pure rock-crystal cut in rose or brilliant-form.—Amazonian or Amazon stone. See Amazonian.—Arkansas stone, a fine-grain whetstone found in Arkansas, and used to sharpen surgical and dental instruments.—Armenian stone. See Armenian.—Artificial stone, a material prepared for decorative and building purposes by consolidating sand with the aid of some chemical. The best-known and most extensively used artificial stone is Ransome's, which is made by mixing sand with silicate of soda in a pug-mill, so as to form a plastic substance, which is then rolled or pressed into any desired form. The articles are thus prepared are then immersed in a solution of calcium chloride, when double decomposition takes place, a calcium silicate being formed which firmly cements the particles of sand together, while the sodium chloride, the other product of the decomposition, is afterward removed by washing. This material has been somewhat extensively used in England and elsewhere. Other processes akin to this, but in which different chemicals were used, have also been patented in the United States, but the materials thus produced have not met with any extensive sale. Beton or concrete has also been employed as a building material, to take the place of stone or brick, especially the "béton-Coignet," which is extensively used in and near Paris and elsewhere. Beton and concrete, which are mixtures of sand, gravel, stone chippings, fragments of brick, etc., with common or hydraulic mortar or cement, are also frequently, but not correctly, designated artificial stone.—Ayr stone, a stone used for polishing marble and surfacing metals. The harder varieties are used as whetstones. Also called water of Ayr, Scotch stone, and smoke-stone.—Bath stone, a rock used extensively for building purposes in England, and especially near Bath (whence its name). It is a limestone, having an oolitic structure, and belonging to the Inferior Oolite, which lies directly upon the Lias, the lowest division of the Jurassic of Continental and American geologists. Also called Bath oolite.—Beer stone, a hard sandy chalk stratum of small thickness, occurring westward of Seaton in Devonshire, England. It forms a part of the Lower Chalk, and contains Luceramus multiloides. This series of beds not having a thickness of more than 10 feet, is only of local importance, but it has been quarried as a building-stone for many hundred years, and parts of Exeter Cathedral are built of it.—Bologna stone, or Bolognian stone, a variety of barite, or barium sulphate, found in roundish masses, composed of radiating fibers, first discovered near Bologna. It is phosphorescent in the dark after being heated to ignition, powdered, and exposed to the sun's light for some time.—Bristol stone, rock-crystal, or Bristol diamond, small round crystals of quartz, found in the Clifton limestone, near the city of Bristol in England.—Caen stone, the French equivalent of the English Bath oolite. It is a cream-colored building stone, of excellent quality, got near Caen in Normandy. Although soft in the quarry, it is of fine texture and hardens by exposure, so as to become extremely durable. Winchester and Canterbury cathedrals, Henry VII.'s chapel at Westminster, and many churches are built of it. It is still frequently used in England.—Cambray stones. See cambray.—Centurial stones. See centurial.—Ceylon stone, a dark-green, brown, or black spinel from Ceylon, also called ceylonite; the name is also given to other minerals or gems from Ceylon.—Channel-stone. See channel.—Charnwood Forest stone, an oolite found only in Charnwood Forest in Leicestershire, England. It is one of the best substitutes for the Turkey oolite, and is much used to give a fine edge to knives and other tools.—Cornish stone. Same as china-stone.

Cornish stone is used for almost all English wares, both in the body and the glaze. Spence's Engraving, p. 1560.
Crab's stones. Same as crab's eyes (which see, under crab). See also crab-stone.—Crape stone, a trade-name for any of which the surface is cut in imitation of crape and colored a lustrous black. A similar article is made from artificial silicious compounds cast in molds.—Cut stone, hewn stone, or work in hewn stone; ashler.—Deaf as a stone. See deaf.—Dimension stone, ashler.—Drafted stone, ashler stone having a chisel-draft around the face, the part inside the draft being left rough.—Heracleian stone. See Heracleian.—Hewn stone, blocks of stone with faces dressed to shape by the hammer.—Holy stone, a stone used in magical rites, whether as a magic mirror or show-stone, or as a sort of amulet.—Infernal ledger, lithographic, Lydian stone. See the adjectives.—Maltese stone, a limestone of a delicate brown cream-color, very compact, and almost as soft as chalk. The natives of the island of Malta turn and carve it into various ornamental objects.—Memorial, meteoric, Moabite stone. See the adjectives.—Mocha stone (formerly also Moco stone; also Mocha-pebble; so called from Mocha in Arabia, where the stone is plentiful), a variety of dendritic agate, containing dark outlines of arborization, like a vegetable filaments, due to the presence of metallic oxides, as of manganese and iron; moss-agate.—Philosopher's stone. See elixir, 1.—Portland stone, in England, a rock belonging to the Portlandian series, so named from the Isle of Portland, where it is typically developed. The Portlandian is a part of the Jurassic series, and lies between the Purbeckian, the highest member of that series, and the Kimmeridgian. The Portland group, or Portlandian, consists of two divisions, the Portland stone and the Portland sand; the former has several subdivisions, to which local names are attached, such as curf, base-bee, and whit-bee. The Portland stone, which is a nearly pure carbonate of lime, is an important building stone in England, and was extensively used by Inigo Jones and Sir Christopher Wren, in important public buildings, especially in St. Paul's Cathedral.—Precious stone. See precious.—Protean stone. See Protean.—Quarry-faced stone, cut stone of which the face is left rough as it comes from the quarry, as distinguished from tooled, hammer-faced, pitch-faced stone, etc.—Rocking stone. See rock.—Rosetta stone, a stone or tablet of black basalt, found in 1799 near Rosetta, a town of Egypt, on the delta of the Nile, by M. Boussard, a French officer of engineers. This stone bears a trilingual inscription, a decree of Ptolemy V. (Epiphanes) in Greek and Egyptian hieroglyphic and demotic. The inscription was deciphered chiefly by Champollion, and afforded the key to the interpretation of Egyptian hieroglyphics. The monument is now in the British Museum.—Rough-pointed stone. See rough.—Rubbed stone, stone-work of which the surface is cut straight with the stone-saw, and afterward smoothed by rubbing with grit or sand-stone.—Samian stone. See Samian.—Saracen's or Sarsen's stone. See Saracen.—Scotch stone. Same as Ayr stone.—Shipman's stone. See shipman.—Sonorous stone. See sonorous.—Standing stone. See standing.—Stick and stone. See stick.—Stone cancer. Same as scirrhus cancer (which see, under scirrhus).—Stone of the second class. See elixir, 1.—Stones of sulphur. See sulphur.—To leave no stone unturned, to do everything that can be done; use all practicable means to effect an object; spare no exertions.

New crimes invented, left unturned no stone.

To make my guilt appear, and hide his own.

Dryden, Æneid, II, 133.

To mark with a white stone, to mark as particularly fortunate, favored, or esteemed. The phrase arose from the custom among the Romans of marking their lucky days on the calendar with a white stone (as a piece of chalk), while unlucky days were marked with charcoal. Brewer.—Syn, 1 and 2. See rock.

II, a. 1. Made of stone: as, a stone house; a stone wall.

The lion on your old stone gates

Is not more cold to you than I.

Tennyson, Lady Clara Vere de Vere.

2. Made of stoneware: as, a stone jar; a stone mug.

Now mistress Gilpin (careful soul!)

Had two stone bottles found,

To hold the liquor that she loved,

And keep it safe and sound.

Cowper, John Gilpin.

Stone age. See archæological ages, under age.—Stone ax, an ax-head or hatchet-head made of hard stone. Such axes are found, belonging to prehistoric epochs, and have also been in use down to the present time among savage tribes in different parts of the world. Compare stone-ax.—Stone brick. See brick.—Stone jug. See jug, 2.—Stone ocher. See ocher.

stone (stōn), v. t.; pret. and pp. stoned, ppr. stoning. [ME. stonien, stanen (in earlier use stenen, whence mod. E. dial. steen); < AS. stānan = OHG. stānan, MLG. steinen = Sw. stena = Dan. stene = Goth. stānan (cf. D. steinigen = G. steinigen), pelt with stones, stone; from the noun.] 1. To throw stones at; pelt with stones.

With stones men shulde hir stryke and stone hir to deth.

Piers Plowman (B), xii, 77.

Francis himself was stoned to death.

K. W. Dixon, Hist. Church of Eng., v.

2. To make like stone; harden. [Rare.]

O perjur'd woman! thou dost stone my heart

Shak., Othello, v 2 63.

3. To free from stones, as fruit.

She picked from Polly's very hand the rad-Ins which the good woman was stoning for the most awfully sacred election cake.

H. B. Storer, Oldtown, p. 270.

4. To provide or fit with stones, as by lining, walling, or facing: as, to stone a well or a road.

—5. In leather-manuf., to work (the leather) with a stock-stone to reduce it to uniform thickness, stretch it, and make it smooth-grained.

stone-ax (stōn'aks), n. [ME. stonax, < AS. stānax, < stān, stone, + ax, ax.] An ax or a hammer with two somewhat obtuse edges, used in hewing stone.

stone-basil (stōn'baz'ill), n. Same as basil-weed.

stone-bass (stōn'bäs), n. A fish of the family Serranidae, Polyprion cernuum, or another of the same genus. It is distinguished by the development of a strong longitudinal bony ridge on the operculum, and the Stone bass (Polyprion cernuum).

serration of the spines of the anal and ventral fins. It inhabits moderately deep water in the Mediterranean and neighboring Atlantic. (Also called weck-fish and cernier.) The corresponding stone-bass of Pacific waters is a very similar though distinct species, P. argenteus (originally oxyrinus). See Polyprion.

stone-bird (stōn'bērd), n. 1. The vinous grosbeak, or moro.—2. The stone-snipe, or greater yellowlegs. See cut under yellowlegs.

stone-biter (stōn'bi'tēr), n. The common wolf-fish. See cut under Anarrhichas.

stone-blind (stōn'blind'), a. [= Ice. stein-blindr = Sw. Dan. sten-blind; as stone + blind.] Blind as a stone; wholly blind, either literally or figuratively.

I thought I saw everything, and was stone-blind all the while.

George Eliot, Mr. Gilfil, xviii.

stone-blue (stōn'blū), n. A compound of indigo and starch or whitening.

stone-boat (stōn'bōt), n. A drag or sled without runners, used for moving stones; also, a wagon-platform hung below the axles, used for the same purpose. [U. S.]

stonebock (stōn'bok), n. Same as steenbok.

stone-boilers (stōn'boi'lērs), n. pl. A tribe or race of men who practise stone-boiling.

The Australians, at least in modern times, must be counted as stone-boilers.

E. B. Tylor, Early Hist. Mankind, ix.

stone-boiling (stōn'boi'ling), n. The act or process of making water boil by putting hot stones in it.

The art of boiling, as commonly known to us, may have been developed through this intermediate process, which I propose to call stone-boiling.

E. B. Tylor, Early Hist. Mankind, ix.

stone-borer (stōn'bōr'ēr), n. A mollusk that bores stones; a lithodomeus, lithophagous, or saxicavous bivalve. See cuts under accessory, dute-shell, Glycymeris, and pidcock.

stone-bow (stōn'bō), n. [ME. stonbowe; < stone + bow.] A weapon somewhat resembling a crossbow, for shooting stones; a catapult; also, a sort of toy.

O, for a stone-bow, to hit him in the eye!

Shak., T. N., II, 5. 51.

Item, six stone bowes that shoot lead pellets.

Hakluyt's Voyages, I, 363.

Children will shortly take him for a wall,

And set their stone-bowes in his forehead.

Beau, and Fl., King and No King, v. 1.

stone-bramble (stōn'bram'bl), n. Same as rockbuck-berry.

stone-brash (stōn'brash), n. In agri., a subsoil composed of shattered rock or stone.

stonebreak (stōn'brāk), n. The meadow-saxifrage, Saxifraga granulata: so called from the virtue, according to the doctrine of signatures, of its pebble-like bulbs against calculus. The name is also a general equivalent of saxifrage.

stone-breaker (stōn'brā'kēr), n. One who or that which breaks stones; specifically, a ma-

Stone breaker.

a, stationary jaw; a', oscillating jaw. b, hopper; c, fly-wheel; d, short pitman connecting crank-wrist with toggles; e, e, toggles; f, frame, strengthened at g, where the thrust of the toggles is received; h, base of machine; i, rubber spring which withdraws the lower end of the jaw a'.

chine for pounding or crushing stone; an ore-mill; a stone-crusher.

stone-bruise (stōn'brüz), n. A bruise caused by a stone; especially, a painful and persistent bruise on the sole of the foot, commonly in the middle of the ball of the foot, due to walking barefooted; also, a bruise produced on the hand, as by ball-playing. [Local, U. S.] stonebuck (stōn'buk), n. [ME. stonbukke, < AS. stānbucca, the ibex, < stān, stone, rock, + bucca, buck. In mod. use, tr. D. steenbok, G. steinbok: see steenbok.] The steenbok.

stone-butter (stōn'but'ēr), n. A sort of alum.

stone-canal (stōn'ka-nal'), n. In echinoderms, the duct leading from the madreporic plate to the circular canal: so called because it ordinarily has calcareous substances in its walls. Also sand-canal. Gegenbaur, Comp. Anat. (trans.), p. 220.

stone-cast (stōn'käst), n. The distance which a stone may be thrown by the hand; a stone's cast; a stone's throw.

About a stone-cast from the wall

A sluice with blacken'd waters slept.

Tennyson, Mariana.

stonecat

stonecat (stōn'kāt), n. A catfish of the genus Noturus, as N. flavus, common in many parts of the United States. N. flavus is one of the largest, sometimes exceeding a foot in length. N. insignis is another, nearly as large, found in the Middle and Southern States. There are several more, a few inches long, all of fresh waters of the same country.

Stonecat (Noturus flavus).

stone-centiped (stōn'sen'ti-ped), n. A centiped of the family Lithobiidae.

stonechacker (stōn'chak'ēr), n. Same as stonechat.

stonechat (stōn'chat), n. One of several different Old World chats, belonging to the genera Saxicola and (especially) Pratincola; a kind of bushchat: applied to three different English birds, and extended, as a book-name, to several others of the above genera. (a) Improperly, the wheatear, Saxicola arvensis, and some other species of the restricted genus Saxicola. See cut under wheatear. [In this sense chiefly Scotch and American, the wheatear being the only bird of the kind which straggles to America.] (b) Improperly, the whin-bushchat or whinchat, Pratincola rubetra. [Eng.] (c) The black-headed bushchat, Pratincola rubicola, a common bird of Great Britain and other parts of Europe. The true stonechat is about 5 inches long, the wing 2½, the tail scarcely 2. The male in full plumage has the head and most of the back black, the feathers of the back mostly edged with sandy brown; the upper tail-coverts white, varied with black and brown; the wings and tail blackish-brown, the former with a large white area on the coverts and inner secondaries; the sides of the neck and breast white; the rest of the under parts rufous-brown; the bill and feet black; and the eyes brown. It nests on the ground, and lays four to six bluish-green eggs clouded and spotted with reddish-brown. Also called chickstone, stonechacker, stonechatter, stoneclink, stonesmith, stonesmitch, or stonesmickle, and stonesmith.

Stonechat (Pratincola rubicola), in a usual plumage.

The Stonechat closely resembles the Whinchat, . . . a circumstance which has caused much confusion . . . for in almost all parts of England the Whinchat, by far the commonest species, popularly does duty for the Stonechat, and in many parts of Scotland the Wheatear is universally known by that name. See Bohm, Hist. Brit. Birds, I. 317.

stonechatter (stōn'chat'ēr), n. Same as stonechat.

stone-climber (stōn'kli'mēr), n. The dobson or hellgrammite. See cut under sprawler. [Local, U. S.]

stoneclink (stōn'klingk), n. Same as stonechat.

stone-clover (stōn'klō'vēr), n. The rabbit-foot or hare's-foot clover, Trifolium arvense, a low slender branching species with very silky heads, thence also called puss-clover. It is an Old World plant naturalized in America.

stone-coal (stōn'kōl), n. [= G. steinkohle; as stone + coal.] Mineral coal, or coal dug from the earth, as distinguished from charcoal: generally applied in England to any particularly hard variety of coal, and especially to that called in the United States anthracite. See coal.

stone-cold (stōn'kōld'), a. Cold as a stone. Fletcher and Shirley, Night-Walker, iv. 4.

stone-color (stōn'kul'or), n. The color of stone; a grayish color.

stone-colored (stōn'kul'ord), a. Of the usual color of a large mass of stone, a cold bluish gray.

stone-coral (stōn'kor'al), n. Massive coral, as distinguished from branching coral, or tree-coral; hard, sclerodermatous or lithocoralline coral, as distinguished from sclerobasic coral. Most corals are of this character, and are hexacoralline (not, however, the red coral of commerce, which is related to the sea-fans and other octocorallines).

stonecrab (stōn'krab), n. 1. Any crab of the family Homolidae.—2. A European crab, Li- thodes maia.—3. A large, stout, edible crab of the Atlantic coast of the United States, Menippe Stonecrab (Menippe mercenaria).

mercenaria.—4. The dobson or hellgrammite. See cut under sprawler. [Local, U. S.]

stone-crawfish (stōn'krā'fish), n. A crawfish of Europe, specified as Astacus torrentium, in distinction from the common crawfish of that country, A. fluviatilis.

stone-cray (stōn'krā), n. A distemper in hawks. Imp. Diet.

stone-cricket (stōn'krik'et), n. One of the wingless forms of the orthopterous family Locustidae, living under or among stones and in dark places, and popularly confounded with true crickets (which belong to the orthopterous family Gryllidae or Achetidae). There are many species, of various parts of the world, some simply called crickets, and others cave-crickets. The commonest American stone-cricket belongs to the genus Ceuthophilus, as C. maculatus, etc. See cave-cricket, and cut under Hadenæus.

stonecrop (stōn'krop), n. [< ME. stoncrop, < AS. stāncrop, stonecrop, < stān, stone, + crop, the top or head of a plant, a sprout, a bunch or cluster of flowers: see stone and crop.] The wall-pepper, Sedum acre; so called as frequently growing upon walls and rocks. It is native throughout Europe and Asiatic Russia, and somewhat employed in ornamental gardening; in America called mossy stonecrop, etc., from its creeping and matting stems beset with small sessile leaves. The flowers are bright-yellow in small terminal cymes. The name is also extended to other species of similar habit, especially S. ternatum, and not seldom to the whole genus.—Ditch-stonecrop, a plant of the genus Pranthorium, chiefly the American P. sedoides, a weed like plant with yellowish-green flowers, common in ditches and wet places.—Great stonecrop, an old designation of the kidneywort, Cotyledon Umbilicus, also of Sedum album.—Mossy stonecrop. See def.

stone-crush (stōn'krush), n. A sore on the foot caused by a bruise from a stone. [Local.]

stone-crusher (stōn'krush'ēr), n. A mill or machine for crushing or grinding stone or ores for use on roads, etc.; an ore-crusher; an ore-mill; a stone-breaker (which see).

stone-curlew (stōn'kēr'lū), n. 1. The stone-plover or thick-knee, Edicnemus crepitans. See cut under Edicnemus.—2. The whimbrel, Numenius phaeopus.—3. In the southern United States, the willet, Symphemia semipalmata: a misnomer. Audubon.

stone-cutter (stōn'kut'ēr), n. 1. One whose occupation it is to hew or cut stones for building, ornamental, or other purposes.—2. A machine for shaping or facing stones.

stone-cutting (stōn'kut'ing), n. The business of cutting or hewing stones for walls, monuments, etc.

stoned (stōnd), a. [< stone + -ed.] Having or containing stones, in any sense.

Of stoned fruits I have met with three good sorts: viz., Cherries, plums, and persimmons.

Beverly, Hist. Virginia, iv. ¶ 12.

The way Sharpe ston'd and thorny, where he pass'd of late.

W. Browne, Britannia's Pastorals, ii. 3

stone-dead (stōn'ded'), a. [< ME. stondeed, standed (= Sw. Dan. stendöd); < stone + dead.] Dead as a stone; lifeless.

The Geant was by Gaffray don bore, So discomfite, standed, and all cold.

Rom. of Parteray (E. E. T. S.), I. 121.

He cannot be so stupid, or stone-dead.

B. Jonson, Volpone, i. 1.

stone-deaf (stōn'def'), a. Deaf as a stone; totally deaf.

stone-devil (stōn'dev'l), n. The dobson or hellgrammite. See cut under sprawler. [Virginia.]

stone-dresser (stōn'dres'ēr), n. 1. One who tools, smooths, and shapes stone for building purposes. Simmonds.—2. One of a variety of power-machines for dressing, polishing, and finishing marbles, slates, and other building-stones.

stoneman

stone-dumb (stōn'dum'), a. Perfectly dumb. The Century, XXXV. 622. [Rare.]

stone-eater (stōn'ē'tēr), n. Same as stone-borer.

stone-engraving (stōn'en-grā'ving), n. The art of engraving on stone. See lithography, etching, gem-engraving.

stone-falcon (stōn'fā'kn), n. See falcon, and cut under merlin.

stone-fern (stōn'fēr), n. A European fern, Asplenium Ceterach: so called from its habit of growing on rocks and stone walls.

stone-fish (stōn'fish), n. The shanny. Parnell. [Local, Scotch.]

stone-fly (stōn'fi), n. A pseudoneuropterous insect of the family Perlidae: so called because the larval forms abound under the stones of streams. (See cut under Perla.) P. bicaudata, whose larva is much used by anglers, is an example.

stone-fruit (stōn'früt), n. [= D. steenvrucht = G. steinfrucht = Sw. stenfrukt = Dan. stenfrugt; as stone + fruit.] In bot., a drupe; a fruit whose seeds are covered with a hard shell enveloped in a pulp, as the peach, cherry, and plum. See drupe.

Bring with you the kernels of peares and apples, and the stones of such stonefruits as you shall find there.

Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 439.

stonegale (stōn'gal), n. Same as staniel.

stone-gall<sup>1</sup> (stōn'gāl), n. [< stone + gall.] A roundish mass of clay often occurring in variegated sandstone.

stone-gall<sup>2</sup> (stōn'gāl), n. Same as staniel.

stone-gatherer (stōn'gath'ēr-ēr), n. A horse-machine for picking up loose stones from the ground. It consists of a receiving-box with a toothed wheel and a traveling apron, or a fork with curved teeth, and a lever for emptying it into the box when loaded.

stone-gray (stōn'grā), n. A dark somewhat brownish-gray color.

stone-grig (stōn'grig), n. The pride or mud-lamprey, Ammocetes branchialis.

stone-hammer (stōn'ham'ēr), n. A hammer for breaking or rough-dressing stones.

stone-hard (stōn'härd), a. 1. Hard as a stone; unfeeling. Shak., Rich. III., iv. 4. 227.—2. Firm; fast.

Steken the gates ston-harde wyth stalworth barrez.

Aliterative Poems (ed. Morris), ii. 881.

stone-harmonicon (stōn'här-mon'i-kon), n. Same as lapidean and rock-harmonicon.

stone-hatch (stōn'hach), n. The ring-plover, Agialites hiaticula: so called from nesting on shingle. See cut under Agialites. Tarrell. [Prov. Eng.]

stone-hawk (stōn'hāk), n. Same as stone-falcon.

stone-head (stōn'hed), n. The bed-rock; the solid rock underlying the superficial detritus. [Eng.]

stone-hearted (stōn'här'ted), a. Same as stony-hearted.

Weepe, ye stone-hearted men! Oh, read and pittie!

W. Browne, Britannia's Pastorals, ii. 1.

stone-hore<sup>1</sup> (stōn'hör), n. The common stonecrop, Sedum acre; also, S. reflexum. Britten and Holland.

stone-horse (stōn'hōrs), n. A stallion. [Obsolote or provincial.]

My grandfathers great stone-hors, flinging up his head, and jerking out his left legge.

Marston, Antonio and Mellida, II. i. 3.

stone-leek (stōn'lēk), n. Same as cibol, 2.

stone-lichen (stōn'li'ken), n. A lichen growing upon stones or rocks, as species of Parmelia, Umbilicaria, etc. See lichen.

stone-lily (stōn'li'i), n. A fossil crinoid; a crinite or encrinite, of a form suggesting a lily on its stem. Also called lily-encrinite. A. Geikie, Geol. Sketches, i.

stone-liverwort<sup>1</sup> (stōn'liv'ēr-wért), n. The plant Marchantia polymorpha.

stone-lobster (stōn'lob'stēr), n. See lobster. [Local, U. S.]

stone-lugger (stōn'lug'ēr), n. 1. A catostomid fish of the United States, Catostomus or Hypentelium nigricans; the hog-sucker or hog-molly. Also called stone-roller and stone-toter.—2. A cyprinoid fish of the United States, Campostoma anomalum, or some other member of that genus. It is 6 or 8 inches long; in the males in spring some of the parts become fiery-red, and the head and often the whole body is studded with large rounded tubercles. It is herbivorous, and abounds in deep still places in streams from New York to Mexico. Also stone-roller. See cut under Campostoma.

stoneman (stōn'man), n. [< stone + dial. man, a heap of stones, < W. maen, a stone. Cf. dol- men.] A pile of rocks roughly laid together, usually on a prominent mountain-peak or -ridge, and intended to serve either as a landmark or as a record of a visit; a cairn.

stone-marten (stōn'mār'ten), n. Same as beech-marten.

stone-mason (stōn'mā'sn), n. One who dresses stones for building, or builds with them; a builder in stone.

stone-merchant (stōn'mér'chant), n. A dealer in stones, especially building- or paving-stones.

stone-mill (stōn'mil), n. 1. A machine for breaking or crushing stone; a stone-breaker; an ore-crusher. See cut under stone-breaker. — 2. A stone-dresser. See stone-dresser, 2.

stone-mint (stōn'mint), n. The American ditany. See Cumula.

stone-mortar (stōn'mōr'tär), n. A form of mortar used for throwing projectiles of irregular and varying form, such as stones.

stonen (stō'nen), a. [ME. stonen, also stēnen, AS. stēnen, of stone, stān, stone: see stone and -en.] Consisting or made of stone. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

He forsothe areride a stonen signe of worship.

Wyctif, Gen. xxxv. 14.

stone-oak (stōn'ök), n. An oak, Quercus Javensis, found in Java and other islands: so named from its thick osseous nut, which is peculiar among acorns in being ridged, with the cupule fitting into the furrows.

stone-oil (stōn'oil), n. Rock-oil or petroleum.

stone-owl (stōn'oul), n. The Acadian or saw-whet owl, Nyctala acadica, which sometimes hides in quarries or piles of rock. See cut under Nyctala. [Pennsylvania.]

stone-parsley (stōn'pärs'li), n. The plant Sison Amomum; also, Seseli Libanotis and other species of the genus Seseli. See Seseli.

stonepecker (stōn'pek'ēr), n. 1. The turnstone, Streptopelia interpres. See cut under turnstone. [Local, Great Britain.] — 2. The purple sandpiper, Tringa maritima, a bird of similar resorts and habits. [Shetland Islands.]

stone-pine (stōn'pin), n. See pinet, also oil-tree, 5, and pignon, 1.

stone-pit (stōn'pit), n. A pit or quarry where stones are dug.

stone-pitch (stōn'pich), n. Hard inspissated pitch.

stone-plover (stōn'pluv'ēr), n. 1. The stone-curlew, thick-kneed plover, or thick-knee, a charadriomorphie or plover-like wading bird of the family Edicnemidae, Edicnemus crepitans, a common bird of Europe. See cut under Edicnemus. — 2. Hence, one of various limicoline birds of the plover and snipe families. (a) The Swiss, gray, or bullhead plover, Squatarola helvetica. See cut under Squatarola. (b) The ring-plover, Agriolites hiaticula, or the dotterel, Ludrobia morinellus; a stone-runner. See cuts under Agriolites and dotterel. (c) A shore-plover of the genus Esacus, as E. recurvirostris. (d) The bar-tailed godwit, Limosa lapponica. See cut under Limosa. (e) The whimbrel, Numenius phaeopus.

stone-pock (stōn'pok), n. A hard pimple which suppurates; acne.

stone-priest (stōn'prēst), n. A lascivious priest. Grim the Collier. (Davies.)

stoner (stō'nēr), n. [ME. stoner, stōn.] One who or that which stones, in any sense of that word.

stone-rag (stōn'rag), n. A lichen, Parmelia saxatilis.

stone-raw (stōn'rā), n. 1. Same as stone-rag. — 2. The turnstone, Streptopelia interpres. [Armagh, Ireland.]

stonern (stō'nēr), a. [Var. of stonen.] Consisting or made of stone. [Scotch.]

The West Port is of stonern work, and mair decorated with architecture and the policy of bigging.

Scott, Fortunes of Nigel, II.

stone-roller (stōn'rō'lēr), n. Same as stone-lugger.

stone-root (stōn'rüt), n. See horse-balm and heal-all.

stone-rue (stōn'rū), n. The fern Asplenium Ruta-muraria. [Eng.]

stone-runner (stōn'run'ēr), n. Same as stone-plover, 2 (b). [Prov. Eng.]

stone-saw (stōn'sā), n. A tool or a sawing-machine for cutting marble, millstones, and building-stones into slabs, disks, columns, and blocks, either from the live rock in the quarry or in a stone-yard. The most simple form of machine is a flat blade of iron strained tight in a saw-frame, and reciprocated by means of suitable mechanism. The cutting is done by particles of sand continually supplied to the saw by means of a stream of water. Stone-saws of this type are usually arranged in gangs, the frame supporting a number of saws, and being suspended by chains over the block to be cut, the spaces between the blades regulating the thickness of the slabs. Circular saws have also been used to cut thin slabs of stone into narrow pieces by the agency of wet sand. An improvement on this method is the use of circular saws armed with black diamonds or carbon-points. The saw is placed in a frame resembling an iron-planer, the saw-arbor having a vertical motion; and the block of stone, dogged to a traversing table, is fed to the saw as the cut is made. Diamond stone-cutting machines have also been made in the form of reciprocating saws. In one new stone-sawing machine, called a channeling-machine, used to cut out large blocks and columns in a quarry, a circular saw having carbon-points is employed, the power being applied by means of gearing to the edge of the saw instead of at the arbor. Another form of quarrying stone-saw consists of an endless band of twisted wire rope passing in a horizontal direction over large pulleys, like a band-saw, and employing wet sand as the cutting-material.

stone's-cast (stōnz'kást), n. Same as stone-cast.

stoneseed (stōn'sēd), n. A plant of the genus Lithospermum, particularly the gromwell, L. officinale and L. arvense. The name, as also that of the genus, refers to the hardness of the seeds.

Stonesfield slate. See slate, 2.

stone-shot (stōn'shot), n. The distance a stone can be thrown, either from a cannon or from a sling.

He show'd a tent
A stone-shot off.

Tennyson, Princess, v.

stone-shower (stōn'shou'ēr), n. A fall of aërolites; a meteoric shower.

stonesmickle (stōn'smik'el), n. Same as stone-chat (c). Also stonesmich, stonesmitch, stone-smith.

stone-snipe (stōn'snip), n. 1. The greater tell-tale, greater yellowlegs, or long-legged tattler, Totanus melanoleucus, a common North American bird of the family Scelopacidae. The length is from 13 to 14 inches, the extent 24; the bill is 2 or more inches long, the tarsus 2½. The legs are chrome-yellow; the bill is greenish-black. The upper parts are dusky, speckled with whitish; the under parts are white, streaked on the jugulum, marked on the sides, flanks, and axillars with dusky bars and arrow-heads. The tail is barred with blackish and white. The stone-snipe inhabits North America at large, breeding in high latitudes, and is chiefly seen in the United States during the migrations and in winter. It is a noisy and restless denizen of marshes, bays, and estuaries. See cut under yellowlegs. 2. Same as stone-plover, 1. Encyc. Dict.

stone-sponge (stōn'spung), n. A lithistidan sponge; so called from the hardness. See Lithistida.

stone-squarer (stōn'skwär'ēr), n. One who forms stones into square shapes; a stone-cutter.

And Solomon's builders and Hiram's builders did hew them, and the stonequarers (the Gebalites, R. V.).

1 Kl. v. 18.

stone-still (stōn'stil'), a. [ME. ston-stille; stone + still.] Still as a stone; absolutely motionless, silent, etc. Sir Gawayne and the Green Knight (E. E. T. S.), I. 242.

stone-sturgeon (stōn'stēr'jon), n. Same as lake-sturgeon.

stone-sucker (stōn'suk'ēr), n. The lamprey; a petromyzont. [Local, Eng.]

stone-thrush (stōn'thrush), n. The mistle-thrush. [Prov. Eng.]

stone-toter (stōn'tō'tēr), n. 1. Same as stone-lugger, 1. Also toter. — 2. A cyprinoid fish, Exoglossum maxillingua; a cut-lips. [Local, U. S., in both senses.]

stone-walling (stōn'wā'ling), n. 1. The process of walling with stone; hence, walls built of stone. Encyc. Brit., II. x. 388. — 2. Parliamentary obstruction by talking against time, raising technical objections, etc. [Australia.]

He is great at stone-walling tactics, and can talk against time by the hour.

Mrs. Campbell Præd, The Head Station, p. 35.

stoneware (stōn'wūr), n. Potters' ware made from clay of very silicious nature, or a composition of clay and flint. The clay is beaten in water and purified, and the flint is catched, ground, and suspended in water, and then mixed (in various proportions for various wares) with the clay. The mixture is then dried in a kiln until it is sufficiently solid to be kneaded, and is then beaten and tempered before being molded into shape. When fired it is not porous, like common pottery, but vitrified through its whole substance in consequence of the great amount of silica contained in the prepared clay. Vessels of stoneware are generally glazed by means of common salt. The salt, being thrown into the furnace, is volatilized by heat, becomes attached to the surface of the ware, and is decomposed, the muriatic acid flying off and leaving the soda behind it to form a fine thin glaze on the ware, which resists ordinary acids. The old German stoneware had often a vitreous glaze. See grès de Flandres, under grès, and Cologne ware, under ware, 2.

stoneweed (stōn'wēd), n. 1. Same as stone-seed. — 2. The doorweed, Polygonum aviculare. Britten and Holland. [Prov. Eng.]

stonework (stōn'wērk), n. Work consisting of stone; masons' work of stone. — Broken-range stonework. See range, n. — Crandalled stonework. See crandall. — Random, range, etc., stonework. See the qualifying words.

stone-works (stōn'wērks), n. sing. and pl. 1. A stone-cutting establishment. — 2. An establishment for the making of stoneware. Jewitt.

stonewort (stōn'wērt), n. [stone + wort.] 1.

A plant of the genus Chara: so called from the calcareous deposits which frequently occur on the stems. — 2. Sometimes, the stone-parsley, Sison Amomum.

stone-yard (stōn'yārd), n. A yard or inclosure in which stone-cutters are employed.

stong (stong), n. [A var. of stang.] An instrument with which cels are commonly taken.

Richardson. [Lincolnshire, Eng.]

stonify (stō'ni-fi), v. t.; pret. and pp. stonified, ppr. stonifying. [stone + -ify.] To make stony; petrify. [Rare.]

Wilkes of stone, a shell-fish stonified.

Holland's Camden, p. 365, margin. (Davies.)

stonily (stō'ni-li), adv. In a stony manner; stiffly; harshly; frigidly.

stoniness (stō'ni-nes), n. The quality of being stony; as, the stoniness of ground or of fruit; stoniness of heart.

stonish (stō'nish), a. [stone + -ish.] Stony. Sir T. More, Utopia (tr. by Robinson), ii. 7.

stonish (stō'nish), v. t. [An aphetic form of astonish. Cf. stony.] Same as astonish. Shak., Venus and Adonis, l. 825.

stonishment (stōn'ish-ment), n. Same as astonishment. Spenser, F. Q., III. iv. 19.

stont. A Middle English form of stant, stent, contraction of standeth, present indicative third person singular of stand.

stony (stō'ni), a. [ME. stony, stany, AS. stānig (= OHG. MUG. steinag, G. steinig = Sw. stenig), stony, stān, stone: see stone. Cf. AS. stanht = G. steinicht = Dan. stenet, stony.] 1.

Containing stones; abounding in stone. — 2. Made of stone; consisting of stone; rocky.

And some fell on stony (the rocky, R. V.) ground, where it had not much earth; and immediately it sprang up, because it had no depth of earth. Mark iv. 5.

With love's light wings did I o'er-perch these walls;

For stony limits cannot hold love out.

Shak., R. and J., II. 2. 67.

3. Hard like stone, but not made of stone; stone-like.

The cocoa-nut with its stony shell.

Whittier, The Palm-Tree.

Specifically, in anat. and zool., very hard, like a stone; hard as a rock. (a) Sclerodermic or madreporarian, as corals. (b) Lithistidan, as sponges. (c) Especially thick and hard, as some opercula of shells. See sea-bean, 3. (d) Petrous or petrosal, as bone. (e) Otolithic, as concretions in the ear. See ear bone, ear-stone, otolith. (f) Turned to stone; petrified, as a fossil.

4. Pertaining to or characteristic of stone: as, a stony quality or consistency.

Chattering stony names

Of shale and hornblende, rag and tuff.

Tennyson, Princess, iii.

5. Rigid; fixed; hard, especially in a moral sense; hardened; obdurate.

Thou knowest that all these things do little or nothing move my mind — my heart, O Lord, is so stony.

J. Bradford, Works (Parker Soc., 1853), II. 257.

6. Painfully hard and cold; chilling; frigid; freezing.

The stony feare

Ran to his hart, and all his sence dismayd.

Spenser, F. Q., II. viii. 46.

Out of my stony griefs

Bethel I'll raise.

Sarah F. Adams, Nearer, my God, to Thee.

He . . .

Gorgonised me from head to foot

With a stony British stare.

Tennyson, Maud, xlii.

Stony cataract, a cataract with great hardening of the lens.

stony (stō'ni), v. [ME. stonyen, stonien; cf. astony, stun, stound, and aston.] I. trans. 1. To stun.

He was stonied of the stroke that he myght not stonde on his feet ne meve no membre that he hadde.

Martin (E. E. T. S.), II. 265.

2. To astonish; confound.

Sothely thise wordes when I here thaym or redis tham stonies me. Hampole, Prose Treatises (E. E. T. S.), p. 43.

II. intrans. To be or become stunned or astounded.

By land and sea, so well he him acquitte,

To speke of him I stony in my witte.

Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 296.

stony-hearted (stō'ni-hēr'ted), a. Hard-hearted; unfeeling; obdurate. Shak., 1 Hen.

IV., ii. 2. 28.

stood (stūd). Preterit and past participle of stand.

stook

stook (stük), n. [Also dial. stouk; prob. < MLG. stuke, LG. stuke, a heap or bundle, as of flax or turf, = G. stauche, a bundle, as of flax; cf. MD. stuck, a chest, hamper.] A shock of corn, consisting, when of full size, of twelve sheaves. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

But stooks are cowpet wi' the blast.
Burns, Third Epistle to J. Lapraik.

Stook, twelve sheaves of corn stuck upright, their upper ends inclining towards each other like a high pitched roof. Myrc's Instructions for Parish Priests (E. E. T. S.), [Notes, p. 79.]

stook (stük), v. [< stook, n.] I. trans. To set up, as sheaves of grain, in stooks or shocks. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

Still shearing, and clearing,
The tither stooked raw [rov].
Burns, To the Guildwife of Wauchope House.

II. intrans. To set up grain in stooks.

Those that binde and stooke are likewise to have 8d. a day, for binding and stooking of winter come is a man's labor. Best's Farming Book (1641), p. 43. (E. Peacock.)

stooker (stük'ér), n. [< stook + -er.] One who sets up sheaves in stooks or shocks in the harvest-field. J. Wilson.

stool (stöl), n. [*< ME. stool, stole, stol, < AS. stöl = OS. stöl = OFries. stöl = D. stoel = MLG. stöl, LG. stol = OHG. stuol, stual, stöl, MHG. stuol, G. stuhl = Icel. stöll = Sw. Dan. stol = Goth. stöls, a seat, chair; cf. O.Bulg. stoli = Russ. stol = Lith. stulas, a table, = Gr. στῆλη, an upright slab (see stela); from the root of stall, stell, ult. from the root of stand: see stall, stell, stand.]* 1. A seat or chair; now, in particular, a seat, whether high or low, consisting of a piece of wood mounted usually on three or four legs, and without a back, intended for one person; also, any support of like construction used as a rest for the feet, or for the knees when kneeling.

I may nougte stonde ne stoupe ne with-oute a stole knele.
Piers Plowman (B), v. 394.

By sitting on the stage, you may . . . have a good stool for sixpence.
Dekker, Gull's Hornbook, p. 141.

Oh! who would cast and balance at a desk,
Perch'd like a crow upon a three-legged stool?
Tennyson, Audley Court.

2†. The seat of a bishop; a see.

This bispyche [Salisbury] wes hwylen two bispyche; the other stol wes at Remmesbury, . . . the other at Schireburne.
Old Eng. Misc. (ed. Morris), p. 145.

3. Same as ducking-stool.

I'll speed me to the pond, where the high stool
On the long plank hangs o'er the muddy pool,
That stool, the dread of every scolding queen,
Yet sure, a lover should not die so mean.
Gay, Shepherd's Week, Wednesday, l. 107.

4. The seat used in easing the bowels; hence, a fecal evacuation; a discharge from the bowels.—5†. A frame for tapestry-work.

This woful lady lerned had in youthe
So that she werken and embrouden couthe,
And weven in hir stole the redevore
As hit of women hath be woned yore.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 2352.

6. The root or stump of a timber-tree, or of a bush, cane, grass, etc., which throws up shoots; also, the cluster of shoots thus produced.

What is become of the remains of these ancient vineyards, as vines shoot strongly from the stool, and are not easily eradicated?
Archæologia, III. 91. (Davies.)

The male prisoners, who were besom-makers, had been seen cutting sticks in Sweethope Dene . . . a few days before, and these sticks, having been compared with some stools in that secluded wood from which cuttings had been made, were found to correspond.

North-Country Lore and Legend, II. 254.

7. The mother plant from which young plants are propagated by the process of layering. Lindley.—8. Naut.: (a) A small channel in the side of a vessel for the deadeyes of the backstays. (b†) An ornamental block placed over the stem to support a poop-lantern.—9. A movable pole or perch to which a pigeon is fastened as a lure or decoy for wild birds. See the extract under stool-pigeon, 1. Hence—10. A stool-pigeon; also, a decoy-duck.

The decoys, or stools, as they are called, are always set to windward of the blind. . . . The stools should be set in a crescent-shaped circle [about fifty of them] with the heads of the decoys pointing to the wind. Shore Birds, p. 44.

11. Material spread on the bottom for oyster-spit to cling to; set, either natural or artificial. See cultch.—Back-stool, a kind of low easy-chair.—Folding stool. See fold.—Office stool, a high stool made for use by persons writing at a high desk, such as are used by bookkeepers and clerks.—Stool of a window, or window-stool, in arch., the flat piece on which the sash shuts down, corresponding to the sill of a door.—Stool of repentance, in Scotland, an elevated seat in a church on which persons were formerly made to sit to receive public rebuke as a punishment for fornication or adultery. Compare cutty-stool.

5965

What! d'ye think the lads wi' the kilts will care for yer synods, and yer presbyteries, and yer buttock-mail, and yer stool o' repentance?
Scott, Waverley, xxx.

To fall between two stools, to lose, or be disappointed in, both of two things between which one is hesitating.

No one would have thought that . . . Lily was aware . . . that she was like to fall to the ground between two stools—having two lovers, neither of whom could serve her turn.
Trollope, Last Chronicle of Barset, xxxv.

(See also camp-stool, footstool, night-stool, piano-stool.)

stool (stöl), v. [< stool, n.] I. intrans. 1. To throw up shoots from the root, as a grass or a grain-plant; form a stool. See stool, n., 6.

I worked very hard in the copse of young ash with my bill-hook and a shearing knife, cutting out the saplings where they stooled too close together.
R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, xxxviii.

2. To decoy duck or other fowl by means of stools. [U. S.]

For wet stooling, the wooden ones [decoys] are preferable, as the tin ones soon rust and become worthless.
Shore Birds, p. 45.

3. To be decoyed; respond to a decoy. [U. S.]

They [widgeons] stool well to any shoal-water duck decoys, and answer their call. Sportsman's Gazetteer, p. 206.

4. To evacuate the bowels.

II. trans. To plow; cultivate. [Prov. Eng.]
—To stool turfs, to set turfs two and two, one against the other, to be dried by the wind. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

stool-ball (stöl'bál), n. An outdoor game of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, generally played by women alone, but sometimes in company with men. See second quotation.

Daugh. Will you go with me?
Woocor. What shall we do there, wench?
Daugh. Why, play at stool-ball.
Fletcher (and another), Two Noble Kinsmen, v. 2.

Stool-ball. This game, so often mentioned in old writers, is still played in almost every village in Sussex, and is for ladies and girls exactly what cricket is to men. Two pieces of board 18 inches by 12 are fixed to two sticks from 3 to 4 feet high, according to the age of the players. These sticks are stuck in the ground sloping a little backwards, and from 10 to 15 yards apart. The players take sides, generally eight to ten each. . . . The bowler pitches the ball at the board, which in fact is the wicket. If he hits it the player is out. The same is the case if the ball is caught; and the running out, stumping, &c., are exactly like cricket.
N. and Q., 3d ser., XI. 457.

stool-end (stöl'end), n. In mining, a part of rock left unworked for the purpose of supporting the rest.

stool-pigeon (stöl'pij'on), n. 1. A pigeon fastened to a stool, and used as a decoy.

The Stool-Pigeon, also, as familiar to English ears as to ours, exists here—and even in the Eastern States—still in both its primary signification and its figurative extension. In the former it means the pigeon, with its eyes stitched up, fastened on a stool, which can be moved up and down by the hidden fowler, an action which causes the bird to flutter anxiously. This attracts the passing flocks of wild pigeons, which alight and are caught by a net, which may be sprung over them.
De Vere, Americanisms, p. 210.

Hence—2. A person employed as a decoy: as, a stool-pigeon for a gambling-house: such a fellow is generally a "rook" who pretends to be a "pigeon." See pigeon, 2, and rook, 3.

stoom (stöm), n. and v. Same as stum.

stoop<sup>1</sup> (stöp), v. [Formerly and still dial. stoup; < ME. stoupen, stoupen, stuppen, < AS. stūpian = MD. stuppen = Icel. stūpa (very rare), stoop, = Norw. stupa, fall, drop, = Sw. stupa, dial. stjupa, fall, drop, tr. lower, incline, tilt; akin to steep<sup>1</sup>: see steep<sup>1</sup>, and cf. steep<sup>2</sup>. The reg. mod. form from AS. stūpian is stoup (pron. stoup), as in dialectal use. The retention of or reversion to the orig. AS. vowel-sound ö occurs also in room (< AS. rūm) (and in wound (as pron. wönd), < AS. wund).] I. intrans. 1. To bend; bow; incline; especially, of persons, to lower the body by bending forward and downward.

He hit on his helme with a heuy sword,
That gruit hym full gretly, gert hym to stoupe.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 7256.

The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light.
Shak., Venus and Adonis, l. 1023.

How sweetly does this fellow take his dowst!
Stoops like a camel!
Fletcher (and another?), Nice Valour, iv. 1.

2. To be bent or inclined from the perpendicular; specifically, to carry the head and shoulders habitually bowed forward from the upright line of the rest of the body.

A good leg will fall; a straight back will stoop; a black beard will turn white.
Shak., Hen. V., v. 2. 163.

Tall trees stooping or soaring in the most picturesque variety.
George Eliot, Felix Holt, xxiii.

3. To come down; descend.

stoop

The cloud may stoop from heaven and take the shape,
With fold to fold, of mountain or of cape.
Tennyson, Princess, vi. (song).

4. Specifically, to swoop upon prey or quarry, as a hawk; pounce.

As I am a gentleman,
I'll meet next cocking, and bring a haggard with me
That stoops as free as lightning.
Tomkis (?), Albumazar, iii. 5.

Here stands my dove; stoop at her if you dare.

B. Jonson, Alchemist, v. 3.

5. To condescend; deign: especially expressing a lowering of the moral self, and generally followed by an infinitive or the preposition to.

Is Religion a beggarly and contemptible thing, that it doth not become the greatness of your minds to stoop to take any notice of it?
Stillingfleet, Sermons, I. v.

Frederic, indeed, stooped for a time even to use the language of adulation.
Macaulay, Frederic the Great.

6. To yield; submit; succumb.

Thus hath the Field and the Church stooped to Mahomet.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 242.

I will make thee stoop, thou abject.
B. Jonson, Every Man out of his Humour, v. 3.

II. trans. 1. To bend downward; bow.

Myself . . .
Have stooped my neck under your injuries.
Shak., Rich. II., iii. 1. 19.

She stooped her by the tunnel's side.

Scott, Marmion, vi. 30.

2. To incline; tilt: as, to stoop a cask. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]—3. To bring or take down; lower, as a flag or a sail.

Nor, with that Consul join'd, Vespasian could prevail
In thirty several fights, nor make them stoop their sail.
Drayton, Polyolbion, viii. 212.

4. To put down; abase; submit; subject.

I will stoop and humble my intents
To your well-practised wise directions.
Shak., 2 Hen. IV., v. 2. 120.

5. To cast down; prostrate; overthrow; overcome.

You have found my spirit; try it now, and teach me
To stoop whole kingdoms.
Fletcher, Humorous Lieutenant, i. 1.

6†. To swoop or pounce down upon.

The hawk that first stooped my pheasant is killed by the spaniel that first sprang all of our side.

Webster and Dekker, Northward Hoe, v. 1.

7. To steep; macerate. [Prov. Eng.]
stoop<sup>1</sup> (stöp), n. [< stoop<sup>1</sup>, v.] 1. The act of stooping or bending down; hence, a habitual bend of the back or shoulders: as, to walk with a stoop.

Now observe the stoops,
The bendings, and the falls.
B. Jonson, Sejanus, i. 1.

His clumsy figure, which a great stoop in his shoulders, and a ludicrous habit he had of thrusting his head forward, by no means redeemed.

Dickens, Martin Chuzzlewit, ii.
2. The darting down of a bird on its prey; a swoop; a pounce.

Once a kite, hovering over the garden, made a stoop at me.
Swift, Gulliver's Travels, ii. 5.

Hence—3†. That which stoops or swoops; a hawk. [Rare.]

You glorious martyrs, you illustrious stoops,
That once were cloister'd in your fleshy coats.
Quarles, Emblems, v. 10.

4. A descent from superiority, dignity, or power; a condescension, concession, or submission: as, a politic stoop.

Can any loyal subject see
With patience such a stoop from sovereignty?
Dryden.

To give the stoop, to stoop; submit; yield.

O that a king should give the stoop to such as these.

Ep. Hacket, Abp. Williams, ii. 186. (Davies.)

stoop<sup>2</sup>, stoup<sup>2</sup> (stöp, stoup), n. [< ME. stop, stope, appar. a var. (due to confusion with the related ME. stoppe, < AS. stoppa: see stop<sup>2</sup>) of **stepe*, **steap*, < AS. stēp, a cup, = MD. stoop, a cup, vessel, D. stoop, a measure of about two quarts, = MLG. stōp, a cup, vessel, also a measure, LG. stoop, a measure, = OHG. stouf, stouph, MHG. stouf, G. stau, a cup, = Icel. stau, a cup, = Sw. stop (< D. or LG.), a measure of about three pints; also in dim. form, MHG. stubechm, G. stübchen, a gallon, measure; prob. ult. identical with Icel. stau, a lump (orig. meaning something cast), hence a vessel of metal, etc., from the verb represented by Icel. steypa = Sw. stōpa = Dan. støbe, cast (metals), pour out (liquids), E. steep: see steep<sup>2</sup>. The spelling stoup is partly Sc., and in the Sc. pron. stoup is prob. of Icel. origin.] 1. A drinking-vessel; a beaker; a flagon; a tankard; a pitcher.

Fetch me a stoupe of liquor.
Shak. (folio 1623), Hamlet, v. 1. 68.

Hence—2. Liquor for drinking, especially wine, considered as the contents of a stoop: as, he tossed off his stoop.

He took his rouse with stoops of Rhenish wine. Marlowe, Doctor Faustus, III. 4.

3. A basin for holy water, usually placed in a niche or against the wall or a pillar at the entrance of Roman Catholic churches; also used in private houses. In the Greek Church it is called a columbin or hagiamateron. In this sense usually written stoup. Sometimes also called by the French name benitier, and formerly holy-water stock, holy-water stone.

Holy-water Stoup—Church of San Miniato, Florence.

stoop<sup>3</sup> (stōp), n. [Derived from D. usage in New York; < D. stoep, a stoop (een hooge stoep, a high stoop), MD. stoepe, a stoop, a bench at the door, = OS. stōpa = OHG. stupa, MHG. stupe, G. stufe, a step, guide; a doublet of stap, lit. a step, and from the root of stop (AS. stopan, steppan, pret. stōp): see step.] An uncovered platform before the entrance of a house, raised, and approached by means of steps. Sometimes incorrectly used for porch or terrace. [U. S.; originally New York.]

Stoop—Van Brunt after H. S. at Greenwich, New York.

Nearly all the houses [in Albany] were built with their gables to the street, and each had heavy wooden Dutch stoops with a seat at its end. J. F. Cooper, Satanstoe, XL.

They found him [staying] according to custom, smoking his afternoon pipe on the stoop, or bench at the porch of his house. Jessie, Knickerbocker, p. 277.

stoop<sup>4</sup> (stōp), n. [Also stoup; a var. of stulp.] 1. The stock or stem, as of a tree; the stump.

It may be known, hard by an ancient stoop, Where grew an oak in elder days, decay'd. Tamora, and Gilgamesh, IV. 2.

2. A post or pillar; specifically, an upright post used to mark distance, etc., on a race-course.

Stoops, before a doore, warche. Palsgrave.
Carts or wains are debarr'd and letted [by coaches]; the milk-maid's ware is often put in the dirt, . . . being crowded and shrouded up against stalls and stoops. John Taylor, Works, II. 212. (London.)

And 'twere well to have a fix at the end of stoop of each lot to be let down as soon as the first horse is put the stoop up. Quoted in N. and I. Q., 7th ser., VI. 421.

3. An upright support; a prop or column; specifically, in coal-mining, a pillar of coal left to support the roof.—4. Figuratively, a sustainer; a patron.

Dalhousie, of an auld descent,
My chief, my stoop, and ornament. Rainey, Poems, II. 77. (Janet's.)

[Prov. Eng. and Scotch in all uses.]
Stoop and room, a method of mining coal in use in Scotland, differing but little from the pillar and breast method. See pillar.—Stoop and roop. [Also stoop and roop; a rhyming formula, of which the literal or original meaning is not obvious; explained by Jamieson as for stump and rump.] The whole of everything; every jot; often used adverbially.

"But the stow king, Hobbie?" said John Elliot: "we're utterly ruined. . . . We are ruined stoop and roop." Scott, Black Dwarf, x.

Stoop and thirl. Same as stoop and room. N. and I. Q., 7th ser., VI. 294.

stooped (stōp'ed or stōp't), a. [< stoop + -ed.] Having a stoop in posture or carriage; round-shouldered; bent.

The college witticism that "— and —" (another highly esteemed university dignity) "are the stooped men in New Haven." The Atlantic, LXIV. 557.

stooper (stōp'pēr), n. [< stoop + -er.] One who or that which stoops.

stooping (stōp'ping), p. a. 1. Leaning; bending forward and downward; hence, bent; bowed: as, stooping shoulders; a stooping figure.—2. Yielding; submissive.

A stooping kind of disposition, clean opposite to contempt. Hooker, Eccles. Polity, VII. 21.

3. In her., swooping or flying downward as if about to strike its prey: noting a hawk used as a bearing. Also spelled stouping.

stoopingly (stōp'ping-li), adv. In a stooping manner or position; with a bending of the body forward. Sir H. Wotton, Reliquim, p. 260.

stoop-shouldered (stōp'shōl'derd), a. Having a habitual stoop in the shoulders and back.

stoor<sup>1</sup> (stōr), a. [Also stour; early mod. E. also stoure; Se. stour, stoure, sture, < ME. stoor, stour, stōr, < AS. stōr = OFries. stōr = Icel. stōrr = Dan. Sw. stör, great, large.] 1. Great; large; strong; mighty.

He was stōr man of strenght, stoutest in armes.

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), I. 3743.

On a grene hille he sawe a tre,

The savoure of hit was stronge & stōr.

Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnival), p. 101.

2. Stiff; hard; harsh.

Stōr, rude as course clothe is, gros. Palsgrave.

Now, to look on the feathers of all manner of birds, you shall see some so low, weak, and short, some so coarse, stōr, and hard, and the ribs so bristle, thin, and narrow, that it can neither be drawn, pared, nor yet will set on. Ascham, Toxophilus (ed. 1560), p. 123.

3. Austere; harsh; severe; violent; turbulent; said of persons or their words or actions.

O *stōr*ge lily *stōr*ge, what dost thou?

Chaucer, Merchant's Tale, I. 1123.

Thenne he gef hym god-day, & with a gent lered,

& as he stode, he stōrde hym with ful stōr wordes.

Sir Gawayne and the Green Knight (E. E. T. S.), I. 1201.

*Stōr*ge of convercyon, *stōr*ge. Palsgrave.

4. Harsh; deep-toned. Hallivell.

[Obsolete or provincial in all uses.]

stoor<sup>2</sup> (stōr), v. [Also stour; < ME. stōren, < AS. as if **stōrian*, a var. of stigran = MLG. stōren, etc., move, stir; see stir and stee, doublets of stoor.] 1. Intrans. 1. To move; stir. Hallivell. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

Take ye stōr not of that stōd, Whesour be quyer for dobl.
MS. Cantab., II. II. 25, f. 191. (Hallivell.)

2. To move actively; keep stirring. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]—3. To rise up in clouds, as smoke, dust, etc. Hallivell. [Prov. Eng.]

II. trans. 1. To stir up, as liquor. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.] Hence—2. To pour; especially, to pour leisurely out of any vessel held high. [Scotch.]—3. To sprinkle. Jamieson, [Scotch.]

stoor<sup>3</sup> (stōr), n. [Also stour; < stoor<sup>2</sup>, v. (cf. stir and stee).] In some senses confused in the spelling stour with stoor<sup>3</sup>. 1. Stir; bustle; agitation; contention. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

An *stōr*ge cōckneyd on *stōr*ge and dñ.

Carlyle, in Fraser, I. 161.

2. Dust in motion; hence, also, dust at rest.

[Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

Our ancient crown's fa'n in the dust—

Be it blis' them w' the *stōr*ge o't.

Burns, Awa, Whigs, Awa.

3. A gush of water. Jamieson; Hallivell (under stour, stōr). [Scotch.]—4. Spray. [Scotch.]—5. A sufficient quantity of yeast for brewing. Hallivell. [Prov. Eng.]

stoort, n. A Middle English form of stoor<sup>3</sup>.
stoorey (stō'ri), n. [cf. stoor<sup>2</sup>, n., 5.] A mixture of warm beer and oatmeal stirred up with sugar. [Prov. Eng.]

stoorness (stōr'nes), n. [Also stourness; < ME. stōrnness, stōrnness; < stoor + -ness.] Strength; power.

And Tredell, the tru knight, traytury he slogh, Nocht thourgh stōrnness of strokes, ne with strenght one.

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), I. 1035.

stoory (stō'ri), a. [Also stoury, stōry; < stoor<sup>2</sup>, n., 2, + -y.] Dusty. [Scotch.]

An aye she took the filther souk,

To drōuk the *stōr*ge tow.

Burns, I fought my Wife a Stane of Mint.

stooth (stōth), n. [Early mod. E. stoth; prob. < Icel. stoth = Sw. stod, a post; cf. AS. studu, > ME. stode, I. stud, a post, etc.; see stud.] A stud; a post; a battens. [Obsolete or provincial.]

For setting in stōth stōth and mending the wall of the rectory's chancel over the steeple.

Housden Hall (1552), in Fabric Rolls of York Minster, [p. 255. (E. Peacock.)]

stooth (stōth), v. t. [< stooth, n.] To lath and plaster. Hallivell; Jamieson. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

stoothing (stōth'ing), n. [< stooth + -ing, or a var. of studding, accom. to stooth.] Studding; battening.

stop<sup>1</sup> (stōp), v.; pret. and pp. stopped, ppr. stop- ping. [< ME. stoppen, stoppien, < AS. stopian (in comp. for stopian), stop up, = OS. stup- pōn = MD. D. stoppen = MLG. LG. stoppen, stuff, cram, = OHG. stoffōn, stoffōn, MHG. G. stopfen, stoppen = Icel. Sw. stoppa = Dan. stoppe, stop. (a) According to the usual view, = OF. estouper, F. étouper = OSp. estopar = It. stoppare, stop up with tow, < LL. stupare, stuppare, stop up with tow, cram, stop, < L. stupa, stupa = Gr. στῦψ, στῦψ, coarse part of flax, hards, oakum, tow; see stupa, stapel. (b) But this explanation, which suits phonetically, is on grounds of meaning somewhat doubtful; it does not appear from the early instances of the verb that the sense 'stop with tow,' 'stuff,' is the original. The similarity with the L. and Rom. forms may be accidental, and the Teut. verb may be different (though mingled with the other), and connected with OHG. stophōn, MHG. stuppen, stuppen, pierce, and so ult. with E. stump. Cf. stuff, v., derived, through the F., from the same Teut. source.] 1. trans. 1. To close up, as a hole, passage, or cavity, by filling, stuffing, plugging, or otherwise obstructing; block up; choke; as, to stop a vent or a channel.

Ther is an eldre thet is y-hote the lath aspis, thet is of zuiche kende thet hi *stoppe*th thet on care mid erthe, and thet othe mid harte taye, thet hi ne here thane chamere.

Agaynste of Inyrt (E. E. T. S.), p. 257.

Impetuous Caesar, dead, and turn'd to clay,

Might stop a hole to keep the wind away.

Shak., Hamlet, v. 1. 237.

Mountains of ice, that stop the imagined way,

Beyond Petora eastward, to the rich

Cathalan coast. Milton, P. L., x. 291.

2. To make close or tight; close with or as with a compressible substance, or a lid or stopper; as, to stop a bottle with a cork; hence, to staunch.

The eldest and wysest at Geball were they that mended and *stoppe*th thy shippes. Bible of 1551, Ezek. xxvii. 9.

Have by some surgeon, Shyllock, on your charge,
To stop his wounds, lest he do bleed to death.

Shak., M. of V., iv. 1. 238.

Children yet

Unborn will stop their ears when thou art nam'd.

Beau, and FL, Laws of Cauchy, v. 1.

This place [a Maronite convent] is famous for excellent wine, which they preserve, as they do in all these parts, in large earthen jars, close *stoppe*d down with clay.

Peacock, Description of the East, II. l. 103.

3. To shut up; inclose; confine.

Forth yf combs rooke of hony weep.

Three dayes *stoppe*d up attie home hem [bees] keep.

Palsgrave, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 128.

Whatever split . . . leaves the fair at large shall feel sharp vengeance soon o'ertake his sins,
Be *stoppe*d in vials, or transfus'd with plins.

Pease, II. of the L., II. 126.

4. To hinder from progress or procedure; cause to cease moving, going, acting, working, or the like; impede; check; head off; arrest; as, to stop a car; to stop a ball; to stop a clock; to stop a thief.

"How dare you stop my errand?" he says;

"My orders you must obey."

Child, Song (Child's Ballads, II. 41).

Did they exert themselves to help onward the great movement of the human race, or to stop it?

Macaulay, Sir J. Macintosh.

5. To hold back, as from a specified course, purpose, end, or the like; restrain; hinder; followed by from (obsolete or dialectal of).

No man shall stop me of this boasting. 2 Cor. xi. 10.

Thus does he poison, kill, and slay, . . .

Yet stop me o' my lawfu' prey.

Burns, Death and Dr. Hornbook.

6. To prevent the continuance of; suppress; extinguish; bring to an end; as, to stop a leak.

Thel patten here hōdes upon his mouth, and stoppen his brethe, and so thei sleen him.

Mandeville, Travels, p. 201.

If there be any love to my deservings

Borne by her virtuous self, I cannot stop it.

Beau, and FL, Knight of Burning Castle, I. 1.

7. To check or arrest by anticipation.

The grief . . . that *stop*s his answer.

Shak., Lucerne, I. 1664.

Every bold sinner, when about to engage in the commission of any known sin, should . . . stop the execution of his purpose with this question: Do I believe that God has denounced death to such a practice, or do I not?

South, (Johnson.)

8. To keep back; withhold.

Do you mean to stop any of William's wages, about the sack he lost the other day at Huckleby fair?

Shak., 2 Hen. IV., v. 1. 24.

stop

Nor stops, for one bad cork, his butler's pay.
Pope, Imit. of Horace, II. ii. 63.

9. To cease from; discontinue; bring to a stop.
 When the crickets stopped their cry,
 When the owls forbore a term,
 You heard music; that was I.
Browning, Serenade at the Villa.

10. In musical instruments: (a) Of the lute and viol classes, to press (a string) with the finger so as to shorten its vibrating length, and thus raise the pitch of the tone produced from it. (b) Of the wind group generally, to close (a finger-hole in the tube) so as to change the nodes of the vibrating column of air, and thus alter the pitch of the tone. (c) Of wind-instruments of the trumpet class, to insert the hand into (the bell) so as to shorten the length of the vibrating column of air, and thus to raise the pitch of the tone.—11. Naut., to make fast with a small line: as, to stop a line to a harpoon-staff.—12. To put the stops, or marks of punctuation, in; point, as a written composition; punctuate.
 If his sentences were properly stopped.
Landor. (Imp. Dict.)

13. In masonry, plastering, etc., to point or dress over (an imperfect or damaged place in a wall) by covering it with cement or plaster.—14. In hort., same as top.

After the end of July it is not advisable to continue the topping—technically stopping—of the young shoots.
Encyc. Brit., XII. 254.

15. To ward off; parry. [Pugilistic slang.]—A stopping oyster! See oyster.—Stopping the glass. See glass.—To stop a gap. See gap.—To stop a line. See line.—To stop down a lens, in photog., etc., to reduce the amount of light admitted through a lens by using stops or diaphragms. See stop, n., 12.—To stop off. (a) In foundry, to fill in (a part of a mold) with sand to prevent metal from running into that part when the casting is made. The form of the casting can frequently be thus changed without the expense of altering a pattern or making a new pattern. (b) In galvanoplastic operations, to apply a varnish to (parts of a plate or object), to prevent the deposit of metal upon the varnished parts during immersion in the gilding or electroplating solution.—To stop one's mouth, to silence one; especially, to silence one by a sop or bribe.

Let repentance stop your mouth,
 Learn to redeem your fault.
Ford, Lover's Melancholy, iv. 1.

If you would have her silent, stop her mouth with that ring.
Wycherley, Gentleman Dancing-Master, v. 1.
 To stop out. (a) In the arts, to protect (a surface, etc.) from chemical or other action by covering with a coating as, in photography, to cover with paint, paper, etc., as parts of a negative which are not to be printed, in electrotyping, to cover with wax, as parts of the black leaded mold to prevent the deposit of copper on those parts; in etching, to cover with a varnish or other resisting composition, as parts of a plate which are not to be bitten by the acid. (b) Theat., to cover (some of the teeth) with black wax, so as to make them invisible.—Syn. 1 and 4. To interrupt, block, blockade, barricade, intercept, end.—9. To suspend, intermit.

II. intrans. 1. To check one's self; leave off; desist; stay; halt; come to a stand or stop, as in walking, speaking, or any other action or procedure.

Why stops my lord? shall I not hear my task?
Shak., 3 Hen. VI., iii. 2. 52.

Terence . . . always judiciously stops short before he comes to the downright pathetic.

Goldsmith, Sentimental Comedy.

No rattling wheels stop short before these gates.
Cowper, Task, iv. 144.

2. To discontinue; come to an end; cease to be: as, the noise stopped; an annuity stops.—3. To make a halt or a stay of longer or shorter duration; tarry; remain.

We . . . went about half a mile to the east of Tortura, not designing to stop there.

Pococke, Description of the East, II. i. 69.

Mr. Brontë and old Tabby went to bed. . . . But Charlotte . . . stopped up . . . till her weak eyes failed to read or to sew.
Mrs. Gaskell, Charlotte Brontë, II. 121.

"I would rather stop abed," said I; "what have I to do with fighting?"
R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, lxiv.

I've been up country some weeks, stopping with my mother.
S. O. Jewett, Deephaven, p. 17.

4. To intercept, ward off, or parry a blow. [Pugilistic slang.]

Don't stop with your head too frequently.
A. L. Gordon, In Utrunque Paratus.

To stop off or over, to make a brief or incidental stay at some point in the course of a journey; lie off or over: also used as a noun or adjective: as, a stop-over check; the ticket allows a stop-off in Chicago. [Collog.]—To stop out, to stay out all night, as in the streets, or away from one's proper lodging-place.

Mr. Hall, at Bow-street, only says, "Poor boy, let him go." But it's only when we've done nothink but stop out that he says that.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, II. 563.

stop<sup>1</sup> (stop), n. [< stop, v.] 1. The act of stopping, in any sense. (a) A filling or closing up.

5967

A breach that craves a quick expedient stop!
Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iii. 1. 288.

(b) An impeding or hindering; obstruction; stoppage.

What's he? One sent,
 I feare, from my dead mother, to make stop
 Of our intended voyage.
Brome, Antipodes, i. 7.

(c) A pause; a stand; a halt.

When he took leave now, he made a hundred stops,
 Desir'd an hour, but half an hour, a minute.
Fletcher, Humorous Lieutenant, iii. 1.

Mrs. Crummies advancing with that stage walk which consists of a stride and a stop alternately.
Dickens, Nicholas Nickleby, xxv.

(d) Termination; ending.

How kingdoms sprung, and how they made their stop,
 I well observed.
J. Beaumont, Psyche, ii. 49.

(e) A stay; a tarrying.

Coming to the Corner above Bethlehem Gate, [we] made a stop there, in order to expect the return of our Messenger.
Maunder, Aleppo to Jerusalem, p. 67.

2†. A state of hesitation or uncertainty; a standstill.

At which sudden question, Martius was a little at a stop.
Bacon, Holy War.

3. That which stops or hinders; especially, an obstacle or impediment; specifically, a weir.

He that is used to go forward, and findeth a stop, falleth out of his own favour.
Bacon, Empire (ed. 1887).

What they called stops . . . were in effect weirs or kideals.

Sir J. Hawkins, in Walton's Complete Angler, p. 274, note.

4. In musical instruments: (a) Of the lute and viol classes, a pressure on a string so as to shorten its vibrating length, and raise the pitch of its tone. (b) Of wind-instruments, the closing of a finger-hole in the tube so as to alter the pitch of its tone. (c) Of wind-instruments of the trumpet class, the inserting of the hand into the bell so as to raise the pitch of the tone.—5. Any lever or similar device for thus stopping a string or finger-hole.

His jesting spirit, which is now crept into a lute-string and now governed by stops.
Shak., Much Ado, iii. 2. 62.

In every instrument are all tunes to him that has the skill to find out the stop.
Brome, Sparagus Garden, iii. 4.

6. In an organ, a graduated set of pipes of the same kind, and giving tones of the same quality. A complete stop has at least one pipe for each digital of the keyboard to which it belongs; if a stop has less, it is called a partial stop; if more, it is called a compound stop or mixture stop. The number of pipes constituting a stop varies according to the compass of the keyboard to which it belongs, the usual number being now sixty-one for manual keyboards, and either twenty-seven or thirty for pedal keyboards, while mixture-stops have between twice and five times as many. Stops are variously classified, as follows: (a) As to general quality of tone, the principal qualities recognized being the organ-tone (as in the open diapason, the octave, the fifteenth, etc.), the flute-tone (as in the bourdon, the stopped diapason, the melodia, the flute, etc.), the string-tone (as in the viol da gamba, the viola, the dulciana, etc.), and the reed-tone (as in the oboe, the clarinet, the trumpet, etc.). The first three groups are also called flue-stops, and the last reed-stops, from the construction of their pipes (see pipe, 2). (b) As to the pitch of the tones relative to the digitals used, the two classes being foundation- and mutation-stops, of which the former give tones exactly corresponding to the normal pitch of the digitals, while the latter give tones distant from that pitch by some fixed interval, like one, two, or three octaves, or even a twelfth. Foundation-stops are usually called eight-foot stops, because the length of an open pipe sounding the second C below middle C is approximately eight feet; while for an analogous reason mutation-stops sounding an octave below the normal pitch of the digitals are called sixteen-foot stops; those sounding the octave above, four-foot stops; those sounding the second octave above, two-foot stops, etc. The specific names of stops are not only numerous, but often vary without sufficient reason. Some names have a merely technical significance, as diapason, principal, etc.; some indicate the instrument which they are intended to imitate, as flute, trumpet, violinello, etc.; while others mark the extent of the mutation produced, as octave, twelfth, quint, etc. Each partial organ has its own stops, which can be sounded only by means of the digitals of its own keyboard. The pipes of a stop are usually arranged in a transverse row on the wind-chest, the order of disposition, or plantation, varying somewhat. Under them, and between the upper and middle boards of the chest, is a movable strip of wood called a slider, which (together with both these boards) is perforated with holes corresponding to the plantation of the pipes. The position of the slider is controlled through a system of levers by a handle near the keyboard called a register, stop-knob, or stop. When this handle is pulled out or drawn, the holes of the slider are coincident with those of the two boards, so that the air can pass freely from the pallets into the pipes; when the handle is pushed in, the holes of the slider are not coincident with those of the two boards, and communication between the pallets and the pipes is cut off. In the one case the stop is said to be "on," in the other "off." When the slider controlling the use of the upper pipes of a stop is separated from that controlling the lower, the stop is called divided. Since the handles controlling the use of the pipes or stops proper are made of the same general shape as those controlling various mechanical appliances, like couplers, the former are also called sounding or speaking stops, in distinction from the latter, or mechanical stops. Stops whose quality or power of tone is decidedly individual, so as to fit them for the performance of solo melodies, are called solo stops. See organ, reed-organ, pipe, etc.

stop-collar

The pathetic stop of Petrarch's poetical organ was one he could pull out at pleasure.

Lowell, Among my Books, 1st ser., p. 368.

7. Same as stop-knob.—8. pl. In the harpsichord, handles controlling levers by which the position of the jacks could be varied so as to alter the force or quality of the tones produced.—9. A mark to indicate a stop or pause in reading; a mark of punctuation.

I can write fast and fair.

Most true orthography, and observe my stops.

Middleton, More Dissemblers besides Women, iii. 2.

Who walked so slowly, talked in such a hurry.
 And with such wild contempt for stops and Lindley Murray!

C. S. Calverley, Isabel.

10. In joinery, one of the pieces of wood nailed on the frame of a door to form the recess or rebate into which the door shuts.—11. Naut.: (a) A projection at the head of a lower mast, supporting the trestletrees. (b) A bit of small line used to lash or fasten anything temporarily: as, hammock-stops, awning-stops.—12. In optics, a perforated diaphragm inserted between the two combinations of a double lens, or placed in front of a single lens, to intercept the extreme rays that disturb the perfection of the image. The practical effect of the stop is to increase the depth of the focus and sharpness of definition, but to diminish the illumination in the exact ratio of the diameter of the stop to that of the lens, and hence, in photography, to increase correspondingly the necessary time of exposure.

Microscopes, in which, whatever be the size of the lens itself, the greater portion of its surface is rendered inoperative by a stop.
W. B. Carpenter, Micros., § 10.

13. In bookbinding, a small circular finishing-tool used by bookbinders to stop a line or fillet at its intersection with another line.—14. In lace-manuf. (in the application of the Jacquard attachment described under loom, 2, to a lace-frame), a point at which the different sets of warp-threads are concentrated or brought to a sort of focus, and which in the design of a pattern is taken as a basis for measurement in determining the distances the respective threads in the set must be moved to form the desired pattern. The movements of the mechanism are adjusted in accordance with these measurements.—15. In phonetics, an alphabetic sound involving a complete closure of the mouth-organs; a mute; a check.—16. The concavity of the profile of a dog's face, specially marked in the bulldog and pug.—17. In fencing, the action whereby a fencer, instead of parrying a blow and then thrusting, allows a careless opponent to run on his sword-point. He may hasten the stop by extending the sword-arm. (See stop-thrust.) The stop is discouraged in fencing as a game, since much use of it shortens the passages, and destroys combinations of feints, disengagements, coupés, etc.—Double stop. See single stop.—Full stop. (a) A period. (b) In lute-playing: (1) A chord followed by a pause. (2) A chord in producing which all the strings are stopped by the fingers.—Geneva stop. See Geneva movement, under movement.—Half-stop, in an organ, a stop which contains half, or about half, the full number of stops.—Harmonic stop. See harmonic.—Incomplete or imperfect stop. See incomplete.—Open stop, in organ-building, a stop whose pipes are open at the upper end.—Pedal stop. See pedal.—Service stop, in railroading, a stop made by a railway-train, in the regular way and at stations designated by the regulation schedule, as distinguished from an emergency stop.—Single stop, in ship-building, the scoring down of the carlines between the beams, by which means a carline is prevented from sinking any lower than its intended position. The double stop is generally used for deeper carlines than the single stop.—To hunt upon the stop, to hunt with or like a stop-hound—that is, slowly and with frequent pauses; hence, to be lukewarm.

If any [Christian] step a little forward, do not the rest hunt upon the stop?
Rev. S. Ward, Sermons, p. 91.

To put a stop to, to cause to stop, temporarily or permanently; break off; end.—Syn. 1. Stop, Cessation, Stay, Suspension, Intermission, Pause, Rest. These words may denote the failure or interruption of forward motion or of activity. Stop is an energetic word, but the most general; it is opposed to going forward or going on; cessation may be temporary or final, and is opposed to continuance; a stay is a stop viewed as a lingering or delay; as, a short stay in the place; or, as a legal term, simply a stop: as, a stay of proceedings; suspension is a complete but presumably temporary stop: as, a suspension of work or pay; intermission is a strictly temporary stop; pause is a brief stop, in full expectation of going on; rest is a stop for refreshment from weariness.

stop<sup>2</sup> (stop), n. [< ME. stoppe, < AS. stoppa, a bucket or pail: see stop<sup>2</sup>.] A bucket; a pail; a small well-bucket; a milk-pail. Halliwel, [Prov. Eng.]

stop<sup>3</sup>, n. A Middle English form of stoop<sup>2</sup>.

stop-cock (stop'kok), n. A faucet with a valve of some form, operated by a handle: used to open or close a pipe or passage for water, gas, etc. Such cocks are sometimes made self-closing, to prevent waste.

stop-collar (stop'kol őr), n. In mach., an adjustable collar which can be placed and held by a set-screw on a shaft or rod as a stop or gage to limit the motion of a movable part sliding on the rod or shaft, as a fitting on the main shaft on which the carriage of a type-writer slides, and adjustments in many other machines.

stop-cylinder (stop'sil'in-dër), n. In printing. See cylinder-press and printing-machine.

stop-drill (stop'drill), n. A form of drill made with a solid shoulder, or admitting of the attachment of a collar by a side-screw, to limit the depth of penetration of the tool.

stope<sup>1</sup> (stöp), n. [Cf. ME. **stope* = MD. stoepe, etc., a step; or a var. of stape, stap, a step (cf. stopen, stope, stapen, pp. of stappen): see step, and cf. stoop<sup>3</sup>.] An excavation made in a mine to remove the ore which has been rendered accessible by the shafts and drifts. These are, to a certain extent, permanent constructions, being carefully supported by the necessary timbering and left open for passage, while the stopes are only supported so far as may be necessary for the safety of the mine, and are more or less completely filled up with the attle or refuse-rock left behind after the ore has been picked out and sent to the surface.

stope<sup>1</sup> (stöp), v. t. and i.; pret. and pp. stoped, ppr. stopping. [Cf. stope<sup>1</sup>, n.] In mining, to remove the contents of a vein. The stopping is done after a vein or lode has been laid open by means of the necessary shafts and drifts. See stopping.

stope<sup>2</sup> (stöp), n. An obsolete form of stoop<sup>2</sup>.

stope<sup>3</sup>, stopen. Middle English forms of stapen, past participle of step.

stop-finger (stop'fing'gër), n. Same as faller-wire, 2.

stop-gap (stop'gap), n. and a. [Cf. stop<sup>1</sup>, v., + obj. gap.] 1. n. That which fills a gap or hiatus, or, figuratively, that which serves as an expedient in an emergency.

I declare off; you shall not make a stop-gap of me.

Poete, The Coroners, l. 1.

A good deal of conversation which is . . . introduced as a stop-gap. Proc. Eng. Soc. Psych. Research, XVII, 430.

II. a. Filling a gap or pause, as in the course of talk.

The "well's" and "ah's," "don't-you-know's," and other stop-gap interjections.

Proc. Amer. Soc. Psych. Research, I, 312.

stop-gate (stop'gat), n. A gate used to divide a canal into sections, so that in case of a break in an embankment in one section the water can be shut off from flowing into it from other sections.

stop-hound (stop'hound), n. A dog trained to hunt slowly, stopping at the huntman's signal. Darwin (under stop).

Sir Roger, being at present too old for fox-hunting, to keep himself in action, has disposed of his beagles and got a pack of stop-hounds. Burdell, Spectator, No. 116.

stopping (stöp'ing), n. [Verbal n. of stop<sup>1</sup>, v.] In mining, the act of excavating mineral ground to remove the ore after this has been rendered accessible by the necessary preliminary excavations—namely, sinking one or more shafts or winzes and running drifts. —Overhand stopping, a method of working out the contents of a vein by advancing from below upward, the miner being thus always helped by gravity. It is the method most commonly employed. That part of the material thrown down which is worthless is raised to the surface, and the refuse rock (attle or deads) resting on the skulls remains in the excavation, helping to support the walls of the mine, and giving the miner a place on which to stand. —Underhand stopping, excavating the ore by working from above downward. In underhand stopping everything loosened by blasting has to be lifted up to be got out of the way. The advantage of this method is that in case the ore is very valuable, less of it may be lost by its getting so mixed with the attle that it cannot be picked out.

stop-knob (stop'nob), n. In organ-building, the handle by which the player controls the position of the slider belonging to a particular stop, or set of pipes. When the knob is drawn out, the pipes are ready to be sounded by the keys. The name of the stop is commonly written on the knob. Also called register and stop. See cut under reed-organ.

stopless (stop'les), a. [Cf. stop<sup>1</sup> + -less.] Not to be stopped or checked. [Rare.]

Making a civil and staid senate rule

And stopless as a running multitude
Sir W. Davenant, On King Charles the Second's Return

stop-motion (stop'mô'shon), n. In mechanics, a device for automatically arresting the motion of an engine or a machine, when from any cause it is necessary to stop suddenly to prevent injury to the machine or material. Stop-motion mechanisms are applied to looms, spinning, roving, and drawing-machines, winding-machines, elevators, knitting machines, and engines. They are divided into two classes: those operated by some mechanical means, as a weighted arm resting on the thread of a loom, where the breakage of the thread causes the arm to fall; and those actuated by electricity, in which the fall of an arm closes a circuit, and by means of a magnet sets in motion some mechanical device for arresting the motion. In most machines the usual method is the shifting of the belt that moves the machine. In engines the stoppage and fall of the governor closes the steam-valve. Electrical stop-motion appliances, not self-acting, are sometimes used; in case of a break-down the use of a push-button releases a weight that by suitable mechanism shuts off steam from the engine. —Fork-and-grid stop-motion, in a power-loom, a stop-motion in which a grid on the batten acts in connection with a fork, which when the weft-thread breaks causes a lever to drop and stops the loom.

stop-net (stop'net), n. An addition to the main net in seine-fishing. Encyc. Brit., IX, 254.

stop-order (stop'ôr'dër), n. In stock-broking, an order given by a person to his broker to sell or buy a specified stock when the price reaches a specified figure.

stop-over (stop'ô'vër), n. and a. See to stop off or over, under stop<sup>1</sup>, v. i.

stoppage (stop'ij), n. [Cf. stop<sup>1</sup> + -age.] 1. The act of stopping, in any sense, or the state of being stopped; especially, a stopping of motion or procedure.

His majesty . . . finding unexpected stoppage, tells you he now looks for a present proceed in his affairs.

Court and Times of Charles I., I, 314.

2. A deduction made from pay or allowances to repay advances, etc.—Stoppage in transit or in transitu, in law, the act of a seller of goods who has sent them on their way to the buyer, in reclaiming them before they have come into the actual possession or control of the buyer, and terminating or suspending performance of the sale: a right allowed in case of discovering the buyer to be insolvent.

stoppet, n. [ME., < AS. stoppa, a vessel: see stopp<sup>2</sup>.] A pail or bucket. Prompt. Parv., p. 477; Hallwell.

stopped (stopt), p. a. 1. In playing musical instruments, noting the effect produced by stopping in any of the senses described under stop<sup>1</sup>, v. t., 10.—2. In an organ, having the upper end plugged: said of a pipe: opposed to open. The tone produced by a stopped pipe is an octave lower than that produced by an open pipe of the same length. Stopped diapason, in organ-building. See diapason (a) — Stopped note. See note.

stopple<sup>1</sup>, n. An obsolete form of stopple.

stopple<sup>2</sup>, n. Same as estoppel.

Abatements, stopples, inhibitions.

Martin, Scourge of Villante, vii, 87.

stopper (stop'ër), n. [Cf. stop<sup>1</sup> + -er.] 1. One who or that which stops or plugs. (a) One who fills up holes or openings.

The ancients of Gebel and the wise men thereof were in thee thy calkers (margin: stoppers of chinks).

Ezek. xxvii, 9.

(b) That which closes or fills up (an opening, etc.), as a plug, a bung, or a cork; especially, such an article for the mouth of a fruit jar, decanter, or vial, when made of the same material as the vessel itself, and having no special name, as cork, umg, etc.; a stopple; specifically, a device for closing bottles for a rated water. See cut under siphon-bottle. (c) A convenient utensil made of wood, bone, ivory, or the like, formerly used to compress or pack some loose or flocculent substance into small compass.

I sold little bone "tobacco-stoppers" — they're seldom asked for now. Stoppers is quite out of fashion.

Maudslayi, London Labour and London Poor, I, 490.

(d) One who or that which brings to a stop or stand, especially, one of the players in tennis, football, and other games, who stops the balls. Hallwell. (e) Naut., a piece of rope secured at one end to a bolt or the like, used to check the motion of another rope or of a cable. Stoppers for cables are of various construction, such as an iron clamp with a lever or screw, a claw of iron with a rope attached, etc. (f) In an organ, a wooden plug inserted in the tops of certain kinds of pipes, as in those of the stopped diapason, flute, bourdon, etc., whence they are called stopped pipes. Such pipes are tuned by means of the stopper. (g) In a vehicle, a bar of wood with iron points pivoted to the body, and allowed to trail on the ground behind to serve as a stop or brake in ascending steep grades. Such a device is used, for instance, on locomotives plying on hilly streets, where stoppages are frequent.

2. The upper pad or principal callosity of the sole of a dog's foot.

The leg, or bones below the knee (of the greyhound), should be of good size, the stopper (or upper pad) well united to it, and firm in texture.

Dogs of Great Britain and America, p. 16.

3. A small tree of one of four species of the genus Lupinus occurring in Florida. Of the species L. buxifolia is the gorseon or Spanish stopper, L. monticola is the white stopper, and L. procerus is the red stopper. The last is somewhat abundant, and has a very heavy, hard, strong, and close-grained wood of a light yellowish-brown color, likely to be valuable for cabinet-making and coarse engraving. The remaining species so called is L. longipes, a rare tree bearing a small red fruit with the flavor of cranberries. All except the last are found also in the West Indies. Sargent. — Cat-head stopper. See cat head. — Spanish stopper. See cat head. (See also fighting-stopper.)

stopper (stop'ër), v. t. [Cf. stopper, n.] 1. To close or secure with a stopple; as, stoppered bottles. — 2. To fit with a stopple or stopples.

The mouth of the vessel to be stoppered is ground by an iron cone fixed to a lathe.

H. J. Powell, Glass-making, p. 73.

3. Naut., to secure with a stopper or stoppers. — To stopper a cable, to put stoppers on a cable to prevent it from running out of the ship when riding at anchor.

stopper-bolt (stop'ër-bölt), n. Naut., a large ring-bolt driven into the deck before the main hatch, etc., for securing the stoppers.

stopper-hole (stop'ër-höl), n. In iron-puttling, a hole in the door of the furnace through which the metal is stirred. See cut under puttling-furnace.

stopper-knot (stop'ër-not), n. A knot in the end of a rope-stopper made by double-walling the strands.

stopping (stop'ing), n. [Verbal n. of stop<sup>1</sup>, v.]

1. The act of one who or that which stops, in any sense. Specifically—(a) The process of filling cracks or fissures, as in an oil-painting, with a composition preparatory to restoring; also, the material used in the process.

The stopping, as this mixture [of size and whiting] is called, is pressed into the cracks by means of a palette-knife.

Workshop Receipts, 2d ser., p. 127.

(b) In etching. See to stop out (a), under stop<sup>1</sup>, v. t. (c) The act or process of altering the pitch of the tones of a musical instrument in any of the ways described under stop<sup>1</sup>, v. t., 10.

2. Something that stops. Specifically—(a) In mining, any solid wall or brattice built across a passage in a mine, to shut out the air from the goaves, or to limit it to certain passages, or to keep the gas confined, or for any other purpose. (b) In dental surg., material for filling cavities in teeth. (c) In farriery, a ball or pad for stuffing the space in a horse's foot within the inner edge of the shoe. — Double stopping, in viol-playing, the act or process of producing tones simultaneously from two stopped strings.

stopping-brush (stop'ing-brush), n. 1. In hat-making, a brush used to sprinkle boiling water upon the napping and the hat-body to assist in uniting them. — 2. In etching, a camel's-hair brush used in stopping out parts of etched plates.

stopping-coat (stop'ing-köt), n. The covering of resistant material applied to any part of an object about to be exposed to the action of an acid or other agent, in order to protect that part from such action.

stopping-knife (stop'ing-nif), n. A knife used in stopping, as a glazier's putty-knife.

stop-plank (stop'plangk), n. One of the planks employed to form a sort of dam in some hydraulic works. They generally occupy vertical grooves in the wing walls of a lock or weir, to hold back water in case of temporary disorder of the lock-gates.

stop-plate (stop'plät), n. An end-bearing for the axle in a railroad journal-box, designed to resist end-play of the axle.

stopple<sup>1</sup> (stop'l), n. [Cf. ME. stoppele, stoppell, stopell; < stop + -el, now -le, a noun-formative indicating the instrument (as also in whittle, single, etc.).] 1. That which stops or closes the mouth of a vessel; a stopper: as, a glass stopple; a cork stopple.

Item, J. Hill bottell, with J. cheyne and J. stopell, welyng xxxviii. uncs.

Paston Letters, I, 472.

Who knows, when he openeth the stopple, what may be in the bottle?

B. Jonson, Bartholomew Fair, II, 1.

2. A plug sometimes inserted in certain finger-holes of a flute or flageolet to accommodate its scale to some unusual series.

stopple<sup>1</sup> (stop'l), v. t.; pret. and pp. stoppled, ppr. stopping. [Cf. stopple<sup>1</sup>, n.] To stop or close with a stopple.

His hours of study clos'd at last,
And finish'd his concise report;
Stoppl'd his cruise, replac'd his book
Within its customary nook.

Corper, Moralizer Corrected.

stopple<sup>2</sup> (stop'l), n. [Cf. ME. stopyll, stouple; a more orig. form of stubble: see stubble.] Stubble. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

And thou haubert and ys coler, that nere nothing souple, Hesmot of ys heved as lygtyche as yt were a lute stouple.

Robert of Gloucester, p. 223.

stop-ridge (stop'rij), n. A band slightly elevated upon the surface of a blade or a similar part of an implement, intended to stop and hold it in the proper place, as in the handle. In stone celts the presence of such a stop-ridge marks a certain class or category.

stop-rod (stop'rod), n. In weaving, the rod which extends longitudinally under the batten of a loom, forming a part of the stop-motion, and which raises a catch that, if not raised, engages mechanism which immediately stops the loom. Every time the shuttle enters the shuttle-box fairly it acts upon a stop-finger to cause the stop-rod to lift the catch; but, if the shuttle is stopped in its course through the shed, the catch is not raised, the loom is stopped, and the warp, which would otherwise be broken by the impact of the reed against the shuttle while in the shed, is thus saved.

stop-ship

stop-ship (stop'ship), n. [< stop<sup>1</sup>, v., + obj. ship; a translation of the Gr. ἐχέμη, the remora: see Echeneis, and cf. mora, remora.] The fish remora.

O Stop-ship, . . . tell vs where thou doo'st thine Anchors hide; Whence thou resistest Sayls, Owers, Wind, and Tide.

Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, l. 5.

stop-thrust (stop'thrust), n. In fencing, a light thrust at one's opponent, instead of a parry, made after he has begun to lunge forward in an attack. The stop-thrust goes over by delicate gradations into the time-thrust, but is not considered by fencers a fine blow like the time-thrust.

stop-valve (stop'valv), n. 1. In hydraul., a valve which closes a pipe against the passage of fluid. It is usually a disk which occupies a chamber above the pipe when the passageway through the latter is open, and is driven down by a screw to stop the aperture.

2. In steam-engines, a valve fitted to the steam-pipes, where they leave the several boilers, in such a way that any boiler may be shut off from the others and from the engines.

stop-watch (stop'woch), n. A watch which records small fractions of a second, and in which the hands can be stopped at any instant, so as to mark the exact time at which some event occurs: chiefly used in timing races.

He suspended his voice in the epilogue a dozen times, three seconds and three fifths by a stop-watch, my lord, each time.

Sterne, Tristram Shandy, lib. 12.

stop-water (stop'wā'tēr), n. [< stop<sup>1</sup>, v., + obj. water.] 1. Naut., a drag.—2. A plug of soft wood driven tightly into a hole at the joint of a scarf, the expansion of which, when immersed, prevents water from working up through the scarf and behind the bottom plank. In building iron ships a piece of canvas covered with red lead is used to make water-tight joints where caulking is difficult.

stop-wheel (stop'hwēl), n. See Geneva movement, under movement.

stop-work (stop'wōrk), n. A device attached to the barrel of a watch, musical box, etc., to prevent overwinding.

stor<sup>1</sup>, a. A Middle English form of stoor<sup>1</sup>.

stor<sup>2</sup>, n. [ME., < AS. stōr, incense, storax (= W. ystor, resin, rosin), < L. storax, storax: see storax.] Incense.

That Stor signefied Gode werkes, for ase se smeeth of the store wanne hit is i-do into the uerée and goth upward to the heuene and to Gode warde Swa amuntel si gode biddinge to gode of the herte of the gode cristenemanne.

Old Eng. Misc. (ed. Morris), p. 28.

storable (stōr'a-bl), a. [< stor<sup>3</sup> + -able.] Capable of being stored. R. S. Ball, Exper. Mechanics, p. 262.

storage (stōr'āj), n. [< stor<sup>3</sup> + -age.] 1. The act of storing, in any sense; specifically, the keeping of goods in a store, warehouse, or other place of deposit.—2. The price charged or paid for keeping goods in a storehouse.—Cold storage, storage in refrigerating chambers or other places artificially cooled, as for the preservation of articles liable to be damaged by heat.—Storage battery. See battery.—Storage magazine. Same as magazine, 1 (a).—Storage warehouse. See warehouse.

storage-bellows (stōr'āj-bel'ōz), n. See organ<sup>1</sup>, 6.

storax (stō'raks), n. [= F. storax, styrax, < L. storax, styrax, < Gr. στρίπαξ, a sweet-smelling resin so called, also a tree producing it.] 1. A solid resin resembling benzoin, with the fragrance of vanilla, formerly obtained from a small tree, Styrax officinalis, of Asia Minor and Syria. It was in use from ancient times down to the close of the last century, but has disappeared from the market, the trees having been mostly reduced to bushes by excessive lopping.

This, that, and ev'ry thicket doth transpire
More sweet than storax from the hallowed fire.

Herrick, Apparition of his Mistress.

2. The tree yielding storax, or some other tree or shrub of the same genus. Among the American species, Styrax Californica is a handsome Californian shrub. See cut in next column.—Liquid storax, a balsam known from ancient times with the true storax, obtained by boiling and pressing from the inner bark of the Oriental sweet-gum tree, Liquidambar orientalis, itself also called liquidambar. It is a semi-fluid adhesive substance with the properties of a stimulant expectorant, but now scarcely used in Western practice except as a constituent in the compound tincture of benzoin (resembling friars' balsam: see benzoin), and as an application for itch. It has long been used in making incense and fumigating preparations, and also enters into perfumery. Its chief markets are China and India. A similar balsam is obtained, chiefly in Burma, from Altingia excelsa, known (together with the last) in East Indian commerce as rose-maloe, rasamala, etc. In Formosa and southern China a dry terebinthinous resin of the same character is derived from Liquidambar Formosana (a species recently identified). An American liquidambar, or liquid storax, or a substitute for it, is produced as natural exudation or by incision from the bark

375

5969

Branch with flowers of Storax (Styrax Californica).
a, a leaf, showing venation.

of the sweet gum, Liquidambar styraciflua, in the hotter parts of its habitat. It is better known in Europe than in the United States, where it is perhaps most used for making chewing-gum.

Storax liquida (cometh) from Rhodes.

Hakluyt's Voyages, II. 277.

Storax ointment. See ointment.

storax-tree (stō'raks-trē), n. Same as storax, 2.

store<sup>1</sup>, a. A Middle English form of stoor<sup>1</sup>.

store<sup>2</sup>, v. A Middle English form of stoor<sup>2</sup>.

store<sup>3</sup> (stōr), v. t.; pret. and pp. stored, ppr. storing. [< ME. stōren, also astōren, astōrien, < OF. estorer, esturer, estaurer, make, build, establish, provide, furnish, store, < L. instaurare, renew, repair, make, ML. also provide, store, < in, in, to, + **staurare*, set up, place (found also in restaurare, restore), *< *staurus*, fixed, = Gr. στειρός, n., an upright pole, a stake, cross, = Skt. sthivara, fixed, = AS. stēor, a rudder, etc.; from the root of stand: see stand. Cf. restore, instaurate, etc. Hence store<sup>3</sup>, n., storage, storing<sup>2</sup>, etc.] 1. To provide; furnish; supply; equip; outfit.

No Cytee of the World is so wel stored of Schippes as is that.

Mandeville, Travels, p. 207.

Her Mind with thousand Virtues stor'd.

Prior, Ode to the King after the Queen's Death, st. 35.
I believe for Greek & Latin there come very few lads so well stored to the University.

William Lloyd, in Ellis's Lit. Letters, p. 188.

2. To stock with provisions; provision; replenish.

Alle thine castles ich habbe wel istored.

Layamon, l. 13412.

Backe to the yle of Alango, where some of vs went a londe . . . to store vs of newe vytaylles.

Sir R. Guylforde, Pylgrimage, p. 59.

3. To deposit in a store or warehouse for preservation or safe-keeping; warehouse.

Now was stored

In the sweet-smelling granaries all the hoard
Of golden corn.

William Morris, Earthly Paradise, I. 393.

4. To lay up in reserve; accumulate; hoard; often with up.

According to Sir W. Thomson a single Faure cell of the spiral form, weighing 165 lbs., can store 2,000,000 foot-pounds of energy.

W. L. Carpenter, Energy in Nature (1st ed.), p. 125.

5†. To restore.

Keppit the fro combrance & fro cold deth,
Storet thee to strenght & thil stythe londes,
And dawly hir distitour of hir fader.

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 720.

store<sup>3</sup> (stōr), n. and a. [< ME. stor, store, stoor (cf. W. ystor = Gael. stor, < E.), < OF. estore, estoire, estor'e, provisions, store, a fleet, navy, army, < ML. staurum (also, after OF., storum), same as instaurum, store, < L. instaurare, renew, restore, ML. also provide, furnish, store: see store<sup>3</sup>, v.] 1. n. 1. That which is provided or furnished for use as needed; a stock accumulated as for future use; a supply; a hoard; specifically, in the plural, articles, particularly of food, accumulated for a specific object; supplies, as, of food, ammunition, arms, or clothing; as, military or naval stores; the winter stores of a family.

He . . . kepte hir to his usage and his store.

Chaucer, Good Women, l. 2337.

500 pounds of hard bread, sleeping-bags, and assorted subsistence stores were landed from the floe.

Schley and Soley, Rescue of Greely, p. 77.

storehouse

Hence — 2. A great quantity; a large number; abundance; plenty: used with, or archaically without, the indefinite article.

That olde man of pleasing wordes had store.

Spenser, F. Q., I. i. 35.

With store of ladies, whose bright eyes

Rain influence, and judge the prize.

Milton, L'Allegro, l. 121.

3. A place where supplies, as provisions, ammunition, arms, clothing, or goods of any kind, are kept for future use or distribution; a storehouse; a warehouse; a magazine.

Sulphurous and nitrous foam, . . .

Concocted and adjusted, they reduced

To blackest grain, and into store convey'd.

Milton, P. L., vi. 515.

Hence — 4. A place where goods are kept for sale by either wholesale or retail; a shop: as, a book-store; a dry-goods store. See note under shop<sup>1</sup>, 2. [U. S. and British colonies.]

Stores, as the shops are called.

Capt. B. Hall, Travels in N. A., I. 8.

Bill of stores. See bill<sup>3</sup>.—Bonded store. See bonded.—Coöperative store. See coöperative.—Fancy store. See fancy.—General-order store, a customs warehouse in which goods are stored temporarily, as unclaimed, or arriving in advance of invoice or transportation papers, or through other like cause of detention. Such goods are obtainable only on a general order.—General store, a store or shop where goods of all ordinary kinds are kept for sale; especially, such a store in a country village or at cross-roads.—In store, laid up; on hand; ready to be produced: as, we know not what the future has in store for us.

I have an hour's talk in store for you.

Shak., J. C., ii. 2. 121.

Marine, ordnance, public stores. See the qualifying words.—Sea-stores, provisions and supplies on shipboard for use at sea. Compare ship-stores.—Ship-stores, provisions and supplies for use on board ships at sea or in port: such supplies are sealed, as non-drawable, by the customs officers.—Small stores, in a man-of-war, a general term embracing tinware, tobacco, soap, razors, brushes, thread, needles, etc., issued and charged to the men by the paymaster.—Subsistence stores. See subsistence.—To set store by. See set<sup>1</sup>, v. t., 18.—To tell no store off, to make no account of; set no store by.

I ne telle of laxatyves no store,

For they ben veinymous, I woot it weel;

I hem diffye, I love hem never a deel.

Chaucer, Nun's Priest's Tale, l. 334.

II. a. 1†. Hoarded; laid up: as, store linen; store fruit.

Of this treasure . . . the gold was accumulate, and store treasure; . . . but the silver is still growing.

Bacon, Holy War.

2. Containing stores; set apart for receiving stores or supplies. Compare store-city.—3. Obtained at a store or shop; purchased or purchasable at a shop or store: as, store clothes; store teeth (humorously used for false teeth). This word in rural or frontier use is commonly opposed to home-made, and implies preference: as, stylish store curtains; in town use it is usually opposed to made to order, and implies disparagement: as, clumsy store boots. [Colloq. U. S.]—Store casemate. Same as barrack casemate (which see, under barrack).—Store cattle, lean cattle bought for fattening by squatters who find that they have more grass than the natural increase of their herd requires. [Australia.]

Oh, we are not fit for anything but store cattle: we are all blady grass.

Mrs. Campbell Praed, Head Station, p. 74.

Store pay, payment for country produce, labor, etc., by goods from a store, in lieu of cash; barter. [Rural, U. S.]

See, a girl has just arrived with a pot of butter to trade off for store pay. She wants in exchange a yard of calico, a quarter of tea, . . . and a bottle of rum.

Capt. Priest's Adventures, p. 54. (Bartlett.)

store<sup>4</sup>, n. A Middle English form of stour<sup>3</sup>.

store<sup>5</sup> (stōr), n. [< F. store, a window-shade, spring-blind, roller-blind, < L. storea, a mat.] A window-shade: the French term used in English for such a shade when of decorative character, especially when of French manufacture.

store-city (stōr'sit'i), n. In the Old Testament, a city provided with stores of provisions for troops.

He [Solomon] built Tadmor in the wilderness, and all the store cities, which he built in Hamath.

2 Chron. viii. 4.

store-farm (stōr'fārm), n. A stock-farm; a cattle-farm; a sheep-farm. Scott, Heart of Mid-Lothian, xlii. [Scotch.]

store-farmer (stōr'fār'mēr), n. Same as stock-farmer. [Scotch.]

storehouse (stōr'hous), n. 1. A house in which things are stored; a building for the storing of grain, food-stuffs, or goods of any kind; a magazine; a repository; a warehouse; a store.

They ne'er cared for us yet; suffer us to famish, and their store-houses crammed with grain.

Shak., Cor., i. 1. 83.

2†. A store; a plentiful supply.

storehouse

And greatly joyed merry tales to faine,
Of which a storehouse did with her remain.
Spenser, F. Q., II. vi. 6.

storekeeper (stôr'kê'për), n. 1. One who has the care or charge of a store or stores. (a) A shopkeeper. [U. S.] (b) An officer in a dockyard in charge of stores and storehouses; the superintendent of a storehouse in a navy-yard. (c) Milit., a commissioned officer in the United States army who has charge of the military stores at depots and arsenals. A military storekeeper is an officer of the quartermaster's department; an ordnance storekeeper, of the ordnance department; a medical storekeeper, of the medical department. These officers have the rank and pay of mounted captains in the army, but are not in the line of promotion. 2. Figuratively, an article in a stock of goods that remains so long on hand as to be unsalable. [Slang, U. S.]

storekeeping (stôr'kê'ping), n. The act of taking charge of stores or a store.

storeman (stôr'man), n.; pl. storemen (-men). 1. A man in charge of stores or supplies: as, the storeman's stock of bolts and screws.—2. A man employed in a storehouse for the work of storing goods.

The question of wages of shifters and store-men has been referred to arbitration.

Weekly Echo, Sept. 5, 1885. (Encyc. Dict.)

store-master (stôr'mâs'tèr), n. The tenant of a store-farm. [Scotch.]

storer (stôr'ër), n. [< store + -er]. One who lays up or accumulates a store.

Storeria (stô-rê'ri-ä), n. [NL. (Baird and Girard, 1853), named after Dr. D. H. Storer, an American naturalist.] A genus of harmless colubrine serpents of North America, of the family Colubridæ. Two common species of the United States are S. dekayi, and S. occipitamaculata, the spotted-neck snake.

store-room (stôr'rôm), n. A room set apart for stores or supplies, especially table and household supplies.

Miss Jenkyns asked me if I would come and help her to tie up the preserves in the store-room.

Mrs. Gaskell, Cranford, II.

store-ship (stôr'ship), n. A government vessel detailed to carry stores for the use of a fleet or garrison, or to store them in foreign ports.

storey, n. See story<sup>2</sup>.

storge (stôr'gë), n. [< Gr. στοργή, natural love or affection, < στέργω, love, as parents their children.] The strong instinctive affection of animals for their young; hence, the attachment of parents for children, or of children for parents; parental or filial love. [Rare and technical.]

In the storge, or natural affections of divers animals to their young ones, . . . there appears in the parent manifest tokens of solicitude, skill, and in some cases courage too.

Boyle, Christian Virtuoso, pt. II. aph. viii.

The innocence of infancy . . . is the cause of the love called storge. Swedenborg, Conjugal Love (trans.), § 395.

storial† (stôr'i-äl), a. [ME. storial, an aphetic form of historial.] 1. Historical.

This is storial sooth, it is no fable.
Chaucer, Good Women, I. 702.

2. Of the nature of a story.

He shal fynde ynowe, grette and smale,
Of storial thyng that toucheth gentillesse,
And eek moralitee and hoolynesse.

Chaucer, Prologue to Miller's Tale, I. 71.

storiated (stôr'i-ä-ted), a. [Cf. historiated.] Decorated with elaborate ornamental and illustrative designs, as title-pages of books in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, in which the ornamentation often covered the entire page.

The mania for the acquisition of storiated title-pages has led to the cruel spoliation of thousands of rare old books.
London Art Jour., No. 51, p. 91.

storied<sup>1</sup> (stôr'id), a. [< story<sup>1</sup> + -ed]. 1. Celebrated or recorded in story or history; associated with stories, tales, or legends.

To-morrow hurry through the fields
Of Flanders to the storied Rhine!

M. Arnold, Calais Sands.

2. Adorned with scenes from a story, or from history, executed by means of sculpture, painting, weaving, needlework, or other art: as, storied tapestries.

Storied windows, richly dight, Casting a dim religious light.

Milton, Il Penseroso, I. 159.

Can storied urn, or animated bust,
Back to its mansion call the fleeting breath?

Gray, Elegy.

storied<sup>2</sup> (stôr'id), a. [Formerly also storeyed; < story<sup>2</sup> + -ed.] Having stories or stages: as, a four-storied building.

storier (stôr'i-ër), n. [< story<sup>1</sup> + -er]. A relater of stories; a story-teller; a historian.

5970

The honeyed rhythm of this melodious storie.
J. Rogers Rees, Poetry of the Period (Bookworm, p. 65).

storify<sup>1</sup> (stô'ri-fi), v. t. [< story<sup>1</sup> + L. facere, make, do: see -fy.] To make or tell stories about.

storify<sup>2</sup> (stô'ri-fi), v. t.; pret. and pp. storified, ppr. storifying. [< story<sup>2</sup> + L. facere, make, do: see -fy.] To range, as beehives over and under one another, in the form of stories. Phin, Dict. Apiculture, p. 67. [Rare.]

storiologist (stô-ri-ol'ô-jist), n. [< storiolog-y + -ist.] A student or expounder of popular tales and legends; one who is versed in folk-lore. [Recent.]

The resuscitation of the roe from its bones will recall to storiologists similar incidents in European and especially Scandinavian and Icelandic folk-lore.

N. and Q., 7th ser., I. 484, note.

storiology (stô-ri-ol'ô-jî), n. [< E. story<sup>1</sup> + Gr. -λογία, < λέγω, speak: see -ology.] The science of folk-lore; the study of popular tales and legends. [Recent.]

For Chaucer's direct source, it might be well worth while for students of comparative storiology who have leisure . . . to examine these and similar monkish collections of exempla [of the thirteenth century].

N. and Q., 7th ser., I. 485.

stork (stôrk), n. [< ME. stork, < AS. store = D. MLG. LG. stork = OHG. storch, MHG. G. storch (also OHG. stork, MHG. G. dial. stork) = Icel. storkr = Sw. Dan. stork, a stork; cf. OBulg. strūkū, Bulg. strūk, shtrūk = Serv. shtrk = ORuss. sterkū, Russ. sterkhū = Lith. starkus = Lett. stārks = Hung. cszterg = Albanian sterkjak, a stork. The relation of the Teut. to the Slav. and other forms is undetermined. Cf. Gr. τάρπος, a vulture, τάρπος ὑπὸ πότις, a swan.] A large altricial gallatorial bird, of the family Ciconiidae and especially of the subfamily Ciconiinae (which see for technical characters).

The stork is related to the herons, spoonbills, and ibises, but not very closely to the cranes. There are several species, found in nearly all temperate and tropical regions. They are tall and stately birds, equaling the cranes and larger herons in stature, but are readily distinguished by many technical characters. Storks are wading birds, frequenting the vicinity of water; but some of them become semi-domesticated, and often nest on buildings. Their fidelity and amiability are traditional. They feed chiefly on reptiles (as snakes and lizards), amphibians (as frogs), fishes, mollusks, and worms, but also sometimes capture small quadrupeds and birds. The best-known species is the common white stork of Europe, Ciconia alba; when adult, it is pure-white with black-tipped wings and reddish bill and feet; it is about 3½ feet long, and stands 4 feet high. The black stork of the same country is C. nigra, a rarer species. Various birds of different countries, technically storks, are known by other names, as adjutant, marabou, maguari, jabiru, shell-bird, and wood-bird. See these words, and cuts under adjutant-bird, Ciconiidae, Gallinæ, jabiru, openbill, Pelargomorphæ, simbil, and Tantalus.—Black-necked stork, Xenorhynchus australis, of India and Australia, related to the American jabiru and African saddle-billed stork, the three being often placed in the genus Mycteria.—Black stork. See def.—Episcopal stork, Dissoura episcopus. See cut under Pelargomorphæ.—Giant stork, the adjutant-bird.—Hair-crested stork, Leptopitilus (Cranopelargus) javanicus, a small and quite distinct species of marabou, related to the adjutant, found in parts of India, Java, Sumatra, etc.—Maguari stork, Euzenura maguari. See maguari.—Marabou stork. See marabou, and cut under adjutant-bird.—Pouched stork. Same as adjutant-bird.—Saddle-billed stork, Ephippiorhynchus senegalensis. See the generic name.—White-bellied stork, Sphenorhynchus abdimi. See cut under simbil.—White stork. See def.

stork-billed (stôrk'bîld), a. Having a bill like a stork's, as a kingfisher of the genus Pelargopsis. See cut under Pelargopsis.

stork's-bill (stôrk's'bîl), n. 1. A plant of the genus Erodium, particularly the heron's-bill, E. cicutarium (also called hemlock stork's-bill), a low bushy herb with pinnate leaves, a mostly Old World plant, abundantly naturalized in many parts of the United States, perhaps indigenous in the west. See al-filerilla.—2. A plant of the related genus Pelargonium, which includes the geraniums, etc., of gardens.

Flowering Plant of Stork's-bill (Erodium cicutarium). a, one of the carpels.

storm

storm (stôrm), n. [< ME. storm, < AS. storm, storm, = OS. MD. D. MLG. LG. storm = OHG. MHG. G. sturm = Icel. stormr = Sw. Dan. storm (not in Goth.; cf. It. stormo, a fight, It. dial. sturm = Pr. estorn = OF. estour, estor, estur (> E. stour<sup>3</sup>, a tumult, stir) = Ir. Gael. stoirm = Bret. stourm, a storm, all < Teut.]; perhaps, with formative -m, from the root of stir<sup>1</sup> (< stir, < stor) or of L. sternere, strew: see stir<sup>1</sup>, strew.] 1. A disturbance of the normal condition of the atmosphere, manifesting itself by winds of unusual direction or force, or by rain (often with lightning and thunder), snow, or hail, or by several of these phenomena in combination; a tempest: also used with reference to precipitation only, as in hail-storm, thunder-storm, snow-storm. A storm is usually associated with an area of low pressure, and its intensity or violence depends upon the steepness of the density-gradients which produce it. The terms area of low pressure, cyclone, cyclonic storm, and storm are often used interchangeably. In area of low pressure the primary reference is to the state of the barometer, in cyclone it is to the gyratory character of the atmospheric circulation, and in storm to the disturbance of the weather: but each term is extended to include the whole of the attendant phenomena.

And there arose a great storm of wind. Mark iv. 37.

Poor naked wretches, whoso'er you are,
That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm.

Shak., Lear, iii. 4. 29.

2. Specifically—(a) Technically, in nautical use, a wind of force 11 on the Beaufort scale, being that in which a man-of-war could carry only storm-staysails.

The wind suddenly shifted in a heavy rain squall from SSE. to W., and increased to a storm; at 12 noon the barometer read lowest, and the wind was blowing a storm.

Monthly Weather Review (1887), p. 40.

(b) A fall of snow. (c) A prolonged frost. [Prov. Eng.] Hence, figuratively—3. A tempestuous fight or descent of objects fiercely hurled: as, a storm of missiles.

No drizzling shower,
But rattling storm of arrows bar'd with fire.

Milton, P. L., vi. 546.

4. A violent disturbance or agitation of human society; a civil, political, or domestic commotion; a tumult; a clamor.

I will stir up in England some black storm Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven or hell.

Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iii. 1. 349.

5. A destructive or overwhelming calamity; extremity of adversity or disaster.

Having passed many bitter brunts and blasts of vengeance, they dread no storm of Fortune.

Spenser, Shep. Cal., February, Embleme.

An old man, broken with the storms of state.

Shak., Hen. VIII., iv. 2. 21.

6. A vehement or passionate outbreak, as of some emotion, or of the expression of such emotion: as, a storm of indignation; a storm of applause; a storm of hisses.

Mark'd you not how her sister
Began to scold and raise up such a storm?

Shak., T. of the S., i. 1. 177.

Her bosom shaken with a sudden storm of sighs.

Tennyson, Locksley Hall.

7. Milit., a violent assault on a fortified place or strong position; a dashing attempt by troops to capture a fortified place, as by scaling the walls or forcing the gates.

How by storm the walls were won,
Or how the victor sacked and burnt the town.

Dryden.

Cyclonic storm, one that accompanies or is caused by a cyclone.—Electric storm. See electric.—Eye of a storm, the calm region at the center of a violent cyclonic storm, where the clouds clear away and blue sky appears—occurring mostly in the tropics, but also experienced more or less perfectly in higher latitudes. This phenomenon is due to the circumstance that the winds immediately bordering the central area blow circularly around it, leaving a region of calm. The centrifugal force of the wind intensifies the diminution of pressure, and develops a tendency toward a gently descending current from above, and a consequent clearing of the sky.—High-area storm, a storm associated with an area of high pressure.—Low-area storm. Same as cyclonic storm.—Magnetic, revolving, etc., storm. See the adjectives.—Storm and stress (a translation of the German Sturm und Drang, alluding to a drama by Klinger, "Sturm und Drang"), a name given to a period in German literary history (about 1770 to 1790) influenced by a group of younger writers whose works were characterized by passion and reaction from the old methods; hence, a proverbial phrase for unrest or agitation.—To take by storm. (a) Milit., to carry by assault. See def. 7.

The recollection of the victory of Roanoke imparted to the Federals that assurance which is a great element of success; they knew that a battery could be taken by storm.

Comte de Paris, Civil War in America (trans.), I. 587.

(b) To captivate or carry away by surprising or delighting: as, the new singer has taken the town by storm.—Wind-storm, a storm with heavy wind, without precipitation.—Syn. 1. Tempest, etc. See wind<sup>2</sup>.

storm (stôrm), v. [< ME. stormen, sturmen, < AS. styrman = D. MLG. LG. stormen = OHG. sturm, MHG. G. stürmen = Icel. styrma = Sw. storma = Dan. storme, storm; cf. It. stormare, make a noise, stormeggiare, ring the storm-bell, throng together; from the noun.] I. intrans. 1. To blow with great force; also, to rain, hail, snow, or sleet, especially with violence: used impersonally: as, it storms.—2. To fume; seold; rage; be in a violent agitation or passion; raise a tempest.

The Dolphin then, discerning Land (at last),
Struggles with himselfe for having made such haste.
Spenser, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, i. 5.

When . . . I see a gentleman lose his money with security, I recognize in him all the great qualities of a philosopher. If he storms and invokes the gods, I lament that he is not placed at the head of a regiment.

Steele, Guardian, No. 174.

3. To move with violence; rush angrily or impetuously: as, he stormed about the room.

Bobby Wick stormed through the tents of his Company.
R. Kipling, Only a Subaltern.

II. trans. To attack and attempt to take possession of, as by scaling walls or forcing gates or breaches; assault: as, to storm a fortified town: often used figuratively.

With eager warmth they fight, ambitious all Who first shall storm the breach, or mount the wall.
Addison, To the King.

storm-area (stôrm'ā-rē-ij), n. The area covered by a storm; the region within the closed isobars surrounding a center of low pressure. In the United States this region is generally an oval whose length is, on the average, nearly twice its width. Its longest diameter may be turned in any azimuth, but is most frequently directed to a point between north and north 60° east. Over the ocean storm-areas are generally nearly circular.

storm-beat, storm-beaten (stôrm'bēt, -bē'tn), a. Beaten or damaged by storms.

storm-belt (stôrm'bēlt), n. A belt of maximum storm-frequency. On charts containing a large number of storm-tracks the paths are found to be mostly divided into several well-defined groups whose loci form natural storm-belts. In the United States three storm-belts are distinguished: (1) that of storms which appear in the northwest British provinces, advance eastward to the lake region, and thence down the St. Lawrence valley; (2) that of storms which originate in the southwest near the Gulf of Mexico, and move northeastward to the lakes; (3) that of the West India hurricanes, which first move westerly, and then northeastward along the Atlantic coast. Over Europe three storm-belts may be distinguished: one lying across the northern Mediterranean, one across the North Sea and the Baltic, and one northeast and southwest off the coast of Norway and the British Isles. Also called storm-zone.

storm-bird (stôrm'bērd), n. 1. A petrel; one of the birds of the family Procellariidae, including the albatrosses, fulmars, etc., as well as those to which the name petrel is more commonly applied; specifically, the stormy petrel. See cut under petrel.—2. A bird that indicates or seems to foretell bad weather by its cries or other actions, as a storm-cock. Compare rain-bird.

storm-bound (stôrm'bound), a. Confined or delayed by storms; relating to hindrance by storms: as, we were storm-bound in port.

Weeks of storm-bound inactivity.
Carlyle, To John Carlyle, Feb. 11, 1830.

storm-card (stôrm'kârd), n. A transparent card containing lines to represent the wind-directions in all quarters of a cyclonic storm: devised by Reid as an aid to seamen in avoiding dangerous storms. When the card is drawn to suitable scale, and placed over the position of a vessel on a chart, so that the observed wind-direction and the same wind-direction on the card are brought into coincidence, the bearing of the center of the card from the point of observation indicates the direction of the storm-center, its probable path can be laid down with considerable precision, and the best course for the vessel may then be determined. It is now known that a storm-card cannot universally be used to discover the bearing of a storm-center, for the angle between the wind and the radius varies in different latitudes, and is different at different distances from the center. Also called storm-circle, storm-compass.

storm-center (stôrm'sen'tēr), n. The position of lowest pressure in a cyclonic storm. In the typical case the wind throughout the storm-area blows spirally inward toward the storm-center, changing from a radial to an approximately circular path, and increasing in force as the center is approached. The center itself is an area of comparative calm, accompanied by a partial or complete clearing away of the clouds, and a mild temperature. (See eye of a storm, under storm.) Violent ocean storms frequently exemplify this typical description; but in land storms, which present irregularities of all kinds, these conditions are in general only partially realized.

storm-circle (stôrm'sēr'kl), n. Same as storm-card.

storm-cloud (stôrm'kloud), n. A cloud that brings or threatens storm.

storm-cock (stôrm'kok), n. 1. The fieldfare, Turdus pilaris; also, the mistlethrush, T. viscivorus.

Its song . . . it [the missel] begins . . . very early in the spring, often with the new year, in blowing showery weather, which makes the inhabitants of Hampshire call it the storm-cock. Pennant, Brit. Zool. (ed. 1776), i. 302.

2. The green woodpecker, Geococcyx viridis. [Prov. Eng. in all uses.]

storm-compass (stôrm'kum'pas), n. Same as storm-card.

storm-cone (stôrm'kōn), n. A cone consisting of tarred canvas extended on a frame 3 feet high and 3 feet wide at the base, used either alone or along with the drum as a storm-signal. See cut under storm-signal. [Eng.]

storm-current (stôrm'kur'ent), n. A surface sea-current produced by the force of the wind in a storm. Such a current frequently outruns its generating storm, and affords the first announcement thereof on a distant shore by increasing there the intensity of the usual current or by changing its set.

storm-door (stôrm'dōr), n. An outer or additional door for protection against inclement weather: in general used temporarily, for the winter only.

storm-drum (stôrm'drum), n. A cylinder of tarred canvas extended on a hoop 3 feet high and 3 feet wide, hoisted in conjunction with the cone as a storm-signal. See storm-signal. [Eng.]

stormer (stôr'mēr), n. [< storm + -er.] One who storms; specifically (milit.), a member of an assaulting party.

storm-finch (stôrm'finch), n. See finch<sup>1</sup>, and cut under petrel.

storm-flag (stôrm'flag), n. See storm-signal.

stormful (stôrm'fūl), a. [< storm + -ful.] Abounding with storms.

They know what spirit brews the stormful day.
Collins, Ode on the Popular Superstitions of the Highlands.

stormfulness (stôrm'fūl-nēs), n. The state of being stormful; stormy character or condition. Coleridge.

storm-glass (stôrm'glās), n. A hermetically sealed tube containing an alcoholic solution of camphor, together with crystals of nitrate of potash and ammonium chloride: so named because an increase in the amount of the precipitate was supposed to indicate the approach of stormy weather. The changes in the amount of the precipitate are due solely to variations of temperature, and the instrument is simply a chemical thermometer.

storm-house (stôrm'hous), n. A temporary shelter for men employed in constructing or guarding railroads, or other works in exposed situations.

stormily (stôr'mi-li), adv. In a stormy manner; tempestuously.

storminess (stôr'mi-nēs), n. The state of being stormy, or of being agitated or visited by violent winds; tempestuousness; impetuousness; violence.

storming-party (stôr'ming-pär'ti), n. Milit., the party to whom is assigned the duty of making the first assault in storming an enemy's works.

storm-kite (stôrm'kit), n. A device, on the principle of a kite, for carrying a rope from a ship to the shore in a storm.

stormless (stôrm'les), a. [< storm + -less.] Free from storms; without storm.

Our waking thoughts Suffer a stormless shipwreck in the pools Of sullen slumber. Tennyson, Harold, v. 1.

storm-pane (stôrm'pân), n. An extra square of glass fitted in a frame provided with clamps, used to fit over a window in an exposed building, as a lighthouse, in case of breakage.

storm-path (stôrm'pâth), n. Same as storm-track.

storm-pavement (stôrm'päv'ment), n. In hydraul. engin., a sloping stone pavement lining the sea-face of a pier or breakwater. E. H. Knight.

storm-petrel (stôrm'pet'rēl), n. A small blackish petrel, belonging to the genus Procellaria as now restricted, or to one of a few closely related genera, as Oceanites, Cymochorea, and Halocypptea. The three best-known storm-petrels are Procellaria pelagica, Cymochorea leucorhoa, and Oceanites oceanicus. All are also called Mother Carey's chickens. See cut under petrel. The form stormy petrel is also common.

storm-proof (stôrm'prüf), a. Proof against storms or stress of weather.

storm-sail (stôrm'säl), n. A sail made of very stout canvas, of smaller size than the corresponding sail in ordinary use, set in squally or heavy weather.

storm-signal (stôrm'sig'näl), n. A signal displayed on sea-coasts and lake-shores for indicating the expected prevalence of high winds or storms. For this purpose flags and lanterns are used in the United States, and a cone and drum in Great Britain. In the practice of the United States Weather Bureau, a red flag with black center is displayed by day when a violent storm is expected, and an additional pennant indicates the quadrant of the probable wind-direction, as follows: red pennant above flag, northeasterly winds; red pennant below flag, southeasterly winds; white pennant above flag, northwesterly winds; white pennant below flag, southwesterly winds. By night, a red light indicates easterly winds, and a white light above a red light indicates westerly winds. In the British system the inverted cone indicates a south gale, the upright cone a north gale, while the addition of the drum indicates that the winds are expected to be of marked violence. See weather-signal.

English Storm-signal, indicating dangerous winds from the south.

storm-stay (stôrm'stä), n. A stay on which a storm-sail is set.

storm-stayed (stôrm'städ), a. Prevented from proceeding on, or interrupted in the course of, a journey or voyage by storms or stress of weather.

storm-stone (stôrm'stōn), n. Same as thunder-bolt.

storm-tossed (stôrm'tost), a. Tossed about by storm or tempest: as, a storm-tossed bark; hence, agitated by conflicting passions or emotions: as, his storm-tossed spirit is at rest.

storm-track (stôrm'trak), n. The path traversed by the center of a cyclonic storm. North of the parallel of 30° storm-tracks almost invariably pursue an easterly course, having generally a northerly inclination. Within the tropics storm-tracks almost invariably tend westerly, generally with an inclination toward the pole; they have rarely, if ever, been traced nearer to the equator than 6°. Continuous storm-tracks are sometimes traced across North America, the Atlantic ocean, and Europe; but in general less than 12 per cent. of the storms leaving America reach the European coast.

storm-wind (stôrm'wind), n. The wind or blast of a storm or tempest; a hurricane; also, a wind that brings a storm.

Then comes, with an awful roar, Gathering and sounding on,
The storm-wind from Labrador,
The wind Euroclydon,
The storm-wind!
Longfellow, Midnight Mass.

storm-window (stôrm'win'dō), n. 1. An outer window to protect the inner from inclemency of the weather.—2. A window raised from the roof and slated above and on each side.

stormy (stôr'mi), a. [< ME. stormi, < AS. stormig (= D. Sw. stormig = MHG. sturmig, G. stürmig), < storm, storm: see storm.] 1. Characterized by storm or tempest, or by high winds; tempestuous; boisterous: as, a stormy season.

No cloudy show of stormy blustering weather
Doth yet in his fair welkin once appear.

Shak., Lucrece, l. 115.

His trumpet has often been heard by the neighbors, of a stormy night, mingling with the howling of the blast.
Irving, Knickerbocker, p. 448.

2. Characterized by violent disturbances or contentions; agitated; turbulent.

For love is yet the most stormy lyf,
Right of himself, that ever was begonne.
Chaucer, Troilus, ii. 778.

His [Warren Hastings's] administration, so eventful and stormy, closed in almost perfect quiet.

Macaulay, Warren Hastings.

3. Violent; passionate; easily roused to anger or strife.

The lives of all your loving complices
Lean on your health; the which, if you give o'er
To stormy passion, must perforce decay.
Shak., 2 Hen. IV., i. 1. 165.

The stormy chiefs of a desert but extensive domain.
Scott.

4. Associated with storms, as seen in them or supposed to presage them: specifically, in ornithology, noting certain petrels.—Stormy petrel. Same as storm-petrel. = Syn. 1. Windy, gusty, squally, blustering. See wind<sup>2</sup>.

storm-zone (stôrm'zōn), n. Same as storm-belt. The regions between 40° and 70° latitude are the great storm zones of the world.

R. Hutton, Eclectic Physical Geography, p. 94.

stornello (stôr-nel'lō), n.; pl. stornelli (-li). [It.] A form of Italian folk-song, usually improvised and either sentimental or satirical.

The Tuscan and Umbrian stornello is much shorter [than the rispetto], consisting, indeed, of a hemistich naming some natural object which suggests the motive of the little poem. Encyc. Brit., XIX. 272.

Storthing (stör'ting), n. [< Dan. Norw. störthing (= Icel. störthing), great or high court, parliament, < stor (= Sw. stor = Icel. stör = AS. stör, > E. stoor), great, + thing = Sw. ting = Icel. thing, assembly, meeting, = AS. thing: see *thing*².] The national parliament of Norway. It is composed of 114 members, who are chosen by indirect election. The Storthing is convened every year, and divides itself into an upper house (Lagthing) and a lower house (Odelsting). The former is composed of one fourth, and the latter of three fourths of the members. See Lagthing and Odelsting.

storven, Preterit plural and past participle of Middle English sterven, die. See starve.

story¹ (stō'ri), n.; pl. stories (-riz). [< ME. storie, storie (cf. It. storia, < LL. istoria), an aphetic form of istoric, historic, history: see history.] 1. A connected account or narration, oral or written, of events of the past; history. The prime virtue of Story is verity. Howell, Vocall Forrest, Pref.

She was well versed in the Greek and Roman story, and was not unskilled in that of France and England. Swift, Death of Stella.

There's themes enough in Caledonian story
Would show the tragic muse in n' her glory.
Burns, Prologue for Mr. Sutherland's Benefit.

2. An account of an event or incident; a relation; a recital: as, stories of bravery.

A lured man, to lure the [teach thee]
... of gode Friday the stories.
Piers Plowman (B), xiii. 447.

And tell sad stories of the death of kings;
How some have been deposed, some slain in war,
From childhood with great expectations.
Dickens, Martin Chuzzlewit, vi.

3. In lit., a narrative, either true or fictitious, in prose or verse; a tale, written in a more or less imaginative style, of that which has happened or is supposed to have happened; specifically, a fictitious tale, shorter and less elaborate than a novel; a short romance; a folk-tale.

Call up him that left half-told
The story of Cambusane bold,
Of Camball and of Aegarsife,
And who had Canace to wife.
Milton, Il Penseroso, l. 110.

Voltaire has a curious essay to show that most of our best modern stories and plots originally belonged to the eastern nations. J. P. Ferri, Curios. of Lit., I. 174.

4. The facts or events in a given case considered in their sequence, whether related or not; the experience or career of an individual: as, the story of a founding; his is a sad story.

Weep with me, all you that read
This little story.
B. Johnson, Epitaph on Silathiel Pavy.

There was not a grave in the church-yard but had its story. Lowell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 203.

5. An anecdote: as, a speech abounding in good stories.

I will go yet further, and affirm that the success of a story very often depends upon the make of the body, and formation of the features, of him who relates it. Steele, Guardian, No. 42.

Sometimes I recorded a story, a jest, or a pun for consideration. O. W. Holmes, The Atlantic, LXVI. 646.

6. A report; an account; a statement; anything told: often used slightly: as, according to his story, he did wonders.

Tal You confess, then, you picked my pocket?
Prince. It appears so by the story.
Shak, I Hen. IV., III. 3. 101.

All for a slanderous story, that cost me many a tear.
Tennyson, The Grandmother.

7. A falsehood; a lie; a fib. [Colloq. and euphemistic.]

I wrote the lines: . . . owned them, he told stories. (Signed) Thomas Ingoldsby.

Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 116, note.

8. The plot or intrigue of a novel or drama: as, many persons read a novel, or are interested in a play, only for the story.

It is thought clever to write a novel with no story at all, or at least with a very dull one.

R. L. Stevenson, A Gossip on Romance.

9†. A scene from history, legend, or romance, depicted by means of painting, sculpture, needlework, or other art of design.

The walls also of all the body of the Church, from the pylons to the Roof, be poyntyd with stories from the begynnyng of the world.

Torkington, Diary of Eng. Travell, p. 49.

To erect greate Chapells, . . . to paint faire stories, and to make rich ornaments.

Quevara, Letters (tr. by Hellowes, 1577), p. 311.

There's his chamber, . . . 'tis painted about with the story of the Prodigal, fresh and new.

Shak, M. W. of W., iv. 5. 8.

Blind story, a pointless tale.—To be in a or one story, to be in the same story, to agree in testimony; give the same account.

So I find they are all in a story.
Sheridan, The Duenna, II. 3.

=Syn. 1. Relation, Narration, etc. (see account); record, chronicle, annals.—2. Anecdote, Story. See anecdote.—3. Tale, fiction, fable, tradition, legend.—4. Memoir, life, biography.

story¹ (stō'ri), v.; pret. and pp. storied, ppr. storying. [< *story*¹, n. Cf. history, n.] I. trans. 1. To tell or describe in historical relation; make the subject of a narrative, tale, or legend; relate.

Pigmies (those diminutive people, or sort of apes or satyrs, so much resembling the little men storied under that name). Evelyn, True Religion, I. 261.

What the sage poets, taught by the heavenly Muse,
Storied of old in high immortal verse,
Of dire chimeras, and enchanted isles.
Milton, Comus, l. 516.

2. To ornament with sculptured or painted scenes from history or legend. Compare *storied*².

II. intrans. To relate; narrate.

Cupid, if storying Legends tell aright,
Once framed a rich Mixtur of Delight.
Coleridge, Composition of a Kiss.

story² (stō'ri), n. [Sometimes storey, early mod. E. storie, stourie; < ME. story, prob. < OF. **estorec*, a building, a thing built, < estorec, fem. pp. of estor, build, < L. instaurare, erect, build, etc.: see *store*³, v.] 1†. A building; an edifice.

III [they] bygonne her heyne tonnes strengthly [strengthen] vaste about,
Her castles & stories, that hit myghte be ynne in doute [danger].
Rob. of Gloucester, p. 181.

2. A stage or floor of a building; hence, a subdivision of the height of a house; a set of rooms on the same level or floor. A story comprehends the distance from one floor to another: as, a story of nine, twelve, or sixteen feet elevation.

They founde the kyng in his pallace stytynge vpon a floure or storie made of the leaves of date trees wrought after a curious disuise lyke a certeyne kynde of mattee.
R. Eden, tr. of Antonio Pigafetta (First Books on America, [ed. Arber, p. 257]).

Upon the ground storeys a fair gallery, open, upon pillars; and upon the third storey likewise an open gallery upon pillars, to take the prospect and freshness of the garden.
Bacon, Building (ed. 1847).

Attic story. See *attic*², 1.—Mezzanine story. Same as entresol—The upper story, the brain; the wits. [Familiar and ludicrous.]

He's a good sort o' man, for all he's not overburthen'd I' th' upper story.
George Eliot, Amos Barton, I.

story-book (stō'ri-būk), n. A book containing one or more stories or tales; a printed collection of short tales.

If you want to make presents of story-books to children, his [Richter's] are the best you can now get.
Ruskin, Elements of Drawing, App.

story-post (stō'ri-pōst), n. In building, an upright post supporting a beam on which rests a floor or a wall, as when the whole front of a ground floor is glazed.

story-rod (stō'ri-rōd), n. A wooden strip used in setting up a staircase. It is equal in height to the staircase, and is divided according to the number of stairs.

story-teller (stō'ri-tel'ér), n. 1. One who tells stories, true or fictitious, whether orally or in writing. Specifically—(a) One whose calling is the recitation of tales in public: as, the story-tellers of Arabia.

"Master," said he [Achmet], "I know many stories, such as the story-tellers relate in the coffee-houses of Cairo."
B. Taylor, Journey to Central Africa, vi.

(b) One given to relating anecdotes: as, a good story-teller at a dinner-table.

Good company will be no longer pestered with dull, dry, tedious storytellers.
Swift, Polite Conversation, Int.

(c) One who tells falsehoods; a fibber. [Colloq. and euphemistic.]

Becky gave her brother-in-law a bottle of white wine, some that Rawdon had brought with him from France, . . . the little story-teller said.
Thackeray, Vanity Fair, xlv.

story-telling (stō'ri-tel'ing), n. 1. The act or art of relating stories, true or fictitious.

Story-telling . . . is not perfect without proper gesticulations of the body, which naturally attend such merry emotions of the mind.
Steele, Guardian, No. 42.

2. The telling of fibs; lying. [Colloq. and euphemistic.]

story-writer (stō'ri-rī'tér), n. 1. A writer of stories.

The story-writer's and play-writer's danger is that they will get their characters mixed, and make A say what B ought to have said.

O. W. Holmes, Atlantic Monthly, LXVI. 664.

2†. A historian; a chronicler.

Rathumus the storywriter, and Semellius the scribe, . . . and the judges. 1 Esd. ii. 17.

stosh (stosh), n. [Origin obscure.] Fish-oll; gurry; especially, a thick paste made by grinding slivers in a bait-mill, and used as toll-bait; chum; pomace.

stot¹ (stot), n. [Early mod. E. also stotte; < ME. stot, stott, stotte, a horse, a bullock; cf. Icel. stútr, a bull, the butt-end of a horn, a stumpy thing, = Sw. stut, a bullock, also a blow, bang, dial. a young ox, a young man, = Norw. stut, a bullock, also an ox-horn, = Dan. stud, a bullock; prob. lit. 'pusher,' from the root of D. stooten = G. stossen, push, thrust, strike, = Icel. stauta, strike, beat, stutter, = Sw. stötta = Dan. støde, strike, push, thrust, = Goth. stautan, strike. Cf. stout, *stote*¹.] 1†. A horse; a stallion.

This reve sat upon a ful good stot,
That was al pomely grey and highte Scot.
Chaucer, Gen. Prolog. to C. T., l. 615.

2. A young ox; a steer.

And Grace gaue Piers of his goodnesse foure stottis, Al that his oxen cryed they to harwe after.
Piers Plowman (B), xix. 262.

To procure restitution in integrum of every stirk and stot that the chief . . . and his clan had stolen since the days of Malcolm Canmore. Scott, Waverley, xv.

The woman would work—ay, and get up at any hour; and the strength of a stot she had.
W. Black, Harper's Mag., LXXVI. 689.

3. A wensel; a stoat. See cut under stoat.

Lamb, wolf, fox, leopard, minx, stot, miniver.
Middleton, Triumphs of Love and Antiquity.

[The name was formerly applied in contempt to a human being.

"Nay, olde stot, that is not myn entente," Quod this somonour, "for to repente me."
Chaucer, Friar's Tale, l. 332.]

stot² (stot), v. i.; pret. and pp. stotted, ppr. stotting. [Formerly stote; < ME. stoten; = D. stooten, push, etc.: see *stot*¹, and cf. stotter, stut, *stutter*¹.] 1. To stumble; walk irregularly; bounce in walking. Compare stoit. [Prov. Eng.]

They stotted along side by side.
Miss Ferrier, Inheritance, II. 367.

2. To rebound, as a ball. [Prov. Eng.]

stotay¹, v. i. [ME. stotayen, stotaien, < OF. estoteir, estotier, estoutoir, etc., be thrown into disorder, tr. throw into disorder, maltreat (< estout, estot, etc., rash, bold, stout: see *stout*¹), but in sense confused with stoten, stumble: see *stot*².] To stumble; stagger.

Than he stotays for male, and alle his strenge faylez, Lokes up to the lyfte, and alle his lyre chaunges!
Downne he sweys fulle swythe, and in a swoune fallys!
Morte Arthur (E. E. T. S.), l. 4272.

stote¹, n. See stout.

stote², v. i. See *stot*² and *stut*¹.

stoter¹, v. i. An obsolete form of stotter.

stoteyet, n. [ME., < OF. estotie, estoutie, estutic, boldness, rashness, < estout, estot, bold, stout: see *stout*¹.] Cunning; stratagem.

Had he had his ost he wold [haue] a-salde there
To haue with stoteyet & strengthe stouth hire wonne.
William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 4955.

stotter (stot'ér), v. [< ME. stoteren; freq. of *stot*². Cf. *stutter*¹.] I. intrans. To stumble. [Prov. Eng.]

II. trans. To affect with staggers.

He'd tell what bullock's fate was tragick
So right, some thought he dealt in magick;
And as well knew, by wisdom outward,
What ox must fall, or sheep be stotered.
D'Urfey, Collin's Walk, I. (Davies)

stouk, n. An obsolete or dialectal form of stook.

stound¹ (stound), n. [< ME. stounde, stund, stunt, stunde, < AS. stund, a time, space of time, season, = OS. stunda = OFries. stunde, stonde = MD. stonde, a time, while, moment, D. stund, a moment, = MLG. stunde, stunt, LG. stunde = OHG. stunta, stunt, MHG. stunde, a time, while, hour, G. stunde, an hour, = Icel. Sw. Dan. stund, a time, while, hour, moment; perhaps orig. 'a point of resting or standing,' and akin to stand.] A time; a short time; a while; a moment; an instant.

Now lat us stynte of Troylus a stounde.
Chaucer, Troilus, l. 1086.

See death is heer & yonder in one stound.
Times Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 120.

Upon a stound, in a moment.

stound² (stound), v. i. [Also stoun; = Icel. stynja = Dan. stönne = D. stenen = LG. stenen, stönen, > G. stöhnen, groan. Cf. *stound*², n.] 1. To ache; smart. [Prov. Eng.—2. To long;

pine: as, the cows stound for grass. Halliwell.
[Prov. Eng.]
stound<sup>2</sup>, n. [ME.: see stound<sup>2</sup>, v.] Sorrow;
grief; longing.

To putte away the stoundes stronge,
Which in me lasten alle to longe.
Rom. of the Rose, l. 2639.

stound<sup>3</sup> (stound), v. t. [A var. of stun<sup>1</sup>, as a-tund of astun, aston: see stun<sup>1</sup>, stony<sup>2</sup>, aston, a-tun, e'e.] 1. To stun as with strokes; beat heavily: as, to stound the ears with the strokes of a bell. [Prov. Eng.]—2. To astound; amaze.

Your wrath, weak boy? Tremble at mine unless Retraction follow close upon the heels
Of that late de viding insult.

Keats, Otho the Great, iv. 2. 95.

stound<sup>3</sup> (stound), n. [< stound<sup>3</sup>, v.] 1. A stunning blow or stroke: the force of a blow.

Like to a mazed steare,
That yet of mortall stroke the stound doth beare.
Spenser, F. Q., IV. vi. 37.

2. Astonishment; amazement; bewilderment.

Thus we stood as in a stound,
And wet with tears, like dew, the ground.
Gay, Shepherd's Week, Prol., l. 23.

stound<sup>4</sup> (stound). An obsolete past participle of stun<sup>1</sup>. Spenser.

stound<sup>5</sup> (stound), n. [A dial. var. of stond, stand: see stand, n.] A vessel to contain small beer. [Prov. Eng.]

stoundmeal (stound'mēl), adv. [< ME. stoundmēl, stoundmēle, < AS. stundmālum, at times, < stund, time, space of time (see stound<sup>1</sup>), + māl- lun, dat. pl. of māl, a time: see meal<sup>2</sup>, and cf.
dropmeal, flockmeal, piecemeal, thousandmeal, etc.] At times; at intervals; from moment to moment: also used adjectively.

The lyl of love is fulle contrarie,
Which stoundmēle can ofte varie.
Rom. of the Rose, l. 2304.

This wynde that moore and moore
Thus stoundmēle encreseth in my face.
Chaucer, Troilus, v. 674.

stoup. See stoup<sup>1</sup>, stoup<sup>2</sup>, stoup<sup>4</sup>.

stour<sup>1</sup>, a. See stour<sup>1</sup>.

stour<sup>2</sup>, r. and n. See stour<sup>2</sup>.

stour<sup>3</sup> (stour or stōr), n. [Early mod. E. also stourre, Sc. also sture; < ME. stour, storr, stor, stur, < OF. estor, estore (also rarely estorme, also estormie, estourmie, esturmie), a tumult, conflict, assault, shock, battle, = Pr. estor = It. stormo, dial. sturm, tumult, noise, bustle, throng, troop, band, < OHG. sturm, storm, battle, = E. storm:
see storm. For the loss of the final m in OF., cf.
OF. tour, turn, jour, day, etc., with loss of final n (see turn, tour<sup>2</sup>).] 1. Tumult; conflict; a warlike encounter; shock of arms; battle.

Men sen al day and reden ek in storyes
That after sharpe stoures ben oft victories.
Chaucer, Troilus, lii. 1066.

His horsemen they raid sturdily,
And stude about him in the stoure.
Raid of the Reidenre (Child's Ballads, VI. 135).

2†. A fit; a paroxysm.

Which suddin fitt, and halfe extatike stoure,
When the two fearful women saw, they grew Greatly confused in behavoure.
Spenser, F. Q., III. iii. 50.

3†. Encounter; time or place of meeting.

Maidens blush when they kiss men;
So did Phillis at that stoure;
Her face was like the rose flower
Greene, The Shepherd's Ode (trans.).

stour<sup>4</sup> (stour), n. [Also stower; < ME. stourc, stourre, < Icel. staurr, a stake, palo; perhaps akin to Gr. stavros, a stake, cross: see steer<sup>1</sup> and staurus.] 1. A stake.

And if he wille no to do soo, I salle late hym witt that ge salle sende a grete powere to his cltee, and bryne it up stikke and stourre.
MS. Lincoln A. i. 17, f. 41. (Halliwell.)

2. A round of a ladder.—3. A stave in the side of a wagon. Halliwell.—4. A long pole by which barges are propelled against the stream. Also called poy. [Prov. Eng. in all uses.]

Stourbridge clay. A refractory clay from Stourbridge, in Worcestershire, England, occurring in the coal-measures, extensively worked for the manufacture of fire-brick and crucibles.

stoured (stoured), a. [Early mod. E. stowered;
< stour<sup>4</sup> + -ed.] Staked. [Prov. Eng.]

Standing together at a comon wateryng place ther called Hedgedyke, lately stoured for cattall to drynke at.
Archæologia, XXIII. 23. (Halliwell.)

stourness, stoury. Same as stourness, stoury.
stout<sup>1</sup> (stout), a. and n. [< ME. stout, stoute, sometimes stought; < OF. stout, estout, estolt, estot, estut, F. dial. stout, proud, = Pr. estout, stout, bold, valiant, rash, impetuous, violent, < MD. stolt, D. stout, stout, bold, rash, also stupid (influenced by It. stolto, silly, < L. stultus:

see stultify), = AS. stolt = OFries. stult = MLG.
LG. stolt = OHG. MHG. G. stolz, proud (MHG. also foolish, due to the influence of the It. word), = Icel. stolt = Sw. Dan. stolt, proud; perhaps akin to stilt. Hence ult. (< OF.) ME. stotay, stoteye.] 1. a. 1. Bold; valiant; brave; daring.

So sterne he was & stoute & swiche strjokes lent;
Was non so stiff stelen wede that with-stod his wepen.
William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 3535.

Verily Christian did here play the man, and showed himself as stout as Heracles could, had he been here.
Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, p. 286.

Have you a stout heart? Nerves fit for sliding panels and tapestry? Jane Austen, Northanger Abbey, xx.
2†. Proud; haughty.

I was big of herte and stoute,
And in my clothing wondre gay.
Hymns to Virgin, etc. (E. E. T. S.), p. 36.
As stout and proud as he were lord of all.
Shak., 2 Hen. VI., i. 1. 187.

3. Firm; resolute; persistent; stubborn.

He was a great Becketist—viz, a stout opposer of Regal Power over Spiritual Persons.
Fuller, Worthies, Wilts. II. 467.

Shakespeare was Article XL of stout old Doctor Port-man's creed.
Thackeray, Pendennis, ix.

4. Hardy; vigorous; lusty; sturdy.

The people of this part of Candia are stout men, and drive a great coasting trade round the island in small boats, by carrying wood, corn, and other merchandizes.
Pococke, Description of the East, II. i. 241.

Seven brow fellows, stout and able
To serve their king and country weel.
Burns, Dedication to G. Hamilton.

5. Firm; sound; stanch; strong.

The stoutest vessel to the storm gave way.
Dryden, Æneid, i. 170.

6. Solid; substantial.

With blithe air of open fellowship,
Brought from the cupboard wine and stout cheer.
Wordsworth, Excursion, ii.

7. Bulky in figure; thick-set; corpulent.

Mrs. Reed was rather a stout woman; but . . . she ran nimble up the stair.
Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, iv.
= Syn. 1. Valorous, manful, gallant.—4 and 5. Stalwart,
Sturdy, etc. See robust.

II. n. Strong ale or beer of any sort; hence, since the introduction of porter, porter of extra strength: as, Dublin stout.

The waiter's hands, that reach
To each his perfect pint of stout.
Tennyson, Will Waterproof.

stout<sup>1</sup> (stout), v. [< ME. stouten; < stout<sup>1</sup>, a.]

I. intrans. 1†. To be bold or defiant.

Lewed man, thou shalt cursing doute,
And to thy prest thou shalt nat stout.
MS. Harl. 1701, f. 72. (Halliwell.)

2. To persist; endure: with an impersonal it.
[Prov. Eng.]

We stouted it out and lived.
Annals of Phila. and Penn., I. 385.

II.† trans. To dare; defy; resist.

For no man ful comunly Beseecheth a wyfe of foly,
But there the wyfe ys aboute
The gode man for to stoute.
MS. Harl. 1701, f. 20. (Halliwell.)

stout<sup>2</sup> (stout), n. [Also stut; < ME. stout, stut, < AS. stūt, a gnat.] 1. A gnat.—2. A gadfly.
[Prov. Eng. in both uses.]—3†. A firefly or miller.

Pirasta, a fire-fly; . . . some call it a candle-flie, a stout, a miller-fowle, or bishop.
Florio.

stout-dart (stout'därt), n. A British noctuid moth, Agrotis ravidia.

stouten (stout'n), v. t. [< stout<sup>1</sup> + -en.] To make stout; strengthen. [Rare.]

The pronounced realist is a useful fellow-creature, but so also the pronounced idealist—stouten his work though you well may with a tincture of modern reality.
R. W. Gilder, New Princeton Rev., IV. 12.

stouth (stouth), n. [< ME. stouth, stealth, < Icel. stuldr = Sw. stöld, stealth: see stealth.]
Theft; stealth; also, a clandestine transaction. Jamieson. [Scotch.]

Sum rownys till his fallow thaym betwene,
Hys mery stouth and pastyme lait sistrene.
Gavin Douglas, Æneid, xii., Prol., l. 212.

stouth-and-routh (stouth'and-routh'), n. [A Sc. riming formula, in which one of the words appears to be wrenched, as usual, from its lit.
meaning: prob. orig. as if 'plunder and plenty,'
i. e. much property acquired and inherited:
stouth, theft, stealth (cf. stouthrief, robbery with violence, also provision, furniture);

routh, plenty: see routh<sup>3</sup>.] Plenty; abundance.
[Scotch.]

It's easy for your honour and the like o' you gentle folks to say sae, that hae stouth-and-routh, and fire and fending, and meat and claith, and sit dry and canny by the fireside.
Scott, Antiquary, xi.

stout-hearted (stout'här'ted), a. Having a stout or brave heart; also, obstinate.

The stouthhearted are spoiled; they have slept their sleep.
Ps. lxxvi. 5.

stout-heartedness (stout'här'ted-nes), n. The quality of being stout-hearted; courage; especially, moral courage.

If any one wants to see what German stout-heartedness, rectitude, and hard work could do for Syria, he had better go and live for a while in the German colony at Haifa.
Contemporary Rev., LIV. 360.

stouthrief (stouth'rēf), n. [Also corruptly stouthrie; < stouth + reaf, Sc. rief, reif, robbery: see reaf.] In Scots law, theft accompanied by violence; robbery; burglary. The term is usually applied in cases in which robbery is committed within a dwelling-house.

stoutly (stout'li), adv. [< ME. stoutly; < stout + -ly.] In a stout or sturdy manner; with boldness, stanchness, or resolution.

stoutness (stout'nes), n. [< ME. stoutnes; < stout + -ness.] The state or quality of being stout, in any sense.

stove<sup>1</sup> (stōv), n. [Early mod. E. also stoore, rarely stouph; not found in ME. and rare in AS.
(see below); < MD. stove, a heated room, bathroom, also (with dim. stofken) a foot-stove used by women, later D. stof, a stove, furnace, = MLG. stove, a heated room, bath-room, in gen.
a room, LG. stove, usually stave, a bath-room, in
gen. a room, = OHG. stuba, stupā, MHG. stube, a heated room, a bath-room, G. stube, a room (cf.
OF. estuve, F. étuve = Pr. estuba = Sp. Pg. estufa
= It. stufa, a bath-room, hothouse, < OHG.), =
AS. stofa, a bath-room (glossing L. balneum), =
Icel. stofa, stufa, a bath-room with a stove, =
Sw. stuga = Dan. stue, a room; cf. OBulg. istūba, izba, a tent, Bulg. izba, a hut, cellar, = Sloven.
izba, jezba, a room, = Serv. izba, a room, =
Bohem. izba, jizba = Pol. izba, a bath-room, = Russ. istiba, izba, a hut, dial. kitchen, = Albanian isbe, a cellar, = Rum. izbe, a stove, = Turk.
izbe, a cellar, = OPruss. stubo = Lith. stuba = Lett. istaba = Finn. tupa = Hung. szoba, a bathroom; all prob. < OHG. or G. The orig. sense appears to have been 'a heated room.' The application of the name to a means of heating is comparatively recent. From the Teut., through OF., are derived E. stew<sup>1</sup> and stive<sup>3</sup>, which are thus doublets of stove<sup>1</sup>.] 1. A room, chamber, or house artificially warmed.
[Obsolete except in the specific uses (a), (b), below.]

When a certain Frenchman came to visit Melancthon he found him in his stove, with one hand dandling his child in the swaddling clouts and the other holding a book and reading it.
Fuller.

When you have taken Care of your Horse, you come whole into the Stove, Boots, Baggage, Dirt and all, for that is a common Room for all Comers.

N. Bailey, tr. of Colloquies of Erasmus, I. 288.

Specifically—(a) In hort., a glazed and artificially heated building for the culture of tender plants: the same as a greenhouse or hothouse, except that the stove maintains a higher temperature—not lower than 60° F. See greenhouse, hothouse, and dry-stove. (Eng.) (b) A drying-chamber, as for plants, extracts, conserves, etc.; also, a highly heated drying-room, used in various manufactures.

They are sumtimes inforced to rype and dry them [grain] in theyr stoues and hottes houses.

R. Eden, tr. of Sebastian Munster (First Books on America, [ed. Arber, p. 292].

2†. A place for taking either liquid or vapor baths; a bath-house or bath-room.

In that village there was a Stove, into which the captaine went in the morning, requesting M. Garrard to go also to the same to wash himself.

Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 423.

There are in Fez a hundred bath-stoves well built, with four or five Hals in each, and certaine Galleries without, in which they put off their clothes.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 617.

3. A closed or partly closed vessel or receiver in which fuel is burned, the radiated heat being utilized for warming a room or for cooking.
Stoves are made of cast-iron and sheet-iron, and also of earthenware in the form of tiles cemented together, or plaster held together by a frame of wire, or the like, and of masonry solidly put together. The stoves of tiles, masonry, etc., radiate less heat than iron stoves, but when heated remain hot for a long time. Stoves are divided into the two main classes of cooking-stoves and warming-stoves, and are also classified according to the fuel used, as wood-stoves, gas-stoves, etc. There are many varieties, named according to their use, as the car-stove, camp-stove, foot-stove, tinmen's stove, etc., or according to some attachment, as a water-bacl stove. Warming-stoves range from the open fireplace or Franklin stove to magazine and base-burning fireplaces and heaters for warming more than one room, which are more properly furnaces. The word was first used in English in this sense as applied to foot-stoves. See foot-stove, oil-stove, gas-stove.

The sempstress speeds to Change with red-tipt nose;
The Belgian stove beneath her footstool glows.

Gay, Trivia, ii. 333.

4. In ceram., a pottery-kiln.—5. In a furnace, the oven in which the blast is heated.—6. In bookbinding, an apparatus with which the finisher heats his tools, formerly made to burn charcoal, but latterly gas.—Air-tight stove. See air-tight.—Bark-stove. Same as bark-bed.—Base-burning stove. See base-burning.—Camp-stove. A small sheet-iron stove, light and portable, used for both cooking and heating, as in a tent.—Cooking-stove. A stove arranged especially for cooking, having ovens, and often a water-back, exposed to the heat of the fire, and pot-holes above the fire.—Franklin stove. A form of open stove invented by Benjamin Franklin in the early part of his life, and called by him "the Pennsylvania fireplace." The name is now given (a) to any open stove with or without doors that heat widely, and with auditions or a grate similar to those of an ordinary fireplace; (b) to a kind of fireplace with back and sides of ironwork and some arrangement for heating the air in chambers which communicate with the room.—Norwegian stove. A chamber the walls of which are made as perfect non-conductors of heat as possible, used for cooking by enabling a pot or saucepan full of boiling water, placed in it, to retain its heat for a great length of time, thus stewing the meat, etc., which it may contain. The same chamber may be used as a refrigerator, as it keeps ice unmelted for a long time.—Rotary stove. See rotary oven, under oven.

stove<sup>1</sup> (stōv), v. t.; pret. and pp. stoved, ppr. stoving. [< stove<sup>1</sup>, n. Cf. stov<sup>1</sup>, v., stove<sup>2</sup>, v.] 1. To heat in a stove or heated room; expose to moderate heat in a vessel. Specifically—(a) To keep warm in a house or room by artificial heat: as, to stove orange-trees.

For December and January, and the latter part of November, you must take such things as are green all winter; . . . lemon-trees, and myrtles, if they be stoved.

Bacon, Gardens (ed. 1857).

(b) To heat in or as in a stove: as, to stove feathers; to stove printed fabrics (to fix the color); to stove ropes (to make them pliable); to stove timber.

Light upon some Dutchmen, with whom we had good discourse touching stoving, and making of cables.

Pepys, Diary, II. 210.

And in 1726, when the ship was surveyed by the Master Shipwrights of Portsmouth and Deptford, with the view to her being rebuilt, it was found that the stoved planks were fresher and tougher, and appeared to have fewer defects, than those which had been charred, many of the latter being found rotten. Fincham, Ship-building, iii. 32.

(c) In vinegar-manuf., to expose (malt-wash, etc.) in casks to artificial heat in a close room, in order to induce acetous fermentation. (d) In ceram., to expose to a low heat. See pottery, porcelain, and kiln. (e) To cook in a close vessel. stew. [Scotch or prov. Eng.]

The supper was simple enough. There were omelettes and cheese on the table, a large dish of stoved potatoes steaming and savory, and a jug of milk.

Mrs. Oliphant, Joyce, v.

2t. To shut up, as in a stove; inclose; confine.

A naked or stov'd fire, pent up within the house without any exit or succession of external fresh and unexhausted vital air must needs be noxious and pernicious.

Ecdyn, Advertisement to Quincenty (Richardson)

Fighting cocks . . . must then be stoved, which meant putting them in deep baskets filled with straw, covering them with straw, and shutting down the lids.

J. Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, I. 302.

stove<sup>2</sup> (stōv). Preterit and past participle of stave.

stove-coal (stōv'kōl), n. Coal of either of two sizes: (a) large stove, or No. 3, which passes through a 2½- to 2-inch mesh, and over a 1½- to 1¼-inch mesh, and (b) small stove, known as No. 4, which passes through a 1½- to 1¼-inch mesh, and over a 1½- to 1-inch mesh. Penn. Surv. Gloss.

stove-drum (stōv'drum), n. A chamber over a stove in which the heated gases are received before being discharged into the chimney, in order that their heat may be utilized.

stove-glass (stōv'glās), n. See glass.

stove-hearth (stōv'härth), n. The horizontal shelf or ledge which in some stoves lies outside and in front of the grate containing the fuel. [New Eng.]

stove-house (stōv'hous), n. Same as stove<sup>1</sup>, 1. (a) Same as stove<sup>1</sup>, 1 (a). (b) In the preparation of furs, a house or chamber in which the skins are dried.

The stove-house is full of iron racks upon which are placed iron rods, which receive the skins.

Ure, Diet., IV. 350.

stove-jack (stōv'jak), n. Same as smoke-jack, 2.

stovepipe (stōv'pip), n. 1. A metal pipe for conducting smoke, gases, etc., from a stove to a chimney-flue.—2. Same as stovepipe hat. [Colloq., U. S.]—Stovepipe hat. Same as chimney-pot hat (which see, under hat). [Colloq., U. S.]

He bore himself like an ancient prophet, and would have looked like one only for his black face and a rusty stove-pipe hat.

Harper's Mag., LXXX. 391.

stovepiping (stōv'pī'ping), n. [< stovepipe + -ing.] Tubing for a stovepipe.

A piece of stove-piping about 18 in. long.

Workshop Receipts, 2d ser., p. 102.

stove-plant (stōv'plant), n. A plant cultivated in a stove. See stove<sup>1</sup>, 1 (a).

stove-plate (stōv'plāt), n. 1. One of the plates or lids serving to cover the apertures in the top of a cooking-stove; a griddle.—2. Same as stove-hearth. Trans. Amer. Philol. Ass., XVII., App., p. xii. [Pennsylvania.] stove-polish (stōv'pol'ish), n. See polish<sup>1</sup>.

stover<sup>1</sup> (stōv'vēr), n. [< ME. stover, < OF. estover, estovoir, necessaries, < estover, estovoir, estovoir, used impers., it is necessary; origin unknown.] Fodder and provision of all sorts for cattle. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

Where live nibbling sheep.

And flat meads thatel'd with stover, them to keep.

Shak., Tempest, iv. 1. 63.

stover<sup>2</sup> (stōv'vēr), v. i. [Origin obscure.] To bristle up; stiffen. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

Beard, be confind to neatness, that no hair

May stover up to prick my mistress' lip.

Forl., Love's Sacrifice, li. 1.

stove-truck (stōv'truk), n. 1. In a cannon-foundry, a truck on which ordnance is moved.—2. A truck for moving heavy stoves. It is run under the stove when, by means of a lever, its platform is raised, and lifts the stove. The lever serves as a handle for guiding the truck. E. H. Knight.

stow<sup>1</sup> (stō), v. t. [*< ME. stowen, stowen, stowen, < AS. stowigan, stow = MD. stouwen, stouwen, D. stouwen = MLG. stouwen, stouwen, LG. stouwen, bring to a stand, hinder, = OIIG. stouan, stouan, G. stouan, bring to a halt, hem in, stop, pack, = Sw. stufra = Dan. sture, stow, pack (< LG. ?); lit. 'place,' 'put in place,' < stow, a place, = OFries. sto, a place, = Icel. *stō, in eld-stō, a fire-place, = Lith. stowa, a place where one stands; prob. from the root of stand (√ sta): see stand, stare. But the continental forms (to which is due stow<sup>2</sup>) may not be connected with the AS. verb, which is rare. Cf. bestow. See also stew<sup>2</sup>.]*

1. To put in a suitable or convenient place or position; put in a place aside or out of the way; lay up; put up; pack; especially, to pack in a convenient form: as, to stow bags, bales, or casks in a ship's hold; to stow sheaves.

He radde religion here ruele to holde,
"Leste the kyng and his conseil goure comenes a-peyre,
And be stwardes of goure stoules til ze be stowed betere."

Piers Plowman (C), vi. 146.

Foul thief, where hast thou stow'd my daughter?

Shak., Othello, I. 2. 62.

We pointed to the white rolls of stowed hammocks in the nettings.

J. W. Palmer, Up and Down the Irrawaddi, p. 219.

2. To accumulate or compactly arrange anything in; fill by packing closely: as, to stow a box or the hold of a ship.

The tythe o' what ye waste at cartes

Wad stow'd his pantry'

Burns, To W. Simpson.

3. To contain; hold.

Shall thy black bark those gully spirits stow

That kill themselves for love?

Fletcher, Mad Lover, iv. 1.

There was an English ship then in the roads, wherof one Mr. Marlot was master, he entertained as many as his ship could stow. Winthrop, Hist. New England, II. 293.

4. To furl or roll up, as a sail.—5. In mining, to fill up (vacant spaces) with stowing. A mine is worked by the method of stowing when all the valuable substance—ore, or coal, or whatever it may be—is taken out, and the vacant space packed full of deads or refuse, either that furnished by the workings themselves, or stuff brought from the surface, or both together.

6t. To bestow; give; grant.

If thou dost flow

In thy frank gulfes, & thy golds freely stow,

The principall will make thy penance ebbe.

Times' Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 81.

7t. To intrust; commit; give in charge.

Stowme or warney, or besettyne, as men done moneye or chaffer. Commuto. Prompt. Par., p. 478.

To stow down. (a) To put in the hold of a vessel; stow away; specifically, to run (oil) into the casks of a whaler. (b) To furnish as the stow down: as, the whale stowed down 75 barrels of oil.

stow<sup>2</sup> (stō), v. [ME. stowen: see stow<sup>1</sup>.] I. trans. 1t. To resist; hinder; stop.

giff any man stow me this nyth,

I xal hym geve a dedly wounde.

Coventry Mysteries, p. 217. (Halliwell.)

2. To put out of sight or hearing; be silent about. [Slang.]

Now if you'll stow all that gammon and speak common-sense for three minutes, I'll tell you my mind right away.

Wylie Melville, White Rose, II. xx.

II.t. intrans. To make resistance; resist.

Thay stekede stedys in stoure with stelene wapnyes,
And alle stowede wyth strenghe that stode theme agaynes!

Morte Arthure (E. E. T. S.), I. 1489.

stow<sup>3</sup> (stou), v. t. [Cf. LG. stuve, stuff, a remnant, stuff, blunt, stumpy.] To cut off; crop; lop. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

If ever any body should affront his kinsman, . . . he would stow his lugs out of his head, were he the best man in Glasgow.

Scott, Rob Roy, xxxvi.

stow<sup>4</sup> (stō), n. [A dial. var. of stove<sup>1</sup>.] In tin-plate manuf., the structure which contains the furnace and the series of five pots. [Prov. Eng.]

stow<sup>4</sup> (stō), v. t. [A dial. var. of stove<sup>1</sup>.] To dry in an oven. [Prov. Eng.]

stowage (stō'āj), n. [< stow<sup>1</sup> + -age.] 1. The act or operation of stowing.

Coasting vessels, in the frequent hurry and bustle attendant upon taking in or discharging cargo, are the most liable to mishap from the want of a proper attention to stowage.

Poe, Narrative of A. Gordon Pym, vi.

2. The state of being stowed; also, a place in which something is or may be stowed; room for stowing.

I am something curious, being strange,

To have them [jewels, etc.] in safe stowage.

Shak., Cymbeline, i. 6. 102.

They may as well sue for Nunneries, that they may have some convenient stowage for their wither'd daughters.

Milton, On Def. of Humb. Remonst.

In every vessel there is stowage for immense treasures.

Addison. (Johnson.)

3. Money paid for stowing goods.—4. That which is stowed.

We ha' no'er better luck

When we ha' such stowage as these trinkets with us.

Fletcher (and another), Sea Voyage, i. 1.

stowaway (stō'a-wā'), n. [< stow<sup>1</sup> + away.] One who, in order to secure a free passage, conceals himself aboard an outward-bound vessel, with the hope of remaining undiscovered until too late to be sent ashore.

stowdown (stō'doun), n. The act of stowing down, also that which is stowed down, in the hold of a vessel.

stower<sup>1</sup> (stō'ēr), n. [< stow<sup>1</sup> + -er<sup>1</sup>.] One who stows; specifically, a workman who assists in stowing away the cargo in the hold of a vessel.

stower<sup>2</sup>, stowered<sup>1</sup>. See stow<sup>1</sup>, stowed<sup>1</sup>.

stowing (stō'ing), n. In mining, rubbish, or material of any kind, taken from near at hand, or brought from the surface, and used to fill up places from which ore, coal, or other valuable substance has been removed.

stowlins (stō'linz), adv. [*Contracted from *stolcutlings, < stolen + -ling<sup>2</sup>.*] Stealthily.

Rab, stowlins, prid'd her bonnie mou' . . .

Unseen that night. Burns, Halloween.

stownd (stoun). A Scotch past participle of steal.

My mither she fell sick, and the cow was stownd awa.

Auld Robin Gray.

stowret. Same as stoor<sup>1</sup>, stoor<sup>2</sup>.

stow-wood (stō'wūd), n. Naut., billets of wood used for steadying casks in a vessel's hold.

S. T. P. An abbreviation of Sacrae or Sacro-sanctae Theologiae Professor, Professor of Sacred Theology.

strat, n. An obsolete form of straw<sup>1</sup>.

strabism (strā'bizm), n. [< NL. strabismus.]

Same as strabismus.

strabismal (strā-biz'māl), a. [< strabism + -al.] Same as strabismic.

strabismic (strā-biz'mik), a. [< strabism + -ic.] Pertaining to, affected by, or involving strabismus; squinting; distorted.

strabismical (strā-biz'mi-kāl), a. [< strabismic + -al.] Same as strabismic. Science, XIII. 364.

strabismometer (strab-is-mom'e-tēr), n. [< NL. strabismus, q. v., + Gr. μέτρον, measure.] An instrument for measuring strabismus; a strabometer.

strabismus (strā-bis'mus), n. [= F. strabisme, < NL. strabismus, < Gr. στραβισμός, a squinting, < στραβός, crooked, distorted, < στρέφειν, twist, turn about.] Squint; a failure of one of the visual axes to pass through the fixation-point (the point which is looked at). The eye whose visual axis passes through the fixation-point is called the working eye, the other the squinting eye.—Absolute strabismus, strabismus occurring for all distances of the fixation-point.—Concomitant strabismus, strabismus which remains about the same in amount for all positions of the fixation-point.—Convergent strabismus, strabismus in which the visual axes cross between the fixation-point and the eyes. Diplopia from this cause is said to be homonymous.—Divergent strabismus, divergent squint, in which the visual axes diverge, or at least cross beyond the fixation-point. Diplopia from this cause is said to be crossed.—Latent strabismus, strabismus existing only when one eye is occluded.—Manifest strabismus, strabismus occurring when both eyes are open.—Monolateral strabismus, strabismus in which it is always the visual axis of the same eye which fails to pass through the fixation-point.—Relative strabismus, strabismus occurring for some and not for other distances of the fixation-point.—Strabismus deorsum vergens, downward squint, in which the visual axis of the squinting eye passes lower than the fixation-point.—Strabismus sursum vergens, upward squint, in which the visual axis of the squinting eye passes higher than the fixation-point.

strabometer (strā-bom'ē-tēr), n. [Gr. στραβός, crooked, + μέτρον, measure.] An instrument for measuring strabismus; a strabismometer.

strabotomy (strā-bot'ō-mi), n. [Gr. στραβός, crooked, distorted (< στρίβειν, twist, turn about), + -τομία, < τρίβειν, twist, cut.] In surg., the operation for the cure of squinting by cutting the attachment of a muscle or muscles to the eyeball.

strachyt, n. A word of doubtful form and meaning, occurring only in the following passage, where in the earlier editions it is italicized as a title or proper name.

There is example for't; the lady of the Strachy married the yeoman of the wardrobe. Shak., T. N., ii. 5. 45.

strackent. An obsolete past participle of strike. Chaucer.

stract (strakt), a. [Aphetic form of distract.] Distracted. [Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

So I did, but he came afterwards as one stract and besides himself. Terence in English (1634) (Nares.)

strad (strād), n. [Origin obscure.] A kind of leather gaiter worn as a protection against thorns. Hallivell.

straddle (strād'l), v.; pret. and pp. straddled, ppr. straddling. [A var. of stridle, striddle, freq. of stride: see striddle, stride.] I. intrans. 1. To stand or walk with the legs wide apart; sit or stand astride.

At length (as Fortune seide) I lighted vpon an old, straddling usurer. Nashe, Pierce Penilesse, p. 11.

Then Apollyon straddled quite over the whole breadth of the way, and said, I am void of fear in this matter. Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, i.

2. To include or favor two apparently opposite or different things; occupy or take up an equivocal position in regard to something; as, to straddle on the tariff question. [Colloq.]

II. trans. 1. To place one leg on one side and the other on the other side of; stand or sit astride of: as, to straddle a fence or a horse.—2. To occupy or take up an equivocal position in regard to; appear to favor both sides of: as, to straddle a political question. [Colloq.]

The platform [of the Ohio Democrats] contains the well-known plank straddling the tariff question, which has appeared in previous Democratic platforms of that and other States. The Nation, July 3, 1884, p. 4.

3. To double (the blind) in poker.

straddle (strād'l), n. [< straddle, v.] 1. The act of standing or sitting with the legs far apart.—2. The distance between the feet or legs of one who straddles.—3. In speculative dealings on 'change, a "privilege" or speculative contract covering both a "put" and a "call"—that is, giving the holder the right at his option (1) of calling, within a specified number of days, for a certain stock or commodity at a price named in the contract, or (2) of delivering to the person to whom the consideration had been paid a certain stock or commodity upon terms similarly stated. See call, n., 15, privilege, n., 5, and put, n., 5. Also called spread eagle. [Slang.]—4. In the game of poker, a doubling of the blind by one of the players.—5. An attempt to take an equivocal or non-committal position: as, a straddle in a party platform. [Colloq.]—6. In mining, one of the vertical timbers by which the different sets are supported at a fixed distance from each other in the shaft; a vertical post used in various ways in timbering a mine, as in supporting the framework of a shaft at a hanging-on place.

straddle (strād'l), adv. [Short for astraddle.] Astride; with straddled legs: as, to ride straddled.

straddle-bug (strād'l-bug), n. A sort of tumble-bug; a scarabæid beetle with long legs, of the genus Canthon, as C. laevis. See cut under tumble-bug. [U. S.]

Out in the woods for a good time. Cloth spread on the green-sward, cicketa and straddle bugs hopping and crawling over sandwiches and everything else. St. Nicholas, XVII. 12, advt.

straddle-legged (strād'l-legd), a. Having the legs wide apart; with the legs astride of an object. W. H. Russell.

straddle-pipe (strād'l-pip), n. In gas-manuf., a bridge-pipe connecting the retort with the hydraulic main. E. H. Knight.

straddle-plow (strād'l-plou), n. A plow with two triangular parallel shares set a short distance apart, used to cover a row of corn, etc., by running it so that the line of seed comes between the shares. E. H. Knight.

stradiot (strād'i-ot), n. [< OF. stradiot, estradiot: see estradiot.] Same as estradiot.

strae (strā), n. A Scotch form of straw.

straget, n. [< L. strages, slaughter.] Slaughter; destruction.

He presaged the great strage and massacre which after happened in Sicilia. Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 230.

straggle (strag'l), v.; pret. and pp. straggled, ppr. straggling. [Formerly also stragle; a var. of strackle, freq. of strake (perhaps due in part to the influence of draggle, but cf. stagger for stacker): see stackle.] Straggle is not connected with stray.] 1. To roam or wander away, or become separated, as from one's companions or the direct course or way; stray.

In the plain beyond us, for we dust not straggle from the shore, we beheld where once stood Ilum by him (Ihus) founded. Sandys, Travailes, p. 16.

I found my self four or five Mile to the West of the Place where I straggled from my Companions. Dampier, Voyages, II. ii. 84.

2. To roam or wander at random, or without any certain direction or object; ramble.

Master George How, one of the Councell, stragling abroad, was slain by the Salvages.

Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, I. 100.

3. To escape or stretch out ramblingly or beyond proper limits; spread widely apart; shoot too far in growth.

Trim off the small superfluous branches on each side of the hedge, that straggle too far out.

Mortimer, Husbandry.

How these tall

Naked geraniums straggle

Browning, Pippa Passes, i.

4. To be dispersed: be apart from any main body; stand alone; be isolated; occur at intervals or apart from one another; occur here and there: as, the houses straggle all over the district.

straggler (strag'ler), n. [< straggle + -er.]

1. One who straggles or strays away, as from his fellows or from the direct or proper course; one who lags behind or becomes separated in any way from his companions, as from a body of troops on the march.

This manner of speech is termed the figure of digression by the Latines, following the Greeke originall; we also call him the straggler, by allusion to the souldier that marches out of his array. Pattenham, Arte of Eng. Poetrie, p. 195.

The first stragglers of a battalion of rocks, guarding a sort of pass, beyond which the beck rushed down a waterfall. Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xxxiv.

2. Specifically, in ornith., a stray, or strayed bird, out of its usual range, or off its regular migration. The stragglers are the casual or accidental visitants in any avifauna. In the nature of the case they are never numerous as regards individuals; but the list of what are technically called stragglers in any region or locality usually becomes, in the course of time, a long one, so far as species are concerned. Thus, in the avifauna of the District of Columbia, the stragglers are about as many species as the regular visitants of either summer or winter, or the permanent residents of the year round, though fewer than the spring and autumn migrants.

3. One who roams or wanders about at random, or without settled direction or object; a wanderer; a vagabond; especially, a wandering, shiftless fellow; a tramp.

Let's whip these stragglers o'er the seas again.

Shak., Rich. III., v. 3. 327.

Bottles missing are supposed to be half stolen by stragglers and other servants.

Swift, Advice to Servants (Butler).

4. Something that shoots beyond the rest or too far; an exuberant growth.

Let thy hand supply the pruning-knife,

And crop luxuriant stragglers.

Dryden, tr. of Virgil's Georgics, li. 503.

5. Something that stands apart from others; a solitary or isolated individual.

In a manner alone of that time left a standing straggler, peradventure, though my frute be very small, yet, because the ground from whence it sprang was so good, I may yet be thought somewhat fit for seede, when all yow the rest are taken up for better store.

Ascham, in Ellis's Lit. Letters, p. 14.

straggle-tooth (strag'l-tōth), n. An irregular or misshapen tooth; a snaggle-tooth; a snag.

stragglings (strag'ling), n. [Verbal n. of straggle, v.] A mode of dressing the surfaces of grindstones.

stragglingly (strag'ling-li), adv. In a straggling manner; one here and one there, or one now and one again: as, to come in stragglingly.

straggle-money (strag'ling-mun'ī), n. In the British navy: (a) Money given to those who apprehend deserters or others who have straggled or overstayed their leave of absence. (b) Money deducted from the wages of a man absent from duty without leave.

straggly (strag'li), a. [< straggle + -y.] Straggling; lone and spread out irregularly: as, a straggly scrawl; a straggly village. [Colloq.]

stragular (strag'ū-lār), a. In ornith., pertaining to the stragulum or mantle; pallial.

stragulum (strag'ū-lum), n.; pl. stragula (-lā). [< L. stragulum, a cover, coverlet: see strail.] In ornith., the mantle; the pallium; the back and folded wings taken together, in any way distinguished from other parts, as by color on a gull or tern. [Rare.]

strahlite (strā'lit), n. [< G. strahl, a ray, beam, arrow (see strale), + -ite.] Same as actinolite.

straight (strāt), a. and n. [Formerly also streight, straught, Se. straught, straucht, and, with the omission of the silent guttural, strait (prob. by confusion with the diff. word strail, narrow, strict, which was also, on the other hand, formerly spelled straight); < ME. streight, streight, streigt, rarely streit, straight, lit. 'stretched,' < AS. streht, pp. of streccan, stretch: see stretch. Cf. ME. strek, strik, < AS. strecc, strecc, streac = MLG. LG. strak = OHG. strach, MHG. strac, G. strack, extended, stretched, straight, = Dan. (obs.) strag, straight, erect, tight; from the same ult. root. Cf. the equiv. right, lit. 'stretched.'] I. a. 1. Stretched; drawn out.

Sithe thi fleisch, lord, was first perceyued

And, for cure sake, laid streight in stalle.

Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 252.

Pirrus with his streite sword.

Chaucer, Nun's Priest's Tale, l. 537.

2. Without bend or deviation, like a string tightly stretched; not crooked or curved; right; in geom., lying, as a line, evenly between its points. This is Euclid's definition. The principal characteristic of a straight line is that it is completely determined, if unlimited, by any two points taken upon it, or, if limited, by its two extremities. The idea of measurement does not enter into the idea of a straight line, and it is unnecessary to introduce that idea into the definition, as is done when it is said (after Legendre) to be the shortest distance between two points.

He that knoweth what is straight doth even thereby discern what is crooked, because the absence of straightness in bodies capable thereof is crookedness.

Hooker, Eccles. Polity, i. 8.

There is no mee such Cæsars; other of them may have crook'd noses, but to owe such straight arms, none.

Shak., Cymbeline, iii. 1. 88.

Be pleased to let thy Holy Spirit lead me in the straight paths of sanctity, without defections to either hand.

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 86.

3. Without interruption or break; direct.

Forth-with declarid to hys peple all,

And to thys cite his peple gan cal,

Wher-into that had an euyng streight way.

Rom. of Partenay (L. E. T. S.), I. 1303.

With straight air—that is, with the pressure from the main reservoir, or the air-pump, going directly to the brake cylinder—the engineer can apply the brakes to all the wheels of his train simultaneously.

Scribner's Mag., VI. 333.

4. Direct; authoritative; sure; reliable: as, a straight tip. [Slang.]—5. Upright; marked by adherence to truth and fairness; fair; honorable: as, a man straight in all his dealings. [Colloq.]—6. Proceeding or acting with directness; keeping true to the course. [Colloq.]

He shows himself to be a man of wide reading, a pretty straight thinker, and a lively and independent critic.

The Nation, Dec. 6, 1888, p. 459.

7. Free from disorder or irregularity; in order: as, his accounts are not quite straight.

Finally, being belted, curled, and set straight, he descended upon the drawing-room.

Thackeray, Pendennis, vii.

He told her that she needn't mind the place being not quite straight, he had only come up for a few hours—he should be busy in the studio.

H. James, Jr., The Century, XXXVI. 218.

8. Unqualified; unreserved; out-and-out: as, a straight Democrat (that is, one who supports the entire platform and policy of his party).—9. Unmixed; undiluted; neat. [Slang.]

Dispersing their rare and precious cash on "whisky straight" in the ever-recurring bar-rooms.

Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XXXIX. 76.

10. East and west; along an east and west line: used of the position of the body in Christian burial.

First Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial that willfully seeks her own salvation?

Sec. Clo. I tell thee she is; and therefore make her grave straight; the crowner hath sat on her, and finds it Christian burial.

Shak., Hamlet, v. 1. 4.
11. In poker, consisting of a sequence; forming a straight: as, a straight hand; a straight flush.—A straight face, an unsmiling face; a sober, unamused expression: as, he could with difficulty keep a straight face. [Colloq.]—Long straight. See long.—Straight accents, the long marks over the vowels, as ā, ē, ī, ō, ū, ŷ.—Straight angle. See angle.—Straight arch, in arch., a form of arch spanning an aperture in which the intrados is represented by straight lines which meet in a point at the top and comprise two sides of a triangle.—Straight ends and walls, a system of working coal, somewhat similar to "board and pillar." [North Wales].—Straight flush. See flush.—Straight intestine, bowel, or gut, the rectum. See cuts under alimentary, intestine, and peritonæum.—Straight sheer. See sheer.—Straight sinus, ticket, tubule, etc. See the nouns.

II. n. 1. The condition of being straight, or free from curvature or crookedness of any kind: as, to be out of the straight. [Colloq.]—2. A straight part or direction: as, the straight of a piece of timber.—3. In poker, a sequence of cards, generally five in number, or a hand containing such a sequence.

straight<sup>1</sup> (strāt'), adv. [ME. streight, streyght, streyghte, etc.; < straight<sup>1</sup>, a.] 1. In a straight line; without swerving or deviating from the direct course; directly.

Straight aforn hym a fair feld gan behold.
Rom. of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 4661.

Floating straight, obedient to the stream.
Shak., C. of E., i. 1. 87.

2. At once; immediately; directly; straightway.

And went streyghte into the Hopytall, and refreshed vs with mete and drynke, and rested vs there an houre or .ij. bycause of our watche the nyght byfore.

Sir R. Guylyforde, Pylgrymage, p. 28.
Shew him an enemy, his pain's forgot straight.

Fletcher, Humorous Lieutenant, i. 1.
straight<sup>1</sup> (strāt'), v. t. [straight<sup>1</sup>, a.] To make straight; straighten. [Rare.]

The old gypsy, in the mean time, set about arranging the dead body, composing its limbs, and straighting the arms by its side.

Scott, Guy Mannering, xxvii. straight<sup>2</sup>, a. and n. An obsolete spelling of straight.

straightaway (strāt'ā-wā'), a. A straight forward, without turn or curve: as, a straightaway course in a yacht- or horse-race.

At the Ascot, where I was last Thursday, the course is a straightaway one. T. C. Crawford, English Life, p. 28.

straight-billed (strāt'bīld), a. Having the bill straight, as a bird; rectirostral.

straight-cut (strāt'kut), a. Cut in a straight manner: applied to fine grades of cut smoking tobacco. The leaves are flattened out, packed compactly, and cut lengthwise, long fibers being thus obtained that present a beautiful silky appearance.

straight-edge (strāt'ej), n. A bar having one edge, at least, as straight as possible, to be used as a fiducial line in drawing and testing straight lines. Such instruments when of the greatest accuracy are somewhat costly. Common straight-edges for ruling ordinary lines, testing the surface of millstones, brickwork and stonework, etc., are made of wood, and range from a slip of wood one foot long to planks cut in the form of a truss and ten or more feet in length. See cut under plumb-rule.

straighten<sup>1</sup> (strā'tn), v. [straight<sup>1</sup> + -en<sup>1</sup>.] I. trans. To make straight, in any sense; specifically, to reduce from a crooked to a straight form.

A crooked stick is not straightened unless it be bent as far on the clean contrary side.

Hooker, Eccles. Polity, iv. 8.

To straighten the sheer. See sheer.
II. intrans. To become straight; assume a straight form.

straighten<sup>2</sup>, v. t. See straiten.
straightener (strāt'nēr), n. [straighten<sup>1</sup> + -er<sup>1</sup>.] One who or that which straightens.

straightening-block (strāt'ning-blok), n. An anvil used in straightening buckled saws. E. H. Knight.

straightening-machine (strāt'ning-mā-shēn'), n. In metal-work, any machine for removing a twist, bend, buckle, or kink from rails, rods, plates, straps, tubes, or wire.

straightforth (strāt'fōrh'), adv. [Early mod. E. streight forth; < straight<sup>1</sup> + forth<sup>1</sup>.] Directly; straightway.

She smote the ground, the which streight forth did yield A fruitful Olive tree.

Spenser, Muioptomos, l. 325.

straightforward (strāt'fōr'wārd), adv. [Also straightforwards, formerly also straitforward; < straight<sup>1</sup> + forward<sup>1</sup>.] Directly forward; right ahead.

Look not on this side or that side, or behind you as Lot's wife did, but straightforwards on the end.

J. Bradford, Letters (Parker Soc., 1853), II. 211.
straightforward (strāt'fōr'wārd), a. [straightforward, adv.] 1. Direct; leading directly forward or onward.

Midway upon the journey of our life
I found myself within a forest dark,
For the straightforward pathway had been lost.
Longfellow, tr. of Dante's Inferno, i. 3.

2. Characterized by uprightness, honesty, or frankness; honest; frank; open; without deviation or prevarication: as, a straightforward course; a straightforward person, character, or answer.

In prose he wrote as he conversed and as he preached, using the plain straightforward language of common life.

Southey, Bunyan, p. 40.
straightforwardly (strāt'fōr'wārd-li), adv. In a straightforward manner. Athenæum, No. 3258, p. 451.

straightforwardness (strāt'fōr'wārd-nes), n. Straightforward character or conduct; undeviating rectitude: as, a man of remarkable straightforwardness.

straight-hearted, a. See strait-hearted.

straight-horn (strāt'hōrn), n. A fossil cephalopod of the family Orthoceratidae, some of which were 12 or 15 feet long; an orthocerate. P. P. Carpenter.

straight-joint (strāt'joint), a. Noting a floor the boards of which are so laid that the joints form a continuous line throughout the length. straightly<sup>1</sup> (strāt'li), adv. [straight<sup>1</sup> + -ly<sup>2</sup>.] In a straight line; not crookedly; directly: as, to run straightly on. Imp. Dict.

straightly<sup>2</sup>, adv. An obsolete spelling of straightly.

straightness (strāt'nes), n. The property or state of being straight.

straight-out (strāt'out), a. and n. I. a. Out-and-out; straight: as, straight-out Republicans.

II. n. In U. S. politics, one who votes a straight or strictly party ticket; a thorough partizan.

Other Straight-outs, as they call themselves, . . . cannot take Grant and the Republicans.

The Nation, Aug. 22, 1872, p. 113
straight-pight (strāt'pīt), a. [straight<sup>1</sup> + pight.] Straight-fixed; erect.

Straight-pight Minerva. Shak., Cymbeline, v. 5. 164.

straight-ribbed (strāt'ribd), a. In bot., having the lateral ribs straight, as leaves of Castanea, palms, etc.

straightway (strāt'wā), adv. [ME. streight-vey; < straight<sup>1</sup> + way<sup>1</sup>.] Immediately; forthwith; without loss of time; without delay.

Thei hilde her streight-vey toward north wales to a Citee that longed to the kynges Tradilly-naunte.

Merrin (E. E. T. S.), iii. 558.
And straightway the damsel arose and walked.

straightways (strāt'wāz), adv. [straightway + adv. gen. -s.] Straightway.

None of the three could win a palm of ground but the other two would straightways balance it.

Bacon, Empire (ed. 1887).

straight-winged (strāt'wingd), a. In entom., having straight wings; orthopterous.

straik<sup>1</sup>, n. A Scotch spelling of stroke<sup>2</sup>.

straik<sup>2</sup>, v. t. A Scotch form of stroke<sup>2</sup>.

strail, n. [ME. straille, < AS. streagl, **strægel*, contr. strāl, a bed-cover, carpet, rug, = OF. stragule, a mantle, coverlet, < L. stragulum, a spread, covering, coverlet, blanket, carpet, rug, also stragula, a covering, blanket; neut. and fem. respectively of stragulus, serving for spreading or covering, < sternere, pp. stratus, spread, strew: see stratum.] A covering; a coverlet. Prompt. Parv., p. 478.

strain<sup>1</sup> (strān), v. [Early mod. E. also strayne; < ME. straynen, streinen, streyne, straynyen, < OF. streindre, estraindre, straindre, F. étreindre = Pr. estrenher, estaigner = It. strignere, streguere, stringere, < L. stringere, pp. strictus, draw tight; akin to Gr. σπῆγός, twisted, σπαγγίζω, press out, Lith. stregti, become stiff, freeze, AS. streccan, stretch, etc.: see stretch, straight<sup>1</sup>. From L. stringere are also ult. E. constrain, distrain, restrain, stringent, strait<sup>1</sup>, strict, etc.] I. trans. 1. To draw out; stretch; extend, especially with effort or care.

And if thi vynes footes IV ascende, Thenne armes IV is goode forth forto streyne.

Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 70.

All their actions, voyces, and gestures, both in charging and retiring, were so strained to the height of their qualitie and nature that the strangeness thereof made it seeme very delightful.

Capt. John Smith, Works, l. 136.

2. To draw tight; tighten; make taut.

To the pyller, lorde, also,
With a rope men bownd the too,
Hard drawe and streynyd faste.

Holy Hood (E. E. T. S.), p. 181.
Sir Mungo, who watched his victim with the delighted yet wary eye of an experienced angler, became now aware that, if he strained the line on him too tightly, there was every risk of his breaking hold.

Scott, Fortunes of Nigel, xv.

3. To confine; restrain; imprison.

There the steede in stodee strained in bondes.

Alisaunder of Macedoine (E. E. T. S.), l. 1157.

4. To stretch to the utmost tension; put to the stretch; exert: as, to strain every nerve to accomplish something.

He sweats,
Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture
That acts my words. Shak., Cymbeline, iii. 3. 94.

5. To stretch beyond measure; push beyond the proper extent or limit; carry too far.

He strained the Constitution, but he conquered the Lords.

N. A. Rev., CXLII. 593.

6. To impair, weaken, or injure by stretching or overtasking; harm by subjection to too great stress or exertion; hence, to sprain.

Hold, sir, hold, pray use this whistle for me,
I dare not straine my selfe to winde it I,
The Doctors tell me it will spend my spirits.

Brome, Sparagus Garden, iv. 7.

Prudes decay'd about may tack,
Strain their necks with looking back. Swift.

7. To force; constrain.

Whether that Goddes worthy forwetyng
*Streyne*th me nedely for to don a thing.

Chaucer, Nun's Priest's Tale, l. 422.
The quality of mercy is not strain'd.

Shak., M. of V., iv. 1. 184.
His mirth
Is forc'd and strain'd.

Sir J. Denham, The Sophy. (Latham.)

8. To urge; press.

Note if your lady strain his entertainment
With any strong or vehemement importunity.

Shak., Othello, iii. 3. 250.

9. To press; squeeze; hence, to hug; embrace.

He that nyght in armes wold hire streyne Harder than ever Paris did Eleyne.

Chaucer, Merchant's Tale, l. 509.

I would have strain'd him with a strict embrace.

Dryden, tr. of Ovid's Metamorph., x. 407.

10. To press through a filter or colander; separate extraneous or coarser matters from (a liquid) by causing it to pass through a filter or colander; purify from extraneous matter by filtration; filter: as, to strain milk.—11. To separate or remove by the use of a filter or colander: with out. See phrase under v. i., below.

Ye blind guides, which strain out the gnat, and swallow the camel.

Mat. xxiii. 24 [R. V.].

12. To force out by straining.

I at each sad strain will strain a tear.

Shak., Lucrece, l. 1131.

13. To deform, as a solid body or structure.—To strain a point. See point<sup>1</sup>.—To strain courtesy, to use ceremony; stand too much upon form or ceremony; insist on the precedence of others; hang back through excess of courtesy or civility.

My business was great; and in such a case as mine a man may strain courtesy.

Shak., R. and J., ii. 4. 55.

Strain not courtesies with a noble enemy.

Lamb, Two Races of Men.

= Syn. 10. Bolt, Screen, etc. See sift.

II. intrans. 1. To exert one's self; make violent efforts; strive.

To build his fortune I will strain a little.

Shak., T. of A., i. 1. 143.

What
Has made thy life so vile that thou shouldst strain
To forfeit it to me?

J. Beaumont, Psyche, i. 105.

2. To urge; press.

Nay, Sir, indeed the fault is yours most extreamlie now.

Pray, sir, forbear to strain beyond a womans patience.

Brome, Northern Lass, iii. 8.

3. To stretch strugglingly; stretch with effort.

This parlor looked out on the dark courtyard, in which there grew two or three poplars, straining upward to the light.

Mrs. Gaskell, Sylvia's Lovers, iii.

No sound, no sight as far as eye could strain.

Browning, Childre Roland.

4. To undergo distortions under force, as a ship in a high sea.

A ship is said to strain if in launching, or when working in a heavy sea, the different parts of it experience relative motions.

Sir W. Thomson, in Phil. Trans., CXLVI. 451.

The ship ran
Straining, heeled o'er, through seas all changed and wan.

William Morris, Earthly Paradise, III. 10.

5. To drip; ooze; filter; drain; flow; issue: as, water straining through sand becomes pure.

Then, in the Deserts dry and barren sand,
From flinty Rocks doth plentiful Rivers strain.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Triumph of Faith, lll. 18.

To strain at, to strive after; endeavor to reach or obtain.

I do not strain at the position.

Shak., I. and C., lll. 3. 112.

To strain at a gnat, a typographical error found in the authorized version (Mat. xxiii. 24) for strain out a gnat, the phrase found in Tyndale's and Coverdale's and other versions. See def. 11, above, and quotation there.

strain<sup>1</sup> (strān), n. [< strain<sup>1</sup>, v. In some uses (def. 7), cf. strain<sup>2</sup>.] 1†. Stretch; extent; pitch.

If it did infect my blood with joy,
Or swell my thoughts to any strain of pride.

Shak., 2 Hen. IV., iv. 5. 171.

May our Minerva

Answer your hopes, unto their largest strain!
B. Jonson, Every Man out of his Humour, Ind.

2. Stretching or deforming force or pressure; violence. (This use of the word, while permissible in literature, is incorrect in mechanics. The strain is not the force, but the deformation produced by the force.)

A difference of taste in jokes is a great strain on the affections.
George Eliot, Daniel Deronda, xv.

3. Tense or constrained state or condition; tension; great effort.

A dismal wedding! every ear at strain

Some sign of things that were to be to gain.

William Morris, Earthly Paradise, II. 314.

Whether any poet . . . has exerted a greater variety of powers with less strain and less ostentation. Landor.

4. In mech., a definite change in the shape or size of a solid body setting up an elastic resistance, or stress, or exceeding the limit of elasticity. The deformation of a fluid is not commonly called a strain. The word, which had previously been ill-defined, was made a scientific and precise term in this sense by Rankine in 1850. Thomson and Tait, in their "Treatise on Natural Philosophy," extend the term to deformations of liquid masses, and even of groups of points; and Tait subsequently extends it to any geometrical figure, so that it becomes a synonym of deformation.

Fresnel made the very striking discovery that glass and other simply refracting bodies are rendered doubly refracting when in a state of strain. To this Brewster added the observation that the requisite strain might be produced by unequal heating instead of by mechanical stress.

Tait, Light, § 292.

In this paper the word strain will be used to denote the change of volume and figure constituting the deviation of a molecule of a solid from that condition which it preserves when free from the action of external forces.

Rankine, Axes of Elasticity (1855).

A strain is any definite alteration of form or dimensions experienced by a solid. . . . If a stone, a beam, or a mass of metal in a building, or in a piece of framework, becomes condensed or dilated in any direction, or bent, or twisted, or distorted in any way, it is said to experience a strain.

W. Thomson, Mathematical Theory of Elasticity (1856).

5. A stretching of the muscles or tendons, giving rise to subsequent pain and stiffness; sprain; wrench; twist.—6. A permanent deformation or injury of a solid structure.—7. Stretch; flight or burst, as of imagination, eloquence, or song. Specifically—(a) A poem; a song; a lay.

All unworthy of thy nobler strain.

Scott, L. of the L., I., Int.

(b) Tune; melody.

I was all ear,

And took in strains that might create a soul
Under the ribs of death. Milton, Comus, l. 561.

In sweet Italian Strains our Shepherds sing.

Congreve, Opening of the Queen's Theatre, Epil.

(c) In a stricter sense, in music, a section of a piece which is more or less complete in itself. In written music the strains are often marked by double bars.

An Cynthia had but seen me dance a strain, or do but one trick, I had been kept in court.

B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, iv. 1.

(d) Tone; key; style or manner of speech or conduct. The third [sort] is of such as take too high a strain at the first.

Bacon, Youth and Age (ed. 1857).

That sermon is in a strain which I believe has not been heard in this kingdom. Burke, Rev. in France.

(e) Mood; disposition.

Henry . . . said, "I am come, young ladies, in a very moralizing strain, to observe that our pleasures in this world are always to be paid for."

Jane Austen, Northanger Abbey, xxvi.

Axes of a homogeneous strain, three straight lines of particles perpendicular to one another both before and after the strain.—Composition of strains. See composition of displacements, under composition.—Concurrent stress and strain. See concurrent.—Homogeneous or uniform strain, a strain which leaves every straight line of particles straight, and every pair of parallel lines parallel.—Longitudinal strain. See longitudinal.—Normal plane of a homogeneous strain, one of three planes each containing two of the three axes. There is generally only one such system of planes through each point of the body.—Orthogonal strain. (a) Relatively to a stress, a strain which neither does nor uses work by virtue of that stress. (b) Relatively to another strain, a strain orthogonal to a stress perfectly concurrent to the other strain.—

Principal strain. Same as principal strain-type (which see, under strain-type).—Pure strain, a homogeneous strain which does not rotate any axis of the strain.—Simple strain, any one of a number of strains conceived as independent components of other strains which they are employed to define. The phrase simple strain has no definite meaning, but simple longitudinal strain, simple tangential strain, simple shearing strain, etc., mean such strains existing not as components merely, but as resultants. Thus, if a bar is elongated without any transverse contraction or expansion, there is a simple longitudinal strain in the direction of the elongation. A simple tangential strain is a homogeneous strain in which all the particles are displaced parallel to one plane.—Strain-ellipsoid. See ellipsoid.—To heave a strain. See heave.—Type of a strain. See type.

strain<sup>2</sup> (strān), n. [An altered form, due appar. to confusion with strain<sup>1</sup>, 7, of what would be reg. streen; < ME. streen, stren, stren, earlier streon, istrcon, race, stock, generation, < AS. gestreón, gestrion, gain, wealth (= OS. gistrumi, = OHG. gistrumi, gain, property, wealth, business); appar. confused in ME. with the related noun, ME. strend, strynd, strand, < AS. strjnd, race, stock; < streónan, strjnan = OHG. strinan, beget, gestreónan, get, acquire.] 1. Race; stock; generation; descent; hence, family blood; quality or line as regards breeding; breed; a race or breed; a variety, especially an artificial variety, of a domestic animal. Strain indicates the least recognizable variation from a given stock, or the ultimate modification to which an animal has been subjected. But since such variation usually proceeds by insensible degrees, the significance of strain grades into that of breed, race, or variety.

Bountee comth al of God, nat of the streen

Of which they been engendered and ybore.

Chaucer, Clerk's Tale, l. 101.

O, if thou wert the noblest of thy strain,

Young man, thou shouldst not die more honourable.

Shak., J. C., v. 1. 59.

The ears of a cat vary in shape, and certain strains in England, inherit a pencil-like tuft of hairs, above a quarter of an inch in length, on the tips of their ears.

Darwin, Var. of Animals and Plants, i.

2. Hereditary or natural disposition; turn; tendency; character.

Sir, you have shown to-day your valiant strain.

Shak., Lear, v. 3. 40.

And here I shall not restrain righteousness to the particular virtue of justice, but enlarge it according to the genius and strain of the book of the Proverbs. Tillotson.

3. Sort; kind; style.

Let man learn a prudence of a higher strain.

Emerson, Essays, 1st ser., p. 214.

4. Trace; streak.

With all his merit there was a strain of weakness in his character. Bancroft, Hist. Const., II. 6.

5. The shoot of a tree. Hallucell (under strence). [Prov. Eng.].—6†. The track of a deer.

When they have shot a Deere by land, they follow him like blood-hounds by the blood, and straine, and often-times so take them. Capt. John Smith, Works, I. 134.

strain<sup>3</sup> (strān), v. t. [An aphetic form of disstrain.] To distrust.

When my lord refused to pay the two shillings, Mr. Knightly charged the constable to strain two shillings' worth of goods. Court and Times of Charles I., I. 56.

strainable (strā'na-bl), a. [Early mod. E. streinable, streynable; < strain<sup>1</sup> + -able.] 1†. Constraining; compelling; violent.

This yere the Duke of Burgon . . . with his xii. M. men, was dryuen in to England, with a ferse streynable wynde, in ther selynge towarde Spayn.

Arnold's Chron. (1502), p. xliii.

2. Capable of being strained.

strainably (strā'na-bli), adv. [Early mod. E. streinable; < strainable + -ly.] Violently; fiercely.

The wind . . . droue the flame so streinable amongst the tents and cabins of the Saxons, that the fire . . . increased the feare amongst the souldiours wonderfull.

Holinshed, Hist. Scotland, p. 95.

strained<sup>1</sup> (strānd), p. a. [< strain<sup>1</sup> + -ed.] Forced; carried beyond proper limits: as, a strained interpretation of a law.

strained<sup>2</sup> (strānd), a. [< strain<sup>2</sup> + -ed.] Of this or that strain or breed, as an animal.

strainer (strā'nér), n. [< ME. streynour, stren-youre; < strain<sup>1</sup> + -er.] 1. One who or that which strains.—2. A stretcher or tightener: as, a strainer for wire fences.—3. Any utensil for separating small solid particles from the liquid that contains them, either to preserve the solid objects or to clarify the liquid, or for both purposes.

Item, j. dressyng knyfe, j. fyre showle, ij. treys, j. streynour.

Paston Letters, I. 490.

4. In carriage-building: (a) A reinforcing strip or button at the back of a panel. (b) Canvas glued to the back of a panel to prevent warping or cracking. Also called stretcher.—Strainer of Hippocrates. Same as Hippocrates's sleeve (which see, under sleeve).

strainer-vine (strā'nér-vīn), n. The sponge-gourd, Luffa acutangula, and other species: so called from the use of the fibrous network contained in its fruit for straining palm-wine.

straining (strā'ning), n. [Verbal n. of strain<sup>1</sup>, v.] In saddlery, leather, canvas, or other fabric drawn over a saddle to form a base for the seating. It is put on the saddle with a tool called a straining-fork, the fabric having first been stretched on a machine called a straining-reel. Also called straining-leather.—Cross-straining, canvas or webbing drawn transversely over the first straining.

straining-beam (strā'ning-bēm), n. In a queen-post roof, a horizontal beam uniting the tops of the two queen-posts, and acting as a tie-rod to resist the thrust of the roof; a straining-piece. If a similar beam is placed on the main tie-rod, between the bases of the posts, it is called a straining-sill.

straining-leather (strā'ning-leth'ér), n. In saddlery, same as straining.

straining-piece (strā'ning-pēs), n. Same as straining-beam.

straining-sill (strā'ning-sil), n. See straining-beam.

strain-normal (strān'nôr'māl), n. A normal of a homogeneous strain.

strain-sheet (strān'shēt), n. In bridge-building, a skeleton drawing of a truss or other part of a bridge, with the calculated or computed greatest strain to which it will be subjected annotated at the side of each member. In making the actual working-drawings, the respective members are drawn to a size sufficient to sustain the stresses so marked on the sheet multiplied by a certain predetermined "factor of safety." Also called stress-sheet.

straint (strānt), n. [< OF. estrainte, estreinte, fem. of estraint, F. étreint, pp. of OF. estraindre, F. étreindre, strain; see strain<sup>1</sup>, v., and cf. restraint, constraint.] A violent stretching or tension; a strain; pressure; constraint.

Uppon his iron collar griped fast,

That with the strait his wesad nigh he brast.

Spenser, F. Q., V. ii. 14.

strain-type (strān'tīp), n. The type of a strain.—Principal strain-type, one of six strain-types such that, when the homogeneous elastic solid to which they belong is homogeneously strained in any way, the potential energy of the elasticity is expressed by the sum of the products of the squares of the components of the strain expressed in terms of these strain-types, each multiplied by a determinate coefficient.

strait<sup>1</sup> (strāt), a. and n. [Early mod. E. also straight, straight, streit, etc.; < ME. strait, stragt, strait, stragle, streit, streyt, streite, also sometimes straight, < OF. estreit, estrait (F. étroit), narrow, strict (as a noun, a narrow passage of water), = Pr. estreit = Sp. estrecho = Pg. estreito = It. stretto, narrow, strict, < L. strictus, pp. of stringere, draw tight: see strain<sup>1</sup>, stringent. Cf. strict, which is a doublet of strait, the one being directly from the L., the other through OF. and ME. The word strait<sup>1</sup>, formerly also spelled straight, has been more or less confused with the diff. word straight<sup>1</sup>, which was sometimes spelled strait.] I. a. 1. Narrow; having little breadth or width.

Egypt is a long Contree; but it is streyt, that is to seye narrow; for thei may not enlarge it toward the Desert, for defeaute of Watre. Mandeville, Travels, p. 45.

Strait is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it. Mat. vii. 14.

Britons seen, all flying

Through a strait lane. Shak., Cymbeline, v. 3. 7.

2. Confined; restricted; limited in space or accommodation; close.

Ther was swich congregacioun

Of peple, and eek so streit of herbergage,

That they ne founde as much as a cotage

In which they bothe myghte yloged be.

Chaucer, Nun's Priest's Tale, l. 169.

And the sons of the prophets said unto Elisha, Behold now, the place where we dwell with thee is too strait for us. 2 Ki. vi. 1.

3†. Of time, short; scant.

If thi nede be greet & thi tyme streite,

Than go thi silf therto & worche an houswiffes brayde.

Babees Book (E. T. S.), p. 41.

4†. Tight.

You rode, like a kern of Ireland, your French hose off, and in your strait strossers. Shak., Hen. V., iii. 7. 57.

He [man] might see that a strait glove will come more easily on with use.

Bacon, Advancement of Learning, ii. 295.

I denounce against all strait Lacing, squeezing for a Shape. Congreve, Way of the World, iv. 6.

5†. Close. (a) Near; intimate; familiar.

He, forgetting all former injuries, had received that naughty Plerius into a straight degree of favour, his goodness being as apt to be deceived as the other's craft was to deceive. Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, li. (Latham.)

(b) Strict; careful.

strait

Much strait watching of master bailiffs is about us, that there be no privy conference amongst us.
Bp. Ridley, in Bradford's Letters (Parker Soc., 1853), II. 94.
 (c) Close-fisted; stingy; avaricious.

I do not ask you much;
 I beg cold comfort; and you are so strait
 And so ingrateful, you deny me that.
Shak., K. John, v. 7. 42.

6. Strict; rigorous; exacting.

It was old and som del streit.
Chaucer, Gen. Prolog. to C. T., I. 174.
 After the most straiteste sect of our religion I lived a Pharisee.
Acts xxvi. 5.
 Whom I believe to be most strait in virtue.
Shak., M. for M., ii. 1. 9.

Led a straight life in continence and austerity, and was therefore admired as a Prophet, and resorted to out of all parts.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 370.

Bound them by so strait vows.
Tennyson, Coming of Arthur.

7t. Sore; great; difficult; distressing.

At a strayte neede they can wle stanche bloode.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 17.

8t. Hard-pressed; straitened; hampered.

Mother, I kindly thank you for your Orange pills you sent me. If you are not too straight of money, send me some such thing by the woman, and a pound or two of Almonds and Raisins.
Strype, in Ellis's Lit. Letters, p. 178.

To make your strait circumstances yet straiter.
Secker, Sermons, II. xi.

II. n. 1. A narrow pass or passage.

Thei rode forth the softe pas straite and clos till they come to the straite betwene the wode and the river, as the kyngs loot hadde hem taught.
Martin (C. E. T. S.), II. 160.

The barbarous people lay in waite for him in his way, in the straight of Thermopyles.
North, tr. of Plutarch, p. 304.

Honour travels in a strait so narrow,
 Where one but goes abreast.
Shak., T. and C., III. 3. 154.

2. Specifically, a narrow passage of water connecting two bodies of water: often used in the plural: as, the Straits or Straits of Gibraltar; the Straits of Magellan; the Straits of Dover. Abbreviated St.—3. A strip of land between two bodies of water; an isthmus.

A broken channel with a broken cross,
 That stood on a dark strait of barren land.
 On one side lay the Ocean, and on one Lay a great water. Tennyson, Passing of Arthur.

4t. A narrow alley in London.

Look into any angle of the town, the Straights, or the Bermudas, where the quarrelling lesson is read, and how do they entertain the time, but with bottle ale and tobacco?
B. Jonson, Bartholomew Fair, II. 6.

Cant names then given to the places frequented by bullies, knights of the post, and fencing masters . . . These Straights consisted of a nest of obscure courts, alleys, and avenues, running between the bottom of St. Martin's Lane, Half Moon, and Chandos Street.
Gifford's Note at "Bermudas" in the above passage.

5. A tight or narrow place; difficulty; distress; need; ease of necessity: often in the plural.

Finding himself out of straits, he will revert to his customs.
Bacon, Expense (ed. 1857).
 The straits and needs of cattline being such
 As he must fight with one of the two armies.
B. Jonson, Catiline, v. 6.

Take me, I'll serve you better in a strait.
Tennyson, Princess, I.

6t. pl. Cloth of single width, as opposed to broad cloth: a term in use in the sixteenth century and later.—Between the Straits, through and beyond the Straits of Gibraltar—used by American sailors with reference to a voyage to Mediterranean ports: as, he has made two voyages between the Straits.—Perineal strait. See perineal—Straits of the pelvis, in obstet., the openings of the pelvic canal, distinguished as the superior and inferior straits. See pelvis.—Straits oil. See oil.

strait<sup>1</sup> (strāt), v. t. [Also straight; < strait<sup>1</sup>, a.] 1. To make strait or narrow; narrow; straiten; contract.

He (Crassus) set his ranks wide, casting his shoulders into a square battell . . . Yet afterward he changed his mind againe, and straightened the battell [formation] of his footmen, fashioning it like a brick, more long than broad, making a front and shewing their faces every way.
North, tr. of Plutarch, p. 177.

2. To stretch; draw tight; tighten.

This weighty Scott sail strait a rope, straiten; contract.

He (Crassus) set his ranks wide, casting his shoulders into a square battell . . . Yet afterward he changed his mind againe, and straightened the battell [formation] of his footmen, fashioning it like a brick, more long than broad, making a front and shewing their faces every way.
North, tr. of Plutarch, p. 177.

His hosen weren of fyn scarlet reed
 Ful streite yteyd.

Chaucer, Gen. Prolog. to C. T., I. 457.

Worcester sayd at Castro it schuld be necessary for gow to have good witness, as he saythe it schuld go streithe with gow wytheowt gowr witness were rythe sofycent.
Paston Letters, I. 616.

strait<sup>2</sup>, a. and adv. An old spelling of straight<sup>1</sup>. straiten (strāt'ēn), v. t. [Formerly also straighten; < strait<sup>1</sup> + -en<sup>1</sup>.] 1. To make strait or narrow; narrow; contract; diminish.

Let not young beginners in religion . . . straiten their liberty by vows of long continuance.

Jer. Taylor, Holy Living, iv. 7.

2. To confine; hem in.

Feed high henceforth, man, and no more be straiten'd Within the limits of an empty patience.
Ford, Fancies, iv. 1.

3. To draw tight; tighten.

My horses here detain,
 Fix'd to the chariot by the straiten'd rein.
Pope, Iliad, v. 323.

4. To hamper; inconvenience; restrict.

An other time having straightened [var. straighted] his enemies with scarcity of victuals.

North, tr. of Plutarch, p. 495.

Newtown men, being straitened for ground, sent some to Merimack to find a fit place to transplant themselves.
Winthrop, Hist. New England, I. 150.

The shackles of an old love straiten'd him.
Tennyson, Lancelot and Elaine.

5. To press hard, as with want or difficulties of any kind; distress; afflict with pecuniary difficulties: as, to be straitened in money matters.

So straitened was he at times by these warlike expenses that when his daughter married Boabdil, her bridal dress and jewels had to be borrowed.
Iring, Granada, p. 68.

straitforward, adv. An old spelling of straightforward.

strait-handed (strāt'han'ed), a. Parsimonious; niggardly; close-fisted.

In the distribution of our time God seems to be strait-handed, and gives it to us, not as nature gives us rivers, enough to drown us, but drop by drop.

Jer. Taylor, Holy Dying, II. 1.

strait-handedness (strāt'han'ed-nes), n. Niggardliness; parsimony.

The Romish doctrine makes their strait-handedness so much more injurious as the cause of separation is more just.

Bp. Hall, Cases of Conscience, iv. 3.

strait-hearted (strāt'har'ted), a. Narrow; selfish; stingy. Storne, Tristram Shandy, II. 17.

strait-jacket (strāt'jacket), n. Same as strait-waistcoat.

strait-laced (strāt'lāst), a. 1. Made close and tight by lacing, as stays or a bodice.—2. Wearing tightly laced stays, bodice, etc.

We have few well-shaped that are strait-laced.

Locke, Education, § 11.

Hence—3. Strict in manners or morals; rigid in opinion.

And doubt'st thou me? suspect you I will tell
 The hidden mysteries of your Paphian cell
 To the strait-laced Diana?

Handolph, Complaint against Cupid.

Why are you so strait-laced, sir knight, to cast a lady off so coy?
Peter, Sir Clyomon and Sir Clamydes.

One so strait-laced

In her temper, her taste, and her morals and waist,
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 113.

straitly (strāt'li), adv. [Formerly also straightly; < ME. straitly, straitly, straitliche, straitliche; < strait<sup>1</sup> + -ly<sup>2</sup>.] In a strait manner. (a) Narrowly, closely.

If men look straitly to it, they will find that, unless their lives are domestic, those of the women will not be.

Margaret Fuller, Woman in 19th Cent., p. 36.

(b) Tightly, tight.

Other hynde it straitly with sum bonnde.

Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 74.

"Spare me not," he said to Christie; for even that ruffian hesitated to draw the cord straitly. Scott, Monastery, xxxi.

(c) Strictly, rigorously.

Straitly for-bede ge that no wyfe (woman) be at goure mete.
Babers Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 329.

His majesty hath straitly given in charge
 That no man shall have private conference,
 Of what degree soever, with his brother.
Shak., Rich. III., I. 1. 85.

(d) Closely; intimately. (e) Hardly; grievously; sorely.

I have now that you are something straitly handled for us.
Shak., Rich. III., I. 1. 85.

(e) Strictly, rigorously.

Straitly for-bede ge that no wyfe (woman) be at goure mete.
Babers Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 329.

His majesty hath straitly given in charge
 That no man shall have private conference,
 Of what degree soever, with his brother.
Shak., Rich. III., I. 1. 85.

stramash

By reison of the straitness of all the places.
 2 Mac. xii. 21.

(b) Strictness; rigor.

If his own life answer the straitness of his proceeding, it shall become him well. Shak., M. for M., iii. 2. 269.

(c) Distress; difficulty; pressure from narrowness of circumstances or necessity of any kind, particularly from poverty; want; scarcity.

But he seyde ther shal no thyng hurt hym but youre streightness of mony to hym.
Paston Letters, II. 35.

I received your loving letter, but straightness of time forbids me. Winthrop, in New England's Memorial, p. 191.

He was never employed in public affairs, . . . the straitness of his circumstances keeping him close to his trade.
Everett, Orations, II. 13.

strait-waistcoat (strāt'wāst'kōt), n. A garment for the body made of canvas or similar strong textile material, and so shaped as to lace up behind and fit closely. It has sleeves much longer than the arms, and usually sewed up at the ends, so that the hands cannot be used to do injury. The sleeves can also be tied together so as to restrain the wearer. It is used for the control or discipline of dangerous maniacs and other violent persons. Also called strait-jacket.

strake<sup>1</sup> (strāk), v. i.; pret. and pp. straked, ppr. straking. [< ME. straken; a collateral form of stroken, striken, a secondary form of striken, < AS. strican (pret. strāc), go, pass swiftly over: see streak<sup>1</sup>, strike, and stroke<sup>1</sup>. Hence ult. straggle.] To move; go; proceed. [Old and prov. Eng.]

And with that worde right anon

They gan to strake forth.

Chaucer, Death of Blanche, I. 1311.

strake<sup>2</sup> (strāk), n. [Sc. also strake; < ME. strake; in part a var. of stroke, mod. E. streak<sup>2</sup>, and in part of strok, mod. E. stroke: see strake<sup>1</sup>, streak<sup>2</sup>, stroke<sup>1</sup>.] 1t. A streak; a stripe.

Summe lowe places therof by the water syde looke like redde cliffs with white strakes like wayes a cable length a piece.

R. Eden, First Books on America (ed. Arber, p. 381).

2t. A strip; a narrow tract.

This Morra is a plentyous country, and almoste inayrounde with the see, excepte one strake of a .v. myle brode, whiche yencheth entre into Grecia, that ye Turke hath.

Sir R. Gylforde, Pylgrymage, p. 12.

3t. A reef in a sail.

For ne han thei striked a strake and sterid hem the better, And abated a bonet or the blast come,
 They had be throwe ouere the borde backwarde ichonne.

Richard the Redeless, iv. 80.

4. A rut in a road. [Prov. Eng.]—5. A crack in a floor. [Prov. Eng.]—6. A breadth of plank or planking; specifically, a continuous line of planking or plates on a vessel's side, reaching from stem to stern. Also streak and shutter-in. See cut under clinker-built.—7. The iron band used to bind the felloes of a wheel; the hoop or tire of a wheel.—8. A piece of board or metal used for scraping off the skimpings in hand-jigging or tozing.—9. Same as lye<sup>3</sup>.—10. A bushel; more commonly strike (which see). [Obsolete or colloq.]

Come, Ruose, Ruose! I sold fifty strake o' barley to-day in half this time.

Farguhar, Recruiting Officer, III. 1.

11. In hunting, a particular signal with a horn.

As bookes report, of sir Tristram came all the good termes of venery and of hunting, and the sises and measures of blowing of an horne. And of him wee had . . . all the blasts that long to all manner of games. First to the uncoupling, to the seeking, to the rechace, to the flight, to the death, and to strak, and many other blasts and termes. Sir T. Mallory, Morte d'Arthur, II. cxxxvii.

Binding-strake. See binding.

strake<sup>3</sup> (strāk), n. An obsolete preterit of strike.

strake<sup>4</sup> (strāk), v. t. A dialectal (Scotch) form of stroke<sup>2</sup>.

strale (strāl), n. See streal.

stram (strām), v.; pret. and pp. strammed, ppr. stramming. [Cf. Dan. stramme = Sw. stramma, be too tight, tighten, stretch, straiten, < Dan. stram = Sw. stram = G. stramm, tight, stiff, stretched; cf. D. straf, G. straff, severe, strict, stern.] I. intrans. 1. To spring or recoil with violence. Hallivell. [Prov. Eng.]—2. To spread out the limbs; walk with long ungraceful strides. [Colloq.]

II. trans. To dash down violently; beat.

Hallivell. [Prov. Eng.]

stram (strām), n. A hard, long walk. [Colloq.]

I had such a stram this mornin'.

stiff, stretched; cf. D. straf, G. straff, severe, strict, stern.] I. intrans. 1. To spring or recoil with violence. Hallivell. [Prov. Eng.]—2. To spread out the limbs; walk with long ungraceful strides. [Colloq.]

II. trans. To dash down violently; beat. Hallivell. [Prov. Eng.]

verbal n. of a supposed verb **stramash*. Otherwise a made verb, on the basis of stramazoun; cf. squabash, a word of similar type.] To strike, beat, or bang; break; destroy. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

stramash (stra-mash'), n. [See stramash, v.] A tumult; fray; fight; struggle; row; disturbance. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

Seaforth profited by the confusion to take the delinquent who had caused this stramash by the arm.

Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 35.

stramazonei, stramazouni, n. [OF. estramazon, a cut with a sword, a downright blow, bang, < It. stramazzone, a cut with a sword, a blow in fencing, < stramazzo, a knock-down blow.] In old fencing, a cut delivered from the wrist with the extreme edge of the sword near the point. Egerton Castle, Schools and Masters of Fence.

I, being loth to take the deadly advantage that lay before me of his left side, made a kind of stramazoun, ran him up to the hilts through the doublet, through the shirt, and yet missed the skin.

B. Jonson, Every Man out of his Humour, iv. 4.

stramineous (strā-min'ē-us), a. [L. stramineus, made of straw, < stramen, straw, litter: see stramag.] 1. Consisting of straw; strawy. — 2. Like straw; light.

His sole study is for words . . . to set out a stramineous subject.

Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 223.

straw-colored; pale-yellowish.

strammel (stram'el), n. [OF. estramier, straw, < estrain, stran = It. strame, straw, litter, < L. stramen, straw: see stramag.] Straw; litter. [Cant.]

Sleep on the strammel in his barn.

Scott, Guy Mannering, xxviii.

stramonium (strā-mō'ni-um), n. [F. stramonium = Sp. Pg. estramonio = It. stramonia, < NL. stramonium (stramonium spinosum), stramonina, stramonina, stramonium; origin obscure.]

1. The thorn-apple, Datura Stramonium: so called particularly as a drug-plant. It is a stout ill-scented poisonous weed with green stem and pure-white flowers, widely diffused, in America often called Jamestown weed or Jimson-weed. D. Tatula, a similar, but commonly taller, species with purple stem and pale-violet corolla (purple stramonium), has the same properties. It is found in the Atlantic United States.

2. An official drug consisting of the seeds or leaves of stramonium, the seeds being more powerful. Its properties are the same as those of belladonna. See belladonna and Jatura. — stramonium ointment. See ointment. — Stramonium plaster. See plaster.

stramony (stram'ō-ni), n. [NL. stramonium.] Stramonium.

strand<sup>1</sup> (strand), n. [ME. strand, strand, < AS. strand = MD. strande, D. strand = late MHG. strant, G. strand = Icel. strönd (strand) = Sw. Dan. strand, border, edge, coast, shore, strand; root unknown.] 1. The shore or beach of the sea or ocean, or (in former use) of a lake or river; shore; beach.

He fond bi the strande,
Arled on his londe, Schilpes fiftene.

King Horn (E. L. T. S.), I. 35.

The strand
Of precious India no such Treasure shows.

J. Beaumont, Psyche, iii. 24.

2. A small brook or rivulet. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.] — 3. A passage for water; a gutter. B. Jonson, Epig. of Inigo Jones. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch (Scotch also strawn).] — strand mole-rat, the Cape mole-rat of South Africa, Bathyergus maritimus. See mole-rat, and cut under Bathyergus.

strand<sup>1</sup> (strand), v. [= D. MLG. G. stranden = Icel. Sw. stranda = Dan. strande; from the noun.] I. trans. To drive or run aground on the sea-shore; as, the ship was stranded in the fog; often used figuratively.

II. intrans. 1. To drift or be driven on shore; run aground, as a ship.

Stranding on an isle at morn.

Tennyson, Enoch Arden.

2. To be checked or stopped; come to a standstill.

strand<sup>2</sup> (strand), n. [With exerescent d, for **stran* (Sc. strawn), < D. streen, a skein, hank of thread, = OHG. streno, MHG. strene, stren, G. strähne, a skein, hank; root unknown.] 1. A number of yarns or wires twisted together to form one of the parts of which a rope is twisted; hence, one of a number of flexible things, as grasses, strips of bark, or hair, twisted or woven together. Three or more strands twisted together form a rope. See cut under crown, v. 7, 9.

Wampum beads and birchen strands Dropping from her careless hands.
Whittier, Truce of Piscataqua.

2. A single thread; a filament; a fiber.

The continuous communication of the gray matter of the spinal cord with the motor and sensory strands.

J. M. Carnochan, Operative Surgery, p. 97.

3. A string. [Scotch, in the form strawn.] — Mycelial strand. Same as fibrous mycelium (which see, under mycelium).

strand<sup>2</sup> (strand), v. t. [< strand<sup>2</sup>, n.] 1. To break one or more of the strands of (a rope). — 2. In rope-making, to form by the union or twisting of strands. — Stranded wire, a wire rope. [Eng.]

strand-bird (strand'bôrd), n. Any limicoline wading bird which is found on the strand or beach, as a beach-bird, sanderling, sandpiper, sand-snipe, bay-snipe. See the distinctive names, and shore-bird, bay-birds.

stranding-machine (stran'ding-ma-shôn'), n. A machine for twisting strands into ropes.

strand-myele, strand-mycelium (strand'mi-sel', -mi-sô'li-um), n. Same as fibrous mycelium (which see, under mycelium).

strand-plover (strand'pluv'êr), n. The Swiss, gray, bull-head, or black-bellied plover, Squatarola helvetica. See cut under Squatarola.

strand-rat (strand'rat), n. The strand mole-rat (which see, under strand<sup>1</sup>).

strand-wolf (strand'wôlf), n. The brown hyena, Hyena villosa, found in South Africa.

strang (strang), a. A dialectal form of strong<sup>1</sup>. [North. Eng. and Scotch.]

strange (stranj), a. [Early mod. E. straunge; < ME. strange, estrang, estrang, < OF. estrang, < strange, estrangne, estrangne, etc., F. étrange = It. strano, strange, foreign, < L. extraneus, that is without, external, < extra, without, on the outside: see extraneous, extra.] 1. Foreign; alien; of or belonging to some other country. [Archaic.]

I have been an alien in a strange land.

Ex. xviii. 3.

She hadle passed many a strange stream.

Chaucer, Gen. Prolog. to C. T., I. 464.

Also as much as may be eschew strange words.

Gower, Notes on Eng. Verse (Steele Glas, etc., ed. [Arber]).

One of the strange queen's lords.

Shak., L. L. L., iv. 2. 131.

2. Of or pertaining to another or others; alien; belonging to others, or to some other place or neighborhood; not lawfully belonging to one; intrusive.

The mouth of strange women is a deep pit.

Prov. xxii. 14.

Strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds.

Shak., Cymbeline, i. 4. 97.

Call me not

Mother, for if I brought thee forth, it was

As foolish hens at times hatch vipers, by Sitting upon strange eggs.

Dryden, Deformed Transformed, i. 1.

3. Not before known, heard, or seen; unfamiliar; unknown; new: as, the custom was strange to them.

To know the verrey degree of any manner strange or unstrange after his longitude, thow he be indeterminat in their astrolabe.

Chaucer, Astrolabe, li. 17.

Our strange garments cleave not to their mould

But with the aid of use

Shak., Macbeth, i. 3. 145.

Then a soldier,

Full of strange oaths,

Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel.

Shak., As You Like It, ii. 7. 150.

Sat 'neath strange trees, on new flowers growing there,

Of scent unlike to those we knew of old.

William Morris, Earthly Paradise, I. 44.

4. Outlandish; queer; odd.

This power that some of them have is disguised gear and strange fashions.

Latimer, Sermon bef. Edw. VI., 1550.

They were enforced for feare of quarell & blame to disguise their players with strange apparell, and by colouring their faces and carrying hatts & capps of diverse fashions to make them selves lesse knownen.

Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 25.

5. Unusual; singular; wonderful; surprising; remarkable; of a kind to excite curiosity; not easily explained or explainable: as, a strange story, if true; a strange hallucination.

This is above strange,

That you should be so reckless!

B. Jonson, Devil is an Ass, iii. 3.

Losing, by a strange after-game of Folly, all the battels we have won.

Milton, Free Commonwealth.

You will see an odd country, and sights that will seem strange to you.

Cotton, in Walton's Angler, ii. 223.

6. Like a stranger; reserved; distant; estranged; not familiar.

And Joseph saw his brethren, and he knew them, but made himself strange unto them, and spake roughly unto them.

Gen. xlii. 7.

Little and little he [Cæsar] withdrew from men his accustomed gentleness, becoming more . . . strange in countenance than euer before.

Sir T. Elyot, The Governour, ii. 5.

Let us be very strange and well bred.

Congreve, Way of the World, iv. 5.

7. Unacquainted; inexperienced; unversed.

I know thee well;

But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange.

Shak., T. of A., iv. 3. 56.

8. Unfavorable; averse to one's suit.

Thow that his lady euer more be strange,

Yit lat hym serve hire til that he be ded.

Chaucer, Parliament of Fowls, I. 584.

A strange fish. See a cool fish, under fish. — Strange sail (naut.), an unknown vessel. — To make a thing strange, to make it a matter of difficulty, or of surprise or astonishment.

Strange he made it of hir mariage;

His purpos was for to bistowe hire hye

Into some worthy blood of auncetry.

Chaucer, Reeve's Tale, I. 60.

She makes it strange; but she would be best pleased

To be so anger'd with another letter.

Shak., T. G. of V., i. 2. 102.

To make strange, to seem to be surprised or shocked; look astonished; express astonishment.

Lyford denied, and made strange of sundry things laid to his charge.

N. Morton, New England's Memorial, p. 116.

= Syn. 4. Singular, Odd, etc. See eccentric. — 5. Surprising, Curious, etc. See wonderful.

strange<sup>1</sup> (stranj), v. [ME. straungen; < strange, a.; in part by aphesis from estrang, q. v.] I. trans. To alienate; estrange.

And these preidents consdered wolde discorage any man to a bide but a litel amoges hem that so stranged hem self from me and mistrustet me.

Paston Letters, I. 503.

II. intrans. 1. To wonder; be astonished.

Whereat I should strange more, but that I find . . .

Fuller, Holy War, p. 169. (Latham.)

2. To be estranged or alienated.

strange (stranj), adv. [< strange, a.] Strangely.

She will speak most bitterly and strange.

Shak., M. for M., v. 1. 36.

strangeful (stranj'fûl), a. [< strange + -ful.] Strange; wonderful. [Rare.]

O Frantick France! why dost not Thou make vse

Of strangeful Signes, whereby the Heav'ns induce Thee to repentance?

Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, i. 2.

strangely (stranj'li), adv. In a strange manner, in any sense of the word strange.

strangeness (stranj'nes), n. The state or character of being strange, in any sense of that word.

stranger (stranj'jêr), n. [ME. stranger, straunger, < OF. estranger, F. étranger (= It. straniere), a stranger, foreigner, < estrang, strange: see strange.] 1. One who comes from another country or region; a foreigner.

There shall no stranger eat of the holy thing.

Lev. xxii. 10.

And there ben nonther Thefes ne Robboures in that Contree; and every man worshipethe the other; but no man there dothe no reverence to no Strangers, but zif thei ben grete Priuces.

Mandeville, Travels, p. 250.

I am a most poor woman, and a stranger,

Born out of your dominions.

Shak., Hen. VIII., ii. 4. 15.

2. A person with whom one is not acquainted; one whose name and character are unknown.

I do desire we may be better strangers.

Shak., As you Like it, iii. 2. 275.

"As I hope to be sav'd," the stranger said,

"One foot I will not flee."

Robin Hood and the Stranger (Child's Ballads, V. 406).

The name of envy is a stranger here.

Fletcher (and another?), Nice Valour, v. 2.

3. One who is ignorant (of) or unacquainted (with): with to.

I am no stranger to such easy calms

As sit in tender bosoms.

Ford, Broken Heart, iii. 4.

I . . . Unspeak mine own defraction, here abjure The taints and blames I laid upon myself, For strangers to my nature.

Shak., Macbeth, iv. 3. 125.

They say she's quite a stranger to all his gallantries.

Swift, Polite Conversation, iii.

4. One not belonging to the house; a guest; a visitor.

A messenger passed forth tho by,

Wher Gaius with wret toth was in his manere

At joyous disport right full merily

At Lusignen Castell with strangers many.

Rom. of Parthenay (E. L. T. S.), I. 6017.

Fit to honour and receive

Our heavenly stranger.

Milton, P. L., v. 316.

5. In law, one not privy or party to an act.—6. Something popularly supposed or humorously said to betoken the approach of a stranger or guest, as guttering in a candle or a teastalk in a cup of tea.—7. Specifically, in entom., the noctuid moth Hadena peregrina: an English collectors' name.—Strangers' Court. See court.—Strangers' fever. See fever.
stranger† (strān'jēr), v. t. [< stranger, n.] To estrange; alienate.

Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath.
Shak., Lear, i. 1. 207.

strangle (strang'gl), v.; pret. and pp. strangled, ppr. strangling. [*< ME. strangelen, < OF. estrangler, F. étrangler = Sp. Pg. estrangular = It. strangolare, strangulare, < L. strangulare, < Gr. στραγγαλίζω, στραγγαλίζω, strangle, < στραγγαλίζω, a halter, cf. στραγγός, twisted, < *στραγγεω, draw tight, squeeze; cf. L. stringere, draw tight: see strain, stringent.*] I. trans. 1. To choke by compression of the windpipe; kill by choking; throttle.

And yet I'll have it done; this child shall strangle thee.
Fletcher, Pilgrim, II. 2.

2. To suppress; keep from emergence or appearance; stifle.

Strangle such thoughts as these with any thing
 That you behold the while. Shak., W. T., iv. 4. 47.

3†. To suffocate by drowning. Defec. = Syn. 1.
Choke, Stifle, etc. See smother.

II. intrans. To be choked or strangled.

strangle (strang'gl), n. [< ME. strangle; < strangle, v.] 1†. Strangulation. Chaucer.—2. pl. An infectious catarrh of the upper air-passages, especially the nasal cavity, of the horse, ass, and mule, associated with suppuration of the submaxillary and other lymphatic glands. The disease usually attacks young animals. Enfeebled health, exposure, and neglect are predisposing causes. It may appear as an epizootic in large stables. The mortality is from 2 to 3 per cent. The disease begins with fever and a serous discharge from the nose, which later becomes viscid. At the same time a swelling appears under the jaws, indicating inflammation and suppuration of the submaxillary glands. The disease ordinarily lasts several weeks. Complications may, however, appear. The throat and neighboring lymphatics may become involved and the infection extend to various parts of the system, giving rise to pyemia. Specific bacteria (streptococci) have been found in the suppurating glands.
strangleable (strang'gl-ə-bl), a. [< strangle + -able.] Capable of being strangled. [Rare.]
 I own, I am glad that the capital strangler should in his turn be stranglable, and now and then strangled.
Chesterfield.

strangler (strang'gl-ēr), n. [< OF. strangleur, F. étrangleur = It. strangolatore, < ML. strangulator, < L. strangulare, strangle: see strangle.] One who or that which strangles or destroys.

The band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very stranger of their amity.

Shak., A. and C., II. 6. 130.

strangle-tare (strang'gl-tār), n. The broom-rape, Orobanchē: so named from its parasitism upon tares or other plants; also, species of Vicia and Lathyrus, as tares which strangle other plants by their climbing; also, the twining parasite Cuscuta Europaea, European dodder. See cuts under Cuscuta and Orobanchē. [Old or prov. Eng.]

strangleweed (strang'gl-wēd), n. The dodder, Cuscuta, and, in books, the broom-rape, Orobanchē. Compare strangle-tare. Britten and Holland, Eng. Plant Names. [Old or prov. Eng.]

stranguary†, n. Same as strangury. Sterne, Tristram Shandy, ix. 5.

strangulate (strang'gū-lāt), a. [< L. strangulatus, pp. of strangulare, strangle: see strangle.] Same as strangulated.

strangulate (strang'gū-lāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. strangulated, ppr. strangulating. [< L. strangulatus, pp. of strangulare, strangle: see strangle.] To strangle; in pathol., to compress so as to suppress the function of a part, as a loop of intestine, a vessel, or a nerve. See strangulated.

Creepers of literature, who suck their food, like the ivy, from what they strangle and kill.
Southey, Doctor, Interchapter vii. (Davies.)

A strong double ligature was passed through this part of the cheek, with the intention of strangulating the projection [a tubercle or tumor] at its base.
J. M. Carnochan, Operative Surgery, p. 47.

strangulated (strang'gū-lā-ted), p. a. 1. In pathol., compressed so as to suppress the function of a part: as, a hernia is said to be strangulated when it is so compressed as to obstruct the circulation in the part and cause dangerous symptoms.—2. In bot., contracted and expanded in an irregular manner.—3. In entom., constricted; much narrowed: especially noting the thorax or abdomen when constricted in one or more places, as in many ants.—Strangulated hernia. See def. 1 and hernia.

strangulation (strang-gū-lā'shon), n. [< F. strangulation = Sp. estrangulacion = Pg. estrangulacão = It. strangolazione, < L. strangulatio(n)-, a choking, a suffocating, < strangulare, pp. strangulatus, choke, suffocate: see strangle.] 1. The act or state of strangling; a sudden and violent compression of the windpipe, constriction being applied directly to the neck, either around it or in the fore part, or from within the esophagus, so as to prevent the passage of air, and thereby suspend respiration and, if the constriction is prolonged, destroy life.—2. In pathol., the state of a part too closely constricted, as the intestine in strangulated hernia.—3. Excessive or abnormal constriction of any kind.

At the point where the strangulation takes place the glacier lies in a kind of basin, of which the lower lip presents proofs of the most intense erosion.

A. Geikie, Geol. Sketches, vi.

strangurious (strang-gū'ri-us), a. [< LL. stranguriosus, affected with strangury, < L. stranguria, strangury: see strangury.] Affected with strangury; of the nature of strangury; noting the pain of strangury.

strangury (strang'gū-ri), n. [*< F. strangurie = OSp. estranguria, Sp. estranguria = Pg. estranguria = It. stranguria, < L. stranguria, < Gr. στραγγύρις, retention of urine, < στράγγω (στραγγω), a drop, that which is squeezed out (< *στραγγεω, draw or bind tight, squeeze: see strangle), + ούριον, urinate, < ούρον, urine.*] 1. Scanty micturition with painful sense of spasm.

He, growing ancient, became sick of the stone, or strangury, whereof, after his suffering of much dolorous pain, he fell asleep in the Lord.

N. Morton, New England's Memorial, p. 262.

2. In hort., a disease in plants produced by tight ligatures.

strap (strap), n. [Also, more orig., strop, dial. stroppe (the form strop being also in reg. E. use in some senses); < ME. stroppe, stroppe, < AS. strop = MD. strop, stroppe, D. strop = MLG. strop = MHG. strupfe, strüpf, G. struppe, strüppe, strüppe = Sw. strop = Dan. strop, a strap, = OF. estrope, F. étope = Sp. Pg. estrovo, an onr-thong, < L. stropus, struppus, a thong, strap, fillet, akin to Gr. στρόφος, a twisted band, < στρέφω, twist: see strophe. Doublet of strop†.] 1. A narrow strip of leather or other flexible material, generally used for some mechanical purpose, as to surround and hold together, or to retain in place. In ordinary use straps are most frequently of leather, and are often used with one or more buckles, or a buckle and slide, allowing of a more or less close adjustment of the strap. See cut under shot-pouch. Specifically—(a) Naut. (1) A piece of rope with the ends spliced together, used for attaching a tackle to anything or for slinging any weight to be lifted. (2) A ring of rope or band of iron put round a block or deadeye, suspending it or holding it in place. Sometimes spelled strop. (b) A razor-strap. See razor-strap and strop†. (c) An ornament like a strap; a shoulder-strap. See shoulder-strap, 2.

2. A long and narrow piece of thin iron or other metal used to hold different parts together, as of a frame or the sides of a box; a leaf of a hinge; in carp., an iron plate for connecting two or more timbers, to which it is bolted or screwed.—3. In bot., the ligule in florets of Compositae (see ligule); also, in some grasses, the leaf exclusive of its sheath.—4. A string. [Scotch.]

They winna string the like o' him up as they do the pair whig bodles that they catch in the mairs, like straps o' onions.
Scott, Old Mortality, x.

5. Credit; originally, credit for drink. [Slang.]

—6. In a vehicle: (a) A plate on the upper side of the tongue and resting upon the double-tree, to aid in holding the wagon-hammer. (b) A clip, such as that which holds a spring to the spring-bar or to the axle. (c) The stirrup-shaped piece of a clevis. E. H. Knight.—7. A strap-oyster.

strap (strap), v. t.; pret. and pp. strapped, ppr. strapping. [< strap, n.] 1. To fasten or bind with a strap: especially in the sense of compressing and holding very closely: often with up or down.

He carries white thread gloves, sports a cane, has his trousers tightly strapped.
W. Besant, Fifty Years Ago, p. 40.

2. To beat or chastise with a strap. [Colloq.]

—3. To sharpen with a strap; strop, as a razor. "I shouldn't wonder if we had a snow-storm before it's over, Molly," said Pluck, strapping his knife on the edge of the kit.
S. Judd, Margaret, l. 17.

4. To hang. [Scotch.]

Weel I wot it's a crime, baith by the law of God and man, and mony a pretty man has been strapped for it [murder].
Scott, St. Ronan's Well, xiv.

To be or become strapped, to lose one's money; be bankrupt or out of money. [Slang.]—To strap a dead-eye, to fasten a strap of rope or iron round a block, dead-eye, or bull's-eye.

strap-bolt (strap'bōlt), n. Same as lug-bolt.

strap-game (strap'gām), n. A swindling trick otherwise known as prick the garter, prick at the loop, and fast and loose (which see, under fast†, a.).

strap-head (strap'hed), n. In mach., a journal-box formed at the end of a connecting-rod.

strap-hinge (strap'hinj), n. See hinge.

strap-joint (strap'joint), n. In mach., a connection formed by a strap, key, and gib, as on the end of a pitman. E. H. Knight.

strap-laid (strap'lād), a. Noting a flat rope made by placing two or more strands of hawser-laid rope side by side, piercing them laterally, and binding them together by twine inserted through the pierced holes.

strap-mounts (strap'mounts), n. pl. The buckles, chapes, slides, etc., with which leather straps are fitted.

strap-oil (strap'oil), n. A beating. [Humorous.] strap-oyster (strap'ois'tēr), n. A long slender oyster which grows upright in mud. Also called stuck-up, stick-up, coon-heel, shanghai, razor-blade, rabbitear, etc. [New Jersey.]

strappado (stra-pā'dō), n. [Formerly also strapado; < OF. strapade, F. estrapade = Sp. estrapada = It. strappata, < strappare, pull.] A punishment or torture which consisted in raising the victim to a certain height by a rope and letting him fall suddenly, the rope being secured to his person in such a way that the jerk in falling would inflict violent pain. For example, the hands being tied together, the rope would be secured to the wrists; the punishment was more severe when the arms had previously been brought behind the back.

We presently determined rather to seek our liberties than to be in danger for ever to be slaves in the country, for it was told us we should have us strapped.
Hakluyt's Voyages, II. 253.

They use also the Strappado, holding them up and down by the arms with a cord. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 441.

strappado (stra-pā'dō), v. t. [< strappado, n.] To torture by the strappado.

Oh, to redeem my honour,
 I would have this hand cut off, these my breasts sear'd,
 Be rack'd, strappado'd, put to any torment.
Heywood, Woman Killed with Kindness (Works, ed. 1874, II. 141).

strapper (strap'ēr), n. [< strap + -er†.] 1. One who has to do with straps; specifically, one who has charge of the harnessing of horses.

Men who, though nothing but strappers, call themselves groomers.
Encyc. Brit., XII. 195.

2. Anything bulky; a large, tall person. [Colloq.]

A strapper—a real strapper, Jane; big, brown, and buxom; with hair just such as the ladies of Carthage must have had.
Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xx.

strapping† (strap'ing), n. [Verbal n. of strap, v.] 1. The act of fastening with a strap.—2. A beating; a whipping. [Colloq.].—3. Material for straps, or straps in general.

Securing the loose flaps of the lip with pieces of strapping.
Lancet, 1890, I. 153.

strapping² (strap'ing), p. a. [Ppr. of strap, v., used, like thumping, whacking, whopping, bouncing, and other participial adjectives expressing violent action, to denote something of impressively large size.] Tall; lusty; robust. [Colloq.]

Then that t'other great strapping Lady—I can't hit off her Name.
Congreve, Double-Dealer, III. 10.

strapping-plate (strap'ing-plāt), n. In mining, one of the wrought-iron plates by which the spears of a pump-rod are bolted together. Also called spear-plate.

strapplet (strap'l), v. t. [Freq. of strap, v.] To bind with a strap; strap; entangle.

His ruin startled th' other steeds, the gears crack'd, and the reins Strapped his fellows.
Chapman, Illad, xvi. 438.

strap-rail (strap'rāl'), n. A flat rail laid upon a continuous longitudinal sleeper.

strap-shaped (strap'shāpt), a. Ligulate; shaped like a strap: used especially of the rays of the tubuliferous and the corollas of the liguliferous Compositae.

strap-skein (strap'skän), n. In carriage-building, a flat strip of iron let into the wood of an axle-arm to protect it from wear.

strap-work (strap'wērk), n. Architectural ornament consisting of a narrow fillet or band represented as folded and crossed, and occasionally interlaced with another.

strap-worm (strap'werm), n. A cestoid worm of the family Ligulidae.

strapwort (strap'wört), n. A sea-coast plant of the Mediterranean region and western Europe. Corrigiola littoralis, of the Illecebraceae. It is an herb with numerous slender trailing stems, suggesting the name, and small white flowers in little heads or cymes, the sepals petal-like on the margin.

Strasbourg finch, pâté, ware, etc. See finch, etc.

strass (stras), n. [So called from the name of the German inventor, Josef Strasser.] 1. Same as paste, 3.—2. The refuse of silk left in making up skeins. L. H. Knight.

strata, n. Plural of stratum.

stratagem (strat'a-jem), n. [Formerly also strategem; early mod. E. stratageme; < OF. stratageme, F. stratagème = Sp. estratagema = Pg. estratagema, stratagema = It. stratagemma (in Rom. erroneously spelled with a in the second orig. syllable), < L. strategema, < Gr. στρατηγία, the act of a general, a piece of generalship, < στρατηγία, be a general, command an army, < στρατηγός, a general, the leader or commander of an army; see strategy.] 1. An artifice in war; a plan or scheme for deceiving an enemy.

The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils.
Shak., M. of V., v. 1. 85.

He [Henry V.] never fought battle, nor won town, wherein he prevailed not as much by Stratagem as by Force.
Baker, Chronicles, p. 179.

2. Any artifice; a trick by which some advantage is intended to be obtained.

Ambition is full of distractions; it teems with stratagems, and is swelled with expectations as with a tympany.
Jer. Taylor

It is an honest stratagem to take advantage of ourselves.
Sir T. Browne, Religio Medici, II. 11.

= Syn. 1 and 2. Artifice, Manoeuvre, Trick, etc. See artifice.—2. Deception, plot, trap, device, snare, dodge, contrivance.

stratagematic (strat'a-je-mat'ik), a. [< OF. stratagematique, < NL. **strategmaticus*, < Gr. στρατηγία (τ-), a stratagem; see stratagem.] Using stratagem; skilled in strategy. Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie (ed. Arber), p. 55. [Rare.]

stratagematically (strat'a-je-mat'ik-al-i), adv. By stratagem or artifice. G. Harvey, Four Letters.

stratagemic (strat-a-je-m'ik), a. [< stratagem + -ic.] Containing or characterized by stratagem or artifice. [Rare.]

stratagemical (strat-a-je-m'ik-al), a. [< stratagemic + -al.] Same as stratagemic. Colgrave, Swift (1), Tripes, iii.

stratarithmetry (strat-a-rith'me-tri), n. [Irreg. < Gr. στρατήρ, an army, + ἀριθμός, a number (see arithmetical), + -μετρία, < μέτρον, measure.] Milit., the art of drawing up an army or body of men in a geometrical figure, or of estimating or expressing the number of men in such a figure. Imp. Dict.

strategetic (strat-ē-jet'ik), a. [< Gr. στρατηγική, pertaining to the command of an army, < στρατηγία, be a general, command an army; see stratagem.] Same as strategic.

strategetical (strat-ē-jet'ik-al), a. [< strategetic + -al.] Same as strategetic.

strategetically (strat-ē-jet'ik-al-i), adv. In a strategetical manner.

strategetics (strat-ē-jet'iks), n. [Pl. of strategetic (see -ics).] Same as strategy.

strategi, n. Plural of strategus, 1.

strategic (stra-tej'ik), a. [= F. stratégique, < LL. **strategicus* (in neut. pl. strategica, the deeds of a general), < Gr. στρατηγικός, of or pertaining to a general, < στρατηγός, a general; see stratagem, and cf. strategy.] Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of strategy; demanded by, used in, or characterized by strategy; as, strategic movements.—Strategic battle. See battle, 1.

strategical (stra-tej'ik-al), a. [< strategic + -al.] Same as strategic.

strategically (stra-tej'ik-al-i), adv. In a strategic manner; as regards strategy.

strategics (stra-tej'iks), n. [Pl. of strategic (see -ics).] Same as strategy.

strategist (stra-tej'ist), n. [= F. stratégiste; as strategy + -ist.] One skilled in strategy.

He [Milton] was a strategist rather than a drill-sergeant in verse, capable, beyond any other English poet, of putting great masses through the most complicated evolutions without clash or confusion, but he was not curious that every foot should be at the same angle.
Lowell, Among my Books, 2d ser., p. 280.

strategus (stra-tē'gus), n. [< L. strategus, < Gr. στρατηγός, the commander of an army, a general; see strategy.] 1. Pl. strategi (-ji). A military commander in ancient Greece: as, Diaeus was strategus of the Achaean League.—2. [cap.] [NL. (Hope, 1837).] In entom., a genus of large American scarabæid beetles, whose males usually have three prothoracic horns. They are mainly tropical and subtropical, but S. anticus extends north to Massachusetts.—3. [cap.] [NL.] A genus of mollusks.

strategy (strat'ē-ji), n. [< OF. strategie, F. stratégie = Sp. estrategia = It. strategia, stratēgia (cf. L. strategia, a government, province), < Gr. στρατηγία, the office or dignity of a commander, generalship, a pretorship, government, province, < στρατηγός, the leader or commander of an army, a general, a governor, pretor, consul, < στρατός, an army, host, soldiery (prop. an encamped army, lit. 'scattered, spread' (= L. stratus, scattered, spread), < στροπερναι = L. sternere (pp. stratus), scatter, spread, strew; see stratum, + ἀγία, lead (see agent).] 1. The science of combining and employing the means which the different branches of the art of war afford, for the purpose of forming projects of operations and of directing great military movements; the art of moving troops so as to be enabled either to dispense with a battle or to deliver one with the greatest advantage and with the most decisive results; generalship. In strategy three things demand especial consideration: (1) the base of operations, or line from which an army commences its advance upon an enemy; (2) the objective, or objective point, the point which it aims to possess, or the object which it strives to attain; (3) the line of operations, or that line which an army must pass over to attain its objective point. When an army assumes a strictly defensive attitude, the base of operations becomes the line of defense, and in a retrograde movement the line of operations becomes the line of retreat. Strategical points are the points of operations of an army—namely, points whose occupation secures an undoubted advantage to the army holding them for offensive and defensive purposes, and points which it is the chief object of an army to attain. The theater of operations comprises the territory to be invaded or defended by an army. It includes the base of operations, the objective point, the front of operations, the lines of operation, the line of communication which connect the several lines of operations, obstacles, natural or artificial, lines of retreat, and places of refuge. The front of operations is the length of the line in advance of the base of operations covered or occupied by an army.

2. The use of artifice, finesse, or stratagem for the carrying out of any project.

strath (strath), n. [< Gael. srath = Ir. srath, sratha = W. ystard, a valley; perhaps connected with street, ult. < L. strata; see street.] In Scotland, a valley of considerable size, often having a river running through it and giving it its distinctive appellation: as, Strathspey (the valley of the Spey), Strathern (the valley of the Earn), and Strathmore (the great valley).

strathspey (strath-spā'), n. [So called from Strathspey in Scotland.] 1. A Scotch dance, invented early in the eighteenth century, resembling the reel, but slower, and marked by numerous sudden jerks.

While youths and maids the light strathspey
So merrily danced, with Highland glee!
Scott, Glenfinlas.

2. Music for such a dance or in its rhythm, which is duple, moderately rapid, and abounding in the rhythmic or metric figure called the Scotch snap or catch (which see, under Scotch), or its converse.

stratulate (strā-tik'ū-lāt), a. [< NL. **stratulus*, < **straticulum*, dim. of stratum, a layer; see stratum.] Arranged in thin layers, as a banded agate.

stratification (strat'ē-i-fī-kā'shon), n. [= F. stratification = Sp. estratificación = It. stratificazione; as stratify + -ation.] 1. The act of stratifying, or the state of being stratified; formation or arrangement in layers.

It was formerly the practice in England, as it still is on the Continent, to tan by the process of stratification, for which purpose a bed of bark is tacked upon the bottom of the pit; upon this is laid the hide, then bark, then a hide, and so on until the pit is full. Encyc. Brit., XIV. 385.

2. Specifically, in geol., deposition in beds or strata; the mode of occurrence of those rocks which have been laid down or spread over the surface by water. The most important indication and result of stratification is that the rock separates more or less easily along the planes separating the beds or strata. Each stratification-plane marks a change in the character of the deposit, or a shorter or longer period during which deposition was suspended. Often one stratum is succeeded by another of quite different character, showing a change in the existing conditions. Sometimes, however, a rock is distinctly stratified, but each stratum separates easily into much thinner layers, closely resembling one another in petrographic character: this is generally called lamination.

In some cases the apparent stratification seems to be of the nature of an imperfect cleavage, there having been a certain amount of rearrangement of the particles of the rock parallel to the planes of deposition. See cuts under Artesian and erosion.

3. In physiol., the thickening of a cell-wall by the deposition of successive thin layers of formed material; also, the arrangement of the layers so deposited.

It is now known that stratification is due to a subsequent change in the amount of water of organization present in particular parts of the [cell]-wall. Bessey, Botany, p. 33.

4. In elect., the appearance presented by an electric discharge, or a series of rapid discharges, in a rarefied gas, light and dark bands or striæ being produced.

stratified (strat'i-fid), p. a. Arranged or disposed in layers or strata: as, stratified rocks. See cut under erosion.—Stratified cartilage, ordinary white fibrocartilage.—Stratified epithellium. See epithelium.—Stratified thallus, in lichens, a thallus in which the gonidia, or algal cells, are disposed in one or more layers, thus producing stratification. See heteromorous, (c) (2).

stratiform (strat'i-fōrm), a. [< NL. stratum, a layer, + forma, form.] Forming or formed into a layer or lamella; embedded as a stratum or layer; stratified: specifically used in the anatomy of a form of cartilage.—Stratiform cartilage or fibrocartilage, a layer of cartilage embedded in a groove of bone along which the tendon of a muscle plays; referring not to a special kind of cartilage, but to the particular form in which it is arranged. The cartilage lining the bicipital groove of the humerus, on which the tendon of the long head of the biceps glides, is an example.

stratify (strat'i-fi), v. t.; pret. and pp. stratified, ppr. stratifying. [= F. stratifier = It. stratificare, < NL. stratum, a layer, + L. facere, make, do.] To form into a layer or layers, as substances in the earth; lay or arrange in strata.

stratigrapher (strā-tig'ra-fēr), n. [< stratigraph-y + -er.] One who devotes himself to the study of stratigraphical geology. Nature, XLIII. 142.

stratigraphic (strat-i-graf'ik), a. [< stratigraph-y + -ic.] Having to do with the order of succession, mode of occurrence, and general geological character of the series of stratified rocks of which the earth's crust is largely composed.

stratigraphical (strat-i-graf'ik-al), a. [< stratigraphic + -al.] Same as stratigraphic.

stratigraphically (strat-i-graf'ik-al-i), adv. In a stratigraphic manner; as regards stratigraphy, or the disposition of strata.

stratigraphist (strā-tig'ra-fist), n. [< stratigraph-y + -ist.] One who studies stratigraphy; a stratigrapher. Nature, XXXVIII. 506.

stratigraphy (strā-tig'ra-fi), n. [< NL. stratum, a layer, + Gr. -γραφία, < γράφειν, write.] In geol., order and position of the stratified groups; all that part of geological science which is not specially theoretical or paleontological; general descriptive geology.

Stratiomyia (strat'i-ō-mī'i-i), n. [NL. (Macquart, 1838), orig. Stratiomyia ( Geoffroy, 1764), also Stratiomya (Schiner, 1868), Stratiomyis (Schelling, 1803), Stratiomyus (J. E. Gray, 1832); irreg. < Gr. στρατιώνης, a soldier, + μύια, a fly.] The typical genus of the family Stratiomyidae. They are medium-sized or rather large flies of dark color with light spots or stripes. The larvae live in mud or damp sand, and the flies are found upon umbelliferous and other flowers growing near water. About 40 species are known in North America, and about 20 in Europe. They are sometimes called chameleon-flies, from the name of one species, S. chameleon.

Stratiomyidae (strat'i-ō-mī'i-dō), n. pl. [NL. (Leach, 1819, as Stratiomyidae), < Stratiomyia + -idae.] A family of true flies, belonging to the brachycerous Diptera and to the section Notacantha. It is a large and wide-spread family; about 200 species occur in North America. They vary much in size and color, and have a large hemispherical head, flattened or convex abdomen, and (like usually without spurs. They are mostly flower-flies, and are often found upon vegetation in damp places.

Stratiotæ (strat-i-ō'tē-ō), n. pl. [NL. (Link, 1829), < Stratiotes + -æ.] A tribe of monocotyledonous plants, of the order Hydrocharidæ and series Glycydræ. It is characterized by a very short stem bearing crowded sessile submerged leaves and usually also long-petioled floating leaves, by peduncled spathe, and by one-celled ovaries spuriously six-celled by intrusion of the lobed placenta. It includes five genera, of which Stratiotes is the type. (See also Hydrocharis.) The others are mostly tropical plants of fresh water, with ovate-oblong or broadly cordate floating leaves and ribbed or winged spathe.

Stratiotes (strat-i-ō'tēz), n. [NL. (in def. 1 (Linnaeus, 1737) so called from the sword-like leaves), < Gr. στρατιώτης, sc. σπάριος, an Egyptian water-plant, by some said to have been the water-lettuce, Pistia Stratiotes; lit. 'river-sol-strawberry was not cultivated by the ancients; its culture in Europe began probably in the fifteenth or sixteenth century. It is now grown in great quantities in Europe

strawberry

and North America for its delicious subacid fruit, which is used fresh for dessert, and also canned or made into jam, etc. It affords a syrup for flavoring drinks, ices, creams, etc. The varieties, which are mainly or wholly from the first three species above named, are numerous and constantly changing. See cuts under flagellum and Fragaria.

The strawberry grows underneath the nettle.

Dr. Boteler said, of strawberries, "Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did." J. Walton, Complete Angler (ed. Bolin), p. 158.

Alpine strawberry, a European form of Fragaria vesca, sometimes distinguished as F. collina.—Ananas strawberry, same as pine-strawberry.—Barren strawberry, in England, Potentilla Fragariastrum, resembling the strawberry in its trifoliate leaves and white flowers. In America, Waldsteinia fragarioides, having the leaves trifoliate, but the flowers yellow. Neither has fleshy fruit.—Bog-strawberry, the marsh-sweetflag, Potentilla prostrata, Britton and Holland. (Prov. Eng.)—Carolina strawberry, a misnomer of the pine-strawberry, once thought to have come from Carolina.—Chill strawberry, see def. and pine-strawberry.—Crushed strawberry, a crimson-red color of considerably reduced luminosity and somewhat reduced chroma. A color disk of 38 puts pure red, 7 parts artificial ultramarine, 48 parts velvet-black, and 7 parts white shows a crushed strawberry.—Hautboy strawberry. See hautboy, 2.—Pine-strawberry, a variety of the Chill strawberry (see def. above), called from its pineapple flavor. Also Ananas strawberry. See Carolina strawberry. (Eng.)—Scarlet strawberry, specifically, the Virginian strawberry. (Eng.)—Strawberry-crown borer, a cecidoniid beetle, Tyloderma fragariae.

Strawberry-crown borer (Tyloderma fragariae). a, larva, full grown; b, a full beetle, female, as same, from above view (all lines show natural sizes).

fragariae, which lays its eggs at the crown of the strawberry-plant in the United States, and whose larva often seriously damages the crop.—Strawberry false-worm. See strawberry sawfly (below).

Strawberry leaf-roller, a tortricid moth, Phoroptera fragariae, the larva of which rolls the leaves of the strawberry-plant in the United States, also one of several other moths whose larvae have this habit. See cut under leaf-roller.—Strawberry-leaves, a folk name from the eight strawberry-leaves on a duck's excrement.—Strawberry root-borer, a moth, Anarsia lineatella, whose larva burrows in the roots of this plant, and often does great damage.—Strawberry run. See run.—Strawberry sawfly, a small black sawfly, Empythus maculatus, whose larva is a strawberry-worm. See cut under Empythus.—Strawberry spinach. Same as strawberry blite.—Strawberry tongue, in med., a red papillated tongue, as seen in scurvy.—Wild strawberry, any native strawberry; also, sometimes, species of Potentilla, from their resemblance to the true strawberry.—Wood-strawberry, the typical form of Fragaria vesca. (Eng.)

strawberry-bass (strá'ber-i-bás), n. Same as grass-bass.

strawberry-blite (strá'ber-i-blít), n. A species of goosefoot, Chenopodium (Blitum) capitatum, also C. (B.) virgatum, whose flower-heads ripen into a bright-red juicy compound fruit. They are old World plants found in gardens, and the fruit, though insipid, is said to have been formerly used in cookery. Also called strawberry spinach.

strawberry-borer (strá'ber-i-bór'ér), n. One of several different insects whose larvae mine, bore, or burrow in the crown, leaf, or root of the strawberry. See the specific phrase-names under strawberry.

strawberry-bush (strá'ber-i-búsh), n. A low upright or straggling American shrub, Euonymus Americana; so named from its crimson and scarlet fruit.

strawberry-clover (strá'ber-i-kló'vér), n. A species of clover, Trifolium fragiferum, of Europe and temperate Asia. It resembles the common white clover, T. repens, but has the fruiting heads involucre, and very dense from the fullness of the calyxes, which are also somewhat colored, thus suggesting the name.

strawberry-comb (strá'ber-i-kóm), n. See comb, 3.

strawberry-crab (strá'ber-i-krab), n. A small maioid or spider-crab of European waters, Euryngone aspera; so called from the reddish tubercles with which the carapace is studded.

strawberry-finch (strá'ber-i-fínch), n. Same as amadavat.

strawberry-geranium (strá'ber-i-jé-rá'ni-um), n. See geranium and sarifrage.

strawberry-mark (strá'ber-i-márk), n. A kind of birth-mark; a vascular nevus, of reddish color and soft consistency, like a strawberry.

strawberry-moth (strá'ber-i-móth), n. Any moth whose larva injures the strawberry. (a) A strawberry root-borer. (b) A strawberry leaf-roller.

5983

(c) One of three geometrids, Petrophora truncata, Nematocampa filamentaria, and Angerone crocatoraria, whose larvae feed on the foliage. (d) The smeared dagger, Acronycta obtusata.

strawberry-pear

(strá'ber-i-pär), n.

The fruit of a cactaceous plant, Cereus triangularis, of the West Indies, etc., or the plant itself. This plant has three-angled branches which climb by rooting. The fruit is subacid, pleasant, and cooling, and is said to be the best-flavored afforded by any plant of the order.

strawberry-perch

(strá'ber-i-pérch), n.

The grass-bass.

strawberry-plant

(strá'ber-i-plánt), n.

1. See strawberry.

2. Same as strawberry-shrub.

strawberry-roan

(strá'ber-i-rón), a. See roan, 1.

strawberry-shrub

(strá'ber-i-shrub), n.

The sweet shrub, Calycanthus floridus and other species. See Calycanthus.

strawberry-tomato

(strá'ber-i-tō-má'tō), n.

The winter-cherry, Physalis Alkekengi. The berry, enclosed within an inflated calyx, resembles a cherry or a very small tomato in appearance. Also called husk-tomato.

strawberry-tree

(strá'ber-i-trō), n. [ME. strawberry-tree; < strawberry + tree.] 1.

The strawberry-plant. See the quotation under strawberry-vice.

2. A handsome evergreen shrub or bushy tree, Arbutus Unedo, native in southern Europe. The scarlet granulated fruit at a distance resembles a strawberry, but is dry and lacking in flavor, though sometimes eaten. In Spain a sugar and a spirit are extracted from it. The flowers appear in autumn, when also the fruit, which ripens only the second season, is present. The name is extended to the other species of the genus. See cut under Arbutus, 3.

strawberry-vine

(strá'ber-i-vín), n. See strawberry.

strawberry-wise, n. [ME. strawberry wyse, strawberry wyse, strawberry wyse, strebericise, < AS. strachberu-wise, strachberu-wise, later strachberu-wise, strawberry-plant, < strachberu, strawberry, + wise, here appear a particular use of wise, way, manner, wise: see strawberry and wise, 2.] The strawberry-plant.

Strawberry wyse (strawberry tree, K. strawberry) wyse, H. strawberry wyse, S. Fracus. Prompt Parc., p. 478.

strawberry-worm

(strá'ber-i-wérn), n.

The worm, grub, or caterpillar of any insect which injures the strawberry; especially, the larva of the strawberry sawfly, Empythus maculatus, more fully called strawberry false-worm. See cut under Empythus. [U. S.]

strawboard

(strá'bórd), n.

A thick and coarse hard-rolled fabric of yellow paper or cardboard made of straw: largely used by makers of cheap paper boxes.

straw-buff

(strá'buf), n.

Straw-color of very low chroma, as in Manila paper.

straw-built

(strá'bílt), a.

Built or constructed of straw. Milton, P. L., i. 773.

straw-cat

(strá'kát), n.

The pampas-cat.

straw-coat

(strá'kót), n.

Same as paillasse, 2.

straw-color

(strá'kul'ér), a. and n.

1. a. Straw-colored; stramineous.

2. n. Your straw-colour beard. Shak., M. N. D., i. 2. 95.

straw-colored

(strá'kul'órd), a.

Pale light-yellow, like dry straw; corn-colored; stramineous: as, the straw-colored bat, Natalus albigenter.

straw-cotton

(strá'kot'n), n.

A cotton thread made for the manufacture of hats and other articles of straw.

straw-cutter

(strá'kut'ér), n.

In agri., any machine for cutting straw and hay into short pieces suitable for feed for cattle.

straw-drain

(strá'drán), n.

A drain filled with straw.

straw-embroidery

(strá'em-broi'dér-i), n.

Fancy work done upon net, usually black silk net, by means of yellow straw, which forms the flowers and principal parts of the pattern, and silk of the same color.

strawen

(strá'en), a. [< straw + -en.] Made of straw. Stow.

Strawberry pear (Cereus triangularis).

stray

straw-fiddle (strá'fid'l), n. A variety of xylophone in which the wooden bars are laid on rolls of straw. Also gigelira and sticcado.

straw-fork (strá'fórk), n. A pitchfork.

Flail, strawfork, and rake, with a fan that is strong.

Tusser, September's Husbandry.

straw-house (strá'hous), n. A house for holding straw after the grain has been thrashed out.

strawing (strá'ing), n. The occupation of selling straws in the street and giving with them something which is forbidden to be sold, as indecent papers, political songs, and the like. Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, I. 229. [Cant.]

straw-necked (strá'nekt), a. Having husky or straw-like feathers on the neck: as, the straw-necked ibis, Carphibis spinicollis.

straw-needle (strá'nē'dl), n. A long thin needle used for sewing together straw braid, as in the manufacture of hats. Also called straw.

straw-ride (strá'rid), n. A pleasure-ride in the country, taken in a long wagon or sleigh filled with straw, upon which the party sit. [Colloq., U. S.]

strawsmall (strá'smál), n. The whitethroat, Sylvia cinerea: so called from the straw used in constructing its nest. [Eng.]

strawsmear (strá'smēr), n. 1. Same as straw-small.

2. The garden-warbler, Sylvia hortensis.

3. The willow-warbler, Phylloscopus trochilus. [Prov. Eng. in all senses.]

straw-stem (strá'stem), n. 1. In glass-making, the stem of a wine-glass pulled out of the substance of the bowl. Hence—2. A wine-glass having a stem of the above character.

A party of young men . . . let fall that superb out-glass

Claret, and shivered it, with a dozen of the delicately engraved straw-stems that stood upon the waiter.

G. W. Curtis, Potiphar Papers, ii.

straw-stone (strá'stón), n. Same as carpholite.

straw-underwing (strá'un'dér-wing), n. A British noctuid moth, Cerigo cytherea, having straw-colored underwings, with a broad, smoky marginal band.

straw-wine (strá'wín), n. Wine made from grapes which have been dried or partly dried by exposure to the sun: so called from the bed of straw upon which they have been laid. Such wine is generally sweet and rich.

We may presume that oseve was a luscious-sweet, or straw-wine, similar to that which is still made in that province (Alsace).

Babes Book (L. E. T. S.), p. 206, note.

straw-worm (strá'wérn), n. The larva of a trichopterous neuropterous insect; a caddis-worm: so called from the bits of straw of which it builds its case. See cut under caddis-worm.

strawy (strá'í), a. [< straw + -y.] Pertaining to, made of, or like straw; consisting of straw; resembling straw.

There the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge,

Fall down before him, like the mower's swath.

Shak., T. and C., v. 5. 24.

straw-yard (strá'yárd), n. See the quotation.

They [trampers] come back to London to avail themselves of the shelter of the night asylums or refuges for the destitute (usually called straw-yards by the poor).

Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, II. 138.

straw-yellow (strá'yel'ō), n. A chromatic variety of straw-color, or a yellow verging upon straw-color.

stray (strá), v. [< ME. strayen, straien, < OF. estraier, estraier, estraier, estraier, wander about, stray (said of an animal, esp. of a horse, going about without its master), also of a person, wander, ramble, prob. lit. 'go about the streets or highways' (= It. stradare, put on the way, show the way) (cf. estraier, estraier, wandering about, straying, stray, = Pr. estradier, one who wanders about the streets, < *ML. as if *stratarius*;

cf. also It. stradiotto, a wanderer, traveler, gad-dler, a particular use of stradiotto, a soldier, free-booter (see stradiot, estraadiot), associated with strada, street), < estree, stree, stree, also (after

Pr. estraie, a street, road, highway, = Pr. estraie = It. strada, a street, road, highway, < L. strata, a street, road: see estree and street. According to some etymologists the OF. estraier is prob. = Pr. estraigar, < ML. extravagari, wander, < L. extra, without, + vagari, wander: see extravagant, extravagate. Cf. astray, estraie, v., doublets of stray.] I. intrans. 1. To wander, as from a direct course; deviate or go out of the way or from the proper limits; go astray.

A sheep doth very often stray,

And if the shepherd be a while away.

Shak., T. G. of V., i. 1. 74.

stray

2. To wander from the path of truth, duty, or rectitude; turn from the accustomed or prescribed course; deviate.

We have erred, and strayed from thy ways like lost sheep.
Book of Common Prayer, General Confession.

Tom Tusher never permitted his mind to stray out of the prescribed University path.

Thackeray, Henry Esmond, x.

3. To move about without or as without settled purpose or direction.

My eye, descending from the hill, surveys

Where Thames among the wanton valleys strays.

Sir J. Denham, Cooper's Hill, l. 100.

The Cardinal de Cabasolle strayed with Petrarch about his valley in many a wandering discourse.

I. D'Israeli, Lit. Char. Men of Genius, p. 147.

=Syn. 1. To straggle.—1 and 3. Wander, Rove, etc. See ramble, v.

II. trans. To cause to stray; mislead; seduce. [Rare.]

Hath not else his eye

Stray'd his affection in unlawful love?

Shak., C. of E., v. 1. 51.

stray<sup>1</sup> (strā), a. and n. [Early mod. E. also straye, straie; by aphoresis from estray, n., as well as astray, orig. pp., < F. estraié, estrayé, strayed, astray, pp. of estraiier, estrayier, stray: see stray<sup>1</sup>, v. Cf. estray, n. In defs. II., 3 and 4, directly from the verb.] I. a. Having gone astray; strayed; wandering; straggling; incidental.

Stray beast, that goethe a-stray. Prompt. Parv., p. 478.

That little apothecary who sold a stray customer a pennyworth of salts.

Thackeray, Pendennis, II.

II. n. 1. Any domestic animal that has left an inclosure or its proper place and company, and wanders at large or is lost; an estray.

Impounded as a stray

The King of Scots. Shak., Hen. V., i. 2. 160.

Hence—2. A person or persons astray; a straggler; a truant.

Strike up our drums, pursue the scatter'd stray.

Shak., 2 Hen. IV., iv. 2. 120.

There is also a school for strays and truant.

Harper's Mag., LXXVIII. 545.

3. The act of wandering. [Rare.]

I would not from your love make such a stray,

To match you where I hate. Shak., Lear, i. 1. 212.

4. A pasturage for cattle. [Prov. Eng.]

The eight hundred acres, more or less, in six different strays without the walls, belonging to the four ancient wards, and on which freemen have exclusive right to depasture their cattle.

Harper's Mag., LXXIX. 843.

On the stray, upon stray, deserting; straggling; scattering; wandering.

Lokis well to the listis, that no lede passe!

If any stert upon stray, strike hym to dethe!

Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 6238.

Right of stray, the right of pasturing cattle on commons. Hallivell.

stray<sup>2</sup> (strā), n. [Early mod. E. also **strayre*, strave; < ME. strayre, strayve, appar. for **strayre*, streyre, < OF. estraiier, estrayere, estraiher, estrahier, estrahie, f., estraiier, estrayier, m. (ML. reflex estracaria, estracria), usually in pl. estraiiers, etc., goods left by an alien or bastard intestate, and escheated to the king as unowned or 'stray,' < estraiier, estrayier, adj., straying, stray. The word was confused with the related noun stray<sup>1</sup>, prop. a straying animal, and as a more technical term suffered some variation in use.] Property left behind by an alien at his death, and escheated to the king in default of heirs.

Somme seruen the kynge, . . . chalengynge hus dettes,
Of wardes and of wardemotes, wayues and strayues.

Piers Plowman (C), l. 92.

strayed (strād), p. a. Wandering; astray: as, strayed cattle; a strayed reveler.

strayer (strā'ēr), n. [< stray<sup>1</sup> + -er<sup>1</sup>.] One who or that which strays; a wanderer.

stray-line (strā'lin), n. 1. In whaling, that part of the towline which is in the water when fast to a whale.—2. The unmarked part of a logline, next to the chip, which is allowed to run off before beginning to count, in order to clear the chip from eddies at the stern. The limit of the stray-line is indicated by a rag called the stray-mark.

strayling (strā'ling), n. [< stray<sup>1</sup> + -ling<sup>1</sup>.] A little waif or stray. [Rare.]

Hardly Asiatic straylings, whose seeds have followed the grains.

Grant Allen, Colin Clout's Calendar, p. 182.

stret, n. A Middle English form of straw<sup>1</sup>.

streak<sup>1</sup> (strēk), v. i. [< ME. streken, a var. of striken, a secondary form of striken (pret. pl. and pp. striken), go: see strike, v., and cf. stroke<sup>1</sup>, v. Cf. sneak, ult. < AS. snican. As used in the United States, this verb is commonly associated with streak<sup>2</sup>, n.] To run swiftly. [Obsolete or prov. Eng. and U. S.]

O'er hill and dale with fury she did dreel;

A' roads to her were good and bad alike;

Nane o' 't she wyl'd, but forward on did streak.

Ross, Helenore, p. 56. (Jamieson.)

They jest streaked it out through the buttery-door!

H. B. Stowe, Oldtown, p. 172.

streak<sup>2</sup> (strēk), n. [< ME. streke, strike, < AS. strica, a line, stroke (= MD. stroke, D. streck = MLG. streke, LG. streck = OHG. MHG. G. strich, a stroke, line, G. streich, a stroke, blow, etc., = Icel. stryk, strykr, a stroke, stroke, = Sw. streck = Dan. streg, a streak, line, = Goth. striks, a stroke of a pen), < strican (pp. stricen), go: see strike, and cf. stroke, stroke<sup>2</sup>. The L. striga, a swath, furrow, is of diff. origin.] 1. A line, band, or stripe of somewhat irregular shape.

While the fantastic Tulip strives to break

In two-fold Beauty, and a parted Streak.

Prior, Solomon, i.

In dazzling streaks the vivid lightnings play.

Cowper, Herosism, l. 18.

2. In mineral, the line or mark of fine powder produced when a mineral is scratched, or when it is rubbed upon a hard, rough surface, as that of unglazed porcelain. The color of the streak is often an important character, particularly in the case of minerals having a metallic luster. For example, certain massive forms of the iron ores hematite and magnetite resemble each other closely, but are readily distinguished by the fact that the former has a red and the latter a black streak.

3. In zool., a color-mark of considerable length for its width, and generally less firm and regular than a stripe. See streaked, streaky, and compare stripe, 1.—4. Figuratively, a trait; a vein; a turn of character or disposition; a whim.

Some Streaks too of Divinity ran,

Partly of Monk, and partly Puritan.

Cowley, The Mistress, Wisdom.

Mrs. Britton had been churning, and the butter "took a contrary streak," as she expressed it, and refused to come.

E. Eggleston, The Graysons, xviii.

5. Naut., same as strake<sup>2</sup>, 6.—6†. A rung of a ladder.

You are not a little beholden to the poor dear soul that's dead, for putting a streak in your ladder, when you was on the last step of it.

Cumberland, Natural Son, iii.

7. A short piece of iron, six of which form the wheel-tire of a wooden artillery-carriage.—Germinal streak, primitive streak. Same as primitive groove (which see, under primitive).—Streak of luck, fortunate chance; run of luck. [Colloq., U. S.]—Streak of the spear. See spear<sup>1</sup>, 6.—To go like a streak (sc. of lightning), to go very rapidly; rush. [Colloq., U. S.]

streak<sup>2</sup> (strēk), v. t. [< streak<sup>2</sup>, n.] To put a streak upon or in; break up the surface of by one or more streaks.

Eche a strete was striked & strawed with floures.

William of Palerne (E. E. T. S.), l. 1617.

The last faint gleams of the sun's low beams

Had streak'd the gray with red.

Scott, The Gray Brother.

streak<sup>3</sup> (strēk), v. [Also streck, streak; an unassimilated form of stretch: see stretch.] I. trans. 1. To stretch; extend. [Obsolete or dialectal.]

As the Ilon lies before his den,

Guarding his whelps, and streaks his careless limbs.

Chapman, Gentleman Usher, v. 1.

2. To lay out, as a dead body. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

The strekit corpse, till still midnight,

They waked, but naething hear.

Young Benjie (Child's Ballads, II. 302).

II. intrans. To stretch out; shoot, as a rocket or a shooting-star.

Fore-god, my lord, haue you beheld the like [a blazing star]?

Look how it streaks! what do you think of it?

Heywood, If you Know not Me (Works, ed. 1874, I. 292).

streaked (strēkt or strē'ked), a. 1. Striped; striate; having streaks or stripes; especially, having lengthwise streaks, as distinguished from crosswise bands, bars, or fasciae.—2. Confused; ashamed; agitated; alarmed. [Low, U. S.]

But wen it comes to beln' killed—I tell ye I felt streaked

The first time 't over I found out wy baggonets wuz peaked.

Lowell, Biglow Papers, 1st ser., ii.

Streaked falcon. See falcon.—Streaked gurnard, a fish, Trigla lineata.—Streaked sandpiper. See sandpiper.

streakfield (strēk'fēld), n. The scuttler, or six-striped lizard, Cnemidophorus sexlineatus: so called from the swiftiness with which it scuttles or streaks across fields.

streakiness (strē'ki-nes), n. The state or quality of being streaked or streaky.

stream

streaking (strē'king), n. [< streak<sup>2</sup> + -ing.] A streak; a stripe.

She . . . striped its pure, celestial white

With streakings of the morning light.

J. R. Drake, The American Flag.

streak-stitch (strēk'stich), n. A stitch in needle-made lace by means of which an open line is left in the mat or toilé.

streaky (strē'ki), a. [< streak<sup>2</sup> + -y<sup>1</sup>.] 1. Having streaks; marked with streaks; streaked. It differs from striped in that the lines are not accurately parallel, nor straight and uniform.

When streaky sunset faded softly into dusk.

R. D. Blackmore, Kit and Kitty, xiv.

Hence—2. Uneven in quality; variable in character or excellence: as, his poetry is decidedly streaky. [Colloq.]

streal (strāl), n. [Early mod. E. also strale; < ME. **strel*, stral, < AS. strāl, an arrow, missile, = OS. strāla = MD. strale, D. straal = MLG. strale = OHG. strāla, MHG. strāle (> It. strale), G. strahl, an arrow, beam of light, = Icel. strjál, an arrow, = Sw. stråle = Dan. stråle, a beam of light, jet of water, flash of lightning, = Bulg. striela = Russ. striela, an arrow; cf. Russ. strielit, an archer (see strelitz).] 1. An arrow. Wright (spelled streal). [Prov. Eng.]—2†. The pupil of the eye.

The strale of the eye, pupilla.

Withals, Dict. (ed. 1608), p. 278. (Nares.)

stream (strēm), n. [< ME. stream, streim, < AS. stream = OS. strōm = OFries. stram = D. stroom = MLG. strom = OHG. strom, strōm, MHG. strom, strōm, strām, G. strom = Icel. streamr = Sw. Dan. ström (Goth. not recorded), a stream; with initial str- for orig. sr-, akin to OIr. sruth, Ir. sruth, a stream, sruidim, a stream, Russ. struia, Lith. srove, a stream, Gr. ῥέας, a flowing, ῥέμα, a flowing, a stream, river, etc. (see rheum<sup>1</sup>), ῥέμας, a flowing, rhythm (see rhythm); < √ srū = Gr. ῥέειν (for **ῥεειν*), = Skt. √ srū, flow.] 1. A course of running water; a river, rivulet, or brook.

He stod bi the flodes stream.

Genesis and Exodus (E. E. T. S.), l. 2096.

He brought streams also out of the rock, and caused waters to run down like rivers.

Ps. lxxviii. 16.

As streams their channels deeper wear.

Burns, To Mary in Heaven.

2. A steady current in a river or in the sea; especially, the middle or most rapid part of a current or tide: as, to row against the stream; the Gulf Stream.

My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Shak., Othello, ii. 3. 65.

Row, brothers, row! the stream runs fast,

The rapids are near, and the daylight is past!

Moore, Canadian Boat-Song.

3. A flow; a flowing; that which flows in or out, as a liquid or a fluid, air or light.

Bright was the day, and blew the firmament:

Phebus bath of gold hiso streames down ysent

To gladen every flour with his warmness.

Chaucer, Merchant's Tale, l. 976.

Forth gushit a stream of gore blood thick.

Spenser, F. Q., II. i. 30.

A wandering stream of wind,
Breathed from the west, has caught the expanded sail.

Shelley, Alastor.

4. Anything issuing from a source and moving or flowing continuously: as, a stream of words; a stream of sand; a stream of people.

With never an end to the stream of passing feet.

Tennyson, Maud, xxvii. 1.

5. A continued course or current; the course or current of affairs or events; current; drift.

Such was the stream of those times that all men gave place unto it, which we cannot but impute partly to their own oversight.

Hooker, Eccles. Polity, v. 42.

For science, God is simply the stream of tendency by which all things fulfill the law of their being.

M. Arnold, Literature and Dogma, i.

6. A rift: so called by English anglers. Norris.—Gulf Stream. See gulf.—Stream-function of the motion of an incompressible fluid in two dimensions, such a function that the total instantaneous flow across any curve, referred to the unit of time, is equal to the difference of the values of the stream-function at the extremities of the curve.—Stream of thought, the train of ideas which pass successively into present consciousness, regarded as analogous to a current flowing past a point upon the bank.—The stream, the Gulf Stream.—Syn. 1 and 2. Stream, Current, Eddy. All rivers and brooks are streams, and have currents. An eddy is a counter-current, a current contrary to the main direction.

stream (strēm), v. [< ME. streamen = D. stroomen = G. strömen = Icel. streyma = Sw. strömma = Dan. ströme; < I. intrans.] I. intrans. 1. To move or run in a continuous current; flow continuously. See streaming, n., 2.

Within those banks, where rivers now

Stream, and perpetual draw their humid train.

Milton, P. L., vii. 306.

On all sides round
Streams the black blood. Pope, Odyssey, iii. 581.
2. To move or proceed continuously and uniformly, or in unbroken succession.

And to imperial Love, that god most high,
Do my sighs stream. Shak., All's Well, ii. 3. 82.
Streaming flocks of wild ducks began to make their appearance high in the air. Irving, Sketch-Book, p. 437.

3. To pour out a stream; also, to throw off a stream from the surface: as, streaming eyes; streaming umbrella.

Then grateful Greece with streaming eyes would raise Historic marbles, to record his praise.
Fenton, in Pope's Odyssey, i. 105.

Blasts that blow the poplar white,
And lash with storm the streaming pane.
Tennyson, in Memorial Poem.

4. To move swiftly and continuously, as a ray of light; streak.

I looked up just in time to see a superb shooting star stream across the heavens. Nature, XXX. 455.

5. To stretch out in a line; hang or float at full length: as, streaming hair.

Standards and gonfalon's twist van and rear Stream in the air. Milton, P. L., v. 700.
Ribands streaming gay. Corper, Task, iv. 541.

II. trans. 1. To discharge in a stream; cause to flow; pour out.

Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood.
Shak., J. C., iii. 1. 201.

Calanus told Onesicritus of a golden world, where meads were as plentiful as dust, and fountains streamed milk, honey, wine, and oyle. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 454.

2. To cause to float out; wave.

Many a time hath bauld'rd Norfolk fought, Streaming the ensign of the Christian cross Against black pagans, Turks, and Saracens.
Shak., Rich. II., iv. 1. 94.

3t. To stripe or ray. See streaming, a. [Rare.]

The herald's mantle is streamed with gold. Bacon

4. (a) In mining, to wash, as the superficial detritus, especially that accumulated in the beds of rivers, for the purpose of separating any valuable ore which it may contain. See placer.
The term stream, long in use in Cornwall, exclusively with reference to tin ores, seems hardly to have come into general use in any mining regions except those in which the ore of tin is mined. (b) In dyeing, to wash in running water, as silk, before putting in the dye. Workshop Receipts, 2d ser., p. 40.—To stream a buoy. See buoy.

stream-anchor (strēm'ang'kor), n. Naut. an anchor of a size intermediate between the bower-anchor and the kedge. It is used for warping and like purposes. In the United States navy stream-anchors weigh from 400 to 1,500 pounds, and are about one fourth the weight of bower-anchors.

stream-cable (strēm'kā'bl), n. The cable or hawser of the stream-anchor.

stream-clock (strēm'klōk), n. [Tr. G. stromuhr.] A physiological instrument for determining the velocity of blood in a vessel.

stream-current (strēm'kur'ent), n. See the quotation, and also drift-current.

A current whose onward movement is sustained by the vis a tergo of a drift current is called a stream-current. Eneye, Brit., III. 10.

streamer (strēm'mér), n. [ME. streamer, streamere; < stream + -er.] 1. That which streams out, or hangs or floats at full length; applied to anything long and narrow, as a ribbon.

All twinkling with the dewdrops' sheen,
The briar-rose fell in streamers green.
Scott, L. of the L., l. 11.

(a) A long narrow flag; a pennon extended or flowing in the wind; same as pennant, 1 (a).

His brave fleet
With silken streamers the young Phœbus fanning.
Shak., Hen. V., iii. Prob. l. 6.

(b) A stream or column of light shooting upward or outward, as in some forms of the aurora borealis.

He knew, by the streamers that shot so bright,
That spirits were riding the northern light.
Scott, L. of the L., ii. 8.

(c) A long flowing strip of ribbon, or feather, or something similar, used in decoration, especially in dress.

A most airy sort of blue and silver turban, with a streamer of plume on one side.
Charlotte Brontë, Villette, xx

(d) A long-exserted feather which streams away from the rest of the plumage of some birds; a pennant or standard. See cuts under Semioptera and standard-bearer.

2. In mining, a person who washes for stream-tin. See streaming.—3. The geometrid moth Anticlea derivata: an English collectors' name. streamful (strēm'fūl), a. [stream + -ful.] Full of streams or currents.

Like a ship despoiled of her sails,
Shov'd by the wind against the streamful tide.
Dryden, Legend of Pierce Gaveston, st. 105.

stream-gold (strēm'göld), n. See the quotation.

The gold of alluvial districts, called stream-gold or placer-gold, occurs, as well as alluvial tin, among the debris of the more ancient rocks. Ure, Dict., III. 293.

stream-ice (strēm'is), n. Pieces of drift or bay ice forming a ridge and following the line of current.

At 4 A. M. a seemingly close pack was seen to the eastward, but later it developed into stream-ice of small extent. A. W. Greeley, Arctic Service, p. 67.

streaminess (strēm'i-nes), n. The quality or state of being streamy.

I give the case of a star-group which is certainly not the most remarkable for streaminess. R. A. Proctor, Universe of Stars (2d ed., 1878), p. 22.

streaming (strēm'ing), n. [Verbal n. of stream, v.] 1. In tin-mining, the washing of tin ore from the detritus with which it is associated. The now almost entirely exhausted deposits of detrital tin ore in Cornwall and Devon were called streams, because they occur chiefly in or near the bottoms of the valleys and adjacent to the present streams, or in the manner of deposits formed by streams, analogous to the channels of the Californian and the gutters of the Australian miners; the miners were themselves called streamers; the localities where streaming was carried on, stream-works; and the ore obtained, stream-tin.

2. In bot., the peculiar flowing motion of the particles of protoplasm in an amoeba or other rhizopod, by which the form of the animalcule changes or pseudopods are protruded; also, the similar circulation or rotation of the protoplasm of some plant-cells. See protoplasm, and rotation of protoplasm (under rotation).

streaming (strēm'ing), p. a. In her., issuing, as rays of light: as, rays streaming from the dexter chief.

streamless (strēm'les), a. [stream + -less.] Not traversed by streams; unwatered. Eneye, Brit., XXIV. 758.

streamlet (strēm'let), n. [stream + -let.] A small stream; a rivulet; a rill.

Unnumber'd glittering streamlets play'd,
And hurried every where their waters shewn.
Thomson, Castle of Indolence, l. 3.

stream-line (strēm'lin), n. See *line*², and line of float (under float).—Stream-line surface. See surface.

streamling (strēm'ling), n. [stream + -ling.] Same as streamlet.

A thousand Streamlings that never saw the Sun,
With tribute silver to his service run.
Spenser, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, ii. The Captains.

stream-tin (strēm'tin), n. In mining, tin ore, or oxid of tin, obtained in streaming (which see).

stream-wheel (strēm'hwēl), n. An undershot wheel, or current-wheel.

stream-works (strēm'wērks), n. sing. and pl. In mining, a locality where the detrital deposits are washed in order to procure the valuable metal or ore which they may contain; alluvial washings, or surface mining. The words stream-works and stream (v. t.) are rarely, if ever, used except with reference to the separation of tin ore from detrital deposits.

streamwort (strēm'wört), n. A plant of Lindley's order Haloragaceæ. [Rare.]

streamy (strēm'i), a. [Early mod. E. also streamy; < stream + -y.] 1. Abounding in streams. (a) Full of running water or of springs.

(However streamy), now adust and dry, Deny'd the Goddess Water.
Prior, First Hymn of Callimachus.

(b) Full of or emitting streaming rays of light.

In streamy sparkles, kindling all the skies,
From pole to pole the trail of glory flies.
Pope, Iliad, xiii. 321.

2. Having the form of a beam or stream of light.

streath, n. An obsolete form of street.

Streathfield's operation. See operation.

streberry, n. An obsolete form of strawberry. Strebila (strēb'la), n. [NL. (Wiedemann, 1824), < Gr. στροβίλος, twisted, crooked, < στροβίλειν, twist.] A peculiar genus of pupiparous dippterous insects, of the family Nyctiribiidae, including certain so-called bat-lice or bat-ticks. S. vespertilionis is a common bat-parasite occurring in South America and the West Indies.

streblosis (strēb'ō'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. στροβίλος, twisted; see Strebila.] The angle through which it is necessary to rotate an element of a figure to bring it into coincidence with the corresponding element of a given conformable figure.

Streblus (strēb'lus), n. [NL. (Loureiro, 1790), so called in allusion to its branches, which form a dense mass of rigid straggling twigs; < Gr. στροβίλος, twisted; see Strebila.] A genus of apetalous plants, of the order Urticaceæ and tribe Moreæ, type of the subtribe Strebileæ. It is characterized by usually dioecious flowers, the male in clustered two-bracted heads, the female solitary on the peduncle, the perianth consisting of four widely overlapping segments which closely invest the one-celled ovary. As in most of the subtribe, its cotyledons are very unequal, and the larger, which is very fleshy, incloses the smaller. The only species, S. asper (Trophis aspera), is the tonkioi or paper-tree of the Siamese, who prepare several kinds of paper from its bark, including a heavy and a thin white paper, and a black paper for use like a slate, much employed in the native law-courts. It is a small tree, reaching about thirty feet in height, bearing dark-green oval coriaceous two-ranked leaves, and occurring from China and Manila to the Andaman Islands.

strecchet, v. An old spelling of stretch.

street, n. A Middle English form of *stræt*¹.

street (strēt), v. t. [Cf. street.] To trail; stream.

A yellow satin train that streeted after her like the tail of a comet.
Thackeray, Vanity Fair, xx.

street, n. A Middle English form of *strain*².

street, v. A Middle English form of *strip*¹.

street (strēt), n. [Early mod. E. also street, streete; < ME. streete, streete, street, strate, < AS. strēt=OS. strata=OFries. streete=MD. straete, D. straat=MLG. strāte, LG. strate=OHG. strāza, MHG. strāze, G. strasse=Icel. stræti=Sw. strät=Dan. stråde (=It. strada=Sp. Pg. Pr. estrada=OF. estree, street, strac, F. étrec=W. ystrad, ystrid=OIr. strāth=Ir. Gael. sraid=NGr. σπάρα), < LL. strata, a street, road, highway, orig. via strata, a paved way, < L. strata, fem. of stratus, pp. of sternere, strew, scatter, spread, cover, pave; see stratum. Street is one of the very few words regarded as received in England from the Roman invaders, others being chester (Chester), port, wall, and -coln in Lincoln. Cf. *stray*¹, *stray*².] 1t. A paved road; a highway.

This grand-child, great as he [Mulumutius], those four proud Streets begun

That each way cross this Isle, and bounds did them allow.
Dryden, Polyolbion, viii. 74.

There were at that time (fifth year after the Conquest) in England four great roads, . . . of which two ran lengthways through the island, and two crossed it, . . . Watlinge-strete, Fosse, Hikenilde-strete, and Erminge-strete.
Guest, Origines Celtice, II. 218.

2. A public way or road, whether paved or unpaved, in a village, town, or city, ordinarily including a sidewalk or sidewalks and a roadway, and having houses or town lots on one or both sides; a main way, in distinction from a lane or alley: as, a fashionable street; a street of shops. Abbreviated St., st. Compare road, 3. strictly, the word excludes the houses, which are on the street; but in a very common use it includes the land and houses, which are then in the street: as, a house in High Street. In law, street sometimes includes as much of the surface, and as much of the space above and of the soil or depth beneath, as may be needed for the ordinary works which the local authorities may decide to execute on or in a street, including sidewalks.

Up Fish Street! down Saint Magnus' Corner!
Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iv. 8. 1.

3. The way for vehicles, between the curbs, as distinguished from the sidewalks: as, to walk in the street.—4. Hence, a path or passageway inclosed between continuous lines of objects; a track; a lane.

It seemed to be, as it were, a continued street of slippes.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 435.

I was ushered through an actual street of servitors.
Disraeli, Vivian Grey, iii. 8.

5t. A path; a way.
Than makest thou his pees with his sovereign,
And bringest him out of the crooked street.
Chaucer, A. B. C., l. 70.

While I ran by the most secret streets,
Eschewing still the common haunted track.
Surrey, Æneid, ii. 975.

6. The inhabitants of a street collectively. [Colloq.]

All the whole street will hate us, and the world
Point me out cruel. Middleton, Chaste Maid, v. 2.

Grub Street. See Grub-street—Lombard Street. See *Lombard*², 1.—Queer Street. See *queer*¹.—Street Arab. See Arab, 2.—Street broker. See broker.—The street, a street (as Wall Street in New York) or locality where merchants or stock-brokers congregate for business; the commercial exchange: as, it is rumored on the street.

Common places whither merchandises resort as to the bourse or strole. Peter Martyr (tr. in Eden's First Books [on America, ed. Arber, p. 180]).

To have the key of the street. See *key*¹.—To spin street-yarn. See spin.—Syn. 2. Road, etc. See way. streetage (strēt'āj), n. [street + -age.] A charge made for the use of a street. [Rare.] street-car (strēt'kär), n. A passenger-car for local or city travel, drawn on the surface of the public streets by horses, by a locomotive engine, or by an endless cable, or propelled by electricity. [U. S.]

street-car

The street-cars rattled in the foreground, changing horses and absorbing and emitting passengers.
H. James, Jr., The Bostonians, xxxiv.

street-door (strēt'dōr), n. The door of a house or other building which opens upon a street.

When you step but a few doors off . . . to see a brother-footman going to be hanged, leave the street door open.
Swift, Advice to Servants (Footman).

streeted (strē'ted), a. Provided with streets.

There are few Places this Side the Alps better built, and so well streeted as this [Antwerp].
Howell, Letters, I. i. 12.

street-locomotive (strēt'lō'kō-mō-tiv), n. See locomotive.

street-orderly (strēt'ōr'dōr-li), n. A person employed to keep the streets clean by the prompt removal of rubbish, dung, or dirt of any kind by means of a hand-brush and bag.

By the street-orderly method of scavenging, the thoroughfares are continually being cleansed, and so never allowed to become dirty; whereas, by the ordinary method, they are not cleansed until they are dirty.
Mayhew, London Labour and London Poor, II. 257.

street-railroad (strēt'rāl'rōd), n. A railroad constructed upon the surface of a public street in towns and cities; a tramway. Cars on such railroads are variously propelled, and the railroads take specific names from the system of propulsion, as cable-railroad, horse-railroad, electric railroad. (U. S.)

street-sweeper (strēt'swē'pēr), n. One who or that which sweeps the streets; specifically, a machine provided with brushes and scrapers for removing dust, mud, etc., from the streets.

street-walker (strēt'wā'kēr), n. 1. One who walks the streets; a pedestrian.

All street-walkers and shop-keepers bear an equal share in its hourly vexation [the nuisance of beggars].
Swift, Proposal for giving Beggars.

2. A common prostitute who walks the streets at night.

streetward<sup>1</sup> (strēt'wārd), n. [< street + ward.] Formerly, an officer who had the care of the streets.

streetward<sup>2</sup> (strēt'wārd), adv. and a. [< street + -ward.] Next the street; looking out on the street. Tennyson, Enoch Arden.

streetway (strēt'wā), n. [< street + way.] The open space of a street; the roadway.

straight<sup>1</sup>. An old spelling of straight<sup>1</sup>.
straight<sup>2</sup>, straighten. Old spellings of strait<sup>1</sup>, straiten. Drayton.

streiki, v. See streak<sup>3</sup>.

streinet, streinalet. Old spellings of strain<sup>1</sup>, stramine. Hollinshead.

streit, streitet, a. Old spellings of strait<sup>1</sup>.

streket. A Middle English form of streak<sup>1</sup>, streak<sup>2</sup>, and strike.

strelitz (strel'its), n. [< G. strelitze, < Russ. strelitsa, an archer, shooter, < strel'gati, shoot, strel'a, an arrow; prob. < OHG. strāla, G. strahl = AS. strāl, arrow; see streal.] A soldier of the ancient Muscovite guards, abolished by Peter the Great.

Strelitzia (strē-lit'si-ä), n. [NL. (Aiton, 1789), named after Queen Charlotte, wife of George III. of England, and descended from the German house of Mecklenburg-Strelitz.] 1. A genus of monocotyledonous plants, of the order Musaceae, distinguished by its flowers with three free sepals and three very dissimilar and peculiar petals, of which the outer is short, broad, and concave or hooded, the two lateral long, narrow, more or less united, and continued into a long petaloid appendage. There are 4 or 5 species, natives of South Africa. They are singular plants, producing an erect or subterranean woody rootstock, and large leaves which resemble those of a small banana-tree, or are reduced mainly or completely to tall erect cylindrical petioles. The large handsome flowers are borne few together far exerted from a spathe, which consists of one or two large boat-shaped bracts on a terminal or axillary scape. S. Reginae, known as queen-plat, bird's-tongue flower, or bird-of-paradise flower, produces large brilliant flowers, highly prized for the oddity of their shape and coloring, showing the unusual combination of orange and blue. S. augusta, a larger species with small white flowers and purple bracts, has a palm-like stem reaching 20 feet in height, and is cultivated under the name grand strelitzia. S. juncea and other species are also cultivated under glass. 2. [l. c.] A plant of this genus.

stremet, n. and v. An obsolete spelling of stream.
stren<sup>1</sup>, strenet, n. Middle English forms of strain<sup>2</sup>.

strengert, strengest, a. Earlier comparative and superlative of strong<sup>1</sup>.

strengite (streng'it), n. [Named after A. Strong, of Giessen, Germany.] A hydrous phosphate of iron, occurring in reddish orthorhombic crystals: it is isomorphous with scorodite.

strength (strength), n. [< ME. strengthe, strenothe, strenkyth, also strenthe, streinthe, <

AS. strengthu (= OHG. strengida), strength, < strang, strong: see strong<sup>1</sup>. Cf. length, < long.]

1. The property of being strong; force; power. Specifically—(a) In animals, that attribute of an animal body by which it is enabled to move itself or other bodies. The strength of animals is the muscular force or energy which they are capable of exerting. See horse-power.

Vlixes also, with angarely mony
Of tulkis (knights) of Traci, tor men of strenkyth.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), I. 6894.

The external indications of strength are the abundance and firmness of the muscular fibres.

Bentham, Introd. to Morals and Legislation, vi. 9. (Used in plural with same sense as singular.)

Alle his [Samson's] strenghes in his heres were.
Chaucer, Monk's Tale, I. 68.]

(b) In inanimate things, the property by which they sustain the application of force without breaking or yielding: as, the strength of a bone; the strength of a beam; the strength of a wall; the strength of a rope.

• Our castle's strength
Will laugh a siege to scorn.

Shak., Macbeth, v. 5. 2.

The city is of no greate strength, having a trifling wall about it.
Ecclyn, Diary, May 21, 1645.

Hence—2. Power or vigor of any kind; ability; capacity for work or effective action, whether physical, intellectual, or moral: as, strength of grasp or stroke; strength of mind, memory, or judgment; strength of feeling (that is, not intensity but effectiveness of emotion).

If, rather than to marry County Paris,
Thou hast the strength of will to say thyself.

Shak., R. and J., iv. 1. 72.

The belief

He has of his own great and catholic strengths
In arguing and discourse.

B. Jonson, Devil in an Ass, i. 2.

In the world of morals, as in the world of physics, strength is nearly allied to hardness.

Lecky, Europ. Morals, I. 354.

3. One who or that which is regarded as an embodiment of force or strength; that on which confidence or reliance is firmly set; stay; support; security.

God is our refuge and strength. Ps. xli. 1.

Thy counsel, in this uttermost distress,
My only strength and stay. Milton, P. L., x. 921.

Hitherto, Davenant observes, in taxing the people we had gone chiefly on land and trade, which is about one-third of the strength of England.

S. Dancell, Taxes in England, II. 56.

4. Force; violence; vehemence; intensity.

Zee schulle understonde, that the Soudan is Lord of 5 Kyngdomes, that he hath conquered and approped to him be Strengthe.
Manderiville, Travels, p. 35.

And al men spoken of hunting,

How they wolde slee the hert with strengthe.
Chaucer, Death of Blanche, l. 351.

If you did know to whom I gave the ring, . . .

You would abate the strength of your displeasure.
Shak., M. of V., v. 1. 108.

5. Degree of the distinguishing or essential element or constituent; the power to produce sensible effects on other bodies; potency: said of liquors and the like: as, the strength of an acid; the strength of wine or spirits; the strength of a potion or a poison.—6. Force as measured or stated in figures; amount or numbers of any collective body, as of an army or a fleet: as, a play adapted to the whole strength of the company; the full strength of a regiment.

Demand of him of what strength they are a-foot.

Shak., All's Well, iv. 3. 181.

Half a dozen gentlemen, furnished with a good strength of water-spaniels.

Gilbert White, Nat. Hist. Selborne, To T. Pennant, xxii.

7. Available force or backing, as of a candidate: as, his strength is greatest in the cities. [Political cant.]—8. Force proceeding from motion and proportioned to it; vehemence; impetuosity: as, the strength of a current of air or water; the strength of a charge of cavalry.—9. A stronghold.

Syne they hae left him, hail and feir,
Within his strength of stane.

And Maitland (Child's Ballads, VI. 222).

"No to say it's our best dwelling," he added, turning to Bucklaw, "but just a strength for the Lord of Ravenswood to flee until."

Scott, Bride of Lammermoor, vii.

10. In colors, the relative property possessed by a pigment of imparting a color to and modifying the shade of any other pigment to which it is added. Thus, one pound of lampblack added to 100 pounds of white lead produces a dark-gray shade, but one pound of ivory-black added in the same way would have little effect on the white.

11. In the fine arts, boldness of conception or treatment.

Carracci's strength, Correggio's softer line.

Pope, Epistle to Jervas, l. 37.

12. In soap-making. See the quotation.

strenuity

A peculiar phenomenon may be remarked in the cooling [of a little of the soap placed on a glass plate], which affords a good criterion of the quality of the soap. When there is formed around the little patch an opaque zone, a fraction of an inch broad, this is supposed to indicate complete saponification, and is called the strength; when it is absent, the soap is said to want its strength. When this zone soon vanishes after being distinctly seen, the soap is said to have false strength.
Ure, Dict., III. 852.

On the strength (milit. and naval), on the muster-rolls. [Colloq.]

The colonel had put the widow woman on the strength; she was no longer an unrecognized waif, but had her regimental position.

Arch. Forbes, in Eng. Illust. Mag., VI. 525.

On or upon the strength of, in reliance upon the value of; on the faith of: as, to do something on the strength of another's promise.

My father set out upon the strength of these two following axioms. Sterne, Tristram Shandy, ii. 19.

Proof strength. See proof, a.—Strength of a current, in elect., the quantity of electricity which passes in a unit of time; the measure of electrical energy. See Ohm's law, under law<sup>1</sup>.—Strength of materials. See material.—Strength of pole. See pole<sup>2</sup>.—Strength of the source. See the quotation.

The time rate of supply of liquid through the source is called the strength of the source.

Minchin, Uniplanar Kinematics, vi.

To measure strength. See measure. = Syn. 1. Force, etc. See power<sup>1</sup>.

strenght (strength), v. t. [< ME. strengthen, strenthen; < strength, n.] To strengthen.

Take this for a general rule, that every counsel that is affirmed or strengthened so strongly that it may not be changed for no condition that may bite—I say that thilke counsel is wikked.

Chaucer, Tale of Melibeus (Harleian MS.).

The helpe of Gods grace in that tribulation to strengthen him.

Sir T. More, Comfort against Tribulation (1573), fol. 16.

His armes and leggs [were] well lengthed and strengthened.
Fabyan, Chron., clvi.

strengthen (streng'thn), v. [< strength + -en<sup>1</sup>.]

1. trans. To make strong or stronger; add strength to, either physical, legal, or moral; confirm; establish: as, to strengthen a limb; to strengthen an obligation; to strengthen a claim; to strengthen authority.

Charge Joshua, and encourage him, and strengthen him.

Deut. iii. 28.

Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest . . .

With powerful policy strengthen themselves.

Shak., 3 Hen. VI., i. 2. 58.

For the more strengthening the Acts of this Parliament, the King purchased the Pope's Bulls, containing grievous Censures and Curses to that should break them.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 119.

Strengthening plaster. See plaster. = Syn. To invigorate, fortify, brace, nerve, steel, corroborate, support, heighten.

II. intrans. To grow strong or stronger.

The young disease, that must subdue at length,
Grows with his growth, and strengtheneth with his strength.

Pope, Essay on Man, ii. 136.

strengthen (streng'thn), n. [Formerly also strengthen; < strengthen + -en<sup>1</sup>.] One who or that which makes strong or stronger; one who or that which increases strength, physical or moral.

Whose plays are strengtheners of virtue.

Mary Lamb, Tales from Shakspeare, Pref.

strengthful (streng'thful), a. [< strength + -ful.] Abounding in strength; strong. Mars-ton.

strengthfulness (streng'thful-nes), n. The state or quality of being strengthful or strong; fullness of strength.

strengthening (streng'thing), n. [Verbal n. of strengthen, v.] A strengthening. Palsgrave. (Hallivell.)

strengthless (streng'thes), a. [< strength + -less.] Destitute of strength, in any sense of the word. Shak.; Boyle.

strengthen (streng'thn), n. Same as strengthen.

strengthy (streng'thi), a. [Early mod. E. also strenthic; < strength + -y<sup>1</sup>. Cf. lengthy.]

Having strength; strong.

The simple and strenthic defence of anc iust caus.

J. Tyrie, Refutation, Pref. 2. (Jamieson.)

strenkle (streng'kl), v. t. An obsolete or Scotch form of sprinkle.

strenkle (streng'kl), n. [< ME. strenkyll; < strenkle, v. Cf. sprinkle, n.] A sprinkler. [Obsolete or Scotch.]

Strenkyll to cast holy water, vimpilon.

Palsgrave. (Hallivell.)

strenth, n. An obsolete form of strength.

strenuity (stre-nū'i-ti), n. [< L. strenuita(t)-s, nimbleness, friskness, < strenuus, quick, active, vigorous: see strenuous.]

Strenuousness.

About in the see
No Prince was of better strenuities.
Hakluyt's Voyages, I. 206.

strenuosity (stren-ū-os'ī-ti), n. [< strenuous + -ity.] 1. The state or character of being strenuous; strenuousness.—2. A strained effort, or a straining for effect, as in a literary composition.

Strenuosity in style is not quite the same thing as strength.
The Academy, Jan. 30, 1886, p. 73.

strenuous (stren-ū-us), a. [< L. strenuus, quick, active, brisk, vigorous; cf. Gr. στερεός, firm, hard, στρενός, strong.] 1. Strong; vigorous; active; pushing.

His whose strenuous tongue
Can burst Joy's grape against his palate flux.
Keats, McLacholoy.

2. Eagerly pressing or urgent; energetic; zealous; ardent; bold; earnest; valiant; intrepid.

To strenuous minds there is an inquietude in overquickness.
Sir T. Browne, Christ. Mor., i. 33.

This scheme encountered strenuous opposition in the council.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vi.

3. Necessitating vigor or energy; accompanied by labor or exertion.

What more oft, in nations grown corrupt,
Than to love bondage more than liberty,
Bondage with ease than strenuous liberty.
Milton, S. A., l. 271.

Worldlings revelling in the fields Of strenuous idleness. Wordsworth, Memory.

=Syn. 1 and 2. Energetic, resolute.

strenuously (stren-ū-us-ly), adv. In a strenuous manner; with eager and pressing zeal; ardently; boldly; vigorously; actively.

strenuousness (stren-ū-us-ness), n. The state or character of being strenuous; eagerness; earnestness; active zeal.

strepit, v. An old spelling of strepit.

strepit (strep'it), a. [< L. strepitus, ppr. of strepere, make a noise, rumble, murmur.] Noisy; loud. [Rare.]

Peace to the strepit horn.
Shenstone, Rural Elegance.

Strepera (strep'e-rā), n. [NL. (Lesson, 1831). < L. strepere, make a noise.] An Australian genus of corvine passerine birds, typical of the subfamily Streptopneuste, having long wings and naked nostrils. Also called Coronea (Gould, 1837). There are 7 species, commonly called crow-shrikes, of a black, blackish brown, or gray color, more or less varied with white or rufous. The type is Corvus graculina of White, the noisy roller of Latham, Coracias or Gracula or Baritta strepera of various authors, now Strepera graculina. It is glossy black, with the base of the tail and an alar speculum white, the iris yellow. The length is 11 inches. S. crinita, arguta, intermedia, curvicauda (or anaphoneura; see squealer), melanocephala, and fuliginosa are the other species.

Corvus (Strepera) graculina.

streperine (strep'e-rin), a. [< Strepera + -in.] Of or pertaining to birds of the genus Strepera.

streperous (strep'e-rus), a. [< L. strepere, make a noise, rumble, murmur, + -ous. Cf. obstreperous.] Noisy; loud; boisterous. [Rare.]

In a streperous eruption it [the bay or laurel] riseth against fire.
Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., II. 6.

strophotome (strep'ō-tōm), n. [< Gr. στρεφω, twist, turn, + -tome, < τέμνω, ταμίω, cut.] A cork-screw-like needle used in an operation for the radical cure of inguinal hernia.

Streptiores (strep-i-tō-rēz), n. pl. [NL., pl. of streptior, < L. strepere, make a noise: see strepit.] A group of inessorial birds, established by Blyth in 1849 for those Cuvierian Passerine which are non-passerine, and primarily divided into Syndactyli, Zygodactyli, and Heterodactyli. See these words.

strepitoso (strep-i-tō-sō), adv. [It., < strepito, noise, < L. strepitus, noise: see strepitous.] In music, in an impetuous, boisterous, noisy manner.

strepitously (strep'i-tus), a. [< L. strepitus, noise, < strepere, make a noise: see strepit.] Noisy.

strepsicere (strep'si-sēr), n. [< strepsiceros.]

An antelope with twisted horns; a strepsiceros.

strepsiceros (strep-sis'e-ros), n. [NL., < L. strepsiceros, < Gr. στρεψικέρος, an animal with twisted horns, called by the Africans addax.]

1. Some antelope with twisted horns, as the koodoo; originally, perhaps, the addax.—2.

[cap.] [NL. (Hamilton Smith, 1827).] A genus of antelopes with twisted or spiral horns.

The only species now left in the genus is S. kudu, the koodoo. See cut under koodoo.

Strepsilas (strep'si-las), n. [NL. (Illiger, 1811),

< Gr. στρέψω, a turning round, < στρέφω (aor. στρέψαι), twist, turn, + -ilas, -laas, a stone.] The typical genus of a subfamily Strepsilaine; the turnstones. The bill is short, constricted at the base, tapering to a sharp point, with ascending gony longer than the mandibular ramus, short and broad nasal fossae, and short shallow grooves in the under mandible. The legs are short and stout, with the tarsus scutellate in front and reticulate on the sides and back, and four toes, cleft to the base. There are 2 species—S. interpres, the common turnstone, and S. melanoccephalus of the North Pacific, the black-headed turnstone, perhaps only a variety of the other. The genus was also called Cinclus, Arenaria, and Vorinilla. See cuts under Prostroctes and turn- strepsipter (strep-sip'tēr), n. [< NL. Strepsiptera.] A member of the Strepsiptera.

Strepsiptera (strep-sip'te-rā), n. pl. [NL.,

neut. pl. of strepsipterus: see strepsipterous.]

1. An order of insects, named by Kirby in 1833 from the twisted wings, synonymous with Rhip- iptera of Latreille, and corresponding to the family Stylopidae. The fore wings are mere twisted filaments or pseudelytra, the hind wings are expansive and fan-shaped, the females are wingless. The strepsipters are parasitic on hymenopterous insects, especially bees and wasps. They are now regarded as anomalous

Coleoptera degraded by parasitism. See cut under Stylops.

2. In Gegenbaur's system of classification, a family of neuropterous insects, forming with

Phryganida the suborder Trichoptera.

strepsipteral (strep-sip'te-rāl), a. [< strepsip- terous + -al.] Same as strepsipterous.

strepsipteran (strep-sip'te-rān), n. and a. [<

NL. Strepsiptera + -an.] I. n. A strepsipter.

II. a. Same as strepsipterous.

strepsipterous (strep-sip'te-rus), a. [< NL.

strepsipterus, < Gr. στρέψω (aor. στρέψαι), twist,

turn, + -ptēr, a wing.] Having twisted front wings, as a stylops; of or pertaining to the Strepsiptera; rhipipterous. Also strepsipteran, strepsipteral. See cut under Stylops.

strepsirrhinal, strepsirrhine (strep-si-rī'- nāl), a. [< strepsirrhine + -al.] Same as streps- irrhine.

strepsirrhine, strepsirrhine (strep'si-rin), a.

and n. [< NL. strepsirrhinus, < Gr. στρέψω (aor.

στρέψαι), turn, twist, + -rhīn, a nose.] I. a.

Having twisted or curved nostrils, as a lemur;

of or pertaining to the Strepsirrhini; neither catarrhine nor platyrrhine, as a primate. Also strepsirrhine.

II. n. Any lemur or prosimian; a member of the Strepsirrhini.

Strepsirrhini, Strepsirhini (strep-si-rī'-ni), n.

pl. [NL. (Geoffroy); see strepsirrhine.] The lemuroid mammals, or lemurs: so called from the twisted nostrils, in distinction from Catarr- hini and Platyrrhini. In these animals the nostrils are at the corners of the snout, and somewhat comma-shaped, as is usual in mammals, instead of having the more human character of those of the higher Primates. The term is exactly synonymous with Prosimia or Lemuroidea, excepting that in early usages of all three of these names of lemurs the so-called flying-lemurs (Galeopithecidae) were wrongly included, these being insectivorous and not primate mammals, now having been excluded from the strepsirrhines. Also Strepsirrhina, Strepsirrhina, and Strepsirrhina.

Streptanthus (strep-tan'thus), n. [NL. (Nuttall, 1825), so called from the greatly twisted claws of the petals; < Gr. στρεπτός, twisted (<

στρέφω, twist, turn), + -anthos, flower.] A genus of polypetalous plants, of the order Cruciferae and tribe Arabideae, distinguished from the type-genus Arabis by a calyx commonly of large size, longer and sometimes connate stamens, and petals usually borne on a twisted claw.

There are about 16 species, natives of North America, and chiefly of the western United States. They are smooth annuals or perennials, with entire or lyrate leaves and commonly bractless flowers, which are purple or sometimes white or yellow, and in some species pendulous. S. ob- tusifolia, a pink-flowered species, has been called Arkan- sax cabbage.

streptobacteria (strep'tō-bak-tē-ri-ā), n. pl.

[NL., < Gr. στρεπτός, twisted, + NL. bacterium.]

A supposed bacterium, consisting of a chain of short rod-formed bacteria linked together. Ziegler, Pathol. Anat. (trans.), i. 185.

Streptocarpus (strep-tō-kār'pus), n. [NL.

(Lindley, 1828), so called from the spirally twisted fruit; < Gr. στρεπτός, twisted, + καρπός, fruit.] A genus of gamopetalous plants, of the order Gesneraceae, tribe Cyrtandree, and sub-tribe Didymocarpeae. It is characterized by flowers with an elongated corolla-tube which is much enlarged above, and contains two perfect stamens and a linear ovary imperfectly four-celled by the protrusion of lobed placentae densely covered on their margins with ovules, and becoming a spirally twisted capsule which is linear and terete and splits into valves coherent at the base and apex. There are about 19 species, natives of South Africa and of Madagascar. They are woolly or downy herbs, chiefly with spreading radical leaves or with a single leaf

(a persistent cotyledon), sometimes with a stem bearing opposite leaves. The handsome flowers are mostly pale purple or blue; they form a many-flowered cyme, or are borne few or singly upon their peduncle. S. Dunnii, a remarkable species from the Transvaal mountains, is cultivated for its peculiar solitary grayish-green leaf, prostrate on the ground and over 3 feet long, with thick fleshy veins and clothed beneath with close reddish down, and for its bright-red tubular decurved flowers, of which there are sometimes over one hundred on a scape at once.

Several other species are in cultivation under glass, especially S. Watsoni, a hybrid with several large leaves and rich crimson flowers, and S. Rezii, with blue flowers.

They are known as Cape primrose.

streptococchemia, streptococchæmia (strep'- tō-ko-kē'mi-ā), n. [NL., < streptococci +

Gr. αἷμα, blood.] The presence of streptococci in the blood.

streptococci (strep-tō-kok'si), n. pl. [NL., <

Gr. στρεπτός, twisted, + κόκκος, a berry.] A chain of micrococci linked together, occurring in some specific diseases. Ziegler, Pathol. Anat.

(trans.), i. 185.

Streptoneura (strep-tō-nū'rā), n. pl. [NL.,

neut. pl. of streptoneurus: see streptoneurous.]

A branch of anisopleurous Gastropoda, in which the long loop of visceral nerves embracing the intestine is caught and twisted into a figure-of-8 by the torsion which the animal undergoes in its development. The Streptoneura are divided into two orders, Zygobranchia and Azygobranchia. They include all the anisopleurous gastropods except the opis-thobranchs and pulmonifers. The nearest synonym is Prosobranchiata.

streptoneural (strep-tō-nū'rāl), a. [< strepto- neurous + -al.] Same as streptoneurous.

streptoneurous (strep-tō-nū'rūs), a. [< NL.

streptoneurus, < Gr. στρεπτός, twisted, + νῆρον,

a nerve.] Having twisted (visceral) nerves;

specifically, pertaining to the Streptoneura, or having their characters.

Streptopus (strep'tō-pus), n. [NL. (F. A. Michaux, 1803), so called from the abruptly bent flower-stalk; < Gr. στρεπτός, twisted, + ποῖς = E.

foot.] A genus of monocotyledonous plants, of the order Liliaceae and tribe Polygonateae. It is characterized by nodding solitary or twin axillary flowers, divided into six more or less spreading segments, with a filiform or columnar style which is three-cleft at the apex.

There are 4 species, natives of Europe, North America, and temperate parts of Asia. They are rather delicate plants, from a short and densely fiber-bearing or a creeping root-stock, with a simple or sparingly branched stem, bearing numerous ovate or lanceolate alternate sessile or clasping leaves. The small rose-colored or whitish flowers hang upon slender recurved or reflexed peduncles, followed by small roundish berries with numerous pale oblong or curving striate seeds. They are known by the name

twisted-stalk, translating the genus name. S. amplexifolius is found in Europe, and, together with S. roseus, in northern North America, and southward in the mountains.

streptospondylia (strep'tō-spon-dil'i-ān), a.

Same as streptospondylous.

streptospondylous (strep-tō-spon-di-lus), a.

dia and Sauria (including Amphisbæna). Stan-nius, 1856.

Streptothrix (strep' tō-thriks), n. [NL. (F. Cohn), < Gr. σπειρώς, twisted, + ὄψις, the hair.] A genus standing probably intermediate between the bacteria and the fungi proper. It comprises very minute, colorless, branching filaments, growing in interlacing masses like the mycelium of fungi. S. foersteri was found by Cohn in the concretions of the lacrymal canals of the eye.

stress<sup>1</sup> (stres), v. t. [OF. estreccier, estressier, estrechier, estroyssier, etc., straiten, contract, < ML. as if **strictiare*, < L. strictus, pp. of stringere, draw together, compress: see stringent, strain<sup>1</sup>, strict. Cf. distress.] 1. To straiten; constrain; press; urge; hamper. [Rare.]

If the magistrate be so stressed that he cannot protect those that are pious and peaceable, the Lord help.
Waterhouse, Apol. for Learning, p. 155. (Latham.)

2. In mech., to subject to a stress.

The theory of elastic solids . . . shows that when a solid is stressed the state of stress is completely determined when the amount and direction of the three principal stresses are known. Thomson and Tait, Nat. Phil., § 832.

3. To lay the stress, emphasis, or accent on; emphasize.

If he had eased his heart in stressing the first syllable, it was only temporary relief.
G. Meredith, The Egoist, xviii.

stress<sup>1</sup> (stres), n. [< stress<sup>1</sup>, v.] 1. Constraining, urging, or impelling force; constraining power or influence; pressure; urgency; violence.

By stress of weather driven,
At last they lauded. Dryden, Æneid, i. 503.

2. In mech., an elastic force, whether in equilibrium with an external force or not; the force called into play by a strain. This word was introduced into mechanics by Rankine in 1855. In the following year Sir William Thomson used the word as synonymous with pressure, or an external force balanced by elastic forces. The terminology has been further confused by the use of Rankine's word strain, by Thomson and others, as a synonym for deformation. The words stress and strain are needed in the senses originally given to them by Rankine; while they both have familiar equivalents to which they have been wrested. At present, some writers use them in one way and some in the other.

In this paper the word strain will be used to denote the change of volume and figure constituting the deviation of a molecule of a solid from that condition which it preserves when free from the action of external forces; and the word stress will be used to denote the force, or combination of forces, which such a molecule exerts in tending to recover its free condition, and which, for a state of equilibrium, is equal and opposite to the combination of external forces applied to it.

Rankine, Axes of Elasticity, § 2.

It will be seen that I have deviated slightly from Mr. Rankine's definition of the word stress, as I have applied it to the direct action experienced by a body from the matter around it, and not, as proposed by him, to the elastic reaction of the body equal and opposite to that action.
Thomson, Phil. Trans., CLXVI. 457.

3. Stretch; strain; effort.

Though the faculties of the mind are improved by exercise, yet they must not be put to a stress beyond their strength. Locke, Conduct of the Understanding, xxviii.

4. Weight; importance; special force or significance; emphasis.

Consider how great a stress he laid upon this duty, . . . and how earnestly he recommended it. Bp. Atterbury.

This, on which the great stress of the business depends.
Locke. (Johnson.)

So rare the sweep, so nice the art,
That lays no stress on any part

Lowell, Appledore.

5. The relative loudness with which certain syllables or parts of syllables are pronounced; emphasis in utterance; accent; ictus. In elocution, initial, opening, or radical stress is stress or emphasis at the beginning; medial or median stress is that in the middle; and close, final, or ramishing stress is stress at the end of a vowel-sound. The union of initial and final is compound stress, that of all three stresses is thorough stress.

—Anticlastic stress. See anticlastic. —Axis of a stress, one of three mutually perpendicular lines meeting at any point of a body in which a given stress tends to produce only elongation or contraction, without any tangential action. —Center of stress. See center<sup>1</sup>. —Close stress. See def. 5. —Composition of stresses. See composition of displacements, under composition. —Compound stress. See def. 5. —Concurrent stress and strain. See concurrent. —Final stress. See def. 5. —Homogeneous stress, in mech., a stress which affects alike all similar and similarly turned portions of matter within the boundary within which the stress is said to be homogeneous. —Initial stress. See def. 5. —Lateral stress. See lateral. —Medial, median stress. See def. 5. —Normal stress, a stress such that its tendency to change the relative positions of two parts of a solid always acts along the normals to the surface separating those parts. Such a stress consists of three extensive or compressive stresses along three rectangular axes — Orthogonal stress. (a) Relatively to a homogeneous strain, a stress which neither increases nor diminishes the work of producing that strain. (b) Relatively to another stress, a stress orthogonal to a strain perfectly concurrent with the other stress. — Perfectly concurrent stress. (a) Relatively to another stress, a stress equal to that other multiplied by a real number. (b) Relatively to an infinitesimal homogeneous strain, a stress such that, if the strain be so compounded with a rotation as to produce a pure strain, the motions of the particles upon the surface of a sphere relatively to its center represent in magnitude and direction the components of the stress. — Principal tension of a stress, a component of the stress along one of its axes. — Radical stress. See def. 5. — Shearing stress, a stress tending to produce a shear. — Storm and stress. See storm. — Synclastic stress, a stress upon a plate tending to give it a positive curvature. — Tangential stress, a stress such that its tendency to change the relative positions of two parts of a solid always acts along the tangents to the surface separating those parts. Such a stress consists of three shearing stresses having orthogonal axes. — The principal axes of stress. See axis<sup>1</sup>. — Thorough stress. See def. 5. — Type of a stress. See type. — Vanishing stress, an increasing loudness toward the end of a vowel-sound, producing the effect of a jerk. See def. 5. — Syn. 5. Accent, etc. See emphasis.

stress<sup>2</sup> (stres), n. [< stress<sup>1</sup>, v. In part an aphetic form of distress, q. v.] 1. Distress; difficulty; extremity; pinch. [Obsolete or archaic.]

And help the pure that ar in stres
Opprest and heretill mercyles.
Lauder, Dewtie of Kyngis (L. E. T. S.), i. 460.

The agony and stress
Of pitying love. Whittier, The Two Rabbits.

2. In law: (a) The act of distraining; distress. (b) A former mode of taking up indictments for circuit courts.

stress-diagram (stres'di'ā-gram), n. See diagram.

stressless (stres'les), a. [< stress<sup>1</sup> + -less.] Without stress; specifically, unaccented. Encyc. Brit., XVIII. 788.

stress-sheet (stres'shēt), n. In bridge-building, same as strain-sheet.

stretch (streich), v. [< ME. streccen (also unassimilated strecken, whence mod. E. dial. streck, strack, var. strake) (pret. straughte, straht, strakte, stredhte, **streighte*, streigte, streichte, strecht, pp. straught, straugt, streight, streigt, strecht), < AS. streccan (pret. strechte, pp. strecht) = OFries. strecka = D. strecken = MLG. strecken = OHG. streccen, MHG. G. strecken = Sw. sträcka = Dan. strække, draw out, stretch; connected with the adj. AS. stræc, strec, strong, violent (lit. stretched?), = MHG. strac (strack-), G. strack, straight; √ strak, perhaps orig. √ **srak*, a var. of √ rak in retch<sup>2</sup>, reck, reach<sup>1</sup>; otherwise akin to L. stringere, pp. strictus, draw tight (see stringent, strain<sup>1</sup>, strait<sup>1</sup>), and to Gr. σπένδω, twisted tight. Hence straight<sup>1</sup>, orig. pp. of stretch. Connection with string, strong<sup>1</sup>, etc., is uncertain.] I. trans. 1. To draw (out); pull (out).

But stert vp stithly, straught out a swerde.
Destruction of Troy (L. E. T. S.), i. 1240.

2. To draw out to full length; extend; expand; spread: as, to stretch one's self; to stretch the wings; to stretch one's legs; hence, sometimes, to tighten; make tense or taut.

Redd, of your rízt arm that ouer rome streyt,
I se wel the signiffaunce
William of Palerne (L. E. T. S.), i. 2057.

I have stretched my legs up Tottenham Hill to overtake you.
T. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 43.

3. To extend, or cause to reach or extend, lengthwise, or between specified points: as, to stretch a rope from one point to another.

My wings shall be Stretch'd out no further then from thee to thee.
Quarles, Emblems, iii. 12.

Phœnicia is stretched by some . . . even to Egypt, all alongst that Sea-coast. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 95.

A clothes-line with some clothes on it . . . is stretched between the trunks of some stunted willows.
Ruskin, Elements of Drawing, iii.

4. To draw out or extend in any direction by the application of force; draw out by tensile stress: as, to stretch cloth; to stretch a rubber band beyond its strength.

My business and that of my wife is to stretch new boots for millionaires.
Harper's Mag., LXXVIII. 623.

5. To distend or expand forcibly or violently; strain by the exercise of force; subject to stress, literally or figuratively.

Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout blood.
Shak., T. and C., iv. 5. 10.

They that stretch his infallibility further do they know not what.
Selden, Table-Talk, p. 86.

6. To extend or strain too far; impair by straining; do violence to; exaggerate: as, to stretch the truth. — 7. To exert; strain.

Till my veins
And sinews crack, I'll stretch my utmost strength.
Beau. and Fl. (3), Faithful Friends, iii. 3.

Stretching their best abilities to express their loues.

Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, I. 182.

8. To reach or hold out; put forth; extend.

He drough oute a letter that was wrapped in a cloth of silke, and straught it to the kynge.

Merlin (E. E. T. S.), iii. 639.

Stretch thine hand unto the poor. Ecclus. vii. 32.

9. To cause to lie or fall extended at full length: as, to stretch an opponent on the ground by a blow. — 10. To hang. [Slang.]

The night before Larry was stretched.

J. Burrows, in Prout's Reliques, p. 267.

To stretch a point. Same as to strain a point (which see, under point<sup>1</sup>).

II. intrans. 1. To extend; reach; be continuous over a distance; be drawn out in length or in breadth, or both; spread.

Twenty fadme of brede the armes straughte.

Chaucer, Knight's Tale, i. 2058.

The town stretcheth along the bottom of the haven, back on the West with a rocky mountain.

Sandys, Travailles, p. 10.

2. To be extended or to bear extension without breaking, as elastic substances; attain greater length: literally or figuratively.

The inner membrane, . . . because it would stretch and yield, remained unbroken.

Boyle.

The terms . . . must be very elastic if they would stretch widely enough to include all the poems.

O. W. Holmes, Emerson, xiv.

3. To go beyond the truth; exaggerate. [Colloq.]

What an alay do we find to the credit of the most probable event that is reported by one who uses to stretch!

Government of the Tongue.

4. Naut., to sail by the wind under all sail.

5. To make violent efforts in running. — Stretching convulsions, tetanic convulsions which, acting through the extensor muscles, straighten the limbs. — Stretch out! an order to a boat's crew to pull hard.

stretch (streich), n. [< stretch, v.] 1. A stretching or straining, especially a stretching or straining beyond measure: as, a stretch of authority.

A great and sudden stretch or contortion.

May, Works of Creation, p. 257.

It is only by a stretch of language that we can be said to desire that which is inconceivable.

W. K. Clifford, Lectures, I. 229.

2. A state of tension; strain: as, to be on the stretch.

Those put a lawful authority upon the stretch, to the abuse of power, under the colour of prerogative.

Sir R. L'Estrange.

3. Reach; extent; scope.

At all her stretch her little wings she spread.

Dryden, tr. of Ovid's Metamorph., Ceyx and Alcyone, l. 482.

This is the utmost stretch that Nature can,

And all beyond is fulsome, false, and vain.

Granville, Unnatural Flights in Poetry.

It strains my faculties to their highest stretch.

Swift, Tale of a Tub, ix.

4. A long tract; an extended or continued surface or area, relatively narrow; a reach; distance; sweep: as, a long stretch of country road; a great stretch of grassy land; a stretch of moorland.

The grass, here and there, is for great stretches as smooth and level as a carpet.

H. James, Jr., Trans. Sketches, p. 147.

5. One of the two straight sides of a race-course, as distinguished from the bend or curve at each end. The home-stretch is that part of the course which the contestant goes over after passing the last curve just before completing the race.

6. Naut., the reach or extent of progress on one tack; a tack. — 7. In weaving: (a) The plot of ground on which a weaver stretches his warp. (b) The length of spun-yarn between the spindles and roller-beam, which is wound upon the spindles each time the carriage is run toward the roller-beam. Also called draw. Spons' Encyc. Manuf., i. 760. — 8. A single continued effort; one uninterrupted sitting, diet, shift, turn, or the like: as, to work ten hours at a stretch.

She could not entertain the child long on a stretch.

Bulwer, Night and Morning, ii. 8.

But all of them left me a week at a stretch to attend the county fair.

The Century, XXVIII. 555.

9. A year's imprisonment or punishment. [Thieves' slang.] — 10. Course; direction: as, the stretch of seams of coal. — 11. Stride; bound, as of a running animal. Gay.

stretcher (streich'ēr), n. [< stretch + -er<sup>1</sup>.] 1. One who or that which stretches or expands. Specifically — (a) A tool for stretching the fingers of leather gloves, that they may be put on more easily. (b) In shoemaking, same as shoe-stretcher. (c) A frame, composed of four pieces of wood, upon which painters' canvases drawn light. By driving small wedges in at the angles the tension is increased. (d) One of the rods in an umbrella attached at one end to one of the ribs, and at the other to the tube sliding upon the handle. (e) In a vehicle, a jointed rod which when extended expands the carriage-bows, and thus spreads the hood or cover. (f) A short piece of wood placed in the end of a hammock to extend it.

2. In masonry, a brick or stone laid horizontally with its length in the direction of the face of the wall, as distinguished from a header, which is laid lengthwise across the thickness of the wall, so that its small end or end is seen in the external face of the wall. See cut under inbond.—3. One of the cylindrical rails between the legs of a chair; a round. E. H. Knight.—4. In cabinet-making, a low shelf serving as a brace or stay to the legs of a table, and roomy enough to hold a vase, a basket of flowers, or other ornament.—5. In carp., a tie-timber in a frame.—6. Naut., a narrow piece of plank placed across a boat for the rowers to set their feet against; also, a cross-piece placed between a boat's sides to keep them apart when the boat is hoisted up and gripped.—7. A light, simple litter, without inclosure or top, upon which a dead body or a wounded person can be carried; so called because generally composed of canvas stretched on a frame, or because the body is stretched out upon it. Such frames, covered with canvas, are often used as beds, as in camping.—8. A flat board on which corpses are stretched or laid out preparatory to coffining.—9. In angling: (a) The leader at the extreme end of the line. (b) The tail-fly; the fly that is fastened to the cast called the stretcher; a stretcher-fly. See tail-fly (under fly) and skip.—10. A statement which over-stretches the truth; a lie. [Colloq.]—11. In carriage-building, same as strainer, 4.

stretcher-bond (stretch'ér-bond), n. A method of building in which bricks or stones are laid lengthwise in contiguous courses, the joints of one coming at half length of the bricks or stones in the other. See cuts under bond.

stretcher-fly (stretch'ér-fly), n. The fly on the stretcher of a casting-line, at the extreme end.

stretcher-mule (stretch'ér-mul), n. In cotton-manuf., a mule which stretches and twists fine rovings, advancing them a stage toward finishing. L. H. Knight.

stretcher-halter (stretch'hál'tér), n. [< stretch, r., + obj. halter.] One who ought to be hanged; a scoundrel. Also crack-rop, rag-halter, etc.

"Stand, look here, look here, I know this is the shop, by that same stretch-halter."
Henry, If you know not me (Works, ed. 1874), I. 234.

stretching-frame (stretch'ing-frám), n. 1. In cotton-manuf., a machine for stretching rovings previous to spinning them into yarn.—2. A frame on which stretched fabrics are stretched to dry. It is sometimes arranged so that the direction of the tension can be changed in order to give the fabric a soft and elastic finish.

stretching-iron (stretch'ing-í-ern), n. In leather-manuf.: (a) A carrier's tool for stretching carried leather, smoothing the surface, removing rough places, and raising the bloom. It consists of a flat piece of metal or stone set in a handle. (b) Same as softening-iron.

stretching-machine (stretch'ing-má-shén), n. Any machine by which some material is stretched; specifically, a machine in which cotton goods and other textile fabrics are stretched, to lay all their warp- and woof-yarns truly parallel.

stretching-piece (stretch'ing-pés), n. See strut.

stretchy (stretch'i), a. [< stretch + -y.] 1. Liable to stretch unduly.

A workman with a true eye can often counteract stretchy stock.
Harper's Mag., LXX 232.

2. Inclined to stretch one's self: a consequence of fatigue or sleepiness. [Colloq. in both uses.]

But in the night the pup would get stretchy and brace his feet against the old man's back and shove, grunting complacently the while. S. L. Clemens, Roughing It, xxvii.

stretta (stret'ti), n.; pl. strette (-te). [It., fem. of stretto, drawn tight; see strait, strict.] Same as stretto.

stretto (stret'to), n.; pl. stretti (-ti). [It., < L. strictus, drawn tight; see strait, strict.] In music: (a) In a fugue, that division in which the entrances of the answer are almost immediately after those of the subject, so that the two overlap, producing a rapidly cumulative effect. The stretto properly follows the "working out." When a stretto is constructed in strict canon, it is sometimes called a stretto musicale or magistrale. (b) In dramatic music, a quickening of the tempo at the end of a movement for the sake of climax.

strew (strö or strō), v.; pret. strewed, pp. strowed or strown, ppr. strowing. [Also archaically strow, formerly or dial. also strow; < ME. strewen, strewen, strowen, < AS. strewian, also strowian, **strewian* (Somner) = OS. strewian, strowian = OFries. strewa = D. strooien = OHG. strewen, MHG. ströwen, strowen, G. streuen = Icel. strá = Sw. Dan. strö = Goth. straujan (pret. strawida), > It. strajare, stretch, strew; cf. O.Bulg. stretl, strew, < L. sternere (pret. stravi, pp. stratus), scatter (see stratum), = Gr. σπορῖναι, σπαρῖναι, strow, scatter, = Skt. √ star, scatter. The relation of the Tent. to the variant L. and Gr. roots is not wholly clear. Hence ult. strawl, n. The three pronunciations strö, strō, strā are due to the instability of the AS. vowel or diphthong before w, and its wavering in ME.] 1. trans. 1. To scatter; spread loosely: said of dry, loose, separable things: as, to strew seed in beds; to strew sand on the floor; to strew flowers over a grave.

I had hem strowe floures on my bed.
Chaucer, Good Women (1st version), l. 101.

And a very great multitude spread their garments in the way, others cut down branches from the trees, and strowed [spread, R. V.] them in the way. Mat. xxi. 8.

2. To cover in spots and patches here and there, as if by sprinkling or casting loosely about.

And they made suche martire that all the felde was strowed full of deved men and horse.
Melton (E. E. T. S.), II. 291.

Forerun fair Love, strewing her way with flowers.
Shak., L. L. L., iv. 3. 230.

3. To spread abroad; give currency to.

He may strew
Dangerous conjectures in all-breeding minds.
Shak., Hamlet, iv. 5. 14.

strewing (strö'ing or strō'ing), n. [Verbal n. of strew, v.] Anything strewed, or suitable to be strewed (for some special purpose).

The herbs that have on them the cold dew of the night
Are strewing flowers for graves.
Shak., Cymbeline, iv. 2. 285.

strewment (strö'ment or strō'ment), n. [< strew + -ment.] The act of strowing, or something strown.—Maiden strewments. See maiden.

strown (strom or strom), n. A past participle of strew.

stretyet. A Middle English spelling of strait.

stria (stri'a), n.; pl. striae (-i). [= F. strie, < L. stria a furrow, channel, hollow.] 1. In anat., zool., and bot., a stripe or streak; a line, or linear marking, whether of elevation or depression—as a ridge or a furrow—or of texture or color. See cuts under brain, muscle, and Diatomaceae.

—2. In arch., a hollow between the flutes of columns, pilasters, and the like.—3. In pathol., a linear hemorrhagic incision.—4. An imperfection in the form of a streak or band, whether a discoloration or an irregularity of structure, especially in glass.—5. pl. In elect., the peculiar stratifications of the light observed in vacuum-tubes (Geissler tubes) upon the passage of an electrical discharge.—Confluent, dilated, distinct striae. See the adjectives.—Dislocated stria. See dislocate.—Glacial stria, nearly parallel lines, varying in depth and coarseness, engraved on rock surfaces by the passage of ice in which fragments of rock are embedded. See glaciation, 3.—Oblique, scutellar, etc., striae. See the adjectives.—Stria acustica, transverse white lines, more or less apparent, on the floor of the fourth ventricle, arising close to the middle line, and curving outward over the restiform bodies to the nucleus accessorius of the auditory nerve. Also called linea transversa, stria medullaris.—Striae musculares, the transverse striae or stripes of striped muscular fiber. See cut under muscle.—Stria lateralis, a lateral stria on the surface of the corpus callosum, running lengthwise on either side of the stria longitudinalis.—Stria longitudinalis, stria lanceoli. Same as nerve of Lancisi (which see, under nerve).—Stria medullaris thalami, a band of white fibers running backward along the junction of the median and superior surfaces of the thalamus to end in the habenular ganglion.

strial (stri'al), a. [< stria + -al.] Of the nature of striae; marked by striae. Amer. Jour. Sci., XXXI 135. [Rare.]

striate (stri'at), a. [= F. strié, < L. striatus, pp. of strare, furrow, channel, < stria, a furrow, channel, hollow: see stria.] 1. Striped or streaked; marked with striae; scored with fine lines; striped, as muscle; striated.—2. Having a thread-like form.

Des Cartes imagines this earth once to have been a sun, and so the centre of a lesser vortex, whose axis still kept the same posture, by reason of the striate particles finding no fit pores for their passages but only in this direction.
Ray.

striate (stri'at), v. t.; pret. and pp. striated, ppr. striating. [< L. striatus, pp. of strare (> F. strier), furrow, channel, < stria, a furrow, channel: see stria.] To mark with striae; cause striation in; score; strip. Nature, XXX. 23.

striation (stri'at), n. [< striate, v. t.] The act of striating, or the state of being striated; a striate condition or appearance; striature; also, one of a set of striae; a stria.—2. In geol., grooves, flutings, and scratches made on the surfaces of rocks by the passage over them of bodies of ice: a result frequently observed along the sides of existing glaciers, and in regions which were formerly occupied by ice.—3. In mineral., fine parallel lines on a crystalline face, commonly due to the oscillatory combination of two crystalline forms.

striatopunctate (stri'at-tō-pungk'tāt), a. Same as striate-punctate.

striatum (stri'at-tum), n.; pl. striata (-ti). [L. striatum (se. corpus), neut. of striatus, streaked: see stria.] The great ganglion of the fore-brain: more fully called corpus striatum.

striature (stri'a-tür), n. [< L. striatura, condition of being furrowed or channelled, < striare, pp. striatus, furrow, channel: see stria.] Disposition of striae; mode of striation; striation; also, a stria.

stricht, n. [Irreg. < L. strix (strig-), a screech-owl.] A screech-owl.

The ruefull strich, still waiting on the here.
Spenser, F. Q., II. xli. 30.

strick (strik), n. [A var. of strike. Cf. strickle.] 1. A flat piece of wood for leveling grain in a measure; a strickle.

A strichill; a stricke: a long and round piece of wood like a rolling plane (with us it is flat), whereas with measures are made even.
Nomenclator, (Nares)

24. A bushel measure.

One cheese-press, one collar, one strick, and one fourme [form].
Worcestershire Wills of 16th and 17th Cents., [quoted in N. and Q., 7th ser., X. 369.]

3. A handful or bunch of flax, jute, or other fiber, heckled and sorted, or ready to be heckled.

The heckler stakes a handful or strick of rough flax.
Encyc. Brit., XIV. 665.

—Striated fiber, striated muscular fiber, striated muscle, the striped fiber characteristic of the voluntary muscles, though also found in a few other red muscles which are involuntary, as those of the heart. See muscle.—Striated ipecacuanha. See ipecacuanha.—Striated sandpiper. See sandpiper.

striately (stri'at-li), adv. In a striate manner; with striae.

striate-plicate (stri'at-pli'kät), a. In bot., striate by reason of minute folds.

striate-punctate (stri'at-pungk'tät), a. In entom., having rows of punctures set in regular lines very close together, sometimes elongated or running into one another.

striate-sulcate (stri'at-sul'kät), a. In bot., striate with minute furrows.

striation (stri'at-shon), n. [< striate + -ion.] 1. The state of being striated; a striate condition or appearance; striature; also, one of a set of striae; a stria.—2. In geol., grooves, flutings, and scratches made on the surfaces of rocks by the passage over them of bodies of ice: a result frequently observed along the sides of existing glaciers, and in regions which were formerly occupied by ice.—3. In mineral., fine parallel lines on a crystalline face, commonly due to the oscillatory combination of two crystalline forms.

striatopunctate (stri'at-tō-pungk'tät), a. Same as striate-punctate.

striatum (stri'at-tum), n.; pl. striata (-ti). [L. striatum (se. corpus), neut. of striatus, streaked: see stria.] The great ganglion of the fore-brain: more fully called corpus striatum.

striature (stri'a-tür), n. [< L. striatura, condition of being furrowed or channelled, < striare, pp. striatus, furrow, channel: see stria.] Disposition of striae; mode of striation; striation; also, a stria.

stricht, n. [Irreg. < L. strix (strig-), a screech-owl.] A screech-owl.

The ruefull strich, still waiting on the here.
Spenser, F. Q., II. xli. 30.

strick (strik), n. [A var. of strike. Cf. strickle.] 1. A flat piece of wood for leveling grain in a measure; a strickle.

A strichill; a stricke: a long and round piece of wood like a rolling plane (with us it is flat), whereas with measures are made even.
Nomenclator, (Nares)

24. A bushel measure.

One cheese-press, one collar, one strick, and one fourme [form].
Worcestershire Wills of 16th and 17th Cents., [quoted in N. and Q., 7th ser., X. 369.]

3. A handful or bunch of flax, jute, or other fiber, heckled and sorted, or ready to be heckled.

The heckler stakes a handful or strick of rough flax.
Encyc. Brit., XIV. 665.

stricken (strik'n), p. a. [Pp. of strike, v.] 1. Struck; smitten: as, the stricken deer.—2. Advanced; far gone.

I chanced to espy this foresayde Peter talkyng with a certayne straunger, a man well stricken in age.
Sir T. More, Utopia (tr. by Robinson), p. 29.

Stricken hour, a whole hour, marked as completed by the striking of the clock.

He persevered for a stricken hour in such a torrent of unnecessary tattle.
Scott.

strickle (strikl'), n. [Early mod. E. also strikle, and assimilated stritchel, stritchell, stritchill, strichell; < ME. strikile, strykylle (= MD. strijckel, streckel, streckel), a strickle; dim. of strike.] 1. A straight-edge used to sweep grain off level with the top of a measure when measuring grain.—2. A wooden swingle for dressing flax.—3. In carp. and masonry, a pattern or template.—4. In foundry: (a) A straight-edge used to remove superfluous sand to a level with the top of a flask after ramming the sand into it. Compare loam-board. (b) A template or pattern used in sweeping patterns in sand or loam.—5. In cutlery, a straight-edge fed with emery, and employed to grind the edges of knives arranged spirally on a cylinder. E. H. Knight.

strickler (strikl'er), n. [Also striker; < strickle + -er.] A strickle or strike. Randle Holme, Aend. of Armory, p. 337. (Nares) strict (strikt), a. [= F. strict (OF. streit, etc.), < L. strictus, pp. of stringere, draw tight, bind, contract: see stringent, strain. Cf. strait, the older form of the same word.] 1. Drawn tight; tight; close: as, a strict ligature. Arbutnot.

[Loeal, Eng.]

The lustful god, with speedy pace,
Just thought to strain her in a strict embrace.
Dryden, tr. of Ovid's Metamorph., l. 970.

2. Tense; stiff: as, a strict or lax fiber.—3. Narrow; restricted; confined; strait. [Obsolete or archaic.]

Strict passage [the ear] through which sighs are brought, And whispers for the heart, their slave.
Wordsworth, Power of Sound, i.

4. Close; intimate.

There never was a more strict friendship than between those Gentlemen.
Steele, in A. Dobson's Selections from Steele, Int., p. xl.

5. Absolute; unbroken: as, strict silence.—6. Exact; accurate; careful; rigorously nice: as, words taken in their strictest sense; a strict command.

I wish I had not look'd
With such strict eyes into her follies.
Beau. and Fl., Thierry and Theodoret, i. 2.
And fall into deception unaware,
Not keeping strictest watch.
Milton, P. L., ix. 363.

7. Exacting; rigorous; severe; rigid: as, strict in keeping the Sabbath; a strict disciplinarian.

Within these ten days take a monastery,
A most strict house.
Beau. and Fl., Thierry and Theodoret, i. 1.
Not over-ruled by fate
Inextricable, or strict necessity.
Milton, P. L., v. 523.

Strict statutes and most biting laws.

Shak., M. for M., i. 3. 19.

8. Restricted; taken strictly, narrowly, or exclusively: as, a strict generic or specific diagnosis.—9. In zool., constricted; narrow or close; straitened; not loose or diffuse: as, the strict stem of some corals.—10. In bot., close or narrow and upright: opposed to lax: said of a stem or an inflorescence.—11. In music, regular; exactly according to rule; without liberties: as, a strict canon or fugue.—A strict hand, see hand.—Strict constructionist, counterpoint, cross-examination. See the nouns.—Strict creditor's bill. See creditor's action, under creditor.—Strict foreclosure, fugue, sense, etc. See the nouns.—Strict imitation. See imitation, 3.—Strict settlement, in law, a device in English conveying by which the title to landed estates is preserved in the family by conveying it in such manner that the father holds an estate for life and the eldest son a contingent or expectant estate in remainder, with interests also in other members of the family, so that usually only by the concurrence of father and son, and often of trustees also, can complete alienation be made.—Syn. 6. Close, scrupulous, critical.—7. Severe, rigorous, etc. See austere.

striction (strikt'shən), n. [L. strictio(n), a drawing or pressing together, < stringere, pp. strictus, draw tight, contract: see strict.] A drawing or pressing together.—Line of striction of a ruled surface, the locus of points on the generators of a ruled surface where each is nearest to the next consecutive generator.

strictland, n. [< strict + land: prob. suggested by island.] An isthmus. Halliwel. [Rare.]

strictly (strikt'li), adv. In a strict manner. (a) Narrowly; closely; carefully: as, the matter is to be strictly investigated. (b) Exactly; with nice or rigorous accuracy, exactness, or precision: as, strictly speaking, all men are not equal.

Horace hath but more strictly spoke our thoughts.
B. Jonson, Poetaster, v. 1.

(c) Positively; definitely; stringently.

Charge him strictly
Not to proceed, but wait my farther pleasure.
Dryden, Spanish Friar, III. 3.

(d) Rigorously; severely; without remission or indulgence; with close adherence to rule.

I wish those of my blood that do offend
Should be more strictly punish'd than my foes.
Beau. and Fl., Woman-Hater, iv. 1.

(e) Exclusively; out-and-out; thoroughly.

Cornwall . . . was a strictly British land, with a British nomenclature, and a British speech which lingered on into the last century.
E. A. Freeman, Amer. Lects., p. 149.

strictness (strikt'nes), n. The state or quality of being strict, in any sense.

stricture (strikt'chūr), n. [= F. stricture = It. strittura, < L. stricture, a contraction, < stringere, draw tight, contract: see strict. Cf. straiture.] 1†. A drawing tight; contraction; compression; binding.
Christ . . . came to knit the bonds of government faster by the stricture of more religious ties.
Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), i. 207.

2. In pathol., a morbid contraction of some mucous canal or duct of the body, as the esophagus, intestine, urethra, or vagina.—3†. Strictness.

A man of stricture and firm abstinence.
Shak., M. for M., i. 3. 12.

4. Sharp criticism; critical remark; censure.

I leave it [autobiography] wholly, both as to the matter and stile, to your emendations. . . . By your blots and strictures it may receive a beauty which of itself it had not.
J. Cotton, in Aubrey's Letters and Lives, i. 20.

5†. Mark; trace; evidence; sign.

The God of nature implanted in their vegetable natures certain passive strictures, or signatures, of that wisdom which hath made and ordered all things with the highest reason.
Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind, p. 46.

Cock's, Syme's, and Wheelhouse's operations for stricture. See operation.—Resilient, spasmodic, etc., stricture. See the adjectives. (See also stricture.)
stricture (strikt'chūr), a. [< stricture + -ed<sup>2</sup>.] Affected with stricture: as, a strictured duct.

strid. A preterit (obsolete) and past participle of stride.

striddle (strid'li), v.; pret. and pp. striddled, ppr. striddling. [Freq. of stride. Cf. straddle.] To straddle. [Prov. Eng.] stride (strid), v.; pret. strode (formerly also strid), pp. stridden or strid, ppr. striding. [< ME. striden (pret. strode, strood, strade), < AS. stridan (pret. strād, pp. striden), stride, = MD. striden, D. striden = MLG. striden (pret. streed), stride, strive, = OHG. stritan, MHG. striten, G. streiten = Dan. stride, strive, contend; also in weak form, OS. strithian = OFries. strida = Icel. stridha = Sv. strida, strive; orig. appar. contend, hence, in a particular use, go hastily, take long steps. Hence the comp. bestride and freq. striddle, also straddle, bestradle; and, through OF., strive and strife.] I. intrans. 1. To walk with long steps; step.

There was no Greke so grym, ne of so gret wille,
Durst abate on the buernes, ne to bonke stride;
Ne aforse hym with light to ferke out of ship.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), i. 5637.

Hell trembled as he strode.
Milton, P. L., ii. 676.

2. To stand with the feet far apart; straddle.

Because th' acute, and the rect-Angles too,
Stride not so wide as obtuse Angles doo.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, II., The Columns.
The arches, striding o'er the new-born stream.
Burns, Verses Written in Kenmore Inn.

Striding level, a spirit-level the frame of which carries at its two extremities inverted Y's below, so that it may be placed upon two concentric cylinders and straddle any small intervening projections. The striding level is a necessary adjunct of the transit-instrument when this is used for determining time, and is used in many leveling-instruments.

II. trans. 1. To pass over at a step: as, to stride a ditch.

Another, like an Embrian's sturdy Spouse,
Strides all the Space her Petticoat allows.
Congreve, tr. of Ovid's Art of Love, III.

2. To sit astride on; bestride; straddle; ride upon.

And p'ty, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast.
Shak., Macbeth, i. 7. 22.

stride (strid), n. [< stride, v.] 1. A step, especially one that is long, measured, or pompous; a wide stretch of the legs in walking.

Simplicity flies away, and iniquity comes at long strides upon us.
Sir T. Browne, Urn-Burial, Ded.

Her voice theatrically loud,
And masculine her stride.
Pope, Imit. of Earl of Dorset.

A lofty bridge, stepping from cliff to cliff with a single stride.
Longfellow, Hyperion, iii. 2.

2. The space measured or the ground covered by a long step, or between putting down one foot and raising the other.

Between them both was but a little stride,
That did the house of Richesse from hell-mouth divide.
Spenser, F. Q., II. vi. 24.

strident (stri'dent), a. [= F. strident = Sp. Pg. estridente = It. stridente, < L. strident(-t)-s, ppr. of stridere, give a harsh, shrill, or whistling sound, creak.]. Creaking; harsh; grating.

"Brava! brava!" old Steyne's strident voice was heard roaring over all the rest.
Thackeray, Vanity Fair, II.

stridently (stri'dent-li), adv. Creakingly; harshly; gratingly.

stridor (stri'dor), n. [L. < stridere, give a harsh, shrill, or whistling sound, creak: see strident.] A harsh, creaking noise.—Stridor dentium, grinding of the teeth: a common symptom during sleep in children affected with worms or other intestinal irritation. It occurs also in fevers as a symptom of irritation of the brain.

stridulant (strid'ū-lant), a. [*< NL. as if *stridulan*(-t)-s, ppr. of **stridulare*: see stridulate.] Strident or stridulous, as an insect; capable of stridulating; specifically, of or pertaining to the Stridulantiæ.

Stridulantiæ (strid'ū-lan'shi-jī), n. pl. [NL. (Burmeister, 1835): see stridulant.] A group of hemipterous insects, including various forms which have the faculty of stridulating; specifically, the cicadas. See Cicadidæ.

stridulate (strid'ū-lāt), v. i.; pret. and pp. stridulated, ppr. stridulating. [*< NL. as if *stridulatus*, pp. of **stridulare*, < L. stridulus, giving a shrill sound, creaking: see stridulous.] To make a stridulous noise, as an insect; effect stridulation, as the cicada; grate, scrape, or creak with the organs of stridulation; shrill; chirr.

stridulating-organ (strid'ū-lā-ting-ōr'gan), n. In entom., a finely wrinkled or file-like surface or plate, frequently having a pearly luster, by friction of which against another surface brought into contact with it a creaking sound is produced. These organs are variously situated on the wings, elytra, legs, abdomen, thorax, and even the head.

stridulation (strid'ū-lā'shən), n. [< stridulate + -ion.] The act, process, or function of stridulating; the power of so doing, or the thin, harsh, creaking noise thus produced; a shrilling. Stridulation is effected by rubbing together hard or rough parts of the body, often specially modified in various ways for that purpose, being thus not vocalization or phonation. It is highly characteristic of many homopterous insects, as the cicadas; of many orthopterous insects, as various locusts or grasshoppers; and of some coleopterous insects, or beetles. It rarely occurs in lepidopterous insects, but has been observed in some butterflies and moths, and also in a few spiders, as of the genus Theridion. Those homopterous insects in which it is specially marked are named Stridulantiæ.

stridulator (strid'ū-lā-tor), n. [< stridulate + -or.] An insect which stridulates, shrills, or chirrs; that which is stridulatory.

stridulatory (strid'ū-lā-tō-ri), a. [< stridulate + -ory.] Pertaining to stridulators or stridulation; strident or stridulous; shrill or shrilling; chirring.

stridulous (strid'ū-lus), a. [< L. stridulus, creaking, rattling, hissing, < stridere, creak: see strident.] Making a small harsh sound; having a thin, squeaky sound; squeaky; creaking.

To make them [the old men] garrulous, as grasshoppers are stridulous.
Chapman, Iliad, iii., Commentary.

Stridulous angina. Same as laryngismus stridulus (which see, under laryngismus).

striet, v. t. A Middle English form of strew.

strife (strif), n. [< ME. strif, < OF. estrif, < Icel. strith, strife, contention, pain, grief, = Sv. Dan. strid, combat, contention, = OS. OFries. strid = D. strijd = OHG. MHG. striit, G. streit, strife, = OL. silis (gen. slit), L. lis (lit-), strife, litigation (see litigate); from the verb, Icel. stridha, strive, contend, etc.: see stride. Cf. strive.] 1. A striving or effort to do one's best; earnest attempt or endeavor.

With strife to please you, day exceeding day.
Shak., All's Well, Epil.

2. Emulative contention or rivalry; active struggle for superiority; emulation.

Weep with equal strife
Who should weep most.
Shak., Lucrece, i. 1791.
Thus gods contended (noble strife, Worthy the heavenly mind)
Who most should do to soften anxious life.
Congreve, To the Earl of Godolphin.

3. Antagonistic contention; contention characterized by anger or enmity; discord; conflict; quarrel: as, strife of the elements.

Sith for me ye fight, to me this grace
Both yield, to stay your deadly strife a space.
Spenser, F. Q., II. vi. 33.

Twenty of them fought in this black strife.
Shak., R. and J. iii. 1. 183.

To take strife, to enter into conflict.

For which he took with Rome and Cesar strif.
Chaucer, Good Women, i. 595.

=Syn. 2 and 3. Strife, Contention. These words agree in being very general, in having a good sense possible, and in seeming elevated or poetical when applied to the organized quarrels of war or to anything more than oral disputes. Strife is the stronger. Contention often indicates the more continued and methodical effort, and hence is more often the word for rivalry in effort to possess something. Such a rivalry, when definite in form and limited in time, is a contest: as, the contests of the Greek games. A contention that is forcible, violent, exhausting, or attended with real or figurative convulsions or contortions, is a struggle. See battle, encounter.

strife (strif'ful), a. [< strife + -ful.] Full of strife; contentious; discordant.

But strifful mind and diverse qualities
Drew them in partes, and each made others foe.
Spenser, F. Q., II. ii. 13.

strig (strig), n. [Origin obscure.] 1. The footstalk of a flower, leaf, or fruit. Urc, Diet., i. 302.—2. The tang of a sword-blade. See tang.

strig (strig), v. t.; pret. and pp. strigged, ppr. strigging. [< strig, n.] To remove the footstalk from: as, to strig currants.

striga (stri'gā), n.; pl. strigæ (-jē). [NL., < L. striga, a swath, furrow, < stringere, draw tight, contract: see strict.] 1. In bot., a sharp-pointed appressed bristle or hair-like scale, constituting a species of pubescence in plants.—2. In zool., a streak or stripe; a stria.—3. In arch., a flute of a column.

strigate (stri'gāt), a. [*< NL. *strigatus*, < L. striga, a furrow: see striga.] In entom., same as strigose.

Striges (stri'jēz), n. pl. [NL., < L. strix (strig-), an owl.] The owls, or Strigidæ in a broad sense, as a suborder of Raptores; the nocturnal birds of prey. The physiognomy is peculiar by reason of the lateral expansion, lengthwise contraction, and diploic blackening of the skull, which is often asymmetrical. The eyes look forward, not laterally as in other birds, and are set in a peculiar disk of radiated feathers more or less completely formed, the feathers of the front of the face interpose and adpressed, hiding the base of the bill. This is the facial disk, of which some radiating feathers of a similar shape and texture constitute a ruff. The eyes are large, with a peculiarly shaped eyeball, the cornea somewhat protuberant, and with the sclerotic presenting somewhat like a short acorn in its cup; the iris is of a great movement, dilating and contracting. The ear is often unlike on opposite sides of the head, and is often with a movable external flap, the operculum, of great extent. The tufts of feathers, especially of many owls are the scapulars or alar feathers. The bill is peculiar in that the nostrils open at the base of the beak rather than in its substance, and the beak is never toothed. There are four toes, of which the outer is vestigial and shorter than the inner, and the joints together shorter than the fourth. The claws are all long, sharp, and curved, and the feet are sometimes pectinate. The feathers lack barbs, and the plumage is peculiarly soft and blends into a noiseless flight. The birds have no auditory bones, one pair of intrinsic syringeal muscles, a small blind, long clubbed ceca, short intestines, moderate muscular gizzard, capacious gullet without special structure, a peculiar structure of the tarsometatarsi and middle joint, a membranous and double-notched outer tarsometatarsal process, and spongy maxillary bones and lacrymals. The suborder is divided into two families, Strigidae and Alucidae. Noctuides are a very large group. See cuts under ternus, brevis, Eubolus, haret, ch. tui, Arctura, ovib, en, noct, and Strix.

Strigidae (strī'jī-dē), n. pl. [NL. < Strix (Strig-) + -idae.] The owls as a family of strigine or nocturnal birds of prey of the order Raptores—used in three senses. (a) Same as Strigo, including all owls. (b) Same as Alucidae, including only the barn owls. (c) Including all owls excepting the Alucidae. In this sense the distinctive characters are the fureculum and the double-notched or fenestrated sternum, the middle claw not pectinate, and the facial disk complete or not triangular.

strigil (strī'jī-l), n. [L. strigilis (= Gr. στρίγίς); n., a scraper. < stringere, draw tight, contract, tond, graze, stroke; see strigil.] 1. An instrument of metal, ivory, or horn, used by the ancients for scraping the skin at the bath and in the gymnasium; a flesh-scraper. See cut under Lucy par.—2. A flesh-brush, or a glove of hair-cloth, rough toweling, or other article used for stimulating the skin by rubbing.

Young people in the eastern manner, washing with the old water, with oyle, and being rubbed with a fish-scraper of seals skin, put on the operators' hand the strigil. Er ben, Diary, June, 1615.

strigilate (strī'jī-lāt), a. [L. **strigilatus*, < strigil, q. v.] In entom., noting the front edge of a plate when it is furnished with a strigilis. strigilis (strī'jī-lis), n.; pl. strigiles (-lēz). [NL. < L. strigilis, a scraper; see strigil.] An organ on the distal tarsal joint of a bee's fore leg, used to scrape or clean the antennae; a curry-comb; so called on account of the fringe of stiff hairs. At the end of the tibia is a movable spur, which the spur expanded membrane, the velum, which can be brought into contact with the strigili, forming a curved comb. The bee lays the antenna in the hollow of the strigilis, presses the velum upon it, and draws the antenna through the aperture thus formed.

strigilore (strī'jī-lōs), a. [Also, erroneously, strigilous; dim. of strigose.] In bot., minutely strigose.

strigine (strī'jī-nē), a. [L. strig (Strig-) + -ine.] Or strigine; related to an owl. Strigine pertaining to the Strigae, or Strigidae in a broad sense. (b) In a narrow sense, belonging to the Strigidae, q. v. from Strigidae.

strigment (strī'jī-mēt), n. [L. strigmentum, that which is scraped off, a scraping, < stringere, draw tight, contract, graze, stroke; see strigil.] Scraping; that which is scraped off.

Brass volubus and many other, beside the strigments and odorous adhesion from men's hands, acknowledge that nothing proceeds from gold in the usual decoction thereof. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., ii. 5.

Strigopidae (strī-gop'i-dē), n. pl. [NL. (Bonaparte, 1849), < Strigops + -idae.] The Strigopidae regarded as a family apart from Psittacidae.

Strigopinae (strī-gō-pī-nē), n. pl. [NL., < Strigops + -inae.] The owl-parrots; a subfamily of Psittacidae, or the only subfamily of Strigopidae, represented by the genus Strigops. Also Strigopinae. O. Finsch.

Strigops (strī'gops), n. [NL. (G. R. Gray, 1845); also Strigopsis; also Stringopsis and Strigopsis (Van der Hoeven, 1856); < Strig (Strig-), a screech-owl, + Gr. ὤψ, eye, face.] A genus of Psittacidae, or made type of a family Strigopidae, containing the kakapo, or nocturnal flightless parrot of New Zealand, S. habroptilus; the owl-parrots; so called from the owl-like physiognomy. The sternal keel and the fureculum are defective, and the birds have not the power of flight. See cut under owl-parrot.

strigose (strī'gōs), a. [NL. strigosus, < striga, q. v.] 1. In bot., rough with strigæ; beset with sharp-pointed and appressed straight and stiff hairs or bristles; as, a strigose leaf or stem.—2. In entom., streaked, or finely fluted; having fine, close parallel ridges or points, like the surface of a file. Also strigate.

strigous (strī'gus), a. [NL. strigosus; see strigose.] Same as strigose.

strike (stri'k), v.; pret. struck, pp. struck, stricken (obs. or dial. strucken), ppv. striking. [ME. striken, stryken (pret. strook, stroke, strake, pp. striken, strucken), < AS. strican (pret. strāc, pp. stricen), go, proceed, advance swiftly and smoothly. = OFries. strika = D. strijken = MLG. striken, LG. striden = OHG. strihan (strong), streichan (weak), MHG. striehen, streichon, G. streichen, smooth, rub, stroke, spread, strike; cf. Icel. strika, stryka = Sw. stryka = Dan. stryge, stroke, rub, wipe, Goth. striks, a stroke, tittle, akin to L. stringere, draw tight, graze, stroke, etc. (see stringent, strain, strict). Cf. streak, streak, stroke, stroke, etc. The senses of strike are much involved, the orig. sense 'go,' 'go along,' being commonly lost from view, or retained only as associated with the sense 'hit.' I. intrans. 1. To go; proceed; advance; in modern use, especially, to go or move suddenly, or with a sudden turn.

A mouse that moche good counthe, as me thoughte, stroke forth sternly, and stode biorn hem alle. Piers Plowman (B), Prol., l. 183.

To avoid them, we struck out of the way, and crossed the pregnant champion to the foot of the mountains. Sandys, Travels, p. 158.

By God's mercy they recovered themselves, and having the flood with them, struck into the harbour.

A. Morton, New England's Memorial, p. 47.

Whether the poet followed the romancer or the chronicler in his conception of a dramatic character, he at the first step struck into that undulating track of our humanity amid the accidents of its position.

I. D. Israeli, Amen of Lit., II. 239.

A dispatch from Newfoundland says that the caplin have struck in. This means that the cod, the most famous of all commercial fish, has arrived on the coast.

Sci. Amer., N. S., LVIII. 352.

2. To flow; glide; run.

As stream that striketh stille

Morris and Skent's Specimens Early Eng., ii. 48.

3. To pass with sudden quickness and effect; dart; pierce.

Till a dart striketh through his liver. Prov. vii. 23.

How the bright and blissful Reformation (by Divine Power) strook through the black and settled Night of Ignorance and Anti-Christian Tyranny. Milton, Reformation in Eng., l.

4. To come suddenly or unexpectedly.

We had struck upon a well-beaten track on entering the hall. B. Taylor, Northern Travel, p. 117.

5. To run or extend in any particular direction, especially with reference to the points of the compass; a word used chiefly by geologists in speaking of the strata, or of stratified masses, but also by miners in indicating the position of the lode or vein. The latter, however, generally use run in preference to strike.—6. To lower a sail, a flag, or colors in token of respect; hence, to surrender, as to a superior or an enemy; yield.

The enemy still came on with greater fury, and hoped by his number of men to carry the prize; till at last the Englishman, finding himself sunk apace, and ready to perish, struck. Steele, Spectator, No. 350.

The interest of our kingdom is ready to strike to that of your poorest fishing towns. Swift.

7. To touch; glance; graze; impinge by appulse.

Let us consider the red and white colours in porphyry: hinder light from striking on it, and its colours vanish. Locke, Human Understanding, II. viii. 10.

8. To run aground or ashore; run upon a bank, rock, or other obstacle; strand; as, the ship struck at midnight.—9. To inflict a blow, stroke, or thrust; attack; as, to strike in the dark.

We have drawn our swords of God's word, and stricken at the roots of all evil to have them cut down.

Latimer, Sermons, p. 219.

He strike at him, and missed him, d'ye mark?

Chapman, Gentleman Usher, v. 1.

A Surprise in War is like an Apoplexy in the Body, which strikes without giving Warning for Defence.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 70.

By their designing leaders taught

To strike at power which for themselves they sought.

Dryden, Astræa Redux, l. 32.

10. To hit; beat; tap; as, the hammer strikes on the bell of a clock.

They plunge their Oars all at one instant into the Water, keeping exact time with each other; and that they may the better do this, there is one that strikes on a small Gong, or a wooden Instrument, before every stroke of the Oar. Dampier, Voyages, II. i. 74.

11. To sound by percussion, with or as with blows; be struck; as, the clock strikes.

One whose Tongue is strung vp like a Cloccke till the time, and then strikes, and sayes much when hee talks little. Bp. Earle, Micro-cosmographie, A Stayed Man.

A deep sound strikes like a rising knell! Byron, Child Harold, iii. 21.

12. To use one's weapons; deal blows; fight; as, to strike for one's country.

God's arm strike with us! 'tis a fearful odds. Shak., Hen. V., iv. 3. 5.

Is not he the same God still? Is his hand shortened that he cannot strike, or doth his heart fail that he dare not punish? Stillington, Sermons, I. x.

13. To press a claim or demand by coercive or threatening action of some kind; in common usage, to quit work along with others, in order to compel an employer to accede to some demand, as for increase of pay, or to protest against something, as a reduction of wages: as, to strike for higher pay or shorter hours of work.—14. To steal, as by pocket-picking. [Slang.]—15. To give the last plowing before the seed is sown. Darwin.

To harrow the ridges ere ever ye strike
Is one piece of husbandry Suffolk doth like. Tusser, September's Husbandry, st. 9.

16. To take root, as a slip of a plant.

The young tops strike freely if they are taken off about three inches long, and inserted singly in some sandy soil in small pots. The Field, March 12, 1887. (Encyc. Dict.)

17. To fasten to stones, shells, etc., as young oysters; become fixed or set.—18. To move with friction; grate; creak.

The closet door strided as it uses to do, both at her coming in and going out. Aubrey, Misc., p. 83.

19. In the United States army, to perform menial services for an officer; act as an officer's servant: generally said of an enlisted man detailed for that duty.—20. To become saturated with salt, as fish in the process of pickling or curing. 21. To wear, change, or fade, as colors of goods in washing or cleaning. Workshop Receipts, 1st ser., p. 321.—To be struck or stricken in years, to be far along in years; to be of an advanced age.

And they had no child, . . . and they both were well stricken in years. Luke i. 7.

The king
Is wise and virtuous, and his noble queen
Well struck in years. Shak., Rich. III., i. 1. 92.

To strike again. See again.—To strike at, to make or aim a blow at; attempt to strike, attack, as, to strike at one's rival.—To strike back, (a) To return blow for blow. (b) To refuse to lead, as fish when, instead of following close along the leader and passing into the bowl of the weir, they retreat from the net, and with a sweep double the whole weir.—To strike for, to start suddenly for; make for; as, he struck for home. [Colloq.]—To strike home, to give a decisive and effective blow or thrust.

Who may, in the ambush of my name, strike home. Shak., M. for M., I. 3. 41.

To strike in. (a) To make a vigorous move, effort, or advance.

If he be mad, I will not be foolish, but strike in for a share. Brome, Northern Lass, iii. 2.

He advises me to strike in for some preferment, now I have friends. Swift, Journal to Stella, xxx.

(b) To put in one's word suddenly; interpose; interrupt.

I proposed the embassy to Constantinople for Mr. Henshaw, but my Lord Winchelsea struck in.  Evelyn, Diary, June 18, 1660.

(c) To begin; set about.

It [the water of the Dead Sea] bore me up in such a manner that when I struck in swimming, my legs were above the water, and I found it difficult to recover my feet. Pococke, Description of the East, II. i. 36.

(d) To fall in; conform; join or unite.

I always feared ye event of ye Amsterdammers striking in with us. Cushman, quoted in Bradford's Plymouth Plantation, p. 57.

He struck in very zealously with the Presbyterians, went to their meetings, and was very liberal in his abuses, not only of the Archbishop, but of the whole order. E. Gibson, in Ellis's Lit. Letters, p. 227.

(e) To arrive; come in; make for the shore: said of fish.

Those who have been on the Newfoundland coast when the caplin strikes in will not forget the excitement that ensued. Sci. Amer., N. S., LVIII. 352.

To strike into. (a) To enter upon, as by some sudden act or motion; break into; as, to strike into a run.

It struck on a sudden into such reputation that it scorns any longer to sculk, but owns itself publicly.

Government of the Tongue.

(b) To turn into quickly or abruptly; betake one's self to in haste.

It began raining, and I struck into Mrs. Vanhomrigh's, and dined. Swift.

To striko out. (a) In boxing, to deliver a blow from the shoulder. (b) To direct one's course, as in swimming: as,

strike

to strike out for the shore. (c) To make a sudden move or excursion: as, to strike out into an irregular course of life.

I concluded to move on and strike out to the south and southwest into Missouri. The Century, XLI. 107.

(d) In base-ball, to be put out because of failure to strike the ball after a certain number of trials: said of the batter.—To strike up. (a) To begin to play or sing.

If the Musicko overcome not my melancholly, I shall quarrel; and if they sodainly do not strike up, I shall presently strike thee downe.

Heywood, Woman Killed with Kindness, i. 1. He got a little excited, as you may have seen a canary sometimes when another strikes up.

O. W. Holmes, Autocrat, ix. (b) To make acquaintance; become associated: with with. [Colloq.]

He spur'd to London, and left a thousand curses behind him. Here he struck up with sharpers, scouers, and Alsatians.

Gentleman Instructed, p. 491. (Davies, under Alsatian.)

II. trans. 1. To pass the hand over lightly; stroke: as, to strike the beard or hair.

I strike ones heed, as we do a chylde when he dothe well. Je aplaie. . . My father sayeth I am a good sonne; he dyd strike my heed by cause I had conned my lesson without the booke.

Also even when he [Sir T. More] shuld lay doune his head on the blocke, he, hauyng a great gray beard, struck out his beard, and sayd to the hangman, I pray you let me lay my head ouer the blocke leest ye should cut it.

24. To pass lightly as in stroking.

I thought, He will surely . . . strike his hand over the place and recover the leper.

3. To make level or even, as a measure of grain, salt, etc., by drawing a strickle or straight-edge along the top, or, in the case of potatoes, by seeking to make the projections equal to the depressions: as, to strike a bushel of wheat; a struck or struck as distinguished from a heaped measure.

Four struck measures or firlots contains in just proportion four heaped firlots.

All grain to be measured struck, without heaps, and without pressing or shaking down.

44. To balance the accounts in.

And the said journal, with two other bookes, to lye upon the greencloth dayly, to the intent the accomptants, and other particular clerkes, may take out the solutions entred into said bookes, whereby they may strike their lydgers, and see to bring in then accompts incontinently upon the same.

5. To lower or dip; let, take, or haul down: as, to strike the topmasts; to strike a flag, as in token of surrender or salute; to strike or lower anything below decks.

Fearing lest they should fall into the quicksands, [they] strike sail, and so were driven.

Now, strike your sailes, yee jolly Mariners, For we be come unto a quiet roade.

The Maltese commanding ours to strike their flag for the great msters of Malta, and ours bidding them strike for the King of England.

6. To take down or apart; pack up and remove; fold: as, to strike a tent; to strike a scene on the stage of a theater.

The king, who now found himself without an enemy in these parts, struck his tents, and returned to Gaza in Daware.

Yes, on the first bad weather you'll give orders to strike your tents.

7. To lade into a cooler, as cane-juice in sugar-making.—84. To dab; rub; smear; anoint.

They shall take of the blood, and strike it on the two side posts.

The mother said nothing to this, but gave nurse a certain ointment, with directions that she should strike the child's eyes with it.

9. To efface with a stroke of a pen; erase; remove from a record as being rejected, erroneous, or obsolete: with away, out, off, etc.: as, to strike out an item in an account.

Madam, the wonted mercy of the king, That overtakes your faults, has met with this, And struck it out.

That thou didst love her, strikes some scores away From the great compt.

Madam, the wonted mercy of the king, That overtakes your faults, has met with this, And struck it out.

That thou didst love her, strikes some scores away From the great compt.

Madam, the wonted mercy of the king, That overtakes your faults, has met with this, And struck it out.

That thou didst love her, strikes some scores away From the great compt.

Madam, the wonted mercy of the king, That overtakes your faults, has met with this, And struck it out.

That thou didst love her, strikes some scores away From the great compt.

Madam, the wonted mercy of the king, That overtakes your faults, has met with this, And struck it out.

That thou didst love her, strikes some scores away From the great compt.

Madam, the wonted mercy of the king, That overtakes your faults, has met with this, And struck it out.

That thou didst love her, strikes some scores away From the great compt.

Madam, the wonted mercy of the king, That overtakes your faults, has met with this, And struck it out.

That thou didst love her, strikes some scores away From the great compt.

Madam, the wonted mercy of the king, That overtakes your faults, has met with this, And struck it out.

That thou didst love her, strikes some scores away From the great compt.

5992

One meets (on paper only) with the "eighteen-carat desperado," who has "struck it rich" on the Pikes or in the ranches.

We resumed our march the following day, but soon struck snow that materially impeded our progress.

"I didn't strike the stairs at first," whispered the butcher, "and I went too far along that upper hall; but when I came against a door that was partly open I knew I was wrong, and turned back."

11. To enter the mind of, as an idea; occur to.

It appeared never to have struck traveller or tourist that there was anything in Albania except snipes.

It struck me that . . . it might be worth while to study him.

12. To impress strongly: as, the spectacle struck him as a solemn one.

It [the temple of Baalbec] strikes the Mind with an Air of Greatness beyond any thing that I ever saw before, and is an eminent proof of the Magnificence of the ancient Architecture.

I have been struck, also, with the superiority of many of the old sepulchral inscriptions.

13. To appear to: as, how does it strike you?

Now, Mrs. Dangle, didn't you say it struck you in the same light?

When earth breaks up and Heaven expands, How will the change strike me and you, In the house not made with hands?

14. To fall into; assume: as, to strike an attitude.

No sooner had the horses struck a canter than Ghibbie's jack-boots . . . began to play alternately against the horse's flanks.

15. To give a blow to; smite; hit; collide with; impinge upon. See to strike down, off, out, etc., below.

The servants did strike him with the palms of their hands.

His sword e'en like a dancer; while I struck The lean and wrinkled Cassius.

The lady strak her on the mouth, Till she spat out o' blude.

16. To attack; assail; set upon.

That was the lawe of Jewes, That what woman were in aoutrie taken, were she riche or poore.

The red pestilence strike all trades in Rome!

Death struck them in those Shapes again, As once he did when they were Men.

17. To assail or overcome, as with some occult influence, agency, or power; smite; shock; blast.

I will go study mischief, And put a look on, arm'd with all my cunning, Shall meet him like a basilisk, and strike him.

About Maidstone in Kent, a certain Monster was found stricken with the Lightning, which Monster had a Head like an Ass.

Even brave men have been struck with this involuntary trembling upon going into battle for the first time, the series of sensations commencing with the boom of the yet distant cannon.

18. To knock; dash: as, to strike one's foot against a stone.

He struck his hand upon his breast, And kiss'd the fatal knife.

19. To deal or inflict: with blow, stroke, or a similar word as object.

To banish him that struck more blows for Rome Than thou hast spoken words?

Not riot, but valour, not fancy, but policy, must strike the stroke

Who would be free, themselves must strike the blow.

20. To produce by blows or strokes: as, to strike fire; to strike a light.

War is a Fire struck in the Devil's tinder-box.

21. To cause to ignite by friction: as, to strike a match.—22. To tap; broach; draw liquor from: as, to strike a cask.

Strike the vessels, ho! Here is to Cesar!

234. To take forcibly or fraudulently; steal: as, to strike money. [Slang.]

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

Now we haue well bous'd, let vs strike some chete. Now we haue well drunk, let vs steale some thing.

strike

24. To bring suddenly and completely into some specified state, by or as by a swift, sharp blow or stroke: as, to strike one dumb.

S. Paule was himsele sore against Christ, til Christ gaue him a great fal, and threw him to the ground, and strake him strake blind.

Sir T. More, Cumfort against Tribulation (1573), fol. 11. Oh, hard news! it frets all my blood,

And strikes me stiffe with horror and amazement.

Heywood, Fair Maid of the West (Works, ed. 1874, II. 395). In view of the amazed town and camp,

He strake him dead, and brought Peralta off.

25. To pierce; stab.

Yet when the tother answered him that there was in enery mans mouth spoke of him much shame, it so strake him to ye heart that w' in fewe daies after he withered & consumed away.

For I hit him not in vaine as Artageres did, but full in the forehead hard by the eye, and strake him through and through his head againe, and so overthrew him, of which blow he died.

26. To produce with sudden force; effect suddenly and forcibly; cause to enter.

It cannot be this weak and writhled shrimp Should strike such terror to his enemies.

Bring out the lady: she can quell this mutiny, And with her powerful looks strike awe into them.

Waving wide her myrtle wand, She strikes a uniuersal peace through sea and land.

27. To stamp with a stroke; impress; hence, to mint; coin: as, to strike coin at the mint.

The princes who struck these medals, says Eugenius, seem to have designed them rather as an ostentation of their wealth than of their virtues.

Here they are, thirty good Harry groats as ever were struck in bluff old Hal's time.

28. To cause to enter or penetrate; thrust: as, a tree strikes its roots deep.

Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring voices, Strike in their numb'd and mortified bare arms Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary.

29. To cause to sound; announce by sound: as, the clock strikes twelve; hence, to begin to beat or play upon, as a drum or other instrument; begin to sing or play, as a song or tune: often with up.

Strike up the drums.

Strike the Lyre upon an untry'd String.

When the college clock struck two, Hogg would rise, in spite of Shelley's entreaty or remonstrance, and retire for the night.

30. To make; effect; conclude; ratify: as, to strike a bargain. [Compare the Latin foedus ferre, to strike a treaty; also the phrase to strike hands.]

The rest strike truce, and let loue scale firm leagues twixt Greece and Troy.

A bargain was struck; a sixpence was broken; and all the arrangements were made for the voyage.

Be admonished, by what you already see, not to strike leagues of friendship with cheap persons, where no friendship can be.

31. To cease, stop, quit, or knock off as a coercive measure: as, to strike work.

I never heard of authors striking work, as the mechanics call it, until their masters the booksellers should increase their pay.

Don't yo think I can keep three people . . . on sixteen shillings a week? Dun yo think it's for mysel' I'm striking work at this time?

32. To make a sudden and pressing demand upon; especially, to make such a demand successfully: as, to strike a friend for fifty dollars. [Colloq.]—334. To match, as the stock and counterstock of a tally (see tally); hence, to unite; join.

I'll find a portion for her, if you strike Affectionate hearts, and joy to call you nephew.

344. To fight; fight out.

They fight near to Auxerie the most bloody battle that euer was struk in France.

We, that should check And quench the raging fire in others' bloods, We strike the battle to destruction?

35. To draw (lines) on a surface or on the face of a piece of stuff, as by snapping or twanging a chalked string stretched tightly along it.—36. In carp., to form (a molding) with a molding-plane.—37. To harpoon or bomb (a whale).—38. In angling, to hook (a fish when it rises to the fly but fails to hook itself). It is accomplished by a quick dexterous turn or twist of the wrist.—39. To put (fish) in a strike-barrel.—40. In electroplating, to produce the beginning of a deposit of metal upon, as on a plate or other article of metal placed in the electroplating solution. The work is said to be struck as soon as a uniform film of deposited metal distinctly appears upon its surface.—41. In color-making and dyeing, to affect (a coloring matter) so as to obtain the desired gradation of color in the vat or on the fabric by the addition of the proper color-producing chemical. See color-striker.

42. A method of dyeing by means of bichromates, in which the logwood is struck of an intense color.

43. In theatre lighting, to produce (the arc) by striking the carbons.—A struck battle, a hard-fought battle.

Ten struck battles
I saw, and these honour'd scars from, and all Roman Fletcher, Bonduca, l. 1.

Strike me luck, strike me lucky, a familiar expression used in making a bargain, derived from the old custom of joining hands together in ratification of the bargain, the fingers being in the hand of the seller an earnest-penny.

But if that's all you stand upon,
Here, strike me luck, it shall be done.
S. Butler, Hudibras, II. l. 610

Striking the flars. See jar, 2.—Striking-up press. See jar, 1.—Struck jury. See jury. To strike a balance, to compare the summations on both sides of an account, in order to ascertain the amount due by either party to the other.—To strike a center or centering, in arch. See centering.—To strike a docket. See docket. To strike a lead. (a) In mining, to light on a lode or vein of metal. (b) To enter on any undertaking that proves successful.—To strike all of a heap. See heap.—To strike an answer (or other pleading), to strike it out as improper or insufficient. [Local, U. S.]—To strike down. (a) To prostrate by a blow; fell. (b) In fisheries to haul up and stow away barrels of, as fish.—To strike fire. See fire.—To strike from, to remove with or as with a blow or stroke; as, to strike a name from a list.

And as the Arabians they that were taken in adultery had their heads stricken from their bodies.

Honorable, Serm. against Adultery, p. 120
To strike hands. See hand.—To strike off. (a) See def 9. (b) (1) To cancel, deduct; as, to strike off the interest of a debt. (2) To separate or remove by a blow or stroke; as, to strike off what is superfluous or injurious.

In the time we entered in to the garden and visited the place where our ensavour was taken and where saint Peter wrote of Maltese re.

To strike oil. See oil.—To strike out. (a) To produce by collision, as by blows or strokes; as, to strike out sparks with steel.

My pride struck out new sparks of her own Dryden, Hum and Panther l. 75

(b) See def 9. (c) To plan quickly or for an emergency; invent; contrive; as, to strike out a new plan of tower. (d) In base-ball, to put out, as the pitcher does the batter when the latter is unable in a certain number of trials to hit the ball; as, he struck out three men in succession.—To strike root, sail, soundings, tally. See the nouns.—To strike up. (a) To begin to play or sing; as, to strike up a tune.

Strike up our drums, to find this danger out.

Shak., R. John, v. 2. 170.

(b) To sound up, give out.

Let the court not be deceived, for that strieth up a great hoar in summer, and much cold in winter.

Bacon, Building (ed. 1887).

(c) To enter upon by mutual agreement, begin to cultivate; as, to strike up an acquaintance with somebody.

She [Mme. de Souza] charmed and delighted me, and we struck up an intimacy without further delay.

Mme. D'Aubray, Diary, IV. 171.

strike (stri'k), n. [ME. strike, strie, stri, strike (= LG. strich); < strike, v.] 1. A wooden implement with a straight edge for leveling a measure of grain, salt, etc., by striking off what is above the level of the top; a strikeho.

Witz, cartnave and bushel, peck, strike ready [at] hand.

Tusser, Husbandly Furniture, st. 1.

2. A piece of wood used in the manufacture of pottery, in brickmaking, etc., to remove superfluous clay from a mold.—3. A puddlers' stirrer; a rabble.—4. A stanchion in a gate, palisade, railing, or the like.

Stowe says "there were nine tombs of alabaster and marble, invironed with strikes of iron, in the choir." See preface to the "Chronicle of the Grey Friars of London." See Piers Plowman's Creed (L. E. T. S.), Notes, p. 39.

5. In metal-working, a hook in a foundry to hoist the metal.—6. The direction or run of a bed or member of a stratified formation, especially with reference to the points of the compass. See bearing, 12, and cut under dip.

The Devonian sandstones . . . are exposed in rugged cliffs slightly oblique to their line of strike, along a coastline of ten miles in length, to the head of the bay (Dawp). Dawson, Geol. Hist. of Plants, p. 106.

7. An English dry measure, consisting regularly of two bushels. It was never in other than local use, and varied in different localities from half a bushel to four bushels.

If selletth all the malt or corn for the best, when there be but two strikes of the best in his sack.

Jailer. What dowry has she?
Daugh. Some two hundred bottles,
And twenty strike of oats; but he'll ne'er have her.

Fletcher (and another), Two Noble Kinsmen, v. 2.
How many strike of pease would feed a hog fat against Christide? Marston, Antonio and Melinda, l. 1. 1.

8. A handful or bunch of flax, jute, or other fiber, either ready for heckling or after heckling; a strik.

This pardoner hadde heer as yelow as wax,
But smooth he it hung as doth a strike of flex.

Chaucer, Gen. Prolog. to C. T., l. 676.

9. In sugar-making and -refining, the quantity of syrup emptied at one time into the coolers; also, the quantity of sugar boiled or crystallized at one time; as, to boil a strike; to run off a strike.

The strike is now done, air is admitted to the pan, and the contents are run off into the "mixer."

The Century, XXXV. 114.

10. In base-ball. (a) An unsuccessful attempt of the batter to hit the ball. (b) A ball so pitched as to pass over the home-plate, and considered by the umpire as one that the batter should have tried to strike.—11. In American bowling, a play by which one of the contestants kneels down all the pins with one bowl, entitling him to add to his score as many points as the number of the pins knocked down with the first two balls of his next play. Also called ten-strike. Compare spare, n., 2.—12. A concerted or general quitting of work by a body of men or women for the purpose of coercing their employer in some way, as when higher wages or shorter hours are demanded, or a reduction of wages is resisted; a general refusal to work as a coercive measure. Compare lockout.

Accounts at that time [1862] of strikes in the building-trade are particularly numerous.

London Gilds (L. E. T. S.), Int., p. cxlv.

There have been times and incidents when the strike was the only court of appeals for the workman, and the evil lay in the abuse of them and not in the use of them.

Sci. Amer., N. S., LVII. 202.

13. Any unscrupulous attempt to extort money or to obtain other personal advantage by initiating an attack with the intention of being bought off, as by introducing a bill into a legislature, hostile to some moneyed interest, with the hope of being paid to let the matter drop. [Political slang, U. S.]—14. Full measure; especially, in brewing, full measure of malt; thus, also of the first strike is that which has its full allowance of malt and is strong.

Three hog-heads of ale of the first strike. Scott.

15. In mining, the whole amount struck at one time.—16. In type-founding, an imperfect matrix for type; the deeply sunken impression of the engraved character on a punch in a short and narrow bar of copper; so called because the punch is struck a hard blow with a hammer. Also known as unjustified matrix, or drive. See type-founding.

When the letter is perfect, it is driven into a piece of polished copper, called the drive or strike. This passes to the finisher, who makes the width and depth of the faces uniform throughout the font.

Encyc. Brit., XXIII. 690.

17. A metal piece which is inserted in a door-jamb, and against which the latch strikes as the door closes. It is beveled to permit the easy closing and self-latching of the door. Also called striker-plate.

18. Same as stick, 10.—19. In soap-making: (a) The general crystalline appearance of hard soaps, which is characteristic of soaps which retain the normal amount of water, and in which the saponification and separation have been complete. (b) The proper and characteristic mottling of well-made mottled soaps.—By the strike, by measure not heaped up, but having what was above the level of the measure scraped off with a strike.—Strike of day, the dawn or break of day.

If I was to speak till strike o' day.

Dickens, Hard Times, II. 4.

strike-a-light (stri'k-ü-lit'), n. A piece of flint trimmed into the shape of a gun-flint, but somewhat larger, used with pyrites or steel for procuring fire from the sparks. Such implements have been frequently found among prehistoric relics. They have been used from remote ages, and are still manufactured and sold for that purpose.

Another strike-a-light which I lately bought in a stall at Trèves is about 2 inches long by 12 broad, and is made from a flat flake, trimmed to a nearly square edge at the butt-end, and to a very flat arc at the point.

Evans, Ancient Stone Implements of Great Britain, p. 283.

strike-block (stri'k'blok), n. In carp., a plane shorter than a jointer, used for shooting a short joint.

strike-fault (stri'k'fält), n. In geol., a fault running in the same general direction as the strike of the strata where it occurs.

strike-or-silent (stri'k'ör-si-lent'), n. In horol., a piece which sets the striking-mechanism of a clock in or out of action. B. H. Knight.

strike-pan (stri'k'pan), n. In sugar-manuf., same as teache or teache-pan.

strike-pay (stri'k'pä), n. An allowance paid by a trades-union to men on strike.

In one memorable case, at least, a great employer . . . himself gave strike pay to his own men, when, under a sense of social duty, they left his works empty.

Nineteenth Century, XXVI. 722.

strike-plate (stri'k'plät), n. The keeper for a beveled latch-bolt, against which it strikes so as to snap shut automatically. Car-Builder's Dict.

striker (stri'kör), n. [strike + -er.] 1. One who strikes, in any sense of the verb strike. Specifically—(a) A robber.

I am joined with no foot-land rakers, no long-staff six-penny strikers. Shak., 1 Hen. IV., II. 1. 82.

(b) A workman who with others quits work in order to coerce their employer to accede to their demands.

The method employed by the strikers in this country, during the past ten years, and more especially in their recent strikes, is most unreasonable, violent, as well as disastrous in its results. N. A. Rev., CXLII. 602.

(c) One who seeks to effect a strike, in sense 13. [Political slang, U. S.]

If he can elect such a ticket even in Virginia alone, he will take the field after election as a striker, and will offer his electoral votes to whichever candidate will give the highest terms. The Nation, Sept. 6, 1888, p. 200.

(d) In the United States army, a soldier detailed to act as an officer's servant. See strike, v. l., 10. (e) A vetcher. Massinger. (f) A harpooner.

Where-ever we come to an anchor, we always send out our strikers, and put our hooks and lines overboard to try for fish. Dampier, Voyages, I. 118.

(g) In the hardware districts of England, a workman who manages the fire, heats the steel, and assists the forger.

(h) An assistant or inferior shipwright. (i) A man employed to strike off the superfluous quantity of grain, salt, etc., from the top of a measure.

2. That which strikes. Specifically—(a) A species of tilt-hammer operated directly from the engine. (b) A hardened mold upon which a softened steel block is struck to receive a concave impression. (c) The hammer of a gun, the stroke of which fires the piece. (d) An automatic apparatus which regulates the descent, at the proper time and place, of the ruling-pens of a paper-ruling machine. (e) The lever which puts a machine into motion. [Eng.]

3. In ornith., a term or sea-swallow. [Local, U. S.]—4. In the menhaden-fishery: (a) The man who manages the striker-boat. A vessel usually has two striker-boats, with one man in each; these row close to the school of fish, observe its course, signal the purse-crew to set the seine, and drive the fish in the desired direction with pebbles which they carry in the boats. (b) A green hand who works at low wages while learning the business, but is one of the crew of a vessel.

striker-arm (stri'kör-arm), n. A seat-arm. Car-Builder's Dict.

striker-boat (stri'kör-bōt), n. In the menhaden-fishery, the striker's boat. See striker, 4 (a).

striker-out (stri'kör-out'), n. In lawn-tennis, the player who receives, and if possible returns, the ball when first served.

It now becomes the duty of the adversary, called the striker-out, to return the ball by striking it with his racket in such a manner that it shall pass back over the net to the service side. Encyc. Brit., XXIII. 179.

striker-plate (stri'kör-plät), n. Same as strike, 17.

striking (stri'king), n. [Verbal n. of strike, v.]

1. The removal of the center upon which an arch has been built. See striking-plate.—2.

The propagation of plants by cuttings or slips.

striking (stri'king), p. a. Standing out prominently and conspicuously, so as strongly to impress the eye or the mind; prominent; notable; impressive; remarkable; surprising; as, a striking resemblance; a striking remark.

The most striking characteristic of the poetry of Milton is the extreme remoteness of the associations by means of which it acts on the reader. Macaulay, Milton.

striking-beam (stri'king-bēm), n. A cylindrical horse on which hides, when removed from the tanning-liquor, are placed. While drying they are struck or scraped from time to time.

strikingly (stri'king-li), adv. In a striking manner; in such a manner as to surprise or impress; forcibly; impressively.

The force of many strikingly poetic passages has been weakened or unperceived, because their origin was unknown, unexplored, or misunderstood.

T. Norton, Pref. to Milton's Smaller Poems.

strikingness (stri'king-nēs), n. Striking character or quality.

striking-plate (stri'king-plät), n. In carp., in a centering used in erecting an arch of masonry, a device for lowering or setting free the centering under the arch when completed. It consists of a compound wedge secured by keys. When the keys are driven out, the wedge slips backward, and causes the centering to fall.

striking-solution (stri'king-sō-lū'shon), n. A weak solution of silver cyanide, with a large proportion of free potassium cyanide, in which metals to be silver-plated are immersed for a few seconds to effect an instantaneous deposit of silver on the metal in order to insure a perfect coating in the silver-bath proper.

striklert, striklert. Old spellings of strickle, strickler.

string (string), n. [< ME. string, streng, stryngre, < AS. strenge = MD. strenghe, stringhe, D. streng, strenge, strenk (streng-), strank (strang-) = LG. strenge = OHG. strang, MHG. stranc, strange, G. strang = Icel. strengr = Dan. streng = Sw. sträng, a string, line, cord; perhaps < AS. strang, etc., strong (see strong); otherwise akin to L. stringere, draw tight, Gr. σπαγγάζω, a halter, σπαγγός, hard-twisted: see strain<sup>1</sup>, stringent, strangle.] 1. A slender cord; a thick thread; a line; a twine; a narrow band, thong, or ribbon; also, anything which ties.

I'll knit it up in silken strings,
With twenty odd-conceited true-love knots.
Shak., T. G. of V., ii. 7. 45.

Queen Mary came tripping down the stair,
Wt' the gold strings in her hair.
Mary Hamilton (Child's Ballads, III. 123).
Vouchsafe to be an azure knight,
When on thy breast and sides Herculean
He fix'd the star and string cerulean.
Swift, Poetry.

Mrs. General Likens had her bonnet-strings untied; she took it off her head as she got out of the buggy.
W. M. Baker, New Timothy, p. 80.

2. A strip, as of leather, by which the covers of a book are held together.

Many of those that pretend to be great Rabbies in these studies have scarce saluted them from the strings and the titlepage, or, to give 'em more, have bin but the Ferrets and Moushunts of an Index.
Milton, Reformation in Eng., i.

3. The line or cord of a bow.

The best bow that the yeman browthe
Roben set on a string.
Robin Hood and the Potter (Child's Ballads, V. 27).

4. In musical instruments, a tightly stretched cord or wire by the vibration of which tones are produced. The materials most used are gut, as in instruments of the lute and viol families, and brass or steel, as in the mandolin, the zither, and the pianoforte, though silk is also used. Silk strings are usually, and metal strings sometimes, wound with light silver wire to increase their weight; and such strings are often called silver strings. The pitch of the tone produced depends on the density, tension, and vibrating length of the string. The vibration is produced either by plucking or twanging with the finger, by a plectrum, or by a jack, as in the lute and harp families generally, and in the harpsichord; by the friction of a bow, as in the viol family; by a stream of air, as in the æolian harp; or by the blow of a hammer, as in the dulcimer and the pianoforte. The strings are named either by the letters of the tones to which they are tuned, or by numbers. The smallest string of several representatives of the lute and viol families is often called the chanterelle, because commonly used for the principal melody or cantus. The tuning of strings is effected usually by means of tuning-pins or -pegs, which in lutes and viols are placed in the head of the instrument, but in harps, zithers, and pianofortes in one side or rim of the frame. Not only has each instrument had a varying number of strings in different countries and at different periods, but the accordatura, or system of pitches, to which they are tuned has also varied. The vibrating length of the strings in instruments of the lute and viol families may be diminished, and the pitch of their tones raised, by pressing them with the fingers of the left hand against the finger-board. The exact places for such shortening or "stopping" are sometimes marked by frets, as in the guitar and also in the zither. The modern harp is provided with a mechanism for raising the pitch of certain sets of strings one or two semitones by means of pedals.

Of instruments of strings in accord
Herde I so playe a ravishing swetnesse.
Chaucer, Parliament of Fowls, l. 197.
Ye'll take a lock o' my yellow hair, . . .
Ye'll make a string to your fiddle there.
The Bonny Bows o' London (Child's Ballads, II. 302).
There's not a string attuned to mirth
But has its chord in Melancholy.
Hood, Melancholy.

5. pl. Stringed instruments, especially the stringed instruments of a band or orchestra taken collectively—that is, violins, violas, violoncellos, and double basses—in distinction from the wind and the percussives.

Praise him upon the strings and pipe.
Book of Common Prayer, Psalter, Ps. cl. 4.

6. Something resembling a string. (a) A tendril, or vegetable fiber; particularly, the tough substance that unites the two parts of the pericarp of leguminous plants: as, the strings of beans.

Duck-weed . . . putteth forth a little string into the water, far from the bottom. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 567.
(b) In mining, a thin seam or branch of a lode; a small vein; a fissure filled with mineral or metalliferous matter, but wanting in regularity and permanence. (c) A nerve or tendon of an animal body.

Heart with strings of steel,
Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe!
Shak., Hamlet, iii. 3. 70.

7. A cord or thread on which anything is filed; a file; also, a set of things strung on a string or file: as, a string of beads; hence, any series of persons or things connected or following in succession; a series or succession of persons, animals, or things extending in a line.

Sir Harry hath what they call a string of stories, which he tells every Christmas. Steele, Guardian, No. 42.

No king or commonwealth either can be pleased to see a string of precious coast towns in the hands of a foreign power. E. A. Freeman, Venice, p. 291.

8. A drove or company of horses or steers; a stud. [Colloq.]

Going into the corral, and standing near the center, each of us picks out some one of his own string from among the animals that are trotting and running in a compact mass round the circle. T. Roosevelt, The Century, XXXV. 656.

9. In billiards: (a) A number of wooden buttons strung on a wire to keep the score or tally of the game. There is a string for each player or side, one white with every fifth button black, the other the converse of this, for convenience in counting the buttons to be moved along the wire for each run made by either player or side. (b) The score, tally, or number of points scored by either player or side at any stage of a game: as, he made a poor string at first, but won. (c) A stroke made by each player from the head of the table to the opposite cushion and back, to determine, by means of the resultant positions of the balls, who shall open the game.—10.

In arch., a string-course.—11. In ship-building, the highest range of planks in a ship's ceiling, or that between the gunwale and the upper edge of the upper-deck ports.—12. In printing, a piece-compositor's aggregate of the proofs of types set by him, pasted on a long strip of paper. The amount of work done is determined by the measurement of this string.—13. The stringy albumen of an egg. See chalaza.—14. A hoax, or discredited story. [Printers' slang, Eng.]—A string of cash. See cash<sup>3</sup>. 1.—Bass string. See bass<sup>3</sup>.—Close string. See order.—Cut and mitered string, in stair-building, an outer string cut to miter with the end of the riser.—False string, in a musical instrument, an imperfect string, giving an uncertain or untrue sound.—Instrument of ten strings, in the Bible, a variety of nebel or psaltery.—Italian string. See Italian.—Open string, in musical instruments of the stringed group, a string that is not stopped or shortened by the finger or a mechanical stop, but is allowed to vibrate throughout its full length.—Order of the Yellow String. See order.—Plaited string work. See plaited.—Roman string. See Roman.—Rough string. See rough-string.—Silver string. See def. 4.—Soprano string. Same as chanterelle, 1.—Sympathetic string. See sympathetic.—The whip with six strings. See the Six Articles, under article.—To harp on one string. See harp.—To have two strings to one's bow. See bow<sup>2</sup>.

string (string), v.; pret. and pp. strung, ppr. stringing. [< string, n. As with ring<sup>2</sup>, the strong forms of the principal parts conform to the supposed analogy of sing, sang, sung, etc.] I. trans. 1. To furnish with strings.

Orpheus' lute was strung with poets' sinews.
Shak., T. G. of V., iii. 2. 78.

2. To put in tune the strings of, as of a stringed instrument.

Here the Muse so oft her harp has strung
That not a mountain rears its head unsung.
Addison, Letter from Italy.

3. To make tense; impart vigor to; tone. See high-strung.

Toil strung the nerves and purified the blood.
Dryden, Epistle to John Dryden, l. 89.

Sylvia was too highly strung for banter.
Mrs. Gaskell, Sylvia's Lovers, vii.

4. To fasten, suspend, or hang with a string: as, to string a parcel; to string up a dog.—5. To thread or file on a string: as, to string beads.—6. To prepare for use, as a bow, by bending it sufficiently to slip the bowstring into its notches, so that the string is tightly strained.—7. To extend in a string, series, or line.

Ships were strung for miles along the lower levee [of New Orleans], and steamboats above, all discharging or receiving cargo. W. T. Sherman, Memoirs, vi.

8. To deprive of strings; strip the strings from: as, to string beans.—9. To carve (lampreys). Babes Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 265.

II. intrans. 1. To stretch out into a string or strings when pulled; become stringy.

Let it [varnish] boil until it strings freely between the fingers. Workshop Receipts, 1st ser., p. 64.

2. To walk or move along in a string or disconnected line; straggle: as, they came stringing along. [Colloq.]—3. In billiards, to hit one's ball so that it will go the length of the table and back, to determine who shall open the game.

string-alphabet (string'al'fa-bet), n. An alphabet in which the letters are denoted by knots of various forms and combinations made in a string: used by the blind.

string-band (string'band), n. A band composed of stringed instruments, or the stringed instruments of such a band taken by themselves.

string-bark (string'bärk), n. Stringy-bark.

string-bean (string'bēn), n. A bean of which the green pods are used for food, prepared before cooking by stripping off the fibrous thread along their back. Varieties of the common kidney-bean, or French bean, are so treated.

string-block (string'blok), n. In pianoforte-making, the wooden block into which are driven the studs for holding the loops of the ends of the strings furthest from the tuning-pins.

string-board (string'börd), n. In carp., a board that supports any important part of a framework or structure; especially, a board which sustains the ends of the steps in a wooden staircase. Also called string-piece or stringer.

string-course (string'körs), n. In arch., a narrow molding or a projecting course continued horizontally along the face of a building, frequently under windows. It is sometimes merely a flat band, more often molded, and sometimes richly carved.

String-course (sculptured), 13th century. (From triforium of Amiens Cathedral, France.)

stringed (stringd), a. [< string + -ed<sup>2</sup>] 1. Having strings; furnished with strings: as, a stringed instrument.—2. Produced by strings or stringed instruments.

Divinely-warbled voice Answering the stringed noise.
Milton, Nativity, l. 97.

3. Fastened with a string or strings; tied.

Bob took up the small stringed packet of books.
George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, iv. 3.

4. In her., furnished with a string of any sort, as a cord or ribbon.

stringency (strin'jen-si), n. [< stringen(t) + -cy] Stringent character or condition. (a) Tightness; strictness: as, a stringency in the money-market. (b) Strictness; closeness; rigor: as, the stringency of the regulations was increased.

As the known exactness of the uniformity became greater, the stringency of the inference increased.
W. K. Clifford, Lectures, I. 166.

stringendo (strin-jen'dō), [It., ppr. of stringere, < L. stringere, draw tight, compress: see stringent.] In music, pressing or accelerating the tempo: usually with a crescendo. Also incalzando.

stringent (strin'jent), a. [< L. stringen(t)-s, ppr. of stringere, draw tight, compress, contract, touch, graze, stroke, etc.: see strain<sup>1</sup>, strict, and cf. strike.] 1. Tightening or binding; drawing tight. Thomson.—2. Straited; tight; constrained; hampered by scarcity or lack of available funds: as, a stringent money-market.—3. Strict; close; rigorous; rigid; exacting; urgent: as, to make stringent regulations.

stringently (strin'jent-li), adv. In a stringent manner; with stringency; tightly; rigorously; strictly. Bailey.

stringentness (strin'jent-nes), n. Stringency.

stringer (string'er), n. [< string + -er<sup>1</sup>] 1. One who strings. (a) One who makes or furnishes strings for a bow. Nares. (b) The workman who fits a piano with strings. (c) One who arranges on a string: as, a bead- or pearl-stringer.

2. A device for attaching piano-strings to a ridge cast specially for that purpose on the plate, instead of winding them around tuning wrest-pins inserted in the wrest-pin plank. It is a small hooked steel bar with a screw-threaded shank that is passed through the ridge and then secured by a nut. The wire string is first passed through a hole in the hooked end of the stringer, and then looped once around the hook.

In tuning, the string is tightened by turning the nut on the shank of the stringer.

3. In railway engine, a longitudinal timber on which a rail is fastened, and which rests on transverse sleepers.—4. In ship-building, an inside stroke of plank or of plates, secured to the ends supporting the ends of the beams; a frame-work. (b) Same as string-board.—5. In a truss or a truss-bridge.—7f. A forerunner; a wench.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

1. See cut under beam, 2 (g).—5. In carp.: A horizontal timber connecting two posts.

and southern Australia, in Victoria from its gregarious habit called messmate-tree (which see). A common stringy-bark of Victoria and New South Wales is E. macrorrhyncha, a smaller tree, the wood of which is used for various purposes. Other stringy-barks are E. capitellata, E. eugenioides, E. tetradonta, E. microcorys (mostly known as tallow-wood), E. piperita (white stringy-bark), and E. amygdalina; the last two are also called peppermint-tree. See cut under Eucalyptus. Also called string-bark.

Split string-bark timber is the usual material for fences in Australia, when procurable.

2. In Australia, a post and rail fence.

3. strinkle (string'kl), v. t. and i.; pret. and pp. strinkled, pp. strinkling. [< ME. strinken, strinken, strinken, freq. of strenken, sprinkle; origin uncertain. The resemblance to sprinkle is appar. accidental; but the word may be a var. of sprinkle, perhaps due to initial conformation with strew.] To strew or sprinkle sparingly. [Old Eng. and Scotch.]

4. strinkling (string'king), n. [Verbal n. of strinkle.] 1. The act of one who sprinkles.—2. That which is sprinkled; a small quantity.

Men whose brains were seasoned with some strinkings at least of madness and phrensy.

Dr. H. More, On Godliness, xiv. § 11. (Trench.)

5. striolate (stri'ol-ät), a. [< NL. **striolatus*, < **striola*, dim. of l. stria, a furrow: see stria.] In bot., minutely striate.

6. striole (stri'ol-et), n. [< NL. **striola* (dim. of l. stria) + -le.] In entom., a short stria or impressed line. Kuhny.

7. strip (strip), v.; pret. and pp. stripped or stript, pp. stripping. [< ME. stripen, streepon, stripen, stripen (pret. streepe, stripte, pp. strept, i-strept); < AS. **stripan*, **stripan*, in comp. be-stripan, rob, plunder. = MD. stroepen, rob, plunder, skin, strip, also bind, strain, etc., D. stroepen = MLG. ströpen, plunder, strip, = OHG. stroufen, MHG. stroufen, G. streifen, strip, skin, flay; (b) cf. D. strippen, strip (leaves), whip, = Lat. stripen, strip (leaves), etc., = MHG. ströfen, skin, flay. The two sets of forms (to either of which the ME. stripen, streepon could be referred) are more or less confused with each other, and with the forms of strip, stripe; but they appear to be orig. distinct. The two senses 'rob' or 'plunder' and 'skin' are not necessarily connected, though rob and reare supply a partial analogy.] 1. trans. 1. To rob; plunder; despoil; deprive; divest; bereave: with of before the thing taken away: as, to strip a man of his possessions; to strip a tree of its fruit.

Wherefore labour they to strip their adversaries of such furniture as doth not help? Hooker, Eccles. Polity, II. 7.

If such tricks . . . strip you out of your Lieutenantry. Shak., Othello, II. 1. 173.

Like Thieves when they have plundered and strip a man, leave him naked. Wackerley, Ep. Ded. to John Deane.

2. To deprive of covering; remove the skin or outer covering of; skin; peel: with of before the thing removed: as, to strip a beast of its skin; to strip a tree of its bark.

The forward, backward fall, the mare, the turn, the trip, when strip into their shirts, each other they invade. Within a spacious ring. Dryden, Polyolbon, I. 244.

A simple view of the object, as it stands stripped of every relation, in all the nakedness and solitude of metaphysical abstraction. Burke, Rev. in France.

3. To uncover; unsheathe.

On, or strip your sword stark naked. Shak., T. N., III. 4. 274.

4. To unrig; as, to strip a ship.—5. To tear off the thread of: said of a screw or bolt: as, the screw was stripped.—6. To pull or tear off, as a covering or some adhering substance: as, to strip the skin from a beast; to strip the bark from a tree; to strip the clothes from a man's back: sometimes emphasized with off.

And he stripped off his clothes also. 1 Sam. xix. 21.

She stripped it from her arm. Shak., Cymbeline, II. 4. 101.

7. To milk dry; press all the milk out of: as, to strip a cow.—8. In fish-culture, to press or squeeze the ripe roe or milt out of (fishes). After the fishes are stripped the spawn of opposite sexes is mixed together; and after this artificial fecundation the eggs are hatched by artificial methods.

9. In agri., to pare off the surface of in strips, and turn over the strips upon the adjoining surface. Imp. Dict.—10f. To separate; put away: with from.

His . . . unkindness, That stripped her from his benediction. Shak., Lear, iv. 3. 46.

11. In tabacco-manuf., to separate (the wings of the tobacco-leaf) from the stems. E. II. Knight.—12. In carding, to clean (the teeth of the various cylinders and top flats) from short fibers. E. II. Knight.—13. In file-making, to cross-file and draw-file (a file-blank) in order to bring it to accurate form and to clean the surface preliminary to grinding and cutting.—14. In mining, to remove the overlying soil or detrital material from (any bed or mineral deposit which it is desired to open and work).—15. In gun-making, to turn (the exterior of a gun-barrel) in a lathe in such manner that its longitudinal axis shall coincide with the axis of the bore.—16f. To run past or beyond; outrun; outstrip. See outstrip.

Alate we ran the deer, and through the lawns Stripped with our mags the lofty frolic bucks. Greene, Friar Bacon and Friar Bungay.

=Syn. 2. To denude, lay bare.

II. intrans. 1. To take off the covering or clothes; uncover; undress.—2. To lose the thread, as a screw, or have the screw stripped off, as a screw-bolt.—3. To issue from a rifled gun without assuming the spiral turn: said of a projectile. Farrow.—4. To come off, as an outer covering (as bark); separate from an underlying surface.—5. To be stripped of milt or spawn. Compare I., 8.

strip<sup>2</sup> (strip), n. [Another form of stripe: see stripe.] Strip is to stripe as bit to bite, smit to smite. It is commonly referred to strip<sup>1</sup>, v.] 1. A narrow piece, comparatively long: as, a strip of cloth; a strip of territory.—2. An ornamental appendage to women's dress, formerly worn: it is spoken of as worn on the neck and breast.

When a plum'd fan may shade thy chalked face, And lawny strips thy naked bosom grace. Bp. Hall, Satires, IV. iv. 61.

A stomacher upon her breast so bare, For strips and forget were not then the wear. Dr. Smith, Penelope and Ulysses, I. 1658.

3. A striping; a slip. George Eliot, Middlemarch, xvi.—4. In joinery, a narrow piece of board nailed over a crack or joint between planks.—5. In mining, one of a series of troughs forming a labyrinth, or some similar arrangement, through which the ore flows as it comes from the stamps, and in which the particles are deposited in the order of their equivalence.

strip<sup>3</sup> (strip), n. [Se. also stripe, streak, dim. striptic; perhaps another use of strip<sup>2</sup>. Cf. strip-pet.] 1. A rill. [Scotch.]—2. Destruction of fences, buildings, timber, etc.; waste. [U. S.]

strip-armor (strip'är-mör), n. Armor, especially for the legs, used in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, and showing broad raised strips alternating with sunken bands.

stripe (strip), n. [< ME. stripe (stripe, prob. also stripe, > E. strip<sup>2</sup>), < MD. stripe, streyde, D. streyep = MLG. stripe, LG. stripe, a stripe or strip, = MHG. G. streif = Dan. stribe (< D.). a stripe, strip; cf. strip<sup>1</sup>, strip<sup>2</sup>.] 1. A streak of a different color from that of the ground; a long narrow division of something of a different color from the ground: as, a stripe of red on a green ground; hence, any linear variation of color. Compare streak<sup>2</sup>, stria, striga.—2. A narrow piece attached to something of a different color or texture: as, the red stripe on the leg of a soldier's trousers.—3. Generally, a strip or narrow piece.

The whole ground that is sown, to the sandy ascent of the mountain, is but a narrow stripe of three quarters of a mile broad. Bruce, Source of the Nile, I. 76.

4. A long narrow discolored mark made on flesh by the stroke of a lash or rod; a walo; hence, a stroke made with a lash, whip, rod, strap, or scourge.

Forty stripes he may give him, and not exceed. Deut. xxv. 3.

5f. A blow; a stroke.

Every one gye but one sner stripe, & snerly ye lorney is ours. Hall, Chiron, Rich. III., an. 3.

But, when he could not quite it, with one stripe Her lions claws he from her feete away did wipe. Spenser, F. Q., V. xi. 27.

6. Distinctive color; particular kind or character; hence, distinguishing characteristic: as, a politician of the Republican stripe.

I shall go on; and first in differing stripe The flood-god's speech thus tune an oaten pipe. B. Browne, Britannia's Pastorals, I. 2.

Various poems are of a democratic, liberal stripe, inspired by the struggle then commencing over Europe. Stedman, Vict. Poets, p. 250.

Bengal stripe, a kind of cotton cloth woven with colored stripes; ghingham.—Cyrus stripe, a long thin stripe of cyrus cloud, generally occurring in parallel rows which, by the effect of perspective, usually appear to be convergent. The motion of these stripes is usually either broadside forward, or oblique to their length.

Cyrus-stripes lie in regions of maximum pressure most often nearly perpendicular to the isobar. J. Hercomby, Weather, p. 92.

Doble's stripe. Same as Krause's membrane (which see, under membrane).—Spanish stripes. See Spanish.—Stars and stripes. See star.—To come to hand stripes! to come to close quarters; fight hand to hand. Brende, tr. of Quintus Curtius, ix.

stripe (strip), v. t.; pret. and pp. striped, ppr. stripping. [< stripe, n.] 1. To make stripes upon; form with lines of different colors; variegate with stripes.—2. To strike; lash. [Rare.]—3*f*. To thrust.

He has striped his bright brown brand
Out through Clerk Saunders' fair bodye.
Clerk Saunders (Child's Ballads, II. 48).

Droved and striped. See drove.
striped (stri'ped or stript), a. 1. Having stripes. See streaked. Striped and streaked are synonymous, but differ slightly as stripe and streak do, the former implying greater firmness, evenness, and regularity of the markings indicated: as, a striped zebra; streaked soap.—Striped-barked maple, striped dogwood. Same as striped maple.—Striped dormouse, function, jasper. See the nouns.—Striped grass. Same as rib-bon-grass.—Striped maple, mullet, perch, snake, spinebilly, etc. See the nouns.—Striped muscle, striated muscle. See muscular tissue (with cut), under muscular.—Striped squirrel, the chipmunk.

striped-bass (stri'ped-bas), n. Roccus lineatus, the bass or rockfish. See cuts under bass and gill. [U.S.]

stripetail (stript'ál), n. A humming-bird of the genus Eupherusa, of which there are several species.

strip-leaf (stripl'lef), n. Tobacco from which the stalks have been removed before packing.

strip-lights (stripl'its), n. pl. In a theater, rows of lights fastened behind wings.

stripling (stripl'ing), n. [Appar. < strip<sup>2</sup> + -ing<sup>1</sup>.] A youth in the state of adolescence, or just passing from boyhood to manhood; a lad. Manderille, Travels, p. 278.

And the king said, Enquire thou whose son the strip-ling is 1 Sam. xvii. 36.

And now a stripling cherub he appears.
Milton, P. L., iii. 630.

stripper (stripr'er), n. [< strip<sup>1</sup> + -er<sup>1</sup>.] One who strips, or an implement or machine used for stripping. Specifically—(a) In wool-carding: (1) A small card-roll the function of which is to remove or strip the fiber from another roll in a carding machine. The fiber thus stripped off is delivered to some other carding-roll or worker. In some carding machines a stripper is used to take the wool from the licker-in and deliver it to the breast-cylinder. (2) An automatic device for lifting the top cards or flats employed in some kinds of wool-carding machines. Also called angle-stripper. (b) A machine for smoothing down old and worn-out files to make them ready for recutting, a file-stripper. (c) An implement used on oster-farms for stripping off willow-bark. One form is an annular scraper through which the willows or switches are drawn after starting the bark sufficiently to allow the wool to pass through the scraper and be grasped by a pair of nippers. The bark thus stripped off is used for medicinal purposes, and the peeled switches are used for baskets and other willow wares.

strippet (stript'et), n. [< strip<sup>3</sup> + -et<sup>1</sup>.] A small brook; a rivulet. Holmshed, Descrip. of Scotland, x.

stripping (stripl'ing), n. [Verbal n. of strip<sup>1</sup>, v.] 1. That which is removed by stripping.

Light strippings from the fan-trees.
Brounng, Paracelsus, iv.

2. pl. The last milk drawn from a cow, procured by a downward stripping action of the thumb and forefinger.—3. In fish-culture, the operation of pressing ripe spawn or milt out of the live fish.—4. In quarrying and mining, the act of removing the superficial detritus, soil, etc., preparatory to opening a mine or quarry, or to lay bare the surface for examination; also, the material thus removed.

stripping-knife (stripl'ing-nif), n. A knife for separating the blades of sorghum from the stalks to prepare them for grinding. E. H. Knight.

stripping-plate (stripl'ing-plát), n. A fixed plate attached to the frame of a roller, to scrape or strip off any adhering material, as in paint-grinding mills, clay-crushers, and in some rolling-mills for metals which adhere to rollers.

stripulose (stripl'ú-lós), a. In entom., covered with coarse, decumbent hairs, as the elytra of certain beetles.

stripy (stripi'), a. Stripe-like; occurring in stripes; marked by streaks or stripes.

Strisores (stri-só-réz), n. pl. [NL.; origin obscure.] An artificial order or suborder of birds, including a number of picarian families. It was divided by Cabanis into Macrochires (the humming-birds, swifts, and goatsuckers) and Amphibolae (the colles, toura-cous, and hoatzins) [Not in use.]

stritchel (strich'el), n. An assimilated form of strickle.

strive (striv), v. i.; pret. strove, pp. striven (formerly also strived, Rom. xv. 20), ppr. striving. [< ME. striven, stryven, strifen (orig. a weak verb, pret. strived, afterward conformed to the analogy of strong verbs like drive, pret. drove, with pret. strof, strove, pp. striven). < OF. estriver = Pr. estibar, strive, prob. *< OHG. *striban*, in deriv. weak verb, MHG. G. streben = D. streven = MLG. streven, LG. streven = Sw. sträfa = Dan. stræbe, strive; cf. Icel. stríða = Sw. strida, strive: see stride, and cf. strife.] 1. To make strenuous effort; endeavor earnestly; labor hard; do one's endeavor; try earnestly and persistently: followed by an infinitive: as, he strove hard to win the prize; to strive to excel; to strive to pay one's way.

Strive to enter in at the strait gate. Luke xiii. 24.

I'll strive . . . to take a nap. Shak., Rich. III., v. 3. 104.

When there is perfect sincerity—when each man is true to himself—when everyone strives to realize what he thinks the highest rectitude—then must all things prosper.
H. Spencer, Social Statics, p. 518.

2. To contend; struggle; battle; fight: followed by with, against, or for: as, to strive against fate; to strive for the truth.

First with thil bettir be waar for to stryue, Agens thil felaw noo quarel thou contriue.
Diabes Book (L. E. T. S.), p. 68.

While Iesvs stroue with Sathans strong Temptations.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, l. 1.

Against the Deity 'tis hard to strive.

Prior, Second Hymn of Callimachus.
Striving with love and hate, with life and death,
With hope that lies, and fear that threateneth.
William Morris, Earthly Paradise, II. 151.

3. To vie; contend for preëminence: with with.
With the rose colour stroof hire hewe.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 180.

Nor that sweet grove
Of Daphne by Orontes, and the inspired Castalian spring, might with this Paradise
Of Eden strive.
Milton, P. L., iv. 275.

4. To quarrel or contend with one another; be at variance one with another, or come to be so; be in contention, dispute, or altercation.
Do as adversaries do in law,
Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends.
Shak., T. of the S., i. 2. 270.

5. To oppose by contrariety of qualities: with with.
Now private pity strove with publick hate,
Reason with rage, and cloquence with fate.
Sir J. Denham, On the Earl of Strafford's Trial [and Death].

= Syn. 1. Undertake, Endeavor, etc. (see attempt); seek, aim, toll.—2. To compete, contest.—4. To dispute, wrangle.

strive (striv), n. [< strive, v.] A striving; an effort; a strife. [Old Eng. and Scotch.]

striver (stri'vér), n. [< strive + -er<sup>1</sup>.] One who strives or contends; one who makes efforts of body or mind. Glanville.

striving (stri'ving), n. [Verbal n. of strive, v.] Strenuous or earnest effort; struggle; endeavor.

Failure after long perseverance is much grander than never to have a striving good enough to be called a failure.
George Eliot, Middlemarch, xxii.

strivingly (stri'ving-li), adv. In a striving manner; with earnest or persistent efforts or struggles. Imp. Dict.

Strix (striks), n. [NL., < L. strix (strig-), < Gr. στρίξ (striks), a screech-owl, perhaps *< *striksin*, equiv. to στρίλα, creek, grate, croak.] A Linnean genus of owls. (a) Containing all the Strixes. (b) Restricted to the barn-owls. Same as Aluco. See cut under barn-owl. (c) Restricted to the wood-owls, like Strix stridula, having the facial disk complete, circular, and no plumicorns. In this sense it is now commonly employed. The common barred owl of the United States is Strix nebulosa. See cut in preceding column.

Barred Owl (Strix nebulosa).

stroakt, stroakingt. Obsolete spellings of stroke<sup>1</sup>, stroking.

stroamt (ström), v. i. [Prob. a var. of stream (as soam<sup>2</sup> for seam<sup>2</sup>), perhaps associated with room: see stream.] 1*f*. To wander about idly and vacantly.—2. To walk with long strides. [Prov. Eng.]

He, ejaculating blessings upon his parents, and calling for just vengeance upon himself, stroamed up and down the room. Mme. D'Arblay, Camilla, iii. 10. (David.)

strob (strob), n. [< Gr. στρόβος, a twisting or whirling round, < στρέφειν, turn, twist. Cf. strobile, strophe.] The angular velocity of one radian per second.

strobic (strob'ik), a. [< strob + -ic.] Appearing to spin.—Strobic circles, a number of circles drawn concentrically which appear to spin round when they are moved about.

strobila (strō-bī'lā), n.; pl. strobilæ (-lē). [NL., < Gr. στροβίλα, a plug of lint like a pine-cone, cf. στροβίλος, anything twisted, a pine-cone, etc.: see strobile.] In zool.: (a) In Hydrozoa, a stage in the development of a discophoran, supervening upon the scyphistoma or hydra-tuba stage by the development of ephyrae, and before these become detached from one another and from the stalk upon which they grow. See ephyra, 1, and scyphistoma.

(b) In Ferres, a segmented tapeworm; the chain of zooids formed by a scolex and the proglottides which have successively budded from it. (c) [cap.] [NL.] A supposed genus of aculephs, based on the strobiliform stage of certain hydrozoans. Sars, 1835.

(d) [cap.] [NL.] In entom., a genus of lepidopterous insects. Sodoffsky, 1837.

strobilaceous (strob-i-lā'shius), a. [< strobile + -aceous.] 1. Resembling a strobile; strobiliform.—2. Bearing strobiles; strobiliferous.

strobilæ, n. Plural of strobila.

Strobilanthes (strob-i-lan'thēz), n. [NL. (Blume, 1825), so called from the inflorescence, usually cone-like when in bud; < Gr. στροβίλος, a pine-cone, + άνθος, a flower.] A genus of gamopetalous plants, of the order Acanthaceæ and tribe Ruellieæ. It is characterized by flowers with acute linear calyx-lobes, a somewhat equally five-lobed corolla with a short or long and slender tube, stamens four and perfect and two perfect and two rudimentary, and two or perhaps rarely three ovules in each of the two ovary-cells. There are about 180 species, natives mostly of India, scantily represented in China, Japan, and Malaysia, with one species in tropical Africa. They are herbs or shrubs, commonly erect, bearing opposite entire or toothed leaves, which are in a few species very unequal in the same pair. Their usually rather large and handsome flowers are often blue or purple, and form dense or interrupted spikes which are terminal or crowded in the axils, and are sometimes replaced by a panicle or cyme. The fruit is an oblong or linear capsule slightly contracted at the base. Several species are cultivated for ornament, sometimes under the name cone-head. S. flaccidifolia yields the room, or maigye dye, of India, etc. See room<sup>2</sup>, and cut under stoma, 2.

strobilate (strob'i-lāt), v. i.; pret. and pp. strobilated, ppr. strobilating. [< strobile + -ate<sup>2</sup>.] To form or develop strobiles; be or become a strobile; effect strobilation.

strobilation (strob-i-lā'shon), n. [< strobilat + -ion.] 1. Formation or production of strobiles; metameric division of a scyphistoma or hydra tuba into medusæ.—2. Gemmation of the successive links or joints of a tapeworm: also, the transverse fission of various worms.

strobile (strob'il), n. [= F. strobile = G. strobil, a pine-cone, < LL. strobilus, a pine-cone, < Gr. στροβίλος, anything twisted, a pine-cone, a top, sea-snail, whirlpool, twist or turn, etc., < στρέφειν, turn, twist, spin.] 1. In bot., a cone (which see, and cuts under Lepidostrobilus and pericarp). Also strobilus.

With reference to fructification, the form of Lycopodium Milleri renders it certain that it must have borne strobiles at the ends of its branchlets, or some substitute for these, and not naked spore-cases like those of Psilophyton. Dawson, Geol. Hist. of Plants, p. 101.

2. In zool., a strobila. Quain, Med. Dict., p. 1587.

Two Strobiles or Strobila, a, b, of Cyanea capillata, resulting from fission of the hydra tubae of the scyphistoma stage. At a tentacles are developed at the lower end of the two ephyrae borne upon the stalk of the strobila.

strobiliferous (strob-i-lif'e-rus), a. [< L. strobilus (see strobile, 2) + fërre = E. bear.<sup>1</sup>.] In zool., bearing a strobile or chain of zooids: as, the strobiliferous stage of an acleph or a worm.
strobiliform (strō-bil'i-fōrm), a. [< L. strobilus (see strobile) + forma, form.] In bot. and zool., having the form or character of a strobile.
strobiline (strob'i-lin), a. [< Gr. στροβίλος, of a pine-cone, < στροβίλος, a pine-cone: < στροβίλος, a pine-cone.] Of or pertaining to a strobile or strobiles; strobiliform; strobilaceous.
strobilite (strob'i-lit), n. [< Gr. στροβίλος, a pine-cone, + -ite.] A fossil pine-cone, or something supposed to be the fruit of a coniferous tree.
strobilization (strob'i-li-zā'shon), n. [< strobile + -ization.] Same as strobilation.

The second mode of reproduction of Seyphistoma, the process of strobilation, begins later.
Claus, Zool. (trans.), p. 256.

strobiloid (strob'i-loid), a. [< Gr. στροβίλος, a pine-cone, + eidōs, form.] Like a strobile; strobiliform: as, strobiloid gemmation; strobiloid buds. Encyc. Brit.

strobilophagous (strob-i-lof'a-gus), a. [< NL. strobilophaga (Vieillot, 1816), a genus of birds (the same as Pinicola, q. v.). < Gr. στροβίλος, a pine-cone, + φαγῶν, eat.] Feeding upon pine-cones, as a bird.

Strobilosaura (strō-bi-lō-sā'rā), n. pl. [< NL. < Gr. στροβίλος, a pine-cone, + σαῦρα, a lizard.] A former superfamily of Lacertilia, having a fleshy inextensible tongue, eyelids, developed limbs, and acrodont or pleurodont dentition. It included the families Agamidae and Iguanidae. Also Strobilosauria.

strobilosauran (strō-bi-lō-sā'ran), a. and n. [< Strobilosaura + -an.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the Strobilosauria; agamoid or iguanoid. II. n. A member of the Strobilosauria. Also strobilosaurian.

strobilure (strob'i-lūr), n. [< NL. Strobilurus.] A lizard of the genus Strobilurus.

Strobilurus (strob-i-lū'rus), n. [< NL. (Wiegmann), < Gr. στροβίλος, a pine-cone, + οἶσα, tail.] A genus of South American iguanoid lizards, having the tail ringed with spinose scales (whence the name). S. torquatus is the Brazilian strobilure.

strobilus (strō-bi'lus), n. Same as strobile.
stroboscope (strob'ō-skōp), n. [< Gr. στροβίλος, a twisting or whirling round (< στροβίλος, turn, twist: see strobile), + σκοπεῖν, view.] An instrument used in the study of the periodic motion of a body, as one in rapid revolution or vibration, by illuminating it at frequent intervals (for example, by electric sparks or by a beam of light made intermittent by passing through a moving perforated plate), or again by viewing it through the openings of a revolving disk: also used as a toy. The phenakistoscope and zoötrope represent one form of stroboscope.

stroboscopic (strob'ō-skōp'ik), a. [< stroboscope + -ic.] Pertaining to the stroboscope, to observations made with it, or to the physical principle involved in its use. Nature, XXXIX, 451.

strocalit, strocklet, stroclet, n. See stroke.
strode (strōd). Preterit of stride.

strofi. An obsolete form of the preterit of strive.

strogleit, v. i. A Middle English form of struggle.
stroil, v. t. See stroy.

stroil (stroil), n. [Also stroyl; origin obscure.] The couch- or quitch-grass, Agropyrum repens: applied especially to the white and worm-like roots. See cut under quitch-grass. Britten and Holland. [Prov. Eng.]

strokali, n. See stroke.

stroke<sup>1</sup> (strōk), n. [Formerly also stroak; < ME. strook, strok, strak, < AS. strāc (= MHG. G. streich, a stroke), < strican (pret. strāc), go, pass along, etc.: see strike, v., and cf. strike, n., stroke<sup>2</sup>, streak<sup>2</sup>, n.] 1. A sweeping movement of a sustained object; the moving of something held or supported through a limited course; in naut., one of a series of alternating continuous movements of something back and forth over or through the same line: as, the strokes of an oar; a stroke of a pen in writing; the strokes of a file, a saw, a piston-rod, or a pump-handle; the length of stroke of a pendulum.

A few strokes of his muscular arms, and he is reached by the launch and swings himself up into her bows.
St. Nicholas, XVII, 384.

In a stroke or two the canoes were away out in the middle of the Scheldt. R. L. Stevenson, Inland Voyage, p. 11.

2. In rowing, specifically—(a) The manner or style of moving the oars or making strokes; the handling of the oars: as, to set the stroke for the race; the stroke was very rapid or exhausting. (b) The guiding-stroke: as, to pull stroke in a race. (c) The rower who sets the stroke; the stroke-oar or strokesman.—3. A line or mark impressed by or as if by a sweeping movement; hence, a part of an impression of any kind appearing as if so made: as, the hair-strokes, curved strokes, or up-and-down strokes of a letter; fine or coarse strokes in an engraving. See cut under type.

Carracci's strength, Correggio's softer line,
 Paulo's free stroke, and Titian's warmth divine.
Pope, To Mr. Jervas, l. 38.

4. A throb; a pulsation; a beat.

For twenty strokes of the blood, without a word,
 Linger'd that other, staving after him.
Tennyson, Lancelot and Elaine.

5. In musical instruments with a keyboard, the range of motion of a key.—6. A striking of one body or mass upon another; a sudden impact of an object moved or hurled through space; a blow or concussion, especially one administered or effected by design or in some definite manner: as, a stroke of the fist or of a sword; the stroke of a hammer; the stroke of a bat, a cue, or a mallet against a ball (in various games).
 He smote a-bout the hymn grete strokes bothe on the left syde and on the right side. Martin (E. E. T. S.), l. 118.
 How now! what noise? That spirit's possess'd with haste
 That wounds the unresisting postern with these strokes.
Shak., M. for M., iv. 2. 92.

7. A sudden or special effect produced upon an object as if by a striking movement; a result or consequence of the action of some rapidly working or efficient agency or cause: as, a stroke of lightning; a stroke of paralysis (for which the word stroke is often used absolutely, both colloquially and by physicians); the stroke of fate or of death: used in the Bible especially of a divine chastisement or judgment.

Remove thy stroke away from me. Ps. xaxix. 10.
 When I did speak of some distressful stroke
 That my youth suffer'd. Shak., Othello, i. 3. 157.

She'll make you shrink, as I did, with a stroke
 But of her eye, Tigranes.
Beau. and Fl., King and No King, i. 1.

A stroke of cruel sunshine on the cliff.
Tennyson, Princess, iv.

8. A sound of striking; a resonant concussion; a giving out of sounds by striking: as, the strokes of a bell or a hammer; the clock is on (that is, on the point of giving out) the stroke of twelve.

His hour's upon the stroke.
Beau. and Fl., Thierry and Theodoret, iii. 2.

9. An effective movement, action, or expression; an energetic touch, effort, or exertion; a piece or course of activity: as, a good stroke of business; he will not do a stroke of work; a bold stroke for liberty.

The boldest strokes of poetry, when they are managed artfully, are those which most delight the reader.
Dryden, State of Innocence, Pref.

I am heartily glad to hear Mr. Cook has given the finishing stroke to your fine chapel.
Dr. Plot, in Letters of Eminent Men, l. 74.

Christianity [is] the greatest and happiest stroke ever yet made for human perfection.
M. Arnold, Literature and Dogma, iv.

10. A trait; a feature; a characteristic.

In its main strokes, it accords with the Aristotelian philosophy.
Parker, Platonic Philosophy, 2d ed., p. 42.

I have the highest idea of the spiritual and refined sentiments of this reverend gentleman, from this single stroke in his character.
Sterne, Tristram Shandy, l. 10.

11. A feat; a thing successfully done; a coup.
 To wake the soul by tender strokes of art.
Addison, Cato, Prol.

But the advance in double column against the combined fleets was a stroke of genius as affairs stood.
The Academy, June 28, 1890, p. 437.

12. Capacity for doing anything; effective ability; skill in action or manipulation.

Neither can any man be entertained as a Soldier that has not a greater stroke than ordinary at eating.
Dampier, Voyages, II. i. 71.

13. Moving or controlling power; influence; sway; ascendancy; standing; importance.

They . . . which otherwise have any stroke in the disposition of such preferments. Hooker, Eccles. Polity, v. 81.

In this new state of government, Appius was the man that bare the greatest stroke; he ruled the rostrum and swayed all the rest.
Holland, tr. of Livy (ed. 1699), p. 109.

A stroke above, a degree above; of somewhat higher grade or quality than. [Colloq.]
 She was a stroke above the other girls. Dickens.

Indoor stroke. See outdoor, 3.—Split stroke. See split.
Stroke of the glottis. See glottis.—To keep stroke, in rowing, to move the oars in unison.

stroke<sup>1</sup> (strōk), v. t.; pret. and pp. stroked, ppr. stroking. [< stroke<sup>1</sup>, n.] To act as stroke or strokesman to; to handle the stroke-oar for or of. [Recent.]

The Yale crew have lost their stroke. . . . He stroked the university crew to victory in six races.
Harper's Weekly, XXXIII, 571.

stroke<sup>2</sup> (strōk), v. t.; pret. and pp. stroked, ppr. stroking. [Also dial. (Sc.) strake, straik; < ME. straken, straken, < AS. strācian (= D. strijken = OHG. streichen, MHG. G. streichen, also freq. streicheln), stroke, causal form of strican, etc., go, strike: see strike, and cf. stroke<sup>1</sup>. Cf. Sw. stryka, Dan. stryge, Icel. stryka, stroke (see stroll).] 1. To pass the hands or an instrument over (something) lightly or with little pressure; rub, or rub down, with a gentle movement in a single direction: an action often performed for soothing or caressing a person or an animal, also for smoothing or polishing an object, etc., and sometimes as a curative process.

She stroaked my head, and she kembed my hair.
Alison Gross (Child's Ballads, l. 168).

And then another pause; and then,
 Stroking his beard, he said again.
Longfellow, Wayside Inn, Second Interlude.

2. Hence, figuratively, to soothe; flatter; pacify; encourage. [Now prov. Eng.]

Such smooth soft language as each line Might stroke an angry god, or stay Jove's thunder. Caesar, To My Rival.

3. To affect in some way by a rubbing action.

What a slovenly little villian art thou!
 Why dost thou not stroke up thy hair?
Beau. and Fl., Woman-Hater, v. 5.

The ancient Chinese were very proud of the Hair of their Heads, letting it grow very long, and stroking it back with their hands curiously. Dampier, Voyages, l. 407.

4. In masonry, to work the face of (a stone) in such a manner as to produce a sort of fluted surface.—To stroke the wrong way (of the hair, expressed or implied), to go against the grain of; ruffle or annoy, as by opposition: from the irritating effect on an animal, especially a cat, of rubbing up the fur by stroking it in the direction opposite to the way it lies.

stroke<sup>2</sup> (strōk), n. [< stroke<sup>2</sup>, v.] An act of stroking; a stroking caress.

His white-man'd steeds, that bow'd beneath the yoke,
 He cheer'd to courage with a gentle stroke.
Dryden, tr. of Ovid's Metamorph., xii. 108.

stroke<sup>3</sup>. An obsolete form of the preterit of strike.

stroke-gear (strōk'gēr), n. In machine-tools having a reciprocating cutter, that part of the gearing by which the forward and backward strokes of the tool-slide are effected—the return stroke being usually made with much greater velocity than the cutting stroke.

stroke-hole (strōk'hōl), n. In golf, a hole at which, in handicapping, a stroke is given.

stroke-oar (strōk'ōr), n. 1. The aftermost oar in a rowboat, to the strokes of which those of the other oars must be conformed.—2. The oarsman who handles the stroke-oar; the strokesman.

stroke-oarsman (strōk'ōrz'mān), n. One who handles the stroke-oar. In a whale-boat the stroke-oarsman is usually the lightest man of the crew. Also called after-oarsman.

stroker (strōk'ēr), n. [< stroke<sup>2</sup> + -er.] 1. One who strokes; formerly, one who practised stroking as a method of cure.

Cures worked by Greatrix the stroker.
Warburton, Works, X, xxvii.

2. A soothing flatterer; a fawning sycophant. [Rare.]

What you please, Dame Polish,
 My lady's stroker.
B. Jonson, Magnetick Lady, iv. 1.

3. In printing, a form of wood or bone paper-folier with which the layer-on or feeder strokes or brings forward separate sheets of paper to the grippers of a printing-machine. [Eng.]—Stroker in, in printing, the workman who strokes or combs separate sheets of paper to the grippers of a printing-machine. [Eng.]

strokesman (strōks'mān), n.; pl. strokesmen (-men). [< stroke<sup>2</sup>, poss. of stroke, + man.] A stroke-oar or stroke.

stroking (strō'king), n. [Formerly also stroaking; verbal n. of stroke<sup>2</sup>, v.] 1. The act of passing the hand over a surface.—2. pl. The last milk drawn from a cow, pressed out by gentle stroking; strippings. [Prov. Eng.]

The cook entertained me with choice bits, the dairy-maid with stroking.
Smollett, Roderick Random, xl. (Davies.)

stroklet, n. [Also strocle, strocle, strokal, strocal; appar. a var., simulating stroke, of strickle.] A glassmakers' shovel with recurved edges, for handling sand and other materials. Blount, Glossographia, p. 615.

stroll (stról), v. i. [Early mod. E. also strowl, stroule, stroyle; appar. contracted from a ME. form **strouklen*, < MD. struyckelen, D. struikelen, stumple, = MHG. strücheln, G. straucheln, stumple, G. dial. (Swiss) strolchen, rove, freq. of OHG. strühhōn, MHG. strüchen, stumple; = Icel. strjúka, stroke, rub, brush, flog, etc., go off, stray, = Dan. stryge = Sw. stryka, stroke, stroll, ramble; cf. Sw. stryker, dial. strykel, a stroller. Akin to struggle, q. v., but prob. not to straggle, which, with strakel, etc., belongs to AS. strican, ME. striken, go, proceed, wander, = G. streichen, go (> streich, a stroller), etc.: see strike, strakel, straggle, etc., struggle.] 1. To saunter from point to point on foot; walk leisurely as inclination directs; ramble, especially for some particular purpose or aim.

An elderly dame dwells in my neighborhood. . . . In whose odoriferous herb garden I love to stroll sometimes, gathering simples. Thoreau, Walden, p. 149.

There was something soothing, something pleasant, in thus strolling along the path by the flowing river.

Mrs. Oliphant, Poor Gentleman, xxxix.

2. To rove from place to place; go about deviously as chance or opportunity offers; roam; wander; tramp; used especially of persons who lead a roaming life in search of occupation or subsistence.

In 1703, "3 strolling Gipsies are ordered down to Huntington to be Tried for Robbing two Women."

Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, II. 222.

He turned strolling player; but his force and figure were ill suited to the boards.

Macaulay, Goldsmith.

3. To turn in different directions; veer or glance about; rove, as the eyes. [Rare.]

The am'rous Eyes thus always go

A strolling for their Friends below.

Prior, Alma, II.

=Syn. 1 and 2. Saunter, Wander, etc. See ramble, v.

stroll (stról), n. [< stroll, v.] 1. A wandering along or about; a leisurely walk; a saunter.

Bright days, when a stroll is my afternoon wont,
And I meet all the people I do know or don't

F. Locker, Piccadilly.

2. A stroller.

We'll entertain no mountebanking stroll,
No piper, fiddler, tumbler through small hoops,
No ape-carrier, baboon bearer.

Middleton and Rowley, Spanish Gypsy, II. 1.

3. A narrow strip of land. Hallucell. [Prov. Eng.]

stroller (stró'ler), n. [< stroll + -er.] One who strolls; a wanderer; a straggler; a vagabond; especially, an itinerant performer.

When strollers durst presume to pick your purse,
Dryden, Fifth Act to Univ. of Oxford.

He had been stolen away when he was a child by a gipsy, and had rambled ever since with a gang of those strollers up and down several parts of Europe.

Addison, Sir Roger and the Gipsies.

We allow no strollers or vagrants here.

Scott, Heart of Mid Lothian, xxxii.

strom<sup>1</sup>, n. A Middle English form of stream.

strom<sup>2</sup> (strom), n. [Origin obscure.] An instrument to keep the malt in the vat. Bailey, 1731. [Prov. Eng.]

stroma (stró'mij), n.; pl. stromata (-mā-tij). [NL., < L. stroma, < Gr. στρομα (stroma), a covering, a coverlet, < στρομεναι, stromenai, spread, spread out, strew: see strew, stratum.]

1. In anat.: The sustentacular tissue or substance of a part or organ, usually of connective tissue.—2. In bot.: (a) In fungi, a variably shaped more or less continuous layer of cellular tissue, in which perithecia or other organs of fructification are immersed. Sometimes called receptacle. See cut under ergot. (b) In vegetable physiology, the solid matter remaining after all the fluid has been expressed from protoplasm. Goudale.—Cancer stroma, the interlacing connective-tissue framework containing the alveoli of cancer-cells.—Intertubular stroma, the connective-tissue framework which supports the tubules of the kidney, and which contains the blood-vessels, lymphatics, nerves, etc.—Stroma fibrin, fibrin formed from the stroma of the blood-corpuses.—Stroma of red blood-corpuses, that part of those corpuses which remains after the hemoglobin is removed.—Stroma of the ovary, the connective tissue of the ovary. Formerly the ova were supposed to originate in this stroma. They are, however, derived from the investing cell-layer or germ-epithelium of the ovary, from which multitudinous cells, some of them to become ova, penetrate the stroma.

Stromateidae (stró-mā-tē-i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Stromateus + -idae.] A family of acanthopterygian fishes, typified by the genus Stromateus, related to the scombroids and carangoids.

They have large denticulous or saciform gill-rakers on the last branchial arch, extending into the esophagus; a single long dorsal fin with a few spines in front; and the ventrals, when present, generally under the pectorals, but in the typical forms more or less reduced, or absent. They are small fishes of most warm seas, of about 6 genera and 25 species, divided into Stromateinae and Centrolophinae. Also Stromateina, as a division of Scombridae.

stromateine (stró-mat'ē-in), a. and n. [< Stromateus + -ine.] 1. a. Of, or having characters of, the Stromateidae.

II. n. A fish of the family Stromateidae.

stromateoid (stró-mat'ē-oid), a. and n. [< Stromateus + -oid.] Same as stromateine.

Stromateoides (stró-mā-tē-oi-dēz), n. [NL. (Bleeker, 1857), < Stromateus + Gr. eidōs, form.]

A genus of stromateoid fishes, with restricted branchial apertures. S. sinensis is the white and S. cinereus the gray pomfret. See cut under pomfret.

Stromateus (stró-mat'ē-us), n. [NL. (Linnaeus, 1748), < Gr. στροματις, a coverlet, a bag for bed-clothes (in pl. patchwork), a kind of fish, < στρομα (stroma), a coverlet or spread (in allusion to the color of the typical species, supposed to resemble that of a spread or carpet): see stroma.] The typical genus of the family Stromateidae, in which the ventral fins are lost in the adult, the caudal peduncle is not keeled, and the gill-membranes are free from the isthmus. There are a number of species, of tropical to warm temperate seas. One of the best-known is S. triacanthus of the Atlantic coast of the United States, variously called butter-fish, harvest-fish, and dollar-fish. (See cut under butter-fish.) A very similar species is S. alepidotus; another is S. simillimus of the Californian coast, highly esteemed as a food-fish, known in the markets of San Francisco as the pompano. See pompano, 2.

stromatic<sup>1</sup> (stró-mat'ik), a. [< stroma (-t) + -ic.]

In anat., physiol., and bot., of the nature of a stroma; resembling a stroma; stromatous.

stromatic<sup>2</sup> (stró-mat'ik), a. [< Gr. Στροματικά, a false reading for Στροματις, i. e. 'patchwork', 'miscellany', the title of a work by Clement of Alexandria; pl. of στροματις, a coverlet: see Stromateus.] Miscellaneous; composed of different kinds. [Rare.]

stromatiform (stró-mā-ti-fórm), a. [< NL. stroma (-t), q. v., + L. forma, form.] In bot., having the form of a stroma.

Stromatopora (stró-mā-top'ō-rī), n. [NL. (De Blainville, 1830), < Gr. στρομα (-t), a covering, + πόρος, pore.] 1. The typical genus of Stromatoporidae.—2. [l. c.] A member of this genus.

Stromatoporidae (stró-mā-tō-pōr'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Stromatopora + -idae.] A family of hydrocoralline corals, typified by the genus Stromatopora. They are all of Paleozoic age.

Also Stromatoporoidea.

stromatoporoid (stró-mā-top'ō-roid), a. and n. [< Stromatopora + -oid.] 1. a. Pertaining to the Stromatoporidae, or having their characters.

II. n. A member of the Stromatoporidae.

stromatus (stró-mā-tus), a. [< stroma (-t) + -atus.] 1. Of or pertaining to stroma.—2. In bot., bearing or producing a stroma.

stromb (strom), n. [< NL. Strombus.] A conch of the family Strombidae, and especially of the genus Strombus; a wing-shell; a fountain-shell.

The best-known stromb is S. gigas, whose delicate pink shell is used for cameo-cutting, and also ground up in the manufacture of some fine kinds of porcelain, for which purposes it is said that 300,000 were imported into England in one year from the Bahamas. Another well-known species is S. pugilis, so called from the red, as if bloody, mouth. See also cut under wing-shell.

Strombidæ (strom'bi-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Strombus + -idae.] A family of tænioglossate siphonostomatous pectinibranchiate gastropods, typified by the genus Strombus; the strombs or wing-shells. The animal has an elongate annulated muzzle. The eyes are highly developed, at the ends of thick elongated peduncles, from which the inner sides of the tentacles, when present, originate. The foot is compressed, rather small, and adapted for leaping. The shell is mostly obovate, with a rather short conic spire and an elongate and narrow aperture; a horny claw-like operculum, serrated along the outer margin, is generally developed. Numerous species live in tropical seas, and some of them attain a large size. The largest is Strombus gigas, the giant conch of the West Indies, much used for cameos, and also as an ornament, especially around fountains, whence it is known as the fountain-shell. The family is divided into Strombinae and Scaphylinæ. See cuts under Rostellaria, scorpion-shell, and stromb.

Strombidium (strom-bid'i-um), n. [NL. (Claparede and Lachmann, 1859), < Strombus + Gr. dium, -idium.] A genus of peritrichous ciliate infusorians, of the family Halteriidae. These interesting animalcules inhabit both salt and fresh water, and, though there are no springing-hairs, they are noted for such activity and energy of movement that their examination is difficult. They are free-swimming, of globose or turbinate form, with eccentric terminal oral aperture associated with a spiral wreath of erect cirri; the endoplast and contractile vacuole are conspicuous. Numerous species are described.

strombiform (strom'bi-fórm), a. [< NL. Strombus + L. forma, form.] Shaped like a wing-shell; having the form of a stromb; belonging or related to the Strombidae.

strombine (strom'bin), a. and n. [< Strombus + -ine.] 1. a. Of, or having characters of, the Strombidae; stromboid.

II. n. A stromboid; a gastropod of the family Strombidae.

strombite (strom'bīt), n. [< stromb + -ite.] A fossil stromb, or some similar shell.

stromboid (strom'boid), a. and n. [< stromb + -oid.] 1. a. Resembling a stromb; pertaining or related to the Strombidae; strombiform.

II. n. A strombine or stromb.

strombuliform (strom'-bū-li-fórm), a. [< NL. "strombulus", dim. of **strombus*, a top (see Strombus), + L. forma, form.] 1. In geol., formed like a top.—2.

In bot., twisted or coiled into the form of a screw or helix, as the legumes of the screw-bean, some species of Medicago, etc.

Strombus (strom'bus), n. [NL. (Linnaeus, 1758), < L. strombus, a kind of spiral snail, < Gr. στροβίλος, a top, a pine-cone, a snail, anything twisted or whorled, < στροβίλος, twist, turn: see strobile.] The typical genus of Strombidae, formerly conterminous with the family, now restricted to such species as the West Indian giant stromb, S. gigas; the wing-shells, fountain-shells, or strombs. They are active, predatory, and carnivorous marine shells, much used for ornamental purposes. Also called Gallus. See cut at stromb.

stromeyerine (stró-mi-ēr-in), n. [As stromeyer (etc) + -ine.] Same as stromeyerite.

stromeyerite (stró-mi-ēr-it), n. [Named after Fr. Stromeyer, a German chemist and mineralogist (died 1835).] A sulphid of silver and copper occurring in crystals near chalcocite in form, also massive. It has a dark steel-gray color and metallic luster.

strommellit, n. An obsolete form of strammell.

strond, n. An obsolete form of strand.

strong<sup>1</sup> (stróng), a. [Sc. strang; < ME. strong, stronge, strang (compar. strenger, strongere), < AS. strang, strong (compar. strengra, strangra), strong, mighty, = OS. strang = MD. strangi, streng, D. streng = MLG. LG. streng = OHG. strang, strangi, strengi, MHG. stronge, G. streng, hard, rigid, severe, strict, = Icel. strangr = Sw. sträng = Dan. streng, strong; connections uncertain; perhaps related to string. Cf. L. stringere, draw tight (see stringent, strain, strict); Gr. σπαγγός, tightly twisted, σπαγγώνη, a halter, etc. (see strangle). No connection with stark! Hence strengthen, strengthen, etc.] 1. Possessing, exerting, or imparting force or energy, physical or moral, in a general sense; powerful; forcible; effective; capable; able to do or to suffer.

Ther-fore worship god, bothe olde and zong,

To be in body and soule yllche stronge.

Babees Book (L. E. T. S.), p. 394.

What can be strong enough to resist those charms which neither innocence, nor wisdom, nor power are sufficient security against?

Stillington, Sermons, II. iii.

Know how sublime a thing it is

To suffer and be strong.

Longfellow, Light of Stars.

When a man is able to rise above himself, only then he becomes truly strong. J. F. Clarke, Self-Culture, p. 368.

2. Having vital force or capability; able to act effectively; endowed with physical vigor; used absolutely, physically powerful; robust; muscular: as, a strong body; a strong hand or arm.

And he was a moche knyght, and a stronge oute of measure.

Martin (L. E. T. S.), II. 164.

Out of the eater came forth meat, and out of the strong came forth sweetness.

Judges xiv. 14.

Of two persons who have had, the one the education of a gentleman, the other that of a common sailor, the first may be the stronger, at the same time that the other is the harder.

Bentham, Introduct. to Principles of Morals, vi. 9.

3. Having means for exerting or resisting force; provided with adequate instrumentalities; powerful in resources or in constituent parts: as, a strong king or kingdom; a strong army; a strong corporation or mercantile house.

A Wing shell or Stromb (Strombus pugilis).

When the kyng Brangore was come to Eastrangore, his strong place, . . . he dide it stuffe with knyghtes and vi-
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), ii. 247.

He crewe stronge, and in shorte space got to himselfe a name.
Spenser, State of Ireland.

At last, nigh tir'd, a castle strong we fand,
The utmost border of my native land.
Spenser, State of Ireland.

Infirfax, tr. of Tasso's Godfrey of Boulogne, iv. 55.

4. Having or consisting of a large number, absolutely or relatively; numerically forcible or powerful; provided: usually implying also some specific element of strength in some or all of the parts composing the number: as, a strong department of troops; a strong political party.

My thoughte he was nat able for to speede,
For she was strong of freendes.
Chaucer, Doctor's Tale, l. 135.

5. Of specified numerical force; having so many constituent members: applied to armies, and sometimes to other bodies of men, or to animals.
The demand of him how many horse the duke is strong.
Shak., All's Well, iv. 3. 149.

The rebels at Drumclog were eight or nine thousand strong.
Scott, Mem. of Capt. Creighton.

6. Exerting or capable of characteristic force; powerful in the kind or mode of action implied;
specifically, forcible or efficient: as, a strong painter or actor; a strong voice; strong eyes.

His mother was a witch, and one so strong
That could control the moon, make flows and ebbs
That could control the moon, make flows and ebbs
Shak., Tempest, v. 1. 269.

I was stronger in prophecy than in criticism. Dryden

A solitary shriek, the bubbling cry
Of some strong swimmer in his agony
Byron, Don Juan, ii. 5.

7. Vigorous in exercise or operation; acting in a firm or determined manner; not feeble or vacillating; used of the mind or any of its faculties: as, a strong-minded person; a strong intellect, memory, judgment, etc.

Divert strong minds to the course of altering things
Shak., Sonnets, cxxv.

8. Possessing moral or mental force; firm in character, knowledge, conviction, influence, or the like; not easily turned, resisted, or refuted:
as, a strong candidate; a strong reasoner.

Pray that ye may be strong in honesty.
As in the use of arms.
Fletcher (and another), False One, iv. 3.

They were very diligent, plain, and serious, strong in Scripture, and bold in profession.
Penn, Rise and Progress of Quakers, i.

He wants to show the party that he too can be a "Strong Man" on a pinch.
The Nation, XXX. 1.

9. Marked by force or vigor of performance; done, executed, produced, or uttered energetically; effected by earnest action or effort; strenuous; stressful; urgent.

Anthony wared with strong business
The Eric of Faborigh.
Bonn, of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 2495.

When he had offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears.
Heb v. 7.

The cars of the people they have therefore filled with strong clamour.
Hooker, Eccles. Polity, iv. 4.

10. Marked by force of action or movement; vigorously impelled or sent forth; impetuous; violent; vehement: as, a strong wind; strong tides; strong breathing.

If, Collatine, thine honour lay in me,
From me by strong assault it is bereft.
Shak., Lucrece, l. 845.

When they came to the great river, they were carried over by one Ludham. . . the stream being very strong.
Winthrop, in New England's Memorial, p. 170, note.

11. Firm in substance or texture; capable of resisting physical force; not weak; not easily broken, rent, or destroyed: said of material things.

His bones are as strong pieces of brass. Joh vi. 18.

The grass flowers that wreath the sword
Make not the blade less strong.
Whittier, My Psalm.

12. Solid.

Ye . . . are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat [solid food, R. V.]. Heb v. 12.

13. Firmly fixed or constituted; having inherent force or validity; hard to affect or overcome; sound; stable; settled: as, a strong constitution or organization (of body, mind, government, etc.); strong arguments, reasons, or evidence; to take a strong hold, or get a strong advantage; a strong project.

In the fear of the Lord is strong confidence.
Prov xiv. 26.

Ye strong foundations of the earth.
Micah vi. 2.

14. Vigorous or extreme in kind; specifically, distinct or exceptional; bold; striking; effective; forcible; conspicuous: as, strong invectives; a strong attraction.

And Merlyn, that full of stronge arte was, yede hem about, and cleped the kyng as they weren sette, and shewed hym the voyde place. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), i. 60.

On our ground of grief
Rise by day in strong relief
The prophecies of better things.
Whittier, Astraea at the Capitol.

15. Intense or thorough in quality; having a high degree of the proper specific character; not mild, weak, dull, insipid, or ineffective: as,
strong drink; strong tea; a strong infusion;
strong lights and shadows; a strong color.

So is it full of Dragounes, of Serpentes, and of other venymous Beastes that no man dar not passe, but zif it be strong Wyntre. Mandeville, Travels, p. 269.

This is strong phisic, signior,
And never will agree with my weak body.
Fletcher (and another), Love's Cure, iii. 2.

By mixing such powders we are not to expect strong and full white, such as is that of paper.
Newton, Opticks, I. ii. 5.

16. Intense or intensified in degree; existing in great amount or force; forcibly impressive to feeling or sensation: used of either active or passive qualities: as, strong love or devotion; a strong flavor or scent.

Is it possible . . . you should fall into so strong a liking with old Sir Rowland's youngest son?
Shak., As you Like it, i. 3. 23.

Nor was her heart so small
That one strong passion should engross it all.
Crabbe, Works, IV. 83.

17. Forcibly offensive in quality; repellent to sense or sensation; ill-tasting or ill-smelling; rank; rancid; tainted.

They say poor suitors have strong breaths; they shall know we have strong arms too. Shak., Cor., i. 1. 61.

18. In com., specifically, firm; favorable to gain; steadily good or advancing; active; profitable: as, a strong market; strong prices; to do a strong business.—19. In gram., inflected —(a) as a verb, by a change of the radical vowel instead of by regular syllabic addition: opposed to weak: thus, find (found), speak (spoke or spoke, spoken), strike (struck, stricken), and swim (swam, swum) are strong verbs; (b) as a noun or an adjective, with fuller retention of older case-distinctions: thus, German Buch is called of strong declension, and Held of weak. Strong and weak are purely Latin terms, introduced by J. Grimm; they belong properly to Germanic words alone, but are occasionally applied to similar phenomena in other languages also.

20. In photog., same as dense, 3.—Strong arm or hand, figuratively, great power or force; forcible or violent means; overpowering vigor; the force of arms: as, to overcome opposition with a strong arm; "a strong hand," Ex vi. 1.

It was their meaning to take what they needed by strong- hand. Raleigh.

Strong box, a strongly made case or chest for the preservation of money and other things of great value in small compass.—Strong double refraction, in optics. See refraction, 1.—Strong drink, election, place. See refraction, 1.—Strong faints. See faint, 2.—Strong room, a fire-proof and burglar-proof apartment in which to keep valuable.—Strong water. (a) Distilled spirit of any sort: generally in the plural: as, a draught of strong waters.

In the time of our fast, two of our landmen pierced a rindlet of strong water, and stole some of it.
Winthrop, Hist. New England, I. 4.

(b) Aqua fortis, or some other strong biting acid.

Metals themselves do receive in readily strong waters;
and strong waters do readily pierce into metals and stones;
and . . . [some] strong waters will touch upon gold, that will not touch upon silver. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 800.

=Syn. 2. Sturdy, Stout, etc. (see robust); hardy, sinewy.—
3. Potent.—11. Tenacious, tough.—13. Impregnable.—14.
Vivid.—15. Urgent, sharp.

strong<sup>1</sup> (strŏng'), adv. [ME. strong, stronge;
cf. strong<sup>1</sup>, a.] Strongly; very; exceedingly.
[Obsolete except in the slang phrase below.]

I will to-morrow go to an Abbey, and feyne me stronge like. Merlin (E. E. T. S.), i. 62.

To go or come it strong, to do a thing with energy and perseverance. [Slang.]

strong<sup>2</sup>. An obsolete past participle of string.
Spenser, Virgil's Gnat, l. 16.

strong-back (strŏng'băk'), n. Naut.: (a) A piece of wood or iron over the windlass, to trice the chain up to when the windlass is to be used for any purpose. (b) A spar across boat-davits, to which the boat is secured at sea.

strongbark (strŏng'bărk'), n. A tree or shrub of the boraginaceous genus Bourreria, which belongs to the West Indies and tropical America.
One species, B. Havanaensis, which extends into Florida, is a small tree or shrub with a hard, fine, and beautiful wood of a brown color streaked with orange; the larger trees, however, are hollow and defective.

strong-barred† (strŏng'bărd'), a. Strongly barred; tightly fastened. Shak., K. John, ii.
1. 370.

strong-based† (strŏng'băst'), a. Strongly or firmly based. Shak., Tempest, v. 1. 46.

strong-besieged† (strŏng'bē-sējd'), a. Strongly besieged. Shak., Lucrece, l. 1429.

strong-bonded† (strŏng'bŏn'ded'), a. Strongly bound or secured; made strongly binding.
Shak., Lover's Complaint, l. 279. [Rare.]

strong-fixed† (strŏng'fĭkst'), a. Strongly fixed; firmly established. Shak., 1 Hen. VI., ii. 5. 102.

stronghand† (strŏng'hănd'), n. Violence; force; power: a contraction of the phrase by the strong hand. See strong arm or hand, under strong.

stronghold (strŏng'hŏld'), n. A fastness; a fort; a fortified place; a place or position of security: often used figuratively, and formerly as two words.

David took the strong hold of Zion. 2 Sam. v. 7.

strong-knit (strŏng'nĭt'), a. Strongly or well knit; firmly joined or compacted.

For strokes received, and many blows repaid,
Have robb'd my strong-knit sinews of their strength.
Shak., 3 Hen. VI., ii. 3. 4.

strongle (strŏng'gl'), n. A strongyle. T. S.
Cobbold.

strongly (strŏng'li'), adv. [cf. ME. strongly, strongely, strongliche, strongliche; cf. AS. strang- lice, strong, cf. stranglic, strong, cf. strang, strong; see strong<sup>1</sup> and -ly<sup>2</sup>.] In a strong manner, in any sense of the word strong.

That Cyter [Cassay] is strongliche enhabytied with peple, in so moche that in on House men maken 10 Householdes.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 209.

Fly, fly; delay
Doth oft the strongliest founded Plots betray.
J. Beaumont, Psyche, i. 44.

strongman's-weed (strŏng'mănz-wēd'), n. See Peliveria.

strong-minded (strŏng'mĭn'ded'), a. 1. Having a strong or vigorous mind.—2. Not in accordance with the female character or manners; unfeminine: applied ironically to women claiming the privileges and opportunities of men.

strong-mindedness (strŏng'mĭn'ded-nes'), n.
The character or quality of being strong-minded, especially as used of women.

strong-tempered† (strŏng'tem'pĕrd'), a. Made strong by tempering; strongly tempered. Shak., Venus and Adonis, l. 111.

strongylate (strŏn'ji-lăt'), a. [cf. strongyle + -ate<sup>1</sup>.] Having the character of a strongyle, as a sponge-spicule; simply spicular, with blunt ends. Sollas.

strongyle (strŏn'jĭl'), n. [cf. NL. strongylus (see Strongylus), cf. Gr. στρογγύλος, round, spherical, cf. στρογγύειν, draw tight: see strangle.] 1. A spic-ule of the monaxon biradiate type, with each end rounded off; a strongylate sponge-spicule.
It is simply a rhabdus whose two ends are blunt instead of sharp. A strongyle blunt at one end and sharp at the other becomes a strongyloxa. Sollas.

2. In Vermees, a nematoid or threadworm of the genus Strongylus in a broad sense; a strongy-lid. There are many species. See Strongylidae.

Strongylia (strŏn-jĭl'ĭ-ă), n. pl. [NL., cf. Gr. στρογγύλος, round, spherical: see strongyle.] A suborder of chilograth myriapods, with man-ducatory mouth, and sexual organs opening in the anterior part of the body. It includes the families Polyxenidae, Polydesmidae, Luhidae, and Lysiopetalidae. H. C. Wood, 1865.

strongylid (strŏn'ji-lĭd'), a. and n. Same as strongylid.

Strongylidae (strŏn-jĭl'ĭ-dē), n. pl. [NL., cf.
Strongylus + -idae.] A family of endoparasitic nematoid worms, typified by the genus Strong- ylus, and containing about 10 other genera.
They are formidable parasites, sometimes attaining a length of 3 feet, though usually much smaller than this.
They are cylindrical, and more or less elongated and filiform; the mouth is oval, circular, or triangular, and armed or unarmed; and the tail of the male is furnished with a bursa or pouch, or a pair of membranous lobes, and usually a pair of protruding spicules. The female is commonly larger than the male. Strongylus bronchialis is the lung-strongyle of man: the female is an inch long, the male half that size. S. armatus infests the horse; S.
micrurus and S. contortus are found in ruminants, as cattle and sheep. Eustrongylus gigas is the giant strongyle of the kidney, the largest known endoparasite of this kind, the male being about a foot long, the female a yard or more.
Strongylus quadridentatus or Scierostoma duodenale infests the human intestine, and a similar strongyle, Syngamus trachealis, causes the gapes in poultry, occurring in great numbers in the air passages.

Strongylocentrotus (strŏn'ji-lŏ-sen-trŏ'tus'),
n. [NL. (Brandt), cf. Gr. στρογγύλος, round,

Strongylocentrotus

spherical, + κέντρος, < κέντρον, point, center: see center.] A genus of regular sea-urchins, Common New England Sea urchin (Strongylocentrotus drobachensis).

of the family Echinidae. One of the commonest and best-known sea-urchins of the Atlantic coast of the United States is S. drobachensis.

strongyloid (stron'ji-loid), a. and n. [< strongylo- + -oid.] I. a. Like a strongyle; related to the genus Strongylus; belonging to the Strongylidae.

II. n. A strongyle, or some similar nematoid.

strongyloxea (stron-ji-lok'sē-jī), n.; pl. strongyloxeae (-ē). [NL., < Gr. στρογγύλος, round, + ὄξυς, sharp.] A strongyle blunt at one end and sharp at the other; a strongyloxeate sponge-spicule. Encyc. Brit., XXII, 417.

strongyloxeate (stron-ji-lok'sē-āt), a. [As strongyloxea + -ate.] Blunt at one end and sharp at the other, as a sponge-spicule of the rhabdus type; having the character of a strongyloxea. Sollas.

Strongylus (stron'ji-lus), n. [NL., < Gr. στρογγύλος, round, spherical, < **σπάγγειν*, draw tight, squeeze: see strangle.] 1. The typical genus of the family Strongylidae. Müller, 1780.—2. [l. c.; pl. strongyli (-ī).] In sponges, a strongyle.

strontia (stron'shi-ī), n. [NL. (Klaproth), < strontium, q. v.] The monoxid of strontium, SrO, an alkaline earth which when pure is an infusible grayish-white powder having an acrid burning taste. It is soluble in water with evolution of heat, slaking into a hydrate, Sr(OH)<sub>2</sub>, which is quite soluble and deposits from its solution crystals of the hydrate containing eight molecules of water of crystallization. The hydrate has a strong alkaline reaction, and is more caustic than lime, but less so than the alkalis. Strontia does not occur native, but is prepared by igniting the carbonate, the mineral strontianite.

strontian (stron'shi-an), n. and a. [< strontium + -an.] I. n. Native strontium carbonate; strontianite; hence, also, strontia, and sometimes strontium. [Indefinite and rare.]

II. a. Pertaining to or containing strontia or strontium.—Strontian yellow, a color formed by adding potassium chromate to a solution of a strontium salt.

strontianiferous (stron'shi-ā-nif'ē-rus), a. [< strontian + -iferous.] Containing strontian. Philos. Mag., 5th ser., XXV, 238.

strontianite (stron'shi-an-it), n. [< strontian + -ite.] Native strontium carbonate, a mineral that occurs massive, fibrous, stellated, and rarely in orthorhombic crystals resembling those of aragonite in form. It varies in color from white to yellow and pale green. It was first discovered in the lead-mines of Strontian, in Argyllshire, Scotland.

strontic (stron'tik), a. [< strontia + -ic.] Same as strontite.

strontites (stron-ti'tēz), n. [NL., < stronti (um) + -ites.] Same as strontia: so named by Dr. Hope, who first obtained this earth from strontianite, or native carbonate of strontium.

strontitic (stron-tit'ik), a. [< NL. strontites + -ic.] Pertaining to or derived from strontia or strontium.

strontium (stron'shi-um), n. [NL., < Strontian, in Argyllshire, Scotland.] Chemical symbol, Sr; atomic weight, 87.68; specific gravity, 2.54. A dark-yellow metal, less lustrous than barium, malleable, and fusible at a red heat. When heated in air, it burns with a bright flame to the oxid. It decomposes water at ordinary temperatures, evolving hydrogen, and uniting with the oxygen of the water to form the oxid strontia. It does not occur native. The chief strontium minerals are the carbonate (strontianite) and the sulphate (celestine). Strontium also occurs as a silicate in the mineral brewsterite. It has been detected in the waters of various mineral springs, as well as in sea-water, and in the ashes of some marine plants. Salts of strontium are chiefly used in pyrotechny, imparting an intense red color to flames.

strook (strūk). An old preterit of strike. Pope, Iliad, xxi, 498.

stroot (strūt), v. An obsolete or dialectal form of strut.

strop (strop), n. [The older and more correct form of strap; < ME. strop, strobe, < AS. stropp (= D. strop, etc.), < L. stroppus, struppus, a strap: see strap.] 1. Same as strap. Specifically—2. A strap or strip of leather, thick canvas, or other flexible material, suitably prepared for smoothing the edge of a razor drawn over it while it is attached by one end and held in the hand by the other; hence also, by extension, a two-sided or four-sided piece of wood, with a handle and a casing, having strips of leather of differing surfaces affixed to two sides, and the two other sides, when (as more commonly) present, covered with coarser and finer emery or other abrasive powder for use in honing a razor.—3. Naut., same as strap, 1 (a).—4. In rope-making, a rope with an eye at each end, used in twisting strands.

strop (strop), v. t.; pret. and pp. stropped, ppr. stropping. [< strop, n.] To sharpen on or as if on a strop or strap.

Scarce are the gray-haired sires who strop their razors on the family Bible, and doze in the chimney-corner. C. D. Warner, Backlog Studies, p. 2.

strobe (strōp), n. A dialectal form of strap.

strophanthin (strō-fan'thin), n. [< Strophanthus + -in.] An active poisonous principle, said to be neither an alkaloid nor a glucoside, found in the seeds of Strophanthus hispidus.

Strophanthus (strō-fan'thus), n. [NL. (A. P. de Candolle, 1801), so called from the twisted and tailed lobes of the corolla; < Gr. στροφός, a twisted band, a cord (< στρέφειν, turn, twist), + άνθος, flower.] A genus of gamopetalous plants, of the order Apocynaceae, tribe Echitideae, and subtribe Neritæe. It is characterized by a glandular calyx; a funnel-shaped corolla with five tailed lobes and an ample throat, bearing about ten scales within, and including the long taper-pointed anthers; and an ovary of two distinct carpels, ripening into divergent follicles with seeds tailed at one end and extended at the other into a long plumose beak. There are about 20 species, natives of Asia and tropical Africa, with one, S. Capensis, in South Africa. They are small trees or shrubs or often climbers, either smooth or hairy, with opposite feather-veined leaves, and terminal cymes of handsome flowers which are either white, yellowish, orange, red, or purple. The seeds of several species or varieties in Africa yield arrow-poison: in western Africa S. hispidus affords the inée poison (see poison of Pahonias, under poison), in eastern Africa S. Kombe the kombe poison, and some species between Zanzibar and Somali-land the wanika poison. But S. Kombe is suspected to be a variety of S. hispidus, and the third species is probably the same. Since 1878 these seeds have excited great medical interest as a medium for the treatment of heart-disease, but their investigation is not complete. (See strophanthin.) Several species are cultivated under the name twisted-flower.

strophe (strō'fē), n. [< NL. strophe, < L. strophē, < Gr. στροφή, a turning round, a recurring metrical system, the movement of a chorus while turning in one direction in the dance, the accompanying rhythmical (musical and metrical) composition, < στρέφειν, turn, twist.] 1. In anc. pros.: (a) A system the metrical form of which is repeated once or oftener in the course of a poem; also, a stanza in modern poetry. In a narrower sense—(b) The former of two metrically corresponding systems, as distinguished from the latter or antistrophe. (c) The fourth part of the parabasis and first part of the epirrhematic syzygy. It is hymnic in character, as opposed to the seoptie tone of the epirrhema.—2. In bot., one of the spirals formed in the development of leaves. [Rare or obsolete.]—Asclepiadean strophe. See Asclepiadæan.

strophic (strof'ik), a. [< Gr. στροφικός, of or pertaining to a strophe, < στροφή, a strophe: see strophe.] Of or pertaining to a strophe or strophes; constituting strophes; consisting of strophes: as, strophic composition; strophic poems.

strophical (strof'i-kal), a. [< strophic + -al.] Same as strophic. Athenæum, No. 3300, p. 123.

strophiolate (strof'i-ō-lāt), a. [< strophiole + -ate.] In bot., bearing or furnished with a strophiole or something that resembles it.

strophiolated (strof'i-ō-lā-ted), a. [< strophiolate + -ed.] Same as strophiolate.

strophiole (strof'i-ōl), n. [< L. strophium, a small wreath or chaplet, dim. of strophium, < Gr. στροφίον, a band, a breast-band, dim. of στροφός, a twisted band, a braid, a cord, < στρέφειν, twist, turn.] In bot., an appendage produced from the hilum of certain seeds, of the same origin as a true aril, but less developed. Sometimes used interchangeably with caruncle, from which it clearly differs.

strophoid (strof'oid), n. [< F. strophoïde, < Gr. στροφός, a twisted band, a cord.] 1. A nodal plane cubic curve which is the locus of a focus of a conic whose directrix and two tangents are given.—2. A Strophoid.

stroyl

curve which is the locus of intersections of two lines rotating uniformly with commensurable velocities. See also substrophoid.—Right strophoid, a strophoid symmetrical with respect to the line through the two centers of rotation.

Strophostyles (strof-ō-stī'lēz), n. [NL. (Elliott, 1824), so called from the incurved style; < Gr. στροφός, a twisted band, a cord, + στυλος, a pillar.] A genus of leguminous plants, of the tribe Phaseoleæ. It is distinguished from the related genus Phaseolus, in which it was formerly included, by capitate flowers with the keel and included style and stamens incurved but not spirally coiled, and followed by a commonly terete and straight pod with its scurfy or smooth seeds quadrangular or oblong, not reniform. About 17 species have been described, but some of them insufficiently, natives largely of North America, including Mexico and the West Indies, also occurring in Peru, India, and China. They are tangled vines with prostrate or climbing stems, usually retrorsely hairy, bearing pinnate leaves of three leaflets, and usually long-stalked purplish clusters of a few sessile flowers. Two species, known as wild bean, both called Phaseolus helvolus by various authors, extend along the Atlantic coast northward to Long Island or further, of which S. peduncularis (Phaseolus umbellatus) is a slender twiner of sandy fields, and S. angulosa (P. diversifolius) a commonly trailing plant extending west to Minnesota, and to Missouri, where on river-bottoms a high-climbing variety sometimes reaches 30 feet. Another species, S. pauciflorus, occurs in the southern and western United States. See Phaseolus.

strophulus (strof'ū-lus), n. [NL., dim. of **strophus*, < Gr. στροφός, a twisted band, a cord: see strophiole.] A papular eruption upon the skin, peculiar to infants, exhibiting a variety of forms, known popularly as red-gum, white-gum, tooth-rash, etc.

strossers† (stros'erz), n. [A var. of trossers, which is a variant of trousers: see trousers.] Same as trossers.

You rode like a kern of Ireland, your French hose off, and in your strait strossers. Shak., Hen. V., iii, 7, 67.

Sets his son a-horseback in cloth-of-gold breeches, while he himself goes to the devil a-foot in a pair of old strossers. Middleton, No Wit Like a Woman, ii, 1.

stroud<sup>1</sup> (stroud), n. [Also strowed; origin obscure.] A senseless or silly song. Jamieson. [Scotch.]

stroud<sup>2</sup> (stroud), n. [Also strowed; origin obscure.] 1. Same as strouding.—2. A blanket made of strouding.

Be pleased to give to the son of the Pankasha king these two strouds to clothe him. Journal of Capt. Treat (1752), p. 52. (Bartlett.)

strouding (strou'ding), n. [< stroud<sup>1</sup> + -ing.] Coarse warm cloth; a kind of blanketing used in trading with North American Indians.

Hazelnuts enough to barter at the nearest store for a few yards of blue strouding such as the Indians use. The Century, XXXIII, 33.

stroup (stroup), n. [Also stroop; < ME. stroupe, stroupe, < Sw. strupe, the throat, gullet, = Norw. strupe, the throat, gullet, an orifice, = Dan. strube, the throat, gullet; cf. Icel. strjúpi, the trunk of the human body with the head cut off.] 1. The trachea or windpipe. [Obsolete and prov. Eng.]

He smote him in the helm, bakward he bare his stroup. Langtoft's Chronicle, p. 190. (Halliwel.)

2. A spout (of a tea-kettle, etc.). [Scotch.]

strout, v. An obsolete or provincial variant of strut.

strove (strōv). Preterit of strove.

strow (strō), v. t.; pret. strowed, pp. strowed or strown, ppr. strowing. An archaic form of strew.

strow, a. [Cf. strow, strew.] Loose; scattered. [Rare and dubious.]

Nay, where the grass,
Too strow for fodder, and too rank for food,
Would generate more fatal maladies. Lady Alimony, D 4 b. (Nares.)

strowd<sup>1</sup> (stroud), n. See stroud<sup>1</sup>.

strowd<sup>2</sup>, n. See stroud<sup>2</sup>.

strowl, v. i. An old spelling of stroll.

strown (strōn). A past participle of strow.

strowpe, n. See stroup.

stroyt, v. t. [ME. stroyen, by aphesis from destroyen: see destroy.] To destroy. Middleton.

stroyt, n. [ME., < stroy, v.] Destruction.

stroyall† (stroi'al), n. [< stroy, v., + obj. all.] One who destroys or wastes recklessly; a waster.

A giddy brain master, and stroyall his knave, Brings ruling to ruin, and thrift to her grave. Tusser, Good Husbandly Lessons.

stroyer† (stroi'er), n. [ME. stroyere, by aphesis from destroyer.] A destroyer.

The drake, stroyere of his owene kynde. Chaucer, Parliament of Fowls, l. 360.

stroylt, n. See stroll.

strub (strub), v. t. and i.; pret. and pp. strubbed, ppr. strubbing. [A dial. var. of **strup*, var. of strip.] To rob, or practise robbery; strip of something: as, to strub a bird's nest. [Old and prov. Eng.]

Robert Coad . . . was convicted of "being a night-walker, and pilfering and strubbing in the night-time." A. H. A. Hamilton, Quarter Sessions, p. 220.

struck (struk). Preterit and past participle of strike.

strucken (struk'n). An old or dialectal past participle of strike.

structural (struk'tū-ral), a. [structure + -al.] 1. Of or pertaining to structure; constructional.

The structural differences which separate Man from the Galla and Chimpanzee.

Huxley, Man's Place in Nature, p. 123.

2. Concerned with structure or construction; constructive. [Rare.]

Chaucer . . . had a structural faculty which distinguishes him from all other English poets, his contemporaries.

Lowell, Study Windows, p. 254.

3. In biol.: (a) Of or pertaining to structure; morphological: as, structural characters; structural peculiarities. (b) Possessing or characterized by structure; structured; organized. — Structural botany. See botany (a). — Structural disease, a disease involving visible (gross or microscopic) changes in the tissues affected. Also called organic and contrasted with functional disease. — Structural geology, that branch of geology which has to do with the position and arrangement of the materials composing the crust of the earth, from the point of view of their composition, mode of aggregation, and relations of position, as determined by physical conditions, without special reference to paleontological characters. Nearly the same as stratigraphical geology, or stratigraphy. Also called geotectonic geology.

structuralization (struk'tū-ral-i-zā'shən), n. [structuralize + -ation.] A making or keeping structural; the act of bringing into or maintaining in structural form or relation. Also spelled structuralisation. [Rare.]

There is the materialisation of motives as the basis of future function, the structuralisation of simple function as the step of an advance to a higher function.

Maudsley, Body and Will, p. 30.

structurally (struk'tū-ral-i), adv. In a structural manner; with regard to structure.

structure (struk'tūr), n. [F. structure = Sp. Pg. estructura = It. struttura, < L. structura, a fitting together, adjustment, building, erection, a building, edifice, structure, < struere, pp. structus, pile up, arrange, assemble, build. (Cf. construct, instruct, destroy, etc.)] 1. The act of building or constructing; a building up; edification. [Obsolete or rare.]

This doom, the styles make up with structure, And foote VIII it hold in latitude.

Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 176.

His son builds on, and never is content Till the last farthing is in structure spent.

J. Dryden, Jr., tr. of Juvenal's Satires, xiv. 116.

2. That which is built or constructed; an edifice or a building of any kind; in the widest sense, any production or piece of work artificially built up, or composed of parts joined together in some definite manner; any construction.

There stands a structure of majestic frame.

Pope, R. of the L., iii. 3.

The vaulted polygonal chapter-house is a structure peculiar to England.

C. H. Moore, Gothic Architecture, p. 165.

3. An organic form; the combination of parts in any natural production; an organization of parts or elements.

A structure which has been developed through long-continued selection.

Darwin, Origin of Species, p. 131.

There can be no knowledge of function without a knowledge of some structure as performing function.

H. Spencer, Prin. of Biol., § 265.

4. Mode of building, construction, or organization; arrangement of parts, elements, or constituents; form; make: used of both natural and artificial productions.

Thy House, whose stately Structure so much cost.

Congreve, Imit. of Horace, II. xiv. 3.

The antistrophe structure [of Aeschylus's odes] being perhaps a concession to fashion.

Quarterly Rev., CLXII. 174.

Specifically — (a) In biol., manner or mode of organization; construction and arrangement of tissues, parts, or organs as components of a whole organism; structural or organic morphology; organization: as, animal or vegetable structure; the structure of an animal or a plant; the structure of the brain, of a coral, etc.

Though structure up to a certain point [in the animal organism] is requisite for growth, structure beyond that point impedes growth.

H. Spencer, Study of Sociol., p. 64.

(b) In geol., various characteristic features, considered collectively, of rocks and of rock-forming minerals, which features differ much in their nature and origin. Stratification, jointing, cleavage, and foliation are among the principal structural peculiarities of rock-masses, which are chiefly to be studied in the field. Some geologists would limit the term structure to petrographic phenomena of this kind, which have been designated as macroscopic rock-structures. The minuter structural details of rocks and their components are in part included under the name texture, and in part under that of texture. Thus, a rock may have a crystalline, granular, spherulitic, perlitic, etc., structure, or a flinty, earthy, glassy, etc., texture. But the usages of geologists differ in the employment of terms of this kind, and there can be no precise limit drawn separating textures from structures. In general, however, the structural peculiarities of a rock are those which specially interest the geologist; the textural belonging more properly to the mineralogist. Microstructures, or those details of structure belonging to the constituents of rocks which are in general not to be satisfactorily studied without the aid of the microscope, are peculiarly the field of observation of the lithologist. For macrostructures, see breccia, cleat, cleavage, concretionary, fragmentary, foliation, joint, schist, slate, slaty, and stratification; for microstructures and textures, see amorphous, crystalline, crystallite, crystalline, felsohyre, globulite, granuloid, granophyre and granophyre, holocrystalline, massive, microcrystalline, microlith and microlithic, ocellar, pegmatitic, perlitic, porphyritic, scoriaceous, spherulitic, trachytic, vesicular, vitreous, and vitrophyre.

Viewed broadly, there are two leading types of structure among rocks — crystalline or massive, and fragmental.

A. Geikie, in Encyc. Brit., X. 229.

Banded, columnar, concentric, epidermal, fibrous, fluidal structure. See the adjectives. — Centric structure. See ocellar structure, under ocellar. — Flow-and-plunge structure. See flow. — Fluxion-structure. Same as fluidal structure. — Globulitic structure, a structure characterized by the predominance of those minute drop-like bodies called by Vogelsang globulites, which are the earliest and simplest forms of the devitrification process in a glassy component of a rock. — Granitoid structure, the structure of granite; a holocrystalline structure. — Tabular structure. See tabular.

structure (struk'tūr), v. t.; pret. and pp. structured, ppr. structuring. [structure, n.] To form into a structure; organize the parts or elements of in structural form. [Rare.]

What degree of likeness can we find between a man and a mountain? . . . the one has little internal structure, and that irregular, the other is elaborately structured internally in a definite way.

H. Spencer, Prin. of Sociol., § 186.

structureless (struk'tūr-less), a. [structure + -less.] Without structure; devoid of distinct parts: unorganized; unformed; hence, lacking arrangement; informal; specifically, in biol., having no distinction of parts or organs; not histologically differentiated; not forming or formed into a tissue; homogeneous; amorphous.

structurally (struk'tūr-li), adv. [structure + -ly.] In structure or formation; by construction. [Rare.]

These aggregates of the lowest order, each formed of physiological units united into a group that is structurally single.

H. Spencer, Prin. of Biol., § 181.

structurist (struk'tūr-ist), n. [structure + -ist.] One who makes structures; a builder. [Rare.]

struggle (strug'l), v. i.; pret. and pp. struggled, ppr. struggling. [Early mod. E. also stroggell, strogell; < ME. struglen, stroglen, strogelen; perhaps a weakened form of **strokelen*, which may be a var. of **stroukelen*, the supposed ME. orig. of E. stroll, < MD. struyekelen, D. struikelen = LG. struikeln = MHG. strücheln, G. straucheln, stumble: see stroll.] To put forth violent effort, as in an emergency or as a result of intense excitement; act or strive strenuously against some antagonistic force or influence; be engaged in an earnest effort or conflict; labor or contend urgently, as for some object: used chiefly of persons, but also, figuratively, of things.

Everie Merchant, viewing their limbs and wounds, caused other slaves to struggle with them, to trie their strength.

Capt. John Smith, True Travels, I. 29.

How nature and his honour struggle in him!

Beau. and Fl., Knight of Malta, II. 5.

A brave man struggling in the storms of fate, And greatly falling with a falling state!

Addison, Cato, Prol.

So saying, he took the boy, that cried aloud And struggled hard.

Tennyson, Dora.

The light struggled in through windows of oiled paper, but they read the word of God by it.

Emerson, Hist. Discourse at Concord.

So on and on I struggled, thro' the thick bushes and over logs. Grace Greenwood, Recollections of Childhood, p. 28.

= Syn. Strive, etc. (see attempt); toil.

struggle (strug'l), n. [struggle, v.] A violent effort; a strenuous or straining exertion; a strenuous endeavor to accomplish, avoid, or escape something; a contest with some opposing force: as, a struggle to get free; the struggle of death; a struggle with poverty.

With great hurry and struggle [he] endeavoured to clap the cover on again.

Bacon, Physical Fables, II.

The long and fierce struggle between the Crown and the Barons had terminated. Macaulay, Hallam's Const. Hist. = Syn. Endeavor, Effort, Exertion, Pains, Labor, Struggle. See strife. The above are in the order of strength.

struggler (strug'lér), n. [struggle + -er.] One who or that which struggles; one who strives or contends with violent effort.

struldbrug (struld'brug), n. [A made name.] In Swift's "Gulliver's Travels" ("Voyage to Laputa"), one of a small class of immortals or deathless persons in "Luggnagg," born with an indicative sign in the forehead, who after four-score live on at public expense in the imbecility of extreme age.

strull (strul), n. [Origin obscure; cf. E. dial. stroil, strength, agility; cf. strut, a brace.] A bar so placed as to resist weight. London.

strum (strum), v.; pret. and pp. strummed, ppr. strumming. [Prob. a var. of thrum with intensive prefix s (as in splash, plash, etc.): see thrum, drum.] 1. Intrans. To play unskilfully, or in a vulgar, noisy manner, on a stringed musical instrument of the lute or harp kind, as a guitar, banjo, or zither, or (by extension) on a pianoforte; thrum.

"Ah, there is Fred beginning to strum! I must go and hinder him from jarring all your nerves," said Rosamond. . . . Fred, having opened the piano, . . . was parenthetically performing "Cherry Ripe!" with one hand.

George Eliot, Middlemarch, xvi.

II. trans. 1. To play upon carelessly or unskilfully, as a stringed instrument; produce by rough manipulation of musical chords. — 2. To produce a specified effect upon by strumming on a musical instrument.

To be stuck down to an old spinet to strum my father to sleep.

Sheridan, School for Scandal, II. 1.

strum (strum), n. [strum, v.] A strumming; a careless or discordant performance on a stringed instrument.

We heard the occasional strum of a guitar.

The Century, XXXIX. 487.

struma (strö'mä), n.; pl. strumæ (-mæ). [NL., < L. struma, a scrofulous tumor, < struere, pile up, build: see structure.] 1. In pathol.: (a) Scrofula. (b) Goiter. — 2. In bot., a cushion-like swelling or dilatation of or on an organ, as that at the extremity of the petiole of many leaves, or at one side of the base of the capsule in many mosses.

strumatic (strö-mat'ik), a. [LL. strumaticus, pertaining to struma, < L. struma, struma: see struma.] Same as strumose.

strumiferous (strö-mif'e-rus), a. [NL. struma, q. v., + L. ferre = E. bear.] In bot., bearing strumæ; strumose.

strumiform (strö-mi-förm), a. [NL. struma + L. forma, form.] In bot., having the form or appearance of a struma.

strummer (strum'ér), n. [strum + -er.] One who strums; a careless or unskilful player on a stringed instrument. W. Black, House-boat, vi.

strumose, strumous (strö'mös, -mus), a. [= OF. strumeus, estrumeux, < L. strumosus, characterized by the presence of struma, or of strumæ, < struma, struma: see struma.] 1. Scrofulous; of, pertaining to, resembling, or affected with struma. — 2. In bot., bearing strumæ.

strumousness (strö'mus-nes), n. The state or character of being strumose or strumous.

strumpet (strum'pet), n. [ME. strumpet, strompet, strumpett; origin unknown; perhaps orig. **stropete* or **strupete*, < OF. **strupete*, vernacularly **strupce*, < L. stuprata, fem. pp. of stuprare, debauch; cf. OF. stuppe, stupre, debauchery, concubinage, < L. stuprum, debauchery, > stuprare (> It. stuprare, stuprare = Sp. estuprar = Sp. Pg. estuprar), debauch; cf. Gr. στυγέλιζω, maltreat (see stuprum, stuprate). Cf. Ir. Gael. striopach, strumpet. The E. dial. strum, strumpet, is prob. an abbr. of strumpet.] A prostitute; a harlot; a bold, lascivious woman: also used adjectively.

Shamelesse strumpets, whose vncurbed swing Many poore soules vnto confusion bring.

Times' Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 88.

The scarfed bark puts from her native bay, Hugg'd and embraced by the strumpet wind.

Shak., M. of V., II. 6. 16.

strumpet (strum'pet), v. t. [strumpet, n.] 1. To make a strumpet of; bring to the condition of a strumpet. Shak., C. of E., II. 2. 146. [Rare.] — 2. To call or treat as a strumpet; give an ill name to; slander scurrilously.

With his untrue reports strumpet your fame.

Massinger.

strumstrum (strum'strum), n. [Imitative reduplication of strum. Cf. tom-tom.] A rude musical instrument with strings. See the quotation.

The Strumstrum is made somewhat like a Cittern; most of those that the Indians use are made of a large Goad cut in the midst, and a thin board laid over the hollow, and which is fastened to the sides; this serves for the belly, over which the strings are placed. Dampier, Voyages, I. 127.

strumulose (strō'mū-lōs), a. [Dim. of strumose.] In bot., furnished with a small struma.

strung (strung). Preterit and past participle of string.

strut<sup>1</sup> (strut), v. i. [Prob. a nasalized form of strut.] To walk sturdily; walk with state; strut. [North. Eng. and Scotch.]

strut<sup>2</sup> (strut), n. [Origin obscure.] A bird's tail; also, the tail of any animal. Halliwel. [North. Eng.]

strut<sup>3</sup> (strut), n. [Origin obscure.] 1. Spirituous liquor, or a drink partly consisting of such liquor.

Syne wi' a social glass o' strut
They parted aff careerin'.

Burns, Halloween.

2. A sullen fit; a pet. Ramsay.

[Scotch in both uses.]

strut<sup>1</sup> (strut), v.; pret. and pp. strutted, ppr. strutting. [Early mod. E. or dial. also strout, stroot; < ME. strouten, strouten, struten. < Dan. strutte, strut, = Sw. strutta, walk with a jolting step, = MHG. G. strotzen, swell, strut; cf. MHG. strüz, G. strauss, a fight, contention, MHG. struzen, contend, struggle. See strut<sup>2</sup>, n., and cf. strut<sup>1</sup>.] I. intrans. 1. To swell; protuberate; bulge or spread out.

Crul was his heer and as the gold it shoon,
And strouted as a fanne, large and brode.

Chaucer, Miller's Tale, l. 129.

The mizens strooted with the gale.

Chapman, Iliad, i. 464.

The belling canvas strutted with the gale.

Dryden.

2. To stand or walk stiffly with the tail erect and spread, as the peacock, the turkey, and various other birds. It is characteristic of the male in the breeding-season. See showing-off, 2, and cuts under peafowl and turkey.

3. To walk with a pompous gait and erect head, as from pride or affected dignity.

Does he not hold up his head, . . . and strut in his gait?
Shak., M. W. of W., i. 4. 31.

Meanly to sneak out of difficulties into which they had proudly strutted.

Burke, American Taxation.

II. trans. 1. To cause to swell; enlarge; give more importance to.

I will make a brief list of the particulars themselves in an historical truth noways strouted nor made greater by language.

Bacon, War with Spain.

2. To protrude; cause to bulge.

Or else [the lands] lifting vp themselves in Hills, knitting their furrowed brows, and strouting out their goggle eyes to watch their treasure, which they keep imprisoned in their stonie walls.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 829.

strut<sup>1</sup> (strut), n. [< ME. strut, strout, strot: see strut<sup>1</sup>, v.] 1. A proud step or walk, with the head erect; affected dignity in walking.

Stynst of thy strot & syne to flyte, & sech hys blythe ful sweste & swythe.

Alliterative Poems (ed. Morris), i. 353.

2. Stubbornness; obstinacy. [Prov. Eng.]—3. Dispute; contention; strife. Havelok, l. 1039.

strut<sup>14</sup>, p. a. [Contr. pp. of strut<sup>1</sup>, v.] Swelling out; protuberant; bulging.

He beginneth now to return with his belly strut and full.

Holland, tr. of Ammianus Marcellinus, p. 213. (Trench.)

strut<sup>2</sup> (strut), n. [Cf. leel. strutr, a hood jutting out like a horn, = Norw. strut, a spout, nozzle, = Sw. strut, a paper cornet; cf. LG. strutt, stiff, rigid; from the root of strut<sup>1</sup>: see strut<sup>1</sup>, v.] A brace or support for the reception of direct thrust, pressure, or weight in construction; any piece of wood or iron, or other member of a structure, designed to support a part or parts by pressure in the direction of its length. Struts may be either upright, diagonal, or horizontal. The struts of a roof extend obliquely from a rafter to a king post or queen-post. Diagonal struts are also used between joists, in gates, etc. Also called stretching-piece. See cuts under roof, queen-post, and floor.

strut<sup>2</sup> (strut), v. t.; pret. and pp. strutted, ppr. strutting. [< strut<sup>2</sup>, n.] To brace or support by a strut or struts, in construction of any kind; hold in place or strengthen by an upright, diagonal, or transverse support.

strut-beam (strut'bēm), n. A collar-beam.

struthian (strō'thi-ān), a. [< Struthio + -an.] Same as struthious.

Struthidea (strō'thid'ē-ī), n. [NL. (J. Gould, 1836), < Gr. στροιθός, a small bird, a sparrow, +

είδος, form.] An Australian genus of jay-like birds, belonging to the family Corvidæ, having the wings short, the tail moderately long and graduated, the nostrils exposed, and the bill stout and conical. The only species is S. cinerea, 12½ inches long, gray with black bill, feet, and tail, and white eyes. Also called Brachytoma and Brachyprorus.

Struthidea cinerea.

struthiiform (strō'thi-i-fōrm), a. Same as struthioniform.

Struthio (strō'thi-ō), n. [NL. (Brisson, 1760; Linnaeus, 1766), < L. struthio, < Gr. στροιθίων, the ostrich, < στροιθός, a sparrow, < στρίχας στροιθός, 'the big sparrow,' the ostrich: see ostrich.] The only genus of Struthionidae, having but two toes, and so many other important structural characters that in some systems it is made the sole representative of an order Struthioncs. S. camelus, the African ostrich, is the only established species; there are nominally two others, S. australis of South Africa, and S. molybdophanes of Somaliland. The genus formerly included some other struthious birds, as the American ostriches, now called Rhea. See cut under ostrich.

Struthiocamelus (strō'thi-ō-ka-mē'lus), n. [NL., < L. struthiocamelus, for **struthiocamelus*, < Gr. στροιθοκάμηλος, the ostrich, < στροιθός, sparrow, + κάμηλος, camel: see camel.] Same as Struthio.

struthioid (strō'thi-oid), a. [< Gr. στροιθίον, the ostrich, + είδος, form.] Ostrich-like; struthious to any extent; especially, struthious in the narrowest sense.

Struthiolaria (strō'thi-ō-lā-ri-ī), n. [NL. (Lamarck, 1812).] In conch., a genus of gastropods, typical of the family Struthiolariidae: so called because the lip of the shell has been compared to the foot of an ostrich.

Struthiolariidae (strō'thi-ō-lā-ri-i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Struthiolaria + -idae.] A family of tænioglossate gastropods, typified by the genus Struthiolaria. The animal has slender tentacles with eyes at their external bases, an oval foot, and a characteristic dentition (the central tooth being squarish, the lateral wide, five marginal teeth falciform, and the supplementary ones very narrow). The shell is bucciniform with oval subcanculate aperture. The living species are confined to the southern Pacific.

struthiolarioid (strō'thi-ō-lā-ri-oid), a. Of, or having characteristics of, the Struthiolariidae.

Struthioncs (strō'thi-ō-nōz), n. pl. [NL., pl. of Struthio, q. v.] 1. The ostriches in a broad sense; the struthious or ratite birds. See Ratitæ, and cuts under cassowary, Dromæus, emu, ostrich, and Rhea.—2. An ordinal group restricted to the genus Struthio. A. Newton.

Struthionidae (strō'thi-on'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Struthio (n-) + -idae.] The ostrich family, variously restricted. (a) Containing the genera Struthio, Rhea, Cassarius, and Dromæus, and divided into Struthioninae and Cassariinae; same as Struthioncs, 1. (b) Containing the genera Struthio and Rhea. Same as Struthioninae (a). (c) Containing only the genus Struthio, or the two-toed African ostriches alone. The differences between these ostriches and all other birds is about as great as those usually held to characterize orders in ornithology. The digits are only two, the hallux and inner digit being aborted, leaving the third and fourth digits with the usual ratio of phalanges (4, 5), and there are corresponding modifications of the lower end of the metatarsus. The leg-bones are greatly elongated, and there is a pubic symphysis. The fore limb is reduced, with the antebrachium not half so long as the humerus; and the manus has three digits, two of which bear claws. The wings are useless for flight. There are thirty-five precaudal vertebrae, and the bodies of the sacral vertebrae ankylose with the fore ends of the pubes and ischia. The sternum is doubly notched on each side behind. There are important cranial and especially palatal characters. The plumage is not aftershafted.

Struthiolaria straminea.

struthioniform (strō'thi-on'i-fōrm), a. [AL- irreg. struthiiform; < NL. struthioniformis, < L. struthio (n-), an ostrich, + forma, form.] Resembling an ostrich in the sense of being dromæognathous, as a tinamou; of or pertaining to the Struthioniformes.

Struthioniformes (strō'thi-on-i-fōr'mēz), n. pl. [NL., pl. of struthioniformis: see struthioniform.] In ornith., in Sundevall's system of classification, a cohort of Gallinae, composed of the South American tinamous, or Crypturi, and coextensive with the Dromæognathæ of Huxley; so called from their resemblance in some respects (notably palatal structure) to struthious birds.

Struthioninae (strō'thi-ō-nī-nē), n. pl. [NL., < Struthio (n-) + -inae.] The ostriches, variously restricted. (a) A subfamily of Struthionidae (a) containing the genera Struthio and Rhea, or the African and American ostriches, thus contrasted with Cassariinae, the cassowaries and emus. (b) A subfamily of Struthionidae (b); contrasted with Rheinae. (c) The only subfamily of Struthionidae (c), containing them all.

struthionine (strō'thi-ō-nin), a. [< NL. struthioninus, < L. struthio (n-), an ostrich: see Struthio.] Resembling or related to an ostrich more or less closely; in a narrow sense, of or pertaining to the Struthioninae; in a wide sense, struthious; ratite.

struthious (strō'thi-us), a. [< NL. Struthio + -ous.] Ostrich-like; resembling or related to the ostriches; struthiiform; ratite.

strutter (strut'ēr), n. [< strut<sup>1</sup> + -er.] One who struts; a pompous fellow. Imp. Dict.

strutting (strut'ing), n. [Verbal n. of strut<sup>2</sup>, v.] In carp., diagonal braces between joists, to prevent side deflection.

strutting-beam (strut'ing-bēm), n. A collar-beam.

struttingly (strut'ing-li), adv. In a strutting manner; with a proud step; boastingly.

strutting-piece (strut'ing-pēs), n. Same as bridging.

struvite (strō'vit), n. [Named after Struve, a Russian statesman.] A hydrous phosphate of ammonium and magnesium, often occurring in connection with guano-deposits. It is found in orthorhombic crystals, often hemimorphic, and has a white or pale-yellow color and vitreous luster.

stryt, v. t. A Middle English form of stroy.

stry (strī), v. t.; pret. and pp. stried, ppr. strying. An obsolete or dialectal form of stroy.

strychnia (strik'ni-ī), n. [NL., < Strychnos, q. v.] Same as strychnine.

strychnic (strik'nik), a. [< NL. strychnia + -ic.] Of, pertaining to, obtained from, or including strychnine; as, strychnic acid.

strychnina (strik-nī'nā), n. A form of strychnia.

strychnine, strychnin (strik'nin), n. [< NL. Strychnos + -ine, -in.] A vegetable alkaloid (C<sub>21</sub>H<sub>22</sub>N<sub>2</sub>O<sub>2</sub>), the sole active principle of Strychnos Tienté, the most active of the Java poisons, and one of the active principles of S. Ignatii, S. Nux-vomica, S. colubrina, etc. It is usually obtained from the seeds of S. Nux-vomica. It is colorless, inodorous, crystalline, unalterable by exposure to the air, and extremely bitter. It is little soluble, requiring 7,000 parts of water for solution. It dissolves in hot alcohol, although sparingly, if the alcohol be pure and not diluted. It forms crystallizable salts, which are intensely bitter. Strychnine and its salts, especially the latter from their solubility, are most energetic poisons. They produce tetanic spasms, but are used in medicine especially in conditions of exhaustion and certain forms of paralysis. See cut under nux vomica.—Hall's solution of strychnine. See solution.

strychninism (strik'ni-nizm), n. [< strychnine + -ism.] The condition produced by an excessive dose of strychnine.

strychnism (strik'nizm), n. [< strychnia + -ism.] The hyperexcitable state of the spinal cord produced by strychnine.

strychnized (strik'nizd), a. Brought under the influence of strychnine.

Strychnos (strik'nos), n. [NL. (Linnaeus, 1737), < L. strychnos, < Gr. στρίχνης or τρήχνης, a plant of the nightshade kind.] A genus of gamopetalous plants, of the order Loganiaceæ and tribe Euloganiceæ, type of the subtribe Strychnaceæ. It is characterized by flowers with valvate corolla-lobes, and a usually two-celled ovary which becomes in fruit an indehiscent berry, commonly globose and pulpy with a hardened rind. About 65 species have been described, widely scattered through tropical regions. They are trees or shrubs, often vines climbing high by stiff hooked and recurved tendrils, in a few species armed with straight spines. They have opposite membranous or coriaceous three- to five-nerved leaves, and small or rather long salver-shaped flowers in terminal or axillary cymes, usually white and densely aggregated. Many species yield powerful poisons, sometimes of great medicinal value. For species yielding strychnine, see strychnine; for S. Nux-vomica, see also nux-vomica, brucine, and Ingostura bark (under bark); for S. Tieute, chettik; for S. colubrina, snakewood; for S. Ignatii, St. Ignatii's bean, under bean. For S. tozifera, see curari; for S. Pseudo-quina, copalche, 2; for S. potatorum (also called water-filter nut), see clearing-nut. The root of West African species is used in ordeals. Although the seeds are usually poisonous, the fruit of several species, as in India of S. potatorum, in Java of S. Tieute, and in Egypt and Senegal of S. innocua, contains a pulp which is an article of food. S. psidosperma, the Queensland strychnine-tree, is an evergreen shrubby climber, sometimes cultivated.

Strychnos

stryner, v. t. An obsolete variant of strain.

stuardi, stuarti, n. Old spellings of steward.

Stuartia (stü-ir'ti-i), n. [NL. (Linnaeus, 1753), named after John Stuart, Marquis of Bute, a patron of botany.] 1. A genus of polypetalous plants, of the order Ternstramiaceæ and tribe Gordoniæ. It is characterized by flowers with nearly equal sepals, and an ovary which contains two ascending ovules in each of its five cells, and ripens into a loculicidal and somewhat woody capsule with lenticular seeds, little albumen, and a straight embryo with a slender inferior radicle. There are 6 species, natives of North America and Japan. They are shrubs with membranous deciduous leaves, and short-petioled flowers solitary in the axils, often large and showy, each usually of five imbricated petals, and numerous stamens with versatile anthers. Two handsome white-flowered species, from the mountains of Virginia, Kentucky, and southward, are sometimes cultivated under the name of stuartia—S. Virginica with a single style, and S. pentagona with five styles and larger leaves. S. Pseudo-Camellia, from Japan, is also in cultivation in ornamental grounds.

2. [v. c.] A shrub of this genus.

stub (stub), n. [ME. stub, stubble, < AS. stȳb = D. stobbe = LG. stubbē = Icel. stubb, stobbi, also stubb = Norw. stubb, stubb = Sw. stubb, stubb = Dan. stubb, a stump, stub. Cf. Gael. stob, a stake, stub, Lith. stebas, an upright pillar, mast, L. stipes, a post, Gr. στῆλος, a stump, Skt. stambha, a post, stambh, make firm, set fast. Cf. stump and stubble.] 1. The end of a fallen tree, shrub, or plant remaining in the ground; a stump; now, especially, a short stump or projecting root of inconspicuous size. Here stands a drie stub of some tree, a cubite from the ground. Chapman, Iliad, xxii, 305.

2. A projection like a stump; a piece or part of something sticking out: as, a dog with only a stub of a tail; the stub of a broken tooth.

The horn [of the buffalo] at three months is about 1 inch in length, and is a mere little black stub.

W. T. Hornaday, Smithsonian Report (1887), n. 397.

3. A short remaining piece of something; a terminal remnant: as, the stub of a pencil or of a cigar; a stub of candle.—4. A worn horse-shoe-nail; a stub-nail; specifically, in the plural, nails, or bits of iron of the quality of old horse-shoe-nails, used as material for gun-barrels or other articles requiring great toughness.

Every blacksmith's shop rung with the rhythmical clang of busy hammers, beating out old iron, such as horse-shoes, nails, or stubs, into the great harpoons.

Mrs. Gaskell, Sylvia's Lovers, xvi.

5. Something truncated, resembling a small stump, or constituting a terminal remnant. (a) A blunt-pointed pen; a stub-pen. (b) A stationary stud in a lock, which acts as a detent for the tumblers when their slots are in engagement with it. (c) A short file adapted to working in and around depressions that cannot be reached by an ordinary file. (d) The unsawed butt-end of a plank. See stub-shot, 1.

6. The inner end of one of the duplicate numbered blanks in a check-book or the like, which is left in the book with a memorandum corresponding to the check or other blank which is filled out and detached; counterfoil.—7. Figuratively, a block; a blockhead.

Our dullest and laziest youth, our stocks and stubs.

Milton, Education.

Stub damascus. See damascus.

stub (stub), v. t.; pret. and pp. stubbed, ppr. stubby. [= Sw. stubb = Dan. stubbē, cut short, dock, curtail; from the noun.] 1. To grub up by the roots; pull or raise the stub of; pull or raise as a stub: as, to stub a tree; to stub up roots.

The other tree was griev'd,
Grew scrubbed, died a-top, was stunted;
So the next parson stubbed and burnt it.

Swift, Baucis and Philemon.

2. To clear of stubs; grub up stubs or roots from, as land.

Nobbut a bit on it's left, an' I meain'd to 'a stubbed it at fall.

Tennyson, Northern Farmer (Old Style).

A large fenced-in field, well stubbed, on which the manure from the cattle is spread.

Harper's Mag., LXXVIII, 424.

3. To make a stub of; cut to a stub; give a truncated or stubbed appearance to; truncate: as, to stub off a post or a quill pen.—4. To ruin by extravagance. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.].—5. To strike against something projecting from a surface; stump: as, to stub one's foot. [U.S.]

6003

stubbed (stub'ed or stubd), a. [< stub + -ed].

1. Resembling a stub; short and blunt; truncated.

Hang upon our stubbed horns
Garlands, ribbands, and fine posies.

B. Jonson, Masque of Oberon.

2. Rough with roots and stumps; stubby.

Then came a bit of stubbed ground, once a wood.

Browning, Childe Roland.

3. Blunt or rugged in character; not delicate or sensitive; hardy.

The hardness of stubbed vulgar constitutions renders them insensible of a thousand things that fret and gall those delicate people.

Ep. Berkeley, Siris, § 105.

stubbedness (stub'ed-nes), n. Bluntness; obtuseness.

stubbiness (stub'i-nes), n. 1. The state of being stubby.—2. Same as stubbedness.

stubble (stub'l), n. [Also dial. stopple; < ME. stubble, stubbil, stubbil, stobit, stobul, stouple, < OF. stable, estable, estoble, estouble, estoule, estoule, estoul, F. étable, étale = Fr. étable = It. stoppia = MD. D. stoppe = LG. stoppele, stoppe = OHG. stopfil, MHG. stopfel, G. stopfel, stubble; all appar. < L. stipula, dim. of stipes, a stalk, etc.; see stipule.] The word has been confused in ML., etc., with L. stippa, stupa, stipa, tow, and in E. with stub.] 1. The lower ends of grain-stalks, collectively, left standing in the ground when the crops are cut; the covering of a harvested field of grain.

They turned in their stubble to sow another croppe of wheate in the same place.

Coryat, Crudities, 1. 161.

2. Something resembling or analogous to stubble, especially a short rough beard, or the short hair on a cropped head. See stubby.

stubbled (stub'ld), a. [< stubble + -ed]. 1. Covered with stubble; stubby.

A crow was strutting o'er the stubbled plain,
Just as a lark, desending, closed his strain.

Gay, To the Right Hon. Paul Methuen.

2. Stubbed.

stubble-field (stub'l-feld), n. A field covered with stubble; a piece of ground from which grain has been cut.

stubble-geese (stub'l-gôs), n. [< ME. stubbel-geos; < stubble + goose.] 1. The grayling goose, Anser cuculus. Also called harvest-geese.

Of many a plover in hastow Crysles curs,
For of the plover yet they fare the words
That they have often with thy stubble-geese.

Chaucer, Prolog to Cook's Tale, l. 27.

2. See the quotation, and compare green-geese.

So stubble-geese at Michaelmas are seen Upon the spnt. next May produces green.

W. King, Art of Cookery, l. 77.

stubble-land (stub'l-land), n. Land covered with stubble; a stubble-field. Shak., 1 Hen. IV., 1. 3. 35.

stubble-plow (stub'l-plou), n. A plow especially adapted for turning up stubble ground.

stubble-rake (stub'l-räk), n. A rake for cleaning a reaped field.

stubble-turner (stub'l-tér'nér), n. A wing attachment to a plow to turn down stubble, etc., in advance of the plowshare.

stubby (stub'i), a. [< stubble + -y]. 1. Covered with stubble; stubbled.

He . . . rubbed his stubby chin with a sort of bewildered thoughtfulness.

Harper's Mag., LXXX, 357.

2. Resembling stubble; short and stiff.

A young man of aggressive manners, whose stubby black hair stood out from his head. The Century, XXXVII, 600.

stub-book (stub'buk), n. A book containing only stubs, and serving as a record of the checks or other papers detached from them.

The filed stub-books of stamps, now occupying a very large and rapidly increasing space in the files rooms.

Rep. of Sec. of Treasury, 1886, p. 700.

stubburn (stub'orn), a. [Early mod. E. also stubburne, stoburne; < ME. stoburn, stoburne, stiburne, stiburn, stiborn, stibourne; prob. orig. **stibor*, **stibor* (the final n being due to misdividing of the derived noun stiburnesse taken as **stiburnesse* (E. stoburnesse), or a mere addition as in bittern, slattern). appar. < AS. stib, a stump, stub, + adj. formative -or as in AS. bitor, E. bitter, etc.] 1. Sturdy; stout; strong.

I was yong and ful of ragerye,
Stiburne and strong and joly as a pye.

Chaucer, Prolog to Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 456.

2. Fixed or set in opinion or purpose; obstinately determined; inflexibly resolute; not to be moved by persuasion; unyielding.

The queen is obstinate,
Stubburn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainful to be tried by't.

Shak., Hen. VIII., II. 4. 122.

stub-iron

Some of them, for their stubborn refusing the Grace he had offered them, were adjudged to Death, and the rest fined.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 172.

3. Persistently obdurate; obtuse to reason or right; obstinately perverse. [This sense depends upon the connection, and is not always clearly distinguishable from the preceding, since what is justifiable or natural persistence from one point of view may be sheer perversity from another.]

And he that holdithe a quarel agayn right, Holdyng his purpos stiburn ageyn reason.

Lydgate, Order of Fools.

They ceased not from their own doings, nor from their stubborn way.

Judges II. 19.

Sirrah, thou art said to have a stubborn soul,
That apprehends no further than this world.

Shak., M. for M., v. 1. 485.

From the necessity of bowing down the stubborn neck of their pride and ambition to the yoke of moderation and virtue.

Burke, Rev. in France.

4. Persistently pursued or practised; obstinately maintained; not readily abandoned or relinquished.

Stubborn attention, and more than common application.

Locke.

Proud as he is, that iron heart retains Its stubborn purpose, and his friends disdains.

Pope, Iliad, 1. 742.

Stout were their hearts, and stubborn was their strife.

Scott, The Poacher.

5. Difficult of treatment or management; hard to deal with or handle; not easily manipulated; refractory; tough; unyielding; stiff.

Facts are stubborn things.

Proverbial saying.

In hissing flames huge silver bars are roll'd,
And stubborn brass, and tin, and solid gold.

Pope, Iliad, xviii, 546.

While round them stubborn thorns and furze increase,
And creeping briars.

Dyer, Eleece, i. 107.

Not Hope herself, with all her flattering art,
Can cure this stubborn sickness of the heart.

Crabbe, Works, I. 140.

Stubborn marble is that which, on account of its excessive hardness, is very difficult to work, and is apt to fly off in splinters.

Marble-Worker, § 35.

6. Harsh; rough; rude; coarse in texture or quality.

Like strict men of order,
They do correct their bodies with a bench
Or a poor stubborn table.

Beau, and Fl., Scornful Lady, iv. 2.

Their Cloth [made from bark] . . . is stubborn when new, wears out soon.

Dampier, Voyages, I. 315.

If Hector's Spouse was clad in stubborn stuff,
A Soldier's Wife became it well enough.

Congreve, tr. of Ovid's Art of Love.

= Syn. 2 and 3, Refractory, Intractable, etc. (see obstinate); wilful, headstrong, unruly, inflexible, obdurate, ungovernable, indocile, mulish.

stubborn (stub'orn), v. t. [< stubborn, a.] To make stubborn; render stiff, unyielding, enduring, or the like. [Rare.]

Slaty ridge
Stubborn'd with iron. Keats, Hyperion, ii.

stubbornly (stub'orn-li), adv. In a stubborn manner; inflexibly; obstinately.

stubbornness (stub'orn-nes), n. [Early mod. E. stubburnesse; < ME. stubburnesse, stiburnesse, etc.: see stubborn.] The state or character of being inflexible or stubborn; obstinate persistence, obduracy, or refractoriness.

stubborn-shafted (stub'orn-shaf'ted), a. Having a stiff or unyielding shaft or trunk. [Rare.]

Before a gloom of stubborn-shafted oaks,
Three . . . horsemen waiting.

Tennyson, Geraldine.

stubby (stub'i), a. [< stub + -y]. 1. Abounding with stubs.—2. Short, thick, and stiff; stubbed: as, stubby bristles; stubby fingers.

stub-damask (stub'dam'ask), n. A kind of damaskeened iron made of stubs, used for shot-gun barrels. See stub-twist.

Stub damask is made from the same materials as stub twist, but the rods after the first drawing are subjected to a high degree of torsion, and two or three of them are then welded laterally to form the ribbon.

Amer. Cyc., VII, 356.

stub-end (stub'end'), n. In mach., the enlarged rectangular end or prism of a pitman or connecting-rod, over which the strap of a strap-joint passes, forming with the end of the prism a rectangular inclosure which holds the brasses or boxes fitted to a crank-wrist or to a cross-head pin. Compare strap-joint.

The keyway is the butt or stub end of the rod.

Joshua Rose, Practical Machinist, p. 403.

stub-feather (stub'fēr'ér), n. One of the short feathers left on a fowl after it has been plucked; a pin-feather. Halliwel.

stub-iron (stub'ir'érn), n. Iron formed from stubs, used principally for making fine gun-barrels.

stub-mortise (stub'môr'tis), n. A mortise which does not pass through the entire thickness of the timber in which it is made.

stub-nail (stub'nâl), n. An old or worn horse-shoe-nail; any short and thick nail; a stub.

stub-pen (stub'pen), n. A pen having a blunt or truncated nib, usually short and broad.

stub-short (stub'shört), n. Same as stub-shot, 1.

stub-shot (stub'shot), n. 1. In a saw-mill, the butt or unsawed part at the end of a plank, separated from the log. Also called stub-short. —2. In turning, the unworked part on a piece turned in a lathe, where it is secured to the center. It is removed when the work is finished.

stub-tenon (stub'ten'on), n. In carp., a short tenon, as at the end of an upright. E. H. Knight.

stub-twist (stub'twist), n. A material for fine shot-gun barrels, as those of fowling-pieces, wrought from stubs, and brought into form by twisting or coiling round a mandrel or by welding; also, a gun-barrel made of this material.

stubwort (stub'wört), n. The wood-sorrel, Oralis Aetosella: so called from its growing about stubs or stumps. [Prov. Eng.]

stucco (stuk'ô), n. [Formerly also stuck, < F. stuc = Sp. estuco = Pg. estruque = D. stuc = G. Sw. stuck = Dan. stuk; < It. stucco, stucco, < OHG. stucchi, MHG. stüke, G. stück, a piece, a patch, = D. stuk = OS. stukki = AS. stycce = Icel. stykki, a piece; connected with stock.] 1. Plaster or cement, of varying degrees of fineness, used as a coating for walls, either internally or externally, and for the production of ornamental effects and figures. Stucco for decorative purposes, as the cornices and moldings of rooms and the enrichment of ceilings, usually consists of slaked lime, chalk, and pulverized white marble, tempered in water, or of calcined gypsum or plaster of Paris mixed with glue, and sometimes also gelatin or gum arabic, in a hot solution. The stucco employed for external purposes is of a coarser kind, and variously prepared, the different sorts being generally distinguished by the name of cements. Some of these take a surface and polish almost equal to those of the finest marble. The stucco used for the third coat of three-coat plaster consists of fine lime and sand. In a species called bestard stucco a small quantity of hair is used. Rough stucco is merely floated and brushed with water, but the best kind is troweled.

2. Work made of stucco. The ornamenting of cornices, etc., with garlands, festoons, fruits, and figures in stucco was carried to great elaboration by the ancient Romans, and by the Italians under Raphael's guidance in the sixteenth century.

stucco (stuk'ô), v. t. [< stucco, n.] To apply stucco to; cover with stucco or fine plaster.

stuccoer (stuk'ô-ër), n. [< stucco + -er.] One who stuccoes; one who applies stucco to walls, etc.; one who works or deals in stucco.

stucco-work (stuk'ô-wérk), n. Ornamental work composed of stucco.

stuck (stuk), v. Preterit and past participle of stick 1 and stick 2.

stuck<sup>2</sup> (stuk), n. [A var. of stock 2. Cf. tuck 2.] A thrust.

stuck<sup>3</sup> (stuk), n. and v. A dialectal variant of stock.

stuck<sup>4</sup> (stuk), n. [< F. stuc, < It. stucco, stucco: see stucco.] Stucco. Imp. Diet.

stuck-in (stuk'in), n. The stocade.

I had a pass with him, rapier, scabbard, and all, and he gives me the stuck in with such a mortal motion that it is inevitable. Shak, T. N., iii. 1. 303.

stuckle (stuk'l), n. [Dim. of stuck 3, stook.] A number of sheaves set together in a field; a stook. [Prov. Eng.]

stuckling (stuk'ling), n. [Origin obscure.] A thin apple pasty; a fritter. [Prov. Eng.]

stuck-up (stuk'up'), a. and n. 1. a. Offensively proud or conceited; puffed up; consequential. [Colloq.]

He [the true gentleman] is never stuck-up, nor looks down upon others because they have not titles, honors, or social position equal to his own. W. Matthews, Getting on in the World, p. 141.

II. n. Same as strap-oyster. E. Ingersoll.

stud (stud), n. [Early mod. E. also stude; < ME. stode, < AS. studu, stuthu, a post, = Icel. stodh = Sw. stöd, a post, = Dan. stod, stub, stump, = MHG. G. Stütz, a prop, support; cf. Skt. sthana, a post. Cf. stooth, a doublet of stud. Hence ult. studdle.] 1. A post; an upright prop or support; specifically, one of the small beams or scantlings in a building, of the height of a single story, which, with the laths nailed upon them, form the walls of the different rooms. See cut under siding.

It is a gross mistake in architecture to think that every small stud bears the main stress and burthen of the building, which lies indeed upon the principal timbers. Jer. Taylor (C), Artif. Handsomeness, p. 11. (Latham.)

2†. The stem, trunk, or stock of a tree or shrub.

Seest not thilke same Hawthorne stude,
How bragly it begins to budde,
And utter his tender head?
Spenser, Shep. Cal., March.

3. A transverse piece of cast-iron inserted in each link of a chain cable to prop the sides apart and strengthen it. See cut under chain.

—4. A nail, boss, knob, or protuberance affixed to a surface, especially as an ornament.

Crystal and myrrhine cups, emboss'd with gems
And studs of pearl. Milton, P. R., iv. 120.

The armour of the legs consists of a chaissou of chain-mail, and chausses lacing behind, which appear to be formed of studs rivetted on cloth or leather.

J. Hewitt, Ancient Armour, I. p. xvii.

5. A piece in the form of a boss or knob for use as a button or fastener, or in some other way. A stud for a bolt is a rounded nut to be screwed on to the projecting end. A stud for lacing is a button set in an eyelet-hole and having an ear round which the lace is passed. A shirt-stud is an ornamental button commonly with a tang or a spire by which it can be inserted in and removed from an eyelet-hole or small buttonhole in the front of the shirt.

The grate which (shut) the day out-barres,
Those golden studdes which nalle the starres.
Dekker, Londons Tempe (Works, IV. 122).

The stud itself, called the anvil, is connected to the sending battery, and the other pole of this battery is to earth. R. S. Culley, Pract. Teleg., p. 269.

The mantle, which falls over the back of the figure and is not gathered up at the arms, is secured by a cord attached to two lozenge-shaped studs. Encyc. Brit., VI. 469.

Shirt-stud abscess, an abscess with a superficial and a deep cavity, connected by a short sinus.

stud (stud), v. t.; pret. and pp. studded, ppr. studding. [< stud, n. Cf. Icel. stydja, prop, steady.] 1. To furnish with or support by studs, or upright props.

Is it a wholesome place to live in, with its black shingles, and the green moss that shows how damp they are? Its dark, low-studded rooms? Hawthorne, Seven Gables, xli.

2. To set with or as with studs.

Thy horses shall be trapp'd,
Their harness studded all with gold and pearl.
Shak., T. of the S., Ind., ii. 44.

3. To set with protuberant objects of any kind; scatter over with separate things rising above the surface: as, a bay studded with islands.

A fine lawn sloped away from it, studded with clumps of trees. Freng, Sketch-Book, p. 30.

4. To lie scattered over the surface of; be spread prominently about in.

The turf around our pavilion fairly blazes with the splendor of the yellow daisies and crimson poppies that stud it. B. Taylor, Lands of the Saracen, p. 22.

Studded armor, armor composed of leather, cloth in several thicknesses, or the like, through which are driven metal rivets with large heads, forming studs or bosses.

stud (stud), n. [< ME. stooed, stod, < AS. stöd, a stud, = OHG. stuot, stuot, stuota, a stud, MIG. stuot, stut, a stud, a breeding mare, G. stule, a breeding mare (gestüt, a stud), = Icel. stodh = Dan. stod, a stud, = Sw. sto, a mare. Cf. Russ. stado, a herd or drove, Lith. stodas, a drove of horses. Cf. steed.] 1. A number of horses kept for any purpose, especially for breeding or sporting.

He keeps the stud (which is to be diminished) because he thinks he ought to support the turf. Greville, Memoirs, July 18, 1830.

2. The place where a stud is kept, especially for breeding; a stud-farm.

In the studs of persons of quality in Ireland, where care is taken, . . . we see horses bred of excellent shape. Sir W. Temple, Advancement of Trade in Ireland

3. A stallion, especially one kept for service in breeding; a stud-horse. [Colloq.] —4. Dogs kept for breeding; a kennel. [U. S.] —In the stud, kept for breeding, as a horse or dog.

stud<sup>3</sup>, studet, n. Middle English forms of stead.

stud-bolt (stud'bolt), n. A bolt with a thread at each end, to be screwed into a fixed part at one end and have a stud or nut screwed on it at the other.

stud-book (stud'bük), n. The genealogical register of a stud, especially of horses; a book giving the pedigree of noted or thoroughbred animals, especially horses.

studdery (stud'ë-r-i), n. [< stud 2 + -ery.] A place for keeping a stud of horses. Harrison, Descrip. of Eng., iii. 1 (Hollinshed's Chron., I.).

studding (stud'ing), n. [Verbal n. of stud 1, v.] In carp., studs or joists collectively, or material for studs or joists.

studdingsail (stud'ing-säl; pron. by sailors stun'sl), n. [< studding, verbal n. of stud 1, support, + sail; or else altered from **steadying-sail*.] A sail set beyond the leeche of some of the principal squaresails during a fair wind, very seldom used. Lower studdingsails, either square or three-cornered, are set outside of the leeche of the foresail. Topmast- and topgallant-studdingsails are set outside of the topsail and topgallant-sail. They are spread at the head by small yards and at the foot by booms which slide out from the yardarms. Also called steering-sail. See cuts under ringtail 2 and ship. — Studdingsail-booms, long poles which slide out and in through boom-irons on the yards. See cut under ship.

studdle (stud'l), n. [< ME. studdyll, studdul, stodul, stedulle, < Icel. studhill, a prop, stay, upright, stud, dim. of stodh (= AS. studu, etc.), a prop: see stud 1.] 1†. A prop or bar about a loom. Prompt. Parv., p. 481. —2. One of the vertical timbers which support the setts in the timbering of a mining-shaft.

student, n. See stud 3.

student (stü'dent), n. [= F. étudiant = Pr. estudian = Sp. estudiante = Pg. estudiante = It. studiante, studiente, studente = D. G. Sw. Dan. student, a student, < L. student (t-s), ppr. of studere, be eager, zealous, or diligent, apply one's self, study; perhaps (with alteration of sp- to st-) = Gr. σπουδέν, be eager, hasten. Hence also study, studious, etc.] 1. A studious person; one who practises studying or investigation; one given to the study of books or the acquisition of knowledge: as, a student of science or of nature.

Keep a gamester from the dice, and a good student from his book, and it is wonderful. Shak., M. W. of W., iii. 1. 38.

2. A person who is engaged in a course of study, either general or special; one who studies, especially with a view to education of a higher kind; an advanced scholar or pupil: as, an academical or college student; a student of theology, law, medicine, or art.

A greater degree of gentility is affixed to the character of a student in England than elsewhere. Goldsmith, English Clergy.

Student or students' lamp. See lamp 1.

student-parsnip (stü'dent-pärs'nip), n. See parsnip.

studentry (stü'dent-ri), n. [< student + -ry.] Students collectively; a body of students. Kingsley, Hypatia. [Rare.]

studentship (stü'dent-ship), n. [< student + -ship.] 1. The state of being a student. [Rare.] —2. An endowment or foundation for a student; a provision for the maintenance of a person in a course of study.

She [George Eliot] . . . founded to his memory the "George Henry Lewes studentship." Dict. Nat. Biog., XIII. 221.

studerite (stü'dër-it), n. [Named after Bernhard Studer, a Swiss geologist (1794-1887).] A mineral from the canton of Valais in Switzerland, closely related to tetrahedrite.

stud-farm (stud'färm), n. A tract of land devoted to the breeding and rearing of horses.

studfish (stud'fish), n. A kind of killifish, Fundulus (Xenisma) catenatus, 6 or 7 inches long, locally abundant in the Tennessee and Cumberland rivers. It is one of the largest and handsomest of the cyprinodonts. A related species is the spotted studfish, F. (X.) stellifer, of the Alabama river. These represent a section of the genus with the dorsal fin beginning nearly above the anal.

Studfish (Fundulus (Xenisma) catenatus).

stud-flower (stud'flou'ër), n. A name proposed by Meehan for the plant Helonias bullata, translating the specific name.

stud-groom (stud'gröm), n. A groom (generally the head groom) of a stud. Nineteenth Century, XXVI. 782.

stud-horse (stud'hörs), n. [*< ME. *stodhors*, < AS. stodhors (= Icel. stodhross), < stöd, stud, + hors, horse.] A horse kept in the stud for breeding purposes; a stallion.

studied (stud'id), p. a. 1. Informed or qualified by study; instructed; versed; learned.

The natural man, . . . he never so great a philosopher, never so well seen in the law, never so sore studied in the Scripture, . . . yet he cannot understand the things of the Spirit of God. Tyndale, Aus. to Sir T. More, etc. (Parker Soc., 1850), p. 6.

2. Studiously contrived or thought out; premeditated; deliberate: as, a studied insult.

The flattering sonate
Decees him divine honours, and to cross it
Were death with studied tortments.
Masinger, Roman Actor, I. 1.

studiedly

studiedly (stud'ed-ly), adv. In a studied manner; with study or deliberation; deliberately. Life of Mide, prefixed to his Works, p. 39. (Latham.)

studier (stud'i-er), n. [study + -er.] One who studies; an examiner or investigator. John Austen, Pride and Prejudice, ix.

studio (stū'di-ō), n. [It. studio, a study; see study.] A room especially arranged for painting, drawing, photographing, or other art-work. It is usually fitted with windows for securing a pure sky-light, or light free from cross-reflections, and is so placed, where possible, as to receive light from the north side.

studious (stū'di-ūs), a. [= F. studious = Sp. estudioso = It. studioso, < L. studiosus, eager, zealous, < studium, eagerness, zeal, study; see study.] 1. Given to study or learning; inclined to learn or investigate; seeking knowledge from books, inquiry, meditation, or by other means; a studious pupil or investigator; a studious reasoner.

Let the studious of these things search them in their proper Authors. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 319.

2. Exercising study or careful consideration; attentively mindful or considerate; thoughtful; heedful; intent; assiduous.

I am studious to keep the ancient terms. Bacon, Advancement of Learning, ii. 157.

One at least studious of deserving well. B. Jonson, Crithus's Revels, v. 3.

3. Manifesting study or deliberation; planned; studied.

But yet be wary in thy studious care. Shak., 1 Hen. VI., ii. 5. 97.

4. Devoted to or used for the purposes of study; serving as a place of study or contemplation. [Rare.]

Some to the wars, to try their fortune there, / Some to the studious universities. Shak., T. G. of V., i. 1. 10.

Put let my due feet never fail / To walk the studious cloisters pale. Milton, Il Penseroso, l. 156.

=Syn. 1. Studious, Scholarly. Studious represents a fact in connection with; scholarly, a fact in taste or predilection, or a similar result; as, he was very studious, but not really of scholarly instincts, nor likely ever to produce a scholarly treatise.

studiously (stū'di-ūs-ly), adv. In a studious manner; with reference to study or learning; as a student; in a studied manner; with studious consideration or care; studiously; heedfully; deliberately; as, to be studiously inclined; to investigate a subject studiously.

studiousness (stū'di-ūs-ness), n. The character of being studious; diligence in study; adductiveness to books or investigation.

Studite (stū'dit), n. [L. Gr. Στοιδοτης, < Στοιδο, Studius, a Roman who built a monastery (thence known as the Studium) for the order.] A member of the order of Acometii. The most famous of the order was St. Theodore the Studite (died 826), confessor and against the Iconoclasts and hymnographer.

studwork (stud'wörk), n. [study + work.] 1. Brickwork interspaced with studs; construction with alternating bricks and studs.—2. That which is made or held by means of studs, especially in armor; brigandine-work, jazerant-work, or other process for producing garments of defence by means of ordinary textile fabrics or leather set with studs. See cut under brigandine.

study (stud'i), n.; pl. studies (-iz). [Early mod. E. also studie; < ML. study, stōdy, stōlge, studio, < OF. estudie, estude, F. étude = Sp. estudio = Port. estudo = It. studio, < L. studium, eagerness, zeal, exertion, study, < studere, be eager, zealous, or diligent, study; see student.] 1. Eagerness; earnestness; zeal. [Obsolete or archaic.]

They do thereby [by the burning of the books] better declare the study of their godliness. Calvin, on Acts xix. 19, p. 189 (Calvin Trans. 1800.).

2. Zealous endeavor; studied effort, aim, or purpose; deliberate contrivance or intention.

Men's study is set rather to take gifts, and to get of other men's goods, than to give any of their own. Lattimer, 2d Sermon bef. Edw. VI., 1550.

It is my study / To seem despicable and ungentle to you. Shak., As you Like It, v. 2. 25.

As touching your Graces diligence and singular good study and means for the cure of the Emperors affairs. R. Sampson, To Wolsey (Mills's Hist. Letters, 3d ser., [l. 351]).

This is a cruelty beyond man's study. Fletcher, Beggars, Bush, iv. 6.

3. The mental effort of understanding, appreciating, and assimilating anything, especially a book; the earnest and protracted examination of a question, by reflection, collection and scrutiny of evidence, and otherwise; the pursuit of learning.

6005

In continuall studie and contemplation.

Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 4. When the mind with great earnestness, and of choice, fixes its view on any idea, considers it on all sides, and will not be called off by the ordinary solicitation of other ideas, it is that we call intension or study.

Locke, Human Understanding, II. xix. 1.

4. An exercise in learning or the pursuit of knowledge; an act or course of intellectual acquisition, as by memorizing words, facts, or principles; as, the actor's study was very rapid; also, an effort to gain an understanding of something; a particular course of learning, inquiry, or investigation; as, to pursue the study of physics or of a language; to make a study of trade, of a case at law, or of a man's life or character.

The elite citie is flammie, sometime called Tarsus, famous for the studies of learning, herein (saith Strabo) surmounting both Athens and Alexandria.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 334.

His [Calvin's] bringing up was in the study of the civil law. Hooker, Eccles. Polity, Pref., ii.

5. That which is studied or to be studied; a branch of learning; a subject of acquired or desired knowledge; a matter for investigation or meditation.

Studies serve for delight, for ornament, and for ability. Bacon, Studies (ed. 1657).

The proper study of mankind is man. Pope, Essay on Man, ii. 2.

'Twas, in truth, a study, / To mark his spirit, alternating between / A decent and professional gravity / And an irreverent mirthfulness. Whittier, Bridal of Pennacook, Int.

Personally I think that Shakespeare is almost the easiest study, perhaps because of my being accustomed as a boy to see Shakespeare's plays. Lester Wallcut, Scribner's Mag., IV. 720.

6. A state of mental inquiry or cogitation; debate or counsel with one's self; deep meditation; a musing; a quandary.

Pandrus, that in a studie stood, / Er he was war, she tok hym by the hood. Chaucer, Troilus, II. 1169.

I had gret study til I had tydings for gow. Paston Letters, I. 78.

The king of Castile herewith a little confused, and in a study said, That can I doe with my honour. Bacon, Hist. Hen. VII., p. 224.

7. That, one who studies or learns; a studier; specifically, a memorizer of a part for the theater; an actor as a memorizer.

I've got a part of twelve lengths here which I must be up in to-morrow night, and I haven't had time to look at it yet. I'm a confounded quick study, that's one comfort. Dickens, Nicholas Nickleby, xliii.

8. In music, a composition, usually instrumental, having something of the instructive and gymnastic purpose of an exercise combined with a certain amount of artistic value; an étude. An elaborate work of this class, combining great technical difficulty with decided artistic interest, is often called a concert study.

9. Something done as an exercise in learning, or in special study or observation; specifically, in art, a sketch or performance executed as an educational exercise, as a memorandum or record of observations or effects, or as a guide for a finished production; as, the story is a study of morbid passion; a study of a head for a painting.—10. A room in a dwelling-house or other building set apart for private study, reading, writing, or any similar occupation; by extension, the private room or office of the master of a house, however it may be used.

Get me a taper in my study, Lucius. Shak., J. C., ii. 1. 7.

There is a gold wand, / Stands in King Cornwall's study window. Ballad of King Arthur (Child's Ballads, I. 242).

Academy study. See academy.—Brown study. See brown.—Syn. 3. Research, inquiry, investigation.—6. Reflection.

study (stud'i), v.; pret. and pp. studied, ppr. studying. [< ME. studien, studien, < OF. estudier, F. étudier = Sp. estudiar = It. studiare, < ML. studiare, study, < L. studium, eagerness, zeal, study; see study, n.] I. intrans. 1. To exercise the mind in learning; apply one's self to the acquisition of knowledge; acquire knowledge and mental training, as by memorizing words, facts, or principles.

So much, dear Ileg, I have already sworn: / That is, to live and study here three years. Shak., L. L. L., I. 1. 35.

2. To exercise the mind in considering or contriving; deliberate upon or about something; ponder.

At this maketh me on meteles to studie, / And how the preest preudee no pardon to Do-wel. Piers Plowman (C), x. 317.

stuff

I found a moral first, and then studied for a fable.

Swift. 3. To muse; meditate; cogitate; reflect; revolve thoughts or ideas: used absolutely. [Archaic or colloq.]

Which made the butchers of Nottingham / To study as they did stand, / Saying, "Surely he is some prodigal." Robin Hood and the Butcher (Child's Ballads, V. 35).

Brer Fox, he come up, en dar lay Brer Rabbit, periently cole en stift. Brer Fox he look at Brer Rabbit, en he sorter study. J. C. Harris, Uncle Remus, xv.

4. To endeavor studiously or thoughtfully; use studied or careful efforts; be diligent or zealous; plan; contrive; as, to study for peace or for the general good.

With that he departed from his moder and yede into a chamber, and began to studye howe he myght speede to go to the kynge Arthur. Martin (E. L. T. S.), ii. 178.

Study [give diligence, R. V.] to shew thyself approved unto God. 2 Tim. ii. 15.

5. To prosecute a regular course of study, as that prescribed to prepare one for the exercise of a profession; as, to study for the bar, or for the church or ministry.—To study up, to make a special study; bring up or refresh one's knowledge by study. [Colloq.]

II. trans. 1. To seek to learn by memorizing the facts, principles, or words of; apply the mind to learning; store in the memory, either generally or verbatim: as, to study a book, a language, history, etc.; to study a part in a play or a piece for recitation.

Kath. Where did you study all this goodly speech? / Pet. It is extempore, from my mother-wit. Shak., T. of the S., ii. 1. 264.

2. To seek to ascertain or to learn the particulars of, as by observation or inquiry; make a study of; inquire into; investigate; as, to study a man's character or the customs of a society; to study the geology of a region, or a case of disease.

III. . . . entertain some score or two of tailors, / To study fashions to adorn my body. Shak., Rich. III., i. 2. 258.

3. To consider in detail; deliberate upon; think out: as, to study the best way of doing something; to study a discourse or a compliment.

I will still study some revenge past this. B. Jonson, Sad Shepherd, i. 2.

4. To regard attentively or discriminatingly; consider as to requirements, character, quality, use, effect, or the like; pay distinguishing attention to: as, to study one's own interests; to study the effect of one's actions; to study a person; to study a drapery or a model in art.—5. To look at musingly, as in a brown study.

He was studying the toe of his foot, visible through a rift in his well-worn brogan. The Century, XXXVIII. 85.

6. To apply the mind to learning (a specific science or branch of science), especially with the object of preparing for the exercise of a profession: as, the one is studying medicine, the other theology.—7. To subject to study; carry through a course of learning; educate; instruct.

The State of Avignon, . . . being visited with such of the French Preachers as had been studied at Geneva, the people generally became inclined unto Calvin's doctrines. Heylin, Hist. Presbyterians, p. 54. (Davies.)

To study out. (a) To find out by study or consideration; get at the bottom of; unravel: as, to study out a person's meaning; he has studied out the mystery. (b) To think out deliberately; arrange definitely in the mind; determine the details of: as, I have studied out a plan; to study out a set of rules.—To study up. (a) To learn by special study or investigation; get up a knowledge of, as for a particular purpose or occasion: as, to study up a law-case, or a subject for an examination; to study up routes of travel. (b) To seek or get a knowledge of by observation or consideration; observe or reflect upon critically; make up one's mind about: as, to study up a person or a man's character; to study up arguments or reasons.—Syn. 2. To scrutinize, search into.—3. To reflect upon, meditate, ponder.—4. To contemplate.

study (stud'i), n.; pl. studies (-iz). Another spelling of stiddy, a variant of stithy. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.] stufa (stū'fū), n.; It. pl. stufe (-fo), E. stufas (-fūz). [It.] A jet of steam issuing from a fissure of the earth in volcanic regions.

In many volcanic regions jets of steam, called by the Italians stufas, issue from fissures at a temperature high above the boiling-point.

Lyell, Prin. of Geol. (11th ed.), I. 391.

stuff (stuf), n. and a. [Early mod. E. stuffe; < ME. stof, stuff, stuffe (= D. LG. Dan. stof = G. Sw. stof; < ML. estoffa), < OF. estoffe, F. étoffe = Sp. Pg. estofa, quilted stuff, = It. stoffa, < L. stappa (ML. prob. also Germanized **stufpa, stufpa*), earlier stupa, the coarse part of flax, hard, tow; see stupid. Cf. stop. The sense of the L. word is better preserved in the verb stuff, crum: see stuff, stop, v.] I. n. 1. Substance or material in some definite state, form, or situation; any particular kind, mass, or aggregation of matter or things; material in some distinct or limited sense, whether raw, or wrought or to be wrought into form.

Of such a stoffe as easy is to fynde
Is best to bilde.

Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 15.
The wit and mind of man, if it work upon matter, . . .
worketh according to the stuff.

Bacon, Advancement of Learning, i. 44.
The breccia, too, is quite comparable to moraine stuff.
J. Geikie, Geol. Sketches, ii. 4.

The stiff upstanding of fine young stuff, hazel, ash, and so on, tapering straight as a fishing-rod, and knobbing out on either side with scarcely controllable bulges.

R. D. Blackmore, Cripps, the Carrier, xxiv.
2. Incorporeal or psychical substance of some special kind; that which arises from or constitutes mind, character, or quality; any im-material effluence, influence, principle, or essence. See mind-stuff.

Yet do I hold it very stuff o' the conscience
To do no contrived murder. Shak., Othello, i. 2. 2.
As soon as my soul enters into heaven, I shall be able to say to the angels, I am of the same stuff as you, spirit and spirit. Donne, Sermons, xii.

Do not squander time; for that is the stuff which life is made of.

The spirit of Ximenes was of too stern a stuff to be so easily extinguished by the breath of royal displeasure.
Prescott, Ferd. and Isa., ii. 25.

3. Goods; possessions in a general sense; baggage: now chiefly in the phrase household stuff.

Assemblt were some the same in the fight,
And restor't full stithly the stuff of the Grekes.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), i. 5775.

I will not stay to-night for all the town;
Therefore away, to get our stuff aboard.
Shak., C. of E., iv. 4. 162.

I have good household stuff, though I say it, both brass and pewter, lincens and woollens. Steele, Spectator, No. 324.

4. Something made up, or prepared or designed, for some specific use. (a) Woven material; a textile fabric of any kind; specifically, a woolen fabric.

At my little mercer's in Lombard Street, . . . and there cheapened some stuffs to hang my room.

(b) A preparation of any kind to be swallowed, as food, drink, or medicine

I . . . did compound for her
A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease
The present power of life

Shak., Cymbeline, v. 5. 255.

(c) Ready money; cash; means in general. [Colloq.]
But has she got the stuff, Mr. Fag? Is she rich, hey?

Sheridan, The Rivals, i. 1.
(d) A preparation or composition for use in some industrial process or operation. Among the many things technically known as stuff in this sense are (1) ground paper stock ready for use, the material before the final preparation being called half-stock; (2) the composition of tallow with various oils, wax, etc. (also called dabbing), used in a hot state by curriers to fill the pores of leather; (3)
the similar composition of turpentine, tallow, etc., with which the masts, sides, and other parts of wooden ships are smeared for preservation; (4) the mixture of alum and salt used by bakers for whitening bread. For others, see phrases below.

5. Unwrought matter; raw material to be worked over, or to be used in making or producing something: as, breadstuffs (see bread- stuff); foodstuff; rough stuff (for carpenters' use); the vein-stuff of mines

The stuff, i. e., the mixed ore, veinstone, and country rock, having been cleansed, it is now possible to make a separation by hand. Encyc. Brit., XVI. 463.

6. Refuse or useless material; that which is to be rejected or cast aside; in mining, attle or rubbish. Hence—7. Intellectual trash or rubbish; foolish or irrational expression; fustian; twaddle: often in the exclamatory phrase stuff and nonsense!

A Deal of such Stuff they sung to the deaf Ocean.
N. Bailey, tr. of Colloquies of Erasmus, i. 278.

8†. Supply or amount of something; stock; provision; quantity; extent; vigor.

That they leve reasonable stuff [of fuel] upon the bak for sprying to spryng, to serve the pouere people of penyworthes and halfpenny worthes in the neep sesous.
English Gids (E. E. T. S.), p. 425.

I have but easy stuff of money withinne me, for so meeche as the season of the yer is not yett grown.

Paston Letters, i. 61.
Clear stuff, in carp., boards free from imperfections such as knots, wind-shakes and ring-hearts.—Coarse stuff, in building, a mixture of lime and hair used in the first coat and floating of plastering.—Fine, free, inch stuff. See the qualifying words.—Gaged stuff. Same as gage-stuff.
—Quarter stuff, in carp.. See quarter-stuff.—Red stuff, a watchmakers' name for crocus, or oxid-of-iron powder.
—Small stuff (navit.). See small.—The real stuff. See real.—Touching-stuff, in aquatint engraving, a composition of the ashes of cork, ivory-black, and gall with treacle, made into a ball, and used with water for touching up the dark parts of the plate.—White stuff, a gilders' composition, formed of size and whiting, used in forming a surface over wood that is to be gilded.

II. a. Made of stuff, especially of light woolen fabric.—Stuff gown, a gown made of stuff, as distinguished from one of finer material, as silk; especially, in legal phraseology, the gown of a junior barrister; hence, in England, a junior barrister, or one under the rank of queen's counsel.

There she sat, . . . in her brown stuff gown, her check apron, white handkerchief, and cap.
Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xvi.

Stuff hat, a hat made in imitation of heaver, the fur of various animals being applied to a foundation which is rendered water-proof by the application of varnish.

stuff (stuff), v. [Early mod. E. also stufte; < ME. stufen; from the noun.] I. trans. 1. To fill with any kind of stuff or loose material; crum full; load to excess; crowd with something: as, to stuff the ears with cotton.

If you will go, I will stuff your purses full of crowns.
Shak., 1 Hen. IV., i. 2. 146.

2. Specifically, to fill with stuffing or packing; crum the cavity of with material suitable for the special use or occasion: as, to stuff a cushion or a bedtick; to stuff a turkey or a leg of veal for roasting.—3. To cause to appear stuffed; puff or swell out; distend. [Rare.]

Lest the gods for sin
Should with a swelling dropsy stuff thy skin.
Dryden, tr. of Persius's Satires, v. 273.

4. To fill the prepared skin of (an animal), for the purpose of restoring and preserving its natural form and appearance: the process includes wiring and mounting. See taxidermy and stuffing, n., 3.

A few stuffed animals (as the Rector was fond of natural history) added to the impressive character of the apartment.

Scott, Heart of Mid-Lothian, xxxii.
5. Figuratively, to fill, crum, or crowd with something of an immaterial nature: as, to stuff
a poem with mawkish sentiment.

Well stuffed with all manner of goodness.
Rom. of Parley (E. E. T. S.), i. 6378.

You have a learned head, stuff it with libraries.
Fletcher, Spanish Curate, iv. 5.

6. To use as stuffing or filling; dispose of by crowding, cramming, or packing.

Put them [roses] into . . . a glass with a narrow mouth, stuffing them close together. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 365.

A woman was busy making a clearance of such articles as she could stuff away in corners and behind chairs.
Chambers's Jour., LV. 42.

7. To constitute a filling for; be crowded into;
occupy so as to fill completely.

With inward arms the dire machine they load,
And iron bowels stuff the dark abode.
Dryden, Jacod, ii. 26.

8. To apply stuff to; treat with stuff, in some technical sense. See stuff, n., 4 (d) (2).

Ordinarily the hand process of stuffing leather is accomplished after rolling the sides into bundles with the grain side in, and softening them by treating or beating.
C. T. Davis, Leather, p. 409.

9†. To stock or supply; provide with a quota or outfit; furnish; replenish.

He stuffed alle castelle
Wyth armye & vytelle.
Arthur (ed. Furnivall), i. 549.

Stithe shippes & stoure stuffed with vitell,
All full vpon floe with fyne pepull in.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), i. 2748.

The same nyght I cam to Placencia or Plesansee; ther
I stuffed me wth wyne and breed and other caselles as me thought necessary for me at that tyme.

Torkington, Diaries of Eng. Travell, p. 5.

10. To deceive with humorous intent; gull.
[Colloq.]—To stuff a ballot-box, to thrust into a ballot-box surreptitiously fraudulent ballots, or any ballots which have not actually been cast by legal voters. [U. S.]
—To stuff out, to fill round, or puff out; swell to the full; distend; expand.

Stuffs out his vacant garments with his form.
Shak., K. John, iii. 4. 97.

II. intrans. To eat greedily; play the glutton.

He longed to lay him down upon the shelly bed, and stuff;
He had often eaten oysters, but had never had enough.
W. S. Gilbert, Etiquette.

stuff-chest (stuf'chest), n. In paper-manuf., a vat in which the pulp is mixed preparatory to molding.

stuffed (stuff), p. a. 1. Filled with or as with stuffing.—2. Having the nose obstructed, as during a cold.

I am stuffed, cousin; I cannot smell.
Shak., Much Ado, iii. 4. 64.

3. In bot., filled with a cottony web or spongy mass which is distinct from the walls: said of stems of fungi.

stuff-engine (stuf'en'jin), n. In paper-manuf., a pulp-grinder.

stuffer (stuf'er), n. [< stuff + -er.] 1. One who stuffs, or does anything called stuffing: as, a bird-stuffer; a ballot-box stuffer.—2. That which stuffs; specifically, a machine or an instrument for performing any stuffing operation:
as, a sausage-stuffer; a stuffer for horse-collars.

They [tomatoes] fall into the hopper, and are fed by the stuffer, a cylinder worked by a treadle, into the can.

Workshop Receipts, 2d ser., p. 445.

stuff-gownsmen (stuf'gounz'man), n. A junior barrister; a stuff gown. See stuff, a.

stuffiness (stuf'i-nes), n. 1. The state or property of being stuffy, close, or musty: as, the stuff- iness of a room.—2. The condition of being stuffed, or stuffed up, as by a cold. [Rare.]

As soon as one [cold] has departed with the usual final stage of stuffiness, another presents itself.

George Eliot, in Cross, II. xii.

stuffing (stuf'ing), n. [Verbal n. of stuff, v.] 1.
The material used for filling a cushion, a mattress, a horse-collar, the skin of a bird or other animal, etc.

Your titles are not writ on posts,
Or hollow statues which the best men are,
Without Promethean stuffings reached from heaven!
B. Jonson, Poetaster, v. 1.

2. In cooking, seasoned or flavored material, such as bread-crumbs, chestnuts, mashed potatoes, or oysters, used for filling the body of a fowl, or the hollow from which a bone has been taken in a joint of meat, before cooking, to keep the whole in shape, and to impart flavor.

Ridley, a little of the stuffing.
Thackeray, Philip, xvi.

Geese and ducks to be freighted hereafter with savoury stuffing.
Lemon, Wait for the End, i. 14.

3. The art or operation of filling and mounting the skin of an animal; taxidermy. Two main methods of stuffing are distinguished as soft and hard. In the former the skin is wired, or otherwise fixed on an internal framework, and cotton or tow is introduced, bit by bit, till the desired form is secured. In the latter a solid mass of tow, shaped like the animal, is introduced within the skin, which is then molded upon this artificial body.
Hard stuffing is usually practised upon birds.

4. A filling of indifferent or superfluous material for the sake of extension, as in a book; padding.

If these topics be insufficient habitually to supply what compositors call the requisite stuffing, . . . recourse is to be had to reviews.

W. Taylor, in Robberds's Memoir, i. 425. (Davies.)

5. A mixture of fish-oil and tallow rubbed into leather to soften it and render it supple and water-proof. E. H. Knight.

The leather to receive grease or stuffing is usually placed in a rotating drum or wheel. C. T. Davis, Leather, p. 410.

6. The wooden wedges or folds of paper used to wedge the plates of a comb-cutters saw into the two grooves in the stock.—Rough stuffing, a composition of yellow ochre, white lead, varnish, and japan, used as a groundwork in painting carriages.

stuffing-box (stuf'ing-boks), n. In mach., a contrivance for securing a steam-, air-, or watertight joint when it is required to pass a movable rod out of a vessel or into it. It consists of a close box cast round the hole through which the rod passes, in which is laid, around the rod and in contact

Stuffing-box in Steam-engine.

a, cylinder-head; b, box cast integrally with the head a; c, piston rod; d, d, packing wound about the rod; e, follower for compressing the packing; f, f, bolts and nuts for forcing the follower against the packing.

with it, a quantity of hemp or india-rubber packing. This packing is lubricated with oily matter, and a ring is then placed on the top of it and pressed down by screws, so as to squeeze the packing into every crevice. The stuffing-box is used in steam-engines, in pumps, on the shaft of a screw steamer where it passes through the stern, etc.
Also called packing-box.—Lantern stuffing-box, a long stuffing-box with tightening-bolts, used in some marine engines. E. H. Knight.

stuffing-brush (stuf'ing-brush), n. A stiff brush for rubbing stuffing into leather.

stuffing-machine (stuf'ing-ma-shen'), n. In tanning and currying, a machine for working stuffing into leather.

stuffing-wheel (stuf'ing-hwël), n. In tanning, a stuffing-machine in which leather is worked with stuffing in a revolving hollow drum, the heat being variously applied by a steam-jacket, an internal steam-coil, or (now rarely) by direct admission of steam into the drum.

stuff (stuf'), a. [< stuff + -y<sup>1</sup>.] 1. Close, as if from being stuffed and unaired; musty from closeness; oppressive to the head or lungs.

The huts let in the frost in winter and the heat in summer, and were at once stuffy and draughty.

Mrs. J. H. Ewing, Short Life, ii. 2. Stuffed out; fat: said of a person. [Prov. Eng.]—3. Affected as if by stuffing; muffled: said of the voice or speech.

And, this was Mrs. Vangitt herself; her own stuffy voice, intermingled with the familiar coughs and gasps.

Harper's Mag., LXXXIX, 18. 4. Made of good stuff; stout; resolute; methodical. [Scotch.]—5. Angry; sulky; obstinate. [Colloq., U. S.]

stuggy (stug'), a. [A dial. var. of stogy, stocky.] stocky: thick-set; stout. [Devonshire, Eng.]

We are of a thickset breed. . . . Like enough, we could post them, man for man, . . . and show them what a cross-buttock means, because we are so stuggy.

R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, i.

stuket, n. An old spelling of stuck.

stull (stul), n. [Prob. < G. stoll, < MHG. stoll, < OLG. stolla, a support, prop., post. Cf. stool, stalm.] In mining, a heavy timber secured in an excavation, and especially in the stopes, by the stulls rests the lagging, and they together form the support for the little or deads, which is left in the mine partly to keep the excavation from falling together and partly to avoid the expense of ridding worthless rock.

stull (stul), n. [Origin obscure.] A luncheon; also, a large piece of bread, cheese, or other eatable. [Hull, Eng.] stulpi (stulp), n. [E. dial. also stolp, stomp stomp; early mod. E. stulpe; < ME. stolpe, < Icel. stólpi = Sw. Dan. stolpe = MD. stolpe, a post, pillar. Cf. stull.] A short stout post of wood or stone set in the ground for any purpose.

Put III foote high on stulpe: must ther be A floor for hem.

Psalms, Huchonville (E. E. T. S.), p. 6.

stultification (stul'ti-fi-kā'-shon), n. [< I. L. stultificare, turn into foolishness (see stultify), + -ation.] The act of stultifying, or the state of being stultified. [Imp. Diet.]

stultifier (stul'ti-fi-er), n. [< stultify + -er.] One who or that which stultifies.

stultify (stul'ti-fi), v. t.: pret. and pp. stultified, pp. stultifying. [< L. stultificare, turn into foolishness, < L. stultus, foolish, silly, + facere, make.] 1. To make or cause to appear foolish; reduce to foolishness or absurdity: used of persons or things.

We stick at technical difficulties. I think there never was a people so choked and stultified by forms.

Emerson, Affairs in Kansas.

Mythologists . . . contrived . . . to stultify the mythology they professed to explain.

J. B. Tylor, Prim. Culture, I, 2, 2.

2. To look upon as a fool; regard as foolish. [Rare.]

The modern school stultifies all understandings but its own, and that which he regards as his own.

Hazlitt, (Imp. Diet.)

To stultify one's self. (a) To deny, directly or by implication, what one has already asserted: expose one's self to the charge of self-contradiction. (b) In fact to allege one's own insanity.

stultiloquence (stul-til'ō-kwen-s), n. [< L. stultiloquentia, foolish talk, babbling, < stultiloquent(-s), equiv. to stultiloquus, talking foolishly: see stultiloquent.] Foolish or stupid talk; senseless babble. [Bailey, 1731.] stultiloquent (stul-til'ō-kwent), a. [< L. stultiloquent(-s), equiv. to stultiloquus, talking foolishly, < stultus, foolish, + loquens(-s), pp. of loqui, talk, speak.] Given to stultiloquence, or foolish talk. [Imp. Diet.]

stultiloquently (stul-til'ō-kwent-li), adv. In a stultiloquent manner; with foolish talk.

stultiloquy (stul-til'ō-kwi), n. [< L. stultiloquium, foolish talking, < stultiloquus, talking foolishly: see stultiloquent.] Foolish talk; silly babbling. [Rare.]

What they call facetiousness and pleasant wit is indeed to all wise persons a mere stultiloquy, or talking like a fool.

Jerr. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I, 741.

stulty, a. [< L. stultus, foolish.] Foolish; stupid.

Shall fire be blamed for it breed a fool naturally by his own stulty wit in smothering?

Testament of Love, II. (Richardson.)

stum (stum), n. [Also dial. stoom; < D. stom, unfermented wine, must, < stom, mute, quiet, = OS. stum = MLG. stum, LG. stumm = OLG. MUG. stum, G. stumm = Sw. Dan. stum, dumb, mute; akin to stem, v., stammer. Cf. F. vin muet, 'mute wine.'] Unfermented or partly fermented grape-juice. Specifically—(a) Must which has not yet begun to ferment. (b) Must the fermentation of which has been checked by some ingredient mixed with it.

Let our wines without mixture or stum be all fine, Or call up the master, and break his dull noddle.

B. Jonson, Leges Convivales, v.

stum (stum), v. t.: pret. and pp. stunned, pp. stunning. [Also stoom; < D. stommen; from the noun: see stum, n.] 1. To prevent from fermenting; operate upon (wine) in a manner to prevent after-fermentation in casks. A common method is, before filling them, to burn sulphur in the casks with the bung-holes stopped. The sulphur is coated upon a linen rag, lighted, and then dropped in through the bung-hole, which is thereupon immediately closed. The wood of the cask is thus saturated with sulphur dioxide, which destroys all the germs of fermentation contained in it, and when the wine is put in a minute portion of the sulphur dioxide is dissolved in the liquor. Sodium sulphite added to wine in small quantity produces a similar result. Salicylic acid in minute quantity also prevents after-fermentation. A few drops of oil of mustard or a little mustard-seed dropped into wine will also stum it.

When you with High-Dutch Heeren dine, Expect false Latin and stum'd Wine.

Prior Upon a Passage in Scaligeriana.

W. stum out wines to renew their spirits.

Sir J. Floyer.

2. To fume with sulphur or brimstone, as a cask. [Prov. Eng.]

stumble (stum'bl), v.: pret. and pp. stumbled, pp. stumbling. [< ME. stumblen, stomben, stumben, stumblen, stomben, stomben = MD. stomben, D. stommelen, stumblen, = OHG. stumbalon, bustle, = Sw. dial. stambla, stambila, stomba = Norw. stumbla, stumblen, falter; a var. of stummen, v. v., and ult. of stammer. Cf. stomp.]

I. intrans. 1. To slip or trip in moving on the feet; make a false step; strike the foot, or miss footing, so as to stagger or fall.

He made the king. Run for to stumblen, that was eory for his beechen walls that he hadde so luste.

Merlin (E. E. T. S.), II, 339.

If my horse had happened to stumblen, he had fallen down with me.

Corral, Cradles, I, 89.

Stumblen at every obstacle . . . left in the path, he at last . . . attained a terrace extending in front of the Place d'Armes.

Scott, Redgauntlet, ch. xv.

2. To move or act unsteadily or in a staggering manner: trip in doing or saying anything; make false steps or blunders, as from confusion or inattention: as, to stumble through a performance.

Tray thou me, who was terribly frightened at speaking to so great a personage, grew pale and stumbled in his speech.

The Century, XXXVIII, 351.

3. To take a false step or be staggered mentally or morally: trip, as against a stumbling-block; find an occasion of offense; be offended or tempted.

He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none occasion of stumbling in him. 1 John II, 10.

This article of God's sending his Son into the World, which they seem most to stumble at.

Stillingfleet, Sermons, III, ix.

4. To come accidentally or unexpectedly: chance; happen; light: with on or upon.

Chance sometimes, in experimenting, maketh us to stumble upon somewhat which is new.

Bacon, Praise of Knowledge (ed. 1837).

On what evil day Has he then stumbled?

William Morris, Earthly Paradise, I, 415.

II. trans. 1. To cause to stumble; cause to trip; stagger; trip up.

False and dazzling fires to stumble men.

Milton, Divorce, II, 3.

2. To puzzle; perplex; embarrass; nonplus; confound. [Archaic.]

One thing more stumbles me in the very foundation of this hypothesis.

We do not wonder he (President Edwards) was stumbled with this difficulty, for it is simply fatal to his theory.

Bibliotheca Sacra, XLV, 616.

stumble (stum'bl), n. [< stumble, v.] 1. The act of stumbling; a trip in walking or running.

He would have tripped at the upward step. . . . Then he apologized for his little stumble.

Trollope, Last Chron. of Barset, xlix.

2. A blunder; a failure; a false step.

One stumble is enough to deface the character of an honorable life.

Sir R. L'Estrange.

stumbler (stum'blér), n. [< ME. stumblere, stombere; < stumble + -er.] One who stumbles, in any sense. G. Herbert, Church Porch.

stumbling-block (stum'bling-blök), n. Any cause of stumbling or failing; that which presents itself as a difficulty in one's way; a hindrance or obstruction, physically or morally; an offense or temptation.

We preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling-block, and unto the Greeks foolishness. 1 Cor. i. 23.

Indeed this (coasting trade-wind) was the great stumbling-block that we met with in running from the Gallapagos Islands for the Island Cocos.

Dampier, Voyages, II, iii, 16.

stumblingly (stum'bling-li), adv. In a stumbling or blundering manner.

I . . . marvel . . . that wee in this cleare age make so stumblingly after him [Chaucer].

Sir P. Sidney, Apol. for Poetrie, p. 62.

stumbling-stone (stum'bling-stön), n. Same as stumbling-block.

This stumblingstone we hope to take away.

T. Burnet, Theory of the Earth.

stumbly (stum'bli), a. [< stumble + -y<sup>1</sup>.] Liable to stumble; given to stumbling. [Rare.]

The miserable horses of the peasants are awfully slow and very stumbly.

The Century, XL, 570.

stummel (stum'el), n. The short part of a tobacco-pipe, consisting of the pipe-bowl and a short section of the stem or a socket for the attachment of a stem or mouthpiece. Heyl, U. S. Import Duties (1889), iii, 95.

stummer (stum'er), v. i. [< ME. stomeren = Icel. Norw. stumra = Dan. stumre, stumble; cf. stumblen and stammer.] To stumble. [Prov. Eng.] stump (stump), n. and a. [Early mod. E. also stompe; < ME. stumpe, stompe = MD. stompe, D. stomp = OHG. stumphi, MHG. G. stumpf = Icel. stumpr = Dan. Sv. stump, a stump, = Lith. stambas, a stump; Skt. stambha, a post, stem. Cf. stub.] 1. n. 1. The truncated lower end of a tree or large shrub; the part of a vegetable trunk or stem of some size left rooted in the ground when the main part falls or is cut down; after eradication, the stub with the attached roots; used absolutely, the stub of a tree: as, the stump of an oak; cabbage-stumps; to clear a field of stumps.

Their courtly figures, seated on the stump Of an old yew, their favorite resting-place.

Ford'scroft, Excursion, vi.

They disposed themselves variously upon stumps and boulders, and sat expectant. Bret Harte, Tennessee's Partner.

2. A truncated part of anything extended in length; that part which remains after the main or more important part has been removed: a stub: as, the stump of a limb; the stump of a tooth; a cigar-stump.

The stumps of Dagon, whose head and hands were cut off by his fall.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 50.

A Gauntlet of hot Oil was clapped upon the stump (of an amputated arm), to stanch the blood.

Houell, Letters, I, i, 18.

3. pl. Legs: as, to stir one's stumps. [Colloq.]

How should we bustle forward? give some counsel How to bestir our stumps in these cross ways.

B. Jonson, Tale of a Tub, iii, 1.

4. A post. [Prov. Eng.]—5. One of the three posts constituting a wicket in the game of cricket. They are called respectively the leg-stump (next to which the batsman stands), middle stump, and off-stump. Their lower ends are pointed so as to be easily driven into the ground; the height at which they stand when fixed is 27 inches, and the width of the three, including the space between them, 8 inches. The top of each stump is grooved, and in the grooves the two small pieces of wood called bails, each 4 inches long, are laid from stump to stump.

6. A rubbing instrument used for toning the lights and shades of crayon- or charcoal-drawings, and sometimes for softening or broadening the lines of pencil-drawings and for applying solid tints with powdered colors. It is a short thick roll of paper or soft leather, or a bar of india-rubber, pointed at both ends.—7. In a lock, a projection on which a dog, fence, or tumbler rests. Sometimes it is introduced to prevent the improper retraction of the bolt, and sometimes to guide a moving part.—8. A place or an occasion of popular political oratory; a political rostrum or platform; hence, partisan public speaking; popular advocacy of a cause: as, to take the stump, or go on the stump, for a candidate. This meaning of the word arose from the frequent early use in the United States of a tree stump as a rostrum in open-air political meetings. It does not necessarily convey a derogatory implication.

Superficial politicians on the stump still talk of the Gladstonian policy of 1866 as if it existed in 1859.

Nineteenth Century, XXVI, 748.

9. In coal-mining, a small pillar of coal left between the gangway or airway and the breasts to protect these passages; any small pillar.

Penn. Surv. Gloss.—10. A blunted sound; a sound which seems to be suddenly cut off or stopped; a thud. [Rare.]

Far up the valley the distant stump of a musket-shot reaches our ears. The Century, XXXVIII. 399.

11. A challenge or defiance to do something considered impracticable, very difficult, or very daring—that is, something to stump the person attempting it. [Colloq., U. S.]

The reason for this little freak was a stump on the part of some musicians, because . . . it was not supposed he could handle a baton. He did it.

Elect. Rev. (Amer.), XIV. 4.

12. In cutum, a very short vein or nerve of the wing, arising from another vein, and suddenly ending without emitting branches.—13. Of worms, a foot-stump. See parapodium, 1.—To start a vessel from the stump. See start, 1.—Up a stump, stumped; noplussed; “up a tree.”

II. a. 1. Stumped; stumpy; truncated; like a stump or stub; as, a dog with a stump tail.

A heavy stompe leg of wood to go withall.

Ascham, The Scholemaster, p. 127.

2. Of or pertaining to the stump in the political sense; as, a stump speech or speaker; stump eloquence.

The florid eloquence of his [Lincoln's] stump speeches. The Century, XXIX. 575.

Stump tracery, in arch., a name for a late German variety of interpenetrating medieval pointed tracery, in which the molded bar is represented as contorted and passing through itself at intervals, and cut off short so as to form a stump after every such interpenetration.

stump (stump), v. [Also stomp; < stump, n.] I. trans. 1. To truncate; lop; reduce to a stump.

Around the stumped top soft mosses did grow.

Dr. H. More, Psychozola, ii. 59.

2. To strike unexpectedly and sharply, as the foot or toes, against something fixed; stub; as, to stump one's toe against a stone. [Colloq.]—

3. To bring to a halt by obstacle or impediment; block the course of; stall; foil; of American origin, from the obstruction to vehicles offered by stumps left in a cleared tract without a road. [Colloq.]

Be inventive. Cultivate the creative side of your brain. Don't be stumped. Sci. Amer., N. S., LVIII. 337.

Uncle Sam himself confesses that he can do everything but enjoy himself—that, he admits, stumps him. Harpur's Mag., LXXVIII. 977.

Hence—4. To challenge or dare to do something difficult, dangerous, or adventurous. [Colloq., U. S.]

In some games . . . younger children are commanded, or older ones stumped or dared, to do dangerous things, like walking a picket fence or a high roof. Amer. Jour. Psychol., III. 66.

5. To make stump speeches in or to; canvass or address with stump oratory; as, to stump a county or a constituency. [Colloq.]—6. In cricket: (a) To knock down a stump or the stumps of.

A herd of boys with clamour bow'd,
And stump'd the wicket. Tennyson, Princess, ProL
(b) To put (a batsman) out by knocking down his wicket with the ball when, in an attempt to hit the ball, he has gone off the ground allotted to him: sometimes with out; as, he was stumped, or stumped out. Hence—7. To defeat; impoverish; ruin.

Don't you know our history?—haven't you heard, my dear fellow, we are stumped? T. Hook, Gilbert Gurney, xlv.
[He] had shrunk his “weak means,” and was stumped and “hard up.” Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, II. 47.

8. To pay on the spot; plank down; hand over; generally with up. [Slang.]

My trusty old crony,
Do stump up three thousand once more as a loan.
Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, II. 18.
How much is the captain going to stump up?
R. B. Blackmore, Christowell, I. xviii.

9. In art, to use a stump upon; tone or modify by the application of a stump; as, to stump a crayon- or charcoal-drawing.—10. In hat-making, to stretch out (a felt wool hat) after the operation of washing, and prior to drying.

II. intrans. 1. To walk stuffily, heavily, or noisily, as if on stumps or wooden legs.

He rose from his seat, stumped across the room.
Scott, Heart of Mid-Lothian, vii.

The guard picks him off the coach top and sets him on his legs, and they stump off into the bar.

T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Rugby, i. 4.

2. To make stump speeches; conduct electioneering by public speaking; make harangues from the stump. See stump, n., 8. [Colloq.]

There will be a severe contest between the Conservatives, who are stumping vigorously, and Mr. — and the Republicans.

The Nation, VI. 212.

To stump it. (a) To take to flight; run off. [Slang.]

Stump it, my cove; that's a Bow-street runner.

Bulwer, Night and Morning, ii. 2.

(b) To travel about making stump speeches. [Colloq.] stumpage (stum'pāj), n. [< stump + -age.] 1. Standing timber; timber-trees collectively, as in a particular tract of forest, with reference to their value for cutting or stumping, independently of that of the land. [U. S.]

No forest lands are to be sold, but the stumpage on them may be disposed of in the discretion of the commissioner of forests. Sci. Amer., N. S., LVIII. 93.

2. A tax levied in some of the United States on the amount and value of timber cut for commercial purposes.

stumper (stum'pēr), n. [< stump + -er.] One who or that which stumps, in any sense.

“How many legs has a caterpillar got?” I need hardly add that the question was a stumper to the good bishop. N. and Q., 7th ser., XI. 117.

stump-extractor (stum'eks-trak'tor), n. 1. A tool or appliance for removing the stumps of trees in clearing woodland. They range from a simple hand-lever and cant-hook to frames and tripods or strong four-wheel carriages bearing a screw, toggle-joint, tackle, or windlass operated by hand- or horse-power. Also called stump-puller. 2. A dental instrument for extracting the stumps of teeth.

stumpiness (stum'pi-nes), n. The state or condition of being stumpy.

stump-joint (stum'joint), n. A form of joint in which the ends or stumps of the parts joined rest against each other when in line, and permit movement in but one direction, as the joint of the common carpenters' rule. See cut under rule-joint.

stump-puller (stum'pūl'ēr), n. Same as stump-extractor, 1.

stump-tailed (stum'tāld), a. Having a short stumpy tail; bobtailed; curtail.

stump-tree (stum'trē), n. The Kentucky coffee-tree, Gymnocladus Canadensis: so called from its lack of small branches. See cut under Gymnocladus. Fallows.

stumpy (stum'pi), a. [< stump + -y. Cf. stubby.] 1. Abounding with stumps of trees.

We were shaving stumpy shores, like that at the foot of Madrid bend.

S. L. Clemens, Life on the Mississippi, p. 134.

2. Having the character or appearance of a stump; short and thick; stubby; stocky.

A pair of stumpy bow-legs supported his squat, unweildy figure. For, King Pest.

A thick-set, stumpy old copy of Richard Baxter's “Holy Commonwealth.” J. T. Fields, Underbrush, p. 15.

stumpy (stum'pi), n. [< stump, v. t., S.] Ready money; cash. [Slang.]

Down with the stumpy; a tizzy for a pot of half and half. Kingley, Alton Locke, II. (Darics).

stun<sup>1</sup> (stun), v. t.; pret. and pp. stunned, ppr. stunning. [< ME. stonen, stowenen, < AS. stunan, make a din; cf. lecl. stynja, Sw. stōna, Dan. stonne, D. stenen (> G. stöhnen), groan (lecl. stynr, etc., a groan); AS. pret. a-stun for “a-stern, implying an orig. strong verb *stanan; Oulg. stengā, Russ. stenati, Lith. stenu, Gr. stenuv, groan; Skt. √ stan, sound, thunder. Hence the dial. or obs. var. stound<sup>3</sup>; also in comp. astun, astound, astony, astonish, etc., with variations due in part to confusion with other words; see the words cited.] 1. To strike the ears of rudely, as it were by blows of sound; shock the hearing or the sense of; stupefy or bewilder by distracting noise.

We were stunned with these confused noises. Addison, Tatler, No. 254.

The shouts of Thunder loud afflict the Air
Stun the Birds now releas'd, and shake the Iv'ry Chair.
Prior, Solomon, III.

2. To strike with stupor physically, as by a blow or violence of any kind; deprive of consciousness or strength.

So was he stound with stroke of her huge talfe.
Spenser, F. Q., V. xl. 29.

The giddy ship betwixt the winds and tides,
Fore'd back and forwards in a circle rides,
Stun'd with the different blows.
Dryden, Cym. and Iph., I. 341.

3. To benumb; stupefy; deaden.

That she [the cramp-fish] not onely stays them in the Deep,
But stuns their sense, and lulls them fast a-sleep.

Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, l. 5.
The assailants, . . . stunned by the furious, unexpected, and multiplied nature of the resistance offered, could hardly stand to their arms. Scott, Quentin Durward, xxvi.

The little weak infant soul, which had just awakened in her, had been crushed and stunned in its very birth-hour. Kingsley, Hypatia, xxviii.

4. To strike with astonishment; astound; amaze.

At the sight, therefore, of this River the Pilgrims were much stunned.

Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, i.
The multitude, unacquainted with the best models, are captivated by whatever stuns and dazzles them.

Macaulay, Madame D'Arblay.

stun<sup>1</sup> (stun), n. [< stun<sup>1</sup>, v. Cf. stound<sup>2</sup>.] A stroke; a shock; a stupefying blow, whether physical or mental; a stunning effect.

With such a stun
Came the amazement that, absorb'd in it,
He saw not fiercer wonders. Keats, Endymion, li.

The electrical stun is a stun too quickly applied to be painful.

Sci. Amer., N. S., LXIII. 200.

stun<sup>2</sup> (stun), n. [Origin obscure.] In marble-working, one of the deep marks made by coarse particles of sand getting between the saw-blade and the side of the kerf. O. Byrne.

stundt, n. See stound<sup>1</sup>.

stung (stung). Preterit and past participle of sting<sup>1</sup>.

stunk (stungk). Preterit and past participle of stink.

stunner (stun'ēr), n. [< stun<sup>1</sup> + -er.] One who or that which stuns, or excites astonishment; a person, an action, or a thing that astounds or amazes. [Colloq.]

I am busy working a cap for you, dear aunty, . . . and I think when finished [it] will be quite a stunner.
E. B. Ramsay, Scottish Life and Character, iv.

stunning (stun'ing), n. [Verbal n. of stun<sup>1</sup>, v.] The act or condition expressed by the verb stun; stupefaction.

They [symptoms of pathological collapse] appear in succession, and run from a condition of stunning or partial torpor into a state of general insensibility.
J. M. Carnochan, Operative Surgery, p. 93.

stunning (stun'ing), p. a. [Ppr. of stun<sup>1</sup>, v.] Very striking; astonishing, especially by fine quality or appearance; of a most admirable or wonderful kind. [Colloq.]

He heard another say that he would tell them of a stunning workhouse for a good supper and breakfast.
Ribton-Turner, Vagrants and Vagrancy, p. 294.

What a stunning tap, Tom! You are a winner for bottling the swipes. T. Hughes, Tom Brown at Rugby, ii. 3.

stunningly (stun'ing-li), adv. In a stunning manner; so as to produce a stunning effect. [Chiefly colloq.]

Gale, . . . visible by the tossing boughs, stunningly audible.

The Century, XXVII. 36.

stunsail (stun'sl), n. A nautical contraction of studdingsail.

stunt (stunt), a. [< ME. stunt, < AS. stunt, dull, obtuse, stupid, = lecl. stuttr (for **stuntr*) = OSw. stunt = Norw. stutt, short, stunted.] 1. Dull; obtuse; stupid; foolish. Ornithum, l. 3714.—2. Fierce; angry. [Prov. Eng.]

stunt (stunt), v. t. [< ME. stenten; < stunt, a. Cf. stint, a var. of stunt, v.; cf. also stut<sup>2</sup>.] 1. To make a fool of. [Prov. Eng.]—2. To check; cramp; hinder; stint: used of growth or progress.

Oligarchy, wherever it has existed, has always stunted the growth of genius. Macaulay, Milford's Hist. Greece.

3. To check the growth or development of; hinder the increase or progress of; cramp; dwarf: as, to stunt a child by hard usage.

The hardy seed grew up and flourished in spite of everything that seemed likely to stunt it.

Macaulay, Nugent's Hampden.

stunt (stunt), n. [< stunt, v.] 1. An animal which has been prevented from attaining its proper growth; a stunted creature; specifically, a whale of two years, which, having been weaned, is lean, and yields but little blubber.—2. A check in growth; a partial or complete arrest of development or progress.

Are not our educations commonly like a pile of books laid over a plant in a pot? The compressed nature struggles through at every crevice, but can never get the cramp and stunt out of it.

Lowell, Fireside Travels, p. 137.

stunted (stun'ted), p. a. Checked in growth; undeveloped; dwarfed.

Where stunted birches hid the rill.

Scott, Marmion, lli. 1.

There is a seed of the future in each of us, which we can unfold if we please, or leave to be forever only a stunted, half-grown stalk. J. F. Clarke, Self-Culture, p. 40.

I lived for years a stunted sunless life.

Tennyson, Aylmer's Field.

stuntedness (stun'ted-nes), n. The state of being stunted.

stuntiness (stun'ti-nes), n. Same as stuntedness. Chayne, Philos. Conjectures. [Rare.]

stuntness (stun'tnes), n. [Prop. stuntness.] Stunted brevity; shortness. [Rare.]

stuntness

Short sentences are prevalent in our language, as long ones are in German. In all things we incline to curtness and stuntness. J. Earle.

stupa<sup>1</sup> (stū'pā), n.; pl. stupae (-pē). [L.: see stupet.] 1. Same as stupet.—2. In bot., tufted or spirited filamentous matter like tow.

stupa<sup>2</sup> (stū'pā), n. [< Skt. stūpa (> Hind. top, tape: see tape), a mound, mound, accumulation.] In Buddhist arch., one of a class of stupa-like edifices erected in honor of some person or as a monument to mark a sacred spot. 1. One is sometimes extended to include the dagoba, a stupa containing a relic of Buddha (see dagoba). Also stupa (see Buddhist architecture), under Buddhist.

stupa<sup>3</sup> (stū'pā), n. [< L. stupa, stuppa, < Gr. στῦψ, the coarse part of flax, tow. Cf. stupa, stup.] 1. A pledget of tow, flannel, or similar material, used as a dressing in treating a wound.

The several stupaes and dressings being skillfully applied, the children were ordered to their respective beds. Brooke, Fool of Quality, li.

2. Flannel or other cloth wrung out of hot water and applied as a fomentation. It may be sprinkled with some active substance, as turpentine.

Turpentine stupaes applied over the chest.

stupa<sup>4</sup> (stū'pā), r. t.; pret. and pp. stupet, ppr. stupaing. [< stupet, n.] To apply a stupa to; foment. Wiseman, Surgery.

stupa<sup>5</sup> (stū'pā), n. [An abbr. of stupid.] A stupid person. [Colloq.]

Was ever such a poor stupa!

Bickerstaff, Love in a Village, li. 2.

stupefacient (stū-pū-fā'shēnt), a. and n. [< L. stupefaciens (t-s), ppr. of stupefacere, make stupid or senseless; see stupefy.] 1. a. Having a stupefying power.

2. n. A medicine which produces stupor or insensibility; a narcotic.

stupefaction (stū-pū-fak'shən), n. [= F. stupefaction = Sp. stupefacción = Pg. estupefacción = It. stupefazione, < L. stupefacere, stupify; see stupefy.] 1. The act of stupefying, or the state of being stupefied.—2. A stolid or senseless state; torpor; insensibility; stupidity.

Resistance of the dictates of conscience brings a hard one— and stupefaction upon it. South.

Stupefaction is not resignation; and it is stupefaction to remain in ignorance. George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, v. 3.

stupefactive (stū-pū-fak'tiv), a. and n. [= OF. stupefactif, F. stupefactif = Sp. Pg. estupefactivo = It. stupefattivo, < ML. stupefacturus, serving to stupify, < L. stupefactus, ppr. of stupefacere, stupify; see stupefy.] 1. a. Causing insensibility; deadening or blunting the sense of feeling or the understanding; stupefacient.

2. n. That which stupefies; specifically, a medicine that produces stupor; a stupefacient. [Rare.]

The operation of opium and stupefactive upon the spirit of living creatures. Jacon, Nat. Hist., § 73.

stupefiedness (stū-pū-fid-nēs), n. The state of being stupefied; stupefaction; insensibility.

We know that insensibility of pain may as well proceed from the deadness and stupefiedness of the part as from a perfect and unimpaired health. Boyle, Works, vi. 6.

stupefier (stū-pū-fī-ēr), n. [< stupefy + -er.] One who or that which stupefies, or makes insensible or stupid.

stupefy (stū-pū-fī), v.; pret. and pp. stupified, ppr. stupifying. [Formerly also stupify; = F. stupefier (< L. as if **stupeficare*), equiv. to It. stupefare, < L. stupefacere, make senseless, deaden, benumb, stupify, < stupere, be struck senseless, + facere, make (see -fy).] 1. trans.

1. To make stupid or torpid; blunt the faculties of; deprive of sensibility by any means; make dull or dead to external influences: as, to be stupefied by a blow on the head, by strong drink, or by grief.

The dead-numbing night-shade,

The stupefying hemlock, adder's tongue,

And marigold. B. Jonson, Sad Shepherd, li. 2.

His anxiety stupefied instead of quickening his senses.

Mrs. Oliphant, Poor Gentleman, xlv.

2. To deprive of mobility: said of a substance or material.

This stupefies the quicksilver that it runneth no more. Bacon, Physiol. Renalms, Compounding of Metals.

2. intrans. To become stupid or torpid; lose interest or sensibility; grow dull. [Rare.]

I which live in the country without stupefying am not in darkness, but in shadow. Donne, Letters, iv.

stupend (stū-pend'), a. [= Sp. Pg. estupendo = It. stupendo, < L. stupendus, astonishing; see stupendous.] Stupendous.

6009

The Romans had their public baths very sumptuous and stupend. Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 285.

stupendious (stū-pen'di-us), a. [An erroneous form for stupendous.] Stupendous.

There was not one Almighty to begin

The great stupendious Work.

Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 19.

stupendiously (stū-pen'di-us-li), adv. Stupendously. Sandys, Paraph. upon Lamentations.

stupendly (stū-pend'li), adv. Stupendously; amazingly.

The Britons are so stupendly superstitious in their ceremonies that they go beyond those Persians.

Burton, Anat. of Mel., p. 599.

stupendous (stū-pen'dus), a. [< L. stupendus, amazing, astonishing, fut. part. pass. of stupere, be stunned or astonished: see stupid.] Causing stupor or astonishment; astounding; amazing; specifically, astonishing from greatness in extent or degree; of wonderful magnitude; immense; prodigious: as, a stupendous work of nature or art; a stupendous blunder.

All are but parts of one stupendous whole.

Pope, Essay on Man, l. 267.

Like reptiles in a corner of some stupendous palace, we peep from our holes.

Goldsmith, Children of the World, xxii.

How stupendous a mystery is the incarnation and suffering of the Son of God!

J. H. Newman, Parochial Sermons, l. 209.

stupendously (stū-pen'dus-li), adv. In a stupendous manner.

stupendousness (stū-pen'dus-nēs), n. The character or state of being stupendous. Bailey, 1727.

stupent (stū'pent), a. [< L. stupen (t-s), ppr. of stupere, be struck senseless, be stunned or astonished.] Struck with stupor; stunned; dumfounded; aghast. [Rare.]

We will say mournfully, in the presence of Heaven and Earth, that we stand speechless, stupent, and know not what to say!

Carlyle, (Imp. Dict.)

stupeous (stū'pū-us), a. [< L. stupa, stuppa, tow; see stupet.] In entom., covered with long, loose scales, like tow, as the palpi of some lepidopterous insects; stupose.

stupid (stū'pid), a. and n. [= F. stupide = Sp. estúpido = Pg. estúpido = It. stupido, < L. stupidus, struck senseless, amazed, confounded, stupid, stolid, < stupere, be amazed or confounded, be struck senseless: see stupent.] 1. a. 1. In a state of stupor; having the faculties deadened or dulled; stupefied, either permanently or temporarily; benumbed.

Is he not stupid

With age and altering humors?

Shak, W. T., iv. 4. 409.

One cannot weep, his fears congeal his grief;

But, stupid, with dry eyes expects his fate.

Dryden, Ceyx and Alcione, l. 170.

2. Lacking ordinary activity of mind; dull in ideas or expression; slow-witted; obtuse; crass. A man who cannot write with wit on a proper subject is dull and stupid.

Addison, Spectator, No. 291.

A stupid preacher of unrighteousness, who would constantly make them yawn. Whipple, Memoir of Starr King.

3. Characterized by mental dullness or inanity; witless; senseless; foolish; inane: as, a stupid joke; a stupid book; stupid fens.

Observe what loads of stupid rhymes

Oppress us in corrupted times.

Swift.

=Syn. 1. Heavy, dull, drowsy, lethargic, comatose, torpid.—2. Muddy-brained, muddled.—3. Silly, Foolish, etc. (see absurd); flat, tame, humdrum, pointless, prosaic. See list under foolish.

2. n. A stupid or humdrum person; a blockhead; a dunce. [Colloq.]

Tom . . . inconsiderately laughed when her houses [of cards] fell, and told her she was "a stupid."

George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, l. 9.

stupiditarian (stū-pid-i-tā'ri-an), n. [< stupid + -arian.] A person characterized by stupidity; one who thinks or acts stupidly; a dullard. [Rare.]

How often do history and the newspapers exhibit to us the spectacle of a heavy-headed stupiditarian in official station, velling the sheerest incompetency in a mysterious sublimity of carriage! Whipple, Lit. and Life, p. 143.

stupidity (stū-pid'i-ti), n. [= F. stupidité = It. stupidità, < L. stupiditas (t-s), senselessness, dullness, < stupidus, senseless, stupid: see stupid.] 1. A state of stupor or stupefaction; torpidity of feeling or of mind. [Rare.]

A stupidity

Past admiration strikes me, joined with fear.

Chapman.

2. The character or quality of being stupid; extreme dullness of perception or understanding; inanity; crass ignorance.

sturdy

The mind ought not to be reduced to stupidity, but to retain pleasure. Incon, Advancement of Learning, ii.

A consideration of the fat stupidity and gross ignorance concerning what imports men most to know.

Burke, Rev. in France.

For getting a fine flourishing growth of stupidity there is nothing like pouring out on a mind a good amount of subjects in which it feels no interest.

George Eliot, Mill on the Floss, v. 2.

=Syn. See stupid.

stupidly (stū'pid-li), adv. In a stupid manner or degree; so as to be or appear stupid, dazed, or foolish; with stupidity: as, stupidly drunk;

to be stupidly cautious; to speak stupidly.

stupidness (stū'pid-nēs), n. The quality of being stupid; stupidity. [Rare.]

stupefiedness, stupefy, etc. Erroneous spellings of stupefiedness, etc.

stupor (stū'por), n. [= F. stupeur = Sp. Pg. estupor = It. stupore, < L. stupor, insensibility, numbness, dullness, < stupere, be struck senseless, be amazed or confounded: see stupent, stupid.] 1. Suspension or great diminution of sensibility; a state in which the faculties are deadened or dazed; torpidity of feeling.

The first flashing of the candles upon that canvas had seemed to dissipate the dreamy stupor which was stealing over my senses. Poe, Tales, l. 307.

The injured person is . . . in a condition between stupor and insensibility, with other signs of general prostration.

J. M. Carnochan, Operative Surgery, p. 414.

2. Intellectual insensibility; dullness of perception or understanding; mental or moral numbness.

Our Church stands haltered, dumb, like a dumb ox; lowing only for provender (of titles); content if it can have that; or, with dumb stupor, expecting its further doom. Carlyle, French Rev., l. ii. 3.

Anergetic stupor. Same as stuporous insanity (which see, under stuporous).

stuporous (stū'por-us), a. [< stupor + -ous.] Characterized by stupor; having stupor as a conspicuous symptom. [Recent.]—Stuporous insanity, a psychoneurosis, usually of young adults, characterized by extreme apathy and dementia, ensuing usually on conditions of exhaustion from shock or otherwise, and generally issuing in recovery after a few weeks or months. Also called acute dementia, primary dementia, primary curable dementia, and anergic stupor.

Stuporous insanity being a recoverable form, dementia would more properly include cases of traumatism resembling it.

Allen and Neurol., ix. 459.

stupos (stū'pōs), a. [< L. stupa, stuppa, tow

(see stupet), + -osc.] In bot. and zool., bearing tufts or mats of long hairs; composed of matted filaments like tow. Compare stuppeous.

stuprate (stū'prāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. stuprated,

ppr. stuprating. [< L. stupratus, pp. of stuprare

(> It. stuprare = Sp. Pg. estuprar), defile, debauch, < stuprum, defilement, dishonor.] To dobauch; ravish.

stupration (stū-prā'shən), n. [< L. as if **stupra-* tio (n.), < stuprare, defile, dobauch: see stuprate.] Violation of chastity by force; rape.

stuprum (stū'prum), n. [NL., < L. stuprum, defilement, dishonor.] 1. Stupration.—2. In civil law, any union of the sexes forbidden by morality.

stupulose (stū-pū-lōs), a. [Dim. of stupose.] In entom., covered with short, fine, decumbent hairs; finely stupose.

sturdied (stér'did), a. [< sturdy + -ed.] Affected with the disease called sturdy.

I caught every sturdied sheep that I could lay my hands upon. Hogg, The Shepherd's Guide, p. 68.

sturdily (stér-di-li), adv. In a sturdy manner;

stoutly; lustily.

His refusal was too long and sturdily maintained to be reconciled with affection or insincerity.

Prescott, Ferd. and Isa., li. 5.

sturdiness (stér'di-nēs), n. [< ME. sturdinesse, sturdynesse; < sturdy + -ness.] The state or property of being sturdy. (a) Obstinacy; contumacy. (b) Stoutness; lustiness; vigor.

sturdy<sup>1</sup> (stér'di), a. [< ME. sturdy, sturdi, stordy, stordi, stordi, stowdi, < OF. estordi, estourdi, stunned, amazed, stupefied, rash, headless, careless, pp. of estordir, estourdir, F. étourdir =

OSp. estordecir, estordecer = It. stordire, stun, amaze, stupefy; origin uncertain; perhaps < L.

as if **extorpidire*, benumb, render senseless or torpid, < L. ex-, out, + torpidus, dull: see torpid.] 1. Obdurately set or determined; dog-godly obstinate; stubborn; sulky; used of persons.

[Obsolete or prov. Eng.]

I was ful sturdy, & thou ful myelde;

Ihesu, lord, y knowe weel it.

Hymn to Virgin, etc. (L. E. T. S.), p. 35.

Came, gentlemen, leave pitying and moaning of her,

And praising of her virtues and her whinnings;

It makes her proud and sturdy. Fletcher, Pilgrim, l. 1.

2. Having great force or endurance; strong in attack or resistance; vigorous; hardy; stout; lusty; robust: as, a sturdy opponent; sturdy pioneers; sturdy legs; a sturdy tree.

So treads a sturdy wyne that it shal smyle,
And of a rough drinker be clere and best.
Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 201.

Some beat them coates of brasse, or sturdy breastplate hard they drue,
And some their gauntlets gilde, or bootes with siluer nesh contrue. Placer, Æneid, vii.

But they so belabour'd him, being sturdy men at arms, that they made him make a retreat.

Bunyan, Pilgrim's Progress, ii.

How bow'd the woods beneath their sturdy stroke!
Gray, Elegy, l. 28.

Three young sturdy children, brown as berries.
Dickens, Old Curiosity Shop, xv.

3. Firmly fixed or settled; resolute; unyielding; hard to overcome: used of things.

The King declareth him the cas
With sterne loke and sturdy chere.

Gower, Conf. Amant., viii.

Nothing, as it seemeth, more preuailing or fit to redress and edifie the cruell and sturdie courage of man then it [music]. Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 4.

There are, as in philosophy, so in divinity, sturdy doubts.
Sir T. Browne, Religio Medici, i. 10.

A nation proud of its sturdy justice and plain good sense. Macaulay, Hallam's Const. Hist.

Sturdy beggar, in old Eng. law, an able-bodied beggar; one who lives by begging while capable of earning his livelihood.

Those that were Vagabonds and sturdy Beggars they were to carry to Bridewel.

Strype, Order of City of London, 1569 (quoted in Ribton-(Turner's Vagrants and Vagrancy, p. 101).

= Syn. 2. Stout, Stalwart, etc. (see robust), brawny, sinewy, muscular, firm.

sturdy<sup>2</sup> (stér'di), n. [Cf. Gael. stuir, stuirdean, vertigo, a disease of sheep (< E.); < OF. estorde, giddiness, < estordi, stunned, stupefied: see sturdy<sup>1</sup>.] A disease of sheep caused by the presence in the brain of the cœnurus, or cystic larval form of the dog's tapeworm, Tænia caninus. The cysts vary in size from that of a pea to that of a pigeon's egg. The disease is marked by lack or loss of coordination in muscular action, evinced in a disposition to stagger, move sidewise, or sit on the rump, and also by stupor. Sturdy generally attacks sheep under two years old, and is rarely cured, since puncturing or trephining gives but temporary relief. Also called gid and staggers.

sture, n. A Scotch form of stour<sup>3</sup>.

sturgeon (stér'jon), n. [Cf. ME. sturjoun, sturjoun, < AF. sturjoun, OF. esturgeon, later estourgeon, F. esturgeon = Sp. esturion = Pg. esturão = It. storione, < ML. sturio(n), sturgio(n), < OHG. sturjo, sturo, MHG. sture, stur, stür, G. stör = D. stuur = Sw. Dan. stôr = Icel. stýrja = AS. styrja, stirga, a sturgeon; prob. lit. 'a stirrer' (so called, it has been conjectured, because it stirs up mud by floundering at the bottom of the water), < OHG. stören, MHG. staren, G. stören, etc., stir: see stir<sup>1</sup>.] A chondrogonoid fish of the order Chondrostei and family Acipenseridae (see the technical names). There are 2 leading genera, Acipenser and Scaphirhynchops, or ordinary and shovel-nosed sturgeons. Of the latter there are 4 species, confined to the fresh waters of the United States and some parts of Asia, as S. platyrhynchus of the former country, 6 feet long. (See cut under shovelhead.) The common sturgeon of the Atlantic, anadromous in Europe and North America, is A. sturio. Another, of the Atlantic coast of the United States, is the short-nosed sturgeon, A. brevirostris. The small or Ruthenian sturgeon, or sterlet, of some European waters is A. ruthenus. (See sterlet, with cut.) The great white sturgeon, beluga, or huso of Pontocaspian waters, is A. huso; this is the largest known, 12 or 15 feet or more in length, weighing 1,000 pounds or more, and an important source of isinglass and of caviar. The white sturgeon of the Columbia and Sacramento rivers is A. transmontanus, an important food-fish, of from 300 to 600 pounds weight. The green sturgeon of the same waters is A. medirostris, supposed to be unfit for food. An isolated and very distinct species, land locked in fresh waters of the United States, is A.

Common Sturgeon (Acipenser sturio)

Lake Sturgeon (Acipenser rubicundus).

rubicundus, variously known as the red, black, stone-, rock-, lake-, and Ohio sturgeon; it reaches a length of 6 feet, and a weight of from 50 to 100 pounds. Nearly all the sturgeons are the objects of important fisheries, for their flesh, for various uses of their bony plated skins, and as sources of isinglass and caviar. Sturgeons rank with whales as regal or royal fishes (see regal). See also cut under Acipenser. — Russian sturgeon, the beluga. — Spoon-billed sturgeons, the Polyodontidae. See cuts under paddle-fish, Psephurus, and Spatularia.

Sturiones (stū-ri-ō'nēz), n. pl. [NL., pl. of ML. sturio, sturgeon: see sturgeon.] 1. In Cuvier's system of classification, the first order of chondropterygious fishes: same as Chondrostei, 2. See cuts under paddle-fish, Psephurus, Spatularia, sterlet, and sturgeon. — 2. Same as Acipenseridae. Bonaparte, 1837.

sturionian (stū-ri-ō'ni-an), a. and n. [Cf. NL. Sturion-es + -ian.] 1. a. Pertaining to the sturgeons, or having their characters; acipenserine.

II. n. A sturgeon; an acipenserid.

sturionidian (stū-ri-ō-nid'i-an), n. [Cf. Sturion-es + -id- + -ian.] A fish of the order Chondrostei; a sturgeon-like fish. Sir J. Richardson.

sturionine (stū-ri-ō-nin), a. and n. [Cf. Sturion-es + -in.] Same as sturionian.

sturk, n. See stirk.

Sturmian (stér'mi-an), a. [Cf. Sturm (see def.) + -ian.] Of or pertaining to the French mathematician J. C. F. Sturm (1803–55). — Sturmian function, one of the series of remainders obtained in the process of finding the greatest measure of an integral function and its derivative, provided the sign of each is changed as we proceed.

Sturnella (stér-nel'ä), n. [NL. (Vieillot, 1816), < Sturnus + dim. -ella.] A remarkable genus of Icteridae, typical of the subfamily Sturnellinae, containing the American meadow-larks or so-called field-larks. The bill is of peculiar shape, longer than the head, with straight outlines, abruptly angulated commissure, and flattened culmen extending on the forehead. The feet are large and strong, reaching beyond the tail when outstretched, eminently fitted for terrestrial locomotion. The wings are short and rounded, and the tail is very short, with stiffish narrow acute feathers. The coronal feathers are bristle-tipped; and the plumage is much variegated, the under parts being yellow with a black horseshoe on the breast.

There is one species with several geographical races, or several species, inhabiting Mexico, Central America, and most parts of North America and the West Indies. S. magna is the common meadow-lark of the eastern United States, and S. neglecta is characteristic of the western prairies. The genus formerly included those related South American birds in which the yellow is replaced by red, now called Trupialis or Pezeltes. Also called Pedopsaris. See also cut under meadow-lark.

Sturnellinae (stér-ne-l'i-nē), n. pl. [NL., < Sturnella + -inae.] A subfamily of Icteridae, represented by the genera Sturnella and Trupialis. Coues, 1884.

sturnelline (stér-ne-lin), a. Of or pertaining to the genus Sturnella or the subfamily Sturnellinae.

Sturnia (stér-ni-ä), n. [NL. (Lesson, 1847), < L. sturnus, starling: see Sturnus.] A genus of Oriental starlings. The species, of which there are few, range from eastern Siberia and Japan through China to Burma, the Philippines, Moluccas, etc. The type is S. sinensis, the kink of early French ornithologists (kink orle of Latham, 1783), with many New Latin synonyms; its plumage is much varied with glossy blackish, greenish, and purplish, and different shades of gray, buff, isabel, and salmon-color; the bill is blue and the eyes are white; the length is about 8 inches. This bird is chiefly Chinese, but is wide-ranging. S. sturnina (the donkian thrush of Latham, with a host of synonyms) extends from Siberia and northern China through the Malay peninsula, etc. A third species is S. violacea, with fifteen or more different Latin names and a few English ones; this is especially Japanese, but migrates in winter to the Philippines, the Moluccas, Borneo, and Celebes.

Sturnidae (stér-ni-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Sturnus + -idae.] A family of oscine passerine birds, typified by the genus Sturnus; the Old World starlings. They have ten primaries, of which the first is short or spurious; the wings are lengthened or moderate; the frontal anticline extends into the nasal fosse; there are no rectal vibrissae; and the bill is atypically conic-acute, with blunt, rounded, or flattened culmen, ascending gony, and angulated commissure. The plumage is mostly of metallic or iridescent hues, sometimes splendidly lustrous or beautifully variegated, or both. The family is a large one, widely diffused in the Old World, excepting in Australia, and entirely absent from America. Both its limits and its subdivisions vary with different writers. See cuts under Buphaga, Eulabes, Pastor, stirling<sup>1</sup>, and Temenuchus.

sturniform (stér-ni-fór-m), a. [Cf. L. sturnus, a starling, + forma, form.] Having the form or technical characters of the starlings; sturnoid; of or pertaining to the Sturniformes.

Western Field Lark (Sturnella neglecta).

Sturniformes (stér-ni-fór'méz), n. pl. [NL.: see sturniform.] A superfamily of sturnoid passerine birds, composed of 4 families; the sturnoid Passeres.

Sturninae (stér-ni'nē), n. pl. [NL., < Sturnus + -inae.] A subfamily of Sturnidae, containing the typical starlings, represented by the genus Sturnus and related forms. In some systems the Sturninae correspond to the Sturnidae divested of certain genera referred to other families, as Buphagidae and Paradisidae, and are represented in this sense by about 25 genera and 126 species; in others the term is used in a much more restricted sense. See cut under starling.

sturnoid (stér'noid), a. [Cf. Sturnus + -oid.] Of or pertaining to the family Sturnidae. — Sturnoid Passeres, one of four groups or series in which A. R. Wallace (Ibis, 1874, pp. 406–416) distributed the normal oscine passerine birds, the others being the typical or turdoid, the tanagraid, and the formicarioid Passeres. They are otherwise called Sturniformes, and include the starling group, a characteristic feature of which is the possession of ten primaries, of which the first is spurious. See cuts under starling<sup>1</sup>, Pastor, Scissirostrum, Eulabes, Temenuchus, and Buphaga.

Sturnopastor (stér-nō-pas'tor), n. [NL. (Hodgson, 1843, as Sternopastor), < Sturnus + Pastor, q. v.] A genus of starlings with bare circumorbital spaces and comparatively rounded wings. There are several species, as S. contra of India, S. supercilialis of Burma, S. jalla and S. melanoptera of Java.

Sturnus (stér'nus), n. [NL. (Brisson, 1760; Linnæus, 1766), < L. sturnus, a starling: see stare<sup>2</sup> and starn<sup>2</sup>.] The representative genus of Sturninae, formerly employed with latitude, now closely restricted to such forms as the common stare or starling, S. vulgaris. The plumage is metallic and iridescent, with distinctly outlined individual feathers. The feet are short and typically oscine. The tail is about half as long as the wings, emarginate, with twelve rectrices. The wings are pointed by the second and third primaries, the first being spurious and very small. The bill is not bristled; feathers fill the intermaxillary space, and extend into the nasal fosse; there is a nasal scale, and the tomial edges of the bill are dilated; the commissure is angulated, and the culmen and gony are both nearly straight; the culmen extends on the forehead, parting well-marked anticline. See cut under starling.

sturt<sup>1</sup> (stért), v. [An obs. or dial. var. of stert<sup>1</sup>, sturt<sup>1</sup>.] I. trans. To vex; trouble. Burns. [Prov. Eng. and Scotch.]

II. intrans. To start from fright; be afraid. Burns, Halloween. [Scotch.]

sturt<sup>2</sup> (stért), n. [Also dial. transposed sturt; < sturt<sup>1</sup>, v.] 1. Trouble; disturbance; vexation; wrath; heat of temper. [Scotch.]

Scotland has cause to mak great sturt
For laiming of the Laird of Mow.

Raid of the Reidsdale (Child's Ballads, VI. 137).

2. In Eng. mining, an extraordinary profit made by a tributer by taking at a high tribute a "pitch" which happens to cut an unexpectedly large body of ore, so that his profit is correspondingly great. [Cornwall, Eng.]

sturtion (stér'shon), n. A corruption of nasturtium. See nasturtium, 2.

Sturt's desert-pea. See pea<sup>1</sup>.

stut<sup>1</sup> (stat), v. i. [Early mod. E. stutte, < ME. stoten, stutter; = D. stooten, stutter, = OHG. stōzan, MHG. stōzen, G. stossen, push, strike against, = Icel. stauta, beat, strike, also stutor, = Sw. stöta = Dan. støde, strike against, = Goth. stautan, strike: see stot<sup>2</sup>. Hence stutter<sup>1</sup>.] 1. To stutter. [Old and prov. Eng.]

To stut or stammer is a foule crime.
Dabees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 348.

Nay, he hath Albano's imperfection too,
And stuttes when he is vehemently mo'd.
Marston, What you Will, i. 1.

2. To stagger.

Stut, to stagger in speaking or going.
Baret, Alvearie, 1580.

stut<sup>2</sup>, v. [Cf. ME. stutten, stitten, < Icel. stytta, make short, < stuttr, short: see stunt, a., and cf. stunt, v., stent, v.] I. trans. To cut short; cause to cease. Ancient Rhyel, p. 72, note f.

II. intrans. To cease; stop. Seinte Marherete (E. E. T. S.), p. 6.

stut<sup>3</sup> (stat), n. A variant of stout<sup>2</sup>.

stutter<sup>1</sup> (stut'ér), v. [Cf. ME. **stoteren* = D. stoteren = MLG. stoteren, LG. stöttern, stöttern (> G. stottern) = Sw. dial. stutra, stutter; freq. of stut.] I. intrans. To speak with a marked stammer; utter words with frequent breaks and repetitions of parts, either habitually or under special excitement.

The stuttering declamation of the isolated Hibernian.
Charlotte Brontë, Shirley, i.

= Syn. Falter, etc. See stammer.

II. trans. To utter with breaks and repetitions of parts of words; say disjointedly.

Red and angry, scarce
Able to stutter out his wrath in words.
Browning, Ring and Book, II. 22.

style; a pedantic style; a nervous style; a cynical style.

Style is a constant & continual phrase or tenor of speaking and writing, extending to the whole tale or process of the poem or history, and not properly to any particular member of a tale.

Pultenham, Art of Eng. Poets, p. 123.

Proper words in proper places make the true definition of a style.

Jeffreys spoke against the notion in the coarse and savage style of which he was a master.

Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vi.

If thought is the gold, style is the stamp which makes it current, and says under what king it was issued.

Dr. J. Brown, Spare Hours, 3d ser., p. 277.

4. Distinctive manner of external presentation; particular mode or form (within more or less variable limits) of construction or execution in any art or employment; the specific or characteristic formation or arrangement of anything. In this sense the applications of the word style are coextensive with the whole range of productive activity. Styles in the arts are designated according to subject, treatment, origin, school, period, etc.; as, in painting, the landscape, genre, or historical style; the style of Titian or of Rubens; the Preraphaelite or the Impressionist style; in architecture, the Greek, medieval, and Renaissance styles; the Pointed or the Perpendicular style; the Louis-Quatorze or the Eastlake style of furniture; the Florentine style of wood-carving; carpets and rugs in the Persian style; styles in dress.

I don't know in what style I should dress such a figure and countenance, to make anything of them.

Cooper, Lionel Lincoln, III.

It [a bed-chamber] is fitted up in the style of Louis XVI.

Thackeray, Newcomes, xlv.

Monteverde, Claudio (1568-1643), the inventor of the "free style" of musical composition, was born at Cremona in 1568.

Encyc. Brit., XVI, 785.

5. Particular mode of action or manifestation; physical or mental procedure; manner; way; as, styles of rowing, riding, or walking; styles of acting, singing, or bowing.—6. Mode, as of living or of appearing; distinctive or characteristic manner or fashion, with reference to appearance, bearing, social relations, etc.; in absolute use, an approved or prevalent mode; superior manner; noticeable elegance; the fashion: as, to live in style; style of deportment or of dress.

There are some very homely women who have a style that amounts to something like beauty.

Il. B. Stowe, Oldtown, p. 68.

That otherwise impalpable quality which women call style.

Howells, Indian Summer, II.

7. Hence, in general, fine appearance; dashing character; spirited appearance; as, a horse that shows style.—8. Mode of designation or address; a qualifying appellation or title; an epithet distinctive of rank, office, character, or quality.

With one voice, sir,
The citizens salute you with the style
Of King of Naples

Fletcher, Double Marriage, v. 4.

Give unto God his due, his reverend style.

Middleton, Solomon Paraphrased, i.

9. In chron., a mode of reckoning time with regard to the Julian and Gregorian calendars. See calendar. Style is Old or New. The Old Style (abbreviated O. S.) is the reckoning of time according to the Julian calendar, the numbering of the years being that of the Christian era. In this reckoning the years have 365 days, except those whose numbers are divisible by 4, which have 366 days. The extra day is inserted in February, and is considered to be that following the 23d of that month. For ecclesiastical reasons, the calendar was reformed by Pope Gregory XIII., by adding 10 days to the date after October 4th, 1582, and thereafter making no years whose numbers end with two ciphers leap-years except those whose significant figures are divisible by 4. The year in New Style always begins with January 1st, but in Old Style there was some diversity of practice. The Gregorian year accords closely with the tropical year; but otherwise its advantages are merely ecclesiastical and theoretical. This mode of correcting the calendar has been adopted at different times by almost all civilized nations except Russia and other countries where the Greek Church is predominant, which still adhere to the Old Style. In England the Gregorian or New Style (abbreviated N. S.) was adopted by act of Parliament in 1751, and as one of the years concluding a century in which the additional or intercalary day was to be omitted (the year 1700) had elapsed since the correction by Pope Gregory, it was necessary to omit 11 instead of 10 days in the current year. Accordingly, 11 days in September, 1752, were re-taken, and the 3d day was reckoned the 14th. The difference between the Old and New Styles is now 12 days.—Atic style. See Atic.—Concertante, Corinthian, crystalline, cushion, dissonance style. See the qualifying words.—Early English style, a modern factitious style of furniture and decoration, in which some elements of the decoration of the middle ages were used mingled with others. It was characterized by a free use of black and gold, and by designs in color in hard flat patterns of one color relieved upon another.—Florid style of medieval architecture. See florid.—Garancin style. Same as madder style.—Geometric style. See geometric.—Jesuit style, in arch. See baroque. 2.—Juridical styles, in Scots law, the particular forms of expression and arrangement necessary to be observed in formal deeds and instruments.—Lacrymal style, a short wire worn in a lacrymal duct in treatment of obstruction of this duct.—Lapidary, madder, monodic, occipital style. See the qualifying words.—Palestrina style, in music, the style of church music. Compare capella.—Perpendicular style. See perpendicular.—Queen Anne style. See queen.—Rainbow, Renaissance, resist, etc., style. See the qualifying words.—Style of a court, the practice observed by any court in its way of proceeding.—Syn. 3, Diction, Phrasology, etc. (See diction.) Invention, Style, Amplification, in rhetoric. See invention.—8. Appellation, etc. See name.

style<sup>1</sup> (stil), v. t.; pret. and pp. styled, ppr. styling. [Formerly also, and prop., stile; < style<sup>1</sup>, n.] 1. To record with or as with a style; give literary form to; write.

Poetry is nothing else but Feigned History, which may be styled as well in prose as in verse.

Dracon, Advancement of Learning, II.

2. To give or accord the style or designation of; entitle; denominate; call.

He is also stiled the God of the rural Inhabitants.

Dracon, Fable of Pan.

Upon this Title the Kings of England were styled Kings of Jerusalem a long time after.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 63.

Declared the Deceased

And stiled him "a Beast."

Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I, 64.

style<sup>2</sup> (stil), n. [Formerly also stile (in sense 1); < NL. stylus, a style of a plant, < ML. stylus, also improp. stilus, a pillar, < Gr. στυλος, a pillar, column, also a post, pale; not connected with L. stilus, improp. written stylus, a stake, pale, a pointed instrument, etc., with which the word has been associated, so that the E. style<sup>1</sup> and style<sup>2</sup> are now commonly confused.] 1. A pillar; a column. See style<sup>1</sup>.—2. The pin or gnomon of a sun-dial, which marks the time by its shadow, or any fixed pointer serving a similar purpose. See out under sun-dial.

Then turns the globe vntill the style that sheweth the hours be comme to the hour in the which youe sought the unknown place of the moone.

J. Eden, tr. of Gemma Phrysius (First Books on America, [ed. Arber, p. 329]).

3. In bot., a narrowed extension of the ovary, which, when present, supports the stigma. It is usually slender, and in that case of varying length, often elongated, as in honeysuckle, fuselia, and in an extreme case Indian corn (forming its "silk"); sometimes it is thick and short, as in squash, grape-vine, etc.; sometimes wholly wanting, leaving the stigma sessile. Morphologically it is the attenuated tip of the carpel, hence equaling the carpels in number, except when, as in many compound pistils, the styles are consolidated. It is said to be simple when undivided, even if formed by the union of several. When cleft or slit it is bifid, trifid, etc.; when more deeply separated it is bipartite, tripartite, etc. According to the conformation of the carpel, the style may be terminal, rising from its summit, as is typically the case, or lateral, as in strawberry and cinquefoil, or basal, as in comfrey and salvia—the carpel being in these last cases more or less bent over. In position it may be erect, ascending, declinate, recurved, etc.; in form it may be filiform, subulate, trigonal, claviform, petaloid, etc. In relation to the corolla or calyx it may be included or exerted. A style may be persistent, but is commonly caducous, falling soon after fecundation. The function of the style is to present the stigma in a position advantageously to receive the pollen, and to form a medium for its communication to the ovules; accordingly, it has the structure of a tube filled or lined with a conductive tissue of the same nature as that which composes the stigma. See pistil, ovary, pollen-tube, and stigma.

style<sup>3</sup>, n. An obsolete spelling of stile<sup>1</sup>.
style-branch (stil'branch), n. In bot., a branch or division of the style. In the Compositæ the character of the style-branch is of important systematic value.

style-curve (stil'kerv), n. A curve constructed to exhibit the peculiarities of style or composition of an author. It may be drawn so that the abscissæ represent the number of letters in a word, while the corresponding ordinates show the relative frequency of the occurrence of such words, or other characteristics may be selected. Experiments seem to prove that, when a sufficiently extensive analysis is made in this manner, every writer will be found to be represented by a curve peculiar to himself. Science, XIII, 92.

stylet (sti'let), n. [OF. stylet, < It. stiletto, a pointed instrument, dagger, dim. of stilo, a pointed instrument: see style<sup>1</sup>, and cf. stiletto.] 1. A slender pointed instrument; a stiletto.

"Come, Paul!" she reiterated, her eye grazing me with its hard ray like a steel stylet.

Charlotte Brontë, Villette, XII.

2. In surg., the perforator of a trocar; the stiffening wire or rod in a flexible catheter; sometimes, a probe. Also stiletto.—3. In zool., a little style; also, a style; specifically, in entom., one of the second of the three pairs of rhinobites or appendages of the abdominal sternites entering into the formation of the ovipositor. See out under Arctidea.

styletiform (sti'let-i-form), a. [< style<sup>1</sup> + i. forma, form.] Shaped like a stylet; styletiform.
stylewort (stil'wört), n. A plant of the genus Candollea, formerly Stylidium; more broadly, (Lindley), a plant of the order Candollea, formerly Stylidaceæ (Stylidiaceæ).

Stylidiæ (sti-li-di'ë), n. pl. [NL. (Juss.: 1811), < Stylidium + -ac.] An order of gamopetalous plants, of the cohort Campanulæ, now known as Candolleæ. It is characterized by flowers usually with an irregular calyx and corolla with five lobes, two stamens united into a column with the style, and a two-celled ovary with numerous ovules. The order is closely related in habit to the Liliæ, which, however, are readily distinguished by the free corolla. It contains about 105 species, belonging to 5 genera, of which Stylidium is the type, mostly Australian but a few in tropical Asia, New Zealand, and antarctic America. They are herbs or rarely somewhat shrubby plants with radical scattered or seemingly whorled leaves, which are entire and usually narrow or small. Their flowers are terminal racemes or panicles, usually primarily centripetal in development and secondarily centrifugal. Al. S. liliaceæ.

Stylidium (sti-lid'i-um), n. [NL. (Swartz, 1807), so named from the stamen-column; < Gr. στυλος, a pillar, column, + dim. -idium.] A genus of gamopetalous plants, now known as Candollea (Labillardière, 1805), type of the order formerly called Stylidiæ, and now known as Candolleæ. It is characterized by flowers with the fifth lobe of the irregular corolla very different from the others, forming a small or narrow curving lip, and by the long recurved or replicate and usually elastic stamen-column. The 57 species are all Australian but 3, which are natives of Asia, principally of India. Many species are cultivated under glass, under the name of stylewort, for their rose-colored flowers: see also hairtrigger-flower. The name Stylidium (Loureiro, 1790), no longer used for Candollea, is at present applied instead to a small tropical genus of coriaceous trees and shrubs, formerly Markea (Roxburgh, 1810), sometimes cultivated under glass for its yellow flowers.

styliferous<sup>1</sup> (sti-lif'e-rus), a. [< L. stylus, prop. stilus, a pointed instrument (see style<sup>1</sup>), + ferre = E. bear<sup>1</sup>.] In zool. and anat., having a style or styloid process; stylate.
styliferous<sup>2</sup> (sti-lif'e-rus), a. [< NL. stylus, a style (see style<sup>2</sup>), + L. ferre = E. bear<sup>1</sup>.] In bot., style-bearing; bearing one or more styles.
styliform (sti'li-form), a. [< L. stylus, prop. stilus, a pointed instrument, + forma, form, shape: see form.] Having the shape of a style; resembling a pen, pin, or peg; styloid.
styleine (sti'lin), a. [< style<sup>2</sup> + -ine.] In bot., of or pertaining to the style.
styliscus<sup>1</sup> (sti-lis'kus), n.; pl. stylisci (-i). [NL. (Lindley), < Gr. στυλίσκος, dim. of στυλος, a pillar, a shaft: see style<sup>2</sup>.] In bot., the channel which passes from the stigma of a plant through the style into the ovary.
stylish (sti'lish), a. [< style<sup>1</sup> + -ish.] Having style in aspect or quality; conformable or conforming to approved style or taste; strikingly elegant; fashionable; showy; as, stylish dress or manners; a stylish woman; a stylish house.

stylishly (sti'lish-li), adv. In a stylish manner; fashionably; showily.
stylishness (sti'lish-nēs), n. The state or property of being stylish, fashionable, or showy; showiness: as, stylishness of dress or of an equipage. Jane Austen, Northanger Abbey, viii.
stylist (sti'list), n. [< style<sup>1</sup> + -ist.] A writer or speaker distinguished for excellence or individuality of style; one who cultivates, or is a master or critic of, literary style.

Exquisite style, without the frigidity and the over-correctness which the more deliberate stylists frequently display.

G. Saintsbury, Hist. Elizabethan Literature, x.

stylistic (sti-lis'tik), a. and n. [< stylist + -ic.] 1. a. Of or relating to style.

Nor has accuracy been sacrificed to stylistic requirements.

Athenæum, No. 3014, p. 202.

II. n. 1. The art of forming a good style in writing. Also used in the plural.—2. A treatise on style. [Rare.]

Stylidium (Candollea) loricifolium. a, a flower; b, longitudinal section of flower;
c, transverse section of fruit.

Campanula sp. a, style, b, stigma.

stylistically (stī-lis'ti-kəl-i), adv. In a stylistic relation; with respect to style. Classical Rev., III, 57.

stylite (stī'līt), n. [LGr. στυλίτης, of or pertaining to a pillar, a pillar-saint, < στυλος, a pillar; see style<sup>2</sup>.] In eccl. hist., one of a class of solitary ascetics who passed the greater part of their lives unsheltered on the top of high columns or pillars. This mode of mortification was practiced by the monks of the East from the fifth to the sixth century. The most celebrated was St. Simeon Stylite, who lived in the fifth century. Also called stylite.

stylobate (stī'lō-bāt), n. [= F. stylobate, < Gr. στυλοβάτης, the base of a pillar, < στυλος, a pillar, + βάτης, go, advance.] In arch., a continuous base upon which columns are placed to raise them above the level of the ground or a floor; particularly, the uppermost step of the stylobate of a columnar building, upon which rests an entire range of columns. It is distinguished from a pedestal, which, when it occurs in this use, supports only a single column. See cuts under base and pedestal.

stylocerite (stī-lōs'g-rīt), n. [L. stylus, prop. stylus, a pointed instrument (see style<sup>1</sup>), + (Gr. κέρας, horn, + -ίτης).] A style or spine on the outer side of the first joint of the antennule of some crustaceans. C. Spencer Rate.

styloglossal (stī-lō-glos'al), a. and n. [< stylus, + -glossal.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the styloid process and the tongue. II. n. The styloglossus.

styloglossus (stī-lō-glos'us), n.; pl. styloglossi (-ī). [NL., < E. stylus (id) + Gr. γλῶσσα, tongue.] A slender muscle arising from the styloid process and inserted into the side of the tongue.

stylogonidium (stī-lō-gō-nīd'ī-um), n.; pl. stylogonia (-ī). [L. stylus, prop. stylus, a pointed instrument (see style<sup>1</sup>), + NL. gonidium, q. v.] In bot., a gonidium formed by abstriction on the ends of special filaments. Phillips, Brit. Diatomaceae.

stylograph (stī'lō-grāf), n. [L. stylus, prop. stylus, a style (see style<sup>1</sup>), + Gr. γραφία, write.] A stylographic pen. Lit. Rev. (Eng.), XXVI, 16.

stylographic (stī-lō-grāf'ik), a. [As stylus + -ic.] Of or pertaining to stylography or a stylograph; characterized by or adapted to the use of a style; as, stylographic cards; a stylographic pencil; stylographic ink.—Stylographic pen. See pen.

stylographical (stī-lō-grāf'ik-al), a. [Stylographic + -al.] Same as stylographic.

stylographically (stī-lō-grāf'ik-əl-i), adv. In a stylographic manner; by means of a style for writing or engraving.

stylography (stī-lō-grāf'ī), n. [L. stylus, prop. stylus, a style (see style<sup>1</sup>), + Gr. -γραφία, < γραφω, write.] The art of tracing or the act of writing with a style; specifically, a method of drawing and engraving with a style on cards or tablets.

stylohyal (stī-lō-hī'al), n. [< stylus (id) + hyal (id) + -al.] In zool. and anat., one of the bones of the hyoid arch, near the proximal extremity of that arch, being or representing an infrahyoid element. In some vertebrates below mammals it is a part or division of the columnar stapes. In mammals it is the first bone of the hyoid arch outside of the ear; in man it is normally ankylosed with the temporal bone, constituting the styloid process of that bone, and is connected only by a ligament (the stylohyoid ligament; see epithyoid) with the lesser cornu of the hyoid. See epithyoid, and cuts under Petromyzon, skull, and hyoid.

stylohyoid (stī-lō-hī'oid), a. and n. [< stylus (id) + hyoid.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the stylohyal, or styloid process of the temporal bone, and the hyoid bone.—Stylohyoid ligament. See epithyoid and ligament, and cut under skull.—Stylohyoid muscle, a slender muscle extending from the styloid process of the temporal bone to the hyoid bone; the stylohyoidus. See II.—Stylohyoid nerve, that branch of the facial nerve which goes to the stylohyoid muscle.

II. n. The stylohyoid muscle. See cuts under skull and muscle.

stylohyoidcan (stī'lō-hī-oi'dō-an), a. [Stylohyoid + -can.] Same as stylohyoid.

stylohyoidcan (stī'lō-hī-oi'dō-an), n.; pl. stylohyoides (-ī). [NL.: see stylohyoid.] The stylohyoid muscle. See stylohyoid, n.

styloid (stī'lōid), a. [L. stylus, prop. stylus, a style (see style<sup>1</sup>), + Gr. ειδός, form.] Having some resemblance to a style or pen; like or likened to a style; styloform or stylate: an anatomical term applied to several processes of bone, generally slenderer than those called spines or spinous processes.—Styloid cornua, the epithyals; the lesser cornua of the hyoid bone; so called because of their attachment to the stylohyoid ligament.—Styloid process. See process and cuts under skull and foram.

styloite (stī'lō-līt), n. [< Gr. στυλος, a pillar (see style<sup>2</sup>), + λίθος, stone.] A peculiar form of jointed or columnar structure occasionally seen in beds of limestone, uniting the adjoining surfaces of two layers of the rock, and usually from half an inch to 3 or 4 inches in length. Styloites were at first considered to be fossil corals, and called ligonites, and later epimolites, it being supposed that they had been formed by the crystallization of sulphate of magnesium. Styloite is the name now most generally adopted for them, and it is believed that they are due to pressure of the superincumbent rock, which the styloite has been able to resist to a certain extent because protected by a shell, or some other organic body, which would not admit of the sinking of the material immediately under it as rapidly as did the adjacent rock under the compression of the overlying material, the part thus protected forming a columnar individual mass with slightly striated surface.

stylomastoid (stī-lō-mas'tōid), a. [< stylus (id) + mastoid.] In anat., common to the styloid process and the mastoid division of the temporal bone.—Stylomastoid artery, a branch of the posterior auricular artery, which enters the stylomastoid foramen to supply parts of the inner ear.—Stylomastoid foramen. See foramen, and cuts under Petrida and skull.—Stylomastoid vein, a small vein emptying into the posterior auricular vein.

stylomaxillary (stī-lō-mak'si-lī-ri), a. [< stylus (id) + maxillary.] Of or pertaining to the styloid process of the temporal bone and the maxillary, or lower jaw-bone.—Stylomaxillary ligament, a thin band of ligamentous fibers passing from near the tip of the styloid process to the angle and posterior border of the ramus of the mandible.

stylometer (stī-lō-mē-tēr), n. [< Gr. στυλος, pillar, column, + μετρον, measure.] An instrument for measuring columns.

Stylommatophora (stī-lō-mat'ōf'ō-rī), n. pl. [NL., neut. pl. of stylommatophorus; see stylommatophorus.] A suborder or other prime division of pulmonate gastropods, having the eyes borne on the ends of the tentacles: opposed to Buccinomatophora. It includes the terrestrial pulmonates, as land snails and slugs. Geophila and Neophila are synonyms.

stylommatophorous (stī-lō-mat'ōf'ō-rus), a. [< NL. stylommatophorus, < Gr. στυλος, a pillar, + ματω (-), an eye, + -φωρος, < φω = E. bear<sup>1</sup>.] Having eyes at the top of a style, horn, or tentacle, as a snail; of or pertaining to the Stylommatophora.

stylommatous (stī-lō-mat'us), a. [< Gr. στυλος, a pillar, + ματω (-), an eye.] Same as stylommatophorous.

stylopharyngeal (stī-lō-fā-rin'jē-al), a. and n. [< stylus (id) + -pharyngeal.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the styloid process and the pharynx. II. n. The stylopharyngeus.

stylopharyngeus (stī-lō-fā-rin-jō'us), n.; pl. stylopharynges (-ī). [NL., < L. stylus, prop. stylus, a style, + (Gr. φάρυγξ (pharynx)), the throat.] A long slender muscle, spreading out below, arising from the base of the styloid process of the temporal bone, and inserted partly into the constrictor muscles of the pharynx, and partly into the posterior border of the thyroid cartilage; it is innervated by the glossopharyngeus.

Stylophorum (stī-lōf'ō-rum), n. [NL. (Nuttall, 1818), so called from the conspicuous style; < Gr. στυλος, a pillar (see style<sup>2</sup>), + φύρον = E. bear<sup>1</sup>.]

A genus of polypetalous plants, of the order Papaveraceae and tribe Papavereae. It is characterized by flowers with two sepals, four petals, and a distinct style, which bears from two to four erect lobes, and is persistent with the placenta after the fall of the valves and scrobiculate seeds from the ovoid, oblong, or linear, and commonly stalked capsule. There are 1 or 5 species, 2 in North America, the others in the Himalayas, Manchuria, and Japan. They are herbs with a perennial rootstock and a yellow juice, bearing a few lobed or dissected tender stem-leaves, and usually others which are pinnatifid and radical. The yellow or red flowers are borne on long peduncles which are nodding in the bud. S. diphyllum is thecelandine poppy or yellow poppy of the central United States, formerly classed under Meconopsis. Its light-green leaves resemble those of thecelandine, and, like it, contain a yellow latex.

Stylopidæ (stī-lōp'ī-dē), n. pl. [NL. (Kirby, 1813), < Stylops + -idæ.] An aberrant group of insects, formerly considered as forming a distinct order, Strepsiptera or Rhipiptera, but now ranked as a family of heteromericous beetles, typified by the anomalous genus Stylops. In the males, which are capable of flight, the mouth-parts are atrophied, except the mandibles and one pair of palpi; the prothorax and mesothorax are very short; the elytra are reduced to simple club-shaped appendages (pseudelytra), while the hind wings are well developed, the metathorax being remarkably large and long, and the abdomen small. The females are wingless and worm-like, with a flattened triangular head, and live in the abdomen of certain bees and wasps, though the members of some exotic genera parasitize ants and some homopterous and orthopterous insects. They are viviparous, giving birth to hundreds of minute young, of very primitive form, with bulbous feet, slender hairy body ending in two long styles, and intestine ending as a closed sac. Stylops and Xenus are the only genera represented in North America. S.

stylotypite

Stylopidæ.—Stylops atterrana, adult winged male. (Cross shows natural size.)

children lives in certain bees, and X. pecki in a common wasp (Polistes metricus). See cut under Stylops.

stylized (stī'lō-pīz), a. [< stylus + -ize + -ed.] Penetrated by a stylops; serving as the host of the parasitic stylops.

stylopod (stī'lō-pod), n. [< NL. stylopodium, < Gr. στυλος, a pillar (see style<sup>2</sup>), + ποδ (pod) = E. foot.] In bot., same as stylopodium.

stylopodium (stī-lō-pō'di-um), n.; pl. stylopodia (-ī). [NL.: see stylopod.] In bot., one of the double fleshy disks from which the styles in the Umbelliferae arise.

Stylops (stī'lōps), n. [NL. (Kirby, 1802), < Gr. στυλος, a pillar (see style<sup>2</sup>), + ὤψ, eye, face.] I. A genus of insects, type of the order Rhipiptera.

1. Stylops atterrana, adult female, with two nearly hatched eggs. C, D, in h, the abdomen. A, ventral surface of thorax of three segments 1, 2, 3; a, mandibles; b, mouth. 2. Stylops atterrana, newly born larva, on a hair of a bee (Andrena triseriata). (All highly magnified.)

tera or Strepsiptera, and now of the coleopterous family Stylopidae.—2. [I. c.] An insect of this genus; a rhipipter or strepsipter.

Stylosanthes (stī-lō-san'thēz), n. [NL. (Swartz, 1788), so called from the stalk-like calyx-tube; irreg. < Gr. στυλος, a pillar (see style<sup>2</sup>), + ἄνθος, flower.] A genus of leguminous plants, of the tribe Hedysaraceae, type of the subtribe Stylosanthaceae. It is characterized by pinnate leaves of three leaflets, and an oblong or globose and usually densely flowered spike, a long stalk-like calyx-tube, and stamens united into a closed tube with their anthers alternately oblong and basiflexed and shorter and versatile. There are about 21 species, of which 4 are natives of Africa or Asia, 1 is North American, and the others are South American and mainly Brazilian.

They are commonly viscous herbs with yellow flowers in dense terminal spikes or heads, rarely scattered or axillary. S. elatior of the United States, the pencil-flower of southern pine-barrens, extends north to Long Island and Indiana. S. procumbens is known in the West Indies as trefoil.

stylospore (stī'lō-spōr), n. [< Gr. στυλος, a pillar (see style<sup>2</sup>), + σπορά, seed: see spore.] In bot., a stalked spore, developed by abstriction from the top of a slender thread or sterigma, as a pycnidium, or uninclosed as in the Coniomycetes. See pycnidium, macrostylospore. Also called pycnidiospore, pycnogonidium, pycnospore.

stylosporous (stī-lōs'pō-rus), a. [< stylus + -ous.] In bot., of the nature of a stylospore; resembling a stylospore.

stylostegium (stī-lō-stō'jī-um), n.; pl. stylostegia (-ī). [NL., < Gr. στυλος, a pillar (see style<sup>2</sup>), + στεγος, cover.] In bot., the peculiar orbicular corona which covers the stylo in Stapelia and similar asepals.

stylostemon (stī-lō-stō'mōn), n. [NL., < Gr. στυλος, a pillar, + στέμον, taken as 'stamen' (see stamen<sup>1</sup>).] In bot., an epigynous stamen.

stylotypite (stī'lō-tī-pīt), n. [< Gr. στυλος, a pillar (see style<sup>2</sup>), + τύπος, impression, + -ίτης.] A sulphid of antimony, copper, iron, and silver, from Copiapo, Chili: it is closely related to bournonite.

stylus (stī'lus), n.; pl. styli (-li). [NL., < L. stylus, prop. stilus, a pointed instrument: see style.] 1. A sponge-spicule of the monaxon uniradiate type, sharp at one end and not at the other. It is regarded as an oxa one of whose rays is suppressed.—2. In entom., a style or stylet.

styme, n. See stime.

stymie (stī'mi), n. [Origin obscure; perhaps connected with styme, stime, a glimpse, a transitory glance.] In golf-playing, a position in which a player has to putt for the hole with his opponent's ball directly in the line of his approach.

Stymphalian (stim-fā'li-an), a. [L. Stymphalius, < Gr. Στυμφάλιος, < Στυμφαλος, Stymphalus (see def.).] Of or pertaining to Stymphalus (the ancient name of a small deep valley, a lake, a river, and a town in Arcadia, Greece).—Stymphalian birds, in Gr. fable, a flock of noisome, voracious, and destructive birds, with brazen or iron claws, wings, and beaks, which infested Stymphalus. The killing or expulsion of these birds was the sixth labor of Hercules.

A sort of dangerous fowl [critics], who have a perverse inclination to plunder the best branches of the tree of knowledge, like those Stymphalian birds that eat up the fruit. Swift, Tale of a Tub, iii.

styptic (stip'tik), a. and n. [Formerly also stiptic, stiptik; < ME. stiptik, < OF. (and F.) stiptique = Sp. estiptico = Pg. estitico = It. stptico, < L. stypticus, < Gr. στυπτικός, astringent, < στυφειν, contract, draw together, be astringent.] 1. a. 1†. Astringent; constrictive; binding.

Take heed that slippery meats be not fyrste eaten, nor that stiptik nor restraining meates be taken at the beginning, as quyncees, pearces, and medlars. Sir T. Elyot, Castle of Health, fol. 45.

2. Having the quality of checking hemorrhage or bleeding; stanching.

Then in his hands a bitter root he bruils'd;
The wound he wash'd, the styptic juice infus'd.

Pope, Iliad, xi. 983.

Styptic collodion, a compound of collodion 100 parts, carbolic acid 10 parts, pure tannin 5 parts, and benzoic acid 3 parts. Also called styptic collod.—Styptic powder. See powder.

II. n. 1†. An astringent; something causing constriction or constraint.

Mankind is infinitely beholden to this noble styptick, that could produce such wonderful effects so suddenly. Steele, Lying Lover, v. 1.

2. A substance employed to check a flow of blood by application to the bleeding orifice or surface.

This wyne alle medecyne is take unto Ther styptik stont [stop] cjectyng bloode, and wo
Of wombe or of stomak this wo' declyne.

Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 102.

Cotton-wool styptic, cotton-wool soaked in tincture of perchlorid of iron.

styptical (stip'ti-kal), a. [< styptic + -al.] Same as styptic.

styptic-bur (stip'tik-bēr), n. See Priva.

stypticite (stip'ti-sit), n. [< styptic + -ite.] Same as fibroferrite.

stypticity (stip-tis'i-ti), n. [< styptic + -i-ty.] The property of being styptic; astringency.

Catharticks of mercurials precipitate the viscidities by their stypticity, and mix with all animal acids. Sir J. Floyer.

styptic-weed (stip'tik-wēd), n. The western cassia, Cassia occidentalis, a tall herb of tropical America and the southern United States. Its seeds, from their use, are called negro or Mogdad coffee, though they do not contain caffeine; its root is said to be diuretic; and its leaves are used as a dressing for slight wounds (whence the name). Also stinking-weed, stinking-wood.

Styracaceæ (stī-rā-kā'sē-ō), n. pl. [NL. (Alphonse de Candolle, 1844), < Styrax (-ac-) + -acæ.] Same as Styracæ.

Styracæ (stī-rā'sē-ō), n. pl. [NL. (Richard, 1808), for Styracaceæ; < Styrax + -acæ.] An order of gamopetalous plants, of the cohort Ebenales. It is characterized by flowers which usually have ten or more stamens attached to a five-lobed corolla, and an ovary which is inferior, half inferior, or fixed by a broad base, and contains a solitary ovule or few in each cell. The embryo, with its doubtful radicle, also differs from that of the allied orders, the Sapotacæ and Ebenacæ, in which it is respectively inferior and superior. The order includes about 235 species, belonging to 7 genera, of which one is Halesia of North America and Asia, 4 are small South American genera, and the others belong to the large genus Symplocos or to the type Styrax, natives of warm regions, but wanting in Africa. They are smooth, hairy, or scurfy trees or shrubs, with alternate entire or serrate membranous or coriaceous feather-veined leaves. Their flowers are usually white and racemed, rarely red, dish, and sometimes cymose or fascicled. See Halesia, Styrax, and storax.

styracin, styracine (stī'rā-sin), n. [< NL. Styrax (-ac-) + -in<sup>2</sup>, -in<sup>2</sup>.] An ester (C<sub>18</sub>H<sub>16</sub>O<sub>2</sub>) of cinnamic acid, which is the chief constituent of storax. It forms odorless and tasteless crystals, which have the properties of a resin.

Styrax (stī'raks), n. [NL. (Tournefort, 1700), so named because producing a gum; < L. styrax, storax, < Gr. στυραξ, the gum storax, also the tree producing it: see storax.] A genus of dicotyledonous plants, type of the order Styracææ. It is characterized by flowers with five partly united or separate petals, ten stamens in one row with linear or rarely oblong anthers, and a three-celled or afterward one-celled ovary with the ovules usually few and erect or pendulous. The fruit is seated upon the calyx and is globose or oblong, dry or drupaceous, indehiscent or three-valved, and nearly filled by the usually solitary seed. There are over 60 species, widely scattered through warm regions of Asia and America, a few also natives of temperate parts of Asia and southern Europe, but none found in Africa or Australia. They are shrubs or trees, usually scurfy or covered with stellate hairs, and bearing entire or slightly serrate leaves, and usually white flowers in pendulous racemes. Several species are cultivated for ornament; S. Japonica, recently introduced into gardens, is known from its feathery white blossoms as snowflake-flower. Others yield valuable gums, especially S. Benzoin (see benzoin) and S. officinalis (see storax). S. punctata, a Central American tree, yields a gum which is used as frankincense, and is obtained on removing the external wood from trees which have been cut for several years. S. grandifolia, S. Americana, and S. pulverulenta, known as American storax, occur in the United States from Virginia southward, with one species in Texas and one in California.

Styrax Benzoin. a, a flower.

Styrian (stī'rī-an), a. and n. [< Styria (see def.) + -an.] 1. a. Of or pertaining to Styria, a crownland and duchy of the Austrian empire, lying south of Upper and Lower Austria, and west of Hungary.

II. n. One of the people of Styria.

styorol (stī'rol), n. [< L. styr(ax) + -ol.] A colorless strongly refractive liquid (C<sub>8</sub>H<sub>8</sub>), with an odor like that of benzin, obtained by heating styracin with calcium hydrate. Also called cinnamenc.

styrolene (stī'rō-lēn), n. [< styrol + -ene.] Same as styrol.

styrone (stī'rōn), n. [< styr(ax) + -one.] Cinnamyl alcohol (C<sub>9</sub>H<sub>10</sub>O), a crystalline solid with a fragrant odor, obtained by treating styracin with caustic potash. It is slightly soluble in water, and volatile at high temperatures.

stythe<sup>1</sup>, n. [An irreg. var. of sty.] A sty.

O out of my stythe I (a maiden transformed to a beast) winna rise.

Till Kempton, the Kingis son,

Cum to the crag, and thirce kiss me.

Kempion (Child's Ballads, I. 140).

And, at last, into the very swine's stythe,

The Queen brought forth a son.

Pause Foodrage (Child's Ballads, III. 43).

stythe<sup>2</sup> (stith), n. [More prop. stithe; cf. E. dial. stithe, stiding; prob. a var. of stive, after stithe, stith, strong: see stith.] Choke-damp; after-damp; black-damp; the mixture of gases left after an explosion of fire-damp, and consisting chiefly of carbonic-acid gas; also, more rarely, this gas accumulated in perceptible quantity in any part of a coal-mine, whether arising from respiration of men or animals, from the use of gunpowder, or from the burning of lamps or candles. [Lancashire, Eng., coal-field.]

Shallow and badly ventilated mines produce stythe. Grestley.

stewardt, n. A Middle English form of steward.

Styx (stiks), n. [< L. Styx, < Gr. Στυγ (Stygy), a river of the infernal regions, lit. 'the Hateful,' < στυγειν, hate, abominate.] 1. In Gr. myth., a river of the lower world.—2. [NL.] In zool., a genus of butterflies, of the subfamily Pierinae. Staudinger, 1876.

Suabian, a. and n. Same as Swabian.

suability (sū-a-bil'i-ti), n. [< suable + -i-ty.] Liability to be sued; the state of being suable, or subject by law to civil process.

suable (sū'a-bl), a. [< sue<sup>1</sup> + -able.] Capable of being or liable to be sued; subject by law to civil process.

suadet (swād), v. t. [< OF. suader = Sp. suadir = It. suadere, < L. suadere, advise, urge, persuade: see suasion, and cf. dissuade, persuade.] To persuade.

suadible<sup>1</sup> (swā'di-bl), a. [< suade + -ible.] Same as suasible.

Suæda (sū-ē'di), n. [NL. (Forskål, 1775), from an Ar. name.] A genus of apetalous plants, of the order Chenopodiaceæ and series Spirololwa, type of the tribe Suædææ. It is characterized by fleshy linear leaves, and flowers with a five-lobed persistent perianth from which the inclosed utricle is nearly or quite free. There are about 45 species, natives of sea-shores and salt deserts. They are erect or prostrate herbs, or shrubs, green or glaucous, and either simple or diffusely branched. Their leaves are usually terete and entire, and their flowers small and nearly or quite sessile in the axils. S. linearis is a small sea-coast plant of the Atlantic coast from Nova Scotia to Florida; 6 or 7 other species occur westward. S. fruticosa, known as sea-rosemary, shrubby goosefoot, or white glasswort, an erect branching evergreen common in the Mediterranean region, is one of the plants formerly burned to produce barilla. For S. maritima, also called sea-goosefoot, see sea-bile, under bile.

Suædææ (sū-ē'dē-ē), n. pl. [NL. (Moquin, 1852), < Suæda + -ææ.] A tribe of apetalous plants, of the order Chenopodiaceæ and suborder Chenopodicææ. It is characterized by an unjointed stem with mostly linear, terete, or ovate leaves, and by its fruit, a utricle included in the unchanged or appendaged perianth, the seed-coat crustaceous or finally membranous, and the embryo spiral. It includes five genera, four monotypic and occurring in saline regions in Persia and central Asia; for the other, the type, see Suæda.

suaget, swaget (swāj), v. [< ME. swagen; by apheresis from assuage.] 1. trans. To make quiet; soothe; assuage.

Flayne were tho freikes and the folke all,
And swiftly thai swere, suagit there herties,
To be tell to the lord all his lyf tyme.
Destruction of Troy (E. E. T. S.), l. 13643.

Nor wanting power to mitigate and 'suage
With solemn touches troubled thoughts.

Milton, P. L., l. 576.

II. intrans. To become quiet; abate.

These yoles seyn

Shalle neuer suage nor sesse

But euermore endure and encesse.

Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 146.

Soone after mydnyght the grete tempest byganne to suage and wax lasse.

Sir R. Gylforde, Pylgrymage, p. 73.

suant<sup>1</sup> (sū'ant), a. [Also suent, formerly seuant, sewent; < OF. suant, ppr. of suivre, etc., follow: see sue, sequent.] 1. Following; sequent; pursuant. Halliwell (under suent).—2. Smooth; even.

The Middlesex Cattle Show goes off here with éclat annually, as if all the joints of the agricultural machine were suent. Thoreau, Walden, p. 37.

[Prov. Eng. and New Eng. in both senses.]

suant<sup>2</sup> (sū'ant), n. [Formerly also seuant; origin uncertain.] The plaine. Halliwell (under seuant). [Prov. Eng.]

Behold some others rangd all along

To take the seuant, yea, the flounder sweet.

J. Denms (Arber's Eng. Garner, I. 171).

The shad that in the springtime cometh in;

The suant swift, that is not set by least.

J. Denms (Arber's Eng. Garner, I. 175).

suantly (sū'ant-li), adv. Evenly; smoothly; regularly. Also suently. [Prov. New Eng.]

suarrow (sū-ar'ō), n. A variant of souari.

suasible (swā'si-bl), a. [= Sp. suasible = It. suasibile, < L. suadere, pp. suasus, advise, urge: see suade, suasion. Cf. suadible.] Same as persuasible. Bailey, 1731. [Rare.]

suasion (swā'zhon), n. [< ME. suacyon, < OF. suasion = It. suasione, < L. suasio (-n-), an advising, a counseling, exhortation, < suadere, pp. suasus, advise, counsel, urge, persuade (cf. LL. suadus, persuasive, L. Suada, the goddess of persuasion), < suavis, orig. **suavis*, pleasant, sweet: see suave, sweet.] The act or effort of persuading; the use of persuasive means or efforts: now chiefly in the phrase moral suasion.

The suacyon of swetenesse rethoryen.

Chaucer, Boethius, ii. prose 1.

Thei had, by the subtilt suasion of the deuill, broken the thirde commandment in tasting the forbidden fruite. Sir T. More, Works, p. 157.

She did not dare to come down the path to shake her, and moral suasion at the distance of sixty or seventy feet is very ineffective. T. C. Crauford, English Life, p. 184.

suasive (swā'siv), a. [< OF. suasif = Sp. It. suasivo, < L. suadere, pp. suasus, advise, urge: see suade, suasion.] Having power to persuade; persuasive. [Archaic and poetical.]

Its [justice's] command over them was but suasive and political. South, Sermons, I. ii.

suasively (swā'siv-li), adv. So as to persuade. Let a true tale . . . be suasively told them. Carlyle, French Rev., I. iii. 2.

of the highest Andean mountains: specifying a certain faunal area. (See below.)—Subandean subregion, in zoogeog., one of four subregions into which the continent of South America (with the islands appertaining thereto) has been divided by A. Newton. It includes a not well defined northerly section of the continent, with the islands of Tobago, Trinidad, and the Galapagos, and takes in all the South American countries that do not belong to the Amazonian, Brazilian, or Patagonian subregion. The Subandean subregion includes what has also been called the Columbian (or Colombian), but is more extensive. It is recognized upon ornithological grounds, and said to possess 72 peculiar genera of birds. Eneye. Brit., III, 744.

subangled (sub-ang'gld), a. Same as subangular.—Subangled wave. See wave.

subangular (sub-ang'gü-lär), a. Slightly angular; bluntly angulated. Huxley, Physiography, p. 278.

subangulate, subangulated (sub-ang'gü-lät, -lä-ted), a. Somewhat angled or sharp.

subantichrist (sub-an'ti-krist), n. A person or power partially antagonistic to Christ; a lesser antichrist. Milton, Church-Government, i. 6. [Rare.]

subapennine (sub-ap'e-nin), a. [= F. subapennin, < L. sub, under, + Apenninus, Apennine: see Apennine.] Being at the base or foot of the Apennines.—Subapennine series, in geol., a series of rocks of Pliocene age, developed in Italy on the flanks of the Apennines, and also in Sicily. In the Ligurian region the Pliocene has been divided into Messinian and Astian; in Sicily, into Astian, Plaisancian, and Zanclean. In the last region these rocks rise to an elevation of 4,000 feet above the sea-level, and are replete with well-preserved forms of organic life now living in the Mediterranean.

subapical (sub-ap'i-käl), a. [< L. sub, under, + apex, point: see apical.] Situated below the apex.

subaponeurotic (sub-ap'ö-nü-rot'ik), a. [< L. sub, under, + NL. aponeurosis: see aponeurotic.] Situated beneath an aponeurosis.

subapostolic (sub-ap'ös-tol'ik), a. Of, pertaining to, or constituting the period succeeding that of the apostles: as, subapostolic literature. Eneye. Brit., XI, 854.

subappressed (sub-a-prest'), a. In entom., partly appressed: as, subappressed hairs.

subaquatic (sub-a-kwat'ik), a. 1. Not entirely aquatic, as a wading bird.—2. [= F. subaquatique.] Situated or formed in or below the surface of the water; subaqueous.

subaqueous (sub-ä'kwë-us), a. [= It. subaqueo, as L. sub, under, + E. aqueous.] Situated, formed, or living under water; subaquatic.

subarachnoid (sub-a-rak'noid), a. 1. Situated beneath the arachnoid—that is, between that membrane and the pia mater: as, the subarachnoid space.—2†. Subdural.—Subarachnoid fluid, the cerebrospinal fluid—Subarachnoid space, the space between the arachnoid membrane and the pia mater.

subarachnoidal, subarachnoidean (sub-ar-ak-noi'däl, -dë-an), a. Same as subarachnoid. H. Gray, Anat. (ed. 1887), p. 653.

subarborescent (sub-är'bö-res'ent), a. Having a somewhat tree-like aspect.

subarctic (sub-ärk'tik), a. Nearly arctic; existing or occurring a little south of the arctic circle: as, a subarctic region or fauna; subarctic animals or plants; a subarctic climate.

subarcuate (sub-är'kü-ät), a. Somewhat bent or bowed; slightly arcuated.

subarcuated (sub-är'kü-ä-ted), a. Same as subarcuate.

subareolar (sub-a-rë'ö-lär), a. Situated beneath the mammary areola.—Subareolar abscess, a funicular subcutaneous abscess of the areola of the nipple.

subarmor (sub-är'mör), n. A piece of armor worn beneath the visible outer defense. J. Hewitt, Anc. Armour, II, 132.

subarrhation (sub-a-rä'shon), n. [*< ML. *subarratio* (n-), < sarrare, betroth, < L. sub, under, + arrha, earnest-money, a pledge: see arrha.] The ancient custom or rite of betrothing by the bestowal, on the part of the man, of marriage gifts or tokens, as money, rings, or other objects, upon the woman. Also subarration.

The prayer which follows . . . takes the place of a long form of blessing which followed the subarrhation in the ancient office.

Blunt, Annotated Book of Common Prayer, p. 455.

subastragal (sub-as-trag'ä-lär), a. Situated beneath the astragalus.—Subastragal amputation, amputation of most of the foot, leaving only the astragalus.

subastragaloid (sub-as-trag'ä-foïd), a. Situated beneath or below the astragalus.

subastral (sub-as'tral), a. [< L. sub, under, + astrum, a star: see astral.] Situated beneath the stars or heavens; terrestrial.

subaud (sub-äd'), v. t. [< L. subaudire, supply a word omitted, hear a little, < sub, under, + audire, hear: see audient.] To supply mentally, as a word or an ellipsis. Imp. Dict. [Rare.]

subaudition (sub-ä-dish'on), n. [< L. subauditiö(n)-, the supplying of a word omitted, < subaudire, supply a word omitted: see subaud.] The act of understanding something not expressed; that which is understood or implied from that which is expressed; understood meaning. Horne Tooke.

subaural (sub-ä'ral), a. Situated beneath or below the ear.

subaxillar (sub-ak'si-lär), a. and n. Same as subaxillary.

subaxillary (sub-ak'si-lä-ri), a. and n. I. a. 1. In zool.: (a) Situated beneath the axilla or armpit. (b) Specifically, in ornith., same as axillary: as, "subaxillary feathers," Pennant.—2. In bot., placed under an axil, or angle formed by the branch of a plant with the stem, or by a leaf with the branch.—Subaxillary region. See region.

II. n.; pl. subaxillaries (-riz). In ornith., same as axillar or axillary.

subbass (sub'bäs), n. In organ-building, a pedal stop resembling either the open or the stopped diapason, and of 16- or 32-feet tone. Also called subbourdon.

subblush (sub-blush'), v. i. To blush slightly. [Rare.]

Raising up her eyes, sub-blushing as she did it. Sterne, Tristram Shandy, ix. 25.

subbourdon (sub-bör'don), n. Same as subbass. subbrachial (sub-brä'ki-äl), a. and n. Same as subbrachiate.

subbrachiate (sub-brä'ki-ät), a. and n. I. a. Situated under the pectorals, as the ventral fins; having the ventrals under the pectorals, as a fish.

II. n. A subbrachiate fish. See Subbrachiati. Subbrachiati (sub-bräki-ä'ti), n. pl. An order of malacoptyergian fishes, containing those which are subbrachiate: contrasted with Apoles and Abdominales. See under Malacoptyergii.

subbrachycephalic (sub-brak'i-se-fäl'ik or -sef'ä-lik), a. Nearly but not quite brachycephalic; somewhat short-headed; having a cephalic index of 80.01 to 83.33 (Broca). Nature, XLI, 357.

subbranch (sub'branch), n. 1. A subdivision of a branch, in any sense of that word. W. S. Jerrons, Money and the Mechanism of Exchange, p. 258.—2. Specifically, in zoological classification, a prime division of a branch or phylum; a subphylum.

subbranchial (sub-brang'ki-äl), a. Situated under the gills.

subbreed (sub'brëd), n. A recognizable strain or marked subdivision of a breed; an incipient artificial race or stock. Darwin.

subbrigadier (sub'brig-ä-dër'), n. An officer in the Horse Guards who ranks as cornet. [Eng.]

subcalcareous (sub-kal-kä'rë-us), a. Somewhat calcareous.

subcalcarine (sub-kal'kä-rin), a. Situated below the calcareus, as of a bird, or below the calcareine fissure of the brain.

subcaliber (sub-kal'i-bër), a. Of less caliber: said of a projectile as compared with the bore of the gun. See subcaliber projectile, under projectile.

subcantor (sub-kan'tör), n. In music, same as succantor, 1.

subcapsular (sub-kap'sü-lär), a. Situated under a capsule; being in the cavity of a capsule. Lancet, 1889, I, 787.—Subcapsular epithellum, an epithelioid lining of the inside of the capsule of a spinal ganglion.

Subcarboniferous (sub-kär-bö-nif'e-rus), n. and a. In geol., a name given by some geologists to the mountain-limestone division of the Carboniferous series, or that part of the series which lies beneath the millstone-grit. See carboniferous.

subcartilaginous (sub-kär-ti-lä'j-i-nus), a. 1. Situated below or beneath cartilage; lying under the costal cartilages; hyochondrial.—2. Partly or incompletely cartilaginous.

subcaudal (sub-kä'däl), a. and n. I. a. 1. Situated under the tail; placed on the under side of the tail: as, subcaudal chevron-bones; the subcaudal scales, or urosteges, of a snake.—2. Not quite caudal or terminal; situated near the tail or tail-end; subterminal.—Subcaudal pouch, a pocket or recess beneath the root of the tail of the badger, above the anus, into which empty the secretions of certain subcaudal glands distinct from the ordinary anal or perineal glands of other Mustelidae.

II. n. That which is subcaudal; specifically, in herpet., a urosteg; one of the special scutes upon the under side of the tail of a serpent.

subcaudate (sub-kä'dät), a. 1. In entom., having an imperfect tail-like process: as, butterflies with subcaudate wings.—2. In bot. See sub-(f) 3.

subcelestial (sub-së-les'tjäl), a. Being beneath the heavens.

The superlunary but subcelestial world. Harvey, Irenæus, p. xcvi.

subcellar (sub'sel'jër), n. A cellar beneath another cellar.

subcentral (sub-sen'tral), a. 1. Being under the center.—2. Nearly central; a little eccentric.

subcentrally (sub-sen'tral-i), adv. 1. Under the center.—2. Nearly centrally.

subcerebral (sub-ser'ë-bräl), a. Below the cerebrum; specifically, below the supposed seat of consciousness, or not dependent on volition: said of involuntary or reflex action in which the spinal cord, but not the brain, is concerned.

subchanter (sub'chän'tër), n. In music, same as subcantor, succantor, 1.

subchela (sub-kë'lä), n.; pl. subchelæ (-lë). The hooked end of an appendage which bends down upon the joint to which it is articulated, but has no other movable claw to oppose it and thus make a nipper or chela.

subchelate (sub-kë'lät), a. Of the nature of or provided with a subchela. Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 327.

subcheliform (sub-kë'li-förm), a. Subchelate. Eng. Cyc. Nat. Hist. (1855), III, 87.

subchlorid, subchloride (sub'klö'rid), n. A compound of chlorine with an element two atoms of which form a bivalent radical: as, subchlorid of copper ( $\text{Cu}_2\text{Cl}_2$ ); subchlorid of mercury ( $\text{Hg}_2\text{Cl}_2$ , calomel).

subchondral (sub-kon'dral), a. Lying underneath cartilage; subcartilaginous: as, subchondral osseous tissue.

subchordal (sub-kör'däl), a. Situated beneath the chorda dorsalis, or notochord, of a vertebrate. Compare parachordal.

subchoroid (sub-kö'roid), a. Same as subchoroidal.

subchoroidal (sub-kö-roi'däl), a. Situated beneath the choroid tunic of the eye.—Subchoroidal dropsy, morbid accumulation of fluid between the adherent choroid sclerotic and the retina.

subcinctorium (sub-sing-k'tö-ri-um), n.; pl. subcinctoria (-i). See succinctorium.

subclass (sub'kläs), n. A prime subdivision of a class; in zool. and bot., a division or group of a grade between the class and the order; a superorder.

subclavate (sub-klä'vät), a. Somewhat clavate; slightly enlarged toward the end.—Subclavate antennæ, in entom., antennæ in which the outer joints are somewhat larger than the basal ones, but without forming a distinct club.

subclavian (sub-klä'vi-an), a. and n. [< L. sub, under, + clavis, a key: see clavis, and cf. clavicle.] I. a. 1. Lying or extending under, beneath, or below the clavicle or collar-bone; subclavicular.—2. Pertaining to the subclavian artery or vein: as, the subclavian triangle or groove.—Subclavian artery, the principal artery of the root of the neck, arising on the right side from the innominate artery and on the left from the arch of the aorta, and ending in the axillary artery; the beginning or main trunk of the arterial system of the fore limb. See cuts under lung and embryo.—Subclavian groove, (a) A shallow depression on the surface of the first rib, denoting the situation of a subclavian vessel. There are two of them, separated by a tubercle, respectively in front of and behind the insertion of the anterior scalene muscle—the former for the subclavian vein, the latter for the subclavian artery. (b) A groove on the under side of the clavicle, for the insertion of the subclavius.—Subclavian muscle, the subclavius.—Subclavian nerve, the motor nerve of the subclavius muscle, arising from the fifth cervical nerve at its junction with the sixth.—Subclavian triangle. See triangle.—Subclavian vein, the continuation of the axillary vein from the lower border of the first rib to the sternoclavicular articulation, where the vessel ends by joining the internal jugular to form the innominate vein. See cut under lung.

II. n. A subclavian artery, vein, nerve, or muscle.

subclavicular (sub-klä-vik'ü-lär), a. Situated below the clavicle; infraclavicular; subclavian.—Subclavicular aneurism, an aneurism of the axillary artery situated too high to be ligated below the clavicle.—Subclavicular fossa, the surface depression below the outer end of the clavicle.—Subclavicular region. Same as infraclavicular region (which see, under infraclavicular).

subclavius (sub-klä'vi-us), n.; pl. subclavii (-i). [NL.: see subclavian.] A muscle passing from the first rib to the under surface of the clavicle or collar-bone.—Subclavius posticus. Same as sternochondroscapularis.

Subcoccinella (sub-kok-si-nel'i), n. [NL., < sub- + Coccinella.] A genus of ladybirds or coccinellids based by Huber (1841) upon the widespread S. 24-punctata. Also called Lasia.

subcollateral (sub-kol-lat'e-ral), a. Situated below the collateral fissure of the brain.

subcommission (sub'kō-mish'on), n. An under-commission; a division of a commission.

subcommissioner (sub'kō-mish'on-ēr), n. A subordinate commissioner.

subcommittee (sub'kō-mit'ē), n. An under-committee; a part or division of a committee.

subconcave (sub-kon'kāv), a. Slightly concave.

subconcealed (sub-kon-seld'), a. Hidden underneath. Roger North, Examens, p. 430. (Darvies.)

subconchoidal (sub-kong-koi'dal), a. Imperfectly conchoidal; having an imperfectly conchoidal fracture.

subconical (sub-kon'i-kal), a. Somewhat or not quite conical; conoidal.

subconjunctival (sub-kon-jungk-ti'vāl), a. Situated beneath the conjunctiva.

subconnate (sub-kon'it), a. In entom., partially connate; divided by an indistinct or partial suture.

subconscious (sub-kon'shus), a. 1. Partially or feebly conscious; of or pertaining to subconsciousness.—2. Being or occurring in the mind, but not in consciousness.

subconsciously (sub-kon'shus-li), adv. In a subconscious manner; with faint consciousness; without consciousness.

subconsciousness (sub-kon'shus-nes), n. 1. A form or state of consciousness in which there is little strength or distinctness of perception or mental action in general.—2. Mental processes conceived as taking place without consciousness.

The hypothesis of unconscious mental modifications as it has been unfortunately termed—the hypothesis of subconsciousness, as we may style it to avoid this contradiction in terms. J. Ward, Encyc. Brit., XX 47.

subconstellation (sub'kon-ste-lā'shōn), n. A subordinate or secondary constellation.

subcontiguous (sub-kon-tig'ū-us), a. Almost touching; very slightly separated; as, subcontiguous coxae.

subcontinuous (sub-kon-tin'ū-us), a. Almost continuous; noting a line or mark which has but slight breaks or interruptions.

subcontract (sub'kon-trakt), n. A contract under a previous contract.

subcontract (sub-kon-trakt'), v. t. To make a contract under a previous contract. Lancet, 1889, I, 498.

subcontracted (sub-kon-trak'ted), a. 1. Contracted under a former contract; betrothed for the second time. Shaks., Lear, v. 3, 86.—2. In entom., slightly narrowed; noting wing-cells.

subcontractor (sub'kon-trak'tor), n. One who takes a part or the whole of a contract from the principal contractor.

subcontrariety (sub'kon-tra-rī'e-ti), n.; pl. subcontraries (-tiz). In logic, the relation between a particular affirmative and a particular negative proposition in the same terms; also, the inference from one to the other.

subcontrary (sub-kon'trai-ri), a. and n. I. a. Contrary in an inferior degree. (a) In geom., it denotes the relative position of two similar triangles of which one of the pairs of homologous angles coincide while the including sides are interchanged. Thus, in the cut the triangles ACB, ECD are subcontrary. (b) In logic the term is applied (1) to the particular affirmative proposition and the particular negative proposition, with relation to the universal affirmative proposition above them, which have the same subject and predicate; thus, "some man is mortal" and "every man is not mortal" are subcontrary propositions, with relation to "every man is mortal" and "no man is mortal," which are contraries; (2) to the relation between two attributes which co-exist in the same substance, yet in such a way that the more there is of one the less there is of the other.—Subcontrary section, one of the circular sections of a quadric cone in its relation to another circular section not parallel to it.

II. n.; pl. subcontraries (-riz). In logic, a subcontrary proposition.

subconvex (sub-kon'veks), a. Somewhat rounded or convex.

subcoracoid (sub-kor'q-koid), a. Situated or occurring below the coracoid process.

subcordate (sub-kor'dāt), a. Nearly heart-shaped.

subcordiform (sub-kor'di-fōrm), a. Same as subcordate.

378

subcorneous (sub-kōr'nē-us), a. 1. Somewhat horny; partly or partially converted into horn.—2. Placed beneath a layer of corneous structure; situated under or within a horn, nail, claw, or the like; as, the subcorneous frontal processes of a ruminant.

subcortical (sub-kōr'ti-kal), a. Situated beneath the cortex. (a) Situated beneath the cerebral cortex. (b) Situated beneath the cortex of a sponge. (c) Situated or living beneath the cortex or bark of a tree.

subcosta (sub-kos'tij), n.; pl. subcostae (-tē). The subcostal vein or nervure of the wing of some insects; the first vein behind the costa. See ent under costal.

subcostal (sub-kos'tal), a. and n. I. a. 1. In anat. and zool.: (a) Situated below a rib; extending from one rib to a succeeding one; infracostal: specifically noting the muscles called subcostales. (b) Lying along the under side or edge of a rib; as, a subcostal groove for an artery. (c) Placed under or within the ribs or costal cartilages collectively; hypochondrial; subcartilaginous.—2. In entom., situated near, but not at or on, the costa: specifically noting the subcostal.—Subcostal angle, the angle which the costal border of one side forms with that of the other at the lower end of the sternum.—Subcostal cells, in entom., cells between the costal and subcostal veins. They are generally numbered from the base outward.—Subcostal vein or nervure, in entom., a strong longitudinal vein behind the costal vein and more or less parallel to the costal edge. In the Lepidoptera it forms the anterior edge of the large dorsal cell, and exteriorly it is divided into a number of branches, called subcostal veins or nervures, and numbered from before backward. Sometimes called postcostal vein or nervure. See cut under costal.

II. n. 1. In zool. and anat.: (a) A subcostal or infracostal muscle. See subcostalis. (b) A subcostal artery, vein, or nerve, running along the groove in the lower border of a rib; an intercostal.—2. In entom., a subcostal vein or nervure; the subcosta.

subcostalis (sub-kos-tā'lis), n.; pl. subcostales (-lēz). In anat., a subcostal or infracostal muscle; any one of several muscles which extend from the lower border or inner surface of a rib to the first, second, or third succeeding rib.

subcranial (sub-kra'ni-al), a. 1. Situated beneath the skull, in general.—2. Situated below the cranial axis or cranium proper—that is, in man, in front of the brain-case; as, the subcranial visceral arches of the embryo.

subcrenate (sub-kre'nāt), a. Obscurely or irregularly scalloped.

subcrepitant (sub-krep'i-tant), a. Approaching in character the crepitant rāle. See rāle. Therapeutic Gaz., IX 8.

subcrepitation (sub-krep-i-tā'shōn), n. The noise of subcrepitant rāles.

subcrescentic (sub-kre-sen'tik), a. Irregularly or imperfectly crescentic.

subcruræus (sub-kro'ré-us), n.; pl. subcruræi (-i). A small muscle arising from the fore part of the femur, beneath the crureus, and inserted into the synovial pouch of the knee. Also called subcruralis, subfemorals, and articularis genu.

subcrureal (sub-kro'ré-al), a. Lying under or beneath the crureus, as a muscle: specifying the subcruræus.

subcrystalline (sub-kris'tj-lin), a. Imperfectly crystalline.

subcylindric (sub-kul'trit), a. Somewhat cylindrical; like a colter in being curved along one edge and straight along the other. Also subcylindric.

subculture (sub-kul'tūr), n. In bacteriology, a culture derived from a previous culture.

subcutaneous (sub-ku-tā'nē-us), a. 1. Situated beneath the skin, in general; subdermal; lying in the true skin or cutis, under the cuticle; subcuticular. placed or performed under the skin; hypodermic: as, a subcutaneous injection.—2. Fitted for use under the skin; hypodermic: as, a subcutaneous syringe; a subcutaneous saw.—3. Living under the skin; burrowing in the skin: as, a subcutaneous parasitic insect.—Subcutaneous feeding, a mode of artificial feeding by means of large hypodermic injections of nutritive substances.—Subcutaneous fracture, simple fracture.—Subcutaneous method, the mode or manner of performing surgical operations, as tenotomy, osteotomy, etc., with the smallest possible opening through the skin.

subcutaneously (sub-ku-tā'nē-us-li), adv. In a subcutaneous manner, in any sense; hypodermically.

subcuticular (sub-ku-tik'ū-lūr), a. Situated under the cuticle or scarf-skin; subepidermic; cutaneous; dermal.

subcutis (sub'kū'tis), n. [NL., < L. sub, under, + cutis, skin.] The deeper part of the cutis, corium, or true skin, sometimes distinguished from the rest. Haeckel.

subcylindric, subcylindrical (sub-si-lin'drik, -dri-kal), a. Nearly or somewhat cylindrical.

subdatary (sub'dā'tj-ri), n. The head of the officials under the datary or prodatary. See datary.

subdeacon (sub'dē'kōn), n. [ME. suddeken, sudekene = OF. sodekene, also soudiacre = Sp. subdiácono = Pg. subdiacano = It. suddiacono, < LL. subdiaconus, < L. sub, under, + LL. diaconus, a deacon: see deacon.] A member of the ecclesiastical order next below that of deacon. Subdeacons are first mentioned in the third century. They assisted the deacons, and kept order at the doors of the church. In the Western Church the duty of the subdeacon is to prepare the holy vessels and the bread, wine, and water for the eucharist, to pour the water into the chalice, and, since the seventh or eighth century, to read the epistle—a duty previously, as still in the East, assigned to the reader. In the Greek Church the subdeacon prepares the holy vessels, and guards the gates of the bema during liturgy. In the Greek Church the subdeacon has always been one of the minor orders. In the Western Church it became one of the major or holy orders in the twelfth century. The bishop, priest, or other cleric who acts as second or subordinate assistant at the eucharist is called the subdeacon, and the term is used in this sense in the Anglican Church also, although that church has no longer an order of subdeacons. See epistler.

subdeaconry (sub'dē'kōn-ri), n. [ < subdeacon + -ry.] Same as subdeaconship.

subdeaconship (sub'dē'kōn-ship), n. The order or office of subdeacon; the subdiaconate.

subdean (sub'dēn), n. [ME. suddene, sodene, also southdene, < OF. soudicien, soudoyen, < ML. subdecanus, subdean, < L. sub, under, + decanus, dean: see dean.] A vice-dean; a dean's substitute or vicegerent.

Seoutours and sodenes. Piers Plowman (C), xvii. 277.

subdeanery (sub'dē'nēr-i), n. [ < subdean + -ry.] The office or rank of subdean.

subdecanal (sub-dek'ā-nal), a. [ < ML. subdecanus, subdean, + -al.] Relating to a subdean or his office.

subdecimal (sub-des'i-māl), a. Derived by division by a multiple of ten.

subdecuple (sub-dek'ū-pl), a. Containing one part of ten (Johnson); having the ratio 1:10.

subdelegate (sub'del'ē-gāt), n. A subordinate delegate.

subdelegate (sub-del'ē-gāt), v. t. To appoint to act as subdelegate or under another.

subdelirium (sub-dē-lir'i-um), n. Mild delirium with lucid intervals.

subdeltoidal (sub-del-toi'dal), a. Approaching in shape the Greek letter δ. Also subdeltoid.

subdentate (sub-den'tāt), a. 1. Imperfectly dentate; having indistinct teeth; denticulate.—2. Of cetaceans, having teeth in the lower jaw only: the opposite of superdentate. Dewhurst, 1834. [Rare.]

subdentated (sub-den'tā-ted), a. Same as subdentate.

subdented (sub-den'ted), a. Indented beneath. Imp. Dict.

subdepressed (sub-dē-prest'), a. Somewhat depressed or flattened.

subderisorious (sub-der-i-sō'ri-us), a. [ < L. sub, under, + derisorius, serving for laughter, ridiculous: see derisory.] Ridiculing with moderation or delicacy. Dr. II. More.

subderivative (sub-dē-riv'ā-tiv), n. A word following another in immediate grammatical derivation, or a word derived from a derivative and not directly from the root. [Rare.]

subdermal (sub-dēr-māl), a. Beneath the skin; hypodermal; subcutaneous.

subdeterminant (sub-dē-tēr'mi-nant), n. In math., a determinant from a symmetrically taken part of a matrix.

subdiaconate (sub-dī-ak'ō-nāt), n. [ < ML. **subdiaconatus*, < LL. subdiaconus, subdeacon: see subdeacon.] The office or order of subdeacon.

subdial (sub'di-āl), a. [= OF. subdial, < L. subdialis, subdivalis, that is in the open air, < sub, under, + divum, the sky, the open air, akin to dies, day, Skt. dyu, the sky: see deity, dial.] Of or pertaining to the open air; being under the open sky. Imp. Dict. [Rare.]

The Athenian Hellinistick or Subdial Court was rural, and for the most part kept in the open air. N. Bacon, iv. 15.

subdialect (sub'di-ā-lect), n. An inferior dialect; a subordinate or less important or prominent dialect.

subdiapente (sub-dī-ā-pen'tē), n. In medieval music, an interval of a fifth below a given tone.

subdiatessaron (sub-dī-ā-tos'ā-ron), n. In medieval music, an interval of a fourth below a given tone.

subdichotomy (sub-dī-kot'ō-mi), n. A subordinate or inferior dichotomy, or division into pairs; a subdivision. Milton, Aroopagitica, p. 53.

subdistinction (sub-dis'ting'k-shon), n. A subordinate distinction. Sir M. Hale.

subdistrict (sub-dis'trikt), n. A part or division of a district.

subditious (sub-di-tish'us), a. [< L. subditus, substitutus, substitutus, suppositivus, < subdere, put or set under, < sub, under, + dare, put.] Put secretly in the place of something else; foisted in. Imp. Dict. [Rare.]

subdiversify (sub-di-vor'si-fi), v. t. To diversify again what is already diversified. Sir M. Hale. [Rare.]

subdivide (sub-di-vid'), v.; prot. and pp. subdividing, ppr. subdividing. [= Sp. Pg. subdividir = It. suddividere, < LL. subdividere, subdivide, < L. sub, under, + dividere, divide: see divide.] I. trans. To redivide after a first division.

The progenies of Cham and Japhet swarmed into colonies, and these colonies were subdivided into many others. Dryden.

II. intrans. 1. To separate into subdivisions.

Amongst some men a sect is sufficiently thought to be reformed if it subdivides and breaks into little fractions, or changes its own opinions. Jer. Taylor, Works, VI. 125.

2. To become separated. [Rare.]

When Brutus and Cassius were overthrown, then soon after Antonius and Octavius broke and subdivided. Bacon, Faction (ed. 1657).

subdivisible (sub-di-viz'i-bl), a. Susceptible of subdivision.

subdivision (sub-di-vizh'on), n. [= F. subdivision = Sp. subdivisión = Pg. subdivisão, < LL. subdivisio(n)-, < subdividere, subdivide: see subdivide.] 1. The act of redividing, or separating into smaller parts.

When any of the parts of an idea are yet farther divided in order to a clear explication of the whole, this is called a subdivision. Watts, Logic, I. vi. § 8.

2. A minor division; a part of a part; specifically, in zool. and bot., a minor division of a group; a subsection: as, subdivisions of a genus.

In the Decimal Table the subdivisions of the Cubit, viz. the Span, Palm, and Digit, are deduced . . . from the shorter Cubit. Arbutnot, Ancient Coins, p. 73.

subdivisional (sub-di-vizh'on-əl), a. [< subdivision + -al.] Of or pertaining to subdivision or a subdivision: as, a subdivisional name. Quart. Jour. Geol. Soc., XLV. ii. 62.

subdivisive (sub-di-vi'siv), a. [< L. subdivisus, < subdividere, subdivide: see subdivide.] Arising from subdivision.

When a whole is divided into parts, these parts may, either all or some, be themselves still connected multiple; and, if these are again divided, there results a subdivision the several parts of which are called the subdivisive members. Sir W. Hamilton, Logic, Lect. xxv.

subdolichocephalic (sub-dol'i-kō-sef'ā-lik or -se-fal'ik), a. In craniom., having a cephalic index ranging between 75.01 and 77.77 in Broca's classification.

subdolous (sub-dō-lus), a. [< LL. subdolosus, < L. subdolos, somewhat crafty or deceitful, < sub, under, + dolus, artifice, guile: see dolo.] Somewhat crafty; sly; cunning; artful; deceitful. Howell, Letters, I. vi. 14.

subdolosly (sub-dō-lus-li), adv. In a subdolous manner; slyly; artfully. Evelyn, To Pepys, Dec. 5, 1681.

subdulousness (sub-dō-lus-nes), n. The state of being subdulous. Baker, Chronicles, p. 382.

subdominant (sub-dom'i-nant), n. In music, the tone next below the dominant in a scale; the fourth, as D in the scale of A: also used adjectively. See diagram under circle.

subdorsal (sub-dōr'sal), a. In entom., situated on the side of the upper or dorsal surface of the body: as, subdorsal strim.

subdouble (sub-dub'l), a. Being in the ratio of 1 to 2.

subduable (sub-dū'ā-bl), a. [< subduc + -able.] Capable of being subdued; conquerable. Imp. Dict.

subdual (sub-dū'al), n. [< subduc + -al.] The act of subduing. Warburton, Works (ed. Hurd), VII. 329.

subduce (sub-dūs'), v. t.; prot. and pp. subducing, ppr. subducing. [< L. subducere, pp. subductus, draw from under, lift up, haul up, take away, < sub, under, + ducere, lead, bring: see duct. Cf. subduct, subduce.] 1. To withdraw; take away; draw or lift up.

It shall be expedient for such as intend to exercise prayer . . . to subduce and convey themselves from the company of the worldly people. Bacon, Early Works, p. 130.

2. To subtract arithmetically.

If, out of that supposed infinite multitude of antecedent generation, we should . . . subduce ten, . . . the residue must needs be less by ten than it was before that subduction. Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind, p. 10.

subduct (sub-duk't'), v. t. [< L. subductus, pp. of subducere, draw from under, take away: see subduce.] Same as subduce, 1.

He . . . established himself upon the rug, . . . subducting his coat-tails one under each arm. Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 32.

subduction (sub-duk'shon), n. [< L. subduc-tio(n)-, a hauling ashore (of a ship), a taking away, < subducere, pp. subductus, haul up, take away: see subduce.] 1. The act of subducting, taking away, or withdrawing. Bp. Hall, Occasional Meditations, § 66.—2. Arithmetical subtraction. Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind, p. 10.

subdue (sub-dū'), v. t.; prot. and pp. subduing, ppr. subduing. [< ME. subduen, earlier soduen, sodewen, sudewen, < OF. souduire, lead away, seduce, prob. also subdue, < L. subducere, draw from under, lift up, take away, remove: see subduce, subduct.] 1. To conquer and bring into permanent subjection; reduce under dominion.

John of Gaunt,
Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain.
Shak., 3 Hen. VI., III. 3. 82.

Rome learning arts from Greece whom she subdued.
Pope, Prolog. to Addison's Cato, l. 40.

2. To overpower by superior force; gain the victory over; bring under; vanquish; crush. Tagg'd for life, and was by strength subdued.

Shak., 2 Hen. VI., III. 2. 173.

Lay hold upon him; if he do resist,
Subdue him at his peril. Shak., Othello, I. 2. 81.
Think of thy woman's nature, subdued in hopeless thrall.
Wittier, Cassandra Southwick.

3. To prevail over by some mild or softening influence; influence by association; assimilate; overcome, as by kindness, persuasion, entreaty, or other mild means; gain complete sway over; melt.

My nature is subdued
To what it works in, like the dyer's hand.
Shak., Sonnets, cxi.

If aught
Therein enjoy'd were worthy to subdue
The soul of man. Milton, P. L., VIII. 681.
[Clasp hands and that petitionary grace
Of sweet seventeen subdued me ere she spoke.
Tennyson, The Brook.

4. To bring down; reduce.

Nothing could have subdued nature
To such a lowliness but his unkind daughters.
Shak., Lear, III. 4. 72.

5. To tone down; soften; make less striking or harsh, as in sound, illumination, or color: in this sense generally in the past participle: as, subduced colors; a subduced light.

The voices of the disputants fell, and the conversation was carried on thenceforth in a more subdued tone. Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 17.

6. To improve by cultivation; make mellow; break, as land.

In proportion as the soil is brought into cultivation, or subduced, to use the local phrase, the consumers will become more numerous, and their means more extensive. H. Hall, Travels in N. A., I. 80.

= Syn. 1 and 2. vanquish, subjugate, etc. (see conquer), crush, quell.—3. To soften.

subduet (sub-dū'), n. [< subduc, v.] Subjugation; conquest. Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 5.

subduement (sub-dū'ment), n. [< subduc + -ment.] Subdual; conquest. Shak., T. and C., iv. 5. 187.

subducer (sub-dū'er), n. [< subduc + -er.] One who or that which subdues; one who conquers and brings into subjection; a conqueror; a tamer.

subdulcid (sub-dul'sid), a. [< L. subdulcis, sweetish (< sub, under, + dulcis, sweet), + -id.] Somewhat sweet; sweetish. Evelyn, Acetaria (ed. 1706), p. 154. [Rare.]

subduple (sub-dū-pl), a. [< L. sub, under, + duplus, double.] Having the ratio of 1 to 2.—Subduple ratio, in math. See duple.

subduplicate (sub-dū-pli-kāt), a. In math., expressed by the square root: as, the subduplicate ratio of two quantities—that is, the ratio of their square roots. Thus the subduplicate ratio of a to b is the ratio of  $\sqrt{a}$  to  $\sqrt{b}$ , or it is the ratio whose duplicate is that of a to b.

subdural (sub-dū'ral), a. Situated beneath the dura mater, between the dura mater and the arachnoid.—Subdural space, the interval between the dura mater and the arachnoid, formerly called the cavity of the arachnoid, when the latter membrane was supposed to be reflected continuously from the outer surface of the pia mater to the inner surface of the dura mater.

subectodermal (sub-ek-tō-dēr'mal), a. Situated underneath the ectoderm. Jour. Microsc. Sci., XXVIII. 381.

subedit (sub-ed'it), v. t. To edit under the supervision of another. Thackeray, Philip, xlii.

subeditor (sub-ed'i-tor), n. An assistant or subordinate editor; one who subedits.

subeditorial (sub-ed-i-tō'ri-əl), a. Of or pertaining to a subeditor. Athenæum, No. 3239, p. 653.

subeditorship (sub-ed'i-tor-ship), n. [< subeditor + -ship.] The office or charge of a subeditor. Thackeray, Philip, xxx.

subelaphine (sub-el'ā-fīn), a. Resembling the red-deer, Cervus elaphus, as in the structure of the antlers, but having the brow-tine simple, not reduplicated, as in the genera Dama and Pseudaxis: correlated with elaphine.

subelliptic (sub-e-lip'tik), a. Somewhat elongate-ovate; between ovate and elliptic or oblong and elliptic.

subelliptical (sub-e-lip'ti-kul), n. Same as subelliptic.

submarginate (sub-ē-mīr'jī-nāt), a. Slightly emarginate.

subendocardial (sub-en-dō-kār'di-əl), a. Lying or occurring beneath the endocardium.—Subendocardial tissue, the substance of the heart immediately underneath the endocardium.

subendothelial (sub-on-dō-thē'li-əl), a. Lying or occurring beneath the endothelium.

subentitle (sub-en-tī'tl), v. t. To give a subordinate title to. The Academy, Jan. 4, 1890, p. 7.

subepidermal (sub-ep-i-dēr'mal), a. Lying or occurring beneath the epidermis, in any sense.

subepithelial (sub-ep-i-thē'li-əl), a. Lying or occurring beneath the epithelium.—Subepithelial endothelium, Debove's name for an almost continuous layer of connective-tissue cells between the mucous membrane and the epithelium of the bronchi, bladder, and intestine.—Subepithelial plexus. See plexus.

subequal (sub-ō'kwāl), a. 1. Nearly equal.—2. Related as several numbers of which no one is as large as the sum of the rest.

subequilateral (sub-ō-kwi-lat'ē-rāl), a. Nearly equilateral, as a bivalve shell.

subequivalve (sub-ō'kwi-valv), a. Nearly equivalent, as a bivalve shell.

suber (sū'bēr), n. [NL., < L. suber, cork, the cork-onk.] In bot., same as cork, 3.

suberate (sū'bē-rāt), n. [< suber-ic + -ate.] A salt ( $\text{C}_6\text{H}_{12}\text{M}_2\text{O}_4$ ) of suberic acid.

suberect (sub-ē-rekt'), a. Nearly erect.

subereous (sū-bō'rō-us), a. [< L. subereus, of cork, pertaining to the cork-onk, < suber, cork, the cork-onk.] Corky; suberose; in entom., specifying a soft elastic substance, somewhat like cork, found in the mature galls of some cynipidous insects.

suberic (sū-ber'ik), a. [< L. suber, cork, the cork-onk, + -ic.] Of or pertaining to cork; subereous.—Suberic acid,  $\text{C}_6\text{H}_{10}\text{O}_4$ , a dibasic acid which forms small granular crystals very soluble in boiling water, in alcohol, and in ether; it fuses at about 300° F., and sublimes in acicular crystals. It is prepared by treating rasped cork with nitric acid. It is also produced when nitric acid acts on stearic, margarine, or oleic acid, and other fatty bodies.

suberiferous (sū-bē-rif'ē-rus), a. [< suber(in) + L. ferre = E. bear.] In bot., bearing or producing suberin.

suberification (sū-bē-rif-i-kā'shon), n. [< L. suber, cork, + -ficatio(n)-, < facere, make.] In bot., same as suberization.

suberin, suberine (sū'bē-rin), n. [< L. suber, cork, the cork-onk, + -in<sup>2</sup>, -ine<sup>2</sup>.] The cellular tissue of cork after the various soluble matters have been removed. It is allied to cellulose. See cork, 2.

suberization (sū'bē-rī-zā'shon), n. [< suberize + -ation.] In bot., the transformation of a membrane or cell-wall into suberin or cork.

suberize (sū'bē-rīz), v. t.; prot. and pp. suberizing, ppr. suberizing. [< L. suber, cork, + -ize.] In bot., to render corky, as a cell-wall.

suberoded (sub-ē-rō'ded), a. Same as suberose, 1.

suberose (sub-ē-rōs'), a. [< L. sub, under, + erosus, pp. of erodere, gnaw off or away, consume: see erode.] In bot., slightly erose; appearing as if a little eaten or gnawed on the margin.

suberose<sup>2</sup>, suberous (sū'bē-rōs-, -rus), a. [< L. suber, cork, the cork-onk, + -os-, -ous.] Same as subereous, suberic.

subesophageal, subesophageal (sub-ē-sō-faj'-fē-āl), a. Situated below or beneath the esophagus or gullet; in Arthropoda, specifying certain nervous ganglia which lie underneath (ventrad of) the esophagus. Also infra-esophageal. — Subesophageal ganglion. See ganglion.

subfactor (sub-fak'tor), n. An under factor or part. Scott, Heart of Mid-Lothian, xli.

subfactorial (sub-fak-tō'-ri-āl), n. One of a series of numbers calculated as follows. Start with 1, multiply it by 1 and subtract 1, getting 0, which is called subfactorial one; multiply this by 2 and subtract 1, getting 1, which is called subfactorial two; multiply this by 3 and subtract 1, getting 2, which is called subfactorial three; multiply this by 4 and add 1, getting 3, which is called subfactorial four. This is carried on indefinitely.

subfalcial (sub-fal'si-āl), a. Running along the under edge of the falx cerebri; as, "a subfalcial sinus," Buch's Handbook of Med. Sciences, VIII, 121.

subfalciiform (sub-fal'si-fōrm), a. Somewhat falciiform. Günther.

subfamily (sub-fam'i-li), n. In zool., the first subdivision of a family, containing several genera or only one genus. A subfamily may be introduced formally between the genus and the family when there is no other subdivision. Then the only subfamily of a family is continuous with the higher group. Subfamilies are now regularly indicated by the termination -ina; as, family Felidae, subfamily Felinae. That subfamily which takes the name of the family with a different termination is usually regarded as the typical subdivision of the family.

subfascial (sub-fash'i-āl), a. Situated below the fascia.

subfebrile (sub-fē'bril), a. Somewhat but not decidedly febrile.

subfemorialis (sub-fem-ō-rī'lis), n.; pl. subfemorales (-lēz). Same as suberurgus.

subfeu (sub-fū'), v. t. [< sub- + feu, after ML. subfeedare; see sub- and feed<sup>2</sup>, foff.] To make subinfeudation of: said of a vassal who vests lands held by him as such in a subvassal.

It was . . . Impossible to subfeu the burgh lands. Encyc. Brit., IV, 62.

subfeudation (sub-fū-dā'shən), n. [*< ML. *subfeudatio(n)-*, < subfeudare, subfeu: see subfeu] Same as subinfeudation.

It seems most probable that this practice, which is called subfeudation or subinfeudation, began while the feud was only for life. Brimham.

subfeudatory (sub-fū-dā-tō-ri), n.; pl. subfeudatories (-rīz). [< sub- + feudatory. Cf. ML. subfeudatarius.] An inferior tenant who held a feud from a feudatory of the crown or other superior.

subflavor (sub-flā'vor), n. A subordinate flavor; a secondary flavor.

subflavous (sub-flā'vus), a. [< L. sub, under, + flavus, yellow: see flavous.] Yellowish. — Subflavous ligament, a short ligament of yellow elastic tissue interposed between the laminae of the vertebrae.

subflora (sub-flō'rā), n. [< sub- + flora.] A more local flora included in a territorially broader one.

subfluvial (sub-flū'vi-āl), a. [< L. sub, under, + fluvius, stream: see fluvial.] Situated under a river or stream.

The subfluvial avenue [Thames tunnel]. Hawthorne, Our Old Home, p. 2-5.

subfoliar (sub-fō'li-ār), a. [< subfolium + -ar.] Having the character of a subfolium. B. G. Wilder.

subfolium (sub-fō'li-um), n.; pl. subfolia (-i-ā). A small or secondary folium, as of the cerebellum. Buch's Handbook of Med. Sciences, VIII, 127.

subform (sub-fōrm), n. A secondary form. Jour. Micros. Sci., XXX, 195.

subformical (sub-fōr'mi-kāl), a. Situated beneath the fornix of the brain.

subfossil (sub-fos'il), a. Partly fossilized; imperfectly petrified.

subfossilized (sub-fos'il-īzd), a. Same as subfossil.

subfossorial (sub-fō-sō-ri-āl), a. In entom., adapted in some measure for digging; said of the legs when they approach the fossorial type.

subfrontal (sub-fron'tāl), a. Situated under the front, face, or fore end; subterminal in front. — Subfrontal area, of Lamulus, a smooth flattened space on the ventral surface of the cephalic shield anteriorly. See Lamulus (with cut). — Subfrontal fold, of trilobites, an inferior inflection of the limb or marginal area of the cephalic shield.

subfulcrum (sub-ful'krum), n.; pl. subfulcra (-krā). In entom., a rarely differentiated labial sclerite between the mentum and the palpiger (the latter in some systems being called the fulcrum). It occurs in certain carabid and scaraboid larvae.

subfumigation (sub-fū-mi-gā'shən), n. Same as subfumigation.

subfusc, a. See subfusc.

subfuscous (sub-fus'kus), a. [< L. subfuscus: see subfusc.] Same as subfusc.

subfusiform (sub-fū'si-fōrm), a. More or less nearly fusiform or spindle-shaped.

subfusc, subfusc (sub-fusk'), a. [< L. subfuscus, subfuscus, somewhat brown: see sub- and fuscous.] Duskish; moderately dark; brownish; tawny; lacking in color.

O'er whose quiescent walls
Arachne's unmolested care has drawn Curtains subfusc. Shenstone, Economy, iii.

The University statute requiring the wearing only of black or subfusc clothing. Dickens, Dict. of Oxford, p. 66.

subgalea (sub-gā'lē-ā), n.; pl. subgaleæ (-ē). [< L. sub, under, + galea.] One of the sclerites of the typical maxilla of insects. It usually articulates with the stipes and bears the galea. In many beetles it is united with the lacinia. See cut under galea.

subganoid (sub-gan'oid), a. Having a somewhat ganoid character; as, a subganoid scale.

subgelatinous (sub-jē-lat'i-nus), a. Imperfectly or partially gelatinous.

subgenera, n. Plural of subgenus.

subgeneric (sub-jē-ner'ik), a. Of or pertaining to a subgenus: having the rank, grade, or value of a subgenus.

subgenerical (sub-jē-ner'i-kāl), a. Same as subgeneric.

subgenerically (sub-jē-ner'i-kāl-i), adv. So as to be subgeneric; as a subgenus.

subgeniculate (sub-jē-nik'ū-lāt), a. Imperfectly geniculate or elbowed.

subgenital (sub-jen'i-tāl), a. Situated beneath the genitalia; specifically noting certain pits or pouches of jellyfishes, as the rhizostomous or monostomous discomedusans.

subgenus (sub-jē'nus), n.; pl. subgenera (-jen'-e-rā). [< L. sub, under, + genus, kind: see genus.] A subordinate genus; a section or subdivision of a genus higher than a species. Since there is no fixed definition of a genus, there can be none of a subgenus and thousands of groups in zoology formerly regarded as subgenera, or disregarded entirely, are now named and held to be genera. Though there is theoretically or technically a difference, it is ignored in practice; since a name whether given as that of a genus or of a subgenus is a generic name. The case is somewhat different in practice from that of the names of families and subfamilies, whose difference in termination preserves a formal distinction, and from that of the names of all supergeneric groups, because none of these enter into the technical binomial designation of a given animal or plant. Thus, the name Lynx may have been given to a subdivision of the genus Felis and be thus a subgeneric name; but a cat of this kind, as the bay lynx, would be known by the alternative name Felis rufus and Lynx rufus, according to the difference of expert opinion in the case; or, as a compromise, the subgeneric term would be formally introduced in parentheses between the generic and the specific name, as Felis (Lynx) rufus. In botany a subgenus is a section of a genus so strongly marked as to have plausible claims to be itself an independent genus.

subget, a. and n. A Middle English form of subject.

subglabrous (sub-glā'brus), a. In entom., almost devoid of hairs or other like covering.

subglacial (sub-glā'shīāl), a. Situated or occurring beneath or under a glacier; as, a subglacial stream.

subglenoid (sub-glē'noid), a. Lying or occurring immediately below the glenoid fossa.

subglobose (sub-glō'bōs), a. Nearly globose; subspherical; spheroidal.

subglobular (sub-glob'ū-lār), a. Nearly globular.

subglobulose (sub-glob'ū-lōs), a. Somewhat globulose.

subglossal (sub-glos'āl), a. Same as hypoglossal or sublingual.

subglottic (sub-glōt'ik), a. Situated under the glottis, or beneath the true vocal cords of the larynx.

subglumaceous (sub-glē-mā'shius), a. Somewhat glumaceous.

subgrade (sub-grād), n. A grade of the second rank in zoological classification: a prime division of a grade: used like subclass, suborder, etc. See grade, 3.

Subgrallatores (sub-grāl-ā-tō-rōz), n. pl. [< L. sub, under, + grallator, grallator, q. v.] In ornith., in Sundevall's system, a cohort of Galinae, composed of the genera Thinocorus, Attagis, and Chionis. [Not in use.]

subgrallatorial (sub-grāl-ā-tō-ri-āl), a. Imperfectly grallatorial; exhibiting imperfectly the characters of the grallatorial birds.

subgranular (sub-gran'ū-lār), a. Somewhat granular.

subgroup (sub-grōp), n. 1. Any subordinate group in classification; a subdivision of a group; especially, a division the name of which begins with sub-, as subfamily or subgenus. — 2. A mathematical group forming part of another group.

subgular (sub-gū-lār), a. Situated under the throat, or on the under side of the throat; subjugular.

subhastation (sub-has-tā'shən), n. [= F. subhastatio = Sp. subastacio = It. subastazione, < LL. subhastatio(n)-, a sale by public auction, < subhastare, pp. subhastatus, sell at public auction, lit. 'bring under the spear' (in allusion to the Roman practice of planting a spear on the spot where a public sale was to take place), < L. sub, under, + hasta, a spear, a lance.] A public sale of property to the highest bidder; a sale by auction. Bp. Burnet, Letters from Switzerland, p. 9.

subhead (sub'hed), n. A subordinate head or title; a subdivision of a heading. See head, 13.

subheading (sub'hed'ing), n. Same as subhead.

subhepatic (sub-hē-pat'ik), a. In anat. and zool.: (a) Of doubtful or disputed hepatic character, as a glandular tissue of some invertebrates, which resembles that of the liver. (b) Lying under the liver, on the ventral side of hepatic lobules; sublobular, as ramifications of the portal vein in the liver. (c) Situated beneath the hepatic region: specifically applied to an anterolateral division of the ventral surface of the carapace in brachyurous crustaceans. See Brachyura (with cut).

subhexagonal (sub-hek-sag'ō-nāl), a. Six-sided, but not forming a regular hexagon.

Sub-Himalayan (sub-him-ā-lā-yān), a. Related to or forming the whole or a part of the Sub-Himalayas, the designation adopted by the Geological Survey of India for a fringe or belt of hills extending along the southern edge of the Himalayan chain almost uninterruptedly for a distance of 1,500 miles, and composed of Tertiary rocks.

By abrupt difference of elevation and by contour, the Sub-Himalayan hills are everywhere easily distinguishable from the much higher mountains to the north of them. Geol. of India, ii, 521.

Sub-Himalayan system, in geol., the name adopted by the Geological Survey of India for the system of rocks forming the Sub-Himalayan division of the Himalayas. It is divided into two series — the Siwalik (subdivided into three subgroups, the Upper, Middle, and Lower or Nahan) and the Sirmur (also with three subgroups, the Upper or Kasauli, the Middle or Dagshtal, and the Lower or Subathu). See Siwalik.

subhuman (sub-hū'mān), a. Under or beneath the human; next below the human.

Pretended superhuman birth and origin. . . Lives and characters more decidedly subhuman than those of common men. E. H. Sears, The Fourth Gospel, p. 230.

subhumeral (sub-hū'mē-rāl), a. Situated below the humerus.

subhumeral (sub-hū'mē-rāt), v. t. [< L. sub, under, + humerus, prop. umerus, shoulder, + -ate.] To take or bear on one's shoulders. Feltham, Resolves, i, 82.

subhyaloid (sub-hī'ā-loid), a. Situated beneath (on the attached side of) the hyaloid membrane of the eyeball.

subhymenial (sub-hī-mō'ni-āl), a. In bot., lying under or just below the hymenium. — Subhymenial layer, a stratum of hyaline tissue under the hymenium in some fungi; the hypothecium, and sometimes another layer still farther below. See cuts under apothecium and ascus.

subhyoid (sub-hī'oid), a. 1. Situated below the hyoid bone, as of man. — 2. Coming next in order after the hyoid arch from before backward; specifically, noting the fourth visceral arch of the vertebrate embryo, or first branchial arch proper.

subhyoidean (sub-hī-oi'dē-ān), a. Same as subhyoid.

subicteric (sub-ik'ter'ik), a. Somewhat but not distinctly icteric.

subiculum (sū-bik'ū-lum), n. [< NL. dim. of subex (subic-), in pl. subiers, a layer, < subicere, throw under: see subject.] 1. The uncus. — 2. In bot., the modified tissue of the host penetrated by the mycelium of a parasite. Burrill.

subiliac (sub-il'i-āk), a. 1. Pertaining to the subilium. — 2. Situated below the ilium.

subilium (sub'il'i-um), n.; pl. subilia (-i-ā). [< L. sub, under, + NL. ilium, q. v.] An inferior section of the ilium, supposed to correspond to the subscapula.

subimaginal (sub-i-maj'i-nəl), a. [< subimago (-imāgin-) + -al.] Having the character of a subimago; not quite perfect or imaginal, as an insect; pseudimaginal.

subimaginary (sub-i-maj'i-nā-ri), a. Imaginary in a reduced sense.—Subimaginary transformation, a linear transformation defined by equations between two sets of variables, which equations are imaginary, but the transformation being such that a real linear function may in that way be transformed into a real function.

subimago (sub'i-mā'gō), n.; pl. subimagoes or subimagines (sub'i-mā'gōz or -maj'i-nēz). [NL., < L. sub, under, + imago, image: see imago.] An imperfect or incomplete winged stage in certain pseudoneuropterous and neuropterous insects, succeeding the pupa, and preceding the imago. Also called pseudimago. The insect in this stage is active, and resembles the imago, but has to shed another skin. This stage occurs as a rule in the Ephemeridae of the Pseudoneuroptera, and Riley has recorded it in Chrysopa of the Neuroptera.

subimpressed (sub-im-prest'), a. In entom., slightly impressed; having indistinct impressions.

subincomplete (sub-in-kom-plēt'), a. In entom., noting that metamorphosis of an insect in which the active larva and pupa resemble the imago, the pupa having rudimentary wings, as in the grasshoppers.

subincusation (sub-in-kū-zā'shon), n. [< L. sub, under, + incusatio(n), accusation, < incusare, accuse, bring a complaint against, < in, on, against, + causa, a cause, suit: see cause. Cf. accuse.] An implied charge or accusation.

But all this cannot deliver thee [Mary] from the just blame of this bold subincusation. Lord, dost thou not care? Bp. Hall, Contemplations, Mary and Martin.

subindicate (sub-in'di-kāt), v. t. To indicate secondarily; indicate in a less degree.

subindication (sub-in-di-kā'shon), n. The act of indicating secondarily; a slight indication. Barrow.

subindicative (sub-in-dik'ā-tiv), a. Partially or secondarily indicative. Lamb, Some of the Old Actors.

subindividual (sub-in-di-vid'ū-əl), n. A division of that which is individual.

An individual cannot branch itself into subindividuals. Milton, On Def. of Humb. Remonst., § 13.

subinduce (sub-in-dūs'), v. t. To insinuate; suggest; offer or bring into consideration imperfectly or indirectly. Sir E. Dering, Speeches in Parliament, p. 114.

subinfer (sub-in-fēr'), v. t. To infer or deduce from an inference already made. Bp. Hall, Resol. for Religion.

subinfudation (sub-in-fū-dā'shon), n. [< OF. subinfudation, < L. sub, under, + ML. infudatio(n), infudation: see infudation.] 1. The process, in feudal tenure, where the stipendiary or feudatory, considering himself as substantially the owner, began to imitate the example of his sovereign by carving out portions of the benefice or feud, to be held of himself by some other person, on terms and conditions similar to those of the original grant: a continued chain of successive dependencies was thus established, connecting each stipendiary, or vasal as he was termed, with his immediate superior or lord. H. Stephen. See Statute of Quia Emptores, under statute.

The widow is immediate tenant to the heir, by a kind of subinfudation or under tenancy. Blackstone, Com., II. viii.

2. The fief or tenancy thus established.

These smaller fiefs were called subinfudations, and were, in fact, mere miniatures of the larger fiefs. Stille, Stud. Med. Hist., p. 137.

Also subinfudation.

subinfudatory (sub-in-fū-dā-tō-ri), n.; pl. subinfudatories (-riz). One who holds by subinfudation.

At the time of the Conquest the manor was granted to Walter d'Lincoart, and in the 12th century it was divided among the three daughters of his subinfudatory Paganus. Engic. Brit., XX. 293.

subinflammation (sub-in-flā-mā'shon), n. Incipient or undeveloped inflammation.

subinflammatory (sub-in-flām'a-tō-ri), a. Pertaining to or of the nature of a slight and indistinct degree of inflammation.

subingression (sub-in-gresh'on), n. The penetration by one body of the substance of another body.

An eminent naturalist hath taught that, when the air is sucked out of a body, the violence wherewith it is wont to rush into it again proceeds mainly from this, that the pressure of the ambient air is strengthened upon the accession of the air sucked out, which, to make itself room, forceth the neighboring air to a violent subingression of its parts. Boyle, New Experiments Touching the Spring of the Air, [Exp. iii.]

subinspector (sub'in-spek'tor), n. A subordinate or assistant inspector.

subinspectorship (sub'in-spek'tor-ship), n. [< subinspector + -ship.] The office or jurisdiction of a subinspector.

subintestinal (sub-in-tos'ti-nəl), a. Situated beneath the intestine.

subintroduce (sub-in-trō-dūs'), v. t. To introduce in a subordinate or secondary manner.

Although presbyters join not in the consecration of a bishop, yet of a presbyter they do; but this is only by a positive subintroduced constitution, first made in a provincial of Africa. Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), II. 103.

subinvariant (sub-in-vā'ri-ant), n. Any rational integral function,  $\phi$ , of the letters  $a, b, c, \dots$ , which satisfies the partial differential equation  $(aD_a + 2bD_b + 3cD_c + \dots)\phi = 0$ .

subinvolved (sub-in'vō-lū-ted), a. Exhibiting incomplete involution. Medical News, L. 394.

subinvolution (sub-in-vō-lū'shon), n. Incomplete involution. Barnes, Diseases of Women, xxxviii.

subitaneous (sub-i-tā'nē-us), a. [< L. subitaneus, sudden, < subitus, sudden, unexpected: see sudden.] Sudden; hasty.

subitaneousness (sub-i-tā'nē-us-nes), n. Suddenness; hastiness.

subitany (sub'i-tā-ni), a. [< L. subitaneus, sudden: see subitaneous.] Sudden; hasty.

subito (sū'bi-tō), adv. [It., < L. subito, suddenly, abl. sing. neut. of subitus, sudden: see subitaneous, sudden.] In music, suddenly; quickly: as, volti subito (V. S.), turn (the leaf) quickly.

subj. An abbreviation of subjunctive.

subjacency (sub-jā'sen-si), n. [< subjacen(t) + -cy.] The state of being subjacent.

subjacent (sub-jā'sent), a. and n. [= F. subjacent = Pg. subjacente, < L. subjacen(t)-s, ppr. of subjacere, lie under or near or adjoin anything, < sub, under, + jacere, lie: see jacet. Cf. adjacent.] 1. a. Lying under or below: in geol., applied to rocks, beds, or strata, considered with reference to their position beneath other overlying formations.—2. Being in a lower situation, though not necessarily directly beneath.

Between some breaches of the clouds we could see landscapes and villages of the subjacent country.  Evelyn, Diary, Nov. 2, 1614.

3. In alg., following below the line of the main characters: as, a subjacent letter, as the n in mn.

II. n. In logic, the converting proposition or consequent of a conversion.

subject (sub'jekt), a. and n. [Now altered to suit the orig. L. form; < ME. subget, suggest, suget, soget, < OF. suget, soget, songiet, sujet, sujet, later subject, F. sujet = Sp. sujeto, subjecto = Pg. sujeto = It. suggetto, soggetto, subject, as a noun (= G. subjekt), a subject (person or thing), < L. subjectus, lying under or near, adjacent, also subject, exposed, as a noun, subjectus, m., a subject, an inferior, subjectum, neut., the subject of a proposition, prop. pp. of subjicere, subicere, pp. subjectus, throw, lay, place, or bind under, subject, < sub, under, + jacere, throw: see jet. Cf. subjacent. Cf. object, object, project.] I. a. 1. Placed or situated under or beneath.

Long he them bore above the subject plane. Spenser, F. Q., I. xi. 19.

2. Being under the power or dominion of another.

For there nys God in heaven or helle, Iwis, But he hath been right soget unto Love. Court of Love, l. 93.

Though in name an independent kingdom, she [Scotland] was during more than a century really treated, in many respects, as a subject province. Macaulay, Hist. Eng., i.

3. Exposed; liable, from extraneous or inherent causes; prone: with to: as, a country subject to extreme heat or cold; a person subject to attacks of fever.

Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds. Shak., 2 Hen. IV., iv. 4. 54.

My Lord, you are a great Prince, and all Eyes are upon your Actions; this makes you more subject to Envy. Howell, Letters, I. iv. 18.

A little knowledge is subject to make men headstrong, insolent, and untractable. Bp. Sprat, Hist. Royal Soc., p. 429.

Hence—4. Exposed or liable, as to what may confirm or modify: with to: as, subject to your approval; subject to correction.—5. Submissive; obedient. Tit, iii. 1.

subject

No man was ever bidd be subject to the Church of Corinth, Rome, or Asia, but to the Church without addition, as it held faithfull to the rules of Scripture.

Milton, Eikonoklastes, xxvii.

Unless Love held them subject to the Will That gave them being, they would cease to be. Bryant, Order of Nature.

=Syn. 2. Subordinate, subservient, inferior.—3. Apt, Likely, etc. See apt.

II. n. 1. One who is placed under the authority, dominion, or controlling influence of another; specifically, one who owes allegiance to a sovereign and is governed by his laws; one who lives under the protection of, and owes allegiance to, a government.

And he leet make an Ymage in the lynnesse of his Fadre, and constreyned alle his Subgettes for to worshippe it. Mandeville, Travels, p. 41.

Tell his majesty

I am a subject, and I do confess

I serve a gracious prince.

Fletcher (and another), Noble Gentleman, ii. 1.

2. A person or thing regarded as the recipient of certain treatment; one who or that which is exposed or liable to something specified.

Alack, alack, that heaven should practise stratagems

Upon so soft a subject as myself!

Shak., R. and J., iii. 5. 212.

There is not a fairer subject for contempt and ridicule than a knave become the dupe of his own art.

Sheridan, The Duenna, iii. 7.

The town bear[of Congleton] having died, it was ordered that certain monies . . . should be placed at the disposal of the bearward, to enable him to provide a new subject.

Municip. Corp. Report, 1835, p. 2652.

Specifically—(a) A dead body used for dissection. (b) One who is peculiarly sensitive to psychological experimentation; a sensitive.

The monotonous ticking of a watch held to the ear will throw the nervous system of a sensitive subject into an abnormal state. Proc. Soc. Psych. Research, I. 251.

3. One who or that which is the cause or occasion of something.

I am the unhappy subject of these quarrels. Shak., M. of V., v. 1. 238.

Hear her, ye noble Romans! 'tis a woman;

A subject not for swords, but pity.

Fletcher, Valentinian, v. 8.

4. That on which any mental operation is performed; that which is thought, spoken, or treated of: as, a subject of discussion or negotiation; a subject for a sermon or a song; the subject of a story.

The matter or subiect of Poesie . . . to myne intent is what soeuer wittie and delicate conceit of man meet or worthy to be put in written verse, for any necessary use of the present time, or good instruction of the posteritie.

Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 15.

O, sure I am, the wits of former days

To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

Shak., Sonnets, lxx.

This subject for heroic song

Pleased me. Milton, P. L., ix. 25.

But this, no more the subject of debate,

Is past, forgotten, and resign'd to fate.

Pope, Iliad, xix. 67.

5. In gram., that of which anything is affirmed: the nominative of a verb, without or with modifiers; the member or part of a sentence signifying that of which predication is made. A subject may be simple or compound; it may be a noun, or anything used with the value of a noun, whether word or phrase or clause: thus, that he has gone is true. A logical subject is one having the character of a subject according to the true meaning of the sentence; a grammatical subject is one having that character formally only: thus, in it is good to be here, it is the grammatical and to be here is the logical subject.

6. In logic, that term of a proposition of which the other is affirmed or denied. Thus, in the proposition "Plato was a philosopher," Plato is the logical subject, philosopher being its predicate, or that which is affirmed of the subject. Also, in the proposition "No man living on earth can be completely happy," man living on earth is the subject, and completely happy is the predicate, or that which is denied of the subject.

7. In metaph.: (a) A real thing to which given characters relate and in which they are said to inhere.

That which manifests its qualities—in other words, that in which the appearing causes inhere, that to which they belong—is called their subject, or substance, or substratum. Sir W. Hamilton, Metaphysics, viii.

(b) In Kantian and modern philosophy, the self or ego to which in all thought all mental representations are attributed (according to Kant); also, a real (hypothetical) thing in which mental phenomena are supposed to inhere. The word is commonly used by those psychologists who teach that the immediate consciousness of self (the subject) is an aspect or inseparable accompaniment of an immediate perception of an external object. The doctrine is that perception involves a sense of action and reaction (self and not-self). To this is often joined another proposition, that there is no mode of consciousness in which the opposition of subject and object does not appear. [Expressions very close to this meaning are to be found in pre-Kantian writers (see Leibnitz, Remarques sur le livre de M. King, § 20), but the word is in such passages used relatively, as in def. 6.]

In the first syllogism of transcendental psychology reason impresses upon us an apparent knowledge only, by representing the constant logical subject of thought as the knowledge of the real subject in which that knowledge inheres. Of that subject, however, we have not, and cannot have, the slightest knowledge, because consciousness is that which alone changes representations into thoughts, and in which, therefore, as the transcendental subject, all perceptions must be found. Beside this logical meaning of the I, we have no knowledge of the subject in itself, which forms the substratum and foundation of it and of our thoughts.

Kant, Critique of Pure Reason, tr. by Muller (Centenary ed.), II. 303.

The particular modes in which I now feel, desire, and am wise out of the modes in which I have previously felt, desired, and been wise; but the common characteristic of all these has it in them a subject was conscious of itself as its object, and thus self-determined.

H. Green, Prolegomena to Ethics, § 102.

11. A subject can be conscious of itself only in relation to an object which it at once excludes and determines.

E. Caird, Philos. of Kant, p. 245, note.

8. In music: (a) In general, the theme or melodic phrase on which a work or movement is based, consisting of few or many tones variously combined and treated; a motive. When two or more principal subjects are used, they are often known as first, second, etc. (b) In contrapuntal works, the theme given out at the beginning, to which (in fugue and canon) the answer responds, and with which the counter-subject is combined which is taken as the basis for thematic development, for imitation, etc. In a fugue, the subject is also called antecedent, dux, propositus, etc.; in a canon, guida; and in freer contrapuntal music, cantus firmus or canto fermo. 9. In the fine arts, the plan or general view chosen by an artist; the design of a composition or picture; the scheme or order of a work of art; as, a historical subject; a genre subject; a marine subject; a pastoral subject. 10. In decorative art, a pictorial representation of human figures or animals; a picture representing action and incident.

Vases painted with subjects after Watteau. See Arts Report, Echib. 1-67.

Diminished subject. See diminished. First subject. See first. Intervening subject. See intervene. Inversion of subjects. See inversion. Mixed subjects of property. See mixed. Subject of inherence, a thing in which characters inhere. Subject of predication, the subject of a proposition. Subject of relation, that one of the correlates to which the others are referred as secondary; the relate. To be in a subject, to be related to anything somewhat as a predicate is related to its subject; to exist by virtue of that subject of which the attribute which is in the subject does not form a part. SYN. 4. Subject, Theme, Topic, Point, Thesis. The first three of these words are often popularly used as exactly synonymous. Daniel Webster puts within a few lines of each other the two following sentences: (If an American Theydides should arise,) "may his theme not be a Peloponnesian war," and (American history) "will furnish no topic for a Gibbon." Yet, strictly in rhetoric, and more often in general use, subject is the broad word for anything written or spoken about, while theme is the word for the exact and generally narrower statement of the subject. A topic is a still narrower subject; there may be several interesting topics suggested under a single subject. A point is by its primary meaning the smallest possible subdivision under a subject. Thesis is a technical word for a subject which takes the form of an exact proposition or assertion which is to be proved; as, Luther fastened his ninety-five theses to the church-door. The paper in which the proof of a thesis is attempted is also called a thesis. A student's composition is often called a theme. The meaning of the other words is not extended to the written or spoken discourse. See proposition.

subject (sub-jekt'), v. [Now altered to suit the orig. L. form; < ME. subjetten, < OF. subjetter = Sp. subjutar, subjutar, subjetar = Pg. subjutar = It. subjettare, subjettare, subjetto, < ML. subjutare, subjetto, freq. of L. subjucere, subicere, throw under; see subject, a. and n.] I. trans. 1. To put, lay, or spread under; make sub-jacent.

In one short view subjected to our eye, Gods, Emperors, Heroes, Sages, Beauties lie.
Pope, To Addison, l. 23.

The lands that lie
Subjected to the Helleonian ridge.
Tennyson, Tiresias.

2. To expose; make liable or obnoxious: with to; as, credulity subjects one to impositions.

Subject himself to unarchy within,
Or lawless passions in him, which he serves.
Milton, P. R., II. 471.

If the vessels yield, it subjects the person to all the inconveniences of an erroneous circulation. Arbuthnot.

3. To submit; make accountable, subservient, or the like; cause to undergo; expose, as, in chemical or other operations: with to; as, to subject clay to a white heat.

Subjcted to his service angel-wings.
Milton, P. L., ix. 165.

God is not bound to subject his ways of operation to the scrutiny of our thoughts. Locke.

Church discipline [in Germany] was subjected to State approval; and a power of expelling rebellious clergy from the country was established.

H. Spencer, Prin. of Sociol., § 559.

No gas is "atomic" in the chemist's sense, except when subjected to the action of electricity, or, in the case of hydrogen, to a high temperature.

J. N. Lockyer, Spect. Anal., p. 144.

4. To bring under power, dominion, or sway; subdue; subordinate.

High Jove permits the sunne to cast his beames,
And the moist cloudes to drop downe plenteous streames,
Alke vpon the just & reprobate;
Yet are not both subjected by one fate?

Times' Whistle (L. E. T. S.), p. 6.

Neither God nor the Lawes subjected us to his will, nor sett his reason to be our Sovran above Law.

Milton, Eikonoklastes, xi.

II. Intrans. To be or become subject.

When men freely subject to any just as a new master.

T. Brooks, Works, II. 242.

subjectable (sub-jek'ti-bl), a. [< subject + -able.] To be subjected or submitted. [Rare.]

It was propounded to these fathers confessors as a thing not subjectable to their penitential judicature.

Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), II. 100.

subjectdom (sub-jekt-dum), n. [< subject + -dom.] The state or condition of being a subject.

No due to its nationality, except in the political sense of subjectdom, therefore is available.

Greenwell, British Barrows, p. 608. (Encyc. Dict.)

subjection (sub-jok'shjon), n. [< ME. subjection, subyccion, subieccion, < OF. (and F.) subjection = Sp. subyccion = Pg. sujeição, sojeição = It. suggestione, suggestione, < L. subiectio(n-), a placing under, substitution, reducing to obedience, subjection, < subicere, subicere, throw under, subject; see subject, v.] 1. The act of subjecting or subduing; the act of vanquishing and bringing under the dominion of another.

The prophesie with that the grete dragon shall come fro Rome that wolde destroye the reame of the grete Breteyne and put it in his subiection.

Martin (C. D. T. S.), III. 433.

King Arthur called with his fleet into Island, and brought it and the people thereof under his subiection.

Hall's Voyages, I. 1.

After the conquest of the kingdom, and subjection of the rebels, enquiry was made who they were that fighting against the king had saved themselves by flight.

Sir M. Hale.

2. The state of being in the power or under the control or domination of another; service.

Thel that mar in upon zow schulle hen undre zoure Subieccion, as zee han ben undre lites.

Manderlille, Travels, p. 225.

Both in subjection now
To sensual appetite. Milton, P. L., ix. 1128.

A lofty mind,
By philosophic discipline prepared
For calm subjection to acknowledged law.
Wordsworth, Excursion, III.

3. In logic, the act of attaching a subject to a predicate; corresponding to predication.

subjective (sub-jek'tiv), a. [< F. subjectif = Sp. subjetivo = G. subjektiv, < L. subiectivus, of or pertaining to a subject, < subiectum, a subject; see subject, n.] 1. Relating to or of the nature of a subject, as opposed to an object. In the older writers subjective is nearly synonymous with real, and still more closely so with the common modern meaning of objective. By Kant, following some of his earlier contemporaries, the word was restricted to the subject of thought, or the ego. See objective.

Certainly, according to the schools, is distinguished into objective and subjective. Objective certainly is when the proposition is certainly true in itself, and subjective when we are certain of the truth of it. The one is in things, the other is in our minds. Watts, Logic, II. II. § 8.

The words subjective and objective are getting into general use now.

L. Fitzgerald, Letter, Mar. 21, 1841 (in Lit. Remains, I. 71).
The uncivilized or semi-civilized man is wholly unable to think of the man's vision as subjective illusions.

H. Spencer, Prin. of Sociol., § 121.

All knowledge on its subjective side is belief.

J. Sully, Outlines of Psychol., p. 434.

2. In literature and art, noting a production characterized by the prominence given to the individuality of the author or artist; as, the subjective school of painting; also, relating to such individuality. The writings of Shelley and Byron are essentially subjective, while the novels of Scott are objective.

They [the Illad and Odyssey] are so purely objective that they seem projected, as it were, into this visible diurnal sphere with hardly a subjective trace adhering to them, and are silent as the stars concerning their own genesis and mutual relation.

W. D. Geddes.

I am disposed to consider the Sonnets from the Portuguese as . . . a portion of the finest subjective poetry in our literature.

Stedman, Vict. Poets, p. 187.

subjectivity

3. Relating to a subject in a political sense; submissive; obedient. [A rare and irregular use.]

What eye can look, through clear love's spectacle,
On virtue's majesty that shines in beauty,
But, as to nature's divinest miracle,
Performs not to it all subjective duty?

Sir J. Davies, Witte's Pilgrimage, sig. D. 2. (Latham.)

Which sadly when they saw
How those had sped before, with most subjective awe Submit them to his sword. Drayton, Polyolbion, xl. 376.

Subjective certainty. See certainty. Subjective colors. Same as accidental colors (which see, under accidental). Subjective doubt, end, ens. See the nouns. Subjective idealism. Same as Fichtean idealism (which see, under idealism). Subjective method, power, reason, etc. See the nouns. Subjective part. See extension, 5. Subjective perspective, a method of representation which looks right, though it is geometrically false. This method is, in fact, usually practised by painters who greatly exaggerate certain effects of perspective, as if the picture were intended to be seen from a point of view much nearer than that usually chosen by the spectator, and are then obliged to modify certain consequences of this exaggeration. Subjective sensation, a sensation which is not caused by an object outside of the body. Subjective symptoms, in pathol., symptoms, as sensations, appreciable by the patient, but not discernible by another observer.

subjectively (sub-jek'tiv-li), adv. In a subjective manner; in relation to the subject; as existing in a subject or mind.

I do not see how we can successfully guard against the danger of considering as both objectively and subjectively evident things which, in fact, are only subjectively evident.

Mivart, Nature and Thought, p. 58.

subjectiveness (sub-jek'tiv-nes), n. The state of being subjective; subjectivity.

subjectivism (sub-jek'tiv-izm), n. [< subjective + -ism.] 1. The doctrine that we can immediately know only what is present to consciousness. Those who adhere to this opinion either regard it as axiomatic, or fortify it by arguments analogous to those by which Zeno sought to prove that a particle can have only position, and not velocity, at any instant—arguments which appear, upon logical analysis, to beg the question. Those who oppose the opinion maintain that it would lead to the absurd corollary that there can be no cognition whatever, not even of a problematical or interrogatory kind, concerning anything but the immediate present.

The philosophical principle of subjectivism.

Ueberweg, Hist. Philosophy (trans. by Morris), I.

2. The doctrine, sometimes termed relativism, that "man is the measure of things"—that is, that the truth is nothing but each man's settled opinion, there being no objective criterion of truth at all. This is an opinion held by some English philosophers as well as by Protagoras in antiquity. It is a modification of subjectivism in sense 1, above.

3. Same as subjectivity, 3.

subjectivist (sub-jek'tiv-ist), n. and a. [< subjective + -ist.] I. n. In metaph., one who holds the doctrine or doctrines of subjectivism.

II. a. Same as subjectivistic. Subjectivist logic. See logic.

subjectivistic (sub-jek'ti-vis'tik), a. [< subjective + -ic.] Pertaining to or characterized by subjectivism.

subjectivistically (sub-jek'ti-vis'ti-kal-i), adv. With subjectivistic reasoning; from the point of view of subjectivism.

subjectivity (sub-jek'tiv-i-ti), n. [= F. subjectivité = G. subjektivität, < NL. subjectivitat (t)s, < L. subiectivus, subjective; see subjective.] 1. The absence of objective reality; illusiveness; the character of arising within the mind, as, for example, the sensation of a color does.

We must, in the first place, remember that analysis and subjectivity on the one hand, and synthesis and objectivity on the other hand, go together in Kant's mind.

E. Caird, Philos. of Kant, p. 413.

Belief in the subjectivity of time, space, and other forms of thought inevitably involves Agnosticism.

J. Martineau, Mind, XIII. 596.

2. The private, arbitrary, and limited element of self; that which is peculiar to an individual mind: as, the subjectivity of Byron or Shelley.

There are two ways of looking at subjectivity. We may understand by it, in the first place, only the natural and finite subjectivity, with its contingent and arbitrary content of particular interests and inclinations. . . . In this sense of subjectivity, we cannot help admiring the tranquil resignation of the ancients to destiny, and feeling that it is a much higher and worthier mood than that of the moderns, who obstinately pursue their subjective aims, and when they find themselves constrained to give up the hope of reaching them, console themselves with the prospect of a reward in some shape or other. But the term subjectivity is not to be confined merely to the bad and finite kind of it which is contradistinguished from the fact. In its truth subjectivity is immanent in the fact, and as a subjectivity thus infinite is the very truth of the fact. . . . Christianity, we know, teaches that God wishes all men to be saved. That teaching declares that subjectivity has an infinite value.

Hegel, Henning's notes of his lectures, tr. in Wallace's (Logic of Hegel), § 147.

It is surely subjectivity and interiority which are the notions latest acquired by the human mind.

H. James, Prin. of Psychology, II. 43.

subjectivize (sub-jek'ti-vîz), v. [< subjective + -ize.] To render subjective; to bring into the perceptive mind.

subjectless (sub-jekt-less), a. [< subject + -less.] Having no subject or subjects.

The subject without the king can do nothing; the subjectless king can do something. Carlyle.

subject-matter (sub-jekt-mat'ér), n. The subject or matter presented for consideration in some written or oral statement or discussion.

It [a catalogue] is disposed according to the Subject Matter of the Books, as the Bibles and Expositors, Historians, Philosophers, &c. Lister, Journey to Paris, p. 107.

subjectness (sub-jekt-ness), n. The state or condition of being subject; subjection. [Rare.]

subject-notion (sub-jekt-nō'shŏn), n. A concept or notion of the subject of a judgment.

subject-object (sub-jekt-ob'jekt), n. The immediate object of cognition, or the thought itself, as distinguished from the object-object, or unknown real object. [In Kantian terminology, the Gegenstand, as distinguished from the Objekt.]

subjectship (sub-jekt-ship), n. [< subject + -ship.] The state of being subject or a subject. [Rare.]

The subjectship, being the very relation in which the creature stands to the Creator as his lawgiver, ruler, and judge. Candlish, The Fatherhood of God, I. 54.

subjecture (sub-jek'tūr), n. [< subject + -ure.] The state of being subject; subjection. [Rare.]

subjee (sub'jē), n. [Hind. sabzi, the larger leaves and capsules of the hemp-plant, also greenness, greens, < sabza, greenness, verdure, the hemp-plant.] The larger leaves and capsules of the Indian hemp without the stalks. See bhang.

subjicibility (sub-jis-i-bil'i-ti), n. [< ML. subjicibilis (-t-ys, < subjicibilis: see subjicible).] Capability of being a subject of predication.

subjicible (sub-jis'i-bl), a. [< ML. subjicibilis, subjicible, < L. subjicere, subvere, place under, subject: see subject.] 1. Capable of being subjected. [Rare.]

He [Jesus] was not a person subjicible to a command; it was enough that he understood the inclinations and designs of his Father's mercies. Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 50.

2. Capable of being made the subject of something else as predicate.

subjoin (sub-join'), v. t. [< OF. subjoindre, < L. subungere, add, annex, yoke, < sub, under, + ungere, join, yoke: see join.] To add at the end of, especially of something said or written; annex; append: as, to subjoin an argument or an illustration.

I shall subjoin, as a Corollary to the foregoing Remark, an admirable Observation out of Aristotle. Addison, Spectator, No. 273

=Syn. To affix, attach. subjoinder (sub-join'dér), n. [< OF. subjoindre, subjoin, inf. used as a noun: see subjoin.] A remark following or subjoined to another; a rejoinder. [Rare.]

"I will never stand to be hissed," was the subjoinder of young Confidence. Lamb, Eltoniana.

subjoint (sub'joint), n. In zool., a subsidiary or secondary joint; one of the subdivisions, often very numerous, of the regular joints of an insect's or a crustacean's legs, antennae, etc. Thus, the fore legs of a pedipalp arachnid, or the antennae of a lobster, have numerous subjoints in the long, slender, lash-like part of the organ beyond the short and stout joints that are identified by name. See Phryniatæ. Also called subsegment.

sub judge (sub-jō'di-sē), [L.: sub, under; judice, abl. sing. of judex, judge: see judge.] Before the judge; under judicial consideration; not yet decided.

The relations of the people and the crown were then [reign of James I.] brought to issue, and, under shifting names, continued sub judge from that time to 1688. De Quincey, Rhetoric.

subjugable (sub-jō-ga-bl), a. [*< L. as if *subjugabilis, < subjugare*, subjugate: see subjugate.] That may be subjugated; capable of being subdued or conquered.

An abundance of good, readily subjugable land awaiting the settler. Science, VII. 232.

subjugal (sub-jō'gal), a. [< L. sub, under, + F. jugal.] Situated below the jugal, malar, or zygomatic bone.

subjugate (sub-jō-gāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. subjugated, ppr. subjugating. [< L. subjugatus, pp. of subjugare (> It. subjugare = Sp. subjugar, sojuzgar = Pg. subjugar = F. subjuguier), bring under the yoke, subjugate, < sub, under, + jugum, yoke: see yoke.] 1. To bring under the yoke; subdue; conquer; compel to submit to the dominion or control of another; vanquish.

He subjugated a king, and called him his vassal. Baker.

In a few months he [Cromwell] subjugated Ireland as Ireland had never been subjugated during the five centuries of slaughter which had elapsed since the landing of the first Norman settlers. Macaulay, Hist. Eng., i.

2. To make subservient; take or hold captive; bring under bondage, as the senses.

Mans sence captiv'de, his reason subjugate. Times' Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 109.

I understood that unto such a torment The carnal malefactors were condemned Who reason subjugate to appetite. Longfellow, tr. of Dante's Inferno, v. 30.

=Syn. 1. Vanquish, Subdue, etc. See conquer.

subjugation (sub-jō-gā'shŏn), n. [= F. subjugation, < ML. subjugatio(n-), < L. subjugare, subjugate: see subjugate.] The act of subjugating, or the state of being subjugated; subjection.

Her policy was military because her objects were power, ascendancy, and subjugation.

D. Webster, Speech at Plymouth, Dec. 22, 1820.

The subjugation of virgin soil, as we had occasion to notice, is a serious work.

B. Taylor, Northern Travel, p. 348.

subjugator (sub-jō-gā-tŏr), n. [= Sp. sojuzgador = Pg. subjugador, < LL. subjugator, one who subjugates, a conqueror, < subjugare, subjugate: see subjugate.] One who subjugates or enslaves; a conqueror. Coleridge.

subjunction (sub-jungk'shŏn), n. [*< L. as if *subjunctio(n-)*, < subungere, add, subjoin: see subjoin.] The act of subjoining, or the state of being subjoined; also, something subjoined.

subjunctive (sub-jungk'tiv), a. and n. [= F. subjunctif = Sp. subjuntivo = Pg. subjunctivo = It. subjuntivo, < L. subjunctivus, serving to join, connecting, in gram., sc. modus, the subjunctive mode, < subungere, pp. subjunctus, add, join, subjoin: see subjoin.] 1. a. 1st. Subjoined or added to something before said or written.

A few things more, subjunctive to the former, were thought meet to be castigated in preachers at that time. Hp. Hacket, Abp. Williams, p. 87. (Latham.)

2. In gram., noting that mode of the verb by which is expressed condition, hypothesis, or contingency, and which is generally used in a clause subjoined or subordinate to another clause or verb, and preceded by one of certain conjunctions, especially (in English) if or though: as in the sentence "if that be the case, then I am wrong." The subjunctive mode was an original part of the inflection of Indo European verbs, and is preserved in most of the existing languages of the family: but be and were are the only remaining forms in English in which it is conspicuously distinguished from the indicative. Abbreviated subj.

II. n. In gram., the subjunctive mode.

The subjunctive is evidently passing out of use, and there is good reason to suppose that it will soon become obsolete altogether. Marsh, Lects. on Eng. Lang., xiv.

subkingdom (sub-king'dum), n. 1. A prime subdivision of the animal kingdom; a superclass corresponding to the "branches" or "embranchements" of French zoölogists, as Cuvier, who recognized the four subkingdoms of the vertebrates, mollusks, articulate, and radiates. Such main groups are now more commonly called phyla. Eight such groups now very generally recognized, in fact if not in name, are Protozoa, Cnidaria, Echinodermata, Vermes, Arthropoda, Molluscoidea, Mollusca, and Vertebrata. Some authors degrade Vermes from this rank, or otherwise dispose of it as a subkingdom; some elevate the Tunicata to this rank; and the Molluscoidea are not recognized by all as a subkingdom.

The prolific animals of the fifth day's creation belonged to the three Cuvierian subkingdoms of the Radiata, Articulate, and Mollusca, and to the classes of Fish and Reptiles among the Vertebrata.

Dawson, Origin of World, p. 213.

2. In bot., a primary division of the vegetable kingdom; the highest class below the kingdom itself. The ordinary division is into two such subkingdoms, the Phanerogamia and the Cryptogamia; but late systematists incline to recognize four: Spermophyta (corresponding to the Phanerogamia), Pteridophyta, Bryophyta, and Thallophyta (corresponding to Cryptogamia).

sublacunose (sub-lā-kū'nŏs), a. Somewhat lacunose.

Convergent to a sublacunose centre. Encyc. Nat. Hist. (1855), III. 580.

sublanate (sub-lā'nāt), a. In bot., somewhat lanate or woolly.

sublanceolate (sub-lan'sē-ō-lāt), a. In zool. and bot., approaching the lanceolate form; somewhat tapering and pointed.

sublapsarian (sub-lap-sā'ri-an), a. and n. [< L. sub, under, + lapsus, fall (see lapse), + -arian.] 1. a. Relating to the sublapsarians or to their tenets.

According to the sublapsarian doctrine. Hammond.

II. n. One who believes in sublapsarianism. Compare supralapsarian.

sublapsarianism (sub-lap-sā'ri-an-izm), n. [< sublapsarian + -ism.] The doctrine that the decrees of election and reprobation are subsequent to the fall, or that men are elected to grace or reprobated to death while in a state of sin and ruin.

sublapsary (sub-lap-sā-ri), a. and n. Same as sublapsarian.

sublate (sub-lāt'), v. t.; pret. and pp. sublated, ppr. sublating. [< L. sublatus, used as pp. of tolere, raise, take up, < sub, under, from under, + latus, used as pp. of ferre, bear.] 1. To take or carry away; remove. [Rare.]

The authores of ye mischiefe [were] sublated & plucked away. Hall, Hen. VII., an. 1.

2. In logic, to deny: opposed to posit.

Where . . . the propositional lines are of uniform breadth, it is hereby shewn that all such opposition is sublated. Sir W. Hamilton, Logic, II. 471.

3. In Hegelian logic, to cancel by a subsequent movement.

The process of the external world left to itself in its externality can only be to go into itself, or to sublate or remove its own externality. Craig, Hegel, p. 108.

sublation (sub-lā'shŏn), n. [< L. sublatio(n-), a raising, removal, < sublatus, raised, taken away: see sublate.] 1. The act of taking or carrying away. [Rare.]

He could not be forsaken by a sublation of union. Bp. Hall, Remains, p. 188.

2. Cancellation by a subsequent logical movement, in Hegelian philosophy.

sublative (sub-lā-tiv), a. [< sublate + -ive.] Tending to take away or deprive.

sublease (sub-lēs'), n. In law, an under-lease; a lease granted by one who is himself a lessee or tenant. For some purposes, a sublease for the entire remaining term of the sublessor is deemed an assignment rather than a sublease.

sublease (sub-lēs'), v. t.; pret. and pp. subleased, ppr. subleasing. To underlease.

He leased his house . . . and subleased part of it. New York Evening Post, March 3, 1866.

sublessee (sub-lē-sē'), n. The receiver or holder of a sublease.

sublessor (sub-lēs'ŏr), n. The grantor of a sublease.

sublet (sub-let'), v. t.; pret. and pp. sublet, ppr. subletting. To underlet; let to another person, the party letting being himself lessee or tenant.

He's let and sublet, and every man has to make something out of him [the convict] each time. The Century, XL. 221.

sublevaminous† (sub-lē-vam'i-nus), a. [< ML. sublevamen (-min-), a lifting, supporting, < L. sublevare, lift, support: see sublevate.] Supporting; upholding.

His up-holding and sublevaminous Providence. Feltham, Resolves, ii. 2.

sublevate (sub-lē-vāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. sublevated, ppr. sublevating. [< L. sublevatus, pp. of sublevare (> It. sollevare = Pg. Sp. sublevar), lift up from beneath, < sub, under, + levare, lift up, raise, < levus, light.] To raise; elevate; excite. Formerly also sollevate.

sublevation (sub-lē-vā'shŏn), n. [= Sp. sublevacion = Pg. sublevarção = It. sollevazione, < L. sublevatio(n-), a lightening, < sublevare, pp. sublevatus, lift up from beneath, support: see sublevate.] 1. The act of lifting or raising; elevation.—2. A rising or insurrection.

Any general commotion or sublevation of the people. Sir W. Temple, Works (ed. 1731), II. 566.

sublicense (sub-lī'sens), v. t. To underlicense; license to another person under the provisions of a license already held by the person so licensing.

sublieutenant (sub-lī-ten'ant), n. In the British navy, a grade immediately below that of lieutenant. Formerly called mate.

subligation (sub-li-gā'shŏn), n. [< LL. subligatio(n-), a binding below, < L. solligere, pp. subligatus, bind below, < sub, under, + ligare, tie, bind: see ligation.] The act of binding underneath. [Rare.]

sublimable (sub-lī'mā-bl), a. [< sublime + -able.] Capable of being sublimated. See sublimation. Boyle, Works, III. 57.

sublimableness (sub-lī'mā-bl-ness), n. The quality of being sublimable. Boyle, Works, I. 573.

sublimary (sub-lī-mā-ri), a. [< sublime + -ary.] Elevated. [Rare.]

First to the master of the feast This health is consecrated, Thence to each sublimary guest Whose soul doth desire This nectar to raise and inspire. A. Brome, The Painter's Entertainment.

sublimate

sublimate (sub-'li-māt), v. t.; pret. and pp. sublimated, ppr. sublimating. [< L. sublimatus, pp. of sublimare, lift up on high, raise: see sublime, r.] 1. To bring (a solid substance, such as camphor or sulphur) by heat into the state of vapor, which on cooling returns again to the solid state. See sublimation.—2. To extract by or as by sublimation.

It will be a harder alchymy then Lullius ever knew to sublimate any good use out of such an invention.

Milton, Areopagitica, p. 13.

You that have put so far for the philosopher's stone that you have endeavored to sublimate it out of poor men's bones ground to powder by your oppressions.

Rev. T. Adams, Works, I. 330.

3. Figuratively, to deprive of earthly dross; elevate; refine; purify; idealize.

And when [the Sultan is] in state, there is not in the world to be seen a greater spectacle of humane glory, and of sublimated manhood.

Sandys, Travailes, p. 59.

I can conceive nothing more sublimating than the strange peril and novelty of an adventure such as this.

Poe, Tales, I. 97.

The atmosphere was light, odor, music; and each and all sublimated beyond anything the sober senses are capable of receiving.

B. Taylor, Lands of the Saracen, p. 139.

sublimate (sub-'li-māt as adj., -māt as noun), a. and n. [< L. sublimatus, pp. of sublimare, lift up on high: see sublimate, v.] 1. a. Brought into a state of vapor by heat, and again condensed, as camphor, sulphur, etc.; hence, elevated; purified.

Offering her self more sublimate and pure, in the sacred name and rites of Religion.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 366.

II. n. 1. Anything produced by sublimation or refining.—2. In mineral, the deposit formed, as in a glass tube or on a surface of charcoal, when a mineral containing a volatile ingredient is heated before the blowpipe.—Blue sublimate, a preparation of mercury in combination with flowers of sulphur and sal ammoniac, used in painting.—Corrosive sublimate. See corrosive.

sublimation (sub-'li-mā-'shon), n. [< ME. sublimacioun, < OF. (and F.) sublimation = Sp. sublimacion = Pg. sublimação = It. sublimazione, < LL. sublimatio (n.), a lifting up, a deliverance, < L. sublimare, lift up: see sublimate, sublime, v.] 1. In chem., the act or process of sublimating; a process by which solid substances are, by the aid of heat, converted into vapor, which is again condensed into the solid state by the application of cold. Sublimation effects for solids to some extent what distillation effects for liquids. Both processes purify the substances to which they are generally applied, by separating them from the fixed matters with which they are associated. Sublimation is usually conducted in one vessel, the product being deposited in the upper part of the vessel in a solid state, and often in the crystalline form, while the impurity remains in the lower part. The vapors of some substances which undergo the process of sublimation condense in the form of a fine powder called flowers; such are the flowers of sulphur, flowers of benzoin, etc. Other sublimates are obtained in a solid and compact form, as camphor, ammonium chlorid, and all the sublimates of mercury.

The quint essencia therof is naturally incorruptible, the which ge schal drawe out by sublimacioun.

Book of Quinte Essence (ed. Furnivall), p. 4.

2. The act of heightening, refining, purifying, or freeing (something) from baser qualities: as, the sublimation of the affections.—3. That which has been highly refined or purified; hence, the highest product of anything.

Religion is the perfection, refinement, and sublimation of morality.

South.

His verse was the sublimation of his rarest mood.

Stedman, Poets of America, p. 178.

Sublimation theory, in geol. and mining, the theory according to which ore-deposits were formed and veins filled by the volatilization of metalliferous matter from beneath, or from the ignited interior of the earth.

sublimatory (sub-'li-mā-tō-ri), a. and n. [< ME. sublymatorie = F. sublimatoire, < LL. sublimator, a lifter, < L. sublimare, lift up: see sublimate.] 1. a. Tending to sublimate; used in sublimation.

II. n.; pl. sublimatories (-riz). A vessel for sublimation.

Violes, croslets, and sublymatories.

Chaucer, Prolog, to Canon's Yeoman's Tale, l. 240.

sublime (sub-'lim'), a. and n. [= F. sublime = Sp. Pg. It. sublime, < L. sublimis, uplifted, high, lofty, sublime; origin unknown.] 1. a. 1†. High in place; uplifted; elevated; exalted; lofty.

Due to thy self, pursue not after Fame; Thunders at the sublimest buildings aim.

Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 532.

Sublime on these a tow'r of steel is rear'd.

Dryden, Æneid, vi. 748.

2. High in excellence; elevated by nature; exalted above men in general by lofty or noble traits; eminent: said of persons.

The age was fruitful in great men, but amongst them all, if we except the sublime Julian leader, none, as regards splendour of endowments, stood upon the same level as Cicero.

De Quincey, Cicero.

Here dwells no perfect man sublime, Nor woman winged before her time.

Whittier, Last Walk in Autumn.

3. Striking the mind with a sense of grandeur or power, physical or moral; calculated to awaken awe, veneration, exalted or heroic feeling, and the like; lofty; grand; noble: noting a natural object or scenery, an action or conduct, a discourse, a work of man's hands, a spectacle, etc.: as, sublime scenery; sublime heroism.

Easy in Words thy Style, in Sense sublime. Prior, To Dr. Sherlock.

Know how sublime a thing it is To suffer and be strong.

Longfellow, Light of Stars.

The forms of elevated masses that are most sublime are the lofty and precipitous, as implying the most intense effort of supporting might.

A. Bain, Emotions and Will, p. 238.

Dinah, covered with her long white dress, her pale face full of subdued emotion, almost like a lovely corpse into which the soul has returned charged with sublimar secrets and a sublimar love.

George Eliot, Adam Bede, xv.

4. Of lofty mien: elevated in manner, expression, or appearance.

His fair large front and eye sublime declared Absolute rule.

Milton, P. L., iv. 300.

For the proud Souldan, with presumptuous cheare And countenance sublime and insolent, Sought onely slaughter and avengement.

Spenser, F. Q., V. viii. 30.

5. In anat., superficial; not deep-seated: opposed to profound: as, the sublime flexor of the fingers (the flexor sublimis, a muscle).—Sublime geometry, the theory of higher curves.—Sublime Porte. See Porte.—Syn. 2 and 3. Grand, Lofty, Sublime, majestic, stately. Grand founds its meanings on the idea of great size, lofty and sublime on that of height. Natural objects may be sublime without physical height, if vastness and great impressiveness are present. In the moral field the sublime is that which is so high above ordinary human achievements as to give the impression of astonishment blended with awe, as the leap of Curtius into the chasm, or the death of the martyr Stephen. In moral things the grand suggests both vastness and elevation. Lofty may imply pride, but in this connection it notes only a lower degree of the sublime, sublime being the strongest word in the language for ideas of its class.

II. n. That which is sublime: commonly with the definite article. (a) In lit., that which is most elevated, stately, or imposing in style.

The sublime rises from the nobleness of thoughts, the magnificence of words, or the harmonious and lively turn of the phrase.

Addison.

The origin of the sublime is one of the most curious and interesting subjects of inquiry that can occupy the attention of a critic.

Macaulay, Athenian Orators.

(b) The grand, impressive, and awe inspiring in the works of nature or art as distinguished from the beautiful: occasionally with the indefinite article, to express a particular character of sublimity.

There is a sublime in nature, as in the ocean or the thunder—in moral action, as in deeds of daring and self-denial—and in art, as in statuary and painting, by which what is sublime in nature and in moral character is represented and idealized.

Fleming, Vocab. Philos.

(c) That which has been elevated and sublimated to its extreme limit; a noble and exalted ideal.

Your upward gaze at me now is the very sublime of faith, truth, and devotion.

Charlotte Brontë, Jane Eyre, xxv.

Are you—poor, sick, old ere your time—Nearer one whitt your own sublime Than we who never have turned a rhyme?

Browning, The Last Ride Together.

sublime (sub-'lim'), v.; pret. and pp. sublimed, ppr. subliming. [< ME. sublimen, < OF. sublimar = Sp. Pg. sublimar = It. sublimare, < L. sublimare, raise on high, in ML. also sublimate, < sublimis, raised on high, sublime: see sublime, a.] I. trans. 1. To raise on high.

Thou dear vine, . . .

Although thy trunk be neither large nor strong, Nor can thy head (not help'd) itself sublime, Yet, like a serpent, a tall tree can climb.

Sir J. Denham, Old Age, iii.

One mind has climbed Step after step, by just ascent sublimed.

Browning, Sordello.

2. To sublimiate. Th' austere and ponderous juices they sublime Make them ascend the porous soil and climb The orange tree, the citron, and the lime.

Sir R. Blackmore, Creation, ii. 234.

Sub. How do you sublime him? Face. With the Calce of Egg-shells.

B. Jonson, Alchemist, ii. 5.

3. To elevate; refine; purify; etherealize.

Sublimed thee, and exalted thee, and fixed thee In the third region, called our state of grace?

B. Jonson, Alchemist, i. 1.

I am sublimed! gross earth, Support me not! I walk on air!

Massinger, City Madam, iii. 3.

sublingua

Our Dross but weighs us down into Despair, While their sublimed spirits daunce i' th' Air.

Brome, Jovial Crew, ii.

A judicious use of metaphors wonderfully raises, sublimes, and adorns oratory or elocution.

Goldsmith, Metaphors.

II. intrans. 1. To be affected by sublimation; be brought or changed into a state of vapor by heat, and then condensed by cold, as camphor or sulphur.

Particles of antimony which will not sublime alone.

Newton, Opticks, iii., query 31.

Different bodies sublime at different temperatures, according to their various degrees of volatility.

Pop. Sci. Mo., XXV. 203.

2. To become exalted as by sublimation. This new faith subliming into knowledge.

E. H. Sears, The Fourth Gospel, p. 172.

Sublimed sulphur. Same as flowers of sulphur. See sulphur.

sublimely (sub-'lim-'li), adv. In a sublime manner; with exalted conceptions; loftily.

In English lays, and all sublimely great, Thy Homer warms with all his ancient heat.

Parnell, To Pope.

sublimeness (sub-'lim-'nes), n. The condition or quality of being sublime; loftiness of sentiment or style; sublimity.

sublimar (sub-'li-'mēr), n. [< sublime, v., + -er.] One who or that which sublimates; specifically, an apparatus for performing the operation of sublimation. Sublimers are of various forms and materials, according to their special requirements, but each consists essentially of an inclosure of metal, earthenware, or glass, to which heat may be applied, and a condenser or collector for the sublimed substance.

sublimette (sub-'li-'met'), n. [< F. sublime, high (see sublime), + dim. -ette.] A variety of music-box.

sublimification (sub-'lim-'i-fī-'kā-'shon), n. [< L. sublimis, sublime, + facere, do, make (see -fy), + -ation.] The act of making sublime, or the state of being made sublime.

subliminal (sub-'lim-'i-nāl), a. [< L. sub, under, + limen (limin-), threshold.] Below the threshold of sensation. In the following quotation a similar threshold of consciousness is supposed.

As attention moves away from a presentation its intensity diminishes, and when the presentation is below the threshold of consciousness its intensity is then subliminal, whatever that of the physical stimulus may be.

J. Ward, Encyc. Brit., XX. 49.

sublimitation (sub-'lim-'i-tā-'shon), n. A subordinate or secondary limitation. De Quincey, Style, iii.

sublimity (sub-'lim-'i-ti), n.; pl. sublimities (-tiz). [< F. sublimité = Sp. sublimitad = Pg. sublimitade = It. sublimità, < L. sublimitas (-is), loftiness, elevation, < sublimis, raised on high, sublime: see sublime.] 1. The state of being sublime; that character or quality of anything which marks it as sublime; grandeur. Especially—(a) Loftiness of nature or character; moral grandeur: as, the sublimity of an action.

The sublimity of the character of Christ owes nothing to his historians.

Buckminster.

(b) Loftiness of conception; exaltation of sentiment or style.

Milton's chief talent, and, indeed, his distinguishing excellence, lies in the sublimity of his thoughts.

Addison, Spectator, No. 279.

(c) Grandeur; vastness; majesty, whether exhibited in the works of nature or of art: as, the sublimity of a scene or of a building.

It seems manifest that the most perfect realization of structural beauty and sublimity possible to music is attained by instrumental composition.

J. Sully, Sensation and Intuition, p. 217.

There is also the sensation of great magnitude, corresponding to the voluminous in sound, and lying at the foundation of what we term sublimity.

A. Bain, Emotions and Will, p. 217.

2. That which is sublime; a sublime person or thing.

The particle of those sublimities Which have relapsed to chaos.

Byron, Childe Harold, iv. 54.

3. The highest degree of its highest quality of which anything is capable; climax; acme.

The sublimity of wisdom is to do those things living which are to be desired when dying.

Jer. Taylor.

Extensive, intensive, etc., sublimity. See the adjectives.—Syn. 1. See sublime.

sublinear (sub-'lin-'ē-jēr), a. Nearly linear.

Suture sublinear above and slightly channelled below.

Amer. Nat., XXII. 1017.

sublingua (sub-'ling-'gwā), n.; pl. sublinguæ (-gwē). [NL. (cf. LL. sublinguūm, the epiglottis), < L. sub, under, + lingua, the tongue.] A process of the mucous membrane of the floor of the mouth developed between the tip of the tongue and the symphysis of the lower jaw of some animals, as lemurs: it may acquire considerable size, and become denticulated or pectinated.

In many Prosimii and Chiroptera, as also in the platyrrhine apes, there is a process below the tongue which is sometimes double; this is the so-called sublingua.

Gegenbaur, Comp. Anat. (trans.), p. 553.

sublingual (sub-ling'gwāl), a. [= F. sublingual; as sub- + lingual.] 1. Situated under the tongue, or on the under side of the tongue; hypoglossal: specifying various structures. Also subglossal.—2. Of or pertaining to the sublingua.—Sublingual artery, a branch of bifurcation of the lingual artery, arising with the ranine opposite the margin of the hyoglossus muscle, and running on the geniohyoglossus to the sublingual gland.—Sublingual calculus, a salivary calculus of the sublingual gland.—Sublingual cyst. Same as ranula.—Sublingual fossa, a shallow cavity on the inner surface of the inferior maxillary bone above the myeloid ridge, and near the symphysis menti, partly lodging the sublingual gland.—Sublingual gland, the smallest salivary gland, lying on the floor of the mouth, discharging by a series of ducts (eight to twenty—the ducts of Rivini) either freely into the mouth or into the duct of Wharton. The longest duct, running along Wharton's duct, and opening with or very near it, is called the duct of Bartholin. See cut under salivary.—Sublingual process, the sublingua.

sublition (sub-lish'on), n. [< L. as if **sublition*(n), < sublinere, pp. sublitus, anoint beneath, lay on as a ground-color, prime, < sub, under, + luere, smear: see luminant.] In painting, the act or art of laying the ground-color under the perfect color.

sublittoral (sub-lit'ō-rāl), a. In zoöl., of littoral habits to some extent; living near the seashore; especially, living at a somewhat lower horizon under water than that of the littoral zone.

sublobular (sub-lob'ū-lār), a. Situated beneath a lobule. Compare interlobular and intra-lobular.

The intralobular vein . . . opens into the sublobular vein, and thence into the hepatic vein.

Hutton, Anat. (1855), p. 507.

sublobular veins, branches of the hepatic vein on which the hepatic lobules lie and into which the intralobular veins discharge.

sublunar (sub-lū'nār), a. [= F. sublunaire = Sp. Pg. sublunar = It. sublunare, < L. sub, under, + luna, the moon: see lunar.] Situated beneath or nearer than the moon.

This vast sublunar vault. Milton, P. L., iv. 777.

The city's moonlit spires and myriad lamps

Like stars in a sublunar sky did glow.

Shelley, Revolt of Islam, v. 1.

sublunary (sub'lū-nār-i), a. and n. [See sublunar.] 1. a. 1. Situated beneath the moon.

Each sublunary body is composite

Of the lower elements, which are propoed

By Nature to that end.

Times' Whistle (L. E. T. S.), p. 116.

Hence—2. Pertaining to this world; terrestrial; mundane; earthly; worldly: as, sublunary affairs.

All things which are sublunary are subject to change.

Dryden, Parallel of Poetry and Painting.

Am I not now dying a victim to the horror and the mystery of the wildest of all sublunary visions?

Poe, Tales, I. 418.

II.† n. Any worldly thing.

That these sublunaries have their greatest freshness placed in only Hope, it is a conviction undeniable; that, upon enjoyment, all our joys do vanish.

Feltham, Resolves, II. 66.

sublunate (sub-lū'nāt), a. Approaching the form of a crescent; suberescence: as, a sublunate mark.

subluxate (sub-luk'sāt), v. t. To dislocate partially.

subluxation (sub-luk-sā'shōn), n. Partial dislocation.

submammary (sub-mam'ā-ri), a. Situated beneath or below the mammary gland; inframammary; also, more deeply seated than this gland.—Submammary abscess, an abscess between the mammary gland and the chest-wall.—Submammary region. Same as inframammary region (which see, under inframammary).

submargin (sub-mār'jin), n. In entom., a space parallel to a margin and but slightly separated from it.

submarginal (sub-mār'ji-nāl), a. In bot. and zoöl., situated near the margin.—Submarginal cells, in entom., a series of cells in the wing of a hymenopterous insect lying behind the stigma and marginal cell.—Submarginal vein or nerve, in hymenopterous insects, one of the transverse nervures separating the submarginal cells. In the Chalcididae it is a short subcostal vein running from the base of the wing and bending upward to the costal margin, where it takes the name of marginal vein.

submarginate (sub-mār'ji-nāt), a. In entom., bordered with a mark which is slightly separated from the edge.

submargined (sub-mār'jind), a. Same as submarginate.

submarine (sub-mā-rēn'), a. and n. [= F. sous-marin = Sp. Pg. submarino; as sub- + marine.] 1. a. 1. Situated or living under or in the sea, either at the bottom or below the surface; below the surface of the sea: as, submarine plants; a submarine telegraph.—2. Occurring or carried on below the surface of the sea: as, submarine explorations; designed for use under the sea: as, submarine armor.—Submarine armor. See armor.—Submarine boat, a boat which is so fitted that it can be propelled when entirely submerged, and carries a sufficient amount of compressed air to admit of remaining below the surface for several hours. The chief object sought is the carrying and operating of torpedoes.—Submarine cable. See cable.—Submarine denudation, denudation which takes place beneath the level of the sea. Some geologists, however, do not clearly distinguish between marine and submarine denudation. In the former, all denudation under or at the edge of the sea is properly included; in the latter, only that which takes place beneath the sea-level.—Submarine forest. See forest.—Submarine gun, a gun adapted for the discharge of projectiles below the surface of the water.—Submarine lamp, mine, etc. See the nouns.—Submarine volcano, a volcano begun beneath the sea, but usually developed by the continued action of the eruptive forces so as to rise above the sea-level, and sometimes to a very considerable height. Some islands thus begun by submarine volcanic agencies have disappeared after a time; others have been permanent. The Mediterranean, the vicinity of the Azores, and the coast of Iceland are localities where submarine volcanic action has been exhibited on a grand scale.

II. n. A submarine plant.

submaster (sub'mās'tēr), n. [< OF. sousmaistre, F. sousmaître, < ML. submagister, a submaster, < L. sub, under, + magister, master: see master.] A subordinate or deputy master: as, the submaster of a school.

submaxilla (sub-mak-sil'ii), n.; pl. submaxillae (-ē). The under jaw or mandible; especially, the submaxillary bone, or bone of the under jaw.—Submaxillary (sub-mak'si-lū-ri), n. and a. 1. n.; pl. submaxillaries (-riz). The inferior maxillary bone; the under jaw-bone, inframaxillary, or mandible.

II. a. 1. (a) Of or pertaining to the under jaw or inferior maxilla; forming the basis of the lower jaw, as a bone or bones; mandibular. (b) Of or pertaining to the submaxillary gland; as, submaxillary secretion or saliva.—2. Situated under the jaws: as, the submaxillary triangle.—Submaxillary artery, one of several large branches of the facial artery which supply the submaxillary gland and neighboring parts.—Submaxillary duct, the duct of Wharton.—Submaxillary fossa. See fossa.—Submaxillary ganglion. See ganglion.—Submaxillary gland, a salivary gland situated beneath the lower jaw, on either side, discharging beneath the tongue by Wharton's duct: it is innervated from the chorda tympani and sympathetic nerves. See cut under salivary.—Submaxillary nerve, the infamaxillary nerve.—Submaxillary region. Same as suprahyoid region (which see, under suprahyoid).—Submaxillary triangle. See triangle.—Submaxillary vein, a tributary of the facial vein draining the submaxillary gland.

submaximal (sub-mak'si-māl), a. Nearly but not quite maximal.

Submaximal nerve-irritations.

W. James, Prin. of Psychology, I. 235.

submedial (sub-mō'di-āl), a. Same as submedian.

submedian (sub-mō'di-ān), a. Situated near but not at the middle; specifically, in conch., admedian; lying next the middle line on each side, as certain teeth of the radula. Also submedial.—Submedian cell, in entom., same as internomedian cell (which see, under internomedian).

submediant (sub-mō'di-ant), n. In music, the tone of a scale midway between the subdominant and the upper tonic; the sixth, as B in the scale of D. Also called superdominant.

submembranous (sub-mem'brā-nus), a. Somewhat membranous; a little leathery or coriaceous.

submeningeal (sub-mō-nin'jē-āl), a. Situated beneath the meninges.

submental (sub-men'tal), a. [< submentum + -al.] 1. Situated beneath the chin, or under the edge of the lower jaw. Specifically—2. In entom., of or pertaining to the submentum.—Submental artery, the largest of the cervical branches of the facial artery, given off in the region of the submaxillary gland, and distributed to the muscles of the jaw.—Submental vein, that one of the tributary veins of the facial vein which accompanies the submental artery.

submentum (sub-men'tum), n.; pl. submenta (-tū). [NL., < L. sub, under, + mentum, the chin: see mentum.] In entom., the proximal one of two basal median parts or pieces of the labium, the other being the mentum; the proximal one of the two basal parts of the second maxilla. See cuts under mouth-part, palpus, Hymenoptera, and Insecta.

submerge (sub-mér'j'), v.; pret. and pp. submerged, ppr. submerging. [< OF. submerger soumerger, F. submerger = Fr. submerger, submergir, somergir = Sp. sumergir = Pg. submergir = It. sommergere, < L. submergere, summergere, plunge under, sink, overwhelm, < sub, under, + mergere, dip, sink, plunge: see merge.] I. trans. 1. To put under water; plunge.—2. To cover or overflow with water; inundate: drown.

So half my Egypt were submerged, and made

A cistern for scaled snakes!

Shak., A. and C., II. 5. 9;

Submerged bog, submerged forest, a bog or forest sunk below its original position, so that it has become covered by water. Thus, at Clonea, near Dungarvan, in Ireland, there are remains of an ancient pine forest, miles in length, now usually covered with many fathoms of water.—Submerged pump. See pump.

II. intrans. To sink under water; be buried or covered, as by a fluid; sink out of sight.

There is . . . a plot, which emerges more than once, for carrying the King to Rouen; plot after plot emerging and submerging, like ignes fatui in foul weather, which lead nowhither.

Carlyle, French Rev., II. III. 4.

submergence (sub-mér'jēns), n. [< submergi + -ence.] The act of submerging, or plunging under water; the state of being submerged; submersion; hence, a sinking out of sight.

submerse (sub-mér's'), v. t. [< L. submersus, summersus, pp. of submergere, summergere, submerge: see submerge.] To put under water; submerge. [Rare.]

submerse (sub-mér's'), a. [< L. submersus, pp.: see the verb.] Same as submerged.

submersed (sub-mér'st'), p. a. In bot., growing under water, as the leaves of aquatic plants. Also demersed and submerged.

submersible (sub-mér'si-bl), a. [< submerse + -ible.] That may be submersed. The Engineer, LXVII. 59.

submersion (sub-mér'shōn), n. [= F. submersion = Sp. sumersio = Pg. submersão = It. sommersione, < LL. submersio(n), summersio(n), a sinking, submerging, < L. submergere, summergere, submerge: see submerge.] The act of submerging, or the state of being submerged.

submetallic (sub-me-tal'ik), a. Imperfectly or partially metallic: as, the submetallic luster of wolfram.

submiliary (sub-mil'i-ā-ri), a. Slightly smaller than miliary. Lancet, 1891, I.

subminimal (sub-min'i-māl), a. Less than minimal.

subminister (sub-min'is-tēr), v. [< OF. subministrer = Sp. suministrar = Pg. suministrar, < L. subministrare, sumministrare, aid by giving, afford, supply, < sub, under, + ministrare, attend, provide, furnish, < minister, an attendant: see minister.] I. trans. To supply; afford; administer. Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Mankind, p. 154.

II. intrans. To subserv; be useful; be subservient. Sir R. L'Estrange.

subministrant (sub-min'is-trant), a. [< L. subministrant(t)-s, sumministrant(t)-s, ppr. of subministrare, sumministrare, aid by giving, supply: see subminister.] Subservient; subordinate. Bacon.

subministrat (sub-min'is-trāt), v. t. [< L. subministratus, sumministratus, pp. of subministrare, sumministrare, aid by giving, supply: see subminister.] Same as subminister. Harvey.

subministration (sub-min-is-trā'shōn), n. [< OF. subministration = Sp. sumministracion = Pg. subministracão, < L. subministratio(n), sumministratio(n), a giving, supplying: see subministrare.] The act of subministering, or furnishing or supplying. Sir H. Wotton, Reliquiae, p. 529.

submiss (sub-mis'), a. [= OF. submis, soumis, soumis, F. soumis = Sp. sumiso = Pg. submisso = It. somnesso, < L. submissus, summissus, pp. of submittere, summittere, put under, lower, reduce: see submit.] 1. Humble; submissive. [Obsolete or archaic.]

Nearer his presence—Adam, though not awed,

Yet with submiss approach and reverence meek,

As to a superior nature bowing low.

Milton, P. L., v. 359.

A simple, submiss, humble style.

C. Mather, Mag. Chris., Int.

2†. Low; soft; gentle.

Thus th' old Hebrew muttering gan to speak

In submiss voice, that Isaac might not hear

His bitter grief.

Sylvestre, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, II., The Fathers.

These are crying sins, and have shrill voices in heaven; neither are they submiss and whispering on the earth.

Rev. T. Adams, Works, I. 213.

submission (sub-misht'ən), n. [< OF. submissio-, submissiō-, soumission, Ft. soumission = Sp. submisión = Pg. submissão = It. sottomissione, < L. submissio(n)-, summissio(n)-, a letting down, lowering, sinking, < submittere, summittere, pp. submittere, summissus, put under, let down, lower; cf. induce: see submit.] 1. The act of submitting in any sense of that word; especially, the act of yielding; entire surrender to the control or government of another.

5. To propose; declare as one's opinion.

Subnecromorphotica (sub-ner to-mor-for-kii), n. pl. [NL. (Westwood, 1840), < L. sub, un-

Our gallon, which has the pint for its suboctave.
Arbutnot, Anc. Coli

2. In music, the octave below a given tone.—Suboctave coupler, in organ-building, a coupler which adds digitals an octave below those struck, either on the same keyboard or on another.

suboctuple (sub-ok'tū-pl), a. Containing one part of eight; having the ratio 1:8. Bp. Wilkins, Archimedes, vii.

subocular (sub-ok'ū-līr), a. [L. subocularis, that is beneath the eye, < sub, under, + ocularis, pertaining to the eye, < oculus, eye.] Situated under the eye; suborbital; suboptic.—Subocular antennæ, in entom., antennæ inserted below the eyes, as in most Homoptera.

subesophageal, a. See subesophageal.

subopercle (sub-ō-pēr'kl), n. The subopercular bone, or suboperculum, of a fish.

subopercular (sub-ō-pēr'kū-līr), a. [< suboperculum + -ar.] Composing a lower part of the operculum or gill-flap of a fish; pertaining to a suboperculum in any sense, or having its character. See cut under opercular.

suboperculum (sub-ō-pēr'kū-lum), n.; pl. subopercula (-lī). [NL. < L. sub, under, + operculum, a lid, cover.] 1. In ichth., the subopercular bone, an inferior one of four opercular bones usually entering into the composition of the gill-cover, of which it forms a part of the lower margin. See cuts under opercular and teleost.—2. In anat. of the brain, a part of an orbital gyre which to some extent covers the insula or island of Reil in front, and is situated under the præoperculum.

suboptic (sub-op'tik), a. Same as suborbital: as, the suboptic foramen.

suboral (sub-ō'ral), a. Placed under the mouth or oral orifice.

Other specimens with the characteristic dorsal surface have no suboral aviculation. Geol. Jour., LXVII. 6.

suborbicular (sub-ōr-bik'ū-līr), a. Almost orbiculate or orbicular; nearly circular.

suborbiculate (sub-ōr-bik'ū-lāt), a. Same as suborbicular.

suborbital (sub-ōr'bi-tal), a. and n. I. a. Situated below the orbit of the eye or on the floor of that orbit; infra-orbital; subocular. Also suboptic, suborbital.—Suborbital cartilage. See II.—Suborbital foramen, the infra-orbital foramen (which see, under foramen).—Suborbital fossa. Same as canine fossa.

II. n. A special formation of parts below, along the lower border of, or on the floor of the orbit of the eye. (a) A branch of the second division of the fifth nerve, which in various animals, as man, runs under the orbit and escapes upon the cheek through the suborbital foramen. (b) One of a chain of bones or cartilages which in many of the lower vertebrates borders the brim of the orbit below, and corresponds to a like series which may form the supra-orbital margin. The great development of one of these suborbitals is a prominent feature of the mail-checked or cottoid fishes. See Scleroparize, and cut under teleost.

subordain (sub-ōr-dān'), v. t. To ordain to an inferior position. [Rare.]

For she is finite in her acts and powre,
But so is not that Powre omnipotent
That Nature subordain'd chiefe Governor
Of fading creatures while they do endure.
Davies, Mirum in Modum, p. 21. (Davies.)

suborder (sub-ōr'dēr), n. 1. In bot. and zool., a subdivision of an order; a group subordinate to an order; a superfamily. See family, 6, and order, n., 5.—2. In arch., a subordinate or secondary order; an order introduced for decoration, or chiefly so, as distinguished from a main order of the structure.

In the triforium of the choir [of the cathedral of Senlis] the shafts which carry the sub-orders of the arches are comparatively slender monoliths.

C. H. Moore, Gothic Architecture, p. 202.

subordinacy (sub-ōr'di-nā-si), n. [< subordinate + -cy.] The state of being subordinate, or subject to control; subordination. [Rare.]

He forms a Whole, coherent and proportioned in itself, with due subjection and Subordinacy of constituent Parts.
Shaftesbury, Advice to an Author, i. § 3.

subordinal (sub-ōr'di-nal), a. [< NL. subordo (-ordin-), suborder (< L. sub, under, + ordo, order), + -al.] Of the classificatory rank or taxonomic value of a suborder; subordinate to an order, as a group or division of animals; of or pertaining to a suborder.

subordinance (sub-ōr'di-nāns), n. [< subordinate + -ance.] Same as subordinacy.

subordinancy (sub-ōr'di-nān-si), n. [As subordination (see -cy).] 1. Subordinacy.—2. Subordinate places or offices collectively.

The subordinancy of the government changing hands so often.
Sir W. Temple.

subordinary (sub-ōr'di-nā-ri), n. In her., a bearing of simple figure, often appearing, but not considered so common or so important as one of the ordinaries. See ordinary, 9. Those bearings which are called ordinaries by some writers and not by others are called subordinates by these latter: such are the pile, the inescutcheon, the bend sinister, the canton or quarter, the border, the orle, and the point.

subordinate (sub-ōr'di-nāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. subordinated, ppr. subordinating. [< ML. subordinatus, pp. of subordinare (> It. subordinare = Sp. Pg. subordinar = F. subordonner), place in a lower order, make subject, < L. sub, under, + ordinare, order, arrange: see ordinate, order, v.] 1. To place in an order or rank below something else; make or consider as of less value or importance: as, to subordinate temporal to spiritual things.

So plans he,
Always subordinating (note the point!)
Revenge, the maulier sin, to interest,
The meaner. Browning, Ring and Book, II. 186.

All that is merely circumstantial shall be subordinated to and in keeping with what is essential. J. Caird.

2. To make auxiliary or subservient to something else; put under control or authority; make subject.

The stars fight in their courses under his banner, and subordinate their powers to the dictates of his will.
South, Sermons, VII. 1.

The branch societies were subordinated to the central one.
English Guilds (E. E. T. S.), p. cxxxv.

There is no known vertebrate in which the whole of the germ-product is not subordinated to a single axis.
H. Spencer, Prin. of Biol., § 50.

Subordinating conjunction. See conjunction, 3.

subordinate (sub-ōr'di-nāt), a. and n. [= F. subordonné = Sp. Pg. subordinado = It. subordinato, < ML. subordinatus, place in a lower order: see subordinate, v.] I. a. 1. In a lower order or class; occupying a lower position in a descending scale; secondary.

Life is the function of the animal's body considered as one whole, just as the subordinate functions are those of the body's several sets of organs.

Micart, Nature and Thought, p. 188.

2. Inferior in order, nature, dignity, power, rank, importance, etc.

It was subordinate, not enslaved, to the understanding.
South.

The great . . . are naturally averse to a power raised over them, and whose weight must ever lean heaviest on the subordinate orders.
Goldsmith, Vicar, xix.

Subordinate clause. See clause, 1.—Subordinate clause. (a) In gram., same as dependent clause. (See under clause, 3.) Such a clause has the value of either a noun, an adjective, or an adverb in some other clause to which it is subordinated, being introduced either by a relative pronoun or an adverb, or by a subordinating conjunction. (b) In law, a clause in a statute which, from its position or the nature of its substance, or especially by reason of grammatical relation as above indicated, must be deemed controlled or restrained in its meaning if it conflicts with another clause in the same statute.—Subordinate end. See end.—Syn. Subservient, minor.

II. n. One inferior in power, order, rank, dignity, office, etc.; one who stands in order or rank below another; often, one below and under the orders of another; in gram., a word or clause dependent on another.

His next subordinate,
Awakening, thus to him in secret spake.
Milton, P. L., v. 671.

subordinately (sub-ōr'di-nāt-li), adv. In a subordinate manner; in a lower order, class, rank, or dignity; as of inferior importance.

subordinateness (sub-ōr'di-nāt-nes), n. The state of being subordinate or inferior.

subordination (sub-ōr-di-nā'shon), n. [= F. subordination = Sp. subordinación = Pg. subordinação = It. subordinazione, < *ML. *subordinatio* (n-), < subordinare, subordinate: see subordinate.] 1. The act of subordinating, subjecting, or placing in a lower order, rank, or position, or in proper degrees of rank; also, the state of being subordinate or inferior; inferiority of rank or dignity.

There being no Religion that tends so much to the peace of mens minds and the preservation of civil Societies as this [the Christian religion] doth; yet all this it doth by way of subordination to the great end of it, which is the promoting mens eternal happiness.

Stillingfleet, Sermons, I. iv.

In his narrative a due subordination is observed: some transactions are prominent; others retire.

Macaulay, History.

2†. Degree of lesser rank.

Persons who, in their several subordinations, would be obliged to follow the example of their superiors. Swift.

3. The state of being under control of government; subjection to rule; habit of obedience to orders.

Never, never more shall we behold that generous loyalty to rank and sex, that proud submission, that dignified obedience, that subordination of the heart, which kept alive, even in servitude itself, the spirit of an exalted freedom.
Burke, Rev. in France.

They were without subordination, patience, industry, or any of the regular habits demanded for success in such an enterprise.

Prescott, Ferd. and Isa., ii. 8.

subordinationism (sub-ōr-di-nā'shon-izm), n. [< subordination + -ism.] In theol., the doctrine that the second and third persons of the Trinity are inferior to God the Father as regards (a) order only, or (b) as regards essence. The former doctrine is considered orthodox, the latter is that of the Arians and others.

Justin . . . did not hold a strict subordinationism.
Liddon, Divinity of Our Lord, p. 470.

subordinative (sub-ōr'di-nā-tiv), a. [< subordinate + -ive.] Tending to subordinate; causing, implying, or expressing subordination or dependence.

suborn (sub-ōrn'), v. t. [< F. suborner = Sp. Pg. subornar = It. subornare, < L. subornare, furnish, equip, fit out, incite secretly, < sub, under, + ornare, fit out, provide, ornament.] 1†. To furnish; equip; adorn; ornament.

Evil things, being decked and suborned with the gay attire of goodly wordes, may easily deceive.
Spenser, State of Ireland.

2. To furnish or procure unlawfully; procure by indirect means.

So men oppressed, when weary of their breath,
Throw off the burden, and suborn their death.
Dryden, Fal. and Arc., iii. 1632.

3. To bribe or unlawfully procure to some act of wickedness—specifically, in law, to giving false testimony; induce, as a witness, to perjury.

He had put to death two of the kynes which were the chiefe autours of this newe reuolt, and had suborned Guarionexius and the other kynes to attempte the same.
Peter Martyr (tr. in Eden's First Books on America, ed. [Arber, p. 84])

By heaven, fond wretch, thou know'st not what thou speak'st;
Or else thou art suborn'd against his honour

In hateful practice. Shak., M. for M., v. 1. 106.

It was he indeed
Suborned us to the calumny.
B. Jonson, Poetaster, v. 1.

A faithless clerk, who had been suborned . . . to betray their consultations, was promptly punished.
Bancroft, Hist. U. S., I. 142.

To bribe a trustee, as such, is in fact neither more nor less than to suborn him to be guilty of a breach or an abuse of trust. Bentham, Introd. to Morals and Legislation, [xvi. 27, note 3.]

subornation (sub-ōr-nā'shon), n. [= F. subornation = Sp. subornación = Pg. subordinação = It. subornazione, < ML. subornatio (n-), < L. subornare, pp. subornatus, furnish, suborn: see suborn.] 1. The act of procuring wrongfully.—2. The act of procuring one by persuasion, bribery, etc., to do a criminal or bad action; specifically, in law, the crime of procuring perjured testimony; procuring a witness to commit the crime of perjury; more specifically called subornation of perjury.

The subornation of witnesses, or the corrupt sentence of a Judge!
Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, I. xvii.

Foul subornation is predominant.
Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iii. 1. 145.

suborner (sub-ōr'nēr), n. [< suborn + -er.] One who suborns; one who procures another to do a bad action, especially to take a false oath.

Bacon, Charge at Session for the Verge.

subostracal (sub-os'trā-kal), a. Situated under the shell: noting a dorsal cartilage of some cephalopods.

A thin plate-like sub-ostreacal or (so-called) dorsal cartilage, the anterior end of which rests on and fits into the concave nuchal cartilage.
Encyc. Brit., XVI. 675.

Subostracea (sub-os-trā'sē-jī), n. pl. [NL. (De Blainville), < L. sub, under, + NL. Ostracea.] A group of lamellibranchs or bivalve mollusks, so named from their relationship to the oyster family, including such forms as the thorn-oysters (Spondylidæ), etc. See cut under Spondylus.

subostracean (sub-os-trā'sē-ān), a. and n. I. a. Of or pertaining to the Subostracea.

II. n. A member of the Subostracea.

suboval (sub-ō'vāl), a. Nearly or somewhat oval.

subovarian (sub-ō-yā'ri-ān), a. Situated below the ovary: specifying certain plates of cystic erinoids.

subovate (sub-ō'vāt), a. Nearly or somewhat ovate.

subovoid (sub-ō'void), a. Somewhat or nearly ovoid.

suboxid, suboxide (sub-ok'sid, -sid or -sīd), n. An oxid which contains less oxygen than the protoxid. [Now rare.]

subpallial (sub-pal'i-ál), a. Situated under the mantle or beneath the pallium of a mollusk: as, the subpallial space or chamber.

subpalmar (sub-pal'mát), a. Nearly or somewhat palmate.

subpanation (sub-pā-nā'shon), n. [*< NL. subpanatio(n)-, < *subpanare, < L. sub, under, + panis, bread: see pain<sup>2</sup>. Cf. impanation.*] In theological controversies of the Reformation, a designation of the view that Christ is under the form of bread and wine in a localized or materialistic sense. See consubstantiation, transubstantiation.

subparallel (sub-par'á-lel), a. Nearly or not quite parallel.

subparietal (sub-pā-rī'e-tál), a. Situated beneath or below the parietal bone or lobe.—subparietal sulcus, a small inconstant sulcus extending back from the callosomarginal sulcus at its angle.

subpetiolate (sub-pet'i-ó-lát), a. Imperfectly petiolate, as antennae which exhibit a form between serrate and petiolate.

subpeduncular (sub-pē-dung'kū-lār), a. Situated below a peduncle of the cerebellum.—subpeduncular lobe of the cerebellum. Same as floculus, 2.

subpedunculate (sub-pē-dung'kū-lāt), a. Having a very short stem or peduncle; scarcely pedunculate; subpetiolate. See cut under Polistes.

subpellucid (sub-pe-lū'sid), a. Nearly or almost pellucid; somewhat pellucid or clear.

subpena, subpenalt. See subpena, subpenal.

Subpentamera (sub-pen-tam'e-rā), n. pl. [NL.] Same as Cryptopentamera or Pseudotetramera.

subpentamerous (sub-pen-tam'e-rus), a. Same as cryptopentamerous or pseudotetramerous.

subpentangular (sub-pen-tang'gū-lār), a. Irregularly or imperfectly pentagonal; having five sides of different lengths, or five rounded-off angles.

subpericardial (sub-per-i-kār'di-ál), a. Situated at or occurring beneath the pericardium.

subpericranial (sub-per-i-kra'ní-ál), a. Situated at or occurring under the pericranium.

subperiosteal (sub-per-i-os'tē-ál), a. Situated at or occurring beneath the periosteum.—subperiosteal amputation, an amputation in which the periosteum is dissected up from the bone before the bone is cut, so that the cut end of the bone may be covered by the flaps of periosteum.—Subperiosteal blastema, the osteogenic layer of the periosteum. Kollmer.

subperiosteally (sub-per-i-os'tē-ál-i), adv. In a subperiosteal manner.

subperitoneal (sub-per'i-tō-nē-ál), a. Situated beneath the peritoneum—that is, on its outer or attached surface.—Subperitoneal abscess, an abscess situated between the abdominal wall and the parietal peritoneum.—Subperitoneal fascia, the layer of areolar and fatty tissue attaching the peritoneum to the surfaces it covers.

subpermanent (sub-pēr'mā-nent), a. Somewhat permanent; remaining for a time, but with gradual loss of intensity: as, the subpermanent magnetism of iron.

It was impossible in many cases to avoid imparting subpermanent torsion. Proc. Roy. Soc., XXXVIII 42.

subperpendicular (sub-pēr-pen-dik'ū-lār), n. A subnormal.

subpetiolar (sub-pet'i-ó-lār), a. In bot., situated under or within the base of the petiole, as the leaf-buds of the plane-tree (Platanus).

subpetiolate (sub-pet'i-ó-lát), a. 1. In bot., having a very short petiole.—2. In zool., somewhat petiolate, as an insect's abdomen; subpedunculate. See cut under Polistes.

subpharyngeal (sub-fā-rin'jē-ál), a. Situated beneath or below the pharynx, as a nervous ganglion or commissure.

subphratry (sub-frā'tri), n. A subdivision of a phratry. Encyc. Brit., XXIII 474.

subphrenic (sub-fren'ik), a. Lying beneath the diaphragm.—Subphrenic abscess, an abscess between the diaphragm and the liver.

subphylar (sub-fī'lār), a. Subordinate to a phylum in taxonomic rank; of the classificatory value of a subphylum.

subphylum (sub-fī'lum), n.; pl. subphyla (-lā). A prime division or main branch of a phylum; a group of a grade next below that of a phylum. Encyc. Brit., XXIV 810.

subpial (sub-pī-ál), a. Situated beneath the pia mater.

subpilose (sub-pī'lōs), a. In bot. and entom., thinly pilose or hairy.

subplantigrade (sub-plan'ti-grād), a. Not quite plantigrade; walking with the heel a little raised.

subpleural (sub-plō'rāl), a. Situated beneath the outer or attached side of the pleura.—Sub- pleural emphysema, that form of interstitial emphysema in which air is found in the subpleural connective tissue.

subplexal (sub-plek'sál), a. Lying under a plexus of the brain. Buck's Handbook of Med. Sciences, VIII 145.

subplinth (sub'plinth), n. In arch., a second and lower plinth placed under the principal one in columns and pedestals.

subpena, subpena (sub-pē'ni or su-pē'ni), n. [So called from the initial words of the writ in its original form, L. sub penā, 'under penalty': sub, under; penā, abl. of pāna, pain, penalty: see pain<sup>2</sup>.] In law, a writ or process commanding the attendance in a court of justice of the person on whom it is served, under a penalty. Specifically—(a) The process by which bills in equity are enforced, a writ issued by chancery in the name of the sovereign or of the people, commanding the person complained of to appear and answer the matter alleged against him, and abide by the order or decree of the court, under penalty of a fine, etc. Hence—(b) In old Eng. law, a writ in equity. (c) A writ by which the attendance of witnesses is required, used now in all courts. If the writ requires the witnesses to bring writings, books, or the like with him, it is called a subpena duces tecum.

subpena, subpena (sub- or su-pē'ni), v. t. [< subpana, subpana. n.] To serve with a writ of subpena; command the attendance of in court by a legal writ: as, to subpena a witness.

My friend, who has a natural aversion to London, would never have come up had he not been subpaned to it, as he told me in order to give his testimony for one of the rebels. Addison, Freeholder, No. 41.

subpenalt, subpenalt (sub- or su-pē'nál), a. [< subpana + -al.] Subject to penalty.

These meetings of Ministers must be authoritative, not arbitrary nor precarious, but subpenalt. Sp. Gauden, Tears of the Church, p. 483. (Davies.)

subpolar (sub-pó-lār), a. 1. Under or below the poles of the earth in latitude; adjacent to the poles.—2. Beneath the pole of the heavens, as a star at its lowest culmination.

By a subpolar altitude of the sun, the latitude of 80° 02' N. was obtained (August 14th, 1872).

C. F. Hall, Polar Expedition, p. 408.

subpolygonal (sub-pó-lig'ō-nál), a. Nearly or somewhat polygonal.

subporphyritic (sub-pór-fi-rit'ik), a. Having in an imperfect degree the character of porphyry.

subprefect (sub-pré'fekt), n. [= F. sous-préfet; as sub + prefect.] An assistant or deputy prefect; specifically, in France, an official charged with the administration of an arrondissement under the immediate authority of the prefect of the department.

subprefecture (sub-pré'fekt-tūr), n. A part or division of a prefecture; also, the office or authority of a subprefect.

subprehensile (sub-prē-hen'sil), a. Somewhat prehensile, as a monkey's tail; imperfectly or partially fitted for prehension.

subpreputial (sub-prē-pū-shāl), a. Placed between the prepuce and the glans penis.—Subpreputial calculus, a calculus consisting of calcified smegma between the prepuce and the glans penis.

subprimary (sub-prī'mā-ri), a. Under the primary: as, a subprimary school.

subprincipal (sub-prin'si-pál), n. 1. An under-principal.—2. In carp., an auxiliary rafter, or principal brace.—3. In organ-building, a subbas of the open diapason class.

subprior (sub-prī'or), n. [< ML. subprior, < sub, under, + prior, prior.] Ecclies., the vicergerent of a prior; a claustral officer who assists the prior.

subprostatic (sub-pros-tat'ik), a. Situated under the prostate gland. Rarely, also, hypoprostatic.

subprovince (sub'prov'ins), n. A prime division of a province; in zoogeog., a division subordinate to a subregion.

subpubescent (sub-pū-bes'ent), a. In entom. and bot., slightly or somewhat pubescent.

subpubic (sub-pū'bik), a. Situated beneath the pubes of man, or in the corresponding position in other animals.—Subpubic arch, the arch or angle formed by the junction of the ascending ram of the pubes, broadly arched in the female, more angular and contracted in the male.—Subpubic hernia, obturator hernia. See obturator.—Subpubic ligament, a thick triangular fibrous arch lying along the lower margin of the pubic bones and binding them together.

subpulmonary (sub-pul'mō-nā-ri), a. Situated under (in man) or ventrad of the lungs.

subpurchaser (sub-pér'chā-sēr), n. A purchaser who buys from a purhaser.

subpyramidal (sub-pi-ram'i-dál), a. Approximately pyramidal. Quart. Jour. Geol. Soc., XLV 51.—Subpyramidal fossa, a depression in the inner wall of the middle ear, below the pyramid and behind the fenestra rotunda.

subquadrangular (sub-kwod-rang'gū-lār), a. Approaching an oblong form; in form between quadrangular and oval.

subquadrate (sub-kwod'rāt), a. Nearly but not quite square; squarish. Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 233.

subquadruple (sub-kwod'rō-pl), a. Containing one part of four; having the ratio 1:4.

subquintuple (sub-kwin'tū-pl), a. Containing one part of five; having the ratio 1:5.

subradular (sub-rad'ū-lār), a. Situated beneath the radula; specifying a membrane forming part of the odontophore of gastropods.

subramose, subramous (sub-rā'mōs, -mus), a. 1. In bot., slightly ramose; having few branches.—2. In entom., noting antennae whose joints are furnished with short branches.

subrational (sub-rash'ōn-ál), a. Almost rational.—Subrational function. If X is a rational function of x, and Y a rational function of y, then the equation X = Y constitutes y as a subrational function of x.

subreader (sub'rē'dér), n. An under-reader in the inns of court. [Eng.]

subrectangular (sub-rek-tang'gū-lār), a. Approaching a right angle in form; a little obtuse or acute.

subrector (sub'rek'tōr), n. A rector's deputy or substitute.

subregion (sub'rē'jōn), n. A subdivision of a region; in zoogeog., a faunal area subordinate in extent to one called a region.—Guinean, Mediterranean, Mongolian, Mozambican subregion. See the adjectives.—New Zealand subregion, a division of the great Australian region, probably more isolated, both in time and in space, than any other faunal area of the globe. It consists of the three large islands of New Zealand, with numerous satellites. The fauna is remarkable in the almost entire absence of indigenous mammals, and the presence of many peculiar avian and reptilian types, some of which, like the moas, are recently extinct, and others of which seem doomed to extinction in the near future.—Papuan, Polynesian, Siberian, etc., subregion. See the adjectives.

subregional (sub-rē'jōn-ál), a. [< subregion + -al.] Of or pertaining to a subregion: as, subregional divisions; subregional distribution of animals or plants.

subreniform (sub-ren'i-fōrm), a. Shaped somewhat like the human kidney.

subrent (sub-rent'), v. t. To sublease.

subreption (sub-rep'shon), n. [= F. subreption = Sp. subrepcion = Pg. subrepcão, < L. subreptio(n)-, surreptio(n)-, a stealing, a purloining, < subripere, surripere, pp. subreptus, surreptus, take away secretly, steal, < sub, under, + rapere, take away, snatch: see rapt.] 1. The act of obtaining a favor by surprise or by suppression or fraudulent concealment of facts.

Lest there should be any subreption in this sacred business. Sp. Hall, A Modest Offer.

2. In Scots law, the obtaining of gifts of escheat, etc., by concealing the truth. Compare obreption, 2.

subreptitious (sub-rep-tish'us), a. Same as surreptitious.

subreptitiously (sub-rep-tish'us-li), adv. Same as surreptitiously.

subreptive (sub-rep'tiv), a. [< L. subreptivus, surreptivus, false, fraudulent, < subreptus, surreptus, pp. of subripere, surripere, take away secretly, steal: see subreption.] Surreptitious.

Many conceptions arise in our minds from some obscure suggestion of experience, and are developed to inference after inference by a secret logic, without any clear consciousness either of the experience that suggests or the reason that develops them. These conceptions—of which there are no small number—may be called subreptive. Kant, tr. in E. Caird's Philos. of Kant, p. 151.

subresin (sub-rez'in), n. That part of a resin which is soluble only in boiling alcohol, and is precipitated again as the alcohol cools, forming pseudo-crystals.

subretinal (sub-ret'i-nál), a. Lying beneath the retina.

subretractile (sub-rē-trak'til), a. Somewhat retractile: noting the legs of an insect which can be folded against the body, but do not fit into grooves of the lower surface.

subrhomboidal (sub-rom-boi'dál), a. Somewhat rhomboidal or diamond-shaped.

subrigid (sub-rij'id), a. Somewhat rigid or stiff.

subriguous (sub-rig'ū-us), a. [< L. subriguus, surriguus, watered, < sub, under, + riguus, that waters or irrigates, < rigare, wet, moisten.] Watered or wet beneath; well-watered. Blount, Glossographia.

subrogate (sub-rō-gāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. subrogated, ppr. subrogating. [< L. subrogatus, surrogatus, pp. of subrogare, surrogare (> It. surrogare = Sp. Pg. subrogar = F. subroger), put in another's place, substitute: see surrogate.] To put in the place of another; substitute. See surrogate. Jer. Taylor, Holy Dying, iv. 8.

subrogation (sub-rō-gā'shon), n. [= F. subrogation = Sp. subrogación = Pg. subrogação = It. subrogazione, < ML. subrogatio(n-), substitution, < L. subrogare, surrogare, substitute: see subrogate.] 1. In law, the act or operation of law in vesting a person who has satisfied, or is ready to satisfy, a claim which ought to be borne by another with the right to hold and enforce the claim against such other for his own indemnification.

Subrogation is "purely an equitable principle, disregarding forms, and aiming to do exact justice by placing one who has been compelled to pay the debt of another as near as possible in the position of him to whom the payment was made." Barton.

2. In a general sense, succession of any kind, whether of a person to a person, or of a person to a thing.

sub rosa (sub rō'zī). [L. sub, under; rosa, abl. of rosa, a rose.] Under the rose; privately. The rose is the emblem of silence.

subsacral (sub-sā'krāl), a. Situated below (ventrad of) the sacrum; placed in relation with the venter or concavity of the sacrum; presacral (in man): as, subsacral foramina; subsacral divisions of nerves.

subsaline (sub-sā-līn' or -sā'lin), a. Moderately saline or salt.

subsalt (sub'sālt), n. In chem., a basic salt; a salt in which two or more equivalents of the base, or molecules of the metallic oxid, are combined with one of the acids radical, as mercurous subacetate,  $Hg_2(C_2H_3O_2)_2$ , or cuprous chlorid,  $Cu_2Cl_2$ .

subsannation (sub-sa-nā'shon), n. [L. subsannare, pp. subsannatus, mock, < L. sub, under, + sannare, mock, < sanna, < Gr. sanna, a mocking grimace.] Derision; scorn; mockery; dishonor.

Idolatry is as absolute a subsannation and vilification of God as malice can invent.

Dr. H. More, Mystery of Iniquity, I. v. § 11

subsaturated (sub-sat'ū-rā-ted), a. Not completely saturated.

subsaturation (sub-sat'ū-rā'shon), n. The condition of being subsaturated.

subscapular (sub-skāp'u-lar), a. and n. 1. a. In anat.: (a) Occupying the under surface of the scapula; of or pertaining to that side of the shoulder-blade which presents to the ribs. (b) Running under or below the scapula, as a vessel or nerve.—Subscapular aponeurosis, the subscapular fascia.—Subscapular artery, (a) The largest branch of the axillary artery, passing along the lower border of the scapula. (b) A small branch of the supra-scapular artery.—Subscapular fascia. See fascia. Subscapular fossa. See fossa.—Subscapular muscle, the subscapularis. Subscapular nerve, one of three branches of the brachial plexus: (a) The upper supplies the subscapular muscle. (b) The lower supplies the teres major muscle. (c) The long or middle supplies the latissimus dorsi, running in the course of the subscapular artery.—Subscapular region. See region.—Subscapular vein, a lateral tributary of the axillary vein.

II. n. A subscapular vessel or nerve, and especially the subscapular muscle. See subscapularis.

subscapularis (sub-skāp-u-lā'ris), n.; pl. subscapulares (-rēz). [NL.: cf. subscapular.] A muscle arising from the venter of the scapula, and inserted into the lesser tuberosity of the humerus.—Subscapularis minor, an anomalous muscle in man, occurring about once in eight subjects, having its origin on the axillary border of the scapula and its insertion above that of the teres major. Also called subscapulo-humeralis, infra-scapularis secundus.

subscapulary (sub-skāp'ū-lā-ri), a. Same as subscapular.

subsclerotic (sub-sklē-rot'ik), a. Beneath the sclerotic.—Subsclerotic dropsy, a morbid collection of fluid between the choroid and sclerotic coats of the eye.

subscribable (sub-skri'ba-bl), a. [L. subscribere + -able.] Capable of being subscribed. Coleridge.

subscribe (sub-skrib'), v.: pret. and pp. subscribed, pp. subscribing. [= F. souscrire = Sp. subscribir = Pg. subscrivere = It. sottoscrivere, < L. subscribere, write under, write below, sign one's name, < sub, under, + scribere, write: see scribe.] I. trans. 1. To write beneath: said of what is so written or of the handwriting.

Ador You'll subscribe
Your hand to this
Camd. And justify't with my life.
Messenger, Guardian, III. 3.

I saw in the Court of the . . . Senate House a goodly statue, . . . with an honourable Elogium subscribed underneath the same.
Coryat, Cruddles, I. 50.

Hence—2. To sign with one's own hand.

Let your Friend to you subscribe a Female Name.
Congreve, tr. of Ovid's Art of Love.

By extension—3. To give consent to, as to something written, or to bind one's self to, by writing one's name beneath: as, to subscribe a covenant or contract. In law subscribe implies a written or printed signature at the end of a document. See sign, 2.

The Commons would . . . have freed the Clergy from subscribing those of the Thirty-nine Articles which related to discipline and Church government.

E. A. Abbott, Bacon, p. 16.

4. To attest by writing one's name beneath.

At last, after many Delatations and Demurs, the Archbishop yields to this also, and subscribes the Ordinance, and sets his Hand unto it.
Baker, Chronicles, p. 57.

This message was subscribed by all my chief tenants.
Swift, Story of the Injured Lady.

5. To promise to give or pay, by writing one's name under a written or printed agreement: as, each subscribed $10.—6. To resign; transfer by signing to another.

The king gone to-night? subscribed his power?
Shak., Lear, I. 2. 24.

7. To write down or characterize as.

Claudio undergoes my challenge; and either I must shortly hear from him, or I will subscribe him a coward.
Shak., Much Ado, v. 2. 59.

He who would take Orders must subscribe [himself] slave, and take an oath withall, which, unless he took with a conscience that would retch, he must either strait perjure, or split his faith.

Milton, Church-Government, II., Int.

II. intrans. 1. To promise a certain sum verbally, or by signing an agreement; specifically, to undertake to pay a definite amount, in a manner or on conditions agreed upon, for a special purpose: as, to subscribe for a newspaper or for a book (which may be delivered in instalments); to subscribe to a series of entertainments; to subscribe for railway stock; also, to contribute money to any enterprise, benevolent object, etc. In law the word implies that the agreement is made in writing.

This prints my letters, that expects a bribe,
And others roar aloud, "Subscribe, subscribe!"
Pope, Prolog. to Satires, I. 114.

"Yes, I paid it, every farthing," replied Squeers, who seemed to know the man he had to deal with too well to suppose that any blinking of the question would induce him to subscribe towards the expenses.

Dickens, Nicholas Nickleby, xxiv.

Mrs. H., who, being no great reader, contented herself with subscribing to the Book Club.

Bulwer, My Novel, I. 12.

2. To give consent; assent as if by signing one's name.

We will all sub-scribe to thy advice.
Shak., Tit. And., IV. 2. 120.

So spake, so wish'd, much-humbled Eve; but fate Subscribed not.
Milton, P. L., XI. 182.

The foundations of religion are already established, and the principles of salvation subscribed unto by all.
Sir T. Browne, Religio Medici, II. 3.

The conclusion of the poem is more particular than I would choose publicly to subscribe to.
Walpole, Letters, II. 37.

3. To yield; submit.

For Hector in his blaze of wrath subscribes
To tender objects.
Shak., T. and C., IV. 5. 105.

Subscribing witness. See witness.

subscriber (sub-skri'hēr), n. [L. subscribere + -er.] One who subscribes, in any sense of that word.—The subscriber, the one writing or speaking. [Colloq.]

subscript (sub'skript), a. and n. [= F. souscrit = Sp. suscrito = It. sottoscritto, < L. subscriptus, pp. of subscribere, write underneath or below: see subscribere.] I. a. Written beneath: as, the Greek iota (i) subscript, so written since the twelfth century in the improper diphthongs ai (ai), yi (yi), oi (oi): opposed to adscript (as in 'A, 'Hr, 'Mr). This i had become mute by about 200 B. C., and was sometimes written (adscript), sometimes omitted.

II. n. Something written beneath. [Rare.] Be they postscripts or subscripts, your translators neither made them nor recommended them for Scripture.

Bentley, Free-Thinking, § 37.

subscription (sub-skrip'shon), n. [= F. souscription = Sp. suscripción = Pg. subscripção = It. sottoscrizione, < L. subscriptio(n-), anything written underneath, a signature, < subscribere, pp. subscriptus, write under, subscribe: see subscript.] 1. The act of subscribing, in any sense of that word.—2. That which is subscribed. (a) Anything underwritten.

The cross we had seen in the subscription.
Bacon, New Atlantis.

(b) The signature attached to a paper. In law subscription implies written signature at the end of a document. See signature, 3, sign, v. 2. (c) Consent, agreement, or attestation given by signature.

The more ye light of ye gospell grew, ye more ye urged their subscriptions to these corruptions.
Bradford, Plymouth Plantation, p. 5.

(d) A sum subscribed; the amount of sums subscribed: as, an individual subscription, or the whole subscription, to a fund.

3. A formal agreement to make a payment or payments. See subscribe, v. i., 1.

Where an advance has been made or an expense or liability incurred by others in consequence of a subscription, before notice given of a withdrawal, the subscription becomes obligatory, provided the advances were authorized by a reasonable dependence on the subscription.
Anderson, Dict. of Law, p. 90.

4. Submission; obedience.

I never gave you kingdom, call'd you children,
You owe me no subscription.
Shak., Lear, III. 2. 1.

[The word subscription is also used attributively, especially as noting what is done by means of the subscribing of money or by money subscribed.]

The singers were all English; and here we have the commencement of the subscription opera.

J. Ashton, Social Life in Reign of Queen Anne, II. 29.]

subscriptive (sub-skrip'tiv), a. [L. subscript + -ive.] Of or pertaining to a subscription or signature.

I made the messenger wait while I transcribed it. I have endeavoured to imitate the subscriptive part.
Richardson, Clarissa Harlowe, VIII. 78. (Davies.)

subscripture (sub'skrip'tūr), n. A subordinate or lesser scripture. Sir W. Jones, Dissertation-Relating to Histories, etc., of Asia, p. 401. [Rare.]

subsecive (sub'sē-siv), a. [L. subsecivus, more prop. subsecivus, transposed subsecivus, subsecivus, that is cut off and left remaining (in surveying lands), hence, left over, remaining (horre subsecivæ, tempora subsecivæ, odd hours, spare time), < subsecare, cut away, < sub, under, + secare, cut: see secant.] Remaining; extra; spare. [Rare.]

Surely at last those "subsecive hours" were at hand in which he might bring to a fruitful outcome the great labour of two-and-thirty years, his never-to-be-written "History of Portugal." Tonight's Rev., X. 8, XLII. 53.

subsection (sub'sek'shon), n. 1. A part or division of a section: as, a subsection of a learned society; also, the act of subdividing a section.—2. In bot. and zool., a division of a genus of less extent than a section, yet above and including one or more species.

subsecute (sub'sē-kūt), v. t. [L. subsecutus, pp. of subsequi, follow close after: see subsequent.] To follow so as to overtake; follow closely. Hall, Rich., III., an. 3.

subsecutive (sub-sek'ū-tiv), a. [L. subsecute + -iv.] Following in a train or succession. [Rare.] Imp. Dict.

subsegment (sub'seg'ment), n. In entom., same as subjoint.

subsellum (sub-sel'i-um), n.; pl. subsellæ (-i). [L. subsellum, bench, seat, < sub, under, + sella, a seat, a chair: see sell.] Same as miserere, 2.

subsemifusa (sub-sem-i-fū'sjū), n. In medieval musical notation, a thirty-second note.

subsemitone (sub'sem'i-tōn), n. In medieval music, same as leading note (which see, under leading), or subtonic.

subsensation (sub'sen-sā'shon), n. A moderate or lesser sensation; a sensation under or beside the obvious one. [Rare.]

As we followed the fortunes of the King, we should all the while have been haunted by a subsensation of how, in Rossetti's weird phrase, his death was "growing up from his birth."
The Academy, March 29, 1890, p. 218.

subsensible (sub-sen'si-bl), a. Deeper than the range of the senses; too profound for the senses to reach or grasp. Compare supersensible.

Through scientific insight we are enabled to enter and explain that subsensible world into which all natural phenomena strike their roots.
Tyndall.

subseptuple (sub-sep'tū-pl), a. Containing one of seven parts: having the ratio 1:7.

subsequence (sub'sē-kwens), n. [L. subsequenti + -ce.] The state or act of being subsequent or following.

By which faculty [reminiscence] we are . . . able to take notice of the order of precedence and subsequence in which they are past.

N. Grew, Cosmologia Sacra, II. 3. (Richardson.)

subsequency (sub'sē-kwēn-si), n. [As subsequence (see -cy).] Same as subsequence.

Why should we question the heliotrope's subsequency to the course of the sun?
Greenhill, Art of Embalming, p. 336.

subsequent (sub-sē-kwēnt), a. [L. subsequens (f.), ppr. of subsequi, follow close after, < sub, under, after, + sequi, follow: see sequent.] 1. Following in time; happening or existing at any later time, indefinitely: as, subsequent events; subsequent ages.

This article is introduced as subsequent to the treaty of Commerce.

If the [Cochares's] bronze group of the eagle carrying up the globe was a bold invention, and as such was duly appreciated, if we may judge from subsequent repetitions of it, it is a masterpiece. A. S. Murray, Greek Sculpture, II, 323.

2. Following in the order of place or succession; according: as, a subsequent clause in a treaty.

The subsequent words come on before the precedent clause. Bacon.

3. Following as a consequence: as, a subsequent illness after exposure.

On any physical hypothesis of the formation of the universe . . . there ought to have been diffused light first, and the aggregation of this about the central luminary as a subsequent process. Darwin, Nature and the Bible, p. 61.

Condition subsequent. See condition, § (a).

Subsequently (sub-sē-kwēnt-lī), adv. In a subsequent manner; at a later time.

Subserous (sub-sē-rus), a. 1. Somewhat serous or watery, as a secretion.—2. Situated or occurring beneath a serous membrane.—Subserous cystitis, cystitis affecting chiefly the subserous tissue of the urinary bladder.—Subserous tissue, the areolar connective tissue situated beneath a serous membrane.

Subserate (sub-sēr-āt), a. Somewhat or slightly serrate; serrulate.

Subserve (sub-sēr-v'), v. [L. subservire, serve, < sub, under, + servire, serve: see serve.] I. trans. 1. To serve in subordination; be subservient, useful, or instrumental to; promote: scarcely to be distinguished now from serve. It is a greater credit to know the ways of captivating nature, and making her subserve our purposes, than to have learned all the intricacies of policy. Glennville

2. To avail: used reflexively. [Rare.] I not merely subserve myself of them, but I employ them. Coleridge, Literary Remains, I, 373. (Hall)

II. intrans. To serve in an inferior capacity; be subservient or subordinate. Not made to rule, But to subserve where wisdom bears command. Milton, S. A. I, 177

Subservience (sub-sēr-vi-ēns), n. [L. subservientia + -ia.] Same as subserviency. There is an immediate and agile subservience of the spirit to the empire of the soul. Sir M. Hale, Orig. of Manhood.

Subserviency (sub-sēr-vi-ēn-si), n. [L. subservientia (see -ia).] 1. The state or character of being subservient, in any sense. A seventh property, therefore, to be wished for in a mode of punishment is that of subserviency to reformation, or reforming tendency. Bentham, Intro. to Morals and Legislation, xv, 15

2. Specifically, obsequiousness; truckling. There was a freedom in their subserviency, a nobleness in their very degradation. Macaulay, Milton

Subservient (sub-sēr-vi-ēnt), a. [L. subservientia (f.), ppr. of subservire, serve: see subserve.] 1. Useful as an instrument or means to promote an end or purpose; serviceable; being of service. There is a most accurate, learned, & critical Dictionary, . . . explaining . . . not only the terms of architecture, but of all those other arts that wait upon & are subservient to it. Leigh, To Mr. Place (Bookseller).

All things are made subservient to man. Bacon, Physical Tables, II, 1, Expl.

The state . . . is not a partnership in things subservient only to the gross animal existence of a temporary and perishable nature. Burke, Rev. in France.

2. Acting as a subordinate instrument; fitted or disposed to serve in an inferior capacity; subordinate; hence, of persons and conduct, truckling; obsequious. The foreigner came here poor, beggarly, cowering, and subservient, ready to doff his cap to the meanest native of the household. Scott, Ivanhoe, xxi

Members of Congress are but agents, . . . as much subservient, as much dependent, as willingly obedient, as any other . . . agents and servants. D. Webster, Speech, Pittsburgh, July, 1833.

Subserviently (sub-sēr-vi-ēnt-lī), adv. In a subservient manner; with subserviency.

Subsesquialterate (sub-ses-kwi-al-tēr-āt), a. Having the ratio 2:3.

Subsesquiterial (sub-ses-kwi-tēr-ān), a. Having the ratio 3:4.

Subsessile (sub-sēs-il), a. 1. In bot., not quite sessile; having a very short footstalk.—2. In zool., not quite sessile, as an insect's abdomen; subpetiolate. See cut under Polistes.

Subsextuple (sub-seks-tū-pl), a. Containing one part in six; having the ratio 1:6.

Subside (sub-sid'), v. t.; pret. and pp. subsided, ppr. subsiding. [L. subsidere, sit down, sink down, settle, remain, lie in wait, < sub, under, + sedere, sit: see sedent, sit.] 1. To sink or fall to the bottom; settle, as lees from a state of motion or agitation. This miscellany of bodies being determined to subsidence merely by their different specific gravities, all those which had the same gravity subsided at the same time. Woodward.

2. To cease from action, especially violent action or agitation; fall into a state of quiet; be calmed; become tranquil; abate: as, the storm subsided; passion subsides. In every page of Paterculus we read the swell and agitation of waters subsiding from a deluge. De Quincy, Style, iii.

By degrees Rip's awe and apprehension subsided. Irving, Sketch-Book, p. 65.

Old fears subside, old hatreds melt. Whittier, Channing.

3. To fall to a lower level; tend downward; sink; fall; contract after dilatation. Small an-ebullers, dilatible and contractible, capable to be inflated by the admission of air, and to subside at the expulsion of it. Boulton, Alliments, ii.

Now Love suspends his golden scales in air, Weighs the men's wits against the lady's hair; . . . At length the wits mount up, the hairs subside. Pope, R. of the L., v, 74.

The coast both south and north of Callao has subsided. Darwin, Geol. Observations, ii, 272.

4. To stop talking; be quiet; be less conspicuous: as, you had better subside. [Colloq.] = syn. 2. Abate, Subside, Intermit (see abate); retire, but

Subsidence (sub-si-dēns or sub-si-dēns), n. [L. subsidere + -ence.] The act or process of subsiding, in any sense of the verb subside. With poetry it was rather better. He delighted in the swell and subsidence of the rhythm, and the happily recurring rhythm. Hawthorne, Seven Gables, x.

In certain large areas where subsidence has probably been long in progress, the growth of the corals has been sufficient to keep the reefs up to the surface. Darwin, Coral Reefs, p. 104.

= syn. 1. Abate, Subside, Intermit (see abate); retire, but Subsidiary (sub-si-dēns or sub-si-dēns), n. [L. subsidium + -ary.] Subsidence. T. Burnet, Theory of the Earth.

Subsidiarily (sub-si-dēns-lī), adv. In a subsidiary manner. Am. Jour. Philol., IX, 147.

Subsidiary (sub-si-dēns-lī), a. and n. [= F. subsidium = Sp. Pg. subsidiario = It. sussidiario, < L. subsidium, belonging to a reserve, < subsidiū, a reserve, help, relief: see subsidy.] I. a. 1. Held ready to furnish assistance; held as a reserve.

There is no error more frequent in war than, after brisk preparations, to halt for subsidiary forces. Bacon, Fable of Perseus.

2. Lending assistance; aiding; assistant; furnishing help; ancillary. We must so far satisfy ourselves with the word of God as that we despise not those other subsidiary helps which God in his church hath afforded us. Doane, Sermons, ii.

No ritual is too much, provided it is subsidiary to the inner work of worship, and all ritual is too much unless it ministers to that purpose. Gladstone, Might of Right, p. 222.

3. Furnishing supplementary supplies: as, a subsidiary stream.—4. Relating or pertaining to a subsidy; founded on or connected with a subsidy or subsidies: as, a subsidiary treaty.—Subsidiary note. Same as accessory note (which see, under note).—Subsidiary quantity or symbol, in math., a quantity or symbol which is not essentially a part of a problem, but is introduced to help in the solution. The phrase is particularly applied to angles in trigonometrical investigations.—Subsidiary troops, troops of one nation hired by another for military service.

II. n.; pl. subsidiaries (-rīz). 1. One who or that which contributes aid or additional supplies: an auxiliary; an assistant. Hammond.—2. In music, a subordinate theme or subject, especially in an episode of an extended work.

Subsidize (sub-si-dīz), v. t.; pret. and pp. subsidized, ppr. subsidizing. [L. subsidium + -ize.] To furnish with a subsidy; purchase the assistance of by the payment of a subsidy; hence, in recent use, to secure the cooperation of by bribing; buy over. Also spelled subsidise.

He obtained a small supply of men from his Italian allies, and subsidized a corps of eight thousand Swiss, the strength of his infantry. Prescott, Ferd. and Is., II, 14.

Pietro could never save a dollar? Straight He must be subsidized at our expense. Browning, King and Book, I, 155.

Subsidy (sub-si-di), n.; pl. subsidies (-dīz). [= F. subsidium = Pr. subsidi = Sp. Pg. subsidio

= It. sussidio, help, aid, subsidy, < L. subsidium, troops stationed in reserve, auxiliary forces, help in battle, in gen. help, aid, relief, < subsidiere, sit down, settle, remain, lie in wait: see subside.] An aid in money; pecuniary aid.

Out of small earnings [he] managed to transmit to small comforts and subsidies to old parents living somewhere in Munster. Thackeray, Phillip, xvi.

Especially—(a) In Eng. hist., an aid or tax formerly granted by Parliament to the crown for the urgent occasions of the realm, and levied on every subject of ability according to the value of his lands or goods; a tax levied on a particular occasion.

That made us pay . . . one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy. Shak., 2 Hen. VI., iv, 7, 25.

Tunnage and poundage was granted for a year, and a new and complicated form of subsidy was voted. Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 334.

(b) A sum paid, often according to treaty, by one government to another, sometimes to secure its neutrality, but more frequently to meet the expenses of carrying on a war.

The continental allies of England were eager for her subsidies, and lukewarm as regarded operations against the common enemy.

Sir E. Creasy, Hist. Eng., I, xlii. (Latham)

(c) Any direct pecuniary aid furnished by the state to private industrial undertakings, or to eleemosynary institutions. Such aid includes bounties on exports, those paid to the owners of ships for running them, and donations of land or money to railroad, manufacturing, theatrical, and other enterprises.

A postal subsidy . . . is simply a payment made for the conveyance, under certain specified conditions as to time and speed, of postal matter.

H. Paucet, Free Trade and Protection (ed. 1881), p. 20.

It seems clear, therefore, that subsidies as a means of restoring American shipping cannot be made the policy of the United States.

D. A. Wells, Our Merchant Marine, p. 141.

= syn. Subsidy, Subvention. In the original and essential meaning of a government grant in aid of a commercial enterprise, these terms are substantially equivalent; but two circumstances lead to some difference in common usage.

(a) Such grants being rarely, if ever, made in England or the United States except in aid of the mercantile marine, the establishment of lines of transportation, or the like, subsidy is used more commonly than subvention in reference to such enterprises, while, such grants being frequent in France in aid of the drama and the press, etc., the word subvention is used more commonly than subsidy in application to enterprises connected with literature and the arts.

(b) Writers who oppose all such uses of public funds commonly prefer to characterize them as subsidies, while those who approve of them commonly prefer the term subvention.

Subsign (sub-sin'), v. t. [L. subsignare, pp. subsignatus, write beneath, subscribe, sign, < sub, under, + signare, set a mark upon, sign: see sign.] 1. To sign; sign under; write beneath; subscribe.

A letter of the Sophie, . . . subsigned with the hands both of the Sophie & his Secretary. Hakluyt's Voyages, I, 394.

2. To assign by signature to another. His (Philip III.'s) rents and customs [were] subsigned, for the most part, for money borrowed. Sir C. Cornwallis, quoted in Motley's Hist. Netherlands, IV, 250.

Subsignation (sub-sig-nā-shūn), n. [L. subsignatio (n-), a signature, < subsignare, sign: see subsign.] The act of writing the name or its equivalent under something for attestation; the name so written. [Obsolete or rare.]

The epistle with subsignation of the scribe and notary. Sheldon, Miracles of Antichrist (1610), p. 300. (Latham).

For a good while after the Conquest the usage of subsignation with crosses was sometimes retained. Madox, Formulare Anglicanum (ed. 1703), p. xxvii.

Subsimitious (sub-sim-i-us), a. Nearly simious or monkey-like: as, "a subsimitious absurdity," Scinburne. [Rare.]

Subsist (sub-sist'), v. [F. subsister = Sp. Pg. subsistir = It. sussistere, sossistere, < L. subsistere, take a stand or position, stand still, stop, stay, remain, continue, < sub, under, + sistere, cause to stand, place: see sist. Cf. consist, desist, exist, insist, persist.] I. intrans. 1. To remain; continue; abide; retain the existing state.

Firm we subsist, but possible to swerve. Milton, P. L., ix, 359.

It is a pity the same fashion don't subsist now. Walpole, Letters, II, 62.

2. To have continued existence; exist. Can the body Subsist, the soul departed? 'Tis as easy As I to live without you. Beau. and Fl., Custom of the Country, v, 4.

Those ideas which Plato sometimes contends to be substances, and to subsist alone by themselves. Cudworth, Intellectual System, p. 409.

These enthusiasts do not scruple to avow their opinion that a state can subsist without any religion better than with one. Burke, Rev. in France.

3. To be maintained; be supported; live.

Had it been our end lot to subsist on other men's charity.
J. Atterbury.

4. To inhere; have existence by means of something else.

Though the general natures of these qualities are sufficiently distant from one another, yet when they come to subsist in particulars, and to be clothed with several accidents, then the discernment is not so easy. South.

II. trans. 1. To keep in existence.

The old town [of Sellree] is thinly inhabited; the present city, which is a poor place, is to the west of it, and is chiefly subsisted by being a great thorough fare. Pucke, Description of the East, II. ii. 129.

2. To feed; maintain; support with provisions.

I will raise one thousand men, subsist them at my own expense, and march myself at their head for the relief of Boston. Washington, quoted in Adams's Works, II. 360.

subsistence (sub-sis'tens), n. [= F. subsistence = Sp. Pg. subsistencia = It. sussistenza, < L. subsistentia, subsistence, reality, ML. also stability, < L. subsistentia], ppr. of subsistere, continue, subsist: see subsistent.] 1. Real being; actual existence.

Their difference from the Pharisees was about the future reward, which being denied, they by consequence of that error fell into the rest, to deny the Resurrection, the subsistence spiritual, &c. Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 144.

2. Continuance; continued existence.

This Liberty of the Subject concerns himself and the subsistence of his own regal power in the first place. Milton, Eikonoklastes, xxvii.

Subsistence is perpetual existence.

Sieckenbury, Christian Psychol. (tr. by Gorman), p. 19.

3. That which exists or has real being.—4. The act or process of furnishing support to animal life, or that which is furnished; means of support; support; livelihood.

In China they speak of a Tree called Maguans, which affords not only good Drink, being pierced, but all Things also that belong to the subsistence of Man. Howell, Letters, II. 54.

Those of the Hottentots that live by the Dutch Town have their greatest subsistence from the Dutch, for there is one or more of them belonging to every house. Dampier, Voyages, I. 540.

5. The state of being subsistent; inherence in something else: as, the subsistence of qualities in bodies.—Subsistence department, a military staff department in the United States army, which has charge of the purchase or procurement of all provisions for the supply of the army. Its chief officer is the commissary-general of subsistence, with the rank of brigadier-general.—Subsistence diet, the lowest amount of food on which life can be supported in health.—Subsistence stores (milit.), the food-supplies procured and issued for the support of an army. The phrase also covers the grain, hay, straw, or other forage supplied for the sustenance and bedding of animals intended for slaughter in order to provide an army with fresh meat.—Syn. 4. Sustenance, etc. See living.

subsistency (sub-sis'ten-si), n. [As subsistence (see -cy).] Same as subsistence.

A great part of antiquity contented their hopes of subsistency with a transmigration of their souls.

Sir T. Browne.

We know as little how the union is dissolved that is the chain of these differing subsistencies that compound us, as how it first commenced. Glanville.

subsistent (sub-sis'tent), a. [= F. subsistent = Sp. Pg. subsistente = It. sussistente, < L. subsistentia], ppr. of subsistere, continue, subsist: see subsist.] 1. Continuing to exist; having existence; subsisting.

Such as deny there are spirits subsistent without bodies. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., i. 10.

2. Inherent.

These qualities are not subsistent in those bodies, but are operations of fancy begotten in something else. Bentley.

subsistential (sub-sis'ten'shal), a. Pertaining to subsistence; especially, in theol., pertaining to the divine subsistence or essence.

Having spoken of the effects of the attributes of God's essence as such, we must next speak of the effects of his three great attributes which some call subsistentia—that is, his omnipotency, understanding, and will.

Baxter, Divine Life, i. 7.

subsister (sub-sis'ter), n. [As subsist + -er.] One who subsists; specifically, one who is supported by others; a poor prisoner.

Like a subsister in a gown of ruggie rent on the left shoulder, to sit singing the counter-tenor by the cage in Southwark. Kind-Hart's Dream (1692). (Halliwell.)

subsizar (sub'si'zär), n. An under-sizar; a student of lower standing than a sizar. Also spelled subszier.

Friar Bacon's subszier is the greatest blockhead in all Oxford. Greene, Friar Bacon and Friar Bungay.

How Jackeys and subsziers press

And scramble for degrees.

Dr. Corbet, Ans. to A Certain Poem.

subsoil (sub'soil), n. The under-soil; the bed or stratum of earth or earthy matter which lies immediately under the surface soil, and which is less finely disintegrated and contains less organic matter than that. When, as is often the case, it is densely compacted, it becomes what is frequently called hard-pan. In agriculture a great deal depends on the character of the subsoil, more especially as to whether it does or does not permit water to pass through it.

Subsoil is the broken-up part of the rocks immediately under the soil. Its character of course is determined by that of the rock out of which it is formed by subaerial disintegration. A. Geikie, Encyc. Brit., x. 237.

subsoil-plov. See plov.

subsoil (sub'soil), v. t. [As subsoil, n.] In agri., to employ the subsoil-plov upon; plow up so as to cut into the subsoil.

The farmer drains, irrigates, or subsoils portions of it. J. S. Mill.

subsoiler (sub'soi-lär), n. [As subsoil + -er.] One who or that which subsoils; an implement or part of an implement used in subsoiling. The Engineer, LXX. 472.

subsolar (sub-sö-lär), a. [As L. sub, under, + sol, the sun: see solar.] Being under the sun; terrestrial; specifically, being between the tropics. Fitzroy, Weather Book, p. 71.

subsolar (sub'sö-lär), a. Same as subsolar.

The causes and effects of all Things done upon this subsolar ball.

A. Drome, Paraphrase on Eccles., I.

subsolid (sub-söl'id), n. A solid incompletely inclosed.

subspatulate (sub-spat'ü-lät), a. Nearly or somewhat spatulate.

subspecies (sub'spë'shüz), n.; pl. subspecies. [As NL. subspecies, < L. sub, under, + species, species.] In zool. and bot., a variety of a species; a climatic or geographical race recognizably different from another, yet not specifically distinguished; a conspecies. The nearest synonym is race. (See race, n., 5 (a) (b).) Subspecies is a stronger and stricter word than variety, though nearly synonymous with the latter in its biological sense; it means decidedly more than strain, sport, or breed in like senses. The interpretation of subspecies and their actual handling in zoological and botanical taxonomy have been much mooted. Such forms are commonly regarded as nascent or incipient species (see species, 5) which have acquired subspecific characters under varying conditions of environment, and whose specific invalidity is determinable by the fact of their intergradation. See intergrade, v. i.

subspecific (sub-spë-sif'ik), a. Of the nature of a subspecies; not quite specific; conspecific. subspecifically (sub-spë-sif'ik-lä), adv. As a subspecies. Fisheries of U. S., V. ii. 819.

subsplenoidal (sub-sfë-noi'däl), a. Situated beneath or on the under side of the splenoid. subsphere (sub'sfër), n. A solid imperfectly or approximately spherical.

subspherical (sub-sfër'i-käl), a. Imperfectly spherical; of a form approaching that of a sphere.

subspherically (sub-sfër'i-käl-i), adv. In the form of a subsphere. Quart. Jour. Geol. Soc., XLIV. 150.

subspinous (sub-spi'nus), a. 1. Somewhat spinous or prickly; like a spine to some extent; as, subspinous hairs in the pelage of a mammal.

—2. Situated under (ventrad of) the spinal column; hypaxial with reference to the backbone; subvertebral.—3. Situated or occurring below, beneath, or on the under side of a spine, as (1) of a vertebra, or (2) of the scapula; infraspinal: as, a subspinous muscle (the infraspinalis).—Subspinous dislocation of the humerus, a dislocation in which the head of the humerus rests beneath the spine of the scapula.—Subspinous fossa, the fossa below the spine of the scapula; the infraspinalis fossa.

subspiral (sub-spi'äl), a. Somewhat spiral; especially, in conch., noting the opercula of some shells which are faintly or indistinctly marked on one side with a spiral line, or this line itself. See cut under operculum.

subsplenial (sub-splë'ni-äl), a. Situated under the splenium of the corpus callosum; noting certain cerebral gyres.

subst. An abbreviation of (a) substantive and (b) substitute.

substage (sub'stäij), n. An attachment to the compound microscope, placed beneath the ordinary stage, and used to support the achromatic condenser, the polarizing prism, etc. It is usually arranged with a rack-and-pinion movement, centering screws, etc., by which the position may be adjusted; and in the scanning substage there is an arc-shaped arm upon which the support holding the condenser can be moved, so as to give very oblique illumination when desired.

substalagmite (sub-stä-lag'mit), n. A name used by Nelson for the compact deposit of carbonate of lime, without crystalline structure, filling crevices in the soft calcareous sandstone of Bermuda. Similar deposits when crystalline are called by him stalagmite. Trans. Geol. Soc. London, 1849, V. 106.

substalagmitic (sub-stäl-ng-mit'ik), a. [As stalagmite + -ic.] Relating to or consisting of substalagmite. Darwin, Geol. Observations, I. vii. 162.

substance (sub'stans), n. [As ME. substanc, < OF. substance, < OF. substancia, < Sp. substancia, < Pg. substancia; = It. sostanza, < L. substantia, being, essence, material, < substan (t-s), ppr. of substare, stand under or among, be present, hold out. sub, under, + stare, stand: see stand.] 1. That which exists by itself, and in which accident inheres; that which receives modifications, and is not itself a mode; that which corresponds, in the reality of things, to the subject in logic. Aristotle and Kant agree in making the conception of substance essentially the same as that of a subject of predication. But it is difficult to find a property of all substances may be recognized; for the above definition seems to afford none. Many philosophers hold that what ever is perdurable is substance. This, however, would include mechanical energy. Indeed, since every physical law can be stated in the form of an equation, and that that equation must have a constant term, it follows that every absolute uniformity of nature must consist in the perdurability of some quantity. Aristotle makes substances proper, called first substances, to be things individual; but this comports with few philosophical systems. Thus, in the medieval development of Aristotelianism, scientific propositions were regarded as universal statements concerning nature, so that the true subjects, or substances, were universal. Moreover, to make individuality the criterion of substance would seem to make space, as the source of individuality, the only first substance. At any rate, under that view, spatial positions would be substances in a preeminent sense. Others, remarking that the parts of space are not distinct in themselves, apart from their relations to material things, make self-existence, or the being distinct from all other things, not by virtue of modifications or characters, but by the thing's own nature, or arbitrary extrusion of itself, to be the chief mark of a substance, which would thus be most simply defined as an independent entity. Substance and essence are nearly synonymous, except that the latter cannot appropriately be used to designate an individual and lifeless thing.

They add . . . that as he (Christ) coupled the substance of his flesh and the substance of bread together, so we together should receive both. Hooker, Eccles. Polity, v. 67.

Since the substance of your perfect self

Is else devoted, I am but a shadow;

And to your shadow will I make true love.

Shak., T. G. of V., iv. 2. 121

A substance is a being subsisting of itself and subject to accidents. To subsist by itself is nothing else than not to be in anything as in a subject; and it agrees to all substances, even to God, but to be subject to accidents only to finite; for God is not subject to accidents. Substance is either first or second. The first is a singular substance, or that which is not said of a subject, as Alexander, Bucephalus. The second is that which is said of a subject, as man, horse. For man is said of Alexander and Philip, and horse of Bucephalus and Cyllarus.

Burgersdicius, tr. by a Gentleman, I. 4.

I confess there is another idea which would be of general use for mankind to have, as it is of general talk as if they had it; and that is the idea of substance, which we neither have, nor can have, by sensation or reflection. If nature took care to provide us any ideas, we might well expect they should be such as by our own faculties we cannot procure to ourselves: but we see on the contrary that since by those ways whereby our ideas are brought into our minds this is not, we have no such clear idea at all, and therefore signify nothing by the word substance but only an uncertain supposition of we know not what, i. e., of something whereof we have no particular distinct positive idea, which we take to be the substratum, or support, of those ideas we do know. . . . Had the poor Indian philosopher (who imagined that the earth also wanted something to bear it up) but thought of this word substance, he needed not to have been at the trouble to find an elephant to support it, and a tortoise to support his elephant: the word substance would have done it effectually. And he that inquired might have taken it for as good an answer from an Indian philosopher, that substance, without knowing what it is, is that which supports the earth, as we take it for a sufficient answer and good doctrine from our European philosophers that substance, without knowing what it is, is that which supports accidents. So that of substance we have no idea of what it is, but only a confused obscure one of what it does.

Locke, Human Understanding, I. 4, § 18, and II. 13, § 19.

Substance, if we leave out the sensuous condition of permanence, would mean nothing but a something that may be conceived as a subject, without being the predicate of anything else.

Kant, Critique of Pure Reason, tr. by Muller, II. 130.

2. The real or essential part; the essence.

And wel I woot the substance is in me,

If any thing shal wel reported be.

Chaucer, Prolog. to Nun's Priest's Tale, l. 37.

Miserable bigots, . . . who hate sects and parties different from their own more than they love the substance of religion. Burke, Rev. in France.

At the close of the [seventeenth] century, . . . the sovereign retained the shadow of that authority of which the Tudors had held the substance. Macaulay, Sir William Temple.

All the forms are fugitive,

But the substances survive.

Emerson, Woodnotes, II.

3. In theol., the divine being or essence, common to the three persons of the Trinity.

substance

One Lord Jesus Christ, . . . being of one substance with the Father. Nicene Creed.
4t. The character of being a substance, in sense 1; substantiality.

Thou ground of our substance, Continue on us thy pitous eye. Chaucer, A. B. C., l. 57.

f. The meaning expressed by any speech or writing, or the purport of any action, as contrasted with the mode of expression or performance.

Now have I here rehearsal in substance of my lynes, as shortly as I myght.
With their power and all their boole puyssance. Generydes (L. T. S.), l. 1963.

Unto your grace do I in chief address
The substance of my speech. Shak., 2 Hen. IV., iv. 1. 32.

It seems swearing of Fealty was with the Scots but a ceremony without Substance, as good as nothing. Baker, Chronicles, p. 97.

6. Substantiation; that which establishes or gives firm support.

Faith is the substance (margin, ground or confidence) of our assurance (margin, giving substance to), R. V. of things hoped for. Heb. xi. 1.

7. Any particular kind of corporeal matter; stuff; material; part; body: specifically, a chemical species.

She there she stands,
If aught within that little seeming substance
May fitly like your grace. Shak., L. ar., l. 1. 201.

All of one nature, of one substance bred. Shak., 1 Hen. IV., l. 1. 11.

Books are as meats and viands are, some of good, some of evil substance. Milton, Areopagitica, p. 16.

[Chemistry] tells us that everything which exists here is really made up of one or more of only sixty-three different things; that the whole of the animal kingdom, the vegetable kingdom, the mineral kingdom, is made up of only sixty-three different substances. J. N. Lockyer, Spect. Anal., p. 116.

8. Wealth; means; good estate: as, a man of substance.

His substance also was seven thousand sheep, and three thousand camels. Joh. i. . .

I did not think there had been a merchant Lived in Italy of half your substance. Webster, Devil's Law-Case, l. 1.

9t. Importance.

And for as much as hit is don me to understande that there is a greet strangeness betwix my right trusty friend John Radcliffe and you, withoute any matter or cause of substance, as I am learned. Paston Letters, III. 426.

10t. The main part; the majority.

Finally, what wisht that it with theyde,
It was for ought — it moste ben, and shoulde
For substance of the parliament it wolde. Chaucer, Troilus, v. 217.

Colloid substance. See colloid. — Cortical substance of the kidney, the outer part of the kidney-substance, which contains the glomeruli. — Cortical substance of the teeth, the cementum of the teeth. — First substance, an individual thing. — Intervertebral substance. See intervertebral. — Nervous substance. See nervous. — Second substance, a natural class. See second. — Substance of Rolando. Same as substantia nigra. See Rolando. — Syn. 2. With, gist, soul.

substant (sub'stans), v. t. [< substant, n.] To furnish with substance or property; enrich. Chapman, Odyssey, iv.

substanceless (sub'stans-les), a. [< substant + -less.] Having no substance; unsubstantial. Coleridge, Human Life.

substant (sub'stant), a. [< L. substant- (s), ppr. of substare, be present, hold out: see substantance.] Constituting substance. [Rare.]

Its [a glacier's] substant ice curls freely, molds, and breaks itself like water. The Century, XXVII. 116.

substantia (sub-stan'shi-), n. [L.: see substantance.] Substance: used chiefly in a few anatomical phrases. — Substantia cinerea gelatinosa. Same as substantia gelatinosa Rolandi. — Substantia eburnea, ossea, vitrea. See tooth. — Substantia feruginea, a group of pigmented ganglion-cells on either side of the middle line (just below the surface of the floor) of the anterior part of the fourth ventricle. Seen from the surface, it is the locus ceruleus. — Substantia gelatinosa centralis, the neuroglia which backs the layer of columnar epithelial cells lining the central canal of the spinal cord. — Substantia gelatinosa posterior or Rolandi, a part of the caput of the posterior cornu of gray matter of the spinal cord, near the tip of that cornu, having a peculiar semitransparent appearance. Also called substantia gelatinosa Rolandi. — Substantia nigra, a region, marked by dark pigmented cells, separating the crus from the tegmentum of the crus cerebri. Also called substantia nigra Sommeringii, stratum nigrum, stratum intermedium, and locus niger. — Substantia reticularis. Same as reticular formation (which see, under reticular). — Substantia spongiosa, that part of the gray matter of the spinal cord which is not substantia gelatinosa centralis or posterior.

substantial (sub-stan'shal), a. and n. [< ME. substantial, < OF. substantiel, F. substantiel = Sp. Pg. substancial = It. sostanziale, < L. sub- stantialis, of or pertaining to the substance, essential, < substantia, substance, material: see substance.] I. a. 1. Pertaining to or of the nature of substance; being a substance; real; actually existing; true; actual; not seeming or imaginary; not illusive.

6031

If this Atheist would have his chance or fortune to be a real and substantial agent, as the vulgar seem to have commonly apprehended, . . . he is . . . more stupid and more supinely ignorant than those vulgar. Bentley, Eight Boyle Lectures, v.

All this is but a dream,
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial. Shak., R. and J., ii. 2. 141.

The sun appears to be flat as a plate of silver . . . the moon appears to be as big as the sun, and the rainbow appears to be a large substantial arch in the sky; all which are in reality gross falsehoods. Watts, Logic, Int.

2. Having essential value; genuine; sound; sterling.

The matter of the point controverted is great, but it is driven to an over-great subtilty and obscurity, so that it becometh a thing rather ingenious than substantial. Bacon, Unity in Religion (ed. 1887).

This he looks upon to be sound learning and substantial criticism. Alderson, Tatler, No. 158.

3. Having firm or good material; strong; stout; solid: as, substantial cloth.

Most ponderous and substantial things.
Shak., M. for M., iii. 2. 290.

There are by the direction of the Lawgiver, certain good and substantial steps placed even through the very midst of this rough [of Despond]. Huyman, Pilgrim's Progress, l.

4. Possessed of considerable substance, goods, or estate; moderately wealthy; well-to-do.

She has, amongst others, two substantial suitors. Middleton, The Widow, l. 2.

Pray take all the care you can to inquire into the value, and set it at the best rate to substantial people. Scott, To Dr. Sheridan, June 29, 1725.

5. Real or true in the main or for the most part: as, substantial success.

Substantial agreement between all as to the points discussed. The Century, XXXIX. 563.

6. Of considerable amount: as, a substantial gift; substantial profit — 7t. Capable of being substantiated or proved.

It is substantial;
For that disenai being on him which I wore,
It will be thought I which he calls the Pandar,
Did hit the Duke and fled away in his apparel, Leaving him to be disgraced to avoid swift pursuit. Fourneau, Revenger's Tragedy, iv. 2.

8. Vital; important.

Christ's church is an unerring in any substantial point that God would have us bounden to believe. Sir T. More, Works, p. 163.

9. In law, pertaining to or involving the merits or essential right, in contradistinction to questions of form or manner. Thus, a substantial performance of a contract is one which fulfills reasonably well all the material and essential stipulations, though it may be deficient in respect of punctuality or departure from minor details of manner for which moderate deductions from the price would compensate. So, in litigation, the right of trial by jury is a substantial right, but the order in which evidence shall be adduced is not.

10. Pertaining to the substance or tissue of any part or organ.

Transition from substantial to membranous parietes. Buck's Handbook of Med. Science, VIII. 120.

Substantial being, division, form, mode, etc. See the nouns.

II. n. 1. That which has a real existence; that which has substance. — 2. That which has real practical value.

A large and well filled basket . . . contained substantial and delicious. . . especially helpful. New York Evangelist, Dec. 2, 1880.

3. An essential part.

Although a custom introduced against the substantial of an appeal be not valid, as that it should not be appealed to a superior but to an inferior judge, yet a custom may be introduced against the accidentals of an appeal. Ayliffe, Parergon.

substantialia (sub-stan'shi-ā'li-), n. pl. [NL., nout. pl. of L. substantialis: see substantial.] In Scots law, those parts of a deed which are essential to its validity as a formal instrument.

substantialism (sub-stan'shal-izm), n. The doctrine that behind phenomena there are substantial realities, or real substances, whether mental or corporeal.

substantialist (sub-stan'shal-ist), n. One who adheres to the doctrine of substantialism.

Philosophers, as they affirm or deny the authority of consciousness in guaranteeing a substratum or substance to the manifestations of the ego and non-ego, are divided into realists or substantialists and into nihilists or non-substantialists. Sir W. Hamilton, Metaph., xvi.

substantiality (sub-stan'shi-ā'li-ti), n. [< F. substantialité = It. sostanzialità, < L. substan-

substantive

tialita(-t-), the quality of being substantial or essential, < substantialis, substantial: see substantial.] 1. The character of being substantial, in any sense; the having of the function of a substance in upholding accidents.

The soul is a stranger to such gross substantiality. Glanville, Vanity of Dogmatizing, iv.

Many of the lower animals build themselves dwellings that excel in substantiality . . . the huts or hovels of men. Lindsay, Mind in the Lower Animals, l. 113. (Encyc. Diet.)

We understand his lordship very well; he means a particular providence and a future state, the moral attributes of the Deity and the substantiality of the soul. Warburton, Bulingbroke's Philosophy, iii.

2. Substance; essence.

I shall know whether all souls came from Adam's own substantiality, and whether there be more substance in all than in that one. Baxter, Dying Thoughts.

substantialize (sub-stan'shal-iz), v. t.; pret. and ppr. substantialized, ppr. substantializing. [< substantia + -ize.] To render substantial; give reality to.

I liked well to see that strange life, which even the stout, dead-in-cornest little Bohemian musicians, piping in the centre of the Piazza, could not altogether substantialize. Howells, Venetian Life, iv.

substantially (sub-stan'shal-i), adv. 1. In the manner of a substance; with reality of existence; truly; really; effectually.

In him all his Father shone Substantially express'd. Milton, P. L., iii. 140.

Be substantially great in thyself, and more than thou appearest unto others. Sir T. Browne, Christ. Mor., l. 19.

2. In a substantial manner; strongly; solidly.

To know . . . what good laws are wanting, and how to frame them substantially, that good Men may enjoy the freedom which they merit. Milton, Hist. Eng., iii.

Pleasing myself in my own house and manner of living more than ever I did, by seeing how much better and more substantially I live than others do. Peggs, Diary, l. 421.

3. In substance; in the main; essentially; by including the material or essential part: as, the two arguments are substantially the same.

A king with a life revenue and an unchecked power of exacting money from the rich is substantially an absolute sovereign. Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 373.

substantialness (sub-stan'shal-nes), n. The state or quality of being substantial, in any sense.

substantiate (sub-stan'shi-āt), v. t.; pret. and ppr. substantiated, ppr. substantiating. [< ML. substantiatus, ppr. of substantiare (> It. sostanziare, sostanzicare = Sp. Pg. substanciar), < L. substantia, substance: see substance.] 1. To make to exist; make real or actual.

The accidental of any act is said to be whatever advances to the act itself already substantiated. Ayliffe, Parergon.

2. To establish by proof or competent evidence; verify; make good: as, to substantiate a charge or an allegation; to substantiate a declaration.

Observation is in turn wanted to direct and substantiate the course of experiment. Coleridge.

3. To present as having substance; body forth.

Every man feels for himself, and knows how he is affected by particular qualities in the persons he admires, the impressions of which are too minute and delicate to be substantiated in language. Boswell, Johnson, l. 129.

As many thoughts incessantly substantiate themselves, we shall by and by stand in a new world of our own creation. Emerson, Friendship.

substantiation (sub-stan'shi-ā-shon), n. [< substantiate + -ion.] The act of substantiating or giving substance to anything; the act of proving; evidence; proof.

This substantiation of shadows.
Lorell, Study Windows, p. 382.

The fact as claimed will find lasting substantiation. The American, VIII. 370.

substantival (sub-stan-ti-vl or sub-stan-ti-vl), a. [< LL. substantivus, substantival: see substance.] 1. Pertaining to or having the character of a substantive.

There remain several substantival and verbal formations for which a satisfactory explanation was not reached. Amer. Jour. Philol., VI. 450.

2. Independent or self-dependent.

The real is individual, self-existent, substantival. Mind, IX. 123.

substantive (sub'stan-tiv), a. and n. [I. a. = F. substantif = Sp. Pg. sustantivo = It. sostantivo, < LL. substantivus, self-existent, substantive (substantivum verbum, the substantive verb), MJ., also having substance, substantial, < L. substantia, substance, reality: see substance.] II. n. = F. substantif = Sp. Pg. sustantivo = It. sostantivo = D. substantief = G. Sw. Dan. substantiv, < NL. substantivum, sc. nomen, a substantive name, a noun substantive (a noun), i. e. the name of a thing, as distinguished from

L. adjectivum, sc. nomen, an adjective name, a noun adjective (an adjective), the name of an attribute.] I. a. 1. Betokening or expressing existence: as, the substantive verb.—2. Depending on itself; independent; self-dependent; hence, individual.

He considered how sufficient and substantive this land was to maintain itself, without any aid of the foreigner.

Bacon.

Many . . . thought it a pity that so substantive and rare a creature should . . . be only known . . . as a wife and mother.

George Eliot, Middlemarch, Finale.

3. Substantial; solid; enduring; firm; permanent; real.

The trait which is truly most worthy of note in the politics of Hæmeric Greece is . . . the substantive weight and influence which belonged to speech as an instrument of government.

Gladstone, Studies on Homer (ed. 1858), III. 102.

As to . . . the substantive value of historical training, opinions will still differ.

Stubbs, Medieval and Modern Hist., p. 35.

All this shows that he [Racine] had already acquired some repute as a promising novice in letters, though he had as yet done nothing substantive. Encyc. Brit., XX. 204.

4. Independent; not to be inferred from something else, but itself explicitly and formally expressed.

She [Elizabeth] then, by a substantive enactment, declaring her governorship of the Church.

Nineteenth Century, XXVI. 691.

The decisions of the chair . . . could be brought before the politics of Hæmeric Greece is . . . the substantive motion, liable to amendment and after due notice.

Fortnightly Rev., N. S., XXXIX. 265.

5. In gram., of the nature of a noun, usable as subject or object of a verb and in other noun constructions: as, a substantive word; a substantive pronoun; a substantive clause.—Substantive colors, colors which, in the process of dyeing, become fixed or permanent without the intervention of other substances, in distinction from adjective colors, which require the aid of mordants to fix them.—Substantive law. See law.—Substantive verb, the verb to be.

II. n. 1. In gram., a noun; a part of speech that can be used as subject or as object of a verb, be governed by a preposition, or the like. The term noun, in older usage, included both the "noun substantive" and the "noun adjective": it is now much more common to call the two respectively the substantive, or the noun simply, and the adjective. See noun. Abbreviated s., subst.

2†. An independent thing or person.

Every thing is a total or substantive in itself.

Bacon, Advancement of Learning, ii.

K. John, being a Substantive of himself, hath a Device in his Head to make his Subjects as willing to give him Money as he was to have it.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 70.

substantive (sub'stan-tiv), v. t.; pret. and pp. substantived, ppr. substantiving. [< substantive, n.] To convert into or use as a substantive. [Rare.]

Wherefore we see that the word δαμόνιον, as to its grammatical form, is not a diminutive, as some have conceived, but an adjective *substantiv*d, as well as το θεϊον is.

Cudworth, Intellectual System, p. 264.

substantively (sub'stan-tiv-li), adv. 1. In a substantive manner; in substance; essentially: as, a thing may be apparently one thing and substantively another.—2. In gram., as a substantive or noun: as, an adjective or a pronoun used substantively.

substantiveness (sub'stan-tiv-nos), n. The state of being substantive. J. H. Newman, Development of Christ. Doct., i. § 1. [Rare.] substantivize (sub'stan-tiv-iz), v. t.; pret. and pp. substantivized, ppr. substantivizing. [< substantive + -ize.] To make a substantive of; use as a substantive.

Perhaps we have here the forerunners of the substantivized être, pouvoir, vouloir, savoir, etc.

Amer. Jour. Philol., VIII. 101.

substation (sub'stā'shən), n. A subordinate station: as, a police substation.

substernal (sub-stēr-nal), a. Situated beneath the sternum; lying under the breast-bone.

substile, n. See substyle.

substitute (sub'sti-tūt), v. t.; pret. and pp. substituted, ppr. substituting. [< L. substitutus, pp. of substituere (> It. sostituire = Sp. sustituir = Pg. substituir = F. substituer), place under or next to, put instead of, substitute, < sub, under, + statuere, set up, station, cause to stand: see statute. Cf. constitute, institute.] 1. To put in the place of another; put in exchange.

For real wit he is obliged to substitute vivacity.

Goldsmith, The Bee, No. 1.

2†. To appoint; invest with delegated authority.

But who is substituted 'gainst the French I have no certain notice.

Shak., 2 Hen. IV., i. 3. 84.

Their request being effected, he substituted Mr. Scriven his dear friend in the Presidency.

Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, I. 180.

Substituted service. See service.

substitute (sub'sti-tūt), a. and n. [< F. substitut = Fr. substituit = Sp. Pg. substituto = It. sostituto (= D. substituit = G. Sw. Dan. substituit, n.), < L. substitutus, pp. of substituere, substitute: see substitute, v.] I. a. Put in the place or performing the functions of another; substituted.

It may well happen that this pope may be deposed, & another substitute in his room.

Sir T. More, Works, p. 1427.

II. n. 1. A person put in the place of another; one acting for or in the room of another; theat., an understudy; specifically (milit.), one who for a consideration serves in an army or navy in the place of a conscript; also, a thing serving the purpose of another.

That controlled self-consciousness of manner which is the expensive substitute for simplicity.

George Eliot, Middlemarch, xlii.

2. In calico-printing, a solution of phosphate of soda and phosphate of lime with a little glue or other form of gelatin, used as a substitute for cow-dung.—Substitutes in an entail, in law, those heirs who are called to the succession on the failure of others.—Syn. 1. Proxy, alternate.

substitution (sub'stī-tū'shən), n. [< F. substitution = Sp. sustitucion = Pg. substituição = It. sostituzione, < L. substitutio(n-), a putting in place of another, substitution, < substituere, pp. substitutus, substitute: see substitute.] 1. The act of substituting, or putting (one person or thing) in the place of another; also, the state or fact of being substituted.

We can perceive, from the records of the Hellenic and Latin city communities, that there, and probably over a great part of the world, the substitution of common territory for common race as the basis of national reunion was slow.

Maine, Early Hist. of Institutions, p. 75.

2. The office of a substitute; delegated authority. [Rare.]

He did believe

He was indeed the duke; out o' the substitution,

And executing the outward face of royalty,

With all prerogative. Shak., Tempest, i. 2. 103.

3. In gram., the use of one word for another; syllepsis.—4. In Rom. law, the effect of appointing a person to be heir, in case the heir first nominated would not or could not be heir. This was called vulgar substitution. Pupillary substitution existed where, after instituting his child as heir, the testator directed that, if after the child should have become heir it should die before attaining puberty, another be substituted in its place. This was originally allowed only for children under age in the power of the testator, but was afterward extended to children who for any reason could not make a valid will.

5. In French law, a disposition of property whereby the person receiving it, who is called the institute (le grévé), is charged either at his death or at some other time to deliver it over to another person called the substitute (l'appelé).

—6. In chem., the replacing of one or more elements or radicals in a compound by other elements or radicals. Thus, by bringing water and potassium together, potassium (K) is substituted for a hydrogen atom in water (H<sub>2</sub>O), yielding KOH, or caustic potash. By further action the other hydrogen atom may be replaced, yielding potassium oxide (K<sub>2</sub>O). Substitution is the principal method employed in examining the chemical structure of organic bodies. Also called metalepsy.

No generalization has, perhaps, so extensively contributed to the progress made by organic chemistry during the last fifteen years as the doctrine of substitution.

E. Frankland, Exper. in Chem., p. 210.

7. In alg.: (a) The act of replacing a quantity by another equal to it; also, in the language of some algebraists, the replacement of a set of variables by another set connected with the first by a system of equations equal in number to the number of variables in each set. See transformation (which is the better term). (b) The operation of changing the order of a finite number of objects, generally letters, that are in a row, the change following a rule according to which the object in each place is carried to some definite place in the row, this operation being regarded as itself a subject of algebraical operations. For example, supposing we were to start with the row a, b, c, d, e, a substitution might consist in carrying us to the row b, c, a, e, d. Denoting this substitution by S, the repetition of it, which would be denoted by S<sup>2</sup>, would carry us to c, a, b, d, e. If T denote the substitution of c, d, e, b, a for a, b, c, d, e, then TS would convert the last row into d, e, a, c, b, while ST would convert it into d, e, c, a, b. One way of denoting a substitution upon which the terminology of the theory refers is to write a row upon which the substitution could operate, with the resulting row above it. These two rows are called the terms of the substitution, the upper one the numerator, the lower the denominator of the substitution. The objects constituting the rows are called the letters of the substitution.—Associate substitution, one of two substitutions interchangeable with the same substitution.—Biid substitution. See bifid.—Circular factors of a substitution, circular substitutions whose product constitutes the substitution spoken of, it being understood that no two of these affect the positions of the same letters.—Circular substitution, a substitution whose successive powers carry the letters which it displaces round in one cycle.—Cremona substitution, a substitution of a Cremona transformation, especially of a quadratic transformation.—Derivate substitution, a substitution whose inverse multiplied by another substitution, and then this product by the derivate substitution itself, makes a substitution the derivate of the other substitution.—Derivate of a substitution, the product of three substitutions, of which the middle one is the substitution spoken of, while the other two are its inverse substitutions.—Determinant of a linear substitution. See determinant.—Doctrine of substitution, in theol., the doctrine that Christ suffered vicariously, as a substitute for the sinner.—Elementary substitution, a substitution into which only the elements 0, + 1, — 1 enter.—Identical substitution, a substitution which leaves the order of all the letters unchanged.—Imprimitive substitution, a substitution not primitive.—Index of a system of conjugate substitutions, the quotient of the number of permutations of the letters by the order of the system.—Interchangeable substitutions, two substitutions which give the same product in whichever order they are multiplied—that is, whichever is taken first in forming the product.—Inverse substitutions, two substitutions whose product is an identical substitution.—Isomorphous substitution group, one of two groups of substitutions such that every substitution of the one corresponds to a single substitution of the other, and every product of two substitutions to a product of analogous substitutions.—Linear substitution. (a) A circular substitution between a variable, a linear function of it, and the successive iterations of that function. (b) A linear transformation.—Order of a substitution, that power of a substitution which is an identical substitution.—Order of a system of conjugate substitutions, the number of substitutions belonging to the system.—Orthogonal substitution. See orthogonal.—Permutable substitutions, interchangeable substitutions.—Power of a substitution, the operation which consists in the repetition of the substitution spoken of as many times as the exponent of the power indicates.—Primitive substitution, a substitution whose order is a prime number or a power of a prime number.—Product of two substitutions, the result of performing two substitutions successively upon one row.—Rational substitution, a circular substitution between successive iterations of a rational function, such as  $x_{m+1} = (ax_m + b) / (cx_m + d)$ .—Reduced substitution, a substitution represented by an integral algebraic function having 1 for the coefficient of the highest power of the variable, and 0 for the coefficient of the next highest power and for the absolute term.—Regular substitution, a substitution whose circular factors are all of the same order.—Service by substitution. See substituted service, under service.—Similar substitutions, two substitutions which have the same number of circular factors and the same number of letters in the cycles.—Substitution product, a chemical compound prepared by substituting an element or radical for some member of a complex molecule without altering the rest of the molecule.—System of conjugate substitutions, a group of substitutions—that is to say, such a collection of substitutions that every product of substitutions belonging to it is itself a substitution of the same collection.—Term of a substitution, one of the two permutations whose relation constitutes the substitution.

substitutional (sub'stī-tū'shən-al), a. [< substitution + -al.] Pertaining to or implying substitution; supplying, or capable of supplying, the place of another. Imp. Dict.

substitutionally (sub'stī-tū'shən-al-i), adv. In a substitutional manner; by way of substitution. Eccles. Rev.

substitutionary (sub'stī-tū'shən-ā-ri), a. [< substitution + -ary.] Relating to or making substitution; substitutional.

The mediation of Christ in what may . . . be called his substitutionary relation to men. Prog. Orthodoxy, p. 52.

substitutive (sub'stī-tū-tiv), a. [< LL. substitutivus, conditional, < L. substitutus, pp. of substituere, substitute: see substitute.] Tending to afford or furnish a substitute; making substitution; capable of being substituted. Ip. Wilkins.

subtract (sub-strakt'), v. t. An erroneous form of subtrahere, common in vulgar use. Heywood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 469.

subtraction (sub-strakt'shən), n. An erroneous form of subtraction.

subtractor (sub-strakt'or), n. An erroneous form of **subtractor*, subtractor: used in the quotation in the sense of 'detractor.'

By this hand they are scoundrels and subtractors.

Shak., T. N., i. 3. 57.

substrate (sub'strāt), n. [< NL. substratum.] A substratum.

Albert and Aquinas agree in declaring that the principle of individuation is to be found in matter—not, however, in matter as a formless substrate, but in determinate matter (materia signata), which is explained to mean matter quantitatively determined in certain respects.

Encyc. Brit., XXI. 423

substrate (sub'strāt), v. t. [< L. substratus, pp. of substernere, strew or spread under, < sub, under, + sternere, spread, extend, scatter: see stratum.] To strew or lay under anything.

substrate

The melted glass being supported by the substrated fund. Boyle, Works, II, 222.

substrator (sub-strā'tor), n. [L. substratus, pp. of substernere, spread under: see substrate.] Same as kneller, 2.

The mourners or weepers, the hearers, the substrators, the co-standers. Bingham, Antiquities, XVIII, l. 1.

substratum (sub-strā'tum), n.; pl. substrata. [N.L., L. substratum, neut. of substratus, and under: see substrate, and cf. stratum.] 1. That which is laid or spread under; a stratum; lying under another; in agri., the subsoil; 2. geom., anything which underlies or supports; 3. a substratum of truth.

In the living body we observe a number of activities of the substratum, by which the series of phenomena of life are conditioned.

Gegenbaur, Comp. Anat. (trans.), p. 12. 2. In metaph., substance, or matter, as that in which qualities inhere.

We accustom ourselves to suppose some substratum wherein the (simple ideas) do subsist, and from whence they result; which therefore we call substance. Locke, Human Understanding, II, xxiii., note A.

substriate (sub-strī'at), a. In entom., having distinct or imperfect striae.

substruct (sub-strukt'), v. t. [L. substructus, pp. of substruere, build beneath, underbuild, < sub, under, + struere, pile up, erect, build: see structure.] To place beneath as a foundation; build beneath something else. [Rare.] substruction (sub-struk'shon), n. [L. substruction = Pg. substruction, < L. substruction (n.), an underbuilding, a foundation, < substruere, build beneath: see substruct.] An underbuilding; a mass of building below another; a foundation.

It is a magnificent, strong building, with a substruction very remarkable. Edgyn, Diary, Nov. 8, 1614.

substructure (sub-strukt'chūr), a. [L. substructure + -al.] Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of a structure.

substructure (sub-strukt'chūr), n. [L. substruct + -ure; cf. structure.] A substruction; any under-structure; a foundation.

substyle (sub-stī'lār), a. [L. substyle + -ar.] Of, pertaining to, or consisting of the sub-style.

substyle (sub-stī'l), n. In dialing, the line on which the style or gnomon stands, formed by the intersection of the face of the dial with the plane which passes through the gnomon.

substylar (sub-stī'lār), a. [L. substylar, pp. of substylare, leap up, < sub, under, + stylare, leap, spring: see salient. Cf. L. substylum, with leaps or jumps.] Moving by sudden leaps or starts; making short bounds; spasmodic.

The earth, I was told, moved up and down like the boiling of a pot. . . . This sort of substylar motion is ever accounted the most dangerous. Lp. Berkeley, Works (ed. 1751), I, 81.

subsultorily (sub-sul'tō-rī-lī), adv. In a subsultory or bounding manner; by leaps, starts, or twitches. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 326.

subsultory (sub-sul'tō-rī), a. [As subsult + -ry.] Same as subsultive. De Quincy, Style, i.

subsultus (sub-sul'tus), n.; pl. subsultus. [N.L., < L. subsultus, pp. subsultus, leap up: see substylar.] A twitching, jerky, or convulsive movement.—Subsultus clonus. Same as subultus tendina.—Subsultus tendinum, a twitching of the tendons, observed in many cases of low fever, etc. It is a grave symptom.

subsume (sub-sūm'), v. t.; pret. and pp. subsumed, ppr. subsuming. [L. subsumere, < L. sub, under, + sumere, take: see assume.] In logic, to state (a case) under a general rule; instance (an object or objects) as belonging to a class under consideration. Especially, when the major proposition of a syllogism is first stated, the minor proposition is said to be subsumed under it. Modern writers often use the word in the sense of stating that the object of the verb belongs under a class, even though that class be not already mentioned.

St. Paul, who cannot name that word "sinners" but must straight subsume in a parenthesis "of whom I am the chief." Hammond, Works, IV, viii.

It is business [that of the understanding] is to judge or subsume different conceptions or perceptions under more general conceptions that connect them together. E. Caird, Philos. of Kant, p. 202.

subsumption (sub-sūmp'shon), n. [N.L. subsumption (n.), < "subsumere, pp. "subsumptus, subsumo: see subsume.] 1. The act of subsuming; the act of mentioning as an instance of a rule or an example of a class; the act of including under something more general (and, in the strict use of the word, something already considered), as a particular under a universal, or a species under a genus.

6033

The first act of consciousness was a subsumption of that of which we were conscious under this notion. Sir W. Hamilton.

2. That which is subsumed; the minor premise of a syllogism, when stated after the major premise.

Thus, if one were to say, "No man is wise in all things," and another to respond, "But you are a man," this proposition is a subsumption under the former. Fleming, Vocab. Philos.

Subsumption of the libel, in Scots law, a narrative of the alleged criminal act, which must specify the manner, place, and time of the crime libeled, the person injured, etc.

subsumptive (sub-sūmp'tiv), a. [L. subsumption + -ive.] Of or relating to a subsumption; of the nature of a subsumption.

subsurface (sub-sēr'fās), a. and n. I. a. Being or occurring below the surface.

II. a. A three-dimensional continuum in a space of five dimensions.

subsynovial (sub-si-nō'vi-al), a. Situated or occurring within a synovial membrane.—Subsynovial cysts, cysts caused by distention of the synovial follicles which open into joints, due to obstruction of their ducts.

subtack (sub'tak), n. In Scots law, an underlease; a lease, as of a farm or a tenement, granted by the principal tenant or leaseholder.

subtangent (sub'tan'jent), n. In analytical geom., the part of the axis of abscissas of a curve cut off between the tangent and the ordinate.—Polar subtangent, that part of the line through the origin of polar coordinates perpendicular to the radius vector which is cut off between the tangent and the radius vector.

subtartarean (sub-tār-tā'rē-an), a. Being or living under Tartarus.

The sable subtartarean powers. Pope, Illiad, xiv, 314.

subtectacle (sub-tek'ta-kl), n. [L. sub, under, + tectus, pp. of tegere, cover (see tect, thatch), + -acle.] A tabernacle; a covering.

This is true. Iath's Intire subtectacle. Davies, Holy Rood, p. 20. (Davies)

subtectal (sub-tek'tal), n. [L. sub, under, + tectum, roof, < tegere, pp. tectus, cover: see tect, thatch.] In whit., a bone of the skull, generally underlying the roof of the cranium behind the orbit, and variously homologized with the orbitosphenoid and with the alisphenoid of higher vertebrates; also used attributively.

subtegulaeous (sub-teg-ū-lā-nē-us), a. [L. subtegulaeous, under the roof, indoor, < sub, under, + tegula, a tile, a tiled roof: see tile.] Under the eaves or roof; within doors. [Rare.]

Imp. Incl.

subtegumental (sub-teg-ū-men'tal), a. Situated beneath the tegument; subcutaneous.

subtemperate (sub-tem'pēr-āt), a. Colder than the average climate of the temperate zone; noting the temperature and also other physical conditions of parts of the north temperate zone toward the arctic circle.

subtemporal (sub-tem'pō-ral), a. Situated beneath a temporal gyrus of the brain.

subtenancy (sub'ten'an-si), n. An under-tenancy; the holding of a subtenant.

subtenant (sub'ten'ant), n. A tenant under a tenant; one who rents land or houses from a tenant.

subtend (sub-tend'), v. t. [L. Sp. subtender = It. sottendere, < L. subtendere, stretch underneath, < sub, under, + tendere, stretch.] 1. To extend under or be opposite to; a geometrical term: as, the side of a triangle which subtends the right angle.

In our sweeping are from Aechylus to the present time, fifty years subtend scarcely any space. S. Lamer, The English Novel, p. 6.

2. In bot., to embrace in its axil, as a leaf, bract, etc.: as, in many Compositae the florets are subtended by bracts called chaff.

subtense (sub-tens'), n. [L. subtensus, subtensus, pp. of subtendere, stretch across: see subtend.] In geom., a line subtending or stretching across; the chord of an arc; a line opposite to an angle spoken of.

subtentacular (sub-ten-tak'ū-lār), a. Situated beneath the tentacles or tentacular canal of a cerinoid. Huxley, Anat. Invert., p. 502.

subtepid (sub-tep'id), a. Slightly tepid; moderately warm.

subter- [L. subter, also subter, adv. and prep., below, beneath, in comp. also secretly; with compar. suffix, < sub, under, below: see sub.] A prefix in English words, meaning 'under,' 'below,' 'less than': opposed to super-.

subterbrutish (sub'tēr-brū'tish), a. So brutish as to be lower than a brute. [Rare.]

Subtetramera

O subter-brutish vile! most vile! Carlyle, Sartor Resartus, I, 8.

subterete (sub-tē-rēt'), a. Somewhat terete.

subterfluent (sub-tēr-flū-ent), a. [L. subterfluen (t)-s, ppr. of subterfluere, flow beneath, < subter, beneath, + fluere, flow: see fluent.] Running under or beneath. Imp. Dict.

subterfluous (sub-tēr-flū-us), a. [L. as if "subterfluus, < subterfluere, flow beneath: see subterfluent.] Same as subterfluent.

subterfuge (sub'tēr-fūj), n. [L. subterfuge = Sp. Pg. subterfugio = It. sotterfugio, < L. subterfugium, a subterfuge, < L. subterfugere, flee by stealth, escape, avoid, < subter, secretly, + fugire, flee.] That to which a person resorts for escape or concealment; a shift; an evasion; artifice employed to escape censure or the force of an argument.

By forgery, by subterfuge of law. Cowper, Task, ii, 670.

We may observe how a persecuting spirit in the times drives the greatest men to take refuge in the meanest arts of subterfuge. I. D'Israeli, Calam. of Authors, II, 276.

= Syn. Shift, etc. (see evasion), excuse, trick, quirk, shuffle, pretense, pretext, mask, blind.

subterminal (sub-tēr'mi-nāl), a. Nearly terminal; situated near but not at the end. Encyc. Brit., XXIV, 186.

subternatural (sub-tēr-nat'ū-rāl), a. Below what is natural; less than natural; subnatural.

If we assume health as the mean representing the normal poise of all the mental faculties, we must be content to call hypochondria subternatural, because the tone of the instrument is lowered. Lovell, Among my Books, 1st ser., p. 87.

subterposition (sub'tēr-pō-zish'on), n. The state of lying or being situated under something else; specifically, in geom., the order in which strata are situated one below another.

subterranean (sub'tēr-rān), a. and n. [= OF. subterranean, soubterraine, F. souterrain = Sp. subterráneo = Pg. subterraneo = It. sotterraneo, < L. subterraneus, underground, < sub, under, + terra, earth, ground: see terrane.] I. a. Underground; subterranean.

A subterranean tunnel. Annals of Phila. and Penn., I, 412.

II. n. A cave or room under ground. [Poetical and rare.]

subterranean (sub'tēr-rā-nē-ā), a. [L. subterranean + -al.] Same as subterranean. Bacon, Physical Fables, xi.

subterranean (sub'tēr-rā-nē-an), a. [L. subterranean + -an.] Situated or occurring below the surface of the earth or under ground.

His taste in cookery, formed in subterranean ordinaries and à la mode beefsteaks, was far from delicate. Macaulay, Samuel Johnson. (Encyc. Brit., XIII, 721.)

Subterranean forest, a submarine, submerged, or buried forest. See submarine forest and forest-bed group, both under forest, and submerged forest, under submerge.

subterraneity (sub'tēr-rā-nē-ī-ti), n. [L. subterranean + -ity.] A place under ground. [Rare.]

We commonly consider subterraneities not in contemplations sufficiently respective unto the creation. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., II, 1.

subterraneous (sub'tēr-rā-nē-us), a. [L. subterraneus, underground: see subterranean.] Same as subterranean.

subterraneously (sub'tēr-rā-nē-us-lī), adv. In a subterraneous manner; under the surface of the earth; hence, secretly; imperceptibly.

Preston, intent on carrying all his points, skillfully commenced with the smaller ones. He wended the duke circuitously—he worked at him subterraneously. I. D'Israeli, Curios. of Lit., IV, 368.

subterrany (sub'tēr-rā-nī), a. and n. [L. subterraneus, underground: see subterranean.] I. a. Subterranean.

They [metals] are wholly subterrany; whereas plants are part above earth, and part under earth. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 603.

II. n. That which lies under ground.

We see that in subterrany there are, as the fathers of their tribes, brimstone and mercury. Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 354.

subterrene (sub'tēr-rēn'), a. [L. subterrenus, underground, < L. sub, under, + terra, earth, ground: see terrane.] Subterranean.

For the earth is full of subterrene fires, which have evaporated stones, and raised most of these mountains. Sandys, Travels, p. 235.

subterrestrial (sub'tēr-res'tri-āl), a. [L. sub, under, + terra, earth, ground, > terrestri, of the earth: see terrestrial.] Subterranean.

The most reputable way of entering into this subterrestrial country is to come in at the fore-door. Tom Brown, Works, II, 203. (Davies.)

Subtetramera (sub'tē-tram'e-rā), n. pl. [N.L., neut. pl. of "subtetramerus: see subtetrameric.]

A division of coleopterous insects, having the tarsi four-jointed with the third joint diminutive and concealed: synonymous with Cryptotetramera and Pseudotrimera.

subtetramerus (sub-te-tram'e-rus), a. [< NL. **subtetramerus*, < L. sub, under, + NL. tetramerus, four-parted: see tetramerus.] Four-jointed, as an insect's tarsus, but with the third joint very small and concealed under the second; of or pertaining to the Subtetramera; pseudotrimereous.

subthoracic (sub-thô-ras'ik), a. 1. Situated under or below the thorax.—2. Not quite thoracic in position: as, the subthoracic ventral fins of a fish.

subtil, a. An obsolete or archaic form of subtile or subtle.

subtile (sut'il or sub'til), a. [Early mod. E. also subtil, subtyle; an altered form, to suit the L., of the earlier sotil, sutl, etc.; = F. subtil = Sp. sutl = Pg. subtil = It. sottile, < L. subtilis, fine, thin, slender, delicate, perhaps < sub, under, + tela, a web, fabric: see tela, toil.] 1. Tenuous; thin; extremely fine; rare; rarefied: as, subtile vapor; subtile odors or effluvia; a subtile powder; a subtile medium. Also subtle.

He forges the subtile and delicate air into wise and melodious words. Emerson, Nature, p. 49.

2. Delicately constituted, made, or formed; delicately constructed; thin; slender; fine; delicate; refined; dainty. Also subtle.

The remenant was wel kevered to my pay,
Ryght with a subtyl covercheif of Valence,
Ther nas no thikkere clothe of defens.

Chaucer, Parliament of Fowls, l. 272.

Gadere that away with a sotil sponne or ellis a fethere.
Book of Quinte Essence (ed. Furnivall), p. 9.

When he [the beare] resorteth to the hyllocke where the antes lye hid as in their fortress, he putteth his tooange to one of the ryftes wherof we have spoken, being as subtyle as the edge of a sword, and there with continuall lyeckynge maketh the place moyst.
R. Eden, tr. of Gonzalus Oviedus (First Books on America, ed. Arber, p. 222).

Venustas, in a silver robe, with a thin, subtile veil over her hair and it.
B. Jonson, Masque of Beauty.

The more frequently and narrowly we look into them [works of nature], the more occasion we shall have to admire their fine and subtile texture, their beauty, and use, and excellent contrivance. Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, l. xii.

The virtue acquires its subtile charm because considered as an outgrowth of the beautiful, beneficent, and bounteous nature in which it has its root. Whipple, Starr King.

3†. Sharp, penetrating; piercing.
The Monasterie is moist and ye soyle colde, the aire subtile, scarce of bread, euil wines, crude waters.
Guevara, Letters (tr. by Hellowes, 1577), p. 45.

Pass we the slow Disease, and subtil Pain,
Which our weak Frame is destin'd to sustain.
Prior, Solomon, iii.

4. Same as subtle, 3.
The Develes ben so subtyle to make a thing to seme otherwise than it is, for to deceyve mankynde.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 283.

The seyde Walter by hese sotil and ungoodly enformacion caused the seyde Duke to be helye lord to the seyde William.
Paston Letters, l. 16.

Now the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made. Gen. iii. 1.
The subtile persunions of Ulysses.
Sir T. Elyot, The Governour, iii. 25.

Wherevnto this subtile Savage . . . replied.
Quoted in Capt. John Smith's Works, l. 105.

A most subtile wench! how she hath baited him with a viol yonder for a song!
B. Jonson, Poetaster, iv. 1.
But yet I shall remember you of what I told you before, that he [the carp] is a very subtile fish, and hard to be caught.
I. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 145.

5. Same as subtle, 4.
And [he] made that by subtyll conduyes water to be hydde, and to come downe in maner of Rayne.
Holy Rood (E. E. T. S.), p. 162.

With sotil pencil depeynt was this storie,
In redoutyng of Mars and of his glorie.
Chaucer, Knight's Tale, l. 1101.

6. Same as subtle, 5.
Subtill and sage was he manyfold,
All trouth and verite by hym was vnfold.
Rom. of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 5939.

A subtile observer would perceive how truly he [Shelley] represents his own time. Stedman, Vict. Poets, p. 411.

7. Same as subtle, 7.
She . . . made her subtil werkmen make a shryne
Of alle the rubies and the stones fyne
In al Egipte that she coude espye.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 672.

subtilet (sut'il or sub'til), v. [< ME. sotilcen, < OF. soutilier, subtillier, < ML. subthiare, make thin, contrive cunningly, < L. subtilis, thin, subtle: see subtile, a.] 1. trans. To contrive or practise cunningly.

Alle thise sciences I my-self sotiled and ordeyned,
And founded hem formest folke to deceyue.
Piers Plowman (B), l. 214.

II. intrans. 1. To scheme or plan cunningly.
Eche man sotileth a sleight synne forto hyde,
And coloureth it for a kunnyng and a clene luyng.
Piers Plowman (B), xix. 454.

2. To tamper; meddle.
It is no science for sothe forto sotyle inne.
Piers Plowman (B), x. 183.

subtiley (sut'il-li or sub'til-li), adv. [Formerly also subtilly, subtilley; < subtile + -ly. Cf. subtly.] 1. In a subtle manner; thinly; finely.
A dram thereof [glass] subtiley powdered in butter or paste.
Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., ii. 5.

2. Artfully; skilfully; subtly.
At night she stal away ful prively
With her face ywimpled subtiley.
Chaucer, Good Women, l. 797.

Putte it into a uessel of glasse clepid amphora, the which sotyle seale. Book of Quinte Essence (ed. Furnivall), p. 11.
In avoydynge of the payement of the seid vij. c. marc, the seide Sir Robert Wyngfeld sotylly hath outlaywed the seide John Lyston in Notyngham shir, be the vertue of qwech outlagare all maner of chattell to the seide John Lyston aperteynyng arn acruwyd on to the Kyng.
Paston Letters, l. 41.

A Sot, that has spent £2000 in Microscopes, to find out the Nature of Eals in Vinegar, Mites in a Cheese, and the blue of Plums, which he has subtily found out to be living Creatures. Shadwell, The Virtuoso, i. 1.

subtleness (sut'il-nes or sub'til-nes), n. [< subtile + -ness. Cf. subtleness.] The character or staté of being subtle, in any sense.

subtiliate (sub-til'i-ät), v. t. [< L. subtilis, fine, slender, subtle, + -ate.] To make subtle; make thin or rare; rarefy.
Matter, however subtiliated, is matter still.
Boyle, Works, III. 39.

subtiliation (sub-til-i-ä'shön), n. [< subtiliate + -ion.] The act of making thin, rare, or subtle.
By subtiliation and rarefaction the oil contained in grapes, if distilled before it be fermented, becomes spirit of wine.
Boyle, Works, III. 39.

subtilisation, subtilise, etc. See subtilization, etc.

subtilism (sut'i-lizm or sub'ti-lizm), n. [< subtile + -ism.] The quality of being subtle, discriminating, or shrewd.

The high orthodox subtilism of Duns Scotus.
Milman, Latin Christianity, xiv. 3.

subtily (su- or sub-til'i-ti), n.; pl. subtilities (-tiz). [Formerly also subtillity; < F. subtilité = Sp. subtilidad = Pg. subtilidade = It. sottilità, < L. subtilitas (-s), fineness, slenderness, acuteness, < subtilis, fine, slender, subtle: see subtile.] 1. Subtleness or subtleness; the quality of being subtle or subtle. Also subtlety. [Rare.]

Without any of that speculative subtily or ambidexterity of argumentation. Sterne, Tristram Shandy.

2. A fine-drawn distinction; a nicety. Also subtlety.

I being very inquisitive to know of the subtillities of those countreyes [China and Tartary], and especially in matter of learning and of their vulgar Poetrie.
Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poetrie, p. 75.

Their tutors commonly spend much time in teaching them the subtillities of logic.
Lord Herbert of Cherbury, Life (ed. Howells), p. 42.

subtilization (sut'i- or sub'ti-li-zä'shön), n. [= F. subtilisation = Sp. subtilización = Pg. subtilização; as subtilize + -ation.] 1. The act of making subtle, fine, or thin.—2. In chem., the operation of making so volatile as to rise in steam or vapor.—3. Nicety in drawing distinctions, etc.

Also spelled subtilisation.

subtilize (sut'i-liz or sub'ti-liz), v.; pret. and pp. subtilized, ppr. subtilizing. [= F. subtiliser = Sp. subtilizar = Pg. subtilizar; as subtile + -ize.] 1. trans. To make thin or fine; make less gross or coarse; refine or etherealize, as matter; spin out finely, as an argument.

They spent their whole lives in agitating and subtilizing questions of faith.
Warburton, Works, IX. viii.

By long brooding over our recollections we subtilize them into something akin to imaginary stuff.
Hawthorne, Blithedale Romance, xii.

What has been said above, however, in regard to a possible subtilized theory applies a fortiori to the coarser theory of Absolute and Relative Time.
Amer. Jour. Philol., VIII. 66.

II. intrans. To refine; elaborate or spin out, as in argument; make very nice distinctions; split hairs.

In doubtfull Cases he can subtilize,
And wyltest pleaders hearts anatomize.

Sylvestre, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, ii. The Magnificence.
And Rask, one of the most eminent of modern philologists, has subtilized so far upon them [intonations] that few of his own countrymen, even, have sufficient acuteness of ear to follow him.
G. P. Marsh, Lects. on Eng. Lang., xiii.

Seneca, however, in one of his letters (ep. lxxv.), subtilizes a good deal on this point [that the affections are of the nature of a disease]. Lecky, Europ. Morals, l. 16.

Also spelled subtilise.

subtilizer (sut'i- or sub'ti-li-zér), n. [< subtilize + -er.] One who or that which subtilizes; one who makes very nice distinctions; a habit-splitter.

A subtilizer, and inventor of unheard-of distinctions.
Roger North, Lord Guilford, l. 118. (Darwin.)

subtily (sut'il-ti or sub'til-ti), n.; pl. subtilities (-tiz). [A form of subtlety, partly conformed in mod. use to subtility: see subtlety, subtillity.] 1. The state or character of being subtle: thinness; fineness; tenuity: as, the subtily of air or light; the subtily of a spider's web. Also subtlety.

Moderation must be observed, to prevent this fine light from burning, by its too great subtily and dryness.
Bacon, Physical Fables, vi., Exp.]

2. The practice of making fine-drawn distinctions; extreme niceness or refinement of discrimination; intricacy; complexity. Also subtlety.

Intelligible discourses are spoiled by too much subtily in nice divisions.
Lock.

The subtily of nature, in the moral as in the physical world, triumphs over the subtily of syllogism.
Macaulay, Utilitarian Theory of Government.

Subtily of motives, refinements of feeling, delicacies of susceptibility, were rarely appreciated [by the Romans]. Lecky, Europ. Morals, l. 25.

3. Same as subtlety, 4.
The Sarazines countrefeten it be sotyllee of Craft for to disceyven the Cristene Men, as I have seen fulle many a tyme.
Mandeville, Travels, p. 51.

Put thou thy mayster to no payne
By fraude nor fayned subtillie.

Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 85.

But had of his owne perswaded her by his great subtillie.
Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 25.

His subtily hath chose this doubling line.
B. Jonson, Sejanus, iv. 5.

Indeed, man is naturally more prone to subtily than open valor, owing to his physical weakness in comparison with other animals.
Irving, Sketch-Book, p. 370.

He [Washington] had no subtily of character, no cunning; he hated duplicity, lying, and liars.
Theo. Parker, Historic Americans, p. 150.

4. Same as subtlety, 5.
Loading him with trifling subtillies, which, at a proper age, he must be at some pains to forget.
Goldsmith, The Bee, No. 6.

It is only an elevated mind that, having mastered the subtillies of the law, is willing to reform them.
Sumner, Orations, I. 162.

5. Skill; skilfulness.
For old, that in my spirit duleth me,
Hath of endyng al the sotelle (var. subtillie)
Wel ny bereft out of my remembrance.
Chaucer, Complaint of Venus, l. 77.

6†. A delicacy; a carefully contrived dainty.

A bake mete . . . with a sotelle: an antelope . . . on a sele that saith with scriptour, "beith all gladd & mery that sitteth at this messe."
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 376.

7†. An intricate or curious device, symbol, or emblem.

But Grekes have an other subtillie:

Of see quyete up taketh thai mayne
Water purest, oon yere thai lete it fyne, Wherof thai sayen so made is the nature
Of bitternesse or salt that it is sure.
Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 187.

A subtillie, a kyng setting in a chayre with many lordes about hym, and certayne knyghtes with other people standyng at the bar.
Leland, Inthron. of Abp. Warham. (Richardson.)

subtitled (sub'ti'tl), n. 1. A secondary or subordinate title of a book, usually explanatory.

In this first volume of Mr. Van Campen's monograph (the Dutch in the Arctic Seas, Volume I: A Dutch Arctic Expedition and Route; being a Survey of the North Polar Question, etc.) it is the sub-title rather than the title that indicates the chief importance of his work.
N. A. Rev., CXXVII. 316.

2. The repetition of the leading words in the full title at the head of the first page of text.

Table and contents, xii, followed by subtitled to whist.
N. and Q., 7th ser., IX. 143.

subtle (sut'l), a. [Early mod. E. also suttle; < ME. sotil, sotyl, soutil, subtil, subtyl, < OF. sotil, soutil, subtil = Sp. subtil = Pg. subtil = It. sottile, < L. subtilis, fine, thin, slender, delicate: see subtile, a more mod. form of the same word. The b in subtle and its older forms subtil, etc., was silent, as in debt, doubt, etc., being, as in those words, inserted in simulation of the orig. L. form. The form subtil, used in the authorized version of the Bible, has been retained in the revised version.] 1. Same as subtile, 1.

subulate

subula, an awl, < suero, sew: see sew.] Awl-shaped; subuliform; in bot., zool., etc., slender, more or less cylindrical, and tapering to a point. See awl-shaped, 2.

subulated (sū'bū-lā-ted), a. [< subulate + -ed.] Same as subulate.

subulicorn (sū'bū-li-kōrn), a. and n. [< NL. subulicornis, < L. subula, an awl, + cornu, horn.] I. a. Having subulate antennae, as an insect; or of pertaining to the Subulicornia.

II. n. A member of the Subulicornia. Subulicornia (sū'bū-li-kōr-ni-ā), n. pl. [NL. (Latreille, in the form Subulicorines), < L. subula, an awl, + cornu, horn.] In Latreille's classification of insects, a division of Neuroptera containing the Odonata of Fabricius, and the Ephemera or Agnathi, or the dragon-flies and May-flies.

subuliform (sū'bū-li-fōrm), a. [< L. subula, an awl, + forma, form.] Subulate in form; awl-shaped.

Subulipalpi (sū'bū-li-pal-pi), n. pl. [NL. < L. subula, an awl, + pulpus, in mod. sense of 'pulp.'] In Latreille's system, a group of caraboid beetles, distinguished from the Grandipalpi by the subulate form of the outer palp. It corresponds to the Rembidiidae.

subumbonal (sub-um'bō-nal), a. Situated under the umbones of a bivalve shell.

subumbral (sub-um'bral), a. In Hydrozoa, same as subumbrellar.

subumbrella (sub-um-brel'ā), n.; pl. subumbrellae (-ē). [NL. < L. sub, under, + NL. umbra, shadow.] The internal ventral or oral disk of a hydrozoan, as a jellyfish; the muscular layer beneath the umbrella or swimming-bell of a hydromedusa, continuous with the velum. If such an acaleph is likened to a woman's parasol, lined, then the lining is the subumbrella, the covering being the umbrellae. Compare cut under Dusky-bell.

subumbrellar (sub-um-brel'ar), a. [< subumbrella + -ar.] Of, or having characters of, a subumbrella.

subuncinate (sub-un'si-nāt), a. Imperfectly uncinately hooked.

subundant (sub-un-dā'shon), n. [< L. sub, under, + undare, overflow: see und, inundation.] A flood; a deluge. Huob.

subungual, subungulal (sub-ung'gwāl, -gwāl), a. Situated under the nail, claw, or hoof.

Subungulata (sub-ung-gū-lā'tā), n. pl. [NL. neut. pl. of subungulatus: see subungulate.] 1. The Ungulata polydactyla, or polydactyl hoofed quadrupeds, including the existing Hyracoida and Proboscidea, with the fossil Archipoda, having a primitive or archetypal carpus, with the os magnum of the distal row of carpal bones articulating mainly with the lunare, or with the cuneiform, but not with the scaphoid. See Ungulata, —24. In Illiger's classification (1811), a family of rodents whose claws are somewhat hoof-like, as the paen, agouti, guinea-pig, and capibara. See Caviidae.

subungulate (sub-ung'gū-lāt), a. and n. [< NL. subungulatus, < L. sub, under, + L. ungula, ungulate, < L. ungula, a hoof.] I. a. Hoofed, but with several digits, and thus not typically ungulate; having the characters of the Subungulata, 1. See ungulate, and compare subungulate.

II. n. A member of the Subungulata, 1, as the elephant or the hyrax.

suburb (sub-er'rb), n. and a. [< ME. suburbe, suburbe, < OF. suburbe, usually in pl. suburbe, = Sp. Pg. suburba, < L. suburbium, an outlying part of a city, a suburb, < sub, under, near, + urbs, city: see urban.] I. n. 1. An outlying part of a city or town; a part outside of the city boundaries but adjoining them: often used in the plural to signify loosely some part near a city; as, a garden situated in the suburbs of London. The form suburbs was formerly often used as a singular.

"In the suburbs of a town," quod he,
"Lurking in herms and in lones blynde."
Chaucer, Troil. to Canon's Yeoman's Tale, l. 104.

From which Northward is the Market-place and St. Nicholas Church, from whence for a good way sheweth out a Suburbs to the North-east, . . . and each Suburbs has its particular Church.

Defoe, Tour through Great Britain, III. 213. (Drives)

A small part only spreads itself on to Lux, where it begins to climb the hills. . . . This outlying part, which contains two churches, may pass as a suburb, a Peraia.

L. A. Freeman, Venice, p. 179.

2. The confines; the outskirts.

The suburb of their straw-built citadel.

Milton, P. L., l. 773.

0030

This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of the life elysian, Whose portal we call Death.

Longfellow, Resignation.

II. a. Suburban; suited to the suburbs, or to the less well regulated parts of a city.

Now, if I can but hold him up to his height, as it is happily begun, it will do well for a suburb humour; we may hap have a match with the city, and play him for forty pound. B. Jonson, Every Man in his Humour, l. 2.

A low humour, not tinged with urbanity; fitted to the tastes of the inferior people who usually reside in the suburbs.

Whalley, Note at "humour" in the above passage.

Some great man sure that's ash'm'd of his kindred; perhaps some Suburb Justice, that sits o' the skirts o' the City, and lives by 't. Brome, Sparagus Garden, ll. 3.

suburban (sub-er'ban), a. and n. [= Sp. Pg. It. suburbanus; < L. suburbanus, situated near the city (of Rome), < sub, under, + urbs, city. Cf. suburb.] I. a. Pertaining to, inhabiting, or being in the suburbs of a city.

The old ballad of King Christian

Shouted from suburban taverns.

Longfellow, To an Old Danish Song-book.

II. n. One who dwells in the suburbs of a city.

suburbanism (sub-er'ban-izm), n. [< suburban + -ism.] The character or state of being suburban. Mrs. Humphry Ward, Robert Elsmere, II. xi.

suburbed (sub-er'rbd), a. [< suburb + -ed.] Having a suburb. [Rare.]

Bottesaux Castle, . . . suburbed with a poorer market town. R. Caroe, Survey of Cornwall, fol. 120.

suburbial (sub-er'bi-al), a. [< L. suburbium, suburb (see suburb), + -al.] Same as suburban. T. Warton, Hen. IV., l. 2, note.

suburbian (sub-er'bi-an), a. [< OF. suburbien, < *ML. *suburbanus*, < L. suburbium, suburb; see suburb. Cf. suburban.] Same as suburban. Dryden, Mac Flecknoe, l. 83.

Take me ere a shop suburbian

That sells such ware.

Timor Whistle (E. E. T. S.), p. 72.

suburbicant (sub-er'bi-kān), a. [For suburbicarian.] Same as suburban. Bp. Gauden, Tears of the Church, p. 27. (Drives) suburbicarian (sub-er'bi-kā-ri-an), a. [< L. suburbicarius, situated near the city (of Rome), < L. sub, under, near, + urbs, city. Cf. suburb, suburban.] Being near the city: an epithet applied to the provinces of Italy which composed the ancient diocese of Rome. The name suburbicarian churches is by some restricted to those that are within a hundred miles of Rome, or, as at a later period, the district in central and southern Italy and the Italian islands, since this district was under the authority of the prefect of the city. Certain Roman Catholic scholars, however, consider it to have included and still to include all the churches of the Western Church.

The Pope having stretched his authority beyond the bounds of his suburbicarian province.

Eraser, Pope's Supremacy.

suburbicary (sub-er'bi-kā-ri), a. [< L. suburbicarius; see suburbicarian.] Same as suburbicarian.

subursine (sub-er'sin), a. and n. I. a. Somewhat ursine; bear-like to some extent; representing the uretoid series of carnivores subtypically; procyoniform or racoon-like.

II. n. A subursine carnivore; one of several small animals of the uretoid or ursine series, as the racoon, the coati, and the panda.

subvaginal (sub-vaj'i-nal), a. Placed within or on the inner side of a vaginal or sheathing membrane.

subvarietal (sub-vā-ri'e-tal), a. Varying slightly; having the character of a subvariety.

subvariety (sub-vā-ri'e-ti), n.; pl. subvarieties (-tiz). A subordinate variety; the further and minor modification of a variety; a strain differing little from one more comprehensive, as among domestic animals or cultivated plants.

subvene (sub-vēn'), v. i.; pret. and pp. subvened, subvening. [< F. subvenir = Sp. subvenir, relieve, supply, < L. subvenire, come to aid, relieve, succor, < sub, under, + venire, come: see come. Cf. convene, etc.] To come under, as a support or stay; arrive or happen, especially so as to prevent or obviate something.

A future state must needs subvene, to prevent the whole edifice from falling into ruin.

Warburton, Hollingsbroke's Philosophy, iv.

subventaneous (sub-ven-tā-nē-us), a. [< L. sub, under, + ventus, wind, + -aneous.] Pertaining to, of the nature of, or caused by wind; windy. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., iii. 21.

subvention (sub-ven'shon), n. [< F. subvention = Sp. subvención, < LL. subventio(n), a ren-

subverticillate

dering of aid, assistance, < L. subvenire, relieve, subvene: see subvene.] 1. The act of coming under.

The subvention of a cloud which raised him from the ground. Stackhouse.

2. The act of coming to the relief of some one; something granted in aid; support; subsidy. For specific use, see under subsidy.

The largesses to the Roman people, and the subventions to the provinces in aid of sufferers from earthquakes. C. T. Newton, Art and Archaeol., p. 131.

= Syn. 2. Subsidy, Subvention. See subsidy.

subvention (sub-ven'shon), v. t. [< subvention, n.] To give aid to; assist pecuniarily.

The Revue Européenne (1859) was at first subventioned, like the Revue Contemporaine. Encyc. Brit., XVIII. 540.

subventitious (sub-ven-tish'us), a. [< subvention + -itious.] Affording subvention or relief; aiding; supporting. Urquhart, tr. of Rabelais, iii. 33.

subvermiform (sub-vēr'mi-fōrm), a. [< L. sub, under, + vermis, a worm, + forma, form.] Shaped somewhat like a worm.

subverset (sub-vēr'set), v. t. [< L. subversus, pp. of subvertere, subvert: see subvert.] To subvert. Spenser, F. Q., III. xii. 42.

subversed (sub-vēr'set), a. Same as subverset.

subversion (sub-vēr'shon), n. [= F. subversion = Sp. subversión, subversión = Pg. subversão = It. subversione, < L. subversio(n), an overthrow, ruin, destruction, < subvertere, overturn, subvert: see subvert.] 1. The act of subverting or overthrowing, or the state of being overthrown; entire overthrow; utter ruin; destruction.

Subversion of thy harmless life.

Shak., 2 Hen. VI., III. l. 204.

The subversion [by a storm] of woods and timber.

Ecclm.

Nothing can be so gratifying and satisfactory to a rightly disposed mind as the subversion of imposture by the force of ridicule. Landor, Lucian and Timotheus.

2. The cause of overthrow or destruction.

It may be truly affirm'd he [the Pope] was the subversion and fall of that Monarchy, which was the holiest of him. Milton, Reformation in Eng., II.

= Syn. 1. Overturning, downfall, demolition. See subvert.

subversory (sub-vēr'shon-ē-ri), a. [< subversion + -ary.] Destructive; subversive.

subversive (sub-vēr'siv), a. [= F. subversif = Sp. subversivo, subversivo = Pg. subversivo; as subverbe + -ive.] Tending to subvert; having a tendency to overthrow and ruin; with of.

Utterly subversive of liberty.

A. Tucker, Light of Nature, II. III. 25.

From mere superstition may arise a systematized polytheism, which in every stage of growth or decay is subversive of all high religious aims.

Darwin, Nature and the Bible, p. 25.

subvert (sub-vēr't'), v. t. [< F. subvertir = Sp. subvertir = Pg. subvertere = It. sovvertere, soverture, < L. subvertere, overturn, upset, overthrow, < sub, under, + vertere, turn: see verse. Cf. cert, incert, pervert, etc.] To overthrow; overturn; ruin utterly; destroy.

Wo worth these gifts! they subvert justice every where. Latimer, 24 Sermon bef. Edw. VI., 1543.

Those books tend not so much to corrupt honest Bibles as they do to subvert true Religion.

Ackens, The Scholemaster, p. 79.

Raze thy cities and subverts your towns.

Shak., 1 Hen. VI., II. 3. 65.

The tempest of wind being south-west, which subverted, besides huge trees, many houses.

Ecclm., Diary, Feb. 17, 1692.

This would subvert the principles of all knowledge.

Locke.

In Rome the oligarchy was too powerful to be subverted by force.

Macaulay, Milford's Hist. Greece.

= Syn. Overthrow, Invert, etc. See overturn.

subvertebral (sub-vēr'tē-bral), a. Placed under a vertebra; lying under the vertebral or spinal column; subspinal or hypaxial. — Subvertebral aorta, the aorta; especially, one of the primitive aorta, as distinguished from the definite aorta. See aorta. — Subvertebral chevron-bone or wedge-bone. See vertebra, and cut under chevron-bone.

subverted, subvertent (sub-vēr'ted, -tent), a. In her., same as reversed.

subverter (sub-vēr'tēr), n. [< subvert + -er.] One who subverts; an overthrower. Waterland, On Occasional Reflections, i. App.

subvertible (sub-vēr'ti-bl), a. [< subvert + -ible.] Capable of being subverted.

subvertical (sub-vēr'ti-kāl), a. Almost vertical or perpendicular.

subverticillate (sub-vēr'ti-sil-ūt), a. Imperfectly verticillate; forming or disposed in an incomplete or irregular whorl or verticil.

subvesicular

subvesicular (sub-vē-sik'ū-lār), a. Somewhat vesicular; imperfectly vesicular.

subvirate (sub'vi-rāt), n. [L. sub, under, + viratus, manly, < vir, man; see virile.] One having an imperfectly developed manhood. [Rare.]

Even these poor New England Brahmins of ours, subvirate of an organizable base as they often are, count as men if their courage is big enough for the uniform which hangs so loosely about their slender figures. O. W. Holmes, Old Vol. of Life, p. 9.

subvirile (sub-vir'il), a. Deficient in virility. Forster North, Examen, III. vii. § 62.

subvitreous (sub-vit'rē-us), a. More or less imperfectly vitreous; vitreous in part.

subvoce (sub-vō'sē), [L. sub, under; voce, abl. of vox, voice, a word; see voice.] Under a word specified; a common dictionary reference. Abbreviated s. v.

subway (sub'wā), n. An underground way: an underground passage for traffic, or to contain gas- and water-mains, telegraph-wires, etc.

subworker (sub'wēr'kēr), n. A subordinate worker or helper. South.

subzonal (sub-zō'nāl), a. 1. Somewhat zonal or zonary, as the placenta of some mammals.— 2. Lying below a zone, belt, or girdle: noting a membrane between the zona radiata and the umbilical vesicle of a mammalian embryo.

subzone (sub'zōn), n. A subdivision of a zone. Quart. Jour. Geol. Soc., XLIV. 403.

suc-. See sub-.

succade (su-kād'), n. [Also suckel (as if < suck + -el); appar. < L. succus, sucus, juice, liquor, + -ad, -el.] A sweetmeat; green fruits and citron, candied and preserved in syrup. Defoe.—Succade gourd. See equash.

succatutsh, n. Same as succotash. J. F. Cooper.

succedaneous (suk-sē-dā'nē-us), a. [L. succedaneus, succidaneus, that follows after or fills the place of something, < succedere, follow after, succeed; see succeed.] Pertaining to or acting as a succedaneum; supplying the place of something else; being or employed as a substitute.—Succedaneous end, an end sought in default of the principal end.

succedaneum (suk-sē-dā'nē-um), n.; pl. succedanea (-i). [NL, neut. of succedaneus; see succedaneous.] One who or that which supplies the place of another; that which is used for something else; a substitute.

I would have a gentleman know how to make these medicines himself, and afterwards prepare them with his own hands, it being the manner of apothecaries so frequently to put in the succedanea that no man is sure to find with them medicines made with the true drugs which ought to enter into the composition when it is exotic or rare. Lord Herbert of Cherbury, Life (ed. Howells), p. 41.

Prudence . . . is a happy succedaneum to genius. Goldsmith, Voltaire.

Caput succedaneum. See caput.

succedent (suk-sē'dent), n. [ME. succedent, < L. succedent (-t)-s, ppr. of succedere, follow after; see succeed.] 1. A follower; a succeder.

So maketh to crafte nature a succedent. Palladius, Husbandrie (E. E. T. S.), p. 101.

2. That which follows or results.

Such is the mutability of the Inconstant Vulgar, desirous of new things but never contented, despoiling the time being, extolling that of their forefathers, and ready to act any mischief to try by alteration the succedent. L. Fannant (?), Hist. of Edw. II. p. 113.

3. In astrol., a house about to succeed or follow the angular houses. The succedent houses are the second, fifth, eighth, and eleventh. Skat.

The lord of the ascendant, say they, . . . is fortunate when he . . . is in a succedent, whereas he is in his dignity and comforted with friendly aspects of planets and well received. Chaucer, Astrolabe, ll. 1.

succeed (suk-sēd'), v. [OF. succeder, F. succéder = Sp. succeder = Pg. succeder = It. succedere, succidere, succeed, < L. succedere, go below, go under, go from under, mount, also go near, come near, approach, follow after, follow, succeed, go well, prosper, < sub, under, + cedere, go; see cede.] 1. To follow; come after; be subsequent or consequent to.

The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils! Shak., Pericles, l. 4. 101.

Those destructive effects . . . succeeded the curse. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., v. 1.

Hypocrisy in one age is generally succeeded by atheism in another. Addison, Spectator, No. 119.

2. To take the place of; be heir or successor to.

Not Anurath an Amurath succeeds, But Harry Harry. Shak., 2 Hen. IV., v. 2. 48.

3. To fall heir to; inherit. [Rare.]

Else let my brother die, If not a feudary, but only he Owe and succeed thy weakness. Shak., M. for M., II. 4. 123.

6037

4†. To prosper; give success to.

God was pleased so far to succeed their . . . endeavours that a stop was put to the fury of the fire. Stillfleet, Sermons, I. 1.

II. intrans. 1. To follow; be subsequent; come after; come next; come in the place of another or of that which has preceded.

Enjoy, till I return, Short pleasures; for long woes are to succeed. Milton, P. L., iv. 535.

The pure law Of mild equality and peace succeeds To faiths which long have held the world in awe. Shelley, Revolt of Islam, iv. 15.

The succeeding Legend has long been an established favourite with all of us. Barkham, Ingoldsbys Legends, I. 70.

2. To become heir; take the place of one who has died; specifically, to ascend a throne after the removal or death of the occupant.

No woman shall succeed in Salique land. Shak., Hen. V., i. 2. 39.

Rodolph succeeded in the See of Canterbury, but not till five Years after the Death of Anselm. Baker, Chronicles, p. 41.

3. To come down by order of succession; descend; devolve.

A ring the county wears That downward hath succeeded in his house, From son to son, some four or five descents. Shak., All's Well, iii. 7. 23.

4. To arrive at a happy issue; be successful in any endeavor; meet with success; obtain the object desired; accomplish what is attempted or intended.

It is almost impossible for poets to succeed without ambition. Dryden.

The surest way not to fail is to determine to succeed. Sheridan. (Dr. P. Dict.)

5. To terminate according to desire; turn out successfully; have the desired result: as, his plan succeeded admirably.—6†. To descend.

Or will you to the cooler cave succeed? Dryden, tr. of Virgil's Eclogues, v.

7†. To approach by following. Spenser, F. Q., VI. iv. 8.—Syn. 1. Follow, Succeed, Enue. See follow.

—4 and 5. To prosper, flourish, thrive.

succedant (suk-sē'dant), a. [F. succédant, < L. succedant (-t)-s, following; see succedent.] In her., following; especially, following one another: noting several bearings of the same sort, especially beasts or birds.

succeder (suk-sē'dēr), n. [< succeed + -er.] One who succeeds; one who follows or comes in the place of another; a successor. Shak., Rich. III., v. 5. 30.

succeeding (suk-sē'ding), n. [Verbal n. of succeed, v.] 1. The act of one who succeeds.—2†. Consequence; result.

Lat. Is it not a language I speak? Par. A most harsh one, and not to be understood without bloody succeeding. Shak., All's Well, II. 3. 199.

succent (suk-sent'), v. t. [L. succentus, pp. of succurrere, succanere, sing to, accompany, agree, < sub, under, + canere, sing; see chant.] To sing the close or second part of. See the quotation. [Rare.]

One voice sang the first part of a verse (as we say, incepted it), and the rest of the congregation all together succeeded it—that is, sang the close of it. Dict. of Christ. Antig., p. 1741.

succentor (suk-sen'tor), n. [< LL. succentor, an accompanier in singing, a promoter, < L. succinere, succanere, sing to, accompany, agree; see succent.] 1. In music: (a) One who sings a lower or bass part. (b) A precentor's deputy; a subchanter charged with the performance of the precentor's duties in his absence or under his direction. Also subcantor, subchanter.—2†. An inciter.

The prompter and succentor of these cruel entludes. Holland, tr. of Ammianus Marcellinus (1609). (Nares.)

succenturiatet, v. t. [L. succenturiatus, pp. of succenturiare, receive into a century, substitute, < sub, under, + centuria, a century; see century.] To fill up the number of (a band of soldiers). Bailey, 1731.

succenturiate (suk-sen-tū'ri-āt), a. [< L. succenturiatus, pp.: see the verb.] Secondary or subsidiary to; substituted for, or as it were taking the place of: applied in anatomy to the adrenals or suprarenal capsules, formerly called renes succenturiati.

success (suk-ses'), n. [= OF. succēs, succēs, F. succès = Sp. sucesso = Pg. successo = It. successo, < L. succensus, an advance, a succession, a happy issue, success, < succedere, pp. succensus, follow, go well, succeed; see succeed.] 1†. Succession; order of sequence. Shak., W. T., i. 2. 394.

Then all the sonnes of these five brethren raynd By dew successe. Spenser, F. Q., II. x. 45.

succession

2. The termination of any affair, whether happy or (now rarely) unhappy; issue; result; consequence.

Go bid the priests do present sacrifice, And bring me their opinions of success. Shak., J. C., ii. 2. 5.

In Italy the Spaniard hath also had ill successes at Piombino and Porto-longone. Howell, Letters, II. 43.

3. A favorable or prosperous termination of anything attempted; a termination which answers the purpose intended; prosperous issue; often, specifically, the gaining of money, position, or other advantage.

Or teach with more success her son The vices of the time to shun. Waller, Epitaph on Sir George Speke.

The good humour of a man elated by success often displays itself towards enemies. Macaulay, Dryden.

They follow success, and not skill. Therefore, as soon as the success stops and the admirable man blunders, they quit him; . . . and they transfer the repute of judgment to the next prosperous person who has not yet blundered. Emerson, Fortune of the Republic.

Success in its vulgar sense, the gaining of money and position. O. W. Holmes, Emerson, xi.

4. A successful undertaking or attempt; what is done with a favorable result: as, political or military successes.

Could any Soul have imagined that this Isle [Great Britain] would have produc'd such Monsters as to rejoice at the Turks good Successes against Christians? Howell, Letters, II. 62.

5. One who or that which succeeds, especially in a way that is public or notorious: as, the speech was a success; he is a social success. [Colloq.]

successantly, adv. In succession. Shak., Tit. And., iv. 4. 113.

successary, n. [< success + -ary.] Succession. [Rare.]

The glory Of my peculiar honours, not deriv'd From successary, but purchas'd with my blood. Beau. and Fl., Laws of Candy, i. 2.

successful (suk-ses'fūl), a. [< success + -ful.] Having or resulting in success; obtaining or terminating in the accomplishment of what is wished or intended; often, specifically, having succeeded in obtaining riches, high position, or other objects of ambition; prosperous; fortunate.

And welcome, nephews, from successful wars. Shak., Tit. And., i. 1. 172.

But, besides the tempting profits of an author's night, which . . . could hardly average less than from three to four hundred pounds, there was nothing to make the town half so fond of a man . . . as a successful play. J. Forster, Life and Adventures of Oliver Goldsmith, p. 377.

—Syn. Prosperous, etc. (see fortunate); effectual.

successfully (suk-ses'fūl-i), adv. In a successful manner; with a favorable termination of what is attempted; prosperously; favorably.

successfulness (suk-ses'fūl-nes), n. The character or state of being successful; prosperous conclusion; favorable event; success.

succession (suk-sesh'ōn), n. [< F. succession = Sp. sucesion = Pg. successão = It. successione, < L. successio (-n-), a following after, a coming into another's place, succession, success, < succedere, pp. successus, follow after, succeed; see succeda.] 1. A following of things in order; consecution; also, a series of things following one another, either in time or in place.

Another idea . . . is . . . constantly offered us by what passes in our own minds; and that is the idea of succession. For if we look immediately into ourselves, and reflect on what is observable there, we shall find our ideas always . . . passing in train, one going and another coming without intermission. Locke, Human Understanding, II. vii. 9.

The succession of his ideas was now rapid. Sterne, Tristram Shandy, II. 5.

The leaves of "evergreens" . . . are not cast off until the appearance of a new succession. W. B. Carpenter, in Grove's Corr. of Forces, p. 418.

The succession of certain strong emotions passed through yesterday is easier to recall than the emotions themselves. II. Spencer, Prin. of Psychol., § 105.

2. The act or right of succeeding to the place, proper dignity, functions, or rights of another; the act or right of succeeding or coming to an inheritance; the act or right of entering upon an office, rank, etc., held by another: as, he holds the property by the title of succession; also, a line of persons so succeeding.

Slander lives upon succession, For ever housed where it gets possession. Shak., C. of E., iii. 1. 105.

Especially—(a) The act of succeeding under established custom or law to the dignity and rights of a sovereign; also, a line of sovereigns thus following one another.

King Richard being dead, the Right of Succession remained in Arthur, Son of Geoffrey Plantagenet. Baker, Chronicles, p. 68.

These 2 Kings they have at present are not any way related in their Descent or Families, nor could I learn how long their Government has continued in the present form; but it appears to have been for some successions.

Dampier, Voyages, II. i. 67.

This hereditary right should be kept so sacred as never to break the succession.

Swift, Sentiments of a Ch. of Eng. Man, ii.

Although their [the Beauforts'] legitimation by pope and parliament was complete, they were excluded from the succession by Henry IV. so far as he had power to do it.

Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 347.

(b) Eccles., the act of succeeding to clerical office or receiving transmitted authority through ordination; a series of persons so succeeding. See apostolic succession, under apostolic.

We can justify that [mission] of our fathers by an uninterrupted succession from Christ himself: a succession which hath already continued longer than the Aeronical priesthood, and will, we doubt not, still continue till the church militant and time itself shall be no more.

Bp. Atterbury, Sermons, I. xviii.

3. An order or series of descendants; lineage; successors collectively; heirs.

Cassibelan, . . . for him
And his succession, granted Rome a tribute, Yearly three thousand pounds.

Shak., Cymbeline, III. i. 8.

4. In biol., descent with modification in unbroken evolutionary series; the sequence of organic forms thus developed; the fact or the result of evolution or development along any line of descent or during any period of time.—

5†. A person succeeding to rank, office, or the like. Milton.—6. In music, same as progression (of parts) or as sequence, 5.—7. In psychol., suggestion; association. Sir W. Hamilton.—

Apostolic succession. See apostolic.—Arms of succession, in her. See arm, 7 (d).—

Conjunct succession. Same as conjunct motion (which see under conjunct).—

Law of succession, the law regulating inheritance (See descent and distribution). In civil law succession is either singular or universal. It is the former when it passes one or more separate rights, the latter when all the rights as an aggregate are considered to pass.—

Lucrative succession. See lucrative.—Right of succession, the right to succeed; the right to take by succession.—

Succession Act, Succession to the Crown Act. See Limitation of the Crown Act, under limitation.—

Succession bath, a bath in which cold and hot water are alternately applied.—

Succession Duty Act, an English statute of 1853 (16 and 17 Viet., c. 51) which imposed a tax upon property transmitted by will or operation of law. A class of somewhat similar statutes is known as collateral inheritance tax laws.—

Succession of crops, in agri., the rotation of crops. See rotation.—

Succession tax, in law, a tax on property passing by succession; a tax on the devolution of property by inheritance or will. A collateral-inheritance tax is a succession tax on the devolution of property on others than direct descendants or progenitors. A legacy tax is a succession tax on devolution in some or all cases by will.—

Teeth of succession. See tooth.—

Title by succession. (a) Title acquired by inheritance, etc. (b) More specifically, the continuity of title in a corporation notwithstanding successive changes of membership.—

Wars of succession, wars undertaken for the purpose of settling a disputed succession to a throne. The most notable are those of the Spanish Succession (1701–13), of the Austrian Succession (1741–48), and of the Bavarian Succession (1778–9).

successional (suk-sesh'ōn-āl), a. [< succession + -al.] Relating to succession; implying succession; existing in succession; consecutive; as, "successional tooth." Owen, Anat. of Vertebrates, § 70.

successionally (suk-sesh'ōn-āl-i), adv. In a successional manner; by way of succession.

successionist (suk-sesh'ōn-ist), n. [< succession + -ist.] One who insists on the validity and necessity of a given succession of persons or events; especially, one who adheres to the doctrine of apostolic succession.

successive (suk-ses'iv), a. [= F. succésif = Sp. sucesivo = Pg. It. successivo, < ML. succésivus, successive, < L. succedere, pp. succensus, succedee; see succed, success.] 1. Following in order or uninterrupted course, either in time or in place, as a series of persons or things; consecutive.

Send the successive ills through ages down. Prior

2†. Inherited by succession; having or giving the right of succeeding to an inheritance; hereditary.

And countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title with your swords.

Shak., Tit. And., I. i. 1.

This function is successive, and by tradition they teach their eldest sons the mystery of this iniquity.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 752

Successive indorsements. See indorsement, 3 (a).

successively (suk-ses'iv-lī), adv. 1. In succession; in a series or uninterrupted order, one following another.

These wet and dry Seasons do as successively follow each other as Winter and Summer do with us.

Dampier, Voyages, II. III. 2.

2. By order of succession and inheritance.

But as successively from blood to blood,
Your right of birth, your empery, your own.

Shak., Rich. III., iii. 7. 135.

3†. Successfully; fully; completely; entirely. Fairfax. (Imp. Dict.)

successiveness (suk-ses'iv-nes), n. The state of being successive. Bailey.

successless (suk-ses'les), a. [< success + -less.] Without success.

Successless wars, and poverty behind.
Dryden, Pal. and Arc., ii. 587. successlessly (suk-ses'les-li), adv. In a successless manner; without success. Imp. Dict.

successlessness (suk-ses'les-nes), n. The state of being successless; want of success. Imp. Dict.

successor (suk-ses'or), n. [< F. successeur = Sp. sucesor = Pg. successor = It. successore, < L. succedere, follow after, succeed; see succed.] One who or that which succeeds or follows; one who takes the place which another has left, and sustains the like part or character: correlative to predecessor.

I here declare you rightful successor,
And heir immediate to my crown.

Dryden, Secret Love, v. 1.

The splendid literature of the classic period in Greece and Rome had no successors, but only the feeblest of imitators.

N. A. Rev., CXL. 329.

Singular successor. See singular.

successorship (suk-ses'or-ship), n. [< successor + -ship.] The state or office of a successor; the position of being in the line of succession.

successory (suk-ses'ō-ri), a. [< LL. successorius, of or belonging to succession, < successor, one who succeeds; see successor.] Of or pertaining to succession.

succi, n. Plural of succus.

succiduous (suk-sid'ū-us), a. [< L. succiduous, sinking down, failing, < succidere, sink down, < sub, under, + cadere, fall; see cadent. Cf. deciduous.] Ready to fall; falling. [Rare.] Imp. Dict.

succiferous (suk-sif'ē-rus), a. [< L. succus, succus, juice, + -ifer = F. ferre = E. bear; see -ferous.] Producing or conveying sap. Imp. Dict.

succin (suk'sin), n. [< L. succinum, succinum, amber (usually called electrum).] Amber.

succinate (suk'si-nāt), n. [< succin(ie) + -ate.] A salt of succinic acid.

succinated (suk'si-nā-ted), a. [< succin(ie) + -ate + -ed.] Combined with or containing succinic acid.

succinct (suk-singkt'), a. [= F. succinct = Sp. sucinto = Pg. It. succinto, < L. succinctus, pp. of succingere, gird below or from below, tuck up, < sub, under, + cingere, gird; see cincture.] 1. Drawn up, or held up, by or as by a girdle or band; passed through the girdle, as a loose garment the folds of which are so retained; hence, unimpeded. [Rare.]

His habit fit for speed succinct. Milton, P. L., III. 613.

Over her broad brow in many a round, . . .
Succinct, as toll prescribes, the hair was wound
In lustrous coils, a natural diadem.

Lowell, Ode for Fourth of July, 1876, l. 1.

2. Compressed into a small compass, especially into few words; characterized by verbal brevity; short; brief; concise; terse; as, a succinct account of the proceedings of the council.

Hee [man] is stiled a little and succinct world within himselfe.

Hemwood, Hierarchy of Angels, p. 81.

A strict and succinct style is that where you can take away nothing without losse, and that losse to be manifest.

B. Jonson, Discoveries.

A tale should be judicious, clear, succinct,
The language plain, and incidents well link'd.

Corrigan, Conversation, l. 235.

3. In entom., girdled, as a lepidopterous pupa; having the character of those chrysalids which are supported by a silken thread around the middle. See cut b under Papilionidae. = Syn. 2.

succinctly (suk-singkt'li), adv. In a succinct manner; briefly; concisely; tersely; as, the facts were succinctly stated.

succinctness (suk-singkt'nes), n. The state or character of being succinct; brevity; conciseness; terseness; as, the succinctness of a narration.

succinctorium (suk-singkt'ō-ri-um), n.; pl. succinctoria (-i). [LL., < L. succinctus, pp. of succingere, gird; see succinct.] A vestment worn on solemn occasions by the Pope, similar in shape to a mantle, and hanging on his left side from a cincture or girdle (also called succinctorium or subcingulum) answering to the lower of the two girdles formerly worn by bishops with a similar pendent ornament, sometimes on both sides. It has been variously explained as originally a towel or cloth, and connected by some with the gremial or the Greek epigonation, or as a purse, at first a pair of purses. It has embroidered upon it an Agnus Dei bearing a banner. Also subcinctorium.

succinctory (suk-singkt'ō-ri), n.; pl. succinctories (-ries). [< LL. succinctorium; see succinctorium.] Same as succinctorium.

Succinea (suk-sin'ē-i), n. [NL. (Drapiez), < L. succineus, succineus, of amber, < succinum, succinum, amber; see succin.] The typical genus of Succineidae; the amber-snails. Also Succinea, Succinea.

Succineidæ (suk-si-nē'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Succinea + -idæ.] A family of geophilous pulmonate gastropods, typified by the genus Succinea. The shell is more or less developed, spiral, thin, and transparent; the mantle is more or less included; the jaw is surmounted by an accessory quadrangular plate; and the teeth are differentiated into three kinds.

succinic (suk-sin'ik), a. [< succin + -ic.] (Of or pertaining to) amber; obtained from amber.—

Succinic acid, C<sub>10</sub>H<sub>8</sub>O<sub>4</sub>, a dibasic acid crystallizing in white monoclinic tables having a faint acid taste and quite soluble in water. It is obtained by the dry distillation of amber, by the fermentation of calcium malate, and in small amount is a product of a variety of fermentations. It was formerly employed in medicine, under the name of salt of amber. Also called acid of amber.

succinite (suk'si-nit), n. [< succin + -ite.] 1. An amber-colored variety of lime-garnet.—

2. A name given to amber.

succinuous (suk'si-nus), a. [< L. succinus, succinus, of amber; see succin.] Pertaining to or resembling amber.

succirubra-bark (suk-si-rō'brā-bārk), n. [< NL. succirubra, specific name, fem. of **succiruber*, < L. succus, succus, juice, + ruber, red; see red.] The bark of Cinchona succirubra; red cinchona.

succise (suk-sis'), a. In bot., appearing as if cut or broken off at the lower end. A. Gray.

succision† (suk-sizh'ōn), n. [< LL. succisio(n), a cutting off or away, < L. succidere, pp. succisus, cut off, cut from below, < sub, under, + cadere, cut.] The act of cutting off or down.

In the succision of trees. Bacon. (Imp. Dict.)

succivorous (suk-siv'ō-rus), a. [< L. succus, succus, juice, + vorare, devour.] Feeding upon the juices of plants, as an insect.

succlamation† (suk-lā-mā'shōn), n. [< L. succlamatio(n), a crying out, < succlamare, cry out, exclaim after or in reply, < sub, under, after, + clamare, cry out; see claim.] A shouting after; a calling after, as to deter.

Why may we not also, by some such succlamations as these, call off young men to the better side?

Plutarch's Morals (trans.), III. 412.

succor, succour (suk'or), v. t. [< ME. socouren, sokouren, soucouren, socoren, sucuren, < OF. succurrer, soscorre, soscorrer, soscorrir, later secourir, F. secourir = Pr. socorre, secorre, secorrer = Sp. socorrer = Pg. socorrer = It. soccorrere, < L. succurrere, subcurrere, run under, run to the aid of, aid, help, succor, < sub, under, + currere, run; see current.] To help or relieve when in difficulty, want, or distress; assist and deliver from suffering.

And anon the Cristene men kneleden to the grounde, and made hire preyeres to God, to sokoure hem.

Manderille, Travels, p. 290.

He is able to succor them that are tempted. Heb. II. 18.

Bethink thee, mayest thou not be born
To raise the crushed and succor the forlorn?

William Morris, Earthly Paradise, III. 106.

succor, succour (suk'or), n. [< ME. socour, socours, socurs, sucurs, < OF. succurrer, soscorre, soscorrer, soscorrir, later secourir, F. secourir = Pr. socorre, secorre, secorrer = Sp. socorrer = Pg. socorrer = It. soccorrere, < L. succurrere, subcurrere, run under, run to the aid of, aid, help, succor, < sub, under, + currere, run; see current.] To help or relieve when in difficulty, want, or distress; assist and deliver from suffering.

Thus, alas! withouten his socours,
Twenty tyme yswowned hath she thanne.

Chaucer, Good Women, l. 1311.

My noble father, . . .
Flying for succor to his servant.

Shak., Hen. VIII., II. 1. 169.

She . . . knew them all, had studied their wants, had again and again felt in what way they might best be succored, could the means of succor only be found.

Charlotte Brontë, Shirley, xiv.

2. The person or thing that brings relief; especially, troops serving as an aid or assistance.

Than com the socours on both sides, and ther be gan the bataille a-bowte Gawain fell and longe lastinge.

Merlin (T. E. T. S.), II. 108.

The levied succours that should lend him aid.

Shak., I. Hen. VI., iv. 4. 23.

Take up the bodies; mourn in heart, my friends;
You have lost two noble succours; follow me.

Fletcher, Double Marriage, v. 2.

succorable, succourable (suk'or-ə-bl), a. [= F. succurable; as succor + -able.] 1. Capable of being succored or relieved; admitting of succor.—2. Affording succor or relief; helpful; helping.

The goodness of God, which is very succorable, serveth to his servants that are wrongfully troubled. Cleaver, The Book of Proverbs, p. 431. (Latham.)

succorer, succourer (suk'or-er), n. [< ME. socor, socor; succor + -er.] One who succors, affords assistance or relief; a helper; a defender.

English Idioms (E. T. S.), p. 327.
I have been a succorer of many, and of myself also. Rom. xvi. 2.

succoress (suk'or-es), n. [< succor + -ess.] A female helper.

Of the three of Trojans, O Queene, thee succoress only I stand in need. Stanhurst, Anecd.

succorless, succourless (suk'or-less), a. [< succor + -less.] Destitute of succor, help, or relief. Drayton, Queen Isabella to Rich. II.

succory (suk'ō-ri), n. [< A corruption of cichory, now chicory; see chicory.] The chicory, (Helianthus tuberosus). See chicory.—Blue succory, the blue capeline. See Catananche.—Gum succory, an Old World composite plant, Chondrilla juncea, with straggling branches and small yellow heads, the leaves small except the radical. A narcotic gum is said to be obtained from it on the island of Lemnos. The plant is abundantly naturalized in Maryland and Virginia.—Lamb's-succory, a jawless composite herb, Artemisia pusilla, found in central and northern Europe. The scapes bear single small yellow heads.—Poisonous succory, Hyoscyamus (Hyoscyamus) foetida.—Swine's-succory, the hog-succory, or the lamb's-succory. Also called dicar nigellidort.—Wild succory, the common or wild chicory. (See also hog-succory.)

succose (suk'ōs), a. [< L. succus, succus, juice, + -ose.] Full of juice.

succotash (suk'ō-tash), n. [Also succatash, succatash, succatash; < Amer. Ind. (Narragansett) suck-quash.] A dish consisting of Indian corn (maize) and beans, variously prepared. The early settlers in New England and Virginia found it a favorite dish among the Indians. In winter it was still is in some parts of New England prepared from hulled corn and dried beans, but it usually consists of green corn and beans, with or without a piece of salt pork or other meat.

According to him [Roger Williams, Key, pp. 20, 22], the Indian succotash was boiled corn whole.

The wise Huron is welcome; . . . he is come to eat his succotash with his brothers of the lakes. J. T. Cooper, Last of Mohicans, xxviii.

Brand by the old woman poured the contents of the pot into a wooden trough, and disclosed a smoking mass of the Indian dish denominated succotash—a sort of soup of corn and beans, with a generous allowance of salt pork. H. B. Stowe, Oldtown, p. 157.

succour, succourable, etc. See succor, etc.

succub (suk'ub), n. [< F. succube, < L. succuba; see succuba.] Same as succuba.

succuba (suk'ū-bū), n.; pl. succubae (-bē). [< L. succuba, succuba, m. and f., one who has sexual connection with another, a strumpet, < succubare (cf. succubare), lie under: see succumb.] A female demon fabled to have sexual connection with men in their sleep.

W. Th call him Cacodemon, with his black gth there his succuba, his devil's seed, his spawn of Phlegethon, that, of my conscience, was bred of the spume of Coneytus. Beau and Fl., Knight of Malta, v. 2.

succubate (suk'ū-bāt), v. t.; pret. and pp. succubated, ppr. succubating. [< L. succubatus, pp. of succubare, lie under: see succuba.] To have carnal knowledge of (a man), as a succuba.

succubine (suk'ū-bin), a. [< succuba + -ine.] Of the nature of, or characteristic of, a succuba.

Oh happy the slip from his succubine grip That saved the Lord Abbot. Barham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 231.

succubous (suk'ū-bus), a. [< L. succubus, succubus, m. and f., one who has sexual connection with another, a strumpet, < succubare (cf. succubare), lie under: see succumb.] In bot., having the anterior margin of one leaf passing beneath the posterior margin of that succeeding it: opposed to incubous; noting the foliage of certain of the Jungmanniaceae.

succubus (suk'ū-bus), n.; pl. succubi (-bī). [< ML. succubus, a male form of L. succuba, regarded as female only: see succuba. Cf. incubus.] A demon fabled to have sexual intercourse with human beings in their sleep.

So Men (they say), by Hell's Delusions led, Have been a Succubus to their Bed. Conley, The Mistress, Not Fair.

The witches' circle intact, charms undisturbed That raised the spirit and succubus. Browning, King and Book, I. 230.

succula (suk'ū-lū), n.; pl. succulae (-lē). [Prop. succula; L. succula, a winch, windlass, capstan.]

A bare axis or cylinder with staves on it to move it round, but no drum.

succulence (suk'ū-lens), n. [< succulent (t) + -ence.] The character of being succulent; juiciness; as, the succulence of a peach.

succulency (suk'ū-len-si), n. [As succulence (see -cy).] Same as succulence.

succulent (suk'ū-lent), a. [= F. succulent = Sp. succulento = Pg. succulento = It. succulento.] L. succulentus, succulentus, full of juice, sappy, < succus, prop. succus, juice, < sugere, suck: see suck. Cf. suck.] 1. Full of juice; specifically, in bot., juicy; thick and fleshy; noting plants that have the stems or leaves thick or fleshy and juicy, as in the houseleek and live-for-ever, the orders Cactaceae, Crassulaceae, etc.

For the leaves are not succulent, little more juice is pressed out of them than they have imbibed. Cook, First Voyage, i. 18.

Heene—2. Figuratively, affording mental sustenance; not dry.

It occurred to her that when she had known about them [hempes of Tuzon heraldry] a good while they would cease to be succulent at themes of converse or meditation, and Mrs. Transome having known them all along, might have felt a vacuum in spite of them. George Eliot, Felix Holt, xi.

succulently (suk'ū-lent-ly), adv. In a succulent manner; juicily.

succulous (suk'ū-lus), a. [< L. succulent (t) + -ous.] Succulent. Imp. Dict.

succumb (su-kum'), v. t. [= F. succomber = Sp. succumbir = Pg. succumbir = It. succumbere, < L. succumbere, lie under, sink down, submit, yield. succumb, < suck, under, + cubare, lie down.] To sink or give way under pressure or superior force; be defeated; yield; submit; hence, to die.

He, too had thrall succumbed, had been led captive in Charles's triumph. Sir E. Crown, Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World, v.

In general, every evil to which we do not succumb is a benefactor. Emerson, Compensation.

succumbent (su-kum'-bent), a. [< succumb (t) + -ent.] ppr. succumbent, submit, yield: see succumb.] Yielding; submissive.

Queen Morpheus . . . used to make nature herself not only succumb to and passive to her desires, but actually subservient and pliable to her transmutations and changes. Harriet Parry of Beasts, p. 2. (Darwin.)

succumbentes (su-kum-ben'tez), n. pl. [L. pl. of ppr. succumbere, submit, fall down: see succumb.] The class of penitents also known as lucifers.

The succumbentes were passing the silver gates on their way out. J. M. Neale, Eastern Church, i. 210.

succursal (su-ker-sal), a. [< F. succursale, an establishment that contributes to the success of another, a subsidiary branch, < ML. succursus, and, help, succor: see succor.] Serving as a subsidiary church, or chapel of ease (which see, under chapel).

Not a city was without its cathedral, surrounded by its succursal churches, its monasteries and convents. Mulman, Hist. Latin Christianity, VI. 661.

succus (suk'us), n.; pl. succi (-sī). [NL. < L. succus, prop. succus, juice, moisture: see suck, < suck.] 1. In anat. and physiol., juice; one of certain fluid secretions of the body specified by a qualifying term.—2. In med., the extracted juice of different plants: as, succus liquorice, Spanish licorice.—Succus entericus, intestinal juice, the secretion of the small glands of the intestinal walls. It seems to have more or less feeble amylolytic and proteolytic properties.—Succus gastricus, gastric juice.—Succus pancreaticus, pancreatic juice.

succuss (su-kus'), v. t. [< L. succussus, pp. of succutere, fling up, shake up, < suck, under, + quatre, shake, disturb: see quash. Cf. concuss, discuss, percuss.] To shake suddenly for any purpose, as to elicit a splashing sound in pneumothorax.

succussation (suk-ū-sā'shon), n. [< L. succussare, pp. succussatus, shake or jerk up and down, freq. < succutere, pp. succussus, fling up: see succuss.] 1. A trot or trotting. [Rare.]

Lifting one foot before and the other foot behind, which is succussation or trotting. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., iv. 6.

2. A shaking; succession.

By a more frequent and a more convulsive elevation and depression of the diaphragm, and the succussions of the intercostal and abdominal muscles in laughter, to drive the gall and other bitter juices from the gall-bladder . . . down into their duodenum. Sterne, Tristram Shandy, iv. 22.

succussion (su-kush'on), n. [= F. succussion, < L. succussio (n-), a shaking, < succutere, shake up: see succuss.] 1. The act of shaking.—2. A shaking; a violent shock.

If the trunk is the principal seat of lesion, as . . . from violent succussion. J. M. Carnochan, Operative Surgery, p. 111.

3. A method in physical diagnosis which consists in grasping the thorax between both hands and shaking it quickly to elicit sounds, and thus to detect the presence of liquid, etc., in the pleural sacs.—Succussion sound, a splashing sound developed by sudden movements of the body, as in pneumothorax or pneumomphothorax.

succussive (su-kus'iv), a. [< L. succussus, a shaking, jolting, < succutere, shake up: see succuss.] Characterized by a shaking motion, especially an up-and-down movement.

such (such), a. and pron. [Early mod. E. also soch, soche; dial. sich, sech, Se. sic, sick, sik, etc.; < ME. such, such, soche, sich, also un- assibilated sich, sike, contracted, with loss of w, from swich, swech, swuch, swych, swyche, it-self contracted, with loss of i, from swilch, an assibilated form of swile, swilk, swyllk, < AS. swile, swile, swile = OS. sulik = OFries. sullik, sellich, selik, selk, salik, salik, salik, salik = MD. solick, solch, sulch, D. sulik = MLG. solik, sollik, sollek, solk, LG. söll, söll, söll, söll = OHG. sulih, solih, solh, MHG. sulich, solich, solch, G. solch = Icel. slíkr (> ME. slike) = OSw. satih, Sw. slík = Norw. slík = Dan. slig = Goth. swaleiks, such; < AS., etc., swā, so, + -lic, an adj. formative connected with gelic, like, lic, form, body: see so and like, -ly, and cf. which, Se. which and thilk, of similar formation with such, and each, which contains the same terminal element.] 1. a. 1. Of that kind; of the like kind or degree; like; similar. Such always implies from its sense a comparison with another thing, either unexpressed, as being involved in the context (as, we have never before seen such a sight (sc. as this is); we cannot approve such proceedings (sc. as these are); such men (sc. as he is) are dangerous, or expressed, such being then followed by as or that before the thing which is the subject of comparison (as, we have never had such a time as the present; give your children such precepts as tend to make them wiser and better; the play is not such that I can recommend it). As in such constructions often becomes by ellipsis the apparent subject of the verb of the second clause: as, such persons as are concerned in this matter. It is to be noted that, as with other pronominal adjectives, the indefinite article a or an never immediately precedes such, but is placed between the and the noun to which it refers, or such comes after the noun preceded by the article: as, such a man; such an honor; I never saw a man such as he.

Clerks that knowen this sholde kenne lordes, What David seide of suche men as the souter telleth. Piers Plowman (C), viii. 92.

I am soche a fole that I love a nother better than myself, and have hir lerned so moche, where thourgh I am thus be-closed. Martin (E. T. S.), iii. 694.

For truly, such as the noblemen be, such will the people be. Latimer, Sermon of the Plough.

The variety of the curious objects which it exhibiteth to the spectator is such that a man shall much wrong it to speak a little of it. Corjay, Crutides, I. 216.

True fortitude glories not in the feats of war as they are such, but as they serve to end War soonest by a victorious Peace. Milton, Hist. Eng., vi.

There is no place in Europe so much frequented by strangers, whether they are such as come out of curiosity, or such who are obliged to attend the court of Rome on several occasions. Addison, Remarks on Italy (Works, ed. Bohn, I. 420).

Trade brings men to look each other in the face, and gives the parties the knowledge that these enemies over sea or over the mountain are such men as we, who laugh and grieve, who love and fear as we do. Emerson, War.

When such is followed by an attributive adjective before the noun, it assumes a quasi-adverbial appearance, as if equivalent to so: as, such terrible deeds; such reckless men; such different views; but it is still properly adjective, as when with the indefinite article: as, such a terrible deed; such a reckless man.

Such terrible impression made the dream. Shak., Rich. III., i. 4. 63.

In Middle English such appears in another quasi-adverbial use, preceding a numeral, in the sense of 'as much,' or 'as many': as, such seven, 'seven such'—that is, 'seven times as many.'

This town is ful of ladyes al aboute, And to my doom, fayrer than suche twelve As ever she was, shal I fynden in some route. Chaucer, Troilus, iv. 402.

The length is suche ten as the deepness. Pilgrimage of the Manhode, p. 235. (Enye, Dict.)

Such without the correlative clause with as is often used emphatically, noting a high degree or a very good or very bad kind, the correlative clause being either obvious, as he did not expect to come to such honor (sc. as he attained), or quite lost from view, as, such a time! he is such a liar!

How have I lost a father! such a father! Such a one, Decius I am miserable Beyond expression. Beau and Fl., Laws of Candy, I. 2.

2. The same as previously mentioned or specified; not other or different.

A fyi yat to Mannes ye To see such a cheunrye. Arthur (ed. Furnivall), I. 300.

such

Soche was the a-vision that I saugh in my slepe.
Merlin (E. E. T. S.), iii. 632.
 In China they have a holy kind of Liquor made of such sort of Flowers for ratifying and binding of Bargains.
Howell, Letters, ii. 54.
 In another garden to the east is such another mosque, called by the Mahometans Zalousa, who pretend also that some holy person is buried there.
Pococke, Description of the East, II. i. 86.
 For such is fate, nor canst thou turn its course
 With all thy rage, with all thy rebel force.
Pope, Iliad, viii. 605.
Such was the transformation of the baronage of early England into the nobility of later times.
Stubbs, Const. Hist., § 299.
 3. Of that class: especially in the phrase as such, 'in that particular character.'
 Of onest merrth sche cowde rith mosche,
 Too daunce and syngre and othre suche.
Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 50.
 In it he melted lead for bullets
 To shoot at foes and sometimes pullets,
 To whom he bore so fell a grutch,
 He ne'er gave quarter t' any such.
S. Butler, Hudibras, I. i. 358.
 Witty men are apt to imagine they are agreeable as such.
Sterle, Spectator, No. 386.

4. Some; certain: used to indicate or suggest a person or thing originally specified by a name or designation for which the speaker, for reasons of brevity, of convenience or reserve, or from forgetfulness, prefers to substitute, or must substitute, a general phrase: often repeated, such or such, or such and such (even with a single subject, but in this case implying repetition of action or selection of instances).
 Newses then was brought unto the king
 That there was sike a won as hee.
Johnie Armstrong (Child's Ballads, VI. 251).
 She complayneth of him that, not contented to take the wheate, the bacon, the butter, the oyle, the cheese, to glue vnto such and such out of y<sup>e</sup> doores, but also steleth from her, to glue vnto his minion, that which she splinneth at the rock. Quevara, Letters (tr. by Howells, 1577), p. 310.
 I have appointed my servants to such and such a place.
 1 Sam. xxi. 2.
 When in rush'd one, and tells him such a knight
 Is new arriv'd. Daniel, Civil Wars, iii.
 In the mean time, those [conditions in life] of husband, wife parent, child, master, servant, citizen of such or such a city, natural-born subject of such or such a country, may answer the purpose of examples.
Bentham, Introduct. to Morals and Legislation, xvi. 11.
 From the earliest times we hear of the king of such and such a province, the arch king of all Ireland, the kings of Orkney and Man, even kings of Dublin.
The Century, XL. 295.

As such. See def. 3.—Never such. See never.—Such like. See like 2, a.
 II. pron. 1. Such a person or thing; more commonly with a plural reference, such persons or things: by ellipsis of the noun.
Such as sit in darkness and in the shadow of death.
 Ps. cvii. 10.

2. The same.
 I bring you smiles of pity, not affection;
 For such she sent.
Beau and Fl., Knight of Malta, I. 1.
Suchospondylia (sū'kō-spon-dil'i-i), n. pl.
 [NL., < (Gr. σοῖδος, the crocodile, + σπονδή, a vertebra: see spondyl.)] One of the major groups into which Reptilia (except Pleurospen- dylia) are divisible, characterized by having upon the anterior dorsal vertebrae long and divided transverse processes, the divisions of these with which the tubercles of the ribs articulate being longer than those with which the heads of the ribs articulate. The group contains the existing order Crocodylia, and the fossil orders Dicynodontia, Ornithoscelida, and Pterosauria, which are collectively thus distinguished from the one hand from Herpospondylia and on the other from Pero- spondylia. See these words, and Pleurospendylia.

suchospondylia (sū'kō-spon-dil'i-an), a. [ Suchospondylia + -an.] Having a crocodilian conformation of the vertebrae with regard to the articulation of the ribs, in consequence of the occurrence of long divided transprocesses of the vertebrae; pertaining to the Suchospon- dylia, or having their characters.

suchospondylous (sū'kō-spon-dil'i-us), a. [As Suchospondylia + -ous.] Same as suchospon- dylian.

suck<sup>1</sup> (suk), v. [Early mod. E. also souke; < ME.
souken, souken, sucken (pret. sec, soc, sok, sok), <
 AS. sūcan (pret. siac, pp. socæn), also sūgan =
 MD. suighen, D. zuigen = MLG. sūgen = OHG.
sūgan, MHG. sūgen, G. saugen = Icel. sūga, sūga = Sw. suga = Dan. suge, suck (Goth. not recorded): Tout. root in two forms, √ suk and √ sug; = W. sugno, suck, = Gael. sug, suck, = OIr. sugim, Ir. suglaím, suck, = L. sugere (pp.
suctus) (LL. **suetiari*, > It. succiare = OF.
succer, sucer), suck (cf. L. lucus, succus, juice:

see succulent, suction); = Lett. sugu, suck, = OBulg. sūsati, suck. Hence ult. soak (of which the ME. form soken was more or less confused with the ME. forms of suck), suckle, suckling, honeysuckle, etc.] I. trans. 1. To draw into the mouth by action of the lips and tongue which produces a partial vacuum.

The milk thou suck'st from her did turn to marble.
Shak., Tit. And., ii. 3. 144.
 The Bee and the Spider suck Honey and Poison out of one Flower.
Howell, Letters, iii. 4.

2. To draw something from with the mouth;
 specifically, to draw milk from.

A certain woman . . . lifted up her voice, and said unto him, Blessed is the womb that bare thee, and the paps which thou hast sucked.
 Luke xi. 27.
 Did a child suck every day a new nurse, I make account it would be no more affrighted with the change of faces at six months old than at sixty. Locke, Education, § 115.
 Some [bees] watch the food, some in the meadows ply,
 Taste every bud, and suck each blossom dry.
Addison, tr. of Virgil's Georgics, iv.

3. To draw in or imbibe by any process; inhale; absorb: usually with in, out, away, etc.:
as, to suck in air; a sponge sucks in water.

Wise Dara's province, year by year,
 Like a great sponge, sucked wealth and plenty up.
Lowell, Dara.

4. To draw or drain.
 Old ocean too suck'd through the porous globe.
Thomson, Autumn, l. 770.

5. To draw in, as a whirlpool; swallow up; in-gulf.

As waters are by whirlpools sucked and drawn. Dryden.
 Thus far no suspicion has been suffered to reach the disciple that he is now rapidly approaching to a torrent that will suck him into a new faith.
De Quincy, Essences, iii.

6t. To draw in or obtain by fraudulent devices; soak.

For ther is no theef withoute a lowke,
 That helpeth hym to wasten, and to sowke
 Of that he brybe kan or borwe may.
Chaucer, Cook's Tale, l. 52.

To suck in. (a) To draw into the mouth; imbibe; absorb. (b) To cheat; deceive; take in. [Slang].—To suck the monkey. See monkey.—To suck up, to draw into the mouth; draw up by any sucking action.

II. intrans. 1. To draw fluid into the mouth; draw by producing a vacuum, as with a tube.

Where the bee sucks, there suck I.
Shak., Tempest, v. i. 88.

2. To draw milk from a teat: said of the young of a mammal.—3. To draw air when the water is low or the valve imperfect: said of a pump.

This pump never sucks; these screws are never loose.
Emerson, Farming.

suck<sup>1</sup> (suk), n. [< suck<sup>1</sup>, v. Cf. suck<sup>2</sup>, n.] 1.
 Suction by the mouth or in any way; the act of sucking; a sucking force.

Powerful whirlpools, sucks and eddies.
Scribner's Mag., VIII. 611.

2. Nourishment drawn from the breast.

They moreover drawe unto themselves, together with their sucke, even the nature and disposition of their nurses.
Spenser, State of Ireland.
 I have given suck, and know
 How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me.
Shak., Macbeth, I. 7. 51.

3. A small draught. [Colloq.]
 Well. No house? nor no tobacco?
 Tap. Not a suck, sir;
 Nor the remainder of a single can.
Massinger, New Way to Pay Old Debts, I. 1.

4. Rum or liquor of some kind. Tufts's Glos- sary.—5. Same as suckel, 1.

suck<sup>2</sup> (suk), n. [< OF. (and F.) suc = Sp. suco = Pg. succo = It. succo, sugo, < L. succus, prop.
sūcus, juice, moisture, < sugere, pp. suctus, suck:
 see suck<sup>1</sup>, v., and cf. suck<sup>1</sup>, n., with which suck<sup>2</sup> is confused.] Juice; succulence.

The force whereof peareth the sucke and marle [marrow] within my bones.
Palace of Pleasure, II. 85 b. (Nares.)

suckatasht, n. Same as succentash.

sucken (suk'n), n. [Also suckin; a var. of so- ken.] In Scots law, the district attached to a mill, or the whole lands adistricted to a mill, the tenants of which are bound to bring their grain to the mill to be ground. See thirlage. Jamie- son. [Lowland Scotch.]

suckener (suk'nér), n. [< suken + -er<sup>1</sup>.] A tenant bound to bring his grain to a certain mill to be ground. See sucken.

suckenyi, n. [ME. suckiny, suckenyne, < OF. sou- quenye, sosquenye, souskanie, a surtout (> F. dim. souquenille, chiquenille), < ML. soscantia, < MGr.
sookavia, a surtout; origin unknown.] A loose frock worn over their other clothes by carters, etc.

sucker

She hadde on a sukkenye,
 That not of hempe ne heerdiss was.
Rom. of the Rose, l. 1233.

sucker (suk'ér), n. [< suck<sup>1</sup> + -er<sup>1</sup>.] 1. One who or that which sucks; a suckling.

The entry of doubts is as so many suckers or sponges to draw use of knowledge.

Bacon, Advancement of Learning, ii.
 Specifically—(a) A sucking pig: a commercial term.

For suckers the demand was not very brisk.
Standard, Sept. 3, 1882. (Encyc. Diet.)

(b) A new-born or very young whale. (c) In ornith, a bird which sucks or is supposed to do so: only in composition; See goatsucker, honey-sucker. (d) In ichth, one of numerous fishes which suck in some way or are supposed to do so, having a conformation of the protrusive lips which suggests a sucker, or a sucker-like organ on any part of the body by means of which the fish adheres to foreign objects.

(1) Any North American cyprinoid of the family Catostomi- dæ, as a carp-sucker, chub-sucker, hog-sucker, etc. There are about 60 species, of some 12 or 14 genera, almost confined to the fresh waters of North America, though one or two are Asiatic; they are little esteemed for food, the flesh being insipid and full of small bones. Leading generic forms besides Catostomus are Ictiobus and Bubalichthys, the buffalo-fishes; Carpoides, the carp-suckers, as C. cyprinus, the quillback or skimbuck; Cylopterus, as C. elongatus, the black-horse, or gourd-seed sucker; Pantosteus, the hard-headed suckers; Erimyzon, the chub-suckers, as E. succella, the sweet sucker; Mintyremia, the spotted suckers; Moxo- stoma, some of whose many species are called mullet, chub-mullet, jump-rocks, red-horse, etc.; and Quassilabia, or hare-lipped suckers. (See the distinctive names, with var-ous cuts.) The typical genus Catostomus is an extensive one, including some of the commonest species, as C. com- mersoni, the white or brook sucker, 18 inches long, widely distributed from Labrador to Montana and southward to Florida; its section Hypentelium contains H. nigricans, the hog-sucker, hog-molly, or stone-lugger, etc. (2) Any fish of the genus Lepidogaster. The Cornish sucker is L. gouani; the Connemara sucker, L. candollei; the bimaculated or network sucker, L. bimaculatus. See cut under Lepidogaster. [Eng.] (3) A small-fish or sea-small; one of several different members of the family Liparididæ, as the unctuous sucker, Liparis vulgaris. See cuts under snail- fish. (4) The lump-sucker or lump-fish. See cut under Cyclopterus. (5) The sucking-fish or remora. See cut under Echeneis. (6) A cyclostomous fish, as the glutinous ling, Myxine glutinosa. See cut under lamp, 3. (7) A Californian food-fish, the semionid Menticirrhus undulatus.

2. A suctorial part or organ; a formation of parts by means of which an animal sucks, imbibes, or adheres by atmospheric pressure, as if sucking; a sucking-tube or sucking-disk. (a)
 The fin of a fish formed into a suctorial disk, as that of the remora. See cuts under Echeneis and Rhombocottus. (b)
 The mouth of a myzont or cyclostomous fish. (c) The haustellate or siphonal mouth-parts of an insect or siphonstomous crustacean; a sucking-tube, especially of a flea.
 See cut under chrysalis. (d) One of the cup-shaped sucking-disks or cupules on the lower surface of the expanded tarsi, found in certain aquatic beetles. They are either affixed directly to the joint, or the smaller ones are elevated on stems, and resemble wine-glasses in shape. (e)
 An adhesive pad of an insect's foot, as a fly's, by means of which it walks on walls and ceilings; a pulvillus. See cut under house-fly. (f) A sucking-disk or acetabulum of the arms of a cephalopod, as an octopus; one of the ac-etabuliferous arms of such an animal. See cut under euttle- fish. (g) An adhesive or suctorial facet on the head or tail of various parasitic worms, as tapeworms or leeches; a bothrium. See cuts under Eucephalus leech, and cestoid.
 (h) The disk-like suctorial mouth of a leech. (i) One of the tubular pedicels or tube-feet of echinoderms, as starfishes; a sucker-foot or sucker-tube.

3. The piston of a suction-pump.

Pretty store of oil must be poured into the cylinder,
 . . . that the sucker may slip up and down in it more smoothly and freely.
Boyle, Works, I. 6.

4. A pipe or tube through which anything is drawn.—5. In bot.: (a) A shoot rising from a subterranean creeping stem. Plants which emit suckers freely, as the raspberry and rose, are readily propagated by division. (b) A sprout from the root near or at a distance from the trunk, as in the pear and white poplar, or an adventitious shoot from the body or a branch of a tree.

Here, therefore, is our safest course, to make a retrenchment of all those excrescences of affections which like the wild and irregular sucker, draw away nourishment from the trunk.
Jer. Taylor, Works (ed. 1835), I. 103.

(c) Same as haustorium. Compare propagulum
 (a).—6. A small piece of leather to the center of which a string is attached, used by children as a toy. When rendered flexible by wetting and pressed firmly down on a smooth object, as a stone, the adhesion of the two surfaces, due to atmospheric pressure, is so firm that a stone of considerable weight may be lifted by the string.

7. A parasite; a sponger; in recent use, also, a stupid person; a dolt. [Colloq.]

This sucker thinks nane wise
 But him that can to immense riches rise.
Allan Ramsay, The General Mistake.

A person readily deceived . . . the . . . Suckers, . . .
 who, despite . . . oft-repeated warnings, . . . swallowed the hook so clumsily baited with "Bohemian Oats."
New York Semi-weekly Tribune, Jan. 11, 1887.

8. A cant name for an inhabitant of Illinois.
 [U. S.]—9. Same as suckel, 1. [Scotch.]

sucker (suk'ér), v. [sucker, n.] I. trans. 1. To strip off suckers or shoots from; deprive of suckers; specifically, to remove superfluous shoots from the root and at the axils of the leaves of (tobacco).

How the Indians ordered their tobacco I am not certain, but I am informed they used to let it all run to seed, according to the leaves to keep the sprouts from growing upon and starving them; and when it was ripe they pulled off the leaves, cured them in the sun, and laid them to use.

Beverley, Virginia, II. 20.

2. To provide with suckers: as, the suckered arms of a cuttlefish. H. Spencer, Prin. of Psychology, § 5.

II. intrans. To send out suckers or shoots.

Its most marked characteristics, however, are its tendency to sucker immediately.

Scribner's Mag., March, 1850, p. 762.

suckerel (suk'ér-el), n. [suckl + -erel, on model of pickrel.] A catostomid fish of the Mississippi valley, Cyprinodon elongatus; the Missouri or round-seed sucker, or black-horse, a singular catostomid of large size (14 to 24 feet long), and of very dark or blackish coloration. See cut under Cyprinodon.

sucker-fish (suk'ér-fish), n. The sucking-fish or remora. Jour. Anthropol. Inst., XIX. 325.

sucker-foot (suk'ér-fút), n. 1. One of the suckorial tube-feet, or sucker-tubes, of an echinoderm; an ambulacral pedicel capable of acting as a sucker.—2. In entom., a proleg sucker-mouthed (suk'ér-móutht), a. Having a mouth like that of the catostomid fishes called suckers: as, the sucker-mouthed buffalo, a fish, Itiobius hubatus.

sucker-rod (suk'ér-rod), n. A rod which connects the brake and the bucket of a pump. E. H. Knight.

sucker-tube (suk'ér-tüb), n. One of the sucker-foot of an echinoderm.

sucker (suk'et), n. [Partly an ecom. form of suckade, partly suckl + -et. Cf. equiv. suckl, 5, sucker, 9.] 1. A dried sweetmeat or sugar-plum; hence, a delicacy of any kind.

Wadum, all razeinge, brake vppe Pintados Caben, broke open his chesest, epyed suchie pronsyon of couldie stilled waters and ruckettes as he hade provided for his health and lefte hym nothyng.

J. Eden, First Books on America (ed. Arber, p. 377)

But, monsieur,

Here are sucklets, and sweet dishes.

Tetcher, Sea Voyage v. 2.

2. A sucking rabbit. Hallucell. [Obsolete or provincial in both uses.]

suckfish (suk'fish), n. 1. The sucking-fish or remora.—2. A crustacean parasite of the sperm-whale; so called by whalers. Loftail is said to be done by the whale to rid itself of these troublesome creatures. C. M. Seamon.

suckin (suk'in), n. See sucken.

suck-in (suk'in), n. [suck in: see suckl.] A take-in; a fraud. [Slang.]

sucking (suk'ing), p. a. [ME. souking; ppr. of suckl, r.] 1. Drawing or deriving nourishment from the mother's breast; not yet weaned; very young.

There were three sucking pigs serv'd up in a dish Marringer, City Madam, II. 1.

Hence—2. Figuratively, very young and inexperienced; undergoing training; in the early stage of a career; in leading-strings; "vealy."

My enemies are but sucking critics, who would fain be nibbling at their teeth are come. Dryden, All for Love, Pref.

The very curates . . . she . . . looked upon as sucking saints Charlotte Brontë, Shirley, xiv.

3j. Draining; exhausting.

Accidia is a sucking pore.

Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 117.

Sucking center, a nervous center believed to exist in the medulla, with afferent fibers from the fifth and glossopharyngeal nerves—the efferent fibers being in the facial, hypoglossal, third division of the fifth, and branches of the cervical plexus, which supply the depressors of the lower jaw.—Sucking dove, a sucker or dupe; a simpleton; a cony; a gull.

sucking-bottle (suk'ing-bot'l), n. A nursing-bottle.

sucking-disk (suk'ing-disk), n. A sucker; a discoidal sucking-organ, as an acetabulum; applied to any flat or concave expansive surface which functions as a sucker.

sucking-fish (suk'ing-fish), n. 1. A fish of the family Echeneididae; a remora.—2. The lamprey. [Local, Eng.]

sucking-pump (suk'ing-pump), n. Same as suction-pump.

sucking-stomach (suk'ing-stum'ak), n. The haustellate or suckorial stomach of various insects and some crustaceans, which sucks up the juices of plants on which they feed or of the host on which they are parasites.

suckinyt, n. Same as suckeny.

suckle (suk'l), v.; pret. and pp. suckled, ppr. suckling. [Freq. of suckl. Cf. suckling.] I. trans. To give suck to; nurse at the breast.

She was a wight, if ever such wight were, . . . To suckle fools and chronicle small beer. Shak., Othello, II. 1. 161.

II. intrans. To suck; nurse.

suckle (suk'l), n. [suckle, v.] A teat.

Two paps, which are not only suckles, but stilts to creep a shore upon. Sir T. Herbert, Travels, p. 26.

suckler (suk'lér), n. [suckle + -er.] An animal which suckles its young; any mammal; also, a young one not yet weaned; a suckling.

Sucklers, or even weaned calves.

The Field, Jan. 10, 1886. (Encyc. Diet.)

sucklers (suk'lérz), n. [Pl. of suckler.] The red clover, Trifolium pratense; also, the white clover, T. repens: so called because the flowers are sucked for honey. Britten and Holland. [Prov. Eng.]

suckling (suk'ling), n. and a. [ME. sokling, soklung, soklynge (= MD. sugelinc, sooghe-luck, D. zuogling = MHG. sügelinc, G. säugling), n. suckling, soken, sonken, suck, + -ling. Cf. suckl.] I. n. 1. A suckler; a young animal not yet weaned.

Rubes and sucklings. Ps. viii. 2.

The tenderest Kid And fattest of my flock, a Suckling yet, That we're had Nourishment but from the Teat. Congreve, tr. of Eleventh Satire of Juvenal.

2. (a) The white clover, Trifolium repens; (b) the red clover, T. pratense; (c) the honeysuckle, Lonicera Periclymenum; so called because their flower-tubes are sucked for honey. Britten and Holland. [Prov. Eng.]—Lamb's suckling, the white clover and the bird's-foot trefoil, Lotus corniculatus.—Yellow suckling, an agricultural name for the small yellow clover, Trifolium minus.

II. a. Suckling, as a young mammal; not yet weaned; hence, figuratively, young and inexperienced.

O breast whereat some suckling sorrow clings.

Sirburne, Laus Veneris.

suckstone (suk'stón), n. [suckl, r., + obj. stone.] The suckfish, Echeneis remora.

A little fish called a suckstone, that staideth a ship under sail, remora. Withals, Dict., 1608.

sucré, n. and r. A Middle English form of sugar.

sucré (suk'kre), n. A silver coin of Ecuador, of the weight of 25 grams and the fineness of .900. Rep. of Sec. of Treasury, 1886, pp. 230, 412, 413.

sucrose (suk'krós), n. [F. sucre (see sugar) + -ose.] A general name for the sugars identical in composition and in general properties with cane-sugar, having the formula (C<sub>12</sub>H<sub>22</sub>O<sub>11</sub>)<sub>n</sub>: same as saccharose.

suction (suk'shon), n. [OF. suction, F. succion = Sp. succion, L. as if **suctio(n)-*, sugere, ppr. suctus, suck: see suckl.] The process or condition of sucking; the removal of air or gas from any interior space producing a diminution of pressure which induces an inrush of gas or liquid to restore the equilibrium. If the process is maintained, a continuous current is produced. See suction-pump and pump. Also used attributively.—Suction curette of Teale, an instrument employed for the removal of a soft exaract from the eye.

suction-anemometer (suk'shon-an-o-mom'e-tér), n. An anemometer in which a diminution of pressure caused by the wind is used as a measure of its velocity. Two different forms have been proposed, corresponding to two distinct ways in which a moving fluid produces a diminution of pressure. This, the so-called suction is produced in the one by the wind blowing through a horizontal tube having a contracted section, and in the other by the wind blowing across the mouth of a vertical tube.

suction-box (suk'shon-boks), n. In paper-making, a chamber in which there is a partial vacuum, placed below the web of pulp to assist in removing the water from it.

suction-chamber (suk'shon-châm'bér), n. The barrel or chamber of a pump into which the liquid is delivered from the suction-pipe.

suction-fan (suk'shon-fan), n. In milling, a fan for withdrawing by suction chaff and refuse from grain, or steam and hot air from meal as it comes from the burs. E. H. Knight.

suction-pipe (suk'shon-píp), n. 1. The pipe leading from the bottom of a pump-barrel or cylinder to the well, cistern, or reservoir from which the water or other liquid is to be drawn up. See pump.—2. An air-tight pipe running from beneath a water-wheel to the level of the tail-race. It is said to render the whole fall available. E. H. Knight.

suction-plate (suk'shon-plát), n. A form of dental plate for supporting an upper set of artificial teeth, held in position by atmospheric pressure induced by a vacuum between the plate and the roof of the mouth.

suction-primer (suk'shon-pri'mér), n. A small force-pump fitted to a steam-pump, and used to fill the pump and drive out the air before admitting steam to the main pump.

suction-pump (suk'shon-pump), n. A pump having a barrel placed above the level of the water to be drawn, a suction-pipe extending from the barrel down into the water to be raised, an inlet-valve opening inward or toward the piston, and an outlet-valve in the piston. When the piston is raised, the air in the barrel below the piston expands, its tension is correspondingly diminished, and the pressure of the external air upon the surface of the liquid outside forces it up into the suction-tube. See pump.

suction-valve (suk'shon-valv), n. 1. In a suction-pump, the valve in the bottom of the barrel, below the piston.—2. In a steam-engine, a valve through which the rise of the plunger causes the water from the hot-well to flow into the feed-pump.

Suctorina (suk-tó'ri-ná), n. pl. [NL, neut. pl. of suctorius: see suctorious.] Suctorial animals; applied to various zoological groups in which the mouth is suctorial, haustellate, siphonostomous, or otherwise fitted for sucking. Specifically—(a) In ichth., the cyclostomous fishes, or myxozonts; the lampreys and hags, having the mouth formed into a sucker; in Cuvier's system, the second family of Chondropterygii branchiis fixis, later called Cyclostomata, or Cyclostomi, and Myxozontes, and now known as the class Marisipobranchii. Also Suctorii. See cut under lamprey. (b) In Vermes: (1) The suctorial or discophorous annelids; the leeches; now called Hirudinea. See cut under leech. (2) A branch of the phylum Platyhelmintha, composed of the three classes Trematodea, Cestodea, and Hirudinea: an artificial group contrasted with a branch Ciliata. E. R. Lankester. (c) In entom., the suctorial apterous insects: so called by De Geer; in Latreille's system, the fourth order of insects, also called by him Siphonaptera, and now known as Aphaniptera; the fleas. (d) In Crustacea, the Rhizocephala or Centrogonida. (e) In Protozoa, the suctorial, acinetiform, or tentaculiferous infusorians; in the classification of Claparède and Lachmann (1858-60), the third order of Infusoria, consisting of a family Acinetina, with 8 genera: called by Kent Tentaculifera suctorina. See Tentaculifera.

suctorial (suk-tó'ri-ál), a. [suctori-ous + -al.] 1. Adapted for sucking; functioning as a sucker or sucking-organ of any kind; sucking; haustellate: as, the suctorial mouth of a lamprey; the suctorial tongue (antlia) of a butterfly or moth; the suctorial proboscis of a flea; the suctorial disk of a sucking-fish, an octopod, a leech; the suctorial facets of a trematoid worm; the suctorial tentacles of an infusorian.—2. Capable of sucking; fitted for imbibing fluid or for adhering by means of suckers; provided with a sucking-organ, whether for imbibing or for adhering; of or pertaining to the Suctorina, in any sense: as, a suctorial bird, fish, worm, insect, crustacean, or animalcule.—Suctorial fishes, the cyclostomous fishes, or lampreys and hags: same as Suctorina (a). The lancelets have been called fringed-mouthed suctorial fishes.

suctorian (suk-tó'ri-an), n. [suctori-ous + -an.] A suctorial animal; a member of the Suctorina, in any sense; especially, a cyclostomous fish.

suctorious (suk-tó'ri-us), a. [NL. suctorius, L. suctorius, sugere, ppr. suctus, suck: see suckl.] Same as suctorial.—Suctorious mandibles, in entom., mandibles which are tubular, having an orifice through which liquid food passes to the mouth, as in the larva of certain aquatic beetles and in the young ant-lion.

sud (sud), n. [A var. of sod, or from the same ult. source: see sod, seethe. Cf. suds.] 1. The drift-sand left in meadows by the overflowing of rivers. [Prov. Eng.].—2. A young scallop of the first year, from July to November.

sud (sud), v. t.; pret. and pp. sudded, ppr. sudding. [sud, n.] To cover with drift-sand by flood. Wright. [Prov. Eng.]

sudamina (sü-dam'i-nä), n. pl. [NL., L. sudare, sweat: see sudation.] In pathol., vesicles resembling millet-seeds in form and magnitude, appearing on the skin in various fevers.

In sudamina alba the epithelium is macerated and the vesicular contents milky; in sudamina crystallina the vesicles are clear; and in sudamina rubra they have a reddish base.

sudaminal (sū-dam'i-nāl), a. [< sudamina + -al.] Pertaining to or of the nature of sudamina.

Sudanese (sū-dā-nēs' or -nēz'), a. and n. [< Sudan (soo dof.) + -ese.] I. a. Of or pertaining to Sudan, or Soudan, a region in Africa lying south of Sahara, and sometimes extended to include the valley of the middle Nile and the region eastward to the Red Sea.

II. n. sing. and pl. An inhabitant or the inhabitants of Sudan.

Also Soudanese.

sudarium (sū-dū'ri-um), n.; pl. sudaria (-i). [L.: soo sudary.] A handkerchief.

The most intrepid veteran of us all dares no more than wipe his face with his cambric sudarium.

Sydney Smith, in Lady Holland, III. Specifically—(a) The legendary sweat-cloth; the handkerchief of St. Veronica, according to tradition miraculously impressed with the mark of Christ; also, the napkin about Christ's head (John xx. 7). (b) In general, any miraculous portrait of Christ. See verruce. (c) Same as maniple, i. (d) The orarium or vesture of a pastoral staff.

sudary (sū-dū'ri), n.; pl. sudaries (-riz). [< ME. sudarye, < L. sudarium, a cloth for wiping off perspiration, a handkerchief, < sudare, sweat: soo sudation.] Same as sudarium.

He shewed me the clothe in ye whiche I wrapped his body and also the sudarye that I bounde his hede withall.

Joseph of Arimathea (E. E. T. S.), p. 30. Here a monk fumbled at the sick man's mouth With some undoubted relic — a sudary.

Of the Virgin. Browning, Paracelsus, III. sudation (sū-dū'shōn), n. [< L. sudatio(n)-, a sweating, perspiration, < sudare, pp. sudatus, swent: soo sweat.] A sweating.

sudatorium (sū-dū-tō'ri-um), n.; pl. sudatoria (-i). [L., < sudare, pp. sudatus, swent.] A hot-air bath for producing perspiration.

sudatory (sū-dū-tō'ri), n. and a. [< L. sudatorium, pertaining to or serving for sweating, < sudare, pp. sudatus, swent.] I. n.; pl. sudatories (-riz). That which is sudorific; a sweat-bath; a sudatorium; a diaphoretic.

Neere to this cave are the natural stoves of St. Germain, of the nature of sudatories in certain chambers partitioned with stone for the sick to sweat in.

Lucy, Diary, Feb. 7, 1615.

II. a. 1. Sweating or perspiring.—2. Promoting or inducing perspiration; sudorific; diaphoretic. — Sudatory fever, sweating-sickness. sudd (sud), n. [< Ar. sudd, sudd, a barrier, obstacle.] An impenetrable mass of floating water-plants interlaced with trunks of trees and decayed vegetable matter, forming floating islands in the White Nile.

It is in this part of the White Nile that, from time to time, forms the sudd that vegetable barrier which completely closes the river to navigation.

Scribner's Mag., VI. 529.

sudden (sud'n), a. and n. [Early mod. E. also suddain, suddaine, suddine, < ME. suddain, suddin, sodeyn, soden, soder, < OF. suddain, sodeyn, suddain, soudain, soudain, F. soudain = Pr. subitan, subitan, subitan = Sp. subitaneo = Pg. subitaneo = It. subitaneo, subitaneo, sudden, < L. subitanus, ML. also subitanus, sudden, < subitus, sudden, lit. that which has come stealthily, orig. pp. of subire, come or go stealthily, < sub, under, + ire, go: see thir. Cf. subitaneous.] I. a. 1. Happening without notice, instantly and unexpectedly; immediate; instant.

To glad, in to for, but kepe thee cene bitwene Forles, or luere, or any case sudden.

From lightning and tempest, from plague, pestilence and famine, from battle and murder, and from sudden death, Good Lord, deliver us.

Book of Common Prayer, Litany. For when they shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them.

1 Thes. v. 3.

2. Found or hit upon unexpectedly.

Up sprung a suddain Grove, where every Tree

Imploped was with furdow softest throats

J. Beaumont, Psyche, IV. 55

A sudden road! a long and ample way

Pope, Essay, xv. 103.

A sudden little river crossed my path,

As unexpected as a serpent comes

Browning, Child's Roland

3. Hastily made, put in use, employed, prepared, etc.; quick; rapid.

Never was such a sudden scholar made

Shak., Hen. V. I. 1. 32

These pious flourishes and colours, examin'd thoroughly, are like the Apples of Asphatils, appearing goodly to the sudden eye, but look well upon them, or at least but touch them, and they turne into Chiders.

Milton, Ilkonoklastes, xlv.

Nothing is more certain than that great poets are not sudden prodigies, but slow results.

Lowell, Study Windows, p. 231.

4. Hasty; violent; rash; precipitate; passionate.

The wordes of this sodeyn Diomede.

Chaucer, Troilus, v. 1024.

I grant him bloody,

Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,

Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin

That has a name.

Shak., Macbeth, IV. 3. 60.

How, child of wrath and anger! the loud lie?

For what, my sudden boy?

J. Jonson, Alchemist, IV. 1.

5. In zoöl., abrupt; sharply defined from neighboring parts: as, a sudden antennal club; a sudden truncation.—Syn. 1. Unexpected, unanticipated, unlooked-for, abrupt.

II. n. That which is sudden; a surprise; an unexpected occurrence. [Obsolete except in the phrases below.]

I would wish parents to mark heedfully the witty excesses of their children, especially at sudden and surprizes.

Sir H. Wotton, Reliquie, p. 61.

All of (on) a sudden, at the sudden, on a (the) sudden, of a sudden, of the sudden, sooner than was expected; without the usual preparatives; all at once and without notice; hastily; unexpectedly; suddenly.

Before we had gone far, we saw all of a sudden about fifty Arab horse coming towards us; immediately every one had his fire arms ready.

Pococke, Description of the East, II. i. 145.

In the warro wee have scene many Captaines lose for no other cause but for that, when they should have done a thing at the soudain, they have sit downe with great leysure to take counsell.

Guevara, Letters (tr. by Helwiese, 1577), p. 70.

How art thou lost! how on a sudden lost.

Milton, P. L., IX. 600.

When you have a mind to leave your master and are too hastily to break the matter, for fear of offending him, the best way is to grow rude and saucy of a sudden.

Sir J. Advice to Servants (General Directions).

Why may not I be a favourite on the sudden? I see nothing against it.

Beau. and Fl., Woman-Hater, I. 3.

O' the sudden, as good gifts are wont befall.

Browning, Ring and Book, II. 155.

On such a sudden, so suddenly.

Is it possible, on such a sudden, you should fall into so strong a liking with old Sir Rowland's youngest son?

Shak., As you Like It, I. 3. 27.

Upon all suddenst, for all unexpected occurrences; for all emergencies.

Be circumspect and careful to have your ships in readiness, and in good order always, and upon all suddenst.

Hakluyt's Voyage, I. 151.

sudden (sud'n), adv. [< sudden. a.] Suddenly; unexpectedly.

suddenly (sud'n-li), adv. [< ME. sodeynly, sodeynliche; < sudden + -ly.] 1. In a sudden or unexpected manner; unexpectedly; hastily; without preparation or premeditation; quickly; immediately.—2. In zoöl., sharply; abruptly; squarely: as, a part suddenly truncate.

suddenness (sud'n-ness), n. The state or character of being sudden, in any sense; a coming or happening without previous notice.

suddenly (sud'n-ti), n. [*< OF. soudainete, F. soudainete, < ML. *subitanita(-s), suddenness, < L. subitanus, sudden: see sudden.*] Suddenness. [Scotch.]—On (of) a suddenly, on a sudden; without premeditation.

My father's tongue was loosed of a sudden.

Scott, Redgauntlet, letter vi.

sudder (sud'er), a. [< Hind. sudr, < Ar. sudr, chief.] Chief: in Bengal specifically noting several important departments of government: as, the sudder court or sudder adawlet; the sudder board (of revenue); the sudder station, or the chief station of a district, where the civil officials reside.

An Indian lawyer expresses this by saying that the three older High Courts were formed by the fusion of the Supreme and Sudder Courts, words which have the same meaning, but which indicate very different tribunals.

Maine, Village Communities, p. 30.

sud-oil (sud'oil), n. In soap-making, oil or fat recovered from soapy waters or suds. The addition to such waters of an acid in sufficient quantity to neutralize the alkali frees the oily matters, which then separate from the water and are so regained.

sudor (sū-dor), n. [L., < sudare, sweat: soo sweat.] Sweat or perspiration; the insensible vapor or sensible water which issues from the sudoriferous pores of the skin; diaphoresis.—Sudor anglicus, the English sweating-sickness.—Sudor cruentus, hemorrhoids.

sudoral (sū-dō-rāl), a. [< sudor + -al.] Of or pertaining to sudor or sweat.

sudoriferous (sū-dō-rif'e-rus), a. [= F. sudorifere = Sp. sudorifero = Pg. It. sudorifero, < L. sudorifer, sweat-producing, < sudor (sudoris), sweat, + ferre = F. bear.] Bearing or producing sweat; sudoriparous.—Sudoriferous gland, Same as sweat-gland.

sudorific (sū-dō-rif'ik), a. and n. [= F. sudorifique = Sp. sudorifico = Pg. It. sudorifico, < L. sudor, sweat, + facere, make, do.] I. a. Causing, inducing, or promoting sweat; sudatory; diaphoretic.

A decoction of sudorific herbs. Dacon, Nat. Hist., § 706.

Did you ever . . . burst out into sudorific exudation like a cold thaw? Darham, Ingoldsby Legends, I. 117.

II. n. Something which promotes sweating; a diaphoretic.

sudoriparous (sū-dō-rip'a-rus), a. [< L. sudor, sweat, + parere, bring forth, produce.] Secreting sweat; producing perspiration.—Sudoriparous gland, Same as sweat-gland.

sudorous (sū-dō-rus), a. [< L. sudorus, sweaty, < L. sudor, sweat: soo sudor.] Sweaty; sticky or clammy like sweat; consisting of or caused by sweat. Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., v. 21.

Sudra (sū-drā), n. [Also Soodra (and Sooder); < Hind. sudra, < Skt. śūdra.] The lowest of the four principal castes into which Hindu society was anciently divided, composed of the non-Aryan aborigines of India, reduced to subjection or servitude by their Aryan conquerors.

The Brahmin still dodges the shadow of the Soodra, and the Soodra splits upon the footprint of the Pariah.

J. W. Palmer, The New and the Old, p. 250.

suds (sudz), n. pl. [Prop. pl. of sud, var. of sod, lit. 'a bubbling or boiling': see sud, sod, scethe.] 1. Water impregnated with soap, forming a frothy mass; a lixivium of soap and water.

Alas! my miserable master, what suds art thou wash'd into!

Marston, The Fawne, IV. 1.

Why, thy best shirt is in t' suds, and no time for t' stretch and iron it.

Mrs. Gaskell, Sylvia's Lovers, xvii.

2. The foam or spray churned up by a wounded whale; white water. [Slang.]

An officer of a boat never follows the wake of a right whale, for the moment the boat strikes the suds it is maintained that the whale is immediately made acquainted with the fact through some unknown agency.

Fisheries of U. S., V. II. 261.

In the suds, in turmoil or difficulty; in distress. [Colloq.]

Hist, hist, I will be rid'd;

I will, I faith; I will go presently:

Will you forsake me now, and leave me t' the suds?

Fletcher, Wildgoose Chase, II. 3.

sue (sū), v.; pret. and pp. sued, ppr. suing.

[Early mod. E. also seue; < ME. suen, sueren, suen, seueren, < OF. suir, sevir, sevir, also sevre, sure, suivre, F. suivre = Pr. segre, seguir = Sp. Pg. seguir = It. seguire, follow; *< LL. *sequere*, follow, for L. sequi, follow; see sequent, and cf. ensue, pursue, suit, suite, etc.] I. trans. 1. To follow; follow after; pursue; chase; follow in attendance; attend.

Maistre, I shal sue thee, whidre ever thou shalt go.

Wyclif, Mat. viii. 10.

For yt was ther no man that hadde him reced.

Chaucer, Nun's Priest's Tale, I. 517.

I shal suee thi wille.

Piers Plowman (B), xl. 21.

2. To follow up; follow out; continue.

But while I, suing this so good success,

Laid siege to Orleanne on the river's side.

Mir. for Mags., p. 316. (Nares.)

He meanes no more to sue

His former quest, so full of toils and paine.

Spenser, F. Q., VI. ix. 2.

3. To follow with entreaty; seek to persuade; entreat.

I encde hys Grace (Henry VIII.) to signe the Popes lettre. And he commaundyde me to brynge the same unto hym at crynsonge tyme.

Richard Pace, Ellis's Hist. Letters, 3d ser., I. 277.

4. To seek after; try to win; seek the favor of; seek in marriage; woo.

I was belov'd of many a gentle Knight,

And sule and sought with all the service dew.

Spenser, F. Q., VI. xiii. 20.

They would sue me, and woo me, and flatter me.

Tennyson, The Mermaid.

5. To seek justice or right from by legal process; institute process in law against; prosecute in a civil action for the recovery of a real or supposed right: as, to sue one for debt; to sue one for damages in trespass. [Used sometimes of the object of the action instead of the defendant.]

The executors of bishops are sued if their mansion-house be suffered to go to decay. Hooker, Eccles. Polity, vii. 24.

It is written, our men's goods and estates in Spain are confiscated, and our men sued, some to be imprisoned, others to be enjoined, on pain of death, to depart.

Court and Times of Charles I., I. 69.

To sue livery, to sue out livery, to take proceedings, on arriving at age, to recover lands which the king had held as guardian in chivalry during the plaintiff's minority; hence, metaphorically, to declare one's self of age.

I am denied to sue my livery here.

Shak., Rich. II., II. 3. 129.

Our little Cupid hath sued livery,
And is no more in his minority.

Donne, Eclogue (1613).

It concern'd them first to sue out this Liverie from the unjust wardship of his encroaching Prerogative.

Milton, Liconoklastes, xl.

sue out, to petition for and take out; apply for and as, to sue out a writ in chancery; to sue out a para criminal.

Thou art my husband, no divorce in heaven
Has been sued out between us.

Ford, Perkin Warbeck, v. 3.

I now he would go to London at once, and sue out his
R. D. Blackmore, Lorna Doone, xxxviii.

II. intrans. 1. To follow; come after, either consequence or in pursuit.

With Hercules and other no of his aune men,
He sues forth on the solle to Chelthes the kyng.

Destruction of Troy (L. E. T. S.), l. 821.

"With wel that we . . . have grauntyd . . . to the of the forsyd cite the franchises that ben suyng to hem and to her eyers and successors for euer.
C. rder of London (Rich. II.), in Arnold's Chron., p. 23.

The Lynce dide do make this dragon in all the haste he myght, like to the dragon that suede in the nyre.

Melvin (L. E. T. S.), l. 57.

2. To make entreaty; entreat; petition; plead; ally with for.

And as men here devoutly wolde written holy Seyntes Jhesu and here Myracles, and eeren for here Canoniza-tions, righte so don thei there, for hem that seen hem it willfully, and for love of here Ydol.

Manderley, Travels, p. 176.

The Kings of Poland and Sweden have sued to be their Protector.

Hoelch, Letters, l. vi. 3.

By adverse destiny constrain'd to sue
For counsel and redress, he sues to you.

Pope, Much less shall mercy sue

In vain that thou let Innocence survive.

Browning, Ring and Book, II. 103.

3. To pay court, or pay one's addresses as a suitor or lover; play the lover; woo, or be a wooer.

But, foolish boy, what hootes thy service hace
To her to whom the herens doe serve and sue?

Spenser, F. Q., III. v. 47.

Well, Has she no suitors? . . .
All. Such as sue and send,
And send and sue again, but to no purpose.

Masinger, New Way to Pay Old Debts, l. 1.

4. To prosecute; make legal claim; seek for something in law; as, to sue for damages.

Their fast, on the 17 of the fourth Moneth, . . . and from the nece to the ninth day of the moneth following, are hadden inuckle dayes, in which schoole masters may not beat their schollers, nor any man will sue at the law.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 211.

5. To issue; flow.

Being much-cast with odious sores to cover
The deadly Juice that from his brain doth sue.

J. Beaumont, Fyche, II. 167.

To sue, labor, and travel, in Eng. marine insurance, to make due exertions and use necessary and proper means; used with reference to the preservation of insured property from loss or to its recovery. What is called the rule and laboring clause in a policy usually provides that "in any case of loss or misfortune, it shall be lawful to the assured . . . to sue, labor, and travel for, in, and about the defence, safeguard, and recovery of" what is insured.

These two words [sue and labor], the meaning of which is different, and not merely a redundant parallelism, take in the act of the owner or assured, whether in asserting and following the rights of interests in danger, or working and expending money for the benefit of those interests. . . . In this clause two things are noticeable: that sue (which in this place is understood 'doing work,' and not simply 'suing at law'), laboring, and traveling are each bound to certain persons acting in lieu of the insured, and that to such expenses of sue, etc., the insured agrees to contribute their share.

Hopkins, Law of Gen. Av., pp. 356, 359.

sue (sue). An old spelling of sue, sue, 2.
suede (swäde), a. and n. [F., 'Swede.'] Of un-dressed kid: said of gloves; also, undressed kid. [Trade use.]

suent, suently. See suant, suantly.

suer (sü'er), n. [sue + -er.] 1. One who follows.—2. A suitor.

suertel, n. An old spelling of surety.
suert (sü'et), n. [Early mod. E. also sciet; < ME.
suet, sucte, < OF. suet, suis, suis, F. suis = Pr. seu, sef = Sp. sebo = It. sevo, < L. sebum, sebum, tallow, suet, grease; prob. akin to supo, soap:
pro schaccos, soap.] The fatty tissue about the loins and kidneys of certain animals, as the ox, the sheep, the goat, and the hart, harder and less fusible than that from other parts of the same animals. That of the ox and sheep is chiefly used, and when melted out of its connective tissue forma tallow. Mutton suet is used as an ingredient in cakes, pasties, and ointments; beef suet, and also mutton suet, are used in cookery. The corresponding flaky fat of hogs forms lard.

sucty (sü't-i), a. [suct + -y.] Consisting of suet or resembling it: as, a sucty substance.

Imp. Dict.

suf. See sub.

suff (suf), n. See sough, surf.

suff (suf), n. See sough.

suffect (su-fekt'), v. t. [L. suffectus, pp. of sufficere, put into, afford, furnish, be sufficient:
see suffice.] To substitute. [Rare.]

The question was of suffecting Amadeus, Duke of Savoy, a married man, in the room of Eugenius.

Sp. Hall, Honour of Married Clergy, l. 5 24.

suffect (su-fekt'), a. [L. suffectus, pp. of sufficere, put into: see suffect, v.] Substituted; put in place of another. [Rare.]

The date of the suffect consulship of Silius the younger is not known.

Athenium, Oct. 23, 1882, p. 669.

suffer (suf'er), v. [ME. suffren, suffren, < OF.
souffrir, souffrir, souffrir, F. souffrir =
Sp. sufir = Pg. souffrir = It. souffrire, souffrire, <
L. sufferre, carry or put under, hold up, bear, support, undergo, endure. suffer, < sub, under,
+ ferre = E. bear.] I. trans. 1. To endure; support bravely or unflinchingly; sustain; bear up under.

If she be ricke and of helgh parage,
Thanne sewest it is a tormentrie
To suffer here [a wife's] pride and hire malencolle.

Chaucer, Prol. to Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 252.

Our spirit and strength entire,
Strongly to suffer and support our pains.

Milton, P. L., l. 147.

2. To be affected by; undergo; be acted on or influenced by; sustain; pass through.

Nothing of him that doth fade
But doth suffer a sea-change
Into something rich and strange.

Shak., Tempest, l. 2. 400.

When all that seems shall suffer shock.

Tennyson, In Memoriam, cxxxi.

3. To feel or bear (what is painful, disagreeable, or distressing); submit to with distress or grief; undergo; as, to suffer acute bodily pain; to suffer grief of mind.

At the day of Doom 4 Angeles, with 4 Trompes, schulle blowen and rozen alle men that hadden suffered the sike that the World was formed, from Deithe to Lyve.

Manderley, Travels, p. 114.

A man of great wrath shall suffer punishment.

Prov. xix. 10.

It is - and all martyrdoms looked mean when they were suffered.

Emerson, Experience.

Each had suffered some exceeding wrong.

Tennyson, Gerald.

4. To refrain from hindering; allow; permit; tolerate.

I prayd Piera t . . . pull down an apple, and he wolde,
And suffer me to assaye what saoure it hadde.

Piers Plowman (B), xvi. 74.

Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbide them not.

Mark x. 14.

Heaven will not suffer honest men to perish.

Fletcher (and Masinger's), Lovers' Progress, II. 4.

My Lord sandwich . . . suffers his beard to grow on his upper lip more than usual.

Pepys, Diary, II. 347.

They live only as pardoned men; and how pitiful is the condition of being only suffered.

Steele, Spectator, No. 438.

5. To tolerate abstention from.

Master More . . . by no means would admit of any division, nor suffer his men from finishing their fortifications.

Quoted in Capt. John Smith's True Travels, II. 130.

=Syn. 2. To feel, bear, experience, go through.—4. Allow, Permit, Convent, etc. See allow.

II. intrans. 1. To have endurance; bear evils bravely.

Now looke that atempree be thy brydel,
And for the heste ny suffre to the tide.

Chaucer, Troilus, l. 654.

2. To feel or undergo pain of body or mind; bear what is distressing or inconvenient.

If I be false,
Send me to suffer in those punishments
You speak of, kill me!

Beau. and Fl., Phillaster, III. 1.

Raw meat, unless in very small bits, and large pieces of albumen, &c., injure the leaves, which seem to suffer, like animals, from a sunfall.

Barclay, Insectiv. Plants, p. 130.

3. To be injured; sustain loss or damage.

The kingdom's honour suffers in this cruelty.

Fletcher, Wife for a Month, II. 1.

Thus the English prosper every where, and the French suffer.

Baker, Chronicles, p. 122.

4. To undergo punishment; especially, to be put to death.

The father was first condemned to suffer upon a day appointed, and the son afterwards the day following.

Clarendon.

5. To allow; permit.

Remayning as divers languages and dialects will suffer, almost the same.

Purchas, Pilgrimage, p. 437.

Still dost thou suffer, heaven! will no flame,
No heat of sin, make thy just wrath to boil!

B. Jonson, Sejanus, IV. 6.

6. To wait; hold out.

sufferer

Marganors hem selde, and badde hem suffre and a-bide while thei myght for to socour theire peple.

Melvin (L. E. T. S.), ii. 105.

sufferable (suf'er-a-bl), a. [< ME. sufferable, <
OF. souffrable, < souffrir, suffer: see suffer and -able.] 1. Capable of being suffered, endured, tolerated, or permitted; allowable.

It shal be more sufferable to the loond of men of Sodom and of Gommor in the dai of iugement than to thilke citee.

Wyclif, Mat. x. 15.

Ye have a great loss;
But bear it patiently; yet, to say truth,
In justice 'tis not sufferable.

Fletcher, Valentinian, iv. 4.

I believe it's very sufferable; the pain is not so exquisto but that you may bear it a little longer.

Steele, Conscious Lovers, III. 1.

2. Capable of suffering or enduring with patience; tolerant; patient.

It is fair to have a wyf in pees:
One of us two moste bowen, doubtles;
And sith a man is more resonable
Than woman is, ye moste been sufferable.

Chaucer, Prol. to Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 442.

The people are thus inclined, religious, franke, amorous, iresful, sufferable of infinit paines.

Stanhurst, Ireland, viii. (Hollinshed's Chron., I.)

sufferableness (suf'er-a-bl-nes), n. The state or character of being sufferable or endurable; tolerableness.

sufferably (suf'er-a-bli), adv. In a sufferable manner; tolerably. Addison, tr. of Claudian, in Anc. Medals, ii.

sufferance (suf'er-ans), n. [Early mod. E. also sufferance; < ME. sufferance, soverans, < OF. souffrance, F. souffrance = Pr. sufrensa, sufrensa =
It. souffrenza, < L. sufferentia, endurance, toleration, < sufferen (t)-s, pp. of sufferre, endure, suffer: see suffer.] 1. The state of suffering; the bearing of pain or other evil; endurance; suffering; misery.

He must not only die the death,
But thy unkindness shall the death draw out
To lingering sufferance.

Shak., M. for M., II. 4. 167.

Sufferance
Of former trials hath too strongly arm'd me.

Ford, Fancies, IV. 1.

All praise be to my Maker given!
Long sufferance is one path to heaven.

Scott, Rokeby, IV. 24.

2. Damage; loss; injury.

A grievous wreck and sufferance
On most part of their fleet.

Shak., Othello, II. 1. 23.

3. Submission under difficult or oppressive circumstances; patient endurance; patience.

Therefore hath this wise worthy knight,
To lyve in ease, sufferance here blyght.

Chaucer, Franklin's Tale, l. 60.

Still have I borne it with a patient shrug,
For sufferance is the badge of all our tribe.

Shak., M. of V., I. 3. 111.

Sir, I have learn'd a prisoner's sufferance,
And will obey.

Beau. and Fl., King and No King, I. 1.

4. Consent by not forbidding or hindering; toleration; allowance; permission; leave.

And, sers, syn he so is be souerans of goddis,
Ys may falle here by fortune a fulfalle gifte,
That shuld jely be lighit, as me leue thinke.

Destruction of Troy (L. E. T. S.), l. 3154.

Either dyspayest thou the riches of his goodness, pacyence, and long sufferance? Bible of 1651, Rom. II. 4.

Whose freedom is by sufferance, and at will
Of a superior, he is never free.

Courper, Task, v. 303.

5. In customs, a permission granted for the shipment of certain goods.—Bill of sufferance. See bill.—Estate by sufferance or at sufferance, in law, the interest in land recognized by the law in a person who came into possession by lawful right but is keeping it after the title has ceased, without positive leave of the owner.
Such person is called a tenant at sufferance.—On sufferance, by passive allowance, permission, or consent; without being actively interfered with or prevented; without being positively forbidden: often with a sense of blame or disparagement.—Sufferance wharf, a wharf on which goods may be landed before any duty is paid. Such wharves are appointed by the commissioners of the customs.

sufferant (suf'er-ant), a. and n. [< ME. suffraunt, < OF. souffrant, F. souffrant = Sp. sufrente = It. souffrente, < L. sufferen (t)-s, pp. of sufferre, endure, suffer: see suffer.] I. a. Tolerant; enduring; patient.

Pure sufferant was her wit.

Chaucer, Death of Blanche, l. 1010.

And thou a god so sufferant and remisse.

Heywood, Dialogues (Works, ed. Pearson (1873), VI. 167).

II. n. One who is patient and enduring.

Forth, she with reason at this hete,
Men seyn the sufferant overcomth, parde.

Chaucer, Troilus, IV. 1564.

sufferer (suf'er-er), n. [< suffer + -er.] 1.
One who suffers; a person who endures or un-

sufferer

dergoes pain, either of body or of mind; one sustaining evil of any kind.

Thro' Waters and thro' Flames I'll go, Sufferer and Solace of thy Woe.
Prior, To a Young Gentleman in Love.

2. One who permits or allows.

What care I though of weakness men tax me?
I'd rather sufferer than doer be.

Donne, To Ben Jonson.

suffering (suf'ér-ing), n. [Verbal n. of suffer, v.] The bearing of pain, inconvenience, or loss; also, pain endured; distress, loss, or injury incurred.

In front of the pile is the suffering of St. Laurence painted a fresco on the wall.
Evelyn, Diary, Nov. 12, 1644.

To each his sufferings; all are men,
Condemn'd alike to groan.

Gray, Ode on Prospect of Eton College.

Meeting for Sufferings, in the Society of Friends, an organization, established in 1675, to investigate and relieve the sufferings of those who were distressed for tithes, etc. It acts for the Yearly Meeting ad interim. The name is still retained in England and Ireland, but in all the American yearly meetings except that of Philadelphia the body is now called the Representative Meeting.

Seventh Month 21st.—To Westminster meeting-house at twelve o'clock; about fifty Friends of the Meeting for Sufferings met, and afterwards proceeded to James's Palace to present the address to the Queen Victoria.

William Allen, Journal, 1837.

suffete (suf'ēt), n. [Also sufet; < L. sufes, suffes (sufet-, suffet-), a suffete; < Punie; cf. Heb. shôphēṭ, judge, ruler.] One of the chief officials of the executive department of the government in ancient Carthage.

The Roman Senate encroached on the consuls, though it was neither a legislature nor representative; the Carthaginian Councils encroached on the Suffetes; the Venetian Councils encroached on the Doge.

J. Bryce, American Commonwealth, I. 223.

suffice (su-fis'), v.; pret. and pp. sufficed, ppr. sufficing. [Early mod. E. also sufise; < ME. sufficen, suffisen, < OF. sufis-, stem of ppr. of suffire, souffire, F. suffire, be sufficient, < L. sufficere, put under or into, substitute for, substitute, supply, intr. be sufficient, suffice, < sub, under, + facere, make, do.] I. trans. 1†. To be sufficient for.

The leed condite conteyneth this mesure:

XII C pounde of mital shal suffice

A thousand feet in lenethe of pipes sure.

Palladius, Husbandrie (L. E. T. S.), p. 178.

2. To satisfy; content; be equal to the wants or demands of.

Parents . . . being sufficed that their children can one-ly speke latine properly, or make verses with out mater or sentence, they from thens forth do suffre them to lue in idelnes.

Sir T. Elyot, The Governour, I. 13.

Let it suffice thee, speak no more unto me of this matter.

Deut. III. 26.

By farre they'd rather eat
At their owne howses, wher their carnall sence
May be suffic'd.

Times' Whistle (L. E. T. S.), p. 18.

Then Jove ask'd Juno "If at length she had suffic'd her spleen, Achilles being won to arms?"

Chapman, Iliad, xviii. 316.

3†. To afford in sufficient amount; supply adequately.

When they came ther they sawe a faire cite,

As full a pepill as it coude suffice

Generyles (L. E. T. S.), I. 1159.

The pow'r appeas'd, with winds suffice'd the sail.

Dryden, Iliad, I. 653.

II. intrans. To be enough or sufficient; be equal to the end proposed; be adequate.

What neded it thanne a newe lawe to blygyne,

Sith the fyrst sufficeth to equalloun and to blyse?

Piers Plouman (B), xvii. 31.

Suffice that I have done my dew in place.

Spenser, F. Q., II. viii. 50.

My designs
Are not yet ripe. suffice it that ere long

I shall employ your loves.

Beau. and Fl., Phillaster, III. 1.

No matter for the sword, her word sufficed

To spike the coward through and through

Browning, Ring and Book, I. 312.

sufficiency (su-fish'én-si), n. [= F. suffisance = Sp. suficiencia = Pg. suficiencia = It. sufficienza, < LL. sufficientia, sufficiency, sufficiency, < L. sufficere, be sufficient, suffice: see suffice. Cf. sufisance, the older form.] Same as sufficiency.

sufficiency (su-fish'én-si), n. [As sufficiency (see -cy).] 1. The state or character of being sufficient; adequacy.

Some of ye cheefe of ye company, perceivinge ye mariners to feare ye sufficiency of ye ships, as appeared by their mutterings, they entred into serious consultation with ye mr.

Bradford, Plymouth Plantation, p. 75.

His sufficiency is such that he bestows and possesses, his plenty being unexhausted.

Boyle.

We know the satisfactoriness of justice, the sufficiency of truth.

Emerson, Success.

2. Qualification for any purpose; ability; capacity; efficiency.

Hee [Sir Humphrey Gilbert] hath worthely beene constituted a coronell and generall in places requisite, and hath with sufficiency discharged the same, both in this Realme and in foreigne Nations.

Gascoigne, in Book of Precedence (E. E. T. S., extra ser.), [Forewords, p. ix.]

A substitute of most allowed sufficiency.

Shak., Othello, I. 3. 224.

We shall find two differing kinds of sufficiency in managing of business. Bacon, Advancement of Learning, II.

3. Adequate substance or means; enough; abundance; competence; especially, supply equal to wants; ample stock or fund.

An elegant sufficiency, content,

Retirement, rural quiet, friendship, books.

Thomson, Spring, I. 1159.

He [Philip] had money in sufficiency, his own horses and equipage, and free quarters in his father's house.

Thackeray, Philip, v.

4. Conceit; self-confidence; self-sufficiency.

Sufficiency is a compound of vanity and ignorance.

Sir W. Temple.

sufficient (su-fish'ent), a. and n. [= F. suffisant = Sp. suficiente = Pg. suficiente = It. sufficiente, < L. sufficien (-t)-s, ppr. of sufficere, be sufficient, suffice: see suffice. Cf. suffisant, the older form.] I. a. 1. Sufficing; equal to the end proposed; as much as is or may be necessary; adequate; enough.

I sawe it in at a back dore, and as it is sayd the same stable or vought is sufficient to recieve a M. horses.

Sir R. Gwyllforde, Dylgrymage, p. 44.

Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

Mat. vi. 31.

My grace is sufficient for thee.

2 Cor. xii. 9.

2. Possessing adequate talents or accomplishments; of competent power or ability; qualified; fit; competent; capable.

Also, ther schul be foure sufficient men for to kepe the catel wel and suffisauntly.

English Gilds (L. E. T. S.), p. 8.

Who is sufficient for these things?

2 Cor. II. 16.

Pray you, let Cassio be received again.

Shak., Othello, III. 4. 91.

You'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Shak., Othello, III. 4. 91.

Nay, they are esteemed the more learned, and sufficient for this, by the many.

B. Jonson, Alchemist, To the Reader.

3†. Having a competence; well-to-do.

His [John Selden's] father . . . was a sufficient plebeian, and delighted much in music.

Wood, Athenae Oxon., II. 179.

He [George Fox] descended of honest and sufficient parents, who endeavoured to bring him up, as they did the rest of their children, in the way and worship of the nation.

Penn. Rise and Progress of Quakers, v.

4. Self-sufficient; self-satisfied; content.

Thou art the most sufficient [I'll say for thee].
Not to believe a thing.

Beau. and Fl.

Sufficient condition, evidence, reason. See the nouns. = Syn. I. Ample, abundant, satisfactory, full.—1 and 2. Competent, Enough, etc. See adequate.

II. n. That which is sufficient; enough; a sufficiency.

One man's sufficient is more available than ten thousands multitude.

Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, p. 452. (Davies.)

sufficiently (su-fish'ent-li), adv. [< sufficient + -ly. Cf. suffisantly, the older form.] 1. To a sufficient degree; to a degree that answers the purpose or gives satisfaction; adequately.

He left them sufficiently provided, and conceived they would have been well governed.

N. Morton, New England's Memorial, p. 105.

2. To a considerable degree; as, he went away sufficiently discontented. [Colloq.]

sufficingly (su-fi'sing-li), adv. In a sufficing manner; so as to satisfy.

sufficingness (su-fi'sing-nes), n. The quality of sufficing. H. Spencer, Social Statics, p. 323.

suffisance (suf'i-zans), n. [Early mod. E. also sufisance; < ME. sufisance, < OF. sufisance, sufisance, < LL. sufficientia, sufficiency: see sufficiency.] Sufficiency; satisfaction.

No man is wretched but himself hit wene,
And he that hath himself hath sufisance.

Chaucer, Fortune, I. 20.

Be payed with litelle, content with sufisance.

Political Poems, etc. (ed. Furnivall), p. 27.

suffisant, a. [ME. suffisant, suffisaunt, < OF. suffisant, suffisaunt, < L. sufficien (-t)-s, sufficient: see sufficient.] Sufficient; capable; able.

He was lyk a knyght,
And suffisaunt of persone and of might.

Chaucer, Good Women, I. 1067.

suffisantly, adv. [ME. suffisantly; < suffisant + -ly.] Sufficiently. Chaucer, Prol. to Astrolabe.

suffix (su-fiks'), v. t. [< L. suffixus, subfixus, pp. of suffixere, subfigere, fasten below, fasten or fix on, < sub, under, below, + figere, fasten, fix: see fix, v.] To attach at the end: specifically used of adding or annexing a letter or syllable, a suffix.

suffocative

suffix (suf'iks), n. [= F. suffixe = Sp. suffixo = Pg. suffixo = It. soffisso = G. suffix, < NL. suffixum, a suffix, neut. of L. suffixus, subfixus, pp. of suffixere, subfigere, fasten or fix on: see suffix, v. Cf. affix, prefix, postfix.] 1. In gram., a letter or syllable added or annexed to the end of a word or to a verbal root or stem; a formative element, consisting of one or more letters, added to a primitive word to make a derivative; a postfix; a terminal formative, as the -th of length, the -d of loved, the -ly of godly, the -ly of badly, etc.—2. In math., an index written after and under a letter, as  $x_0, x_1, x_2, x_3$ .

suffixal (suf'ik-səl), a. [< suffix + -al.] Of or pertaining to a suffix; of the nature of a suffix. Encyc. Brit., XXI. 272; Amer. Jour. Philol., IV. 29.

suffixion (su-fik'shon), n. [< suffix + -ion.] The act of suffixing, or the state of being suffixed.

sufflamine (su-flam'i-nāt), v. t. [< L. sufflaminatus, pp. of sufflaminare, hold back by a clog, check, < sufflāmen, a clog, brake, shoe, drag-chain to check the motion of a wheel; perhaps for sufflāmen, < sub, under, + flac in flaccus, **flācus*, hanging down; or for suffragmen, < sub, under, + frag in frangere, pp. fractus, break (cf. brake as related to break): see suffrage.] To retard the motion of, as a carriage by preventing one or more of its wheels from revolving; stop; impede.

God could anywhere sufflamine and subvert the beginnings of wicked designs.

Harnoe, Sermon on the Gunpowder Plot.

sufflate (su-flāt'), v. t.; pret. and pp. sufflated, ppr. sufflating. [< L. sufflatus, pp. of sufflare, sufflare (> It. soffiare = Sp. soplar = Pg. soprar = F. souffler), blow up from below, inflate, < sub, under, + flare, blow: see blow, flatus.] To blow up; inflate; also, to inspire. [Rare.]

An inflam'd zeal-burning mind Sufflated by the Holy Wind.

T. Ward, England's Reformation, iii.

sufflation (su-flū'shon), n. [< L. sufflatio (n-), a blowing or puffing up, < sufflare, blow up: see sufflate.] The act of blowing up or inflating. [Rare.] Imp. Dict.

sufflue (su-flū'), n. In her., a clarian.

suffocate (suf'ō-kāt), v.; pret. and pp. suffocated, ppr. suffocating. [< L. suffocatus, pp. of suffocare (> It. soffocare, suffocare = Pg. suffocar = Sp. sufocar = F. suffoquer), choke, stifle, < sub, under, + fauc (fauc-), the upper part of the throat, the pharynx: see fauces.] I. trans. 1. To kill by preventing the access of air to the blood through the lungs or analogous organs, as gills.

Either his [Judas's] grief suffocated him, or his guilt made him hang himself; for the words will signify either.

Stillingsfleet, Sermons, I. vi.

2. To impede respiration in; compress so as to prevent respiration.

And let not hemp his wind-pipe suffocate.

Shak., Hen. V., iii. 6. 45.

3. To stifle; smother; extinguish: as, to suffocate fire or live coals.

So intense and ardent was the fire of his mind that it not only was not suffocated beneath the weight of fuel, but penetrated the whole superincumbent mass with its own heat and radiance.

Macaulay.

= Syn. 1. Stifle, Strangle, etc. See smother.

II. intrans. To become choked, stifled, or smothered: as, we are suffocating in this close room.

suffocate (suf'ō-kāt), a. [< L. suffocatus, pp.: see the verb.] Suffocated; choked.

This chaos, when degree is suffocate, Follows the choking.

Shak., T. and C., I. 3. 125.

suffocating (suf'ō-kā-ting), p. a. Choking; stifling.

The suffocating sense of woe.

Byron, Prometheus.

suffocatingly (suf'ō-kā-ting-li), adv. In a suffocating manner; so as to suffocate.

suffocation (suf'ō-kā'shon), n. [< F. suffocation = Sp. sufocacion = Pg. suffocação = It. suffocazione, < L. suffocatio (n-), a choking, stifling, < suffocare, choke, stifle: see suffocate.] 1. The act of suffocating, choking, or stifling.

Death by asphyxia is a common mode of accomplishing homicide, as by suffocation, hanging, strangulation.

Encyc. Brit., XV. 780.

2. The condition of being suffocated, choked, or stifled.

It was a miracle to 'scape suffocation.

Shak., M. W. of W., iii. 5. 119.

suffocative (suf'ō-kā-tiv), a. [< suffocate + -ive.] Tending or able to choke or stifle. Arbutnot, Air.

suffossion (su-fosh'ōn), n. [L. suffossio (-n-), a digging under, an undermining, < suffodire, pp. suffossus, pierce underneath, bore through, < sub, under, + fodire, dig; see fodient, fossil.] A digging under; an undermining.

Those suffossions of walls, those powder-trains.
Bp. Hall, St. Paul's Combat.

suffragan (suf'rā-gan), a. and n. [ME. suffragan, < *OF. *suffragan*, var. of suffragant, in part prob. < ML. suffraganeus, suffraganius, assisting, applied esp. to a bishop, < L. suffragari, assist: see suffragant.] I. a. Assisting; assistant; of or pertaining to a suffragan: as, a suffragan bishop; a suffragan see. In ecclesiastical usage every bishop of a province is said to be suffragan relatively to the archbishop. See suffragan bishop, under bishop.

The election of archbishops had . . . been a continual subject of dispute between the suffragan bishops and the Augustine monks.
Goldsmith, Hist. Eng., xiv.

II. n. 1. An auxiliary bishop, especially one with no right of ordinary jurisdiction; in the Ch. of Eng., a bishop who has been consecrated to assist the ordinary bishop of a see in a particular part of his diocese, like the ancient chorepiscopus (which see).

In the time of the Christians it was the seat of a suffragan: now hardly a village.
Sandys, Travels, p. 157.

2. A title of every ordinary bishop with respect to the archbishop or metropolitan who is his superior. = Syn. Coadjutor, Suffragan. See coadjutor.

suffragant (suf'rā-gant), a. and n. [F. suffragant = Pr. suffragant = It. suffragante, < L. suffragan (-t-), ppr. of suffragari, vote for, support with one's vote, support, assist: see suffragate, suffrage, r. Cf. suffragan.] I. a. Assisting.

Heavenly doctrine ought to be chief ruler and principal head everywhere, and not suffragant and subsidiary.
Florio, tr. of Montaigne (1613), p. 175. (Latham.)

II. n. 1. An assistant; a favorer; one who concurs with another.

More friends and suffragants to the virtues and modesty of sober women than enemies to their beauty.
Jer. Taylor (?), Artif. Handsomeness, p. 115.

2. A suffragan bishop; a suffragan. Cotgrave.
suffragate (suf'rā-gāt), v. i. [L. suffragatus, pp. of suffragari (> It. suffragare = Pr. suffragare = Sp. suffragar), vote for, support with one's vote, support, assist: see suffrage, v.] To act as suffragant, aid, or subsidiary; be assistant.

Our poets hither for adoption come,
As nations sued to be made free of Rome;
Not in the suffragating tribes to stand,
But in your utmost, last, provincial band.
Dryden, Prolog. to University of Oxford (1681 ?), l. 31.

It cannot choose but suffragate to the reasonableness and convenience thereof, being so discovered.
Sir M. Hale, Origin of Mankind, p. 291.

suffragator (suf'rā-gā-tor), n. [L. suffragator, < suffragari, support by one's vote: see suffragate.] One who assists or favors.

The synod in the Low Countries is held at Dort; the most of their suffragators are already assembled.
Bp. of Chester to Abp. Usher, p. 67.

suffrage (suf'rāj), n. [F. suffrage = Sp. suffragio = Pg. It. suffragio, < L. suffragium, a voting-tablet, a ballot, a vote, the right of voting, a decision, judgment, esp. a favorable decision, approbation; prob. connected with suffrago, hock-bone, also a shoot or spray, and orig., it is conjectured, a broken piece, as a potsherd, used in voting (cf. ostracism, a kind of voting so called from the use of shells or potsherds); < suffringere (pp. suffractus), break below, break up, < sub, under, + frangere (> frag), break: see fraction, break. Cf. nauffrage, sariffrage.] 1. A vote or voice given in deciding a controverted question, or in the choice of a person to occupy an office or trust; the formal expression of an opinion on some doubtful question; consent; assent; approval.

There doe they give their suffrages and voyces for the election of the Magistrates.
Coryat, Crudities, l. 253.

We bow to beg your suffrage and kind ear.
Fletcher, Humorous Lieutenant, Prolog.

I know, if it were put to the question of theirs and mine, the worse would find more suffrages.
D. Jonson, Alchemist, To the Reader.

2. The political right or act of voting; the exercise of the voting power in political affairs; especially, the right, under a representative government, of participating, directly or indirectly, in the choice of public officers and in the adoption or rejection of fundamental laws: usually with the definite article.

The suffrage was not yet regarded as a right incident to manhood, and could be extended only according to the judgment of those who were found in possession of it.
Dancroft, Hist. Const., II. 118.

3. Testimony; attestation; witness.

Every miracle is the suffrage of Heaven to the truth of a doctrine.
South.

4. Eccles., an intercessory prayer or petition.

The suffrages of all the saints.
Longfellow.

In liturgies: (a) Short petitions, especially those in the litany, the lesser litany or preces at morning and evening prayer, etc.

And then shall be said the litany; save only that after this place: That, . . . etc., the proper suffrage shall be, etc.
Book of Common Prayer, Consecr. of Bishops.

(b) The prayers of the people in response to and as distinguished from the versicles or prayers said in litanies by the clergyman.

5t. Aid; assistance; relief.

Charms for every disease, and sovereign suffrages for every sore.
W. Patten (Arber's Eng. Garner, III. 71).

Female suffrage, the political right of women to vote. It is granted by the Constitutions of the States of Wyoming and Utah; and several other States of the Union allow women to vote on certain local matters, as is also the case in Great Britain. — Household suffrage. See household. — Manhood suffrage, a popular phrase denoting suffrage granted to all male citizens who are of age, and are not physically or morally incapacitated for its exercise. — Universal suffrage, a loose phrase commonly meaning suffrage for adult males) restricted only by non-citizenship, minority, criminal character, or bankruptcy: manhood suffrage.

suffrage (suf'rāj), v. t.; pret. and pp. suffraged, ppr. suffraging. [*OF. *suffragere*, < L. suffragari, LL. also suffragare, vote for, support with one's vote, support, favor, assist, < suffragium, a vote: see suffrage, n. Cf. suffragant, suffragan.] To vote for; elect. Milton, Reformation in Eng., ii. [Rare.]

suffragines, n. Plural of suffrago.

suffraginoust (su-fraj'i-nus), a. [L. suffraginosus, diseased in the hock, < suffrago (-n-), hock: see suffrago.] Of or pertaining to the suffrago, especially of the horse.

The hough or suffraginouse flexure behind.
Sir T. Browne, Vulg. Err., III. 1.

suffragist (suf'rā-jist), n. [Suffrage + -ist.] 1. One who possesses or exercises the right of suffrage; a voter. — 2. One holding certain opinions concerning the right of suffrage, as about its extension: as, a woman-suffragist.

One ardent suffragist, already referred to, reasoning by analogy from lower to higher, proves the worthlessness of man by the fact that the female spider devours her male consort.
Atlantic Monthly, LXV. 312.

suffrago (su-frā'gō), n.; pl. suffragines (-frāj'i-nēz). [L.: see suffrago.] 1. The hock, or so-called knee, of a horse's hind leg, whose convexity is backward, and which corresponds to the human heel; the tibiotarsal articulation. See cuts under hock and Perissodactyla. — 2. In ornith., the heel proper, sometimes called the knee; the mediotarsal articulation, whose convexity is backward, at the top of the shank, where the feathers of most birds stop.

suffrutescent (suf-rō'tes'ent), a. [Sub- + frutescent.] In bot., only slightly or obscurely woody; a little woody at the base.

suffrutex (suf'rō'teks), n. [NL., < L. sub, under, + frutex, a shrub, a bush: see frutex.] 1. In bot., an undershrub, or very small shrub; a low plant with decidedly woody stems, as the trailing arbutus, American wintergreen, etc. — 2. A plant with a permanent woody base, but with a herbaceous annual growth above, as the garden-sage, thyme, etc. [Rare, Eng.]

suffruticose (su-frō'ti-kōs), a. [Suffrutex (-ic-) + -ose; or < sub- + fruticose.] In bot., having the character of a suffrutex; small with woody stems, or having the stems woody at the base and herbaceous above; somewhat shrubby; noting a plant or a stem.

suffruticous (su-frō'ti-kus), a. Same as suffruticose.

suffruticulose (suf-rō'tik'ū-lōs), a. [Sub- + fruticulose.] In bot., slightly fruticulose, as some lichens.

suffulted (su-ful'ted), a. In entom., gradually changing to another color. — Suffulted pupil, the central spot of an ocellus when it is formed by two colors shading off into each other.

suffumigate (su-fū-mi-gāt), v.; pret. and pp. suffumigated, ppr. suffumigating. [L. suffumigare, pp. of suffumigare, suffumigare (> It. suffumigare, suffumicare), smoke from below, < sub, under, + fumigare, smoke: see fumigate.] To apply fumes or smoke to, as to the body in medical treatment.

suffumigation (su-fū-mi-gā'shōn), n. [Also suffumigation; < ME. subfumygacioun, < OF. (and F.) suffumigation = Sp. sufumigacion = Pg. suffumigação = It. suffumicazione, < LL. suffumigatio (-n-), suffumigatio (-n-), a smoking from below: see suffumigate.] 1. The act of fumigating, literally from below; fumigation.

Take your meate in the hotte time of Summer in cold places, but in the Winter let there bee a bright fire, and take it in hotte places, your parlors or Chambers being first purged and ayred with suffumigations.
Babees Book (E. E. T. S.), p. 257.

2. The act of burning perfumes: one of the ceremonies in incantation.

Sorceresses
That usen exorcisaciouns
And eke subfumygaciouns.
Chaucer, House of Fame, l. 1264.

A simple suffumigation, . . . accompanied by availing ourselves of the suitable planetary hour.
Scott, Antiquary, xxii.

3. A fume; especially, a preparation used in fumigating.

As the suffumigations of the oppressed stomach surge up and cause the headache.
Rev. T. Adams, Works, I. 204.

Another plebald knave
Of the same brotherhood (he loved them ever)
Was actively preparing 'neath his nose
Such a suffumigation as, once fired,
Had stunk the patient dead ere he could groan.
Browning, Paracelsus.

suffumiget (su-fū'mij), n. [ML. suffumigium, < L. suffumigare, smoke from below: see suffumigate.] A medicinal fume.

suffuse (su-fūz'), v. t.; pret. and pp. suffused, ppr. suffusing. [L. suffusus, pp. of suffundere, pour below or underneath, or upon, overspread, < sub, under, + fundere, pour out, spread out: see fusel.] To overspread, as with a fluid or tincture; fill or cover, as with something fluid: as, eyes suffused with tears.

When purple light shall next suffuse the skies. Pope.
Hers was a face suffused with the fine essence of beauty.
T. Winthrop, Cecil Dreeme, xv.

Alpine meadows soft-suffused
With rain.
M. Arnold, Stanzas from the Grande Chartreuse.

suffusion (su-fū'zhōn), n. [= F. suffusion = Sp. sufusion = Pg. sufusão = It. sufusione, < L. suffusio (-n-), a pouring out or over, a spreading: see suffuse.] 1. The act or operation of suffusing or overspreading, as with a fluid or a color; also, the state of being suffused or overspread.

To those that have the jaundice or like suffusion of eyes, objects appear of that color.
Ray.

2. That which is suffused or spread over, as an extravasation of blood.

So thick a drop serene hath quench'd their orbs,
Or dim suffusion veil'd.
Milton, P. L., iii. 26.

3. In entom., a peculiar variegation, observed especially in Lepidoptera, in which the colors appear to be blended or run together. It is most common in northern or alpine forms of species which are found with normal colors in warmer regions.

suffusive (su-fū'siv), a. [Suffuse + -ive.] Pertaining to suffusion; overspreading. George Eliot, Middlemarch, xvi.

sufi, sufi (sō'fi, sō'fi), n. [Also soofee, sophy, etc.; = F. soft, soufi; = Hind. sufi, < Ar. sufi, a Moslem mystic; either lit. 'wise,' < Gr. σοφός, wise (see sophist); or, according to some, < suf, wool, the sufis (dervishes, fakirs) being obliged to wear garments of wool, and not of silk.] A Mohammedan mystic who believes (1) that God alone exists, and that all visible and invisible beings are mere emanations from him; (2) that, as God is the real author of all acts of mankind, man is not a free agent, and there can be no real difference between good and evil; (3) that, as the soul existed before the body, and is confined within the latter as in a cage, death should be the chief object of desire, for only then does the soul return to the bosom of the divinity; and (4) that religions are matters of indifference, though some are more advantageous than others (as, for instance, Mohammedanism), and that sufism is the only true philosophy.

If Pharaoh's Title had befall'n to thee (Solomon),
If the Medes Myter bowed at thy knee,
Wert thou a Sophy; yet with Vertues luster
Thou oughtst (at least) thy Greatness to illustrate.
Sylvester, tr. of Du Bartas's Weeks, II, The Magnificence.

The principal occupation of the Sufi whilst in the body is meditation on the . . . unity of God, the remembrance of God's names, . . . and the progressive advancement in the . . . journey of life, so as to attain unification with God.
Hughes, Dict. of Islam, p. 609.

sufic (sō'fik), a. [Sufi + -ic.] Of or pertaining to sufism.

There are frequent Sufic allegories, just as in the Mahkazan. Encyc. Brit., XVII. 622.

sufism, sofism (sō'fizim, sō'fizm), n. [Also sufism; < sufi + -ism.] The mystical system of the sufis.

The system of philosophy professed by Persian poets and dervishes, and in accordance with which the poems of Hafiz are allegorically interpreted, is called Sufism. Encyc. Brit., XI. 368.

sufistic (sō-fis'tik), a. [Also sufistic; < sufi + -ist + -ic.] Same as sufic.

The point of view indicated by the Sufistic system of philosophy.

sug (sug), n. [Origin obscure.] An unidentified parasite of the trout, probably an epizoe crustacean. Also called trout-louse.

Many of them (trout) have sticking on them Sugs, or Trout-lice, which is a kind of Worm, in shape like a Clove, or Pin with a big head, and sticks close to him and sucks his moisture. J. Walton, Complete Angler, p. 61.

sug- See sub-.

Sugantia (sū-gan'shi-ā), n. pl. A variant of Sugentia.

sugar (shūg'ūr), n. [Early mod. E. also suger; < ME. suger, sugor, sugre, sucre, < OF. sucre, F. sucre = Pr. sucre = Sp. azúcar = Pg. assucar (with Ar. article al) = It. zucchero = D. suker = MLG. sucker = OHG. zucura, MHG. zucker, zucker, G. zucker = Icel. sýkr = Sw. socker = Dan. sukker = OBulg. sakara = Serv. čukara, zakar, chukar = Bohem. cukr = Little Russ. cukor, cukur = Russ. sakharu = Pol. cukier = Hung. zukur (Slavic, etc., partly after G.). < ML. sucarum, succarium, sucarium, also zucarium, zucara, zucara, also suctura, etc., altered forms, in part appar. simulating L. succus, sucus, juice (see suck), of saccharum, L. saccharon, < Gr. sákchara, sákchara, < Ar. sakkār, sakkar, sukkar, with the article as-sakkar, < Pers. shakar = Hind. shakkar, < Prakrit sakkara, sugar, < Skt. śakara, candied sugar, orig. grit, gravel; cf. Skt. śakara, hard, L. calculus, a pebble (see calculus).] 1. The general name of certain chemical compounds belonging to the group of carbohydrates. They are soluble in water, have a more or less sweet taste, and are directly or indirectly fermentable. According to their chemical nature they are divided into two classes, the saccharoses and glucoses. See saccharose and glucose. 2. A sweet crystalline substance, prepared chiefly from the expressed juice of the sugar-cane, Saccharum officinarum, and of the sugar-beet, but obtained also from a great variety of other plants, as maple, maize, sorghum, birch, and parsnip. The process of manufacturing cane-sugar generally begins with extracting the juice of the canes, either by passing them between the rollers of a rolling-mill (see roller mill), or by the use of rasps or "debilitators" reducing the canes to pulp and expressing the juice by subjecting the pulp to the action of powerful presses. Maceration of the canes in steam or water, as a preparation for extraction of the juice, is also practiced to some extent. Another method, now coming extensively into use, is that of diffusion, in which the canes or beets are cut in small pieces, and the sugar is extracted by repeated washings with hot water. (Compare diffusion apparatus (under diffusion), and osmose.) The extraction of the juice by the crushing and expressing action of rollers in sugar-mills is, however, still more extensively practiced than any other method. The juice is received in a shallow trough placed beneath the rollers and defecated by adding to it while heated below the boiling-point either milk of lime, lime-water, bisulphite of lime, lime followed by sulphur dioxide, sulphur dioxide followed by lime, alkaline earths, sulphur compounds, or chlorine compounds, milk of lime being more generally used than any of the other substances named. (Compare defecator.) The saccharine liquor is concentrated by boiling, which expels the water; lime water is added to neutralize the acid that is usually present; the grosser impurities rise to the surface and are separated in the form of scum. When duly concentrated the syrup is run off into shallow wooden coolers, where it concretes. It is then put into hogheads with holes in the bottom, through which the molasses drains off into cisterns below, leaving the sugar in the state known in commerce by the name of raw sugar, or muscovado. Sometimes the molasses is immediately separated from the sugar by centrifugal force. The raw sugar is further purified by solution in water and filtration, first through cotton bags, then through layers of animal charcoal, boiling down under diminished pressure, and crystallization. Thus clarified, it takes the names of hump-sugar, loaf-sugar, refined sugar, etc., according to the different degrees of purification and the form in which it is placed on the market. The manufacture of sugar from beet root is carried on to a very considerable extent in France, Germany, Austria, Belgium, the Netherlands, Russia, etc. The sugar is mostly extracted from the roots by diffusion, and the subsequent defecation and concentration are carried out in a manner entirely analogous to that described for the operations in the manufacture of cane sugar. In the United States and in Canada great quantities of sugar are obtained from the sap of the sugar-maple, Acer saccharinum. (See cut under Aced.) The Gulf States and the West Indies are the principal sources whence the supplies of cane-sugar are derived. The sugar used on the continent of Europe is chiefly obtained from the beet. Sugar was only vaguely known to the Greeks and Romans; it seems to have been introduced into Europe during the time of the crusades. The cane was grown about the middle of the twelfth century in Cyprus, whence, some time later, it was transplanted into Madeira, and about the beginning of the sixteenth century it was thence carried to the New World. For the chemical properties of pure cane-sugar, see saccharose, 3.

This Manna is clept Bred of Aungoles; and it is a white thing, that is fülle swete and righte delicyous, and more swete than Hony of Sugre. Mandeville, Travels, p. 152.

When shall we have any good sugar come over? The wars in Barbary make sugar at such an excessive rate, you pay sweetly now, I warrant, sir, do you not?

Dekker and Webster, Northward Ho, II. 1.

3. Something that resembles sugar in any of its properties.—4. Figuratively, sweet, honeyed, or soothing words; flattery employed to disguise something distasteful.—Bastard, beet-root, black, centrifugal sugar. See the qualifying words.—Brown sugar, common dark muscovado sugar.—Coffee-crushed sugar, a commercial name for crushed sugar in which the lumps are of convenient size for table use in sweetening coffee and tea.—Confectioners' sugar, a highly refined sugar pulverized to an impalpable powder, used by confectioners for various purposes.—Crushed sugar, a commercial name for loaf-sugar broken into irregular lumps.—Cut sugar, a commercial name for loaf-sugar cut into prismatic form, generally cubes.—Diabetic sugar. See diabetic.—Ergot-sugar, a sugar obtained from ergot. Its crystals are transparent rhombic prisms. It is soluble in both water and alcohol, and the solution is capable of undergoing alcoholic fermentation.—Gelatin sugar. Same as glyceoll.—Granulated sugar. (a) A sugar which, by stirring during the crystallization of the concentrated syrup, is formed into small disintegrated crystals or grains, instead of compacting into a crystalline cake or mass as in loaf-sugar. (b) The coarse grains or dust of refined sugar formed during the operations of crushing or cutting loaf-sugar, and separated from the lumps by screening.—Inverted sugar. Same as invert-sugar.—Liquid sugar, a name sometimes given to uncrystallizable glucose; this substance, however, is capable of solidifying into an amorphous mass.—Milado sugar, sugar conglomerated into a sticky mass, the crystalline form of the sugar being masked by the presence of a quantity of highly concentrated invert-sugar which cements the crystals together, distinguished from muscovado sugar, in which the sugar has a distinctly crystalline form—the small crystals, however, being more or less colored by invert-sugar and adhering impurities. See maple.—Maple sugar. See maple.—Pulverized sugar, a commercial name for refined sugar ground to a fineness intermediate between that of granulated sugar and confectioners' sugar.—Rotatory power of sugar. See rotatory polarization, under rotatory.—Starch-sugar. Same as dextrine.—Sugar of acorns, quercite—Sugar of Barbary, the finest sugar, which was formerly supposed to be brought from Barbary, before the trade of the West Indies was fully established. (Nares.)

Ah sweet, honey, Barbary sugar, sweet master.

Marston, What you Will, II. 3.

Sugar of lead. See lead—Sugar of milk, lactose. sugar (shūg'ūr), v. [< ML. sugrum, < OF. sucre, sugar; from the noun.] I. trans. 1. To season, cover, sprinkle, mix, or impregnate with sugar.—2. Figuratively, to cover as with sugar; sweeten; disguise so as to render acceptable what is otherwise distasteful.

We are oft to blame in this—
That with devotions' visage
And pious action we do sugar o'er
The devil himself. Shak., Hamlet, III. 1. 48.

II. intrans. 1. To sweeten something, as tea, with sugar. [Rare]

He sugared, and creamed and drank, and spoke not.

Mac Edgworth, Helen, XLVI. (Darvill.)

2. To make (maple) sugar. [U. S. and Canada.]

To sugar off, in maple-sugar manu., to pour the syrup into molds to granulate, when sufficiently boiled down. The sugaring off is the last process and is usually attended with some sort of frolic in the sugar-camp. [U. S. and Canada.]

sugar-apple (shūg'ūr-āp'l), n. See Kollima.

sugar-baker (shūg'ūr-bā-kēr), n. One who refines sugar.

You know her mother was a Welsh milliner, and her father a sugar baker at Bristol.

Sheridan, School for Scandal, II. 2.

sugar-bean (shūg'ūr-bēn), n. A variety of Phaseolus lunatus (see bean), cultivated particularly in Jamaica. The species is probably a native of tropical America, but is widely diffused in cultivation.

sugar-beet (shūg'ūr-bēt), n. See beet.

sugarberry (shūg'ūr-ber'ī), n.; pl. sugarberries (-īz). Same as huckleberry, 2.

sugar-bird (shūg'ūr-berd), n. 1. Any bird of the family Certhiidae, as the Bahaman honey-creeper, Certhiola bahamensis; so called from its habit of sucking the sweets of flowers. See cut under Certhia.—2. A honey-eater or honey-sucker; one of various temnostrual birds of the Old World which suck the sweets of flowers. See Nectariniidae, Meliphagidae.—3. A translation of the Indian name of the American evening grosbeak or hawfinch, Coccothraustes or Hesperiphona vespertina, which is specially fond of maple sugar. [Local, U. S.] sugar-bush (shūg'ūr-būsh), n. 1. Same as sugar-orchard.—2. See Protea.

sugar-camp (shūg'ūr-kāmp), n. A place in or near a maple forest or orchard where the sap from the trees is collected and manufactured into sugar. [U. S. and Canada.]

sugar-candiant (shūg'ūr-kan'di-ān), n. Sugar-candy.

If nor a dram of treacle sovereign,
Or aqua-vitæ, or sugar-candian,
Nor kitchen cordials can it remedy,
Certes his time is come.

Bp. Hall, Satires, II. iv. 30.

sugar-candy (shūg'ūr-kan'di), n. Sugar clarified and conereted or crystallized. Compare candy.

sugar-cane (shūg'ūr-kān), n. A saccharine grass, Saccharum officinarum, the original source of manufactured sugar, and still the source of most of the supply.

The sugar-cane is a stout perennial with the habit of Indian corn and sorghum, growing from 6 to 20 feet high; the leaves are broad and flat, 3 feet or more long; the joints of the stalk are about 3 inches long near the foot, becoming longer upwardly, at length producing a very long joint called the "arrow," which bears a large panicle. Sugar-cane is propagated almost wholly by cuttings, the power to perfect seed being nearly lost through cultivation. Seedlings, however, have recently been observed in Barbados. The first growth from the cuttings is called plant-cane. The succeeding years the root sends up ratoons, which form the crop for one, two, or sometimes more years, its value decreasing from exhaustion of the soil. The cane requires a rich moist soil, preferring the vicinity of the sea. The plant is not known in a wild state, but is supposed to have originated in southern Asia, perhaps in Cochín-China or Bengal. Its cultivation in those regions began very early, and now extends throughout the tropics, the stalk being chewed where not otherwise used. It is grown in the United States in several southern States, but only in Louisiana in sufficient amount for the export of sugar.—African sugar-cane, an African variety of the common sorghum, called limphee.—Chinese sugar-cane. Same as sorghum.

1. Sugar-cane beetle, a scarabid beetle, Ligyrus rugiceps, which damages sugar-cane in Louisiana by boring into the canes in the early spring and gnawing off the buds. It also damages sorghum and corn in the southern United States.—Sugar-cane borer, the larva of a crambid moth, Chilo saccharalis, which bores sugar-cane in the southern United States, the West Indies, and elsewhere.

sugar-coated (shūg'ūr-ko'ted), a. Coated with sugar; as, a sugar-coated pill; hence, made palatable, in any sense.

sugared (shūg'ūr), p. a. Sweet; alluring; honeyed; formerly much used in poetry to express anything unusually attractive: as, sugared conceits.

This messenger connyng and gentle was,
Off his mouth issued sugared sweet language.

Rom. of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), I. 6029.

A sugared kiss

In sport I sucked, while she asleep did lie.

Sir P. Sidney (Arber's Eng. Garner, I. 539).

sugar-grass (shūg'ūr-grās), n. 1. The common sorghum, particularly its Chinese variety.—2. The grass Pollinia Cumingii, var. fulva. [Australia.]

sugar-gum (shūg'ūr-gum), n. An Australian gum-tree, Eucalyptus corymbosa, which grows 120 feet high, and affords a durable timber, used for railroad-ties, posts, etc. The foliage is sweetish, and, unlike that of most eucalypts, attracts cattle and sheep.

sugar-house (shūg'ūr-hous), n. A manufacturing establishment in which saccharine juices are extracted from cane, etc., and treated to make raw sugar. In some such establishments the process of refining is carried further; but they are more properly called refineries.—Sugar-house molasses, a very dark and concentrated low-grade molasses containing much caramel, formerly largely produced at sugar-houses (whence the name), but now, under improved methods of manufacture, much reduced in quantity, and little used except in the manufacture of some proprietary medicines and in some chemical industries.

sugar-huckleberry (shūg'ūr-huk'1-ber-i), n. See huckleberry.

Sugar cane (Saccharum officinarum).

a, part of the inflorescence; b, a spikelet.

Sugar cane beetle (Ligyrus rugiceps), nearly twice natural size.

sugariness (shùg'ür-i-nos), n. The state or quality of being sugary or sweet.

A . . . flavor, not wholly unpleasing, nor unwholesome, to palates cloyed with the sugariness of tamed and cultivated fruit. Lovell, Biglow Papers, 1st ser., Int.

sugaring (shùg'ür-ing), n. [Verbal n. of sugar, r.] 1. The act of sweetening with sugar.—2. The sugar used for sweetening.—3. The process of making sugar.

sugar-kettle (shùg'ür-ket'l), n. A kettle used for boiling down saccharine juice.

sugarless (shùg'ür-less), a. [< sugar + -less.] Free from sugar.

sugar-loaf (shùg'ür-lōf), n. and a. [*< ME. sugorlof; *sugrelof; < sugar + loaf.*] 1. n. 1. A conical mass of refined sugar. Hence—2. A hat of a conical shape.

I pray you that ye will vouchsafe to send me an other sugar loaf, for my old is do; and also that ye will do make a girdle for your dowager, for she hath nede therof. Paston Letters, I, 236.

3. A high conical hill: a common local name. II. a. Having the form of a sugar-loaf; having a high conical form: as, a sugar-loaf hat.—Sugar-loaf tool, in seal-engraving, a tool with an end of soft iron shaped like a sugar-loaf, used to smooth the surfaces of shields.

sugar-louse (shùg'ür-lous), n. 1. Same as sugar-mite.—2. A springtail, Lepisma saccharina. See cut under silverfish.

sugar-maple (shùg'ür-mā'pl), n. See maple and acer (with cut).

sugar-meat (shùg'ür-mēt), n. Same as succet-meat.

Then . . . came another "most sumptuous banquet of sugar-meats for the men-at-arms and the ladies," after which, it being now midnight, the Lord of Leicester bade the whole company good rest. Molloy, Hist. Netherlands, II, 17.

sugar-mill (shùg'ür-mil), n. A machine for pressing out the juice of the sugar-cane. It consists usually of three parallel heavy rollers, placed horizontally one above and between the other two. The canes are made to pass between the rollers, by which means they are crushed, and the juice is expressed from them.

Sugar mill at work.

sugar-millet (shùg'ür-mil'et), n. The common sorghum.

sugar-mite (shùg'ür-mīt), n. A mite of the family Tyroglyphidae, Tyroglyphus or Glyciphagus sacchari, or some other species of the restricted genus Glyciphagus, infesting sugar. These mites abound in some samples of unrefined sugar, and are supposed to cause grocers' itch. Also sugar-louse.

sugar-mold (shùg'ür-mōld), n. A conical mold in which sugar-loaves are formed in the process of refining.

sugar-nippers (shùg'ür-nip'ēr), n. sing. and pl. 1. A tool for cutting loaf-sugar into small lumps. It is made like shears with a spring-back, but the blades are edged and are directly opposite each other. 2. Same as sugar-tongs.

sugar-orchard (shùg'ür-ōr'chürd), n. A collection or small plantation of sugar-maples. Also called sugar-bush. [American.] sugar-packer (shùg'ür-pak'ēr), n. A machine for packing sugar into barrels.

sugar-pan (shùg'ür-pan), n. An open or closed vessel for concentrating syrups of sugar. See also vacuum-pan.—Sugar-pan lifter, a form of crane especially designed for lifting sugar-pans from the furnaces.

sugar-pea (shùg'ür-pē), n. See pea 1.

sugar-pine (shùg'ür-pīn), n. See pine 1.

sugar-plate (shùg'ür-plāt), n. Sweetmeats. Puttenham.

sugar-planter (shùg'ür-plan'tēr), n. One who owns or manages land devoted to the cultivation of the sugar-cane.

sugar-plum (shùg'ür-plum), n. A sweetmeat made of boiled sugar and various flavoring and coloring ingredients into a round shape, or into the shape of flattened balls or disks; a bon-bon; hence, something particularly pleasing, as a bit of flattery.

If the child must have grapes or sugar-plums when he has a mind to them. Locke, Education, § 36.

"His Grace is very condescending," said Mrs. Glass, her zeal for inquiry slaked for the present by the dexterous administration of this sugar-plum. Scott, Heart of Mid-Lothian, xxxviii.

sugar-press (shùg'ür-pres), n. A press for extracting the juice of sugar-cane or effecting the drainage of molasses from sugar.

In the Ilande of Hispana or Hispaniola were erected 28 sugar presses, to presse ye sugre which groweth plentifully in certaine canes or reedes of the same country. R. Eden, tr. of Sebastian Munster (First Books on America, ed. Arber, p. 40).

sugar-refiner (shùg'ür-rē-fi'nēr), n. One who refines sugar.

sugar-refinery (shùg'ür-rē-fi'nēr-i), n. An establishment where sugar is refined; a sugar-house in which sugar is not only made from the raw syrup, but is also refined.

sugar-refining (shùg'ür-rē-fi'nīng), n. The act or process of refining sugar.

sugar-sop (shùg'ür-sop), n. A sugar-plum.

Dandle her upon my knee, and give her sugar-sops. Fletcher, Monsieur Thomas, II, 2.

Half our gettings Must run in sugar-sops and nurses' wages now. Middleton, Chaste Maid, II, 2.

sugar-squirrel (shùg'ür-skvr'el), n. The sciurine petaurist, Belidicus sciureus, or another member of the same genus. See Belidicus. These little marsupials closely resemble true flying-squirrels (as of the genus Sciurus), figured under flying-squirrel, but are near relatives of the opossum-mice, figured under Aerobates.

sugar-syrup (shùg'ür-sir'up), n. 1. The raw juice or sap of sugar-producing plants, roots, or trees.—2. In the manufacture and refining of sugar, a more or less concentrated solution of sugar.

sugar-teat (shùg'ür-tēt), n. Sugar tied up in a rag of linen of the shape and size of a woman's nipple, and moistened: given to an infant to quiet it.

sugar-tongs (shùg'ür-tōngz), n. sing. and pl. An implement having two arms, each furnished at the end with a flat or spoon-shaped plate or a cluster of claws, for use in lifting small lumps of sugar. It is usually made with a flexible back like that of shears for sheep. Also called sugar-nippers.

Or would our thrum-capp'd ancestors find fault For want of sugar-tongs, or spoons for salt? W. King, Art of Cookery, I, 70.

sugar-tree (shùg'ür-trō), n. 1. Any tree from which sugar-syrup or sugary sap can be obtained; particularly, the sugar-maple. See maple 1.—2. An Australian shrub or small tree, Myoporum platycarpum.

sugar-vinegar (shùg'ür-vin'ē-gür), n. Vinegar made of the waste juice of sugar-cane.

sugary (shùg'ür-i), a. [Early mod. E. also sugrie; < sugar + -y.] 1. Resembling sugar in appearance or properties; containing or composed of sugar; sweet; sometimes, excessively or offensively sweet.—2. Fond of sugar or of sweet things: as, sugary palates.—3. Sweet in a figurative sense; honeyed; alluring; sometimes, deceitful.

And with the sugrie sweete thereof allure Chast Ladies eares to fantasies impure. Spenser, Mother Hub. Tale, I, 820.

Walsingham bewailed the implicit confidence which the Queen placed in the sugary words of Alexander (Duke of Parma). Molloy, Hist. Netherlands, II, 320.

sugary (shùg'ür-i), n.; pl. sugaries (-riz). [For "sugarery, < sugar + -ery.] An establishment where sugar is made; a sugar-house. [Rare.]

The primitive mode of arranging the sugary. New Amer. Farm Book, p. 272.

sugent (sū'jēnt), a. [< L. sugen(t)-s, ppr. of sugere, suck; see suck.] Sucking; imbibing; suctorial; fitted for or habitually sucking: as, a sugent process; a sugent animal.

Sugentia (sū-jen'shi-i), n. pl. [NL. (Brandt): see sugent.] A suborder or an order of myriapods; the sugent or suctorial millepedes, having the opening of the sexual organs in the anterior part of the body; the families Polyconidiæ and Siphonophoridæ. Also Siphonizantia.

sugescent (sū-jes'ent), a. [< L. sugere, suck, + -escent.] Fitted for sucking or imbibing; sugent; suctorial; haustellate. Paley, Nat. Theol., xviii.

suggest (su-jest'), v. [< L. suggestus, pp. of suggerere (> It. suggerire = Sp. sugerir = Pg. suggerir = F. suggérer), carry or bring under, furnish, supply, produce, excite, advise, suggest, < sub, under, + gerere, bear, carry; see gerent. Cf. congest, digest, ingest, etc.] I. trans. 1. To place before another's mind problematically; hint; intimate; insinuate; introduce to another's mind by the prompting of an indirect or mediate association.

Nature her selfe suggesteth the figure in this or that forme: but arte aydeth the judgement of his vse and application. Puttenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 249.

Fie, fie, Master Ford! are you not ashamed? What spirit, what devil suggests this imagination? Shak., M. W. of W., III, 2, 230.

Virgil . . . loves to suggest a truth indirectly, and, without giving us a full and open view of it, to let us see just so much as will naturally lead the imagination into all the parts that lie concealed. Addison, On Virgil's Georgics.

Sunderland, therefore, with exquisite cunning, suggested to his master the propriety of asking the only proof of obedience which it was quite certain that Rochester never would give. Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vi.

2. To act, as an idea, so as to call up (another idea) by virtue either of an association or of a natural connection between the ideas.

The sight of part of a large building suggests the idea of the rest instantaneously.

Hartley, Observations on Man, I, II, 10.

We all know that a certain kind of sound suggests immediately to the mind a coach passing in the street, and not only produces the imagination, but the belief, that a coach is passing. Reid, Inquiry into the Human Mind, II, vii.

3. To seduce; tempt; tempt away (from).

There's my purse; I give thee not this to suggest thee from thy master thou talkest of; serve him still. Shak., All's Well, IV, 5, 47.

I, Dametas, chief governor of all the royal cattle, and also of Pamela, whom thy master most perniciously hath suggested out of my dominion, do defy thee in a mortal affray. Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, III.

=Syn. 1. Intimate, Insinuate, etc. See hint.—2. To indicate, prompt, advise, remind of.

II. intrans. To make suggestions; be tempting; present thoughts or motives with indirectness or with diffidence to the mind.

O sweet suggesting Love, if thou hast sinn'd, Teach me, thy tempted subject, to excuse it. Shak., T. G. of V., II, 5, 7.

But ill for him who . . . ever weaker grows thro' acted crime, Or seeming-genial venial fault, Recurring and suggesting still! Tennyson, Will.

suggestable (su-jes'tā-bl), a. [< suggest + -able.] Same as suggestible.

suggestedness (su-jes'ted-nes), n. The state of being suggested. Bentham, Judicial Evidence, II, iv.

suggester (su-jes'tēr), n. [< suggest + -er.] One who or that which suggests. Also suggestor.

Some suborn'd suggester of these treasons. Fletcher (and others), Bloody Brother, III, 1.

suggestibility (su-jes-ti-bil'i-ti), n. [< suggestible + -ity (see -ility).] 1. Capability of being suggested.—2. A conforming social impulse, leading a person to believe what is emphatically asserted and to do what is imperatively commanded; credenceiveness and submissiveness; susceptibility to hypnotic suggestion.

A republic needs independent citizens, quick in comprehension, but slow in judgment, and tenacious in that which they have recognized as right. Every honest thinker must endeavor to counteract the suggestibility of the masses by the proper education of our people. Carus, Soul of Man, V, 10.

Suggestibility. The patient believes everything which his hypnotizer tells him, and does everything which the latter commands. W. James, Prin. of Psychol., II, 602.

suggestible (su-jes'ti-bl), a. [< suggest + -ible.] 1. Capable of being suggested.—2. Having great suggestibility; credenceive and submissive.

Professor Rieket tried on her some experiments of suggestion in the waking state, and found her somewhat suggestible. Proc. Soc. Psych. Research, Dec., 1890, p. 441.

suggestio falsi (su-jes'ti-fal'si). [L.: suggestio, a suggestion; falsi, gen. of falsum, falsehood, fraud; see suggestion and false, n.] An affirmative misrepresentation. Whether by words, conduct, or artifice, as distinguished from a mere suppression of the truth; an indirect lie.

suggestion (su-jes'chən), n. [< F. suggestion = Sp. sugestión = Pg. sugestão = It. suggestione, < L. suggestio(n-), an addition, an intimation, < suggerere, pp. suggestus, supply, suggest; see suggest.] 1. The act of placing before the mind problematically; also, the idea so produced; the insinuation of an idea by indirect association; hint; intimation; prompting; also, especially, an incitement to an animal, brutal, or diabolical act.

For all the rest,
They'll take suggestion as a cat laps milk.
Shak., Tempest, ii. 1. 238.

He knew that by his preaching evident and certain good was done; but that there was any evil in his way of doing it, or likely to arise from it, was a thought which, if it had arisen in his own mind, he would immediately have ascribed to the suggestion of Satan.

Southey, Bunyan, p. 48.

2. The action of an idea in bringing another idea to mind, either through the force of association or by virtue of the natural connection of the ideas.

The other part of the invention, which I term suggestion, doth assign and direct us to certain marks or places which may excite our mind to return and produce such knowledge as it hath formerly collected, to the end we may make use thereof.

Bacon, Advancement of Learning, ii.

Let it not be supposed that the terms suggest and suggestion are, in their psychological relation, of recent, or even modern, application; for, so applied, they are old—the oldest we possess. In this relative signification, suggero, the verb, ascends to Cicero; and suggestio, the noun, is a household expression of Tertullian and St. Augustine. Among the earlier modern philosophers, and in this precise application, they were, of course, familiar words—as is shewn, among five hundred others, by the writings of Hieronymus Barbarus, the elder Scaliger, Melanchthon, Simonius, Campanella, to say nothing of the Schoolmen, etc. They were no strangers to Hobbes and Locke; and so far as Berkeley from having first employed them in this relation, as Mr. Stewart seems to suppose, Berkeley only did not continue what he found established and in common use.

Hamilton, Reid's Works, note D**.

[But the above is somewhat exaggerated. Suggestion was hardly in common use in this sense before Berkeley.]

It is by suggestion, not cumulation, that profound impressions are made upon the Imagination.

Lowell, Among my Books, 1st ser., p. 185.

3. Specifically, in hypnotism, the insinuation of a belief or impulse into the mind of the subject by any means, as by words or gestures, usually by emphatic declaration; also, the impulse of trust and submission which leads to the effectiveness of such incitement; also, the idea so suggested. Verbal suggestion is the usual method. Another is known as suggestion by attitude, as when, for instance, a person placed in the attitude of prayer is caused to pray.

Suggestion appears to be entirely a phenomenon of unconscious memory.

Amer. Jour. Psychol., I. 514.

4†. Indirect or hidden action.

This cardinal [Wolsey] . . . by craft suggestion gat into his hands innumerable treasure.

Holinshed, Chron., III. 922.

5. In law, information without oath. (a) An information drawn in writing, showing cause to have a prohibition. (b) A statement or representation of some matter of fact entered upon the record of a suit at the instance of a party thereto, made by attorney or counsel without further evidence, usually called suggestion upon the record: a mode of proceeding allowed in some cases as to undisputed facts incidentally involved, such as the death of one of several plaintiffs, where the survivors are entitled to continue the action.—Negative suggestion, that form of hypnotic suggestion which results in lessened or suppressed activity, as abrogation of will-power, anaesthesia of any kind, or inability to think, talk, act, etc.—Post-hypnotic suggestion, an impression made on a hypnotized person, persisting unrecognized for some time after the hypnotic condition is passed, and taking effect at the intended time.—Principle of suggestion, association of ideas. See association.—Relative suggestion, judgment.—Spontaneous suggestion. See spontaneous.—Syn. 1. Intimation, Insinuation, etc. See hint, v. t.

suggestionism (su-jes'chōn-izm), n. The doctrine that hypnotic persons are merely persons too trustful and submissive, and that the so-called hypnotic trance is merely a state in which these characters have been stimulated and distrust lulled.

suggestionist (su-jes'chōn-ist), n. A person who accepts the theory of suggestionism.

suggestive (su-jes'tiv), a. and n. [< F. suggestif = Pg. It. suggestivo; as suggest + -ive.] I. a. 1. Containing a suggestion or hint; suggesting what does not appear on the surface; also, full of suggestion; stimulating reflection.

He [Bacon] is, throughout, and especially in his Essays, one of the most suggestive authors that ever wrote.

Whately, Pref. to Bacon's Essays.

"The king [of Uganda] habitually bears a couple of spears": a duplication of weapons again suggestive, like the two swords, of a trophy (one presumably being taken from an enemy).

H. Spencer, Prin. of Sociol., § 402.

2. Of the nature of, or pertaining to, hypnotic suggestion.

Hypnotic or suggestive therapeutics.

Hypnotism, Hypnotism, p. 91.

II. n. Something intended to suggest ideas to the mind.

suggestively (su-jes'tiv-li), adv. In a suggestive manner; by way of suggestion; so as to suggest, or stimulate reflection.

suggestiveness (su-jes'tiv-nes), n. The state or character of being suggestive. New Princeton Rev., Nov., 1886, p. 364.

suggestment (su-jes'tment), n. [< suggest + -ment.] Suggestion. Imp. Dict. [Rare.]

suggestor (su-jes'tor), n. Same as suggester.

suggestress (su-jes'tres), n. [< suggester + -ess.] A female who suggests. De Quincey. [Rare.]

suggestum (su-jes'tum), n.; pl. suggesta (-tū), as E. suggestums (-tumz). [L., < suggerere, pp. suggestus, carry or bring under: see suggest.] In Rom. antiq., a platform, stage, or tribune; a raised seat; a dais.

The ancient Suggestums, as I have often observed on medals, as well as on Constantine's arch, were made of wood, like a little kind of stage, for the heads of the nails are sometimes represented that are supposed to have fastened the boards together. We often see on them the emperor, and two or three general officers, sometimes sitting and sometimes standing, as they made speeches or distributed a congari to the soldiers or people.

Addison, Remarks on Italy (Works, ed. Bohn, I. 402).

suggil (suj'il), v. t. [< OF. suggiller, < L. suggillare, also suggillare, beat black and blue, hence insult, revile.] 1. To beat black and blue.

Tho' we with blacks and blues are suggill'd,

Or, as the vulgar say, are cudgell'd.

S. Butler, Mudibras, I. iii. 1039.

2. To defame; sully; blacken.

Openly impugned or secretly suggill'd. Strype.

suggillate (suj'i-lāt), v. t. [< L. suggillatus, pp. of suggillare, beat black and blue: see suggil.] Same as suggil, 1. Wiseman, Surgery.

suggillation (suj-i-lū'shōn), n. [< F. suggillation = Sp. sugilacion = Pg. sugillação, < L. suggillatio(n)-, suggillatio(n)-, a black-and-blue mark, a spot from a bruise, an affront: see suggillate.] A livid or black-and-blue mark; a blow; a bruise; ecchymosis: also applied to the spots which occur in disease and in incipient putrefaction.

sugh, n. An obsolete or Scotch form of *sough*².

sugi (sū'gō), n. [Jap.] A coniferous tree, Cryptomeria Japonica, the Japan cedar. It is the largest tree of Japan, growing 120 feet high, with a long straight stem; the wood is compact, very white, soft, and easily worked, much used in house-building. It is found also in northern China, and is locally planted as a timber-tree, but requires moist forest valleys for success.

suicidal (sū'i-si-dl), a. [< suicide + -al.] Partaking or being of the nature of the crime of suicide; suggestive of suicide; leading to suicide: as, suicidal mania; hence, figuratively, destructive of one's aims or interests; self-destructive: as, a suicidal business policy.

I am in the Downs. It's this unbearably dull, suicidal room—and old Boguey down-stairs, I suppose.

Dickens, Black House, xxxii.

At the root of all suicidal tendencies lies an estimate of moral obligation and of the sacredness of human life entirely at variance with that introduced or sanctioned by the Gospel.

H. N. Ozenham, Short Studies, p. 180.

suicidally (sū'i-si-dl-lī), adv. In a suicidal manner.

suicide¹ (sū'i-sīd), n. [= *F. suicide = Sp. Pg. It. suicida, < NL. *suicidium, < L. sui*, of oneself, + -cida, a killer, < cadere, kill.] One who commits suicide; at common law, one who, being of the years of discretion and of sound mind, destroys himself.

If fate forbears us, fancy strikes the blow;

We make misfortune, suicides in woe.

Young, Love of Fame, v.

suicide² (sū'i-sīd), n. [= *F. suicide = Sp. Pg. It. suicidio, < NL. *suicidium, suicide, < L. sui*, of oneself, + -cidium, a killing, < cadere, kill.] 1. The act of designedly destroying one's own life. To constitute suicide at common law, the person must be of years of discretion and of sound mind. The word is by some writers used to include the act of one who, in maliciously attempting to kill another, occasions his own death, as where a man shoots at another and the gun bursts and kills himself. II. Stephen.

The argument which Plutarch and other writers derived from human dignity was that true courage is shown in the manful endurance of suffering, while suicide, being an act of flight, is an act of cowardice, and therefore unworthy of man.

Lecky, Europ. Morals, II. 46.

2. Figuratively, destruction of one's own interests or aims.

In countries pretending to civilisation there should be no war, much less intestine war, which may be justly called political suicide.

V. Knox, Works, V. 125.

suicide² (sū'i-sīd), v. i. [*< suicide*², n.] To be guilty of suicide. [Slang.]

The wills which had been made by persons who suicided while under accusation were valid.

Quoted in N. and Q., 7th ser., V. 107.

suicidism (sū'i-si-dizm), n. [*< suicide*² + -ism.] A disposition to suicide. Imp. Dict.

suicism (sū'i-sizm), n. [< L. sui, of oneself, + -icism: see egoism.] Selfishness; egotism; egoism: the opposite of altruism. [Rare.]

But his suicism was so grosse that any of Ahab's relations (whom he made run out of all they had) might read it.

R. Whillock, Zootomia, p. 383. (Nares.)

Suidæ (sū'i-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Sus + -idæ.]

The swine; the suiform or suilline quadrupeds, a family of setiferous artiodactyl (or even-toed) non-ruminant ungulate mammals, typified by the genus Sus. The family formerly contained all the swine, and corresponded to the three modern families—the Dicotylidæ or peccaries, the Phacocharidæ or wart-hogs, and the Suidæ proper. In these last the palatamaxillary axis is scarcely deflected, or nearly parallel with the occipitosphenoid axis; the basisphenoid is normal, without sinuses; the orbits are directed outward and forward; the malar bones are elongated, and expanded downward; and the dentition is normal, with 44 teeth. The restricted family contains, besides the genus Sus, the Indian Porcua, the African Potamochoerus or river-hogs, and the Malayan babirusa. See cuts under babirusa, boar, peccary, Phacochoerus, and Potamochoerus.

suiform (sū'i-fōrm), a. [< L. sus, swine, + forma, form.] Having the form or characters of the Suidæ; related to the swine; of or pertaining to the Suiformia.

Suiformia (sū-i-fōr'mi-ā), n. pl. [NL.: see suiform.] The suiform setiferous animals, or swine proper, represented by the Suidæ and Phacocharidæ, as distinguished from the Dicotyliformia or Dicotylidæ. Gill.

sui generis (sū'i jen'e-ris). [L.: sui, gen. of suus, his, her, its, their; generis, gen. of genus, kind: see genus.] Of his, her, its, or their own or peculiar kind; singular.

sui juris (sū'i jō'ris). [L.: sui, gen. of suus, his, her, its, their; juris, gen. of ius, right, justice, duty: see *ius*².] 1. In Rom. law, the status of any one who was not subject to the patria potestas. S. E. Baldwin.—2. In modern legal usage, of full age and capacity, and legally capable of managing one's own affairs, as distinguished from infants, lunatics, and woman under common-law disqualifications of coverture.

suillaget, n. Same as sullage.

suilline (sū'i-lin), a. and n. [< L. suillus, pertaining to swine, < sus, a hog, swine: see Sus.] I. a. Swinish; pig-like; suiform; pertaining to the swine: as, a suilline artiodactyl.

II. n. A swine.

Suinæ (sū-i-nē), n. pl. [NL., < Sus + -inæ.] A subfamily of Suidæ, when the family name is used in a broad sense: same as Suidæ proper.

suine (sū'in), n. A preparation from beef-suet and lard; a mixture of oleomargarin with lard, refined cottonseed-oil, or other fatty substances, used as a substitute for butter.

suings¹ (sū'ing), n. [Also sewing; < ME. sewynge; verbal n. of sue¹, v.] 1†. Regular succession, order, or gradation; proportion.

Men may see on an appul-tree, meny tyme and ofte,
Of o kynne apples aren nat yliche grete,
Ne of sewynge smale ne of o swetnesse swete.

Piers Plowman (C), xix. 63.

2. The act or process of making or paying suit; wooing.—3. The act or process of prosecuting judicially; bringing suit.

suings¹† (sū'ing), p. a. [< ME. sewynge; ppr. of sue¹, v.] 1. Following; ensuing.

The nyght sewynge, this white Knyght cam to the 7 Lynages.

Manderlye, Travels, p. 225.

2. Conformable; in proportion.

I knew on her noon other lak
That at her limmes nere [were not] pure sewing.

Chaucer, Death of Blanche, l. 959.

suings²†, n. Same as *sewing*².

The percolation, or suings of the verjuice through the wood.

Bacon, Nat. Hist., § 79.

suingly† (sū'ing-li), adv. [*< ME. sewyngly; < suing¹, p. a., + -ly*².] In due order; afterward; later.

Now schalle I seye zou sewyngly of Contrees and Yles that ben bezonde the Contrees that I have spoken of.

Manderlye, Travels, p. 263.

suint (swint), n. [F.: see sandivcr.] The natural grease of wool, consisting of insoluble soapy matter combined with a soluble salt containing from 15 to 33 per cent. of potash, which may be extracted commercially from the wool-washings.

suiriri (swi-rē'ri), n. [S. Amer.] A South American tyrannine bird of the genus Fluvicola, as F. icterophrys; a watercap. See cut under Fluvicola.

suist (sū'ist), n. [< L. sui, of himself, herself, itself, + -ist.] One who selfishly seeks his own gratification; a self-seeker; an egotist. [Rare.]

In short, a suist and self-projector (so far as known) is one the world would not care how soon he were gone; and when gone, one that Heaven will never receive; for thither I am sure he cometh not that would (like him) go thither alone. R. Whitlock, Zootomia, p. 383. (Nares.)

suit (sūt), n. [Early mod. E. also suite, sute; < ME. sute, soute, suite, soyte, < OF. suite, suitte, suite, scute, siute, a following, pursuit, chase, action, series, suit, = Sp. seguida, f., seguido, m. = Pg. seguido, seguido, m., = It. seguita, f., seguita, m., a following, suit, etc., < ML. secuta, sequita, **sequita*, a following, suit, etc., < L. sequi, pp. secutus, follow, pursue: see sue. Cf. suite (swēt), the same word, from mod. F.] 1†. A following; the act of pursuing, as game; pursuit.

Tho the scute sased after the swete bestes.
William of Palerne (E. L. T. S.), l. 2615.

2†. Series; succession; regular order.

There is a toy which I have heard, and I would not have it given over, but waited upon a little. They say it is observed in the Low Countries (I know not in what part) that every five and thirty years the same kind and sute of years and weathers comes about again.

Bacon, Vicissitudes of Things (ed. 1837), p. 566.

3. The act of suing; a seeking for something by solicitation or petition; an address of entreaty; petition; prayer.

They made wonderful earnest and importunate suit unto me, that I would teach and instruct them in that tongue and learning [the Greek].

Sir T. More, Utopia (tr. by Robinson), li. 7.

Especially—(a) A petition made to a person of exalted station, as a prince or prelate.

And having a suite to the king, [he] met by chance with one Phillino, a lover of wine and a merry companion in Court.

Pultenham, Arte of Eng. Poesie, p. 112.

That swift-wing'd advocate, that did commence
Our welcome suits before the King of kings.
Quarles, Emblems, i. 15.

(b) Solicitation for a woman's hand in marriage; courtship; proposal of marriage.

Since many a wooer doth commence his suit
To her he thinks not worthy.

Shak., Much Ado, li. 3. 52.

Jer. Oh, here comes Isaac! I hope he has prospered in his suit.

Ferd. Doubtless that agreeable figure of his must have helped his suit surprisingly. Sheridan, The Duenna, li. 3.

4. In law. (a) A proceeding in a court of justice for the enforcement or protection of a right or claim, or for the redress of a wrong; prosecution of a right or claim before any tribunal: as, a civil suit; a criminal suit; a suit in chancery. Suit is a very general term, more comprehensive than action, and includes both actions at law and bills in chancery. It usually includes special proceedings, such as mandamus.

Our lawyers, like Demosthenes, are mute,
And will not speak, though in a rightfull sute,
Vnlesse a golden kei vnlocke their tongue.

Times' Whistle (E. L. T. S.), p. 42.

In England the several suits or remedial instruments of justice are . . . distinguished into three kinds: actions personal, real, and mixed. Blackstone, Com., III. viii.

(b) The witnesses or followers of the plaintiff in an action at law.—5. In feudal law, a following or attendance. (a) Attendance by a tenant on his lord, especially at his court. (b) Attendance for the purpose of performing service. (c) The offspring, retinue, chattels, and appurtenances of a vassal.

6. A company of attendants or followers; train; retinue. Now commonly suite.

So come in sodanly a senator of Rome,
Wyth sextene knyghtes in a soyte sewande hym one.

Morte Arthure (E. L. T. S.), l. 81.

Had there not come in Tydeus and Telenor, with fortio or fiftie in their suit, to the defence.

Sir P. Sidney, Arcadia, li.

7. A number of things composing a sequence or succession; a number of things of a like kind that follow in a series and are intended to be used together; a set or suite; specifically, one of the four sets or classes, known as spades, clubs, hearts, and diamonds, into which playing-cards are divided.

Leaving the ancient game of England (Trumpe), where every coate and sute are sorted in their degree, [they] are running to Ruffe. Martins Months Minde (1589), Epistle (to the Reader). (Nares.)

I have chosen one from each of the different suits, namely, the King of Columbines, the Queen of Rabbits, the Knave of Pinks, and the Ace of Roses; which answered to the spades, the clubs, the diamonds, and the hearts of the moderns. Strutt, Sports and Pastimes, p. 432.

The cards don't cheat, . . . and there is nothing so flattering in the world as a good suite of trumps.

Thackeray, Virginians, xxx.

8. A number of different objects intended to be used together, especially when made of similar materials and corresponding in general character and purpose: thus, a number of different garments designed to be worn together form a suit of clothes; a number of sails of different ferent sizes and fitting different spars form a suit of sails.

Al his halles
I wold do paynte with pure golde,
And tapite hem ful many folde
Of oo sute. Chaucer, Death of Blanche, l. 261.

Braue in our sutes of chaunge, seuen double folde.

Udall, Roister Doister, li. 3.

Some four suits of peach-coloured satin.

Shak., M. for M., iv. 3. 11.

From Ten to Twelve. In Conference with my Mantua Maker. Sorted a Suit of Ribbons.

Lady's Diary, in Ashton's Social Life in Reign of Queen

[Anne, l. 91.

Three horses and three goodly suits of arms.

Tennyson, Geraint.

Administration suit, in Eng. law, an action of an equitable nature, to have administration of the estate of a decedent in case of alleged insolvency.—A suit of hair, teeth, or whiskers, a full complement; a full set of its kind. [Local and colloq., U. S.]

Suit of hair, for head of hair. Chautauquan, VIII. 430.

The face of this gentleman was strikingly marked by a suit of enormous black whiskers that flowed together and united under his chin.

S. Judd, Margaret, li. 1.

Discontinuance of a suit. See discontinuance.—Fresh suit, in law. See fresh.—Long suit, in the game of whist, a suit of four cards or more.—Next, petty, skeleton suit. See the adjectives.—Out of suits, no longer in service and attendance; no longer on friendly terms.

Wear this for me, one out of suits with fortune.

That could give more, but that her hand lacks means.

Shak., As you Like it, i. 2. 258.

Short suit, in the game of whist, a suit of three cards or less.—Suit and service, in the feudal system, the attendance upon the court of the lord, and the homage and services rendered by the vassal, in consideration of his tenure and the protection afforded by the lord.

His [Lord Egmont's] scheme was to divide the Island into fifty baronies; each baron was to erect a castle with a moat and drawbridge in genuine medieval fashion, he was to maintain a certain number of men-at-arms, and do suit and service to the Lord Paramount.

W. P. Rae, Newfoundland to Manitoba, iv.

Suit at law. See def. 4.

Dr. Warburton, in his notes on Shakspeare, observes that a court solicitation was called simply a suit, and a process a suit at law.

J. Nott, Note in Dekker's Oull's Hornbook, p. 114.

Suit covenant, in Eng. feudal law, a covenant to attend and serve at a lord's court; the covenant of the vassal to render suit to his lord's retinue.—Suit for contribution. See contribution.—Suit of court, in the feudal system, a tenant's obligation to render suit and service (which see, above).—To follow suit. See follow.—Syn. 3. Request, Petition, etc. See prayer.

suit (sūt), v. [Early mod. E. also suite, sute; < suit, n.] 1. To adapt; accommodate; fit; make suitable.

Suit the action to the word, the word to the action.

Shak., Hamlet, li. 2. 19.

I must suit myself with another page.

B. Jonson, Cynthia's Revels, iv. 1.

2. To be fitted or adapted to; be suitable or appropriate to; befit; answer the requirements of.

Such furniture as suits

The greatness of his person.

Shak., Hen. VIII., li. 1. 99.

These institutions are neither designed for nor suited to a nation of ignorant paupers.

Daniel Webster, Speech, Buffalo, June, 1833.

Perhaps

She could not fix the glass to suit her eye.

Tennyson, Enoch Arden.

3. To be agreeable to; fall in with the views, wishes, or convenience of: as, a style of living to suit one's tastes.

Nor need they blush to buy Heads ready dress'd,
And clasp, at publick Shops, what suits 'em best.

Congreve, tr. of Ovid's Art of Love.

None but members of their own party would suit the majority in Parliament as ministers.

W. Wilson, State, § 685.

4†. To dress, as with a suit of clothes; clothe.

I'll disrobe me

Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself

As does a Briton peasant.

Shak., Cymbeline, v. 1. 23.

No matter; think'st thou that I've vent my bagges
To suite in Satin him that Jets in ragges?

Heywood, Royal King (Works, ed. Pearson, 1874, VI. 10).

To suit one's book. See book.—Syn. 2. To comport with, tally with, correspond to, match, meet.—3. To please, gratify, content.

II. intrans. To correspond; agree; accord: generally followed by with or to.

They are good work-women, and can and will do anything for profit that is to be done by the art of a woman, and which sutes with the fashion of these countreys.

Sandys, Travels, p. 116.

The place itself was suiting to his care.

And of his bondage hard and long . . .

It suits not with our tale to tell.

Whittier, The Exiles.

suitability (sū-tā-bil'i-ti), n. [suitable + -ity (see -ility).] The character of being suitable; suitability.

The passages relating to fish in The Week . . . are remarkable for a vivid truth of impression and a happy suitability of language not frequently surpassed.

R. L. Stevenson, Thoreau, iii.

suitable (sū'tā-bl), a. [suit + -able.] Capable of suiting; conformable; fitting; appropriate; proper; becoming.

For his outward habit,

'Tis suitable to his present course of life.

Fletcher, Beggars' Bush, i. 3.

Give o'er,

And think of some course suitable to thy rank,

And prosper in it.

Massinger, New Way to Pay Old Debts, i. 1.

Nothing is more suitable to the Law of Nature than that Punishment be inflicted upon Tyrants.

Milton, Ans. to Salmasius.

=Syn. Fit, meet, appropriate, apt, pertinent, seemly, eligible, consonant, corresponding, congruous.

suitableness (sū'tā-bl-nes), n. The state or quality of being suitable, in any sense.

suitably (sū'tā-bli), adv. In a suitable manner; fitly; agreeably; appropriately.

suit-broker (sūt'brō'kér), n. One who made a trade of procuring favors for court petitioners. Massinger.

suite (sūt; in present use (defs. 2, 3, etc.), like mod. F., swēt), n. [In earlier use a form of suit; in recent use, < F. suite, a following, suit, suite: see suit.] 1†. An obsolete form of suit (in various senses).—2. A company of attendants or followers; retinue; train: as, the suite of an ambassador.

Not being allowed to take more than 2,000 followers in the king's suite, they nevertheless had evidently entertained a scheme of arming a greater number.

J. Gairdner, Richard III., li.

3. A number of things taken collectively and constituting a sequence or following in a series; a set; a collection of things of like kind and intended to be used together: as, a suite of rooms; a suite of furniture.

Through his red lips his laughter exposed a suite of fair white teeth.

S. Judd, Margaret, i. 2.

The careful examination of large suites of specimens revealed an unexpected amount of variability in species.

Huxley, Encyc. Brit., li. 49.

Two other courts, on whose sides are extended what may be called three complete suites of apartments, very similar to each other in arrangement, though varied in dimensions.

J. Fergusson, Hist. Arch., i. 173.

4. A sequel. [Rare.]

I had always intended to write an account of the "Conquest of Mexico," as a suite to my "Columbus," but left Spain without making the requisite researches.

Irring, to Prescott, in Ticknor's Prescott, p. 168.

5. In music, a set or series of instrumental dances, either in the same or in related keys, usually preceded by a prelude, and variously grouped so as to secure variety and contrast. Suites were the earliest form of instrumental work in detached movements, and continued in favor from the beginning of the seventeenth to the end of the eighteenth century, though sometimes known by other names. They included a great variety of dances, notably the allemande, courante, sarabande, and gigue, together with the gavotte, passepied, branle, and minuet. The early suite was not fully distinguishable from the early sonata, and the developed suite finally gave place to the modern sonata, though the true sonata form as a method of construction did not belong to the suite. Suites are properly for a single instrument, like the harpsichord or clavichord, but are sometimes written for an orchestra. The suite form has lately been revived. Among modern writers of orchestral music in suite form are Lachner, Raff, Bizet, Dvořák, and Moszkowski.

suite, v. See suit.

suitor (sū'tor), n. Same as sutor.

suithold (sūt'hōld), n. [suit + hold.] In feudal law, a tenure in consideration of certain services to the superior lord.

suiting (sū'ting), n. [Verbal n. of suit, v.] Cloth for making a suit of clothes: especially in the plural: as, fashionable suitings. [Trade cant.]

suit-like (sūt'lik), a. [Early mod. E. also sutelike; < suit + like.] Suitable.

Then she put her into mans apparel, and gave her all things sute-like to the same, and laid her upon a mattress all alone without light or candle.

North, tr. of Plutarch, p. 40.

suitly, adv. [Early mod. E. also sutely; < ME. sutely, sutly; < suit + -ly.] So as to match.

Item, ij. stripls of the same trappuris sutly.

Paston Letters, I. 477.

sutor (sū'tor), n. [Early mod. E. also sutier, suter; < ME. sutere; < suit + -or; ult. < L. scentor, a follower, ML. a prosecutor, sutor, < sequi, follow: see suit.] 1. In law, a party to a suit or litigation. The pronunciation sū'tor is sometimes made sū'tor, as if spelled shooter (whence the punning allusion in the quotation from Shakspeare, below).

In following suites there is much to be considered: what the suter is, to whom he maketh suite, and wherefore he maketh suite, and also in what time he *sute*th:

suitor

because to dispatch a thing out of time is to cut the peccocke by the knees.

Guevara, Letters (tr. by Hellowes, 1577), p. 109.

Boyet. Who is the suitor? Who is the suitor? . . .

Ros. Why, she that bears the bow.

Shak., L. L. L., iv. 1. 103.

To save suitors the vexation and expense of haling their adversaries always before the courts in London.

W. Wilson, State, § 731.

2. One who sues, petitions, solicits, or entreats; a petitioner.

Here I would be a suitor to your majesty, for I come now rather to be a suitor and petitioner than a preacher.

Latimer, Sermon bef. Edw. VI., 1550.

She hath been a suitor to me for her brother.

Shak., M. for M., v. 1. 34.

Humility is in suitors a decent virtue.

Hooker.

This mans Serraglio, which is neither great in receipt nor beauty, yet answerable to his small dependency and infrequency of suitors.

Sandys, Travels, p. 48.

3. One who sues for the hand of a woman in marriage; a wooer; one who courts a mistress. I am glad I have found a way to woo yet; I was afraid once

I never should have made a civil suitor.

Fletcher, Wildgoose Chase, III. 1.

He passed again one whole year . . . under the wing and counsels of his mother, and then was forward to become a suitor to Sir Roger Ashton's daughter.

Sir H. Wotton, Reliquie, p. 209.

suitor (sū'tor), v. i. [< suitor, n.] To play the suitor; woo; make love.

Counts a many, and Dukes a few,

A suiting came to my father's Hall.

Barham, Ingoldsby Legends.

suiticide (sū'tor-sid), a. [< suitor + L. -cidium, a killing, < cadere, kill.] Suitor-killing; fatal to suitors. [Rare and humorous.]

Not a murmur against any abuse was permitted, to say a word against the suiticide delays of the Court of Chancery . . . was bitterly and steadily resented Sydney Smith, in Lady Holland, II.

suitress (sū'tres), n. [< suitor + -ess.] A female suitor or suitor.

Beshrew me, but 'twere pity of his heart

That could refuse a boon to such a suitress.

Rosce, Jane Shore, III. 1.

suit-shape (sūt'shāp), n. A fashion; a model. [Rare.]

This fashion monger, each morn' fore he rise,

Contemplates suit-shapes and, once from out his bed,

He hath them straight full lively portrayed.

Marston, Scourge of Villanie, xl. 161.

suity (sū'ti), a. Suitable; fitting.

In love in care, in diligence and dutie

Be thou her sonne, sith this to sonnes is sutie.

Darvies, Holy Roodie, p. 18 (Darvies)

suivez (swē-vā'), [F.: 2d pers. pl. pres. impv. of suivre, follow: see sui.] In music, a direction to an accompanist to adapt his tempo and style closely to those of the soloist.

sujee (sū'jē), n. [Also sojce, sojce; < Hind. suji.] Fine flour made from the heart of the wheat, used in India to make bread for English tables. Yule and Burnell.

Sula (sū'li), n. [NL. (Brisson, 1760), < Icel. sula: see solan.] A genus of gannets, conterminous with the family Sulidae, or restricted to the white gannets, or solan-geese—the brown gannets, or boobies, being called Dysporus. S. bassana is the leading species. See cut under gannet.

sulcate (sul'kāt), v. t. [< L. sulcare, furrow through, plow, < sulcus, a furrow: see sulcus, sulk.] To plow; furrow. Blount.

sulcate (sul'kāt), a. [< L. sulcatus, pp. of sulcare: see sulcate, v.] Furrowed; grooved; having long narrow depressions, shallow fissures, or open channels; channeled or fluted; cleft, as the hoof of a ruminant; fissured, as the surface of the brain.

sulcated (sul'kāt-ed), a. [< sulcate + -ed.] Same as sulcate.

sulcation (sul'kāt-shən), n. [< sulcate + -ion.] 1. A furrow, channel, or sulcus; also, a set of sulci collectively.—2. The state of being sulcated; also, the act, manner, or mode of grooving.

sulci, n. Plural of sulcus.
sulciform (sul'si-fōrm), a. [< L. sulcus, a furrow, + forma, form.] Having the form or character of a sulcus; like a furrow or groove.

6050

sulcus (sul'kus), n.; pl. sulci (-sī). [NL., < L. sulcus, a furrow, trench, ditch, wrinkle: see sulk.] A furrow or groove; a more or less linear or narrow and shallow depression; specifically, in anat., a fissure between two gyri or convolu-

Brains of Rabbit (A), Pig (B), and Chimpanzee (C), showing some of the principal median sulci and gyri of the mammalian brain. Ol, olfactory lobe; Co, corpus callosum; Ac, anterior commissure; H, hippocampal sulcus; Un, uncinate gyrus; M, marginal gyrus; Cr, calcarine gyrus; Ac, internal perpendicular sulcus; Ca, calcarine sulcus; Coll, collateral sulcus; F, fornix; Lp, lumbus terminalis. (Compare other views of the same brain on let. Sulci.)

tions of the surface of the brain: used with English or Latin context. See phrases under fissure, and cuts under brain, cerebral, and gyrus.
—Auriculoventricular sulcus, the transverse groove marking off the auricles from the ventricles of the heart.
—Calcarine sulcus. See calcarine.
—Callosal sulcus, the callosal fissure, between the callosal gyre, or gyrus fornicatus, and the corpus callosum.—Callosomarginal sulcus, the carotid groove on the sphenoid bone. See cut under sphenoid.
—Central sulcus, the fissure or sulcus of Rolando. See fissure.
—Collateral sulcus. See collateral.
—Crucial or cruciate sulcus (or fissure), a remarkably constant sulcus of the cerebrum of carnivores and some other mammals, described by Cuvier in 1805, and first named (in French) as sillon crucial by Laurent in 1879. In the cat this sulcus begins on the median aspect of the hemisphere, reaches and indents the margin, and thence extends laterally for a distance equal to or greater than its medial part. It has many variant forms of its name, as carotid crucial sulcus, sulcus cruciatus, fissura cruciata, recessus cruciatus, etc., and different names (as frontal fissure, etc.) from varying views of its homology with any sulcus of the human brain. This question has been much discussed, but not conclusively settled. Two prevalent views are that the crucial sulcus is equivalent (1) to the callosomarginal sulcus of man, and (2) to the central or Rolando sulcus of man. The question is of importance because some well-marked motor centers have been made out with reference to this sulcus in the lower animals.
—Fimbrial sulcus, the sulcus choroidens; the shallow furrow on the optic thalamus corresponding to the margin of the fimbria.
—Frontal sulci, the sulci which separate the frontal gyri: the superior frontal sulcus marks off the middle from the superior gyrus, and the inferior frontal sulcus divides the middle gyrus from the inferior.
—Gingivobuccal sulcus, the space between the gums and the cheek.
—Gingivolingual sulcus, the space between the tongue and the gums.
—Hippocampal sulcus. See hippocampus.
—Intraparietal sulcus, the sulcus dividing the superior from the inferior parietal lobule; the intraparietal fissure.
—Lateral, paracentral, parallel sulcus. See the adjectives.
—Occipitotemporal sulcus, the collateral sulcus. Orbital sulcus, one of several sulci of the frontal lobe of the brain, in relation with the orbit of the eye, and separating the orbital gyri (which see, under gyrus).
—Paramedian dorsal sulcus, the groove on the dorsal surface of the oblongata and upper part of the spinal cord marking the division between the funiculus gracilis and the funiculus cuneatus.—Parapyramidal sulcus, a slight groove on the ventral surface of the oblongata, running from the median fissure upward and outward, bounding the pyramidal laterally.—Parieto-occipital sulcus. See parieto-occipital fissure, under parieto-occipital.
—Peduncular sulcus, the great transverse fissure of the cerebellum.—Postcentral sulcus, the shallow postrolandic sulcus separating the ascending parietal convolution from the superior parietal convolution.—Posterior sulcus of Reil. See posterior.
—Precentral sulcus. See precentral.
—Splenial sulcus, the callosomarginal sulcus.—Sulcus choroidens, a shallow groove on the upper surface of the optic thalamus, running from the anterior tubercle backward and outward.—Sulcus corporum quadrigemorum longitudinalis, the median longitudinal furrow on the upper surface of the corpora quadrigemina.—Sulcus corporum quadrigemorum transversus, the transverse furrow separating the nates from the testes of the brain.—Sulcus cruciatus. See cruciate sulcus.
—Sulcus habene, a name proposed by Wilder in 1881 for a furrow along the dorsomedial angle of the optic thalamus, just back of the habenula.—Sulcus intercruralis mesalis, sulcus inter- cruralis lateralis, small grooves just behind the postperforatus of the brain of the cat. Wilder and Gage, Anat. Tech., p. 489.—Sulcus internus olivæ, the upward extension of the sulcus lateralis ventralis of the spinal cord, passing along the olivary body on the median side. Oberstein.—Sulcus lateralis dorsalis, the groove on the spinal cord, extending up into the oblongata, from which the dorsal roots of the spinal nerves emerge. Also called posterolateral groove.—Sulcus limitans, a name proposed by Wilder in 1881 for the usually obvious depression between the optic thalamus and the corpus striatum.—Sulcus longitudinalis medianus ventriculi quarti vel sinus rhomboidalis, the median furrow on the floor of the fourth ventricle of the brain.—Sulcus longitudinalis mesencephali, the furrow on the external surface of the mesencephalon, between the crista below and the superficial lemniscus and brachia of the corpora quadrigemina above.—Sulcus occipitalis anterior, a fissure extending the occipitoparietal fissure down over the convex surface of the cerebrum. The two fissures are continuous in certain apes, but not normally in man. Also called sulcus occipitalis externus.—Sulcus occipitalis inferior, a longitudinal fissure of the occipital lobe separating the second from the third occipital gyrus.—Sulcus occipitalis superior, a longitudinal fissure of the occipital lobe separating the first from the second occipital gyrus.—Sulcus occipitalis transversus, a transverse fissure seen on the upper and lateral surface of the occipital lobe, behind the parieto-occipital fissure.—Sulcus oculomotorii, a groove on the median side of the crus cerebri, from which the third nerve issues. It marks the boundary between the crista and the tegmentum.—Sulcus olfactorius, the fissure on the orbital surface of the brain bounding the gyrus rectus on the outer side. Along it lies the tractus olfactorius.—Sulcus orbitalis, the triradiate or H-shaped sulcus on the orbital surface of the frontal lobe.—Sulcus postolivaris, the postolivary sulcus, a short furrow on the side of the oblongata just laterad of the olivary body.—Sulcus spiralis, the spiral groove along the border of the lamina spiralis, or spiral lamina, of the cochlea.—Sulcus triradiatus, a name proposed by Wilder in 1881 for the three-pointed depression which demarcates the corpora allicantia from each other and from the tuber cinereum.—Supercallosal sulcus, the callosomarginal sulcus.—Sylvian sulcus, the fissure of Sylvius. See fissure.

sulk

—Temporal sulci, the fissures on the outer surface of the temporal lobe. The superior is also called the parallel fissure.—Triradiate sulcus. Same as sulcus orbitalis.—Vertical sulcus, the precentral sulcus.

sulfur, sulfur, n. Obsolete spellings of sulphur.

Sulidae (sū'li-de), n. pl. [NL., < Sula + -idae.]

A family of totipalmate natatorial birds, represented by the genus Sula, of the order Steganopodes, related to the cormorants and pelicans; the gannets and boobies. They have the bill longer than the head, very stout at the base, tapering to the decurved tip, cleft to beyond the eyes, with abortive nostrils in a nasal groove, and a small naked gular sac; long pointed wings; moderately long, stiff, wedge-shaped tail of twelve or fourteen feathers; stout serviceable feet beneath the center of equilibrium; and the general configuration somewhat like that of a goose. There are two carotids, a discoid oil gland, small caeca, and large gall-bladder. The pneumaticity of the body is extreme, as in pelicans. See cut under gannet.

Sulinae (sū'li-nē), n. pl. [NL., < Sula + -inae.]

The Sulidae as a subfamily of Pelecanidae.

sulk<sup>1</sup> (sulk), a. [Early mod. E. sulken, reduced from ME. **sulken*, **solkun*, < AS. solcen, slothful, remiss (cf. equiv. ā-solcen, be-solcen), prop. pp. of **scolcan*, in comp. **ā-scolcan*, ā-scolcan (= OHG. ar-selhan), and be-solcan, be slothful, grow languid; cf. Skt. √ sarj, send forth, let loose. Cf. sulk<sup>1</sup>, v. and n., sulky.] Languid; slow; dull; of goods, hard to sell.

Never was thrifty trader more willing to put of a sulke commodity.

Heywood, Challenge for Beauty, III. 1.

sulk<sup>1</sup> (sulk), v. i. [< sulk<sup>1</sup>, a., in part a back-formation from sulky.] 1. To be sulky; indulge in a sullen or sulky mood; be morose or glum. [Colloq.]

Most people sulk in stage-coaches; I always talk. I have had some amusing journeys from this habit.

Sydney Smith, in Lady Holland, VII.

He was sulking with Jane Tregunter, was trying to persuade himself he did not care for her.

Whyte Melville, White Rose, II. xiv.

Of course things are not always smooth between France and England; of course, occasionally, each side sulks against the other.

Nineteenth Century, XXIV. 466

2. To keep still when hooked; said of a fish.
sulk<sup>1</sup> (sulk), n. [< sulk<sup>1</sup>, v.] A state of sulkiness; sullen fit or mood: often in the plural: as, to be in a sulk or in the sulks; to have a fit of the sulks. [Colloq.]

I never had the advantage of seeing the Chancellor before in his sulks, though he was by no means unfrequently in them

Greville, Memoirs, Dec. 8, 1831.

Rodbertus had lived for a quarter of a century in a political sulk against the Hohenzollerns.

Contemporary Rev., LIV. 383.

sulk<sup>2</sup> (sulk), n. [= OSP. sulco, Sp. Pg. sulco = It. solco, solgo, < L. sulcus, a furrow, trench, ditch, groove, track, wrinkle; cf. Gr. ὄλκος, a furrow, track, < ὥλκεν, draw. Cf. sulrow.] A furrow. [Rare.]

The surging sulks of the Sandiferous Seas.

Sir P. Sidney, Wanstead Play, p. 619. (Davies.)

sulk<sup>2</sup> (sulk), v. t. [< sulk<sup>2</sup>, n.] To furrow; plow. [Rare.]

sulk

Soom synck too bottoms, sulking the surges asunder.
Stanhurst, Æneid, l. 117. (Davies.)

sulkily (sul'ki-li), adv. In a sulky manner; sullenly; morosely.
sulkiness (sul'ki-nes), n. The state or quality of being sulky; sullenness; moroseness.
sulky (sul'ki), a. [An extended form of sulk, a., due in part to the noun sulkiness, now regarded as < sulky + -ness, but earlier sulkeness, < ME. **solknesse*, < AS. solcenes, solcennes: see sulk, a.] 1. Silently resentful; dogged; morose; sullen; moody; disposed to keep aloof from society, or to repel the friendly advances of others.

It is surely better to be even weak than malignant or sulky.
F. Knox, Essays (1777), No. 123.

During the time he was in the house he seemed sulky or rather stupid.
Haslam, Insanity, x.

Corydon, offended with Phyllis, becomes, as far as she is concerned, a mere drivelling idiot, and a sulky one into the bargain.
W. H. Melville, White Rose, II. xviii.

The true zeal and patience of a quarter of an hour are better than the sulky and inattentive labour of a whole day.
Ruskin, Elements of Drawing, ii.

2. Stunted, or of backward growth: noting a condition of a plant, sometimes resulting from insect injury.

The condition called sulky as applied to a tea-bush is unfortunately only too common on many estates.
E. Ernest Green, in Ceylon Independent, 1889.

= Syn. 1. Morose, Splenetic, etc. (see sullen); cross, spleenish, perverse, cross-grained, out of humor.

sulky (sul'ki), n.; pl. sulkies (-kiz). [So called because it obliges the rider to be alone; < sulky, a.] A light two-wheeled carriage for one person, drawn by one horse, commonly used for trials of speed between trotting-horses.

The country doctor . . .
Whose ancient sulky down the village lanes Dragged, like a war-car, captive ills and pains.
Whittier, The Countess.

sulky-cultivator, sulky-rake (sul'ki-kul'ti-vā-tōr, -rāk), n. A cultivator or a horse-rake having a seat for the driver. See cut under rake 1.

sulky-harrow, sulky-scraper (sul'ki-har'ō, -skrā'pēr), n. A harrow or scraper mounted on a wheeled carriage, and having a seat for the driver.

sulky-plow (sul'ki-plou), n. See plow.
sull (sul), n. A shorter form of sulow 1.

sullage (sul'āj), n. [Early mod. E. also sulledge, sullage, sullage, < OF. **souillage*, **soillage*, < souiller, soil: see soil 3. Cf. sullage.] 1†. That which defiles.

No tincture, sullage, or defilement. South.

2†. Drainage; sewage.
Naples is the pleasantest of Cities, if not the most beautiful; the building all of free stone, the streets are broad and paved with brick, vaulted underneath for the conveyance of the sullage.
Sandys, Travels, p. 202.

The streets exceeding large, well paved, having many vaults and conveyances under them for the sullage, which renders them very sweet and clean.
Evelyn, Diary, Feb. 8, 1645.

3. In founding, the scoria which rises to the surface of the molten metal in the ladle, and is held back when pouring to prevent porous and rough casting.—4. Silt and mud deposited by water.

April 3, 1712. A grant unto Israel Pownoll of his new Invented engine or machine for taking up ballast, sullage, sand, etc., of very great use in cleansing rivers, harbours, etc.
Ashton, Social Life in the Reign of Queen Anne, II. 57.

sullage-piece (sul'āj-pēs), n. In founding, a deadhead. E. H. Knight.

Sullan (sul'an), a. [ < L. Sullanus, < Sulla, improp. Sylla, Sulla (see def.).] Of or pertaining to Lucius Cornelius Sulla (138–78 B. C.), a Roman general and dictator.

In 70 B. C. Pompeius, in conjunction with Crassus, repealed the Sullan constitution. Encyc. Brit., IV. 634.

sullen (sul'en), a. and n. [ < ME. sollein, solein, soleyn, solain, < OF. solain (= Pr. solan), solitary, lonely; as a noun, a pittance for one person; < ML. as if **solanus*, < L. solus, alone: see sole 3.] 1. a. 1†. Being alone; solitary; lonely; hence, single; unmarried.

Let each of hem be soleyn al her lyve.
Chaucer, Parliament of Fowls, l. 607.

That ofte, when I shulde play,
It maketh me drawe out of the way
In solein place by my selve,
As doth a laborer to delyve.
Gower, Conf. Amant., vi.

2†. Being but one; unique; hence, rare; remarkable.

6051

Trewely she was to min ye
The soleyn fenix of Arabye.
Chaucer, Death of Blanche, l. 952.

Ye shall find this solain aventure
Full strang vnto sight of ech creature.
Rom. of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 5431.

3. Remaining alone through ill humor; unsocial; silent and cross; sulky; morose; glum.

Still is he sullen, still he lours and frets.
Shak., Venus and Adonis, l. 75.

Nor sullen discontent, nor anxious care,
E'en though brought thither, could inhabit there.
Dryden, Flower and Leaf, l. 99.

Two doughty champions, flaming Jacobite
And sullen Hanoverian. Wordsworth, Excursion, vi.

As sullen as a beast new-caged. Tennyson, Geraint.

4. Gloomy; dismal; somber.

Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth?
Shak., 2 Hen. VI., i. 2. 5.

Those [natural properties] of the Sea to bee saltish and unpleasant, and the colour sullen and greenish.
Decker, London Triumphant (Works, ed. Pearson, III. 241).

Night with her sullen wings to double-shade
The desert. Milton, P. R., l. 500.

The dull morn a sullen aspect wears. Crabbe.

5. Sad; sorrowful; melancholy.

Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change.
Shak., R. and J., iv. 5. 88.

6. Slow-moving; sluggish; dull: as, a sullen pace.

When death's cold, sullen stream Shall o'er me roll.
Ray Palmer, My Faith Looks up to Thee.

7. Malignant; unpropitious; foreboding ill; baleful.

Such sullen planets at my birth did shine,
They threaten every fortune mixt with mine.
Dryden.

She meets again
The savage murderer's sullen gaze.
Whittier, Mogg Megone, i.

= Syn. 3. Gloomy, Sullen, Sulky, Morose, Splenetic. These words are arranged in the order of their intensity and of their degrees of activity toward others. Gloomy has the figurative suggestion of physical gloom or darkness: the gloomy man has little brightness in his mind, or he sees little light ahead. The sullen man is silent because he is sluggishly angry and somewhat bitter, and he repels friendly advances by silence and a lowering aspect rather than by words. The sulky person persists in being sullen beyond all reason and for mere whim: the young are often sulky. In the morose man there is an element of hate, and he meets advances with rudeness or cruel words: the young have rarely development of character enough to be morose. The splenetic man is sulky and peevish, with frequent outbursts of irritation venting itself upon persons or things. Any of these words may indicate either a temporary mood or a strong tendency of nature.

II. n. 1†. A solitary person; a recluse.

He sits nother with seynt Iohan, with Symon, ne with Jude, . . .
Dote as a soleyn by hym-self. Piers Plowman (C), xv. 145.

2. pl. Sullen feelings; sulks; sullenness. [Colloq.]

Let them die that age and sullens have.
Shak., Rich. II., II. 1. 139.

If she be not sick of the sullens, I see not
The least infirmity in her.
Massinger, Emperor of the East, III. 4.

Being ourself but lately recovered—we whisper it in confidence, reader—out of a long and desperate fit of the sullens.
Lamb, Popular Fallacies, xvi.

3†. A meal for one person. Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

sullen† (sul'en), v. t. [ < sullen, a.] To make sullen, morose, or sulky.

In the body of the world, when members are sullen'd, and snarl one at another, down falls the frame of all.
Feltham, Resolves, i. 80.

sullenly (sul'en-li), adv. In a sullen manner; gloomily; with moroseness.

sullenness (sul'en-nes), n. 1. The state or quality of being sullen.

The form which her anger assumed was sullenness.
Macaulay, Hist. Eng., vii.

2†. Silence; reserve.

Her very Coyness warms;
And with a grateful Sullenness she charms.
Congreve, Paraphrase upon Horace, l. xix. 1.

= Syn. 1. See sullen.

sullen-sick† (sul'en-sik), a. Sick with sullenness.

On the denyall, Ahab falls sullen-sick.
Fuller, Pisgah Sight, II. vii. 7. (Davies.)

sully† (sul'e-ri), n. [ < sull + -ery.] A plow-land.

sullevate† (sul'e-vāt), v. t. [Also sollvate; < L. sublevatus, pp. of sublevare (> It. sollevar = Pg. Sp. Pr. solver = F. soulever), lift up from beneath, support, assist, < sub, under, + levare, lift up, raise, < levis, light, not heavy: see levity. Cf. elevate.] To cause to rise in insurrection; excite, as to sedition.

sulphate

I come to shew the Fruits of Connivance, or rather Encouragement, from the Magistrates in the City, upon other Occasions, to sollvate the Rabble.
Roger North, Examen, p. 114.

sulliage† (sul'i-āj), n. [A var. of sullage, as if < sully + -age.] Same as sullage.

Till we are in some degree refined from the dross and sulliage of our former lives' incursions.
Evelyn, True Religion, I. 243.

sulow 1 (sul'ō), n. [Also sull; < ME. solow, suluh, solh, < AS. sulh, rarely sul (gen. sules, dat. syl; in comp. sulh-, sul-), a plow. Cf. L. suleus, a furrow: see sulcus, sulk 2.] A plow.
Halliwel. [Prov. Eng.]

sulow 2†, v. t. [A var. of sully.] To sully.

sully (sul'i), v.; pret. and pp. sullied, ppr. sullying. [Early mod. E. also sulow; < ME. sulien, < AS. sylvian, sully, defile, bemire (= OS. sullian = MD. soluven = OHG. bi-sulian, G. sühlen, sully, = Sw. söla = Dan. söle = Goth. bi-sauljan, bemire), < sol = OHG. sol, MHG. söl, G. sühle = Dan. söl, mire. The form sully is prob. due in part to the OF. sollier, souiller, etc., soil, sully: see soil 3, with which sully is often confused.] 1. trans. 1. To soil; stain; tarnish; defile.

Over it perpetually burneth a number of lamps, which have sullied the roof like the inside of a chimney.
Sandys, Travels, p. 130.

And statues sully'd yet with sacrilegious smoke.
Roscommon, trans. of Horace's Sixth Ode (of bk. iii.).

One of the great charms of this temple [the great Vaishnava temple at Seringham], when I visited it, was its purity. Neither whitewash nor red nor yellow paint had then sullied it, and the time-stain on the warm-coloured granite was all that relieved its monotony.
J. Fergusson, Hist. Indian Arch., p. 305.

2. Figuratively, to stain or tarnish morally.

The over-daring Talbot
Hath sullied all his gloss of former honour
By this unheeded, desperate, wild adventure.
Shak., 1 Hen. VI., iv. 4. 6.

A look and a word . . . seemed to flash upon me the conviction that the woman I loved was sullied.
T. Winthrop, Cecil Dreeme, vi.

3. To dim; darken.

Let there be no spots in these our feasts of charity: nothing that may sully the brightness and damp the cheerfulness of this day's solemnity.
Dr. Atterbury, Sermons, I. xviii.

Weakened our national strength, and sullied our glory abroad.
Dolingbroke, Parties, i.

II. intrans. To be or become soiled or tarnished.

Silvering will sully and canker more than gilding.
Bacon.

sully (sul'i), n.; pl. sullies (-iz). [ < sully, v.] Soil; tarnish; spot.

A noble and triumphant merit breaks through little spots and sullies on his reputation. Spectator.

sulphacid (sul'as'id), n. [ < sulph(ur) + acid.] An acid in which sulphur takes the place of oxygen; a sulpho-acid.

sulphamate (sul'fa-māt), n. See sulphamic.

sulphamic (sul-fam'ik), a. [ < sulph(ur) + am(monium) + -ic.] Having sulphur and ammonium as the characteristic constituents.—Sulphamic acid, an acid the ammonium salt of which is produced by the action of dry ammonia on dry sulphur trioxide. It may be regarded as sulphuric acid in which one OH group is replaced by NH<sub>2</sub>; thus, SO<sub>2</sub>(NH<sub>2</sub>). It is a monobasic acid, forming salts called sulphamates. Of these ammonium sulphamate, SO<sub>2</sub>(NH<sub>2</sub>)<sub>2</sub>, is one of the best-known.

sulphamide (sul'fa-mid or -mid), n. [ < sulph(ur) + am(moniam) + -ide 2.] A compound which may be regarded as consisting of the group SO<sub>2</sub> combined with two amido-groups, NH<sub>2</sub>.

sulpharsin (sul'fär-sin), n. [ < sulph(ur) + arsine.] Cacodyl sulphid, (CH<sub>3</sub>)<sub>2</sub>As<sub>2</sub>S, a colorless liquid having an intensely disagreeable smell and being highly inflammable.

sulphate (sul'fāt), n. [= F. sulfate = Sp. Pg. sulfato = It. solfato, < NL. sulphatum, sulfatum; as sulph(ur) + -ate 1.] A salt of sulphuric acid. The acid is dibasic, forming two classes of salts—neutral sulphates, in which both hydrogen atoms of the acid are replaced by basic radicals, and acid sulphates, in which only one of the hydrogen atoms is so replaced. Most sulphates are readily soluble in water, while a few, as calcium, strontium, and lead sulphates, are very sparingly soluble, and barium sulphate is insoluble in water and dilute acids. The sulphates are widely and abundantly distributed in nature. Gypsum and anhydrite are calcium sulphates. Epsom salts and Glauber salts, contained in all sea-waters, are magnesium sulphate and sodium sulphate respectively. Barytes or heavy spar, used on account of its high specific gravity (4.3 to 4.7), as an adulterant and makeweight, is barium sulphate. Anglesite, or lead sulphate, is an ore of lead. Many other sulphates occur in nature in smaller quantity. Of the sulphates artificially prepared may be mentioned sodium sulphate, or salt-cake (made from salt on an enormous scale as the first step in the manufacture of sodium carbonate), and ammonium sulphate (made extensively from gas liquor, and used for preparing other ammonia salts and as a fertilizer). Zinc sulphate, or white vitriol, is used in medicine as an astringent and a tonic,

